IT took only a short while in Edinburgh this year to realise that this, at last, was a Festival — not just a collection of interesting but unrelated activities flung together by time and place.

For if the aim of Robert Ponsonby, Edinburgh's new Festival director, was to produce some plan, some thought-out scheme of activities, he succeeded beyond expectations, and the result augurs well for his reign.

Even the picture exhibition — and Edinburgh Festival always has one—had musical overtones; for, of all graphic artists, Georges Braque seems to have music in his pallette. Not only were a large number of these extraordinary pictures in the Royal Scottish Academy gallery devoted to musical subjects—guitars, violins, wind instruments. But Braque's form is to a large extent musical in conception. The links with music were obvious. They may well have been, in the choice of this artist, intentional.

Although it was far from being the first thing I saw and heard, I must therefore begin from the foundation, which was not musical but — on the surface alone — dramatic.

ALL THE ARTS of the theatre — music, drama, ballet, opera — stemmed from the Italian Commedia Dell'Arte. Here are players of the Piccolo Teatro of Milan, in a tableau from Goldoni's comedy Arlecchino, one of the most interesting Edinburgh Festival performances, for music lovers and musicians as well as for the public.
Photo:
The Scotsman

This was the production, by the Piccolo Teatro of Milan, of Goldoni's [illegible] Arlecchino, or The Servant of Two Masters. Arlecchino, simply a little knockabout slapstick farce and by [illegible] Goldoni, belongs to the 18th century. But its presentation was much older—in fact, as old as the theatre, music, opera, ballet, drama, and everything else that stems from this one source. For that source is the Commedia dell'Arte.

Beginning in ancient Greek and Roman days, this combination of mime, drama, comedy, song and dance became the Italian theatre based on Harlequin, Columbine and Pierrot (or Pantaloon). This type of theatrical entertainment survived for years as the Harlequinade in our own pantomimes.

But its importance lies not in itself but in what it produced. For Commedia dell'Arte is not one art of the theatre—it is all of them combined, primitive in form, it is true, but later each developed separately into drama, opera, ballet and modern comedy.

Nowhere could the synthesis have been better seen than in this production. It gave to the Festival a basis for everything else. And a sensation-hunting public largely ignored it and its implications.

And there was the opera; and by and large I agree with what Ian Hutton has already written about the operas he saw. This season was disappointing. There was lovely tone from the Hamburg Orchestra, somewhat too loud for the small theatre; but the singers were far from being at top standard.

A Fine Papageno

Van Mill's Sarastro in The Magic Flute was splendid, noble in performance, rich in vocal delivery; and Günter gave one of the best Papagenos I have seen — alert, vital, earthy, pert to the point of perkiness, nicely sung. But Colette Lorand was one of the worst Queens of Night in an experience that includes many, vocally insecure, without style, rough. And nothing could keep those wretched boys on the note in the Genii scenes: they looked pretty and the libretto demands were satisfied. For the future, bring on the girls!

The Oedipus Rex was something with which, from the beginning, I was out of sympathy. Here, by the way, was an instance of Festival integration: not only was there this Oedipus, but the original Sophocles tragedy was available from the Ontario Stratford company, and there was also a film of it.

THE BARBER OF BAGDAD: Peter Cornelius' opera, regarded in Germany as a neglected masterpiece, had its first British performance for many years at this year's Edinburgh Festival.

Oedipus is a tragedy, one of the world's greatest. As such, it must leave its audience with the inevitable feeling of pity, of compassion, at the result of intervention in human affairs of forces beyond comprehension and control. Sophocles, whether played in Greek or in English, does that. Both Stravinsky and Cocteau leave one with the feeling that they strove after, and achieved, merely sensation. The emotional draining, the catharsis, is just not there.

The result of a great story torn from its context of language and drama, translated by a Frenchman into church-Latin dialogue and with the poetry removed, set to music by a neo-classic Russian and then produced by a Teuton, was exactly what one can expect, and no more. The grim ranks of chorus, heads alone showing from immovable "coffins", gave me the impression of watching the intervention, not of implacable and inhuman gods, but merely of the Gestapo.

Horror, Not Sorrow

Musically, the work is a striving after effect, of shock rather than of the glory of man pitted against cosmic forces, of horror rather than of sorrow.

Thank goodness, for all its faults, for the Mavra that came afterwards. Atrociously sung, but gay and frivolous in one of the most delicious stage-sets I have seen for years, it could have kept me interested with its production alone—it raced along with a verve that made light of this silly little story of a girl who got her officer-lover into the home by dressing him up as the new maid.

But for all that, its scoring is interesting, acute, making novel and interesting use of wind, and never too heavy for what it had to carry on its well-constructed back.

Far the best of the Hamburg productions I saw was that of Salome. Ludwig certainly kept his orchestra far too loud again, but nevertheless most of the singing came through it, and certainly that of the young, slim, agile actress and singer in the title role.

Christel Goltz, unfortunately, was sick and could not appear. In her place was Helga Pilarczyk the best I have heard of a long line of daughters of Herodias. The wonder was where the voice came from in so slight

(continued on Page 20)

---

for mu
Arthur Bl
the annua
'I fear th music in benefit'.
teacher, a that the vu acted, not end, but depends u During service ha Sunday-ev
the camer
Nathan featured that great eye and e and a sho directed b version w are, to th Stern's p with Mü was an

THE WORL

N.Y. T
Dec. 1

ston Symphony
Time at Edinb

By ROSS

THE Boston Symphony Or chestra will play at next year's Edinburgh Festival And this item is only one e news nuggets to be found e festival's prospectus. Oth
The opera schedule will de a revival of Cornelius Barber of Bagdad"; the a wing will include Shake e's "Henry V," with the ford Ontario Festival Com being imported to give it, the major ensembles will e the Vienna Hofmusikawhich is made up of instru-lists and choristers from ienna Opera and the young-of the Vienna Boys' Choir.
Boston Symphony will be ond major American or-which will be the tenth of its kind. The ninth festival this year attracted a record-breaking crowd of 84,416. Of these, 11,-783 were Americans.

[84]

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2

Extract from

The Musical Times

LONDON

Date 5 - NOV 1956

Radio Notes

DENIS STEVENS

ow heir set.
ount elves may le joy
time

which should not have been missed by young violinists willing to learn by observing close-ups of the soloist. From a visual point of view, this work was well produced: if only the quality of the sound could match the interest of the vision, the combined effect of the two would be even more telling.

I
M tc
i

outsi
for mus
Arthur B
the annu
'I fear t
music in benefit'.
teacher, that the acted, no end, but depends Durin service Sunday-
the ca
Nathan
featured that gr eye and and a directe version are, to Stern's with
was a

"DANCE FOR ME, SALOME!"—Helge Pilarczyk as Salome, Peter Markwort as Herod and Siw Ericsdotter as Herodias in the Hamburg Opera's Edinburgh Festival performance of Strauss's Salome.

(continued from Page 19)

a body — a powerful, beautifully-placed voice, capable of all the necessary modulations of tone and expression needed by this arduous role; and also with the sheer physical strength to maintain it at perfection through an almost unbroken hour-and-forty-minutes of exhausting effort.

Caspar Bröcheler sang Jokanaan the night I heard the opera, powerfully and with intense emotion. Melchert was still unwell and Peter Markwort sang a somewhat slight Herod, with Siw Ericsdotter as a not very convincing Herodias, in make-up and costume of about the same age as her daughter. Fritz Lehnert's Narraboth had little dignity showing through a reasonable enough voice, but Arnold van Mill's strong bass shone out as one of the two Nazarenes.

I liked the setting by Siercke—rugged, a genuine desert stronghold instead of the luxurious palace so often seen, sparse in decoration. Wolf Völker's production, too, was sparing in movement and gesture. Rightly, it left so much action to the music, for the orchestra, in Salome, is almost setting, actors and singers all in one.

Hard, Dry Tone

And now for the Festival's great disappointment. And yet, having heard other crack transatlantic orchestras, should I have been so displeased with the hard, dry tone and generally insensitive playing of the Boston Symphony Orchestra?

Sir Thomas Beecham's apprehensions as to orchestral standard being maintained were fully justified. I did not hear the RPO, but I hope never to hear it or any other orchestra playing like this.

The Boston Orchestra is a magnificent machine—that must be admitted. It is efficient, drilled to perfection, its brass blazes to high heaven, and at times its strings as individuals can sing songs of angels and its upper woods unwind a rich and luscious tone. But somehow it does not add up to music. The result is sound, certainly — a raucous blast of sound for a lot of the time; and even when it is at its most expansive and genial best, under the restrained gestures of Pierre Monteux, it just cannot capture that delicate bloom that should lie over orchestral texture and weld the whole into a musical unity.

I heard Monteux conduct one programme, opening with Isadore Freed's negligible [illegible]ure and carrying on to the [illegible] Symphony, from which I [illegible], but to some extent im[illegible] soloist with them in [illegible] Symphonic Variations, which seemed to be played at the same tempo and power from beginning to end, and in a better performance—because the work demands a certain crisp attack—of the Ravel Left-Hand Concerto. And in the Rosenkavalier suite they handled all the notes perfectly, but sweet-sweet instead of bitter-sweet.

Munch, on the following night, had Clifford Curzon as soloist in a surprisingly blurred performance of the Schumann Piano Concerto. This was not our beloved lyrical Curzon at anywhere near his best, nor Schumann at his greatest charm of orchestration. We also had in this programme Howard Hanson's Elegy to the Memory of my Friend Serge Koussevitzky, written for this year's seventy-fifth anniversary of the orchestra. It was hardly a fitting tribute, musically speaking.

And the La Mer, for which I had waited as something of a test for this orchestra and conductor, was no less of a disappointment. It was brilliant playing, to be sure; but there was no mist of spray over this sea. Its subject was quicksilver, not water and air and sky—it was metallic and glittering.

I think that Arthur Honegger, whose Symphony No. 5 was written for this orchestra in 1950, must have realised its qualities and its defects, for the music is such that this type of playing is the best for it: it is hard, angular music that plays with consonance and dissonance as one would juggle swords, and the Boston boys made hay, as far as performance went, with it.

Music of Youth

But next night I went to the Usher Hall to hear the hundred-odd youngsters of the National Youth Orchestra, under Walter Susskind. And I heard, not only good orchestral playing, but music. Here was none of the engine-turned perfection of a great machine, but music that flowed out, played for the love of it.

There was a grand panache about the Berlioz Le Corsair Overture, and a brio and attack in the Beethoven Fifth Symphony that brought to the surface all its drama and its greatness without any underlining of parts to destroy consciousness of the whole. If tension, intonation and complete command were lacking in the Haydn Symphonie Concertante, and if the quartet of soloists could not fully hold themselves together, this music has baulked more experienced jumpers than these enthusiastic young players.

I liked Benjamin Frankel's new little Shakespeare Overture—he told me that it was not intended to represent anything particular in the dramas, but just the overall poetry in all Shakespeare's works—written specially for this orchestra and this Festival. It is not great, but it has moments of real beauty, and a sincere atmosphere.

The tumult and the shouting apart, so much of the great music-making of the Festival was in its recitals, as Ian Hutton has suggested. And the queues of those wanting to get in were almost as large as those for the bigger events, a welcome sign.

Myra Hess played a magnificent Beethoven programme one morning, powerful, dynamically rugged and intensely musical. Gerhard Hüsch, suffering somewhat from a cold, sang Schubert, Brahms and Wolf with unerring artistry in spite of some germ-induced roughness of tone here and there, with Gerald Moore as, not an accompanist, but an associate artist.

Morning Chamber Music

The Amadeus Quartet, with impeccable ensemble playing, took over in the middle of the week. With Cecil Aronowitz as second viola, their two Mozart Quintets, D Major K.593 and G Minor K.516, plumbed emotional depths and soared to Mozartian heights. Aronowitz also joined them next day for the Beethoven Quintet, grandly realised if not grandly written, and they had Leon Goossens for the Oboe Quartet a day later still, in a programme that included the lovely E Flat Divertimento for String Trio, K.563.

Isaac Stern's silken tone and smooth artistry combined with the sensitive playing of Alexander Zakin in a memorable afternoon concert that opened with the Brahms G Major Sonata, its melodic invention and so-satisfying construction being laid out before us with beautiful devotion. The more exotic Prokofiev No. 1 gave Stern the opportunity for exhibiting magnificent technique and understanding, as did the César Franck for both violinist and pianist in an example of clean and perfect ensemble playing.

Beecham's dictum that "Festivals are bunk" was made in only the first few days. What a pity that he did not stay in Edinburgh for the rest of the Festival. If he had been able to tackle some three performances a day, of chamber music, orchestral concerts and opera, as well as a few art exhibitions and various "Fringe" activities, he might have seen an overall plan behind the manifold aspects of a 1956 Edinburgh Festival that may well turn out to be a landmark as "Ponsonby's First".

THE NEW MAID: Jürgen Förster (centre) as the Hussar disguised as a maidservant, frightens the wits out of the visiting Neighbour, the Mother, and the plotting daughter Paracha in Stravinsky's Mavra, staged for the first time in Britain at this year's Edinburgh Festival by the Hamburg Opera. Photo: The Scotsman

---

THE WORL

N.Y. Ti
Dec. 18

oston Symphony
Time at Edinb

By ROSS

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra will play at next year's Edinburgh Festival. And this item is only one he news nuggets to be found he festival's prospectus. Oth The opera schedule will ude a revival of Cornelius e Barber of Bagdad"; the na wing will include Shake re's "Henry V," with the tford Ontario Festival Com y being imported to give it, the major ensembles will de the Vienna Hofmusika-, which is made up of instrualists and choristers from Vienna Opera and the young of the Vienna Boys' Choir. e Boston Symphony will be second major American or-wil kind. The ninth festival this year attracted a record-breaking crowd of 84,416. Of these, 11,783 were Americans.

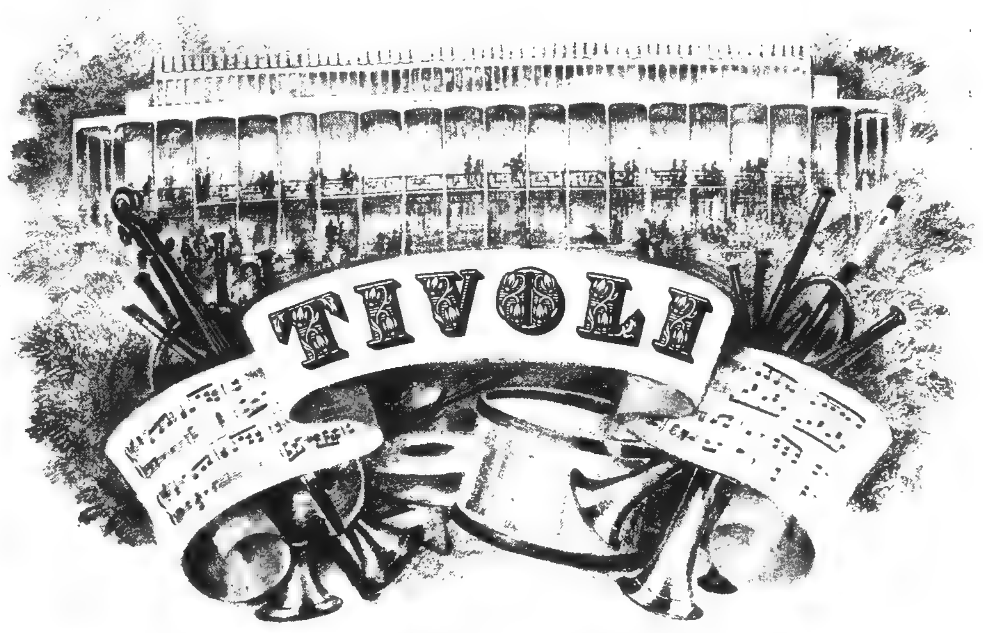
PROGRAM

Pris 25 øre

FREDAG DEN 31. AUGUST 1956



PROGRAM

Pris 25 øre

FREDAG DEN 31. AUGUST 1956

PROGRAM

Nr. 122. Fredag den 31. august 1956

ILLUMINATION

Kl. 12—14 og 15—17^{20} Wivex terrasse. Dirigent: Axel Bendix
Kl. 18 Promenadepavillonen. Dirigent: Elo Magnussen
Kl. 19 Plæneforestilling
Kl. 19^{45} Pantomimeteatret. Pantomime
Kl. 20 Koncertsalen. Boston Symfoni Orkester
Kl. 20 Harmoniorkesterpavillonen. Dirigent: Lindorff Larsen
Kl. 20 Wivex terrasse. Dirigent: Arne Lamberth
Kl. 20 Dansetten
Kl. 21 Promenadepavillonen. Dirigent: Elo Magnussen
Kl. 21^{30} Harmoniorkesterpavillonen. Dirigent: Lindorff Larsen
Kl. 21^{45} Pantomimeteatret. Ballet
Kl. 22^{30} Plæneforestilling
Kl. 22^{45} Promenadepavillonen. Dirigent: Elo Magnussen

Direktionen forbeholder sig ret til forandringer i programmet

INFORMATION

TIVOLI is open daily from 1st May to mid-September (finishing every year on a Sunday). Opening hours: 9 a.m. to 12 p.m.

RESTAURANTS: There are 21 restaurants of all categories; open daily from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m., Wivex and Nimb respectively to 1 and 2.

THE CONCERT HALL: The Symphony Orchestra (54 musicians) gives concerts almost every evening at 7,15, 8,45 and 10,15. Usually free admittance.

THE PANTOMIME THEATRE: Every evening: 7,45, pantomimes; 9,45, ballets.

THE OPEN-AIR STAGE: International variety acts every evening at 7 and 10,30; Saturday and Sunday at 5, 7 and 10.

AMUSEMENTS: Most amusements are open from 2 or 4 p.m. to 12 p.m.

THE TIVOLI BOY GUARDS parade Saturday and Sunday evening at 6,30 and 8,30.

FIREWORKS: Every Wednesday at 11,15 p.m. on the Tivoli lake; every Saturday and Sunday at 11,45 p.m. in front of The Open-Air Stage.

DANCING: Every night from 8 to 12 at "Taverna" and at "Dansetten"; from 9 to 1 at restaurant ,,Wivex"; from 9 to 2 at restaurant "Nimb".

AUSKÜNFTE

TIVOLI ist vom 1. Mai bis Mitte September offen (der letzte Tag der Saison ist stets ein Sonntag). Tivoli ist von 9 Uhr morgens bis 12 Uhr nachts offen.

RESTAURANTS. Tivoli hat 21 Restaurants aller Art; täglich offen von 9 Uhr morgens bis 12 Uhr nachts. Die Restaurants Wivex und Nimb bezw. bis 1 und 2 Uhr nachts.

DER KONZERTSAAL: Das Sinfonieorchester (54 Musiker) gibt jeden Abend Konzerte um 7.15, 8.45 und 10.15 Uhr. Gewöhnlich ist der Zutritt frei.

DAS PANTOMIMENTHEATER: Jeden Abend 7.45 Uhr Pantomime und 9.45 Uhr Ballett.

DIE KÜNSTLERBÜHNE: Internationale Artisten treten jeden Abend um 7 und um 10.30 Uhr auf; Sonnabend und Sonntag um 5, 7 und 10 Uhr.

VERGNÜGEN: Die meisten Vergnügen sind von 2 oder 4 Uhr nachmittags bis 12 Uhr nachts offen.

DIE TIVOLIGARDE: Jeden Sonnabend und Sonntag um 6.30 und 8.30 Uhr Parade.

FEUERWERK: Jeden Mittwoch um 11.15 abends auf dem Tivoli-See; jeden Sonnabend und Sonntag um 11.45 abends vor der Künstlerbühne.

TANZ: Jeden Abend von 8 bis 12 Uhr in der »Taverna« und in der »Dansette«; von 9 bis 1 Uhr im Restaurant »Wivex«; von 9 bis 2 Uhr im Restaurant »Nimb«.

KONCERTSALEN

Kl. 20

BOSTON SYMFONI ORKESTER

Dirigent: PIERRE MONTEUX

Alt udsolgt

1.	Ouverture til op. »Italienerinden i Algier«	Rossini (1792—1868)
2.	Symfoni nr. 3 F-dur, op. 90 Allegro con brio. Andante. Poco Allegretto. Allegro.	Brahms (1833—1897)
	— PAUSE —
3.	Symfoni nr. 2, op. 35 Introduction and Song. Interlude and Dance.	Paul Creston (1906)
4.	Suite af op. »Rosenkavalleren«	Rich. Strauss (1864—1949)

Koncerten er arrangeret af Wilhelm Hansen i samarbejde med »The American National Theatre and Academy«

PROMENADEPAVILLONEN

Dirigent ELO MAGNUSSEN

Kl. 18. 1. AFDELING

1.	Hyldningsmarch	H. C. Lumbye
2.	Ouverture til op. »Nebucadnezar«	Verdi
3.	Liebesfreud	Fr. Kreisler
4.	Udtog af op. »Madame Butterfly«	Puccini
5.	Auf der Lagune	Paul Lincke
6.	En italiensrejse med Gerhard Winkler	U. Summerlatte
7.	Du milde, danske pige, tango	Viggo Persson

Kl. 21. 2. AFDELING

8.	Ouverture til op. »Figaros Bryllup«	Mozart
9.	Vals af op. »Faust«	Gounod
10.	Czardas	Monti
11.	Latin-american medley	arr. Knud Blynert

Kl. 22^{45}. 3. AFDELING

12.	Med liv og lyst, march	Axel Frederiksen
13.	Ouverture til op. »Barberen i Sevilla«	Rossini
14.	Intermezzo af op. »Cavalleria rusticana«	Mascagni
15.	Udtog af oprt. »Fuglekræmmeren«	Zeller
16.	Keep smiling, potpourri	arr. Leif Johansen
17.	Vinterens favoritter, potpourri	arr. Leif Johansen
18.	Cocktail, potpourri	arr. Arne Lamberth

PROGRAM

Nr. 122. Fredag den 31. august 1956

ILLUMINATION

Kl. 12—14 og 15—17^{30}	Wivex terrasse. Dirigent: Axel Bendix
Kl. 18	Promenadepavillonen. Dirigent: Elo Magnussen
Kl. 19	Plæneforestilling
Kl. 19^{45}	Pantomimeteatret. Pantomime
Kl. 20	Koncertsalen. Boston Symfoni Orkester
Kl. 20	Harmoniorkesterpavillonen. Dirigent: Lindorff Larsen
Kl. 20	Wivex terrasse. Dirigent: Arne Lamberth
Kl. 20	Dansetten
Kl. 21	Promenadepavillonen. Dirigent: Elo Magnussen
Kl. 21^{30}	Harmoniorkesterpavillonen. Dirigent: Lindorff Larsen
Kl. 21^{45}	Pantomimeteatret. Ballet
Kl. 22^{30}	Plæneforestilling
Kl. 22^{45}	Promenadepavillonen. Dirigent: Elo Magnussen

Direktionen forbeholder sig ret til forandringer i programmet

PANTOMIMETEATRET

Leder: NIELS BJØRN LARSEN . Orkesterleder: ELO MAGNUSSEN

Billetter à 75 øre til reserv. siddepladser fås forestillingsdagen fra kl. 10—20 i Tivolis billetkontor ved hovedindgangen. Telefonbestillinger modtages ikke

Kl. 19^{45}

Skovtrolden eller Kassander som bødker

Pjerrot, Carl Johan Hviid. Harlekin, Poul Brockdorff. Kassander, Johs. Larsen. Bødkersvenden, Elo Wittcower, Columbine, Lis Adelvard. Opvartningspigen, Oda Huld. Skovtrolden, Aage Bendixen. To dommere. To soldater.

Kl. 21^{45}

FLITTER

Ballet i 3 billeder af Niels Bjørn Larsen.
Musiken komponeret af Knud Høgenhaven. — Dekorationer og kostumer af Svend Johansen, udført af Gregers Rode og Ole Teglers

Moderen	Oda Huld
Døtrene	Gerda Parvie og Hanne Gemzøe
Knøsene	John Wølk og Sv. Bunch
Lapsene	Elo Wittcower og Sv. Er. Flynov
Illusionisten	Erik Bidsted
Cirkusballerinaen	Lisa Kæregaard
Akrobaterne	Tutti del Monte og Sonja Molberg
Zigeunerne	Inger Anné, Runa Wendrup og Poul Brockdorff
Kagekonen	Aage Bendixen

MARKEDSGÆSTER: Lillian Roth, Käthe Fatum, Elise Jeppesen, Nina Herløv, Annelise Nielsen, Emely Andersen, Gunnar Christensen, Richard Wolf, Børge Vang, Eiler Larsen, Sv. Lindquist og Jørgen Kristensen.

BORGERE: Bjørg Teige, Inge Lise Nissen, Johs. Larsen og Poul Lotinga

MANEGEDANSERINDER: Else Mende, Winnie Millung, Lizzie Keck, Jytte Schmidt, Käthe Fatum og Nina Herløv.

ARTISTER: Hanne Aller, Annie Galle, Claus Pagh, Finn Tavbe, Astrid Nielsen, Sonja Carlsen og Connie Olsen.

CIRKUSTJENERE: Dan Pless og Aage Baumholm.

Koreografi og iscenesættelse: NIELS BJØRN LARSEN

HARMONIORKESTERPAVILLONEN

Dirigent LINDORFF LARSEN

Kl. 20. 1. AFDELING

1.	Spansk patrulje	Deshayes
2.	Donna Diana, ouverture	Reznicek
3.	Menuet af »Militær-Symfoni«	Haydn
4.	Valse romantique	Max Heinecke
5.	Min Itsch, polka-mazurka	C. C. Møller
6.	Marche danoise	Axel Frederiksen

Kl. 21^{30}. 2. AFDELING

7.	Kong Håkon VII honnørmarch	Oscar Borg
8.	Ouverture til »Jomfruen af Orleans«	Söderman
9.	Beväringsdans från Axvalla hed	Alb. Löfgren
10.	Valse triste	Jean Sibelius
11.	Ungarske danse nr. 5 og 6	Brahms

PLÆNEN

Leder: EIGIL SVAN . Orkesterleder: LINDORFF LARSEN

Kl. 19 og 22^{30}

Joy Kay & Co., comedy-act
Hardino Duo, ekvilibrister
5 Talos, vippebrædt-akrobater

Reserverede siddepladser à 50 øre, børn 25 øre

INFORMATION

TIVOLI is open daily from 1st May to mid-September (finishing every year on a Sunday). Opening hours: 9 a.m. to 12 p.m.

RESTAURANTS: There are 21 restaurants of all categories; open daily from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m., Wivex and Nimb respectively to 1 and 2.

THE CONCERT HALL: The Symphony Orchestra (54 musicians) gives concerts almost every evening at 7,15, 8,45 and 10,15. Usually free admittance.

THE PANTOMIME THEATRE: Every evening: 7,45, pantomimes; 9,45, ballets.

THE OPEN-AIR STAGE: International variety acts every evening at 7 and 10,30; Saturday and Sunday at 5, 7 and 10.

AMUSEMENTS: Most amusements are open from 2 or 4 p.m. to 12 p.m.

THE TIVOLI BOY GUARDS parade Saturday and Sunday evening at 6,30 and 8,30.

FIREWORKS: Every Wednesday at 11,15 p.m. on the Tivoli lake; every Saturday and Sunday at 11,45 p.m. in front of The Open-Air Stage.

DANCING: Every night from 8 to 12 at "Taverna" and at "Dansetten"; from 9 to 1 at restaurant ,,Wivex"; from 9 to 2 at restaurant "Nimb".

AUSKÜNFTE

TIVOLI ist vom 1. Mai bis Mitte September offen (der letzte Tag der Saison ist stets ein Sonntag). Tivoli ist von 9 Uhr morgens bis 12 Uhr nachts offen.

RESTAURANTS. Tivoli hat 21 Restaurants aller Art; täglich offen von 9 Uhr morgens bis 12 Uhr nachts. Die Restaurants Wivex und Nimb bezw. bis 1 und 2 Uhr nachts.

DER KONZERTSAAL: Das Sinfonieorchester (54 Musiker) gibt jeden Abend Konzerte um 7.15, 8.45 und 10.15 Uhr. Gewöhnlich ist der Zutritt frei.

DAS PANTOMIMENTHEATER: Jeden Abend 7.45 Uhr Pantomime und 9.45 Uhr Ballett.

DIE KÜNSTLERBÜHNE: Internationale Artisten treten jeden Abend um 7 und um 10.30 Uhr auf; Sonnabend und Sonntag um 5, 7 und 10 Uhr.

VERGNÜGEN: Die meisten Vergnügen sind von 2 oder 4 Uhr nachmittags bis 12 Uhr nachts offen.

DIE TIVOLIGARDE: Jeden Sonnabend und Sonntag um 6.30 und 8.30 Uhr Parade.

FEUERWERK: Jeden Mittwoch um 11.15 abends auf dem Tivoli-See; jeden Sonnabend und Sonntag um 11.45 abends vor der Künstlerbühne.

TANZ: Jeden Abend von 8 bis 12 Uhr in der »Taverna« und in der »Dansette«; von 9 bis 1 Uhr im Restaurant »Wivex«; von 9 bis 2 Uhr im Restaurant »Nimb«.

Copenhagen Sept 1 1956

Ny dramatisk situation i lufthavnen i gaar

Amerikansk passager-maskine lander, mens en dansk jet endnu er paa landingsbanen — i modsat retning

I gaar eftermiddags indtraf en ny dramatisk situation i Københavns lufthavn, heldigvis uden følger, men af en saadan karakter, at der igen maa tales om udisciplineret flyvning og menneskelige fejl.

En dansk jet, en Thunderjet F 84, kom ind til landing i gaar eftermiddags paa et tidspunkt, hvor vejret var straalende. Piloten laa med landingsnummer 1 og kom ned fuldstændig korrekt. Ude for enden af bane 22 skulle han forskriftsmæssigt vende maskinen og køre tilbage, indtil han kunne køre ind paa bane 35 og fortsætte til kørsel til parkeringspladsen. I mellemtiden var en amerikansk passagermaskine, en DC-6B, Pan American World Airways Clipper kommet ind til landing.

Den laa som nr. 2 i indflyvningen og havde fra flyveledelsen i Kastrup faaet besked om at rapportere ved Nordre Røse, før den gik ind til landing. Dette skete ikke. Den fortsatte sin indflyvning og landede paa bane 22, endnu mens den danske jet i modsat retning var paa vej for at krydse ind mod bane 35. Jet'en naaede væk, og amerikaneren landede paa kortest mulige distance ved at sætte ekstra kraft paa opbremsningen med propellerne.

Der skete intet, men situationen med to maskiner paa samme bane, var en saadan, at man ikke behøver at tage fantasien i anvendelse for at forestille sig, hvordan forløbet kunne have været. Flyveledelsen i Kastrup gik straks i aktion. Men den amerikanske kaptajn erklærede aabent, at han maatte beklage det passerede.

Over for overflyveledelsen udtalte han, at han havde antaget, at den foranliggende jet allerede vilde være kørt bort fra landingsbanen. Han erkendte, at han ikke, som flyveledelsen havde anmodet om, rapporterede under landingen fra Nordre Røse-fyret.

Der er indgivet rapport om det passerede.

Flyveledelsen i Kastrup er sagesløse i baade denne og den hændelse, der indtraf tidligere paa ugen, men hvis det nye taarn havde været færdigt, ville man fra det øverste flyvekontrolrum kunne have fulgt indflyvningerne og formentlig afværget begge fejltagelser. pw.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,564

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Cape Cod
Standard Times (e)
HYANNIS, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

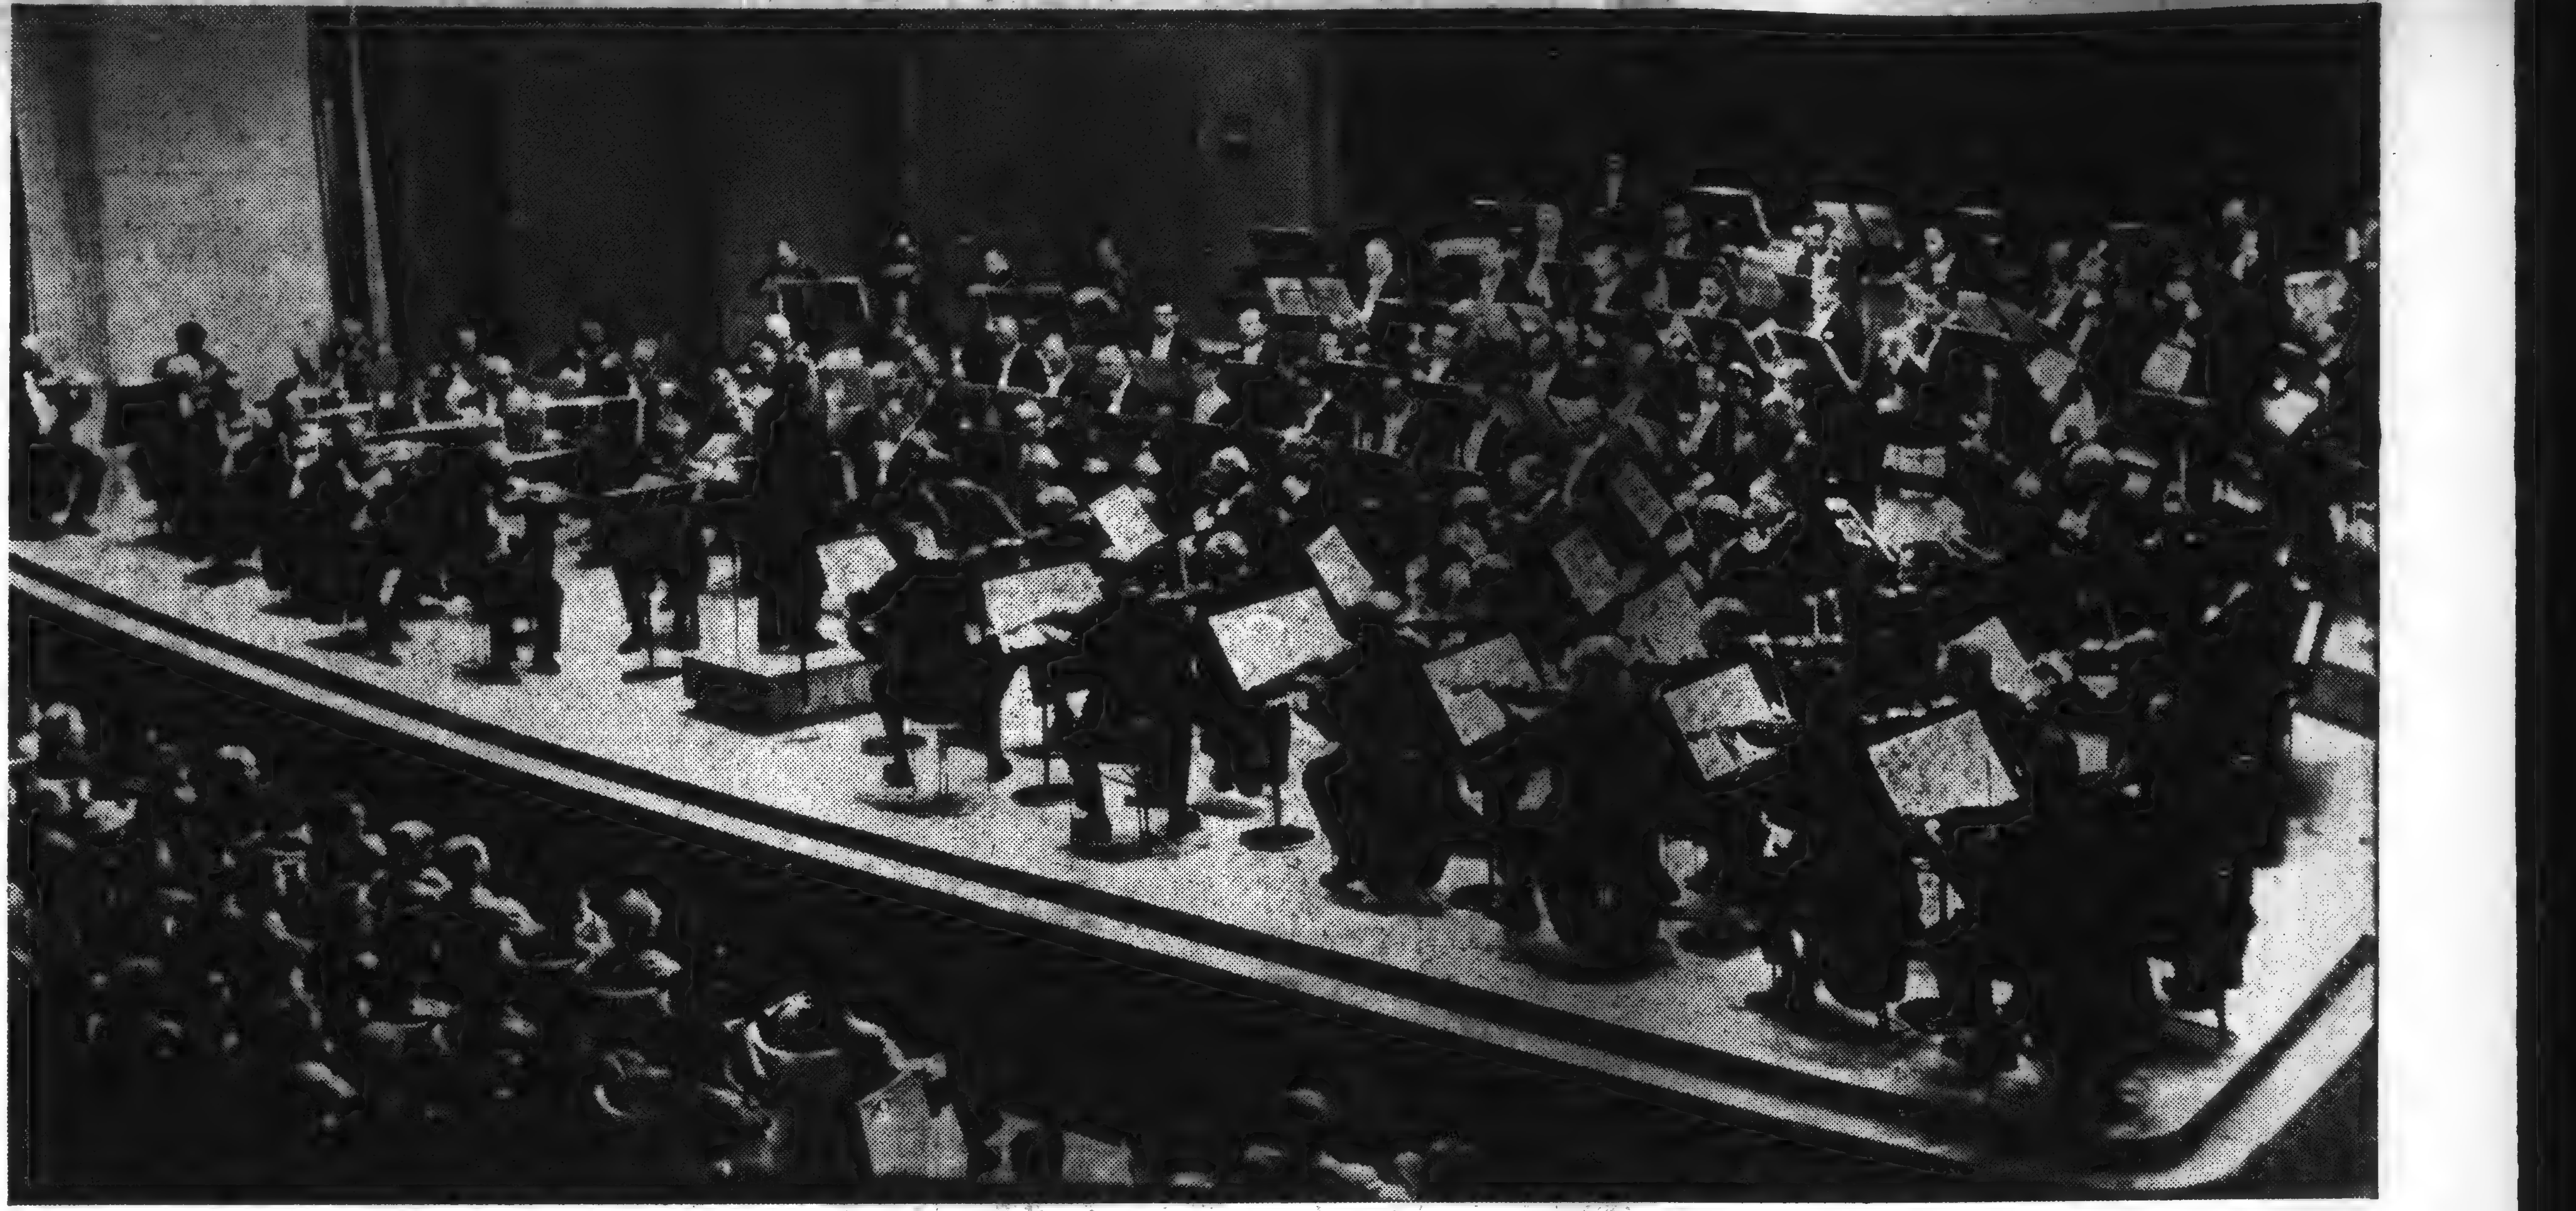
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

SEP 1 1956

Royal Danish Ovation For Boston Symphony

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 31 (AP) —The Boston Symphony Orchestra received an ovation tonight at the conclusion of its concert here. King Frederik IX, Denmark's music loving sovereign, led the applause.

The king, who conducts orchestras himself, took Queen Ingrid and 16-year-old Princess Margrethe to the concert, at the concert hall in the Tivoli amusement park.



Straalende musik-aften i Tivoli — En af aarets store musik-begivenheder, Boston Symfoni-Orkestrets koncert i Tivoli i aftes, blev overværet af Kongeparret og Prinsesse Margrethe og fik et straalende forløb. Paa det store billede ses orkestret under koncerten med den berømte dirigent Pierre Monteux paa podiet. Paa det andet billede fra de Kongeliges ankomst ses til venstre Dronning Ingrid og Prinsesse Margrethe. Til højre Kong Frederik og professor, kapelmester Svend Chr. Felumb. — Læs anmeldelsen side 7.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU
Bladet: Land og Folk
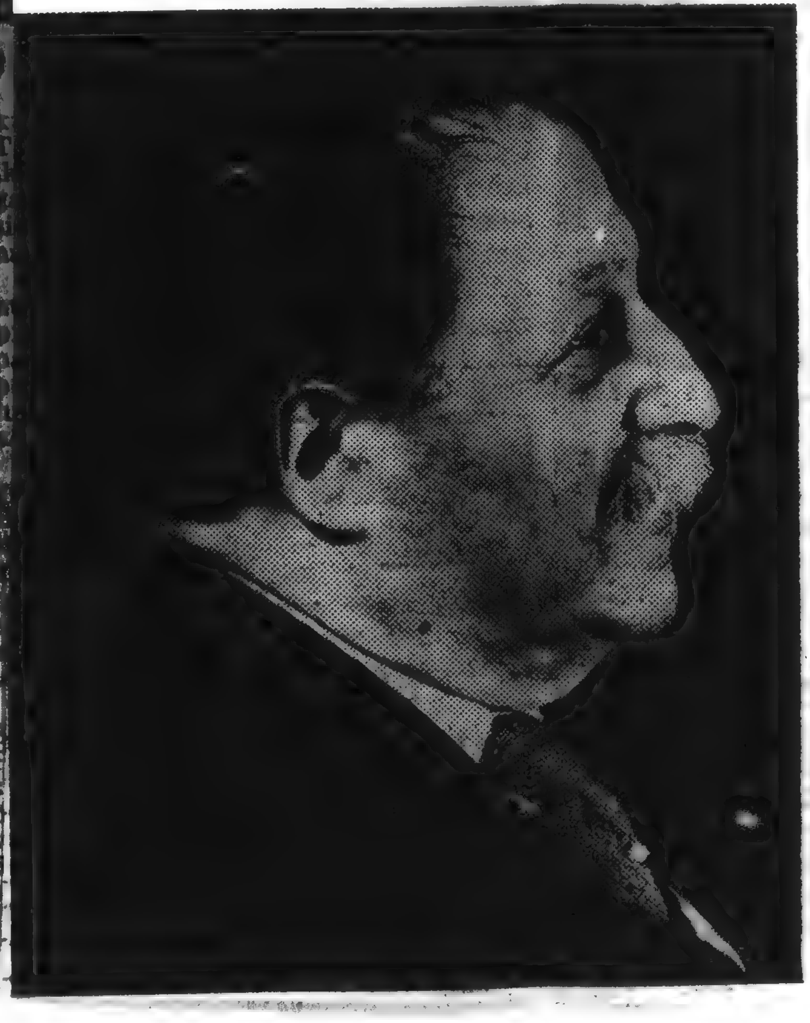
Copenhagen
4/67
skriver den 1 SEP. 1956

To berømte orkestre i København

To hver på sin vis verdensberømte orkestre kom i går til København, begge med fly. Det var Boston Symfoniorkestrets 125 mand med den 82-årige dirigent Pierre Monteux i spidsen. De måtte have hele to maskiner plus en tredje til deres instrumenter. Det andet orkester var knap så talstærkt, men ikke mindre kendt, om end for andre musikalske fortrin: Count Basie og hans jazzmusikere. De skulle dog videre til Sverige for at give koncert, men de vender tilbage til København den 10. september. Billedet til højre viser Count Basie selv iført sejlsportskasket. Til venstre Bostonsymfonikernes alderstegne leder, der sine 82 år til trods ikke viger tilbage for en anstrengende koncertrejse. Efter besøget i København skal Boston-symfonikerene videre til Sovjetunionen.



Copenhagen Berlingske Sept 1 1956

Boston Symfoni Orkester fik øredøvende succes

I Tivolis Koncertsal un berømte dirigent Pierre

Alt var lagt op til en stor aften i gaar i Tivolis Koncertsal: det hundredtallige Boston Symfoni Orkester med sin overlegent sikre dirigent Pierre Monteux, salen paa forhaand udsolgt, Kong Frederik med Dronning Ingrid og Prinsesse Margrethe i kongelogen — og Brahms' F-dur-symfoni paa programmet.

Man hørte fra de første takter af Rossinis »Italienerinden i Algier«, at orkestret var fremragende. Her mødtes Italien i strygernes rytmiske pizzicato med det orientalske i træblæsernes melodiske motiver. Gennemsigtigheden og præcisionen var exceptionel. Selve strygernes mægtige klanglegeme var imponerende. Det kunne — hørte man — tage kampen op med selv det sværeste messing.

Men hvilke opdragere har dette orkester ikke ogsaa haft! Fra Nikisch og Muck til Koussewitsky og Monteux, der i en periode fra 1918—24 allerede var dets dirigent. Han er en orkesterleder af den type, der skyr al udvendig podieageren. Han har ingen af den subtile hokus-po-

Ny dramatisk situation i lufthavnen i gaar

Copenhagen Sept 1 1956

Amerikansk passager-maskine lander, mens en dansk jet endnu er paa landingsbanen — i modsat retning

I gaar eftermiddags indtraf en y dramatisk situation i Køben- avns lufthavn, heldigvis uden lger, men af en saadan karak- r, at der igen maa tales om disciplineret flyvning og men- eskelige fejl.

En dansk jet, en Thunderjet F 84, m ind til landing i gaar eftermid- gs paa et tidspunkt, hvor vejret r straalende. Piloten laa med lan- ingsnummer 1 og kom ned fuld- ændig korrekt. Ude for enden af ane 22 skulle han forskriftsmæssigt ende maskinen og køre tilbage, ind- l han kunne køre ind paa bane 35 fortsætte til kørsel til parkerings- ladsen. I mellemtiden var en ame- ikansk passagermaskine, en DC-6B, an American World Airways Clip- er kommet ind til landing.

Den laa som nr. 2 i indflyvningen havde fra flyveledelsen i Kastrup aaet besked om at rapportere ved ordre Røse, før den gik ind til lan- ing. Dette skete ikke. Den fortsatte in indflyvning og landede paa bane 2, endnu mens den danske jet i odsat retning var paa vej for at rydse ind mod bane 35. Jet'en naae- e væk, og amerikaneren landede aa kortest mulige distance ved at ætte ekstra kraft paa opbremsnin- en med propellerne.

Der skete intet, men situationen med to maskiner paa samme bane, ar en saadan, at man ikke behøver t tage fantasien i anvendelse for at orestille sig, hvordan forløbet kun- e have været. Flyveledelsen i Ka- trup gik straks i aktion. Men den amerikanske kaptajn erklærede aabent, at han maatte beklage det passerede.

Over for overflyveledelsen udtalte han, at han havde antaget, at den foranliggende jet allerede vilde være kørt bort fra landingsbanen. Han erkendte, at han ikke, som flyveledelsen havde anmodet om, rapporterede under landingen fra Nordre Røse-fyret.

Der er indgivet rapport om det passerede.

Flyveledelsen i Kastrup er sagesløse i baade denne og den hændelse, der indtraf tidligere paa ugen, men hvis det nye taarn havde været færdigt, ville man fra det øverste flyvekontrolrum kunne have fulgt indflyvningerne og formentlig afværget begge fejltagelser. pw.

Straalende musik-aften i Tivoli — En af aarets store musik-begivenheder, Boston Symfoni-Orkestrets koncert i Tivoli i aftes, blev overværet af Kongeparret og Prinsesse Margrethe og fik et straalende forløb. Paa det store billede ses orkestret under koncerten med den berømte dirigent Pierre Monteux paa podiet. Paa det andet billede fra de Kongeliges ankomst ses til venstre Dronning Ingrid og Prinsesse Margrethe. Til højre Kong Frederik og professor, kapelmester Svend Chr. Felumb. — Læs anmeldelsen side 7.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU

Bladet: Land og Folk

Kopenhagen

4/67

skriver den 1 SEP. 1956

To berømte orkestre i København

To hver på sin vis verdensberømte orkestre kom i går til København, begge med fly. Det var Boston Symfoniorkestrets 125 mand med den 82-årige dirigent Pierre Monteux i spidsen. De måtte have hele to maskiner plus en tredje til deres instrumenter. Det andet orkester var knap så talstærkt, men ikke mindre kendt, om end for andre musikalske fortrin: Count Basie og hans jazzmusikere. De skulle dog videre til Sverige for at give koncert, men de vender tilbage til København den 10. september. Billedet til højre viser Count Basie selv iført sejlsportskasket. Til venstre Bostonsymfonikernes alderstegne leder, der sine 82 år til trods ikke viger tilbage for en anstrengende koncertrejse. Efter besøget i København skal Boston-symfonikerene videre til Sovjetunionen.

Boston Symfoni Orkester fik øredøvende succes

Copenhagen

Berlingske Sept 1 1956

I Tivolis Koncertsal under ledelse af sin berømte dirigent Pierre Monteux

Alt var lagt op til en stor aften i gaar i Tivolis Koncertsal: det hundredtallige Boston Symfoni Orkester med sin overlegent sikre dirigent Pierre Monteux, salen paa forhaand udsolgt, Kong Frederik med Dronning Ingrid og Prinsesse Margrethe i kongelogen — og Brahms' F-dur-symfoni paa programmet.

Man hørte fra de første takter af Rossinis »Italienerinden i Algier«, at orkestret var fremragende. Her mødtes Italien i strygernes rytmiske pizzicato med det orientalske i træblæsernes melodiske motiver. Gennemsigtigheden og præcisionen var exceptionel. Selve strygernes mægtige klanglegeme var imponerende. Det kunne — hørte man — tage kampen op med selv det sværeste messing.

Men hvilke opdragere har dette orkester ikke ogsaa haft! Fra Nikisch og Muck til Koussewitsky og Monteux, der i en periode fra 1918—24 allerede var dets dirigent. Han er en orkesterleder af den type, der skyr al udvendig podieageren. Han har ingen af den subtile hokus-pokus, eller akrobat-gymnastik, som Toscanini engang spottede. Han har ikke ét overflødigt taktslag. Med sin ganske vist lille, men tætte, lidt massive skikkelses urokkelige ro, kan han minde om vor Johan Svendsen.

Som han viser Pierre Monteux, at en taktstok alene er til at angive præcision og tempo, og han er altid paa toppen af præcisionen og tempoet, og hans venstre haand var udelukkende til at holde orkestrets styrkegrader i ave.

Den fuldendte enhed mellem dirigent og orkester oplevede man i Brahms-symfonien. Det var fra de tre første noder, der gaar gennem alle satser den strenge heroiske holdning, der fastholdtes og udvikledes med prægtige klanglige afskygninger, der fik sin skønneste varme og mildhed i Andanten.

I Scherzoen, der ikke er nogen Scherzo i denne symfoni, markerede Pierre Monteux det dejlige tema med stærkere eftertryk paa dets kulminerende fjerde node, end man er vant til at høre det. Temaet fik derved en mere smertelig tone, der saaledes forberedte overgangen til finalen, symfoniens største sats.

Her svulmede orkestret i hele sin klangfylde, det voldsomme marcato var helt Brahms, i det hvasse kampafsnit følte man, at det var C-moll-symfoniens komponist, der ledte kampen og udløste den sejrende lyse melodi, der gav værket dets sidste heroiske karaktertræk.

Den amerikanske komponist Poul Crestons symfoni nr. 2 gav orkestret lejlighed til at vise alle sine instrumentale muligheder, til slut i dansrytmens heksekedel af klangorgier, suverænt behersket af Monteux, der med Strauss' »Rosenkaveler«-suite satte kronen paa værket, hvad orkestrets ydeevne i rytme, klang og udtryk angaar.

Det var en pragtpræstation, hvor strygerne blev presset op næsten til det skærende i det voldsomme fortissimo, men ogsaa havde sødmen til ariernes indsmigrende melodier.

Der var øredøvende bifald til sidst med mange fremkaldelser, overrækkelse af blomsterbuketter, baade til Monteux og til flere af orkestermedlemmerne, deriblandt den hvidhaarede danske første-violinist Einar Hansen.

KAI FLOR

---

mangfoldigere og større siden mæglingsforslagets ophøjelse til lov i foråret.

Fordi det forholder sig sådan gik tillidsmændene i tirsdags til møde med den største alvor. I god tid i forvejen var der sendt indbydelse til DSF og fagorganisationerne i den tro, at de faglige ledere, ikke mindst efter forårets begivenheder, måtte have indset, at arbejdspladsernes folk venter vejledning og støtte fra dem, der sidder på det faglige apparat.

Men Eiler Jensen, Einar Nielsen m. fl. ønsker ikke at træffe sammen med tillidsmændene for at drøfte de alvorlige faglige problemer, der for tiden tynger så voldsomt. De har i stedet valgt at samles med en snæver kreds af forbundsformænd på Hotel Richmond den 11. september, hvor man vil drøfte »hvilke veje man skal gå for at etablere og fastholde en indre information i fagbevægelsen og en kontakt imellem medlemmerne og de lokale afdelinger, mellem de lokale afdelinger og forbundene og imellem forbundene og DSF«.

Ingen vil bestride at Eiler Jen-

få lukket munden på fagbevæge sens menige medlemmer.

Som de københavnske tillid mænd har vist, tåler arbejderkla sens problemer udmærket at bliv behandlet i fuldt dagslys, og h ikke de øverste faglige ledere sker at blive misforstået, bør hurtigst muligt komme frem a sken og fortælle, hvad det er de med fagbevægelsen.

chri

To blade går ind

To danske ugeblade ophører — ifølge Danmarks Handels- og Sø farts-Tidende — med at udkomme omkring den 1. oktober. De drejer sig om Idrætsbladet, som udgives af A/S Politiken, og Uge-Revyen, der udsendes af Gutenberghus.

Begrundelsen skal i begge tilfæl de være, at oplagenes størrelse over for de stigende omkostninger ikke betinger en rentabel forrent-

---

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
ORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,564

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
PRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

Cheer Symphony

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 31 (AP)— The Boston Symphony Orchestra [illegible] an ovation tonight at the [illegible] of its concert here. King [illegible] IX, Denmark's musical [illegible] led the applause.

[illegible] conducts orches- [illegible] Queen Ingrid [illegible] Princess Mar- [illegible] at the con- [illegible] Amusement [illegible]

Copenhagen Sept 1 1956

Ny dramatisk situation i lufthavnen i gaar

Amerikansk passager-maskine lander, mens en dansk jet endnu er paa landingsbanen — i modsat retning

I gaar eftermiddags indtraf en ny dramatisk situation i Københavns lufthavn, heldigvis uden følger, men af en saadan karakter, at der igen maa tales om udisciplineret flyvning og menneskelige fejl.

En dansk jet, en Thunderjet F 84, kom ind til landing i gaar eftermiddags paa et tidspunkt, hvor vejret var straalende. Piloten laa med landingsnummer 1 og kom ned fuldstændig korrekt. Ude for enden af bane 22 skulle han forskriftsmæssigt vende maskinen og køre tilbage, indtil han kunne køre ind paa bane 35 og fortsætte til kørsel til parkeringspladsen. I mellemtiden var en amerikansk passagermaskine, en DC-6B, Pan American World Airways Clipper kommet ind til landing.

Den laa som nr. 2 i indflyvningen og havde fra flyveledelsen i Kastrup faaet besked om at rapportere ved Nordre Røse, før den gik ind til landing. Dette skete ikke. Den fortsatte sin indflyvning og landede paa bane 22, endnu mens den danske jet i modsat retning var paa vej for at krydse ind mod bane 35. Jet'en naaede væk, og amerikaneren landede paa kortest mulige distance ved at sætte ekstra kraft paa opbremsningen med propellerne.

Der skete intet, men situationen med to maskiner paa samme bane, var en saadan, at man ikke behøver at tage fantasien i anvendelse for at forestille sig, hvordan forløbet kunne have været. Flyveledelsen i Kastrup gik straks i aktion. Men den amerikanske kaptajn erklærede aabent, at han maatte beklage det passerede.

Over for overflyveledelsen udtalte han, at han havde antaget, at den foranliggende jet allerede vilde være kørt bort fra landingsbanen. Han erkendte, at han ikke, som flyveledelsen havde anmodet om, rapporterede under landingen fra Nordre Røse-fyret.

Der er indgivet rapport om det passerede.

Flyveledelsen i Kastrup er sagesløse i baade denne og den hændelse, der indtraf tidligere paa ugen, men hvis det nye taarn havde været færdigt, ville man fra det øverste flyvekontrolrum kunne have fulgt indflyvningerne og formentlig afværget begge fejltagelser. pw.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
RIchmond 2-4200

Straalende musik-aften i Tivoli — En af aarets store musik-begivenheder, Boston Symfoni-Orkestrets koncert i Tivoli i aftes, blev overværet af Kongeparret og Prinsesse Margrethe og fik et straalende forløb. Paa det store billede ses orkestret under koncerten med den berømte dirigent Pierre Monteux paa podiet. Paa det andet billede fra de Kongeliges ankomst ses til venstre Dronning Ingrid og Prinsesse Margrethe. Til højre Kong Frederik og professor, kapelmester Svend Chr. Felumb. — Læs anmeldelsen side 7.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU
Bladet: Land og Folk
9/67 København
skriver den 1 SEP. 1956

To berømte orkestre i København

To hver på sin vis verdensberømte orkestre kom i går til København, begge med fly. Det var Boston Symfoniorkestrets 125 mand med den 82-årige dirigent Pierre Monteux i spidsen. De måtte have hele to maskiner plus en tredje til deres instrumenter. Det andet orkester var knap så talstærkt, men ikke mindre kendt, om end for andre musikalske fortrin: Count Basie og hans jazzmusikere. De skulle dog videre til Sverige for at give koncert, men de vender tilbage til København den 10. september. Billedet til højre viser Count Basie selv iført sejlsportskasket. Til venstre Bostonsymfonikernes alderstegne leder, der sine 82 år til trods ikke viger tilbage for en anstrengende koncertrejse. Efter besøget i København skal Boston-symfonikerene videre til Sovjetunionen.

Copenhagen Berlingske Sept 1 1956

Boston Symfoni Orkester fik øredøvende succes

I Tivolis Koncertsal under ledelse af sin berømte dirigent Pierre Monteux

Alt var lagt op til en stor aften i gaar i Tivolis Koncertsal: det hundredtallige Boston Symfoni Orkester med sin overlegent sikre dirigent Pierre Monteux, salen paa forhaand udsolgt, Kong Frederik med Dronning Ingrid og Prinsesse Margrethe i kongelogen — og Brahms' F-dur-symfoni paa programmet.

Man hørte fra de første takter af Rossinis »Italienerinden i Algier«, at orkestret var fremragende. Her mødtes Italien i strygernes rytmiske pizzicato med det orientalske i træblæsernes melodiske motiver. Gennemsigtigheden og præcisionen var exceptionel. Selve strygernes mægtige klanglegeme var imponerende. Det kunne — hørte man — tage kampen op med selv det sværeste messing.

Men hvilke opdragere har dette orkester ikke ogsaa haft! Fra Nikisch og Muck til Koussewitsky og Monteux, der i en periode fra 1918—24 allerede var dets dirigent. Han er en orkesterleder af den type, der skyr al udvendig podieageren. Han har ingen af den subtile hokus-pokus, eller akrobat-gymnastik, som Toscanini engang spottede. Han har ikke ét overflødigt taktslag. Med sin ganske vist lille, men tætte, lidt massive skikkelses urokkelige ro, kan han minde om vor Johan Svendsen.

Som han viser Pierre Monteux, at en taktstok alene er til at angive præcision og tempo, og han er altid paa toppen af præcisionen og tempoet, og hans venstre haand var udelukkende til at holde orkestrets styrkegrader i ave.

Den fuldendte enhed mellem dirigent og orkester oplevede man i Brahms-symfonien. Det var fra de tre første noder, der gaar gennem alle satser den strenge heroiske holdning, der fastholdtes og udvikledes med prægtige klanglige afskygninger, der fik sin skønneste varme og mildhed i Andanten.

I Scherzoen, der ikke er nogen Scherzo i denne symfoni, markerede Pierre Monteux det dejlige tema med stærkere eftertryk paa dets kulminerende fjerde node, end man er vant til at høre det. Temaet fik derved en mere smertelig tone, der saaledes forberedte overgangen til finalen, symfoniens største sats.

Her svulmede orkestret i hele sin klangfylde, det voldsomme marcato var helt Brahms, i det hvasse kampafsnit følte man, at det var C-mollsymfoniens komponist, der ledte kampen og udløste den sejrende lyse melodi, der gav værket dets sidste heroiske karaktertræk.

Den amerikanske komponist Poul Crestons symfoni nr. 2 gav orkestret lejlighed til at vise alle sine instrumentale muligheder, til slut i danserytmens heksekedel af klangorgier, suverænt behersket af Monteux, der med Strauss' »Rosenkaveler«-suite satte kronen paa værket, hvad orkestrets ydeevne i rytme, klang og udtryk angaar.

Det var en pragtpræstation, hvor strygerne blev presset op næsten til det skærende i det voldsomme fortissimo, men ogsaa havde sødmen til ariernes indsmigrende melodier.

Der var øredøvende bifald til sidst med mange fremkaldelser, overrækkelse af blomsterbuketter, baade til Monteux og til flere af orkestermedlemmerne, deriblandt den hvidhaarede danske første-violinist Einar Hansen.

KAI FLOR

Hailed in Denmark

By United Press

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Sept. 1—The Boston Symphony Orchestra received deafening applause, the national morning newspaper Berlingske Tidence said today in an enthusiastic review of the orchestra's concert here last night.

The orchestra, under conductor Pierre Monteux, scored a triumph with a program including Rossini, Brahmns, Paul Greston and Strauss. Royalty attended.

---

mangfoldigere og større siden mæglingsforslagets ophøjelse til lov i foråret.

Fordi det forholder sig sådan gik tillidsmændene i tirsdags til møde med den største alvor. I god tid i forvejen var der sendt indbydelse til DSF og fagorganisationerne i den tro, at de faglige ledere, ikke mindst efter forårets begivenheder, måtte have indset, at arbejdspladsernes folk venter vejledning og støtte fra dem, der sidder på det faglige apparat.

Men Eiler Jensen, Einar Nielsen m. fl. ønsker ikke at træffe sammen med tillidsmændene for at drøfte de alvorlige faglige problemer, der for tiden tynger så voldsomt. De har i stedet valgt at samles med en snæver kreds af forbundsformænd på Hotel Richmond den 11. september, hvor man vil drøfte »hvilke veje man skal gå for at etablere og fastholde en indre information i fagbevægelsen og en kontakt imellem medlemmerne og de lokale afdelinger, mellem de lokale afdelinger og forbundene og imellem forbundene og DSF«.

Ingen vil bestride at Eiler Jen-

få lukket munden på fagbevæge
sens menige medlemmer.

Som de københavnske tillid
mænd har vist, tåler arbejderkla
sens problemer udmærket at bliv
behandlet i fuldt dagslys, og hv
ikke de øverste faglige ledere øn
sker at blive misforstået, bør d
hurtigst muligt komme frem af bu
sken og fortælle, hvad det er de v med fagbevægelsen. chris

To blade går ind

To danske ugeblade ophører — ifølge Danmarks Handels- og Sø farts-Tidende — med at udkomme omkring den 1. oktober. Det drejer sig om Idrætsbladet, som udgives af A/S Politiken, og Uge-Revyen, der udsendes af Gutenberghus.

Begrundelsen skal i begge tilfælde være, at oplagenes størrelse over for de stigende omkostninger ikke betinger en rentabel forrent-

Copenhagen Sept 1 1956

Ny dramatisk situation i lufthavnen i gaar

Amerikansk passager-maskine lander, mens en dansk jet endnu er paa landingsbanen — i modsat retning

I gaar eftermiddags indtraf en ny dramatisk situation i Københavns lufthavn, heldigvis uden følger, men af en saadan karakter, at der igen maa tales om udisciplineret flyvning og menneskelige fejl.

En dansk jet, en Thunderjet F 84, kom ind til landing i gaar eftermiddags paa et tidspunkt, hvor vejret var straalende. Piloten laa med landingsnummer 1 og kom ned fuldstændig korrekt. Ude for enden af bane 22 skulle han forskriftsmæssigt vende maskinen og køre tilbage, indtil han kunne køre ind paa bane 35 og fortsætte til kørsel til parkeringspladsen. I mellemtiden var en amerikansk passagermaskine, en DC-6B, Pan American World Airways Clipper kommet ind til landing.

Den laa som nr. 2 i indflyvningen og havde fra flyveledelsen i Kastrup faaet besked om at rapportere ved Nordre Rose, før den gik ind til landing. Dette skete ikke. Den [illegible]tsatte [illegible] bane [illegible] jet i [illegible] r at [illegible] naaede [illegible] d at [illegible] nin- [illegible] onen [illegible] bane, [illegible] øver [illegible] r at [illegible] kun- [illegible] Ka- [illegible] den amerikanske kaptajn erklærede aabent, at han maatte beklage det passerede.

Over for overflyveledelsen udtalte han, at han havde antaget, at den foranliggende jet allerede vilde være kørt bort fra landingsbanen. Han erkendte, at han ikke, som flyveledelsen havde anmodet om, rapporterede under landingen fra Nordre Rose-fyret.

Der er indgivet rapport om det passerede.

Flyveledelsen i Kastrup er sagesløse i baade denne og den hændelse, der indtraf tidligere paa ugen, men hvis det nye taarn havde været færdigt, ville man fra det øverste flyvekontrolrum kunne have fulgt indflyvningerne og formentlig afværget begge fejltagelser. pw.

Straalende musik-aften i Tivoli – En af aarets store musik-begivenheder, Boston Symfoni-Orkestrets koncert i Tivoli i aftes, blev overværet af Kongeparret og Prinsesse Margrethe og fik et straalende forløb. Paa det store billede ses orkestret under koncerten med den berømte dirigent Pierre Monteux paa podiet. Paa det andet billede fra de Kongeliges ankomst ses til venstre Dronning Ingrid og Prinsesse Margrethe. Til højre Kong Frederik og professor, kapelmester Svend Chr. Felumb. — Læs anmeldelsen side 7.

PROVINCETOWN, Sept. 1 — The excursion vessel Boston Belle made its last trip to Provincetown on Thursday and was forced to cancel the balance of its schedule, including this busy Labor-Day weekend

---

Boston Symphony Hailed in Denmark

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 1 (UP) —The Boston Symphony Orchestra received deafening applause, Berlinske Tidende said today in an enthusiastic review of the orchestra's concert here last night.

The orchestra, under conductor Pierre Monteux, scored triumph with a program including Rossini, Brahms, Paul Creston and Strauss. Music-loving King Frederik IX, Queen Ingrid and their heir apparent, Princess Margrethe, attended the concert.

Copenhagen Berlingske Sept 1 1956

Boston Symfoni Orkester fik øredøvende succes

I Tivolis Koncertsal under ledelse af sin berømte dirigent Pierre Monteux

Alt var lagt op til en stor aften i gaar i Tivolis Koncertsal: det hundredtallige Boston Symfoni Orkester med sin overlegent sikre dirigent Pierre Monteux, salen paa forhaand udsolgt, Kong Frederik med Dronning Ingrid og Prinsesse Margrethe i kongelogen — og Brahms' F-dur-symfoni paa programmet.

Man hørte fra de første takter af Rossinis »Italienerinden i Algier«, at orkestret var fremragende. Her mødtes Italien i strygernes rytmiske pizzicato med det orientalske i træblæsernes melodiske motiver. Gennemsigtigheden og præcisionen var exceptionel. Selve strygernes mægtige klanglegeme var imponerende. Det kunne — hørte man — tage kampen op med selv det sværeste messing.

Men hvilke opdragere har dette orkester ikke ogsaa haft! Fra Nikisch og Muck til Koussewitsky og Monteux, der i en periode fra 1918—24 haverede var dets dirigent. Han er en orkesterleder af den type, der skyr al udvendig podieageren. Han har ingen af den subtile hokus-pokus, eller akrobat-gymnastik, som Toscanini engang spottede. Han har ikke ét overflødigt taktslag. Med sin ganske vist lille, men tætte, lidt massive skikkelses urokkelige ro, kan han minde om vor Johan Svendsen.

Som han viser Pierre Monteux, at en taktstok alene er til at angive præcision og tempo, og han er altid paa toppen af præcisionen og tempoet, og hans venstre haand var udelukkende til at holde orkestrets styrkegrader i ave.

Den fuldendte enhed mellem dirigent og orkester oplevede man i Brahms-symfonien. Det var fra de tre første noder, der gaar gennem alle satser den strenge heroiske holdning, der fastholdtes og udvikledes med prægtige klanglige afskygninger, der fik sin skønneste varme og mildhed i Andanten.

I Scherzoen, der ikke er nogen Scherzo i denne symfoni, markerede Pierre Monteux det dejlige tema med stærkere eftertryk paa dets kulminerende fjerde node, end man er vant til at høre det. Temaet fik derved en mere smertelig tone, der saaledes forberedte overgangen til finalen, symfoniens største sats.

Her svulmede orkestret i hele sin klangfylde, det voldsomme marcato var helt Brahms, i det hvasse kampafsnit følte man, at det var C-moll-symfoniens komponist, der ledte kampen og udløste den sejrende lyse melodi, der gav værket dets sidste heroiske karaktertræk.

Den amerikanske komponist Poul Crestons symfoni nr. 2 gav orkestret lejlighed til at vise alle sine instrumentale muligheder, til slut i dansérytmens heksekedel af klangorgier, suverænt behersket af Monteux, der med Strauss' »Rosenkaveler«-suite satte kronen paa værket, hvad orkestrets ydeevne i rytme, klang og udtryk angaar.

Det var en pragtpræstation, hvor strygerne blev presset op næsten til det skærende i det voldsomme fortissimo, men ogsaa havde sødmen til ariernes indsmigrende melodier.

Der var øredøvende bifald til sidst med mange fremkaldelser, overrækkelse af blomsterbuketter, baade til Monteux og til flere af orkestermedlemmerne, deriblandt den hvidhaarede danske første-violinist Einar Hansen.

KAI FLOR

INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU

Bladet: Land og Folk

København

4/67

skriver den 1 SEP. 1956

To berømte orkestre i København

To hver på sin vis verdensberømte orkestre kom i går til København, begge med fly. Det var Boston Symfoniorkestrets 125 mand med den 82-årige dirigent Pierre Monteux i spidsen. De måtte have hele to maskiner plus en tredje til deres instrumenter. Det andet orkester var knap så talstærkt, men ikke mindre kendt, om end for andre musikalske fortrin: Count Basie og hans jazzmusikere. De skulle dog videre til Sverige for at give koncert, men de vender tilbage til København den 10. september. Billedet til højre viser Count Basie selv iført sejlsportskasket. Til venstre Bostonsymfonikernes alderstegne leder, der sine 82 år til trods ikke viger tilbage for en anstrengende koncertrejse. Efter besøget i København skal Boston-symfonikerene videre til Sovjetunionen.

---

mangfoldigere og større siden mæglingsforslagets ophøjelse til lov i foråret.

Fordi det forholder sig sådan gik tillidsmændene i tirsdags til møde med den største alvor. I god tid i forvejen var der sendt indbydelse til DSF og fagorganisationerne i den tro, at de faglige ledere, ikke mindst efter forårets begivenheder, måtte have indset, at arbejdspladsernes folk venter vejledning og støtte fra dem, der sidder på det faglige apparat.

Men Eiler Jensen, Einar Nielsen m. fl. ønsker ikke at træffe sammen med tillidsmændene for at drøfte de alvorlige faglige problemer, der for tiden tynger så voldsomt. De har i stedet valgt at samles med en snæver kreds af forbundsformænd på Hotel Richmond den 11. september, hvor man vil drøfte »hvilke veje man skal gå for at etablere og fastholde en indre information i fagbevægelsen og en kontakt imellem medlemmerne og de lokale afdelinger, mellem de lokale afdelinger og forbundene og imellem forbundene og DSF«.

Ingen vil bestride at Eiler Jen-

få lukket munden på fagbevæge sens menige medlemmer.

Som de københavnske tillid mænd har vist, tåler arbejderkla sens problemer udmærket at bliv behandlet i fuldt dagslys, og hvi ikke de øverste faglige ledere øn sker at blive misforstået, bør d hurtigst muligt komme frem af bu sken og fortælle, hvad det er de v med fagbevægelsen. chris

To blade går ind

To danske ugeblade ophører — ifølge Danmarks Handels- og Sø farts-Tidende — med at udkomm omkring den 1. oktober. De drejer sig om Idrætsbladet, som udgives af A/S Politiken, og Uge-Revyen, der udsendes af Gutenberghus.

Begrundelsen skal i begge tilfælde være, at oplagenes størrelse over for de stigende omkostninger ikke betinger en rentabel forrent-

Copenhagen Sept 1 1956

Ny dramatisk situation i lufthavnen i gaar

Amerikansk passager-maskine lander, mens en dansk jet endnu er paa landingsbanen – i modsat retning

I gaar eftermiddags indtraf en ny dramatisk situation i Københavns lufthavn, heldigvis uden følger, men af en saadan karakter, at der igen maa tales om udisciplineret flyvning og menneskelige fejl.

En dansk jet, en Thunderjet F 84, kom ind til landing i termidvejret ed lanfuldden af æssigt
e, ind-ane 35 rings-ame-
DC-6B,
Clipingen strup ved lan-satte bane et i r at ae-ede at in-en ne, er
at

amerikanske kaptajn erklærede aabent, at han maatte beklage det passerede.

Over for overflyveledelsen udtalte han, at han havde antaget, at den foranliggende jet allerede vilde være kørt bort fra landingsbanen. Han erkendte, at han ikke, som flyveledelsen havde anmodet om, rapporterede under landingen fra Nordre Røse-fyret.

Der er indgivet rapport om det passerede.

Flyveledelsen i Kastrup er sagesløse i baade denne og den hændelse, der indtraf tidligere paa ugen, men hvis det nye taarn havde været færdigt, ville man fra det øverste flyvekontrolrum kunne have fulgt indflyvningerne og formentlig afværget begge fejltagelser. pw.

Straalende musik-aften i Tivoli – En af aarets store musik-begivenheder, Boston Symfoni-Orkestrets koncert i Tivoli i aftes, blev overværet af Kongeparret og Prinsesse Margrethe og fik et straalende forløb. Paa det store billede ses orkestret under koncerten med den berømte dirigent Pierre Monteux paa podiet. Paa det andet billede fra de Kongeliges ankomst ses til venstre Dronning Ingrid og Prinsesse Margrethe. Til højre Kong Frederik og professor, kapelmester Svend Chr. Felumb. — Læs anmeldelsen side 7.

King Leads in Applause For Boston Symphony

Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 31 (AP) The Boston Symphony Orchestra received an ovation tonight at the conclusion of its concert here. King Frederik IX, Denmark's musical monarch, led the applause.

The king, who conducts orchestras himself, took Queen Ingrid and 16-year-old Princess Margrethe to the concert at the concert hall in Tivoli Amusement Park. The Boston Orchestra is on a European tour.

Copenhagen

Berlingske Sept 1 1956

Boston Symfoni Orkester fik øredøvende succes

I Tivolis Koncertsal under ledelse af sin berømte dirigent Pierre Monteux

Alt var lagt op til en stor aften i gaar i Tivolis Koncertsal: det hundredtallige Boston Symfoni Orkester med sin overlegent sikre dirigent Pierre Monteux, salen paa forhaand udsolgt, Kong Frederik med Dronning Ingrid og Prinsesse Margrethe i kongelogen — og Brahms' F-dur-symfoni paa programmet.

Man hørte fra de første takter af Rossinis »Italienerinden i Algier«, at orkestret var fremragende. Her mødtes Italien i strygernes rytmiske pizzicato med det orientalske i træblæsernes melodiske motiver. Gennemsigtigheden og præcisionen var exceptionel. Selve strygernes mægtige klanglegeme var imponerende. Det kunne — hørte man — tage kampen op med selv det sværeste messing.

Men hvilke opdragere har dette orkester ikke ogsaa haft! Fra Nikisch og Muck til Koussewitsky og Monteux, der i en periode fra 1918—24 ... var dets dirigent. Han er en orkesterleder af den type, der skyr al udvendig podieageren. Han har ingen af den subtile hokus-pokus, eller akrobat-gymnastik, som Toscanini engang spottede. Han har ikke ét overflødigt taktslag. Med sin ganske vist lille, men tætte, lidt massive skikkelses urokkelige ro, kan han minde om vor Johan Svendsen.

Som han viser Pierre Monteux, at en taktstok alene er til at angive præcision og tempo, og han er altid paa toppen af præcisionen og tempoet, og hans venstre haand var udelukkende til at holde orkestrets styrkegrader i ave.

Den fuldendte enhed mellem dirigent og orkester oplevede man i Brahms-symfonien. Det var fra de tre første noder, der gaar gennem alle satser den strenge heroiske holdning, der fastholdtes og udvikledes med prægtige klanglige afskygninger, der fik sin skønneste varme og mildhed i Andanten.

I Scherzoen, der ikke er nogen Scherzo i denne symfoni, markerede Pierre Monteux det dejlige tema med stærkere eftertryk paa dets kulminerende fjerde node, end man er vant til at høre det. Temaet fik derved en mere smertelig tone, der saaledes forberedte overgangen til finalen, symfoniens største sats.

Her svulmede orkestret i hele sin klangfylde, det voldsomme marcato var helt Brahms, i det hvasse kampafsnit følte man, at det var C-moll-symfoniens komponist, der ledte kampen og udløste den sejrende lyse melodi, der gav værket dets sidste heroiske karaktertræk.

Den amerikanske komponist Poul Crestons symfoni nr. 2 gav orkestret lejlighed til at vise alle sine instrumentale muligheder, til slut i danserytmens heksekedel af klangorgier, suverænt behersket af Monteux, der med Strauss' »Rosenkaveler«-suite satte kronen paa værket, hvad orkestrets ydeevne i rytme, klang og udtryk angaar.

Det var en pragtpræstation, hvor strygerne blev presset op næsten til det skærende i det voldsomme fortissimo, men ogsaa havde sødmen til ariernes indsmigrende melodier.

Der var øredøvende bifald til sidst med mange fremkaldelser, overrækkelse af blomsterbuketter, baade til Monteux og til flere af orkestermedlemmerne, deriblandt den hvidhaarede danske første-violinist Einar Hansen.

KAI FLOR

Bladet: INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU

Land og Folk

Copenhagen

4/67

skriver den 1 SEP. 1956

To berømte orkestre i København

To hver på sin vis verdensberømte orkestre kom i går til København, begge med fly. Det var Boston Symfoniorkestrets 125 mand med den 82-årige dirigent Pierre Monteux i spidsen. De måtte have hele to maskiner plus en tredje til deres instrumenter. Det andet orkester var knap så talstærkt, men ikke mindre kendt, om end for andre musikalske fortrin: Count Basie og hans jazzmusikere. De skulle dog videre til Sverige for at give koncert, men de vender tilbage til København den 10. september. Billedet til højre viser Count Basie selv iført sejlsportskasket. Til venstre Bostonsymfonikernes alderstegne leder, der sine 82 år til trods ikke viger tilbage for en anstrengende koncertrejse. Efter besøget i København skal Boston-symfonikerene videre til Sovjetunionen.

---

mangfoldigere og større siden mæglingsforslagets ophøjelse til lov i foråret.

Fordi det forholder sig sådan gik tillidsmændene i tirsdags til møde med den største alvor. I god tid i forvejen var der sendt indbydelse til DSF og fagorganisationerne i den tro, at de faglige ledere, ikke mindst efter forårets begivenheder, måtte have indset, at arbejdspladsernes folk venter vejledning og støtte fra dem, der sidder på det faglige apparat.

Men Eiler Jensen, Einar Nielsen m. fl. ønsker ikke at træffe sammen med tillidsmændene for at drøfte de alvorlige faglige problemer, der for tiden tynger så voldsomt. De har i stedet valgt at samles med en snæver kreds af forbundsformænd på Hotel Richmond den 11. september, hvor man vil drøfte »hvilke veje man skal gå for at etablere og fastholde en indre information i fagbevægelsen og en kontakt imellem medlemmerne og de lokale afdelinger, mellem de lokale afdelinger og forbundene og imellem forbundene og DSF«.

Ingen vil bestride at Eiler Jen-

få lukket munden på fagbevæge-
sens menige medlemmer.

Som de københavnske tillid-
mænd har vist, tåler arbejderkla-
sens problemer udmærket at bliv
behandlet i fuldt dagslys, og hvi
ikke de øverste faglige ledere øn-
sker at blive misforstået, bør d
hurtigst muligt komme frem af bu-
sken og fortælle, hvad det er de vi
med fagbevægelsen. chris

To blade går ind

To danske ugeblade ophører — ifølge Danmarks Handels- og Søfarts-Tidende — med at udkomme omkring den 1. oktober. Det drejer sig om Idrætsbladet, som udgives af A/S Politiken, og Uge-Revyen, der udsendes af Guten-berghus.

Begrundelsen skal i begge tilfælde være, at oplagenes størrelse over for de stigende omkostninger ikke betinger en rentabel forrent-

86

Copenhagen Sept 1 1956

Ny dramatisk situation i lufthavnen i gaar

Amerikansk passager-maskine lander, mens en dansk … -er paa landingsbanen — i modsat …

I gaar eftern… ny dramatisk … havns lufthav… følger, men af… ter, at der i… udisciplineret, … neskelige fej…

… kaptajn erklærede … maatte beklage det

…erflyveledelsen udtalte … havde antaget, at den … jet allerede vilde væ… fra landingsbanen. Han … han ikke, som flyve… e anmodet om, rappor… landingen fra Nordre

…dgivet rapport om det

En dansk … kom ind t… dags paa … var straal… dingsnu… stændig… bane 2… vende … til har … og for… pladsa… rikan… Pan… per …

…sen i Kastrup er sages… denne og den hændel… traf tidligere paa ugen, …et nye taarn havde været …lle man fra det øverste …olrum kunne have fulgt …gerne og formentlig af…gge fejltagelser. pw.

Straalende musik-aften i Tivoli – En af aarets store musik-begivenheder, Boston Symfoni-Orkestrets koncert i Tivoli i aftes, blev overværet af Kongeparret og Prinsesse Margrethe og fik et straalende forløb. Paa det store billede ses orkestret under koncerten med den berømte dirigent Pierre Monteux paa podiet. Paa det andet billede fra de Kongeliges ankomst ses til venstre Dronning Ingrid og Prinsesse Margrethe. Til højre Kong Frederik og professor, kapelmester Svend Chr. Felumb. — Læs anmeldelsen side 7.

Boston Symphony Scores Big Hit in Copenhagen

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 1 (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra received deafening applause the national morning newspaper Berlingske Tidende said today in an enthusiastic review of the orchestra's concert here last night.

The orchestra, under Conductor Pierre Monteux, scored another triumph with a program including Rossini, Brahms, Paul Creston and Strauss. It played in the New Tivoli concert hall, which was completed only last spring after total destruction of the old one during the Nazi occupation.

Music-loving King Frederik IX, Queen Ingrid and the heir apparent, Princess Margrethe, attended the concert.

Copenhagen Berlingske Sept 1 1956

Boston Symfoni Orkester fik øredøvende succes

I Tivolis Koncertsal under ledelse af sin berømte dirigent Pierre Monteux

Alt var lagt op til en stor aften i gaar i Tivolis Koncertsal: det hundredtallige Boston Symfoni Orkester med sin overlegent sikre dirigent Pierre Monteux, salen paa forhaand udsolgt, Kong Frederik med Dronning Ingrid og Prinsesse Margrethe i kongelogen — og Brahms' F-dur-symfoni paa programmet.

Man hørte fra de første takter af Rossinis »Italienerinden i Algier«, at orkestret var fremragende. Her mødtes Italien i strygernes rytmiske pizzicato med det orientalske i træblæsernes melodiske motiver. Genmæssigtigheden og præcisionen var exceptionel. Selve strygernes mægtige klanglegeme var imponerende. Det kunne — hørte man — tage kampen op med selv det sværeste messing.

Men hvilke opdragere har dette orkester ikke ogsaa haft! Fra Nikisch og Muck til Koussewitsky og Monteux, der i en periode fra 1918—24 ledede var dets dirigent. Han er en orkesterleder af den type, der skyr al udvendig podieageren. Han har ingen af den subtile hokus-pokus, eller akrobat-gymnastik, som Toscanini engang spottede. Han har ikke ét overflødigt taktslag. Med sin ganske vist lille, men tætte, lidt massive skikkelses urokkelige ro, kan han minde om vor Johan Svendsen.

Som han viser Pierre Monteux, at en taktstok alene er til at angive præcision og tempo, og han er altid paa toppen af præcisionen og tempoet, og hans venstre haand var udelukkende til at holde orkestrets styrkegrader i ave.

Den fuldendte enhed mellem dirigent og orkester oplevede man i Brahms-symfonien. Det var fra de tre første noder, der gaar gennem alle satser den strenge heroiske holdning, der fastholdtes og udvikledes med prægtige klanglige afskygninger, der fik sin skønneste varme og mildhed i Andanten.

I Scherzoen, der ikke er nogen Scherzo i denne symfoni, markerede Pierre Monteux det dejlige tema med stærkere eftertryk paa dets kulminerende fjerde node, end man er vant til at høre det. Temaet fik derved en mere smertelig tone, der saaledes forberedte overgangen til finalen, symfoniens største sats.

Her svulmede orkestret i hele sin klangfylde, det voldsomme marcato var helt Brahms, i det hvasse kampafsnit følte man, at det var C-moll-symfoniens komponist, der ledte kampen og udløste den sejrende lyse melodi, der gav værket dets sidste heroiske karaktertræk.

Den amerikanske komponist Poul Crestons symfoni nr. 2 gav orkestret lejlighed til at vise alle sine instrumentale muligheder, til slut i dansenrytmens heksekedel af klangorgier, suverænt behersket af Monteux, der med Strauss' »Rosenkaveler«-suite satte kronen paa værket, hvad orkestrets ydeevne i rytme, klang og udtryk angaar.

Det var en pragtpræstation, hvor strygerne blev presset op næsten til det skærende i det voldsomme fortissimo, men ogsaa havde sødmen til ariernes indsmigrende melodier.

Der var øredøvende bifald til sidst med mange fremkaldelser, overrækkelse af blomsterbuketter, baade til Monteux og til flere af orkestermedlemmerne, deriblandt den hvidhaarede danske første-violinist Einar Hansen.

KAI FLOR

INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU

Bladet: Land og Folk

Copenhagen

4/67

skriver den 1 SEP 1956

To berømte orkestre i København

To hver på sin vis verdensberømte orkestre kom i går til København, begge med fly. Det var Boston Symfoniorkestrets 125 mand med den 82-årige dirigent Pierre Monteux i spidsen. De måtte have hele to maskiner plus en tredje til deres instrumenter. Det andet orkester var knap så talstærkt, men ikke mindre kendt, om end for andre musikalske fortrin: Count Basie og hans jazzmusikere. De skulle dog videre til Sverige for at give koncert, men de vender tilbage til København den 10. september. Billedet til højre viser Count Basie selv iført sejlsportskasket. Til venstre Bostonsymfonikernes alderstegne leder, der sine 82 år til trods ikke viger tilbage for en anstrengende koncertrejse. Efter besøget i København skal Boston-symfonikerene videre til Sovjetunionen.

mangfoldigere og større siden mæglingsforslagets ophøjelse til lov i foråret.

Fordi det forholder sig sådan gik tillidsmændene i tirsdags til møde med den største alvor. I god tid i forvejen var der sendt indbydelse til DSF og fagorganisationerne i den tro, at de faglige ledere, ikke mindst efter forårets begivenheder, måtte have indset, at arbejdspladsernes folk venter vejledning og støtte fra dem, der sidder på det faglige apparat.

Men Eiler Jensen, Einar Nielsen m. fl. ønsker ikke at træffe sammen med tillidsmændene for at drøfte de alvorlige faglige problemer, der for tiden tynger så voldsomt. De har i stedet valgt at samles med en snæver kreds af forbundsformænd på Hotel Richmond den 11. september, hvor man vil drøfte »hvilke veje man skal gå for at etablere og fastholde en indre information i fagbevægelsen og en kontakt imellem medlemmerne og de lokale afdelinger, mellem de lokale afdelinger og forbundene og imellem forbundene og DSF«.

Ingen vil bestride at Eiler Jen-

få lukket munden på fagbevæge… sens menige medlemmer.

Som de københavnske tillid… mænd har vist, tåler arbejderkla… sens problemer udmærket at bliv… behandlet i fuldt dagslys, og hvi… ikke de øverste faglige ledere øn… sker at blive misforstået, bør d… hurtigst muligt komme frem af bu… sken og fortælle, hvad det er de vi… med fagbevægelsen.

chris

To blade går ind

To danske ugeblade ophører — ifølge Danmarks Handels- og Søfarts-Tidende — med at udkomme omkring den 1. oktober. Det drejer sig om Idrætsbladet, som udgives af A/S Politiken, og Uge-Revyen, der udsendes af Gutenberghus.

Begrundelsen skal i begge tilfælde være, at oplagenes størrelse over for de stigende omkostninger ikke betinger en rentabel forrentsee also vol. II

INTERNATIONAL PRESS
CUTTING BUREAU
Bladet: Information
skriver den 1 SEP 1956

EN FESTAFTEN I TIVOLI

Boston-symfoniorkestret med Pierre Monteux fotograferet i Tivoli i aftes

Baade New Yorker-Philharmonikerne og Philadelphia-orkestret rejste uden om København, da de i de sidste par aar besøgte Europa. Derfor maa man gaa helt tilbage til 1950, til Wiener-Philharmonikernes koncerter under Wilhelm Furtwängler, for at kunne finde noget, der kan maale sig med Boston-symfonikernes koncert under ledelse af Pierre Monteux i gaar.

Selv de højeste forventninger, man mødte op med, blev overtruffet. Dette ensemble er af en fuldkommenhed, som i ordets egentligste forstand er enestaaende. Dets karakteristiske lyse glans, matematisk rene stemning og syngende, strømmende vellyd — navnlig i stryger- og træblæsergruppen — smelter sammen til en klang af ligefrem ubegribelig homogenitet. Det mest overraskende er imidlertid orkestrets kammermusikalske indstilling til stoffet, der ikke søger sig tilfredsstillet af slaaende rytmiske eller dynamiske effekter, men af et nobelt maadehold. Boston'erne vil ikke forbløffe, men overbevise — og det lykkedes dem i allerhøjeste grad.

Selvfølgelig tilkommer en stor del af æren aftenens dirigent, Pierre Monteux. Den 81-aarige franske maitre er hævet over de orkestrale tricks, som mange anser for at være typisk amerikansk. Han er i det hele taget hævet over hver form for klassificering. Brahms 3. symfoni fremstod med en dybde, ro, skønhed, varme, saa man maa tale om en ideal fremførelse af dette værk, ukunstlet, renlivet og storslaaet.

Mere gallisk var maaske den indledende Rossini-ouverture, som mere var præget af fransk esprit end af italiensk brio. Og mere amerikansk end ønskelig var den afsluttende Rosenkavaler-suite, dette noget problematiske potpourri af operaens »schlagere«. Her oplevede man det helt store orkesterspil, nobelt, flot, blændende, medrivende — men uden Donau-byens naturfødte charme, uden de sødmefyldte violin-glissandi og wienervalsens rytmiske særkende, dette ejendommelige »lift« paa anden taktdel. Her viste sig tydeligst orkestrets fantastiske dygtighed — men ogsaa grænsen for dets formaaen. Og det var her, man spurgte sig selv, hvorfor det ikke var kommet med værker, der var mere karakteristisk for baade Boston'erne og Pierre Monteux, altsaa f. eks. med Ravel og Stravinskij …

Som en selvfølge vil man imidlertid acceptere, at orkestret sætter nutidig amerikansk musik paa sine programmer. Men det falder én lidt svært at tro, at Paul Crestons eklektiske symfoni nr. 2 er noget af det mest repræsentative indenfor den nyere amerikanske tonekunst. I sin blanding af senromantiske og impressionistiske bestanddele med jazz-rytmer og lidt moderne harmoniske krydderier hist og her er den behændigt lavet og virkningsfuldt instrumenteret, men ikke noget, man er villig til at se Boston'ernes kræfter spildt paa.

Man kunne med rette være utilfreds med programmet til en saa sjælden begivenhed, som man ikke syntes udnyttede den sjældne lejlighed til at høre Boston'erne under Monteux paa tilfredsstillende maade. Alligevel havde man ønsket, at lytterne landet over var blevet delagtiggjort i denne festlige begivenhed. For selvfølgelig kogte Tivoli-salen af begejstring. Med de kongelige i spidsen tiljublede den celebre forsamling det berømte orkester, klappede, raabte, trampede i gulvet, da den gamle maitre — som det sømmer sig for en franskmand — afleverede blomsterne til orkestrets kvindelige medlemmer, fløjtenistinden og harpenistinden, som ogsaa havde fortjent dem. Og da orkestrets danskfødte medlem, violinisten Einer Bech Hansen, fik en særlig buket med røde og hvide nelliker …

H. L.

ST. REGNEGADE 2. KØBENHAVN K
TELF. CENTRAL 11,995
INTERNATIONAL PRESS
CUTTING BUREAU
Bladet: Ekstrabladet
skriver den 8 SEP 1956

TIVOLIS nye koncertsal skabte muligheder for at faa de store udenlandske orkestre til København. Flere af de berømte ensembler er i de sidste aar gaaet uden om København til Oslo og Stockholm. Men Wilhelm Hansen tog straks initiativet til at faa Boston Symfonikerne hertil, og det blev intet mindre end en af sæsonens store musikbegivenheder.

Disse musikere var ikke alene dejlige solister, men hver eneste gruppe i orkestret ydede et sammenspil, som man sjældent faar lejlighed til at høre. Uden paa nogen maade at fremhæve enkelte kan vi ikke lade være med at nævne violoncelgruppen og blæserne, og sent skal vi glemme violinernes klang i den afsluttende suite fra „Rosenkavalleren“ under den prægtige dirigent Charles Münch' taktstok. Imponerende var det at følge den 81-aarige mester, som aftenen før var kommet fra Edinburgh og dagen efter skulle til Oslo. Til trods for de fysiske anstrengelser rejser og koncerter havde været, mødte han alligevel op til den aftenfest, der var arrangeret i den amerikanske ambassade.

Pierre Monteux

Opmuntret af den store sukces med Bostonsymfonikerne har Wilhelm Hansen indledt forhandlinger med et nyt udenlandsk orkester.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Bulletin (e)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 146,283

SEP 1 1956

Boston Symphony A Hit in Denmark

Copenhagen, Denmark—(UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra received deafening applause, the national morning newspaper Berlingske Tidende said today in an enthusiastic review of the orchestra's concert here last night.

The orchestra, under conductor Pierre Monteux, scored another triumph with a program including Rossini, Brahms, Paul Creston and Strauss. It played in the new Tivoli Concert Hall, which was completed only last spring after total destruction of the old one in the Nazi occupation.

Music-loving King Frederik IX, Queen Ingrid and the heir apparent, Princess Margrethe, attended the concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 1 1956

DANES CHEER HUB SYMPHONY

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) —The Boston Symphony Orchestra received an ovation at the conclusion of its concert here. King Frederik IX, Denmark's musical monarch, led the applause.

The king, who conducts orchestras himself, took Queen Ingrid and 16-year-old Princess Margrethe to the concert at the concert hall in Tivoli Amusement Park.

The Boston Orchestra is on a European tour.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973

SEP 1 1956

King Hails Symphony

COPENHAGEN (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra received an ovation at the conclusion of its concert here. King Frederik IX, Denmark's monarch, led the applause.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Sun
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,774

SEP 2 1956

Boston Symphony Scores in Denmark

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Sept. 1 (UP)—The Boston Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Pierre Monteux, scored another victory at its concert last night, Danish critics reported.

King Frederik IX, Queen Ingrid and Princess Margrethe attended the concert and led the enthusiastic audience in applause.

Last night's concert included Rossini, Brahms, and Strauss. The performance was held in the new Tivoli concert hall, completed only last spring to replace the old hall destroyed by the Germans during the occupation.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,625

SEP 1 1956

Boston Symphony Gets Big Hand

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Sept. 1 (UP)—The Boston Symphony orchestra received deafening applause the national morning newspaper, Berlingske Tidende, said today in an enthusiastic review of the orchestra's concert here last night.

The orchestra, under Conducor Pierre Monteu, scored another triumph with a progam including Rossini, Brahms, Paul Creston and Strauss. It played in the new Tivoli concert hall, which was completed only last spring after total destruction of the old one by the Nazi occupation.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • HAncock 6-9297
York Weekly
YORK VILLAGE, Maine
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,600

SEP 20 1956

Among those honored when the Boston Symphony Orchestra gave a concert in Copenhagen recently during their overseas tour, was Mr. Einar Hansen who for many years gave great pleasure to York residents when he played during the summer months at the Marshall House.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 1 1956

Hub Symphony Receives Ovation

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, (UP—The Boston Symphony Orchestra received deafening applause, newspaper Berlingske Tidende said today in an enthusiastic review of the orchestra's concert here last night.

The orchestra, under conductor Pierre Monteux, scored another triumph with a program including Rossini, Brahms, Paul Creston and Strauss.

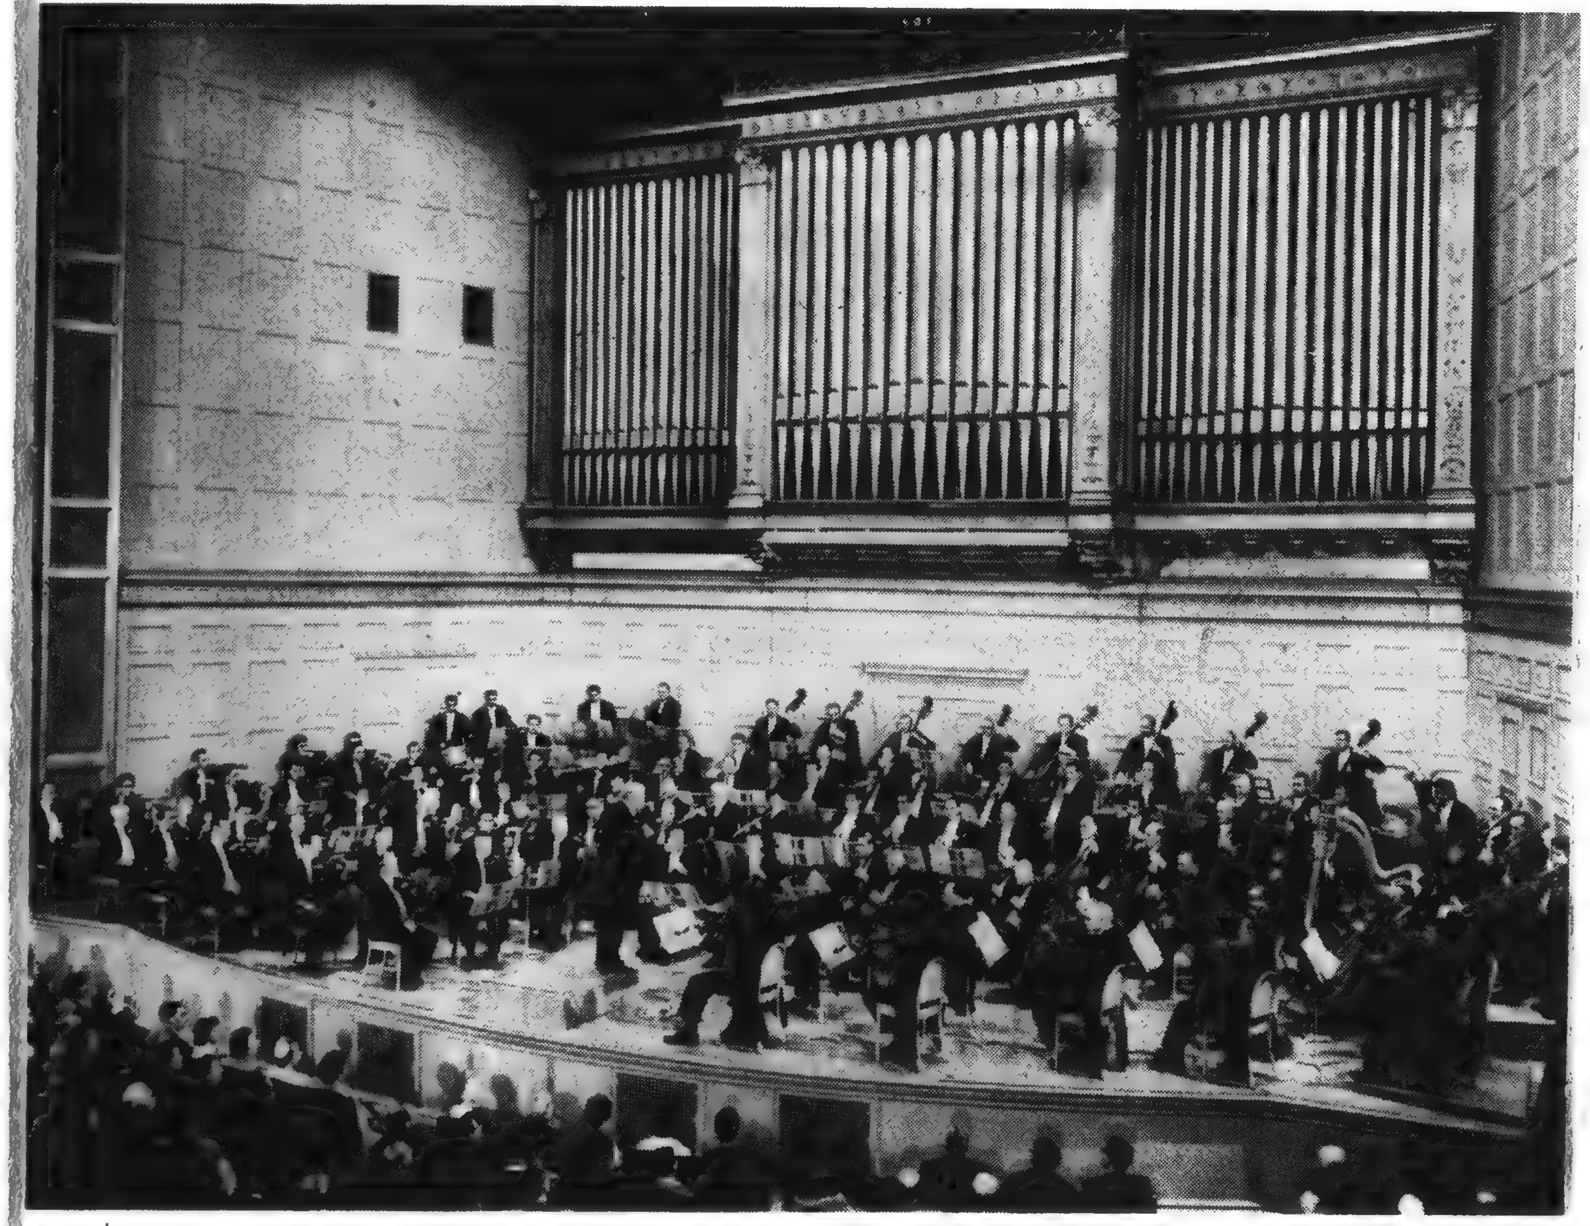
Music-loving King Frederik IX, Queen Ingrid and the heir apparent, Princess Margrethe, attended the concert.

[87]

Impresario's

ELSA-MAI OG PER GOTTSCHALK

presenterer i samarbeid med The American National and Theatre Academy



BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Dirigent: Charles Munch

FOLKETEATRET LØRDAG 1. SEPTEMBER 1956 KL. 20

Hør

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Dirigent: Charles Munch, spiller:

L 16307	Beethoven: Symfoni no. 7
L 16181	Brahms: Symfoni no. 4
LC 16485	Berlioz: Fausts fordømmelse
LB 16461	Berlioz: Romeo og Julie
T 16401	Händel: Water Music Suite Mozart: Figaros bryllup — ouverture Schumann: Genoveva — Ouverture
16305	Haydn: Barnesymfoni (Dir.: Sergei Koussevitzky)
L 16492	Pianokonsert no. 2, f-moll (Chopin) Pianokonsert no. 4, c-moll (Saint-Saëns) (Solist: Alexander Brailowsky)
L 16363	Pianokonsert no. 2, B-dur (Brahms) (Solist: Arthur Rubinstein)

på

RCA Grammofonplater

Utgis av A.s NERA Grammofonavdelingen
fåes hos musikkhandlerne

PROGRAM:

Ludwig van Beethoven Symfoni nr. 3 opus 55, Ess dur
(1770—1827) «EROICA»

1. Allegro con brio
2. Marcia funebre: Adagio assai
3. Scherzo: Allegro vivace
4. Finale: Allegro molto

Walter Piston . . . . . Symfoni nr. 6
(1894—)

1. Fluendo espressivo
2. Leggerissimo vivace
3. Adagio sereno
4. Allegro energico

Maurice Ravel . . . . . . Daphnis og Chloé
(1875—1937)

Kunstnernes Restaurant
Oslo

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

ble grunnlagt i 1881 av Henry L. Higginson. Orkestret feirer således 75 års jubileum i år og en bedre manifestasjon av dette enn en Europa-turné kan vel neppe tenkes. Det er også en stor glede at Oslo kunne komme med på konsert-listen og Boston Symphony Orchestra blir således det første profesjonelle amerikanske symfoniorkester som besøker Norge. Orkestret teller 110 mann.

CHARLES MUNCH

ble i 1949 fast dirigent for Boston Symphony Orchestra og det har vist seg å være et lykkelig valg. Charles Munch er født i Strassbourg i 1891 og levet hele sin barndom og ungdom i et miljø som vesentlig var opptatt med musikk. Tidlig begynte han å studere direksjon og har dirigert over hele verden de fremste symfoniorkestre. Og da han hadde overtatt i Boston skrev en av kritikerne: «De berømte Boston-konserter går mot en ny gylden æra!»

JOH. NORDAHL - OSLO

Teatern i Helsingfors ble ønsket velkommen på Østbanen av teatersjef sjef Schauman, teatersjef Axel Otto Normann, skuespillerinnen Gerda Runar Schauman og skuespillerinnen Gunvor Sandkvist.

OSLO MORGENBLADET — 3 Sept '56

Stor suksess for Boston Symphony Orchestra

Hvis det skulle utdeles en pris til verdens beste symfoniorkester, ville Bostons kanskje være det som kom sterkest på tale. Støttet av amerikansk generøsitet har Koussevitzsky og Charles Munch plukket ut musikere fra nesten hele verden og skapt et ensemble som ikke har sin like i velklang og vituositet.

Folketeatret var ikke den mest flatterende sal for slikt et orkesters prestasjoner. Å plasere orkestret på et flatt scenegulv omgitt av svarte forheng kunne jo aldri gi et tilfredsstillende resultat. Når man dessuten satt altfor nær, ble akustikken nokså merkelig. Man måtte venne seg til at blåsernes toner nådde øret filtrert gjennom en tett srykermasse og at de trengte lenger tid til å tilbakelegge distansen enn førstefiolinene. Det meste av messingen og paukene ble hengende igjen i bakteppets rike folder. I Eroica-symfonien måtte man stadig anstrenge øret for å få tak i det som fiolinene akkompagnerte.

Men når øret hadde vent seg til disse forholdene, kunne man lene seg tilbake og nyte en varm og klassisk balansert tolkning av Eroica-symfonien, der ikke en eneste note var likegyldig. Man kunne nyte oboens herlige runde tone, cellistenes fabelaktige presisjon, bratsjenes klarhet og valdhornenes fullkomne samspill i scherzoens trio.

Av amerikansk musikk gav programmet Walter Pistons sjette symfoni. Tross sin farlige utsatte posisjon mellom Beethovens og Ravels mesterverk gav symfonien et meget sympatisk inntrykk. Piston er teknikeren blant amerikanske komponister. Hans sjette symfoni er lettflytende musikk, utarbeidet med sikker smak og kultur og stor dyktighet i instrumentasjon og kontrapunkt. Virkemidlene er beherskede; det modernistiske innslaget er diskret. Den soignerte orkestrering gjør selv de verste disharmonier akseptable.

Sin fulle virtuositet viste orkestret først med suite nr. 2 fra Daphnis et Chloë. Efter å ha vært trimmet av franske dirigenter i 38 år og med tallrike franske musikere i orkestret har Bostons symfoniorkester gjort fransk musikk til sin spesialitet. Dets utførelse av Ravels verk skuffet ikke på noen måte de forventningene man hadde stillet. Det utfoldet en virtuositet så blendende og en velklang så berusende at man satt som fortryllet.

Efter konserten overrakte Filharmonisk Selskaps formann blomster til dirigenten og søkte med mange engelske ord å uttrykke publikums følelser. Han sluttet med å ønske musikerne velkommen til Oslos nye music-hall, og forhåpentlig oppfattet amerikanerne ordet i den norske betydning. Charles Munch kvitterte for oppmerksomheten med en liten takketale på engelsk. Publikums begeistring var ikke å ta feil av. Bravoropene og den taktfaste klapping syntes ikke å ville ta slutt.

Børre Qvamme.

Vårt Land 3/9-56

Boston Symphony Orchestra — en stor konsertbegivenhet

Det var en enestående opplevelse å høre dette berømte orkestret, det var et orkesterspill utenom det vanlige, en kunne trygt glemme at en var musikkanmelder og bare helt gi seg hen til den kunstneriske nytelsen av musikken. Orkestret er suverent samspilt, de forskjellige gruppene er besatt av musikere som på samme tid er både virtuose orkestermusikere og fremragende solister. Hvem kan vel glemme den skjønne cellosoloen i Walter Pistons symfoni eller det vidunderlige fløytespillet i Maurice Ravels «Daphnis et Chloé»? Jeg har aldri hørt maken.

Hva en mest vil framheve ved programmet, er bare en smaksak. Beethovens «Eroica» i en gjengivelse som var beåndet til den minste detalj. Sørgemarsjen (2. sats) var en eneste åpenbaring av skjønnhet og velklang.

Amerikaneren Walter Pistons 6. symfoni var et meget behagelig bekjentskap. Mestedelen var holdt i en lineær, til dels i en kraftig dissonerende harmonikk. Særlig morsomt var det å høre den virtuost anlagte 2. sats som ble umåtelig festlig og poengtert spilt av orkestret.

For undertegnede var imidlertid Ravels «Daphnis et Chloé» konsertens høydepunkt. Bortsett fra det prikkfrie, virtuose spillet, som jo er nødvendig i den slags musikk, var det utrolig så levende partituret ble spilt ut denne gang. En klangprakt uten like, det kokte og sydet i orkestret, og dirigenten spilte ut alle trumfene på en mesterlig måte, helt fra det nesten uhørbare pianissimo til det mest sprakende fortissimo.

Og var orkestret en eneste opplevelse, må en si det samme om Charles Munch. En enestående dirigent som alltid har den fulle kontroll over det veldige apparat. Og det var også en nytelse å se hans velformede plastikk. Han binder aldri orkestret med unødige bevegelser og store fakter, men former intenst og likevel smidig. Og hvilken fraseringsteknikk! Jeg kommer igjen tilbake til 2. sats i «Eroica»: så vakkert kan det altså gjøres!

Men en dirigent og et orkester blir ikke høreverdig bare på grunn av virtuositet. Boston-symfonikerne med Charles Munch i spissen eier denne virtuositeten, men i tillegg, eller kanskje først og fremst, eier de den edleste musikkultur som hever alt til den store kunstopplevelse.

Det var et celebert publikum i Folketeatret for anledningen, det var utlendinger hvor en kom. Og å si at begeistringen var kolossal, er nesten for svak. Den ville ingen ende ta.

Formannen i Filharmonisk Selskaps styre, Kjell Boysen, overrakte dirigenten blomster fra våre egne filharmonikere med en velformet liten tale.

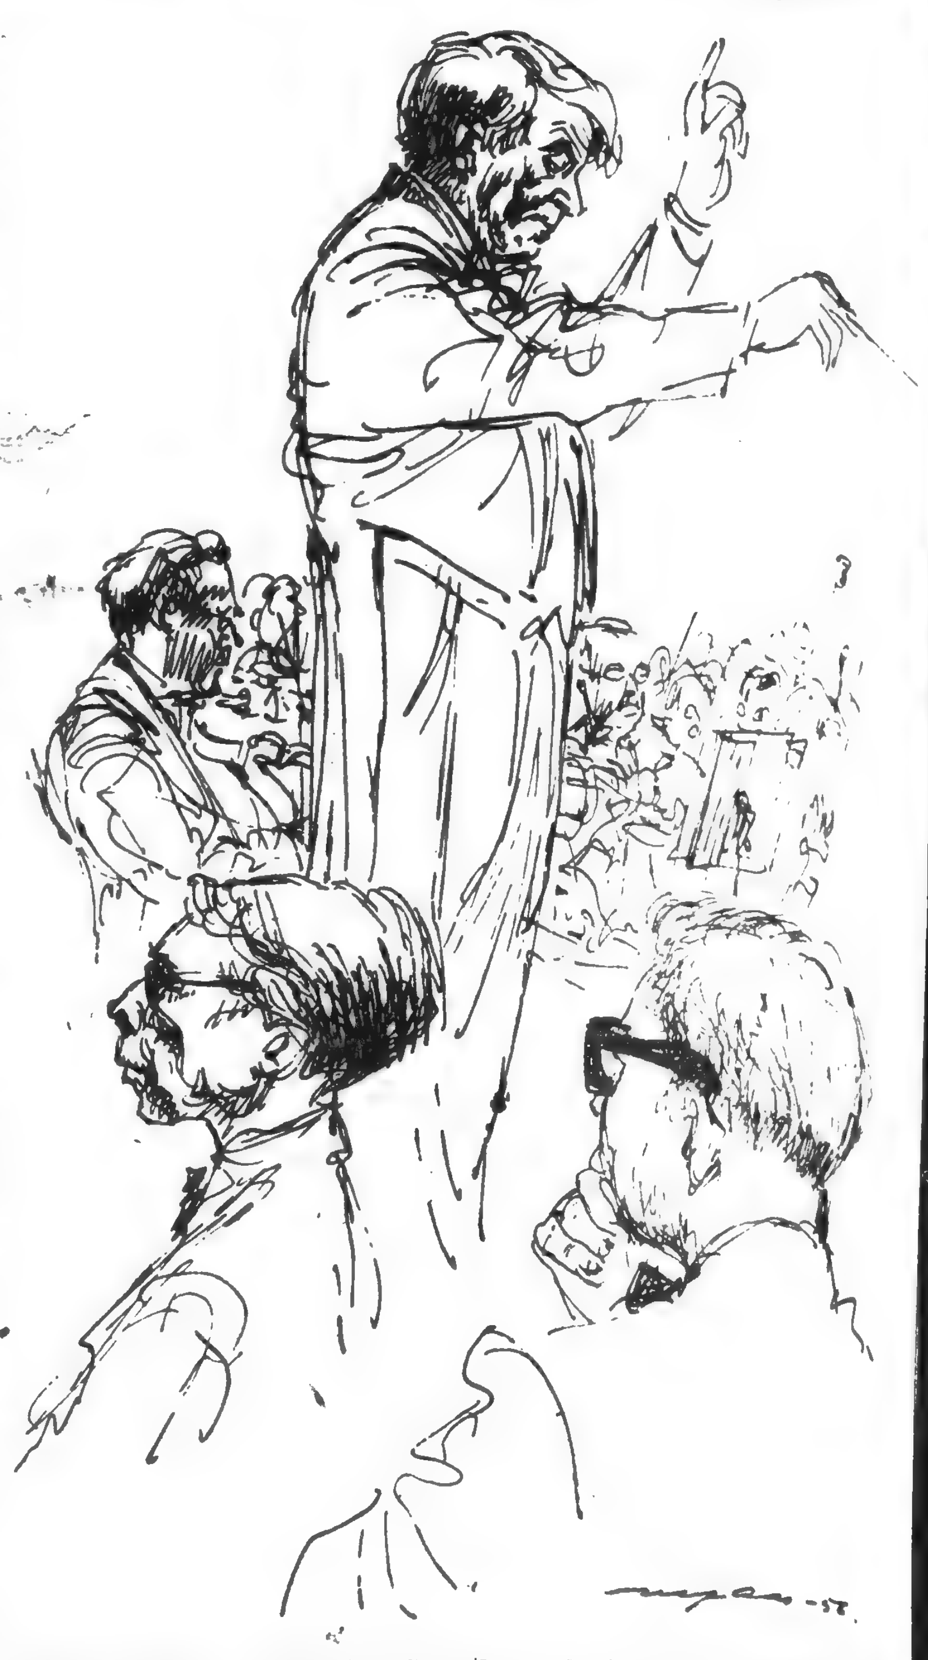
Velkommen igjen!

Finn Benestad.

OSLO AFTENPOSTEN – 3 Sept 56

Bostonmusikernes imponerende konsert

En forsmedelse for Oslo — en triumf for amerikansk orkesterkultur



Tegnerinntrykk fra Boston Symphony Orchestras store konsert i Folketeatret lørdag. Dirigenten Charles Munch med et utsnitt av orkestret, mens Harald Sæverud (til venstre) og Kjell Bækkelund er plukket ut blant publikum. (Tegning av Ulf Aas).

Boston Symphony Orchestra spilte seg til ovasjoner fra de fullt besatte benkerader i Folketeatret lørdag aften. Det var vel fortjent!

Men hvor er det riktig å begynne omtalen av en konsert som ble en så inntrengende demonstrasjon av amerikansk orkesterkultur — med musikerne og deres sympatiske dirigent Charles Munch eller med oss selv? Kanskje med begge deler på én gang, for det tør trygt sies at såvel våre amerikanske gjester som en vesentlig del av det norske publikum følte seg pinlig berørt av konsertens ytre ramme. Oslo har ellers demonstrert en generøs kulturell holdning på de fleste områder. Den bildende kunst og scenekunsten har fått sine respektable hjem og virkefelter. Bare musikken er fremdeles hjemløs, behandlet som en kunstens vagabond. Så fattigslig er altså vårt lands musikalske utstyr at endog hovedstaden er ute av stand til å formidle — det vil si formidle på en skikkelig måte — budskapet fra en av menneskeåndens og menneskehåndens skjønneste frembringelser: et symfoniorkester som er fullt utbygget efter tidens beste internasjonale norm.

Under elendige lysforhold for notelesning spilte de 104 amerikanske orkestermusikere på Folketeatrets scene, omgitt av resonansdrepende tepper. Det verste ved slike tepper, hele rader av dem i rygg, flanke og tak, er ikke at de skjuler tonene direkte. Såvisst hørte man hver eneste én av dem med perfekt gjennomsiktig klarhet. Det verste ved teppene er at de sluker musikkens livgivende pigmenter: overtonene, alt det i lydfornemmelsen som gir orkesterklangen effekt og hvert enkelt instrument sitt ekstra pluss av egenart, charme og farlighet. Forhåpentlig var det ikke for mange stortingsmenn og statsråder blant tilhørerne, — med toner som vanskelig kunne virke på sinnet og umulig virke på kroppen, blir det fristende å tro at det symfoniske orkesterliv hører hjemme i den ørkesløse estetikks verden og ikke i det levende liv.

Ja, for så matt kunne det klinge. Et symfoniorkester er en samling resonansbunner, og lydbølgene forplanter seg fra instrument til instrument. Der var det for en gangs skyld to prektige harpister å høre, men når merket man klangbunnen i deres instrumenter, fylte de rummet, gav de gjenklang i fiolinenes klangbunner? Et bekken hva er det konstruert for i dyre domme? Det er ikke for smellets skyld, men for klangens. Hvor herlig syntes ikke horntrioen i Beethovens scherzo å være spilt, men effekten var som av sordinerte horn. I Ravel ble tusen fine nyanser tross alt ikke tilstrekkelig, også de store kraftutbrudd må til i «Daphnis et Chloé»-musikken, hele orkesteret må dirre og risle av resonanser som må føles fysisk av tilhøreren.

Et kraftigere slag enn Bostonorkesterets konsert har ikke vært ført for konserthusplanen i Oslo.

— — —

Men så meget forstod man, at Bostonorkesteret med beste grunn rangerer på høyde med de ledende symfoniorkester i Europa og Amerika. Orkesterklangen er rent utrolig homogén, presisjonen virtuos, og hver enkelt av de omhyggelig utvalgte musikere er samspilt i en ånd av forfinet musikkultur. Hvis noen hadde ventet seg tilløp til amerikansk «efficiency» i dette orkesterets sprog, ble han tilgagns overrasket. Bostonorkesterets noble adelsmerke er måtehold, en likefrem skyhet for utvortes effekter av rytmisk eller dynamisk art. Gang på gang slo det en hvordan Bostonorkesteret tenderer mot rent kammermusikalske uttrykk. Eller si det slik: sjelden har et stort orkester virket så lite!

Denne «kammermusikalske» holdning til stoffet kunne virke noe skuffende i åpningen. Til den manglende akkustiske fynd kom nemlig også et uvant raskt tempo som dirigenten anslo i Beethovens 1. sats («Eroica»). Så renset for patos har Beethovens 3. symfoni ikke vært hørt her i landet. Men er det rett? Charles Munch fikk iallfall fortalt til eftertanke at Beethoven og Schubert levde i samme by. Charles Munch — og Bostonorkesterets strykere, bør det tilføyes. For gjennom hele konserten var det en sammenhengende fryd å høre en så myk og ledig strykerklang, så varm og lys, rund — selv i de mest presise og faste ansatser, uten et streif av den hårdere metalliske klang som pressede fioliner kan frembringe innenfor Aulaens gjallende vegger.

På sin Europatur skifter orkesteret ikke bare dirigent (Pierre Monteux og Charles Munch) men også program fra by til by; de fører noter til et par dusin nummer med seg. Blant representerte amerikanske komponister er Copland, Piston, Howard Hanson, Creston, Leroy Anderson og Martinu. Valget i Oslo falt på Walter Piston, som vel ikke er eksponenten for den særpregede amerikanske stil som synes å være under utvikling. I Pistons symfoni nr. 6, som ble skrevet til Boston Symphony Orchestras 75-års jubileum ifjor, lærer man først og fremst en på alle områder kyndig komponist å kjenne. Walter Piston, en betydelig teoretiker og leder for musikkundervisningen ved Harvarduniversitetet, skal ha vært særdeles radikal i yngre dager. Radikalismen har han lagt vel fra seg i dette verket. Dets største savn er overbevisende melodikk, dets største aktivum en vel planlagt fremdrift og en polyfon nerve, ofte — slik som i adagioens store klimaks — med spenningsskapende rytmiske og melodiske blokker i sammenstøt.

Charles Munch vant en stor seier gjennom sin ro og aldri sviktende klarhet. Hans triumf — og orkesterets — ble Ravels tilslutt. De fantastiske klangorgier i «Daphnis et Chloé» ble ganske berusende åpenbart — innenfor de akkustiske muligheters ramme. Geniale Ravel! Den personifiserte Pan i fløytistinnen Doriot Anthony Dwyer måtte med god grunn frem og motta sin spesielle virak i det skumrende rampelys.

I den anglosaksiske verden holder de oppe en god gammel skikk: man klapper for konsertmesteren når han kommer inn efterat de andre musikerne har satt seg. Det ville ha vært ekstra god grunn til å ta opp tradisjonen igår, for konsertmesteren var Richard Burgin — den første konsertmester i Filharmonisk Selskaps historie!

Hans Jørgen Hurum.

---

begge Oslo.

Morgenposten 3/9-56.

Boston Symphoni Orchestra

Som kjent er Boston Symphony Orchestra for tiden på Europaturné i anledning sitt 75-års jubileum. Lørdag presenterte dette fremragende orkester seg i Folketeatret med en uforglemmelig konsert. Det var den høyeste og edleste kunst tilhørerne her ble forunt å oppleve. Nesten utrolig var musikernes evne til å forene den strengeste selvdisiplin med den mest spontane uttrykksfullhet, og samtidig som hver instrumentgruppe fremviste et høyst markant særpreg, smeltet det hele sammen til en fullkommen organisk enhet. Det 110 mann store orkester spilte med en smidig, levende og beåndet sangbarhet som en ikke ofte hører maken til.

Når resultatet kunne bli så eksepsjonelt godt, skyldes det at orkestermedlemmene ikke bare er velskolerte musikere, men også betydelige kunstnere. Imidlertid tilfaller æren først og fremst orkestrets store leder, Charles Munch. Han har selv uttalt at det å løfte taktstokken er for ham en hellig handling, en prestetjeneste. En usedvanlig uttalelse som vidner om en beundringsverdig modig innstilling i en tid da det anses for god tone å betrakte musikken bare som et mer eller mindre estetisk håndverk. Charles Munch føler det som et tvingende kall å forkynne kunstens evige sannheter, og han er fullt og helt sitt kall verdig. Hans utforming og tolking av Beethovens Eroica-symfoni ble en rystende opplevelse. Verkets overveldende spennkraft ble ikke et øyeblikk svekket, og det hele var omgitt av en intens atmosfære. Den heroiske førstesats, den avgrunnsdype sørgemarsj, mystikken i scherzoen og finalens urokkelige variasjonsrekke, alt var av besettende virkning.

Etter Beethoven fulgte Symfoni nr. 6 av Piston. Stoffet i dette verket er konsentrert og oversiktlig disponert, og formen virker fast, men noe glatt, bortsett fra adagioen som har en ganske spent linjeføring. Selv om verket av forståelige grunner virket noe lettvektig på bakgrunn av Beethoven-symfonien, fengslet det allikevel sterkt.

Som avslutning på den herlige aften lot Charles Munch orkestret utfolde en blendende farveprakt i Ravels «Daphnis & Chloe». Særlig fascinerende virket blåsergruppenes sjeldent egale, rene og glansfulle toner.

Dirigent og orkester ble hyldet på den mest overstrømmende måte, og til slutt var det blomsteroverrekkelse og hilsen fra våre egne filharmonikere.

Ingar Fr. Nilsen.

konsert

esterkultur

ra store konsert i Folked et utsnitt av orkestret, kelund er plukket ut Ulf Aas).

ymphony Orchestras 75-eum ifjor, lærer man først en på alle områder kyn-ponist å kjenne. Walter n betydelig teoretiker og musikkundervisningen ved niversitetet, skal ha vært radikal i yngre dager. Ran har han lagt vel fra seg verket. Dets største savn evisende melodikk, dets aktivum en vel planlagt t og en polyfon nerve, ofte som i adagioens store kli-med spenningsskapende og melodiske blokker i støt.

s Munch vant en stor seier
n sin og aldri sviktende Hans triumf — og orkeste-ble Ravels tilslutt. De fanklangorgier i «Daphnis et e ganske berusende åpen-innenfor de akkustiske mu-rammer. Geniale Ravel!
rsonifiserte Pan i fløytist-Doriot Anthony Dwyer
ed god grunn fram og mot-spesielt virak i det skumumpelys.

angloaksiske verden holoppe en god gammel skikk:
apper for konsertmesteren n kommer inn efterat de musikerne har satt seg. Det vært ekstra god grunn til tradisjonen igår, for koneren var Richard Bu første konsertmester isk Selskaps historie!

Hans Jørgen Hu

See Oslo vol. II

E. BLADET 3 Sept '56

OSLO ⊙ OSLO ⊙ OSLO

Boston Symphony Orchestra i Folketeatret

Så som da omsider dette ver- berømte orkester til Oslo og- Orkesteret feirer i år sitt 75 -jubileum og foretar i den an- ning en omfattende Europa- Det er på 110 mann, og om Folketeatrets rommelige scene ga plass nok, merket vi dog den fulle glans, den vidunder- klangskjønnhet som dette or- orkesteret kan oppvise, den ble noe redusert ved at scene-teppene i dybden stjal meget av klangtykken og utvisket en del orkestergruppenes karakter. Eroica-symfoni sto først på programmet.

Dirigenten, Charles Munch, ga en oppfølelse vi vil huske. artet seg ikke som noen tra- bundet utførelse. Således første satsen vesentlig hur- tigere enn vi er vant til. (Tysk tradisjon, men se, satsen er be- tegnet allegro con brio, og dette vi til gagns. Vi fikk høve til å følge en detaljrikdom på orkestral presisjon i linje og sam- spill som vanligvis kun oppleves i kvartettspillet. Mot strykegrup- stilistiske enhet i utførelsen sto blåsegruppene med en her- lig klarhet. Intet press, intet dramatisk effekjageri som mange dirigenter fristes til med så stort orkester var å spore. Symfoniens form ble her holdt i stilen av en mester med forfinet sans for alle motivdelenes gang opp i den store helheten. En hørte så å si hver eneste detalj med vidunderlig toneføring. Særlig var det mye «nytt» i virkningen av linjespillet i annen sats.

Som helhet virket Eroica i denne utførelsen som en helstøpt enhet fra rot til topp.

Walter Piston fikk æren av å representere amerikansk komposisjon av i dag. Hans sjette symfoni, overrasker ved sin moderate klang. Piston var tidligere atskillig mer radikal, ja kantet vil noen kanskje si. Denne symfonien har en symfonisme, et komposisjonsprinsipp i symfonisk form som forener den virkelige orkestrale velklang med et gjennomført klart linje-spill. Symfonien gir musikerne spilleglede, hvilket er overmåte viktig for en perfekt utførelse. Første satsen har til tider en bredt, syngende tyngde over seg. Høyreist i stigningen og med en naturlig flyt i framdriften. Det er etisk sunnhet i dette tonespråket.

Andre satsen, Leggerissimo vivace, arter seg som en elegant turnert flukt i virtuost vekselspill mellom strykere og blåsere. Adagio-satsen åpner med en elegisk anstrøken cello-solo, synger seg opp i bredt svungne linjer og bærer bud om et menneske som etter livets kamper har nådd avklaring og harmonisk balanse i sitt sinn. Cello-soloen kommer tilbake og slutter satsen — som en slags ettertale. Fjerde satsen utvikles med rytmisk energi og spenstighet, og innimellom kommer syngende chorus-brokker.

Symfonien som helhet er formet slik at en må kalle den tematiske organisme vellykket. Den er slett ikke preget av «amerikanske» rytmer, men er vokst ut fra klassisk formskjema. Den fikk en virtuos utførelse, og Charles Munch viste sitt overlegne grep også på vår tids tonespråk.

Til slutt fikk da franskmannen Munch høve til å boltre sine spesialiteter i utførelsen av Ravels «Daphnis og Chloé». Her fikk vi til gagns muligheter for å oppleve dette orkesterets bukett av førsterangs solister på samtlige instrumenter. I et sprakende fyrverkeri av farger og rytmer med blendende øyeblikksglimt av solistiske ferdigheter klang dette klangskjønne verket imot oss. Charles Munch er vel uovertruffen i tolkningen av dette Ravels toppverk. Han er jo blitt verdensberømt først og fremst som tolker av fransk musikk. Den vidunderlige fløytesolisten, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, ble framkalt, og ble hyllet. (Som en kuriositet kan nevnes at konsertmesteren, Richard Burgin, var konsertmester i Oslo i 1919.)

Det ble naturligvis en sydende heksegryte hele teatret slik som

publikum
fallsklapp.
monisk S
rer Boyse kester og de impul svarte.
Boston S
det første kanskje or Oslo. Måt
igjen! Ka
Konserthal

Dirigenten, Charles Munch, slapper av med en sigarett i pausen.

Hovedøya Kloster

STAVANGER AFTENBLAD
Stavanger.

7/67

Boston Symphony Orchestra i Oslo

76

Oslo, i dag (Privat)

Oslo hadde lørdag besøk av et av verdens største orkestre, Boston Symphony Orchestra, som ga en eneste konsert i Folketeatret lørdag.

Trass i at byen sto i studentjubileets tegn, og alle restauranter var overfylte, var Folketeatrets sal fullsatt av et forventningsfullt publikum. Teatrets store scene hadde så vidt plass til de 110 musikere i kjole og hvitt, og det var litt av et syn å se så mange instrumenter på ett brett. Bak oss sto det blant annet hele åtte kontrabasser og to gylne harper.

Dirigent var Charles Munch, og da han sto på podiet og dirigerte så hans lenge hvite hår flagre, kunne en ikke annet enn bli revet med av hans magnetiske ledelse. Han virket som en trollmann der han sto og likesom fikk tonene til å stråle ut av hendene. Verkene ble fremført med en fullkommen sikkerhet og presisjon som en sjelden hører. Teknisk sett var konserten en opplevelse av de aller største.

Konserten fikk en stemningsfull begynnelse da det digre or-ydepunkt. Det stemningsmettede musikkstykke fikk en glimrende og virtious fremførelse som nærmest satte publikum i ekstase. Det ble klappet og trampet og ropt bravo. Dirigenten fikk blomster, som han delte med orkestrets fløytespillerske, som var solist i »Daphnis og Chloé«.

BRETT over til siste side 7

Det ble holdt taler, men på grunn av den dårlige akustikken i teatret var det umulig for andre enn publikum på de forreste radene å oppfatte hva som ble sagt av hvem. I en samtale med noen av musikerne fikk Aftenbladet bekreftet at akustikken var mindre god. Det virket som om lyden for en stor del forsvant opp under scenehuset, sa de.

Det er virkelig å ønske at neste gang Oslo får et så gedigent besøk, har byen et bedre lokale til disposisjon.

KARI THOMSEN

TRONDHEIM

VERDENS GANG
Oslo

4/67

Boston Sym

76

Det var sannelig litt av et tiltak av A/S Impresario i samarbeid med The American National and Theatre Academy! De greidde å få beveget Boston symfonikerne og deres eminente dirigent Charles Munch til også å avlegge Oslo en visitt som snarest, på den Europa-turnéen det berømte ensemblet foretar i anledning av dets 75-årige beståen. Et skår i gleden var det naturligvis at Norges hovedstad fremdeles bare har et konserthus på papiret å by slike celebre gjester. Nå måtte altså Folketeatret gjøre tjenesten. Inneklemt i et umulig teppearrangement satt de over 100 mann og to kvinner som orkestret består av, men selv i den langt fra ideelle akustikken ble denne gjesteopptreden en musikalsk opplevelse, en høytidsstund som sent vil glemmes.

Etter nå å ha sett og hørt Charles Munch «in person», er jeg ikke i tvil om at han rangerer som en av nåtidens aller fineste orkesterdirigenter. Usedvanlig sympatisk både i framtreden, i sin direksjon som i den kunstneriske interpretasjon. I hver eneste frase er Munch så levende og intenst med, ja han er vel nærmest ekstatisk henrevet av komposisjonen han tolker, slik at også enhver tilhører må føle «det store suset». Likevel unngår Munch enhver utvendighet, enhver overflødig geberde. Bare i noen ganske få ekstatiske øyeblikk (Beethoven) arbeider kroppen med, ellers greier det seg med hans usannsynlig vitale, ledige, elegante og ytterst distinkte slagvirtuositet. Men så har han da også et av verdens mest vidunderlige instrumenter å spille på. Et fullt utbygd symfoniorkester, med f. eks. 12 bratsjer, 12 celli, 6 horn og alle treblåserne firedoblet! Enhver pult i dette glimrende samspilte orkesteret er besatt med en utvalt musiker, og på konsertmesterplassen sitter Richard Burgin, som bekledde samme stilling i vårt eget filharmoniske orkester ved starten. Flo-

[90]

lingrup tet se de kr satse merk
gans rent som en p finere skjelli viste o kesterd til pun menalt draget rakter
I p resten
— ikke sin ret cherzoe musike og blå ket tete ins
Ravel. V
6 — fo

datum — var et interessant bekjentskap. Den har en vakker og flytende melodikk og er både kompositorisk og i sitt innhold lødigere enn andre ting av denne USA-komponisten. Symfonien beveger seg helt på tonal grunn, og hver av de fire satsene har sin personlige — og sterkt kontrasterende — tone. Et betydelig alvor var framherskende i adagiosatsen, mens siste sats var gjennomført lystig og frisk.

Avslutningen dannet så Ravels lekre og gnistrende «Daphnis et Chloë-suite, ovrdådig rik og raffinert i den suverene gjengivelsen. Solofløytistinnen fikk en fortjent ekstra påskjønnelse for sitt skjønt framførte svære parti.

Så begynte de mange framkallelser av den store dirigenten, som elskverdigst overførte viraken til orkesteret. Kjell Boysen, formann i Filharmonisk Selskap, overbrakte hilsener og takk fra musikernes

---

Dagbladet 3/9-56.

Boston symfonikerne og Charles Munch

Boston Symphony Orchestra gjestet oss lørdag under sin eminente leder Charles Munch. Det er ikke første gang ensemblet er på Europa-turné og det har sikkert høstet mange slags erfaringer med hensyn til konsertlokaler. Det er neppe mange teater som kan by på så glimrende akustiske forhold som det store Champs Elysées-teatret i Paris og Stadschouwburg i Amsterdam enda disse teatrene ikke først og fremst er bygd for musikk.

Ingen vil vel for alvor beskylde vårt Folketeater for å være vellykket akustisk sett og slett ikke når det gjelder orkestermusikk fra scenen hvor det er flatt gulv og hvor tunge draperier og høyt scenerom stjeler utrolig mye klang. Men selv om det nå varte en stund lørdag før orkestret liksom fant seg til rette, er en takknemlig for den store opplevelsen det ble å høre det berømte orkestret under sin berømte dirigent. Det slår en at det kanskje var en nyttig konsert.

Jeg forutsetter nemlig den mulighet at det i det fullpakkede huset befant seg noen av dem som sitter på pengesekken når det gjelder kulturelle bevilgninger. De fikk eventuelt høve til å konstatere hvordan et orkester kan klinge når balansen orkestergruppene imellom er i orden, og også hvilken sydende begeistring prestasjonene ble møtt med. Formannen i Filharmonisk Selskaps styre som overrakte Munch blomster ved konsertens slutt, brakte selv vårt gjennom en mannsalder ustanselig planlagte konserthus på bane. Og en får holde fast på det håpet at om ikke annet så vil en viss kulturell forfengelighet sørge for at det huset ikke skal vedbli å være et luftslott, og for det annet sørge for at det blir gitt rundhåndet støtte til vårt eget tapre Filharmoniske orkester.

behandler orkestret med god økonomi. Piston står utenfor selve Tolvtonalistenes gruppe, men hans tonespråk er like fullt av i dag. Verket ble meget godt mottatt.

Men det var «Daphnis et Chloë» som til slutt fikk begeistringen til å løfte taket. Framføringen av dette verket ble, tror jeg, kveldens mest lysende eksempel på en fullkommen orkestral disiplin bygd på edle musikalske hensikter.

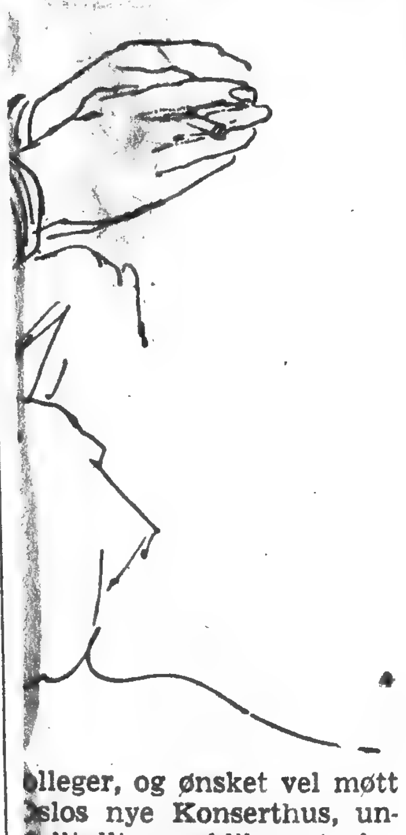
Blomstene Munch fikk, ga han galant videre til orkestrets første-fløytist Doriot Anthony Dwyer — vel for hennes glimrende innsats i Ravels komposisjon. Ellers ble Munch og hans symfonikere hyllet med glødende begeistring og et utall av fremkallelser.

Pauline Hall

---

rchestra robrer slo

genten Charles Munch.



Boston Symphony Orchestra har med rette hatt ord på seg for å være et usedvanlig skjøntspillende ensemble. Under sin storartede leder, dirigenten Charles Munch, har det nådd en bevegelighet, en elastisitet som virker helt eventyrlig, det eier en aldeles merkelig mykhet i klangen enten det ånder fram et spindelvevssart pianissimo eller det gir seg hen i utfoldelse av alle klanglige ressurser.

Men det styres da også av en dirigent som i opplagt grad må ha evnen til å gjøre musikerne fri, og som lokker og ikke truer. Det er verd å legge merke til hvor fint han beregner den dynamiske utformingen i alle detaljer, og hvor selvfølgelig alt samles til en klar og overbevisende helhet — enten det gjelder Beethoven eller Walter Piston. Munch uttrykker sin personlige mening blant annet gjennom en minutiøs omhu for alle plastiske detaljer, noe som gjorde seg praktfullt i Ravels «Daphnis et Chloë. Tolkingen av det herlige verket hadde en rolig bredde som i blant ga musikken det sensuelle sug og det krevende fløytepartiet tid til å gjøre seg gjeldende slik komponisten har villet det.

En berikelse av de sjeldne var det også å følge utviklingen i Beethovens «Eroica»-symfoni slik den formet seg under Munchs taktstokk. Symfonien var første post på programmet (etter at den norske og den amerikanske nasjonalsang ble spilt av orkestret) og en la straks merke til at førstesatsen fikk et heftigere tempo enn vi har vært vant til, mer fremstormende lidenskap — likevel ble den (som resten av symfonien) gjennomført i streng stil. Skulle jeg nevne noen spesiell sats, måtte det bli Sørgemarsjen, især fra gjentakelsen av hovedtemaet for strykere alene og satsen ut.

Den symfonien vi hørte av den amerikanske komponisten Walter Piston, den sjette i hans produksjon, var et overmåte sympatisk arbeid, personlig preget i form og innhold. Piston utrykker seg velsignet kortfattet, og gjennom morsomme klangkontraster, pussige rytmiske kombinasjoner og et luftig linjespill holder han oss i ånde. Vidd har han også, og han olleger, og ønsket vel møtt slos nye Konserthus, un-ulltallige publikumets betilslutning.

Reimar Riefling.

sec o.lso vol. II

BLADET 3 Sept '56

OSLO ⊙ OSLO ⊙ OSLO

Boston Symphony Orchestra i Folketeatret

kom da omsider dette ver-beromte orkester til Oslo og-Orkesteret feirer i år sitt 75
-jubileum og foretar i den an-ing en omfattende Europa-Det er på 110 mann, og om Folketeatrets rommelige gå plass nok, merket vi dog den fulle glans den vidunder-klangskjønnhet som dette or-kan oppvise, den ble noe ved at scene-teppene
i dybden stjal meget av klangrikken og utvisket en del orkestergruppenes karakter.
Eroica-symfoni sto
på programmet.

Dirigenten Charles Munch, ga
opplevelse vi vil huske.
seg ikke som noen trabundet utførelse. Saledes første satsen vesentlig hurenn vi er vant til. (Tysk sjon, men se, satsen er beallegro con brio, og dette vi til gagns. Vi fikk høve å få en detaljrikdom på orkestral presisjon i linje og samsom vanligvis kun oppleves kvartettspillet. Mot strykegrup-stiske enhet i utførelsen blåsergruppene med en herklarhet. Intet press, intet dra-matisk effekjageri som mange dirigenter fristes til med så stort orkester var å spore. Symfoniens form ble her holdt i stilen en mester med forfinet sans alle motivdelenes gåen opp i den store helheten. En hørte så å si hver eneste detalj med vidunderlig toneføring. Særlig var det mye «nytt» i virkningen av linjespillet i annen sats.

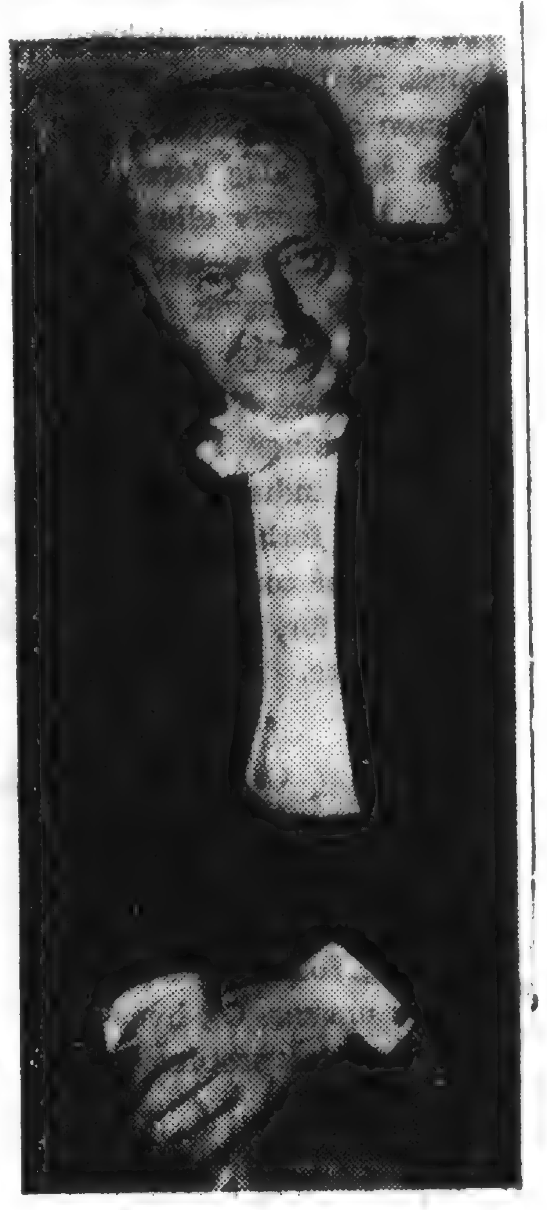
Som helhet virket Eroica i denne utførelsen som en helstøpt enhet fra rot til topp.

Walter Piston fikk æren av å representere amerikansk komposisjon av i dag. Hans sjette symfoni, overrasker ved sin moderate klang . Piston var tidligere atskillig mer radikal, ja kantet vil noen kanskje si. Denne symfonien har en symfonisme, et komposisjonsprinsipp i symfonisk form som forener den virkelige orkestrale velklang med et gjennomført klart linje-spill. Symfonien gir musikerne spilleglede, hvilket er overmåte viktig for en perfekt utførelse. Første satsen har til tider en bredt, syngende tyngde over seg. Høyreist i stigningen og med en naturlig flyt i framdriften. Det er etisk sunnhet i dette tonespråket.

Andre satsen, Leggerissimo vivace, arter seg som en elegant turnert flukt i virtuost vekselspill mellom strykere og blåsere. Adagio-satsen åpner med en elegisk anstrøken cello-solo, synger seg opp i bredt svungne linjer og bærer bud om et menneske som etter livets kamper har nådd avklaring og harmonisk balanse i sitt sinn. Cello-soloen kommer tilbake og slutter satsen — som en slags ettertale. Fjerde satsen utvikles med rytmisk energi og spenstighet, og innimellom kommer syngende chorus-brokker.

Symfonien som helhet er formet slik at en må kalle den tematiske organisme vellykket. Den er slett ikke preget av «amerikanske» rytmer, men er vokst ut fra klassisk formskjema. Den fikk en virtuos utførelse, og Charles Munch viste sitt overlegne grep også på vår tids tonespråk.

Til slutt fikk da franskmannen Munch høve til å boltre sine spesialiteter i utførelsen av Ravels «Daphnis og Chloé». Her fikk vi til gagns muligheter for å oppleve dette orkesterets bukett av førsterangs solister på samtlige instrumenter. I et sprakende fyrverkeri av farger og rytmer med blendende øyeblikksglimt av solistiske ferdigheter klang dette klangskjønne verket imot oss. [illegible] Munch er vel uovertruf- [illegible] ningen av dette Ravels [illegible] er jo blitt ver- [illegible] og fremst som [illegible] kk. Den [illegible] Do- [illegible] kalt, og ble hyllet. (Som en kuriositet kan nevnes at konsertmesteren, Richard Burgin, var konsertmester i Oslo i 1919.)



Dirigenten, Charles Munch, slapper av med en sigarett i pausen.

Det ble naturligvis en sydende heksegryte hele teatret slik som publikum tordnet med sine bifallsklapp. Formannen i Filharmonisk Selskap, overrettssakfører Boysen, hilste fra vårt orkester og takket for inspirerende impulser. Charles Munch svarte.

Boston Symphony Orchestra er det første profesjonelle amerikanske orkester som har gjestet Oslo. Måtte de snart komme igjen! Kanskje når vi har Oslo Konserthall klar?

Klaus Egge.

Dagbladet 3/9-56.

helt eventyrlig, det eier en aldeles merkelig mykhet i klangen enten det ånder fram et spindelvevsart pianissimo eller det gir seg hen i utfoldelse av alle klanglige ressurser.

Men det styres da også av en dirigent som i opplagt grad må ha evnen til å gjøre musikerne fri, og som lokker og ikke truer. Det er verd å legge

fonikerne
Munch

ndler orkestret med god øko-. Piston står utenfor selve tonalistenes gruppe, men s tonespråk er like fullt av
g. Verket ble meget godt tatt.

en det var «Daphnis et oë» som til slutt fikk begeisten til å løfte taket. Framføren av dette verket ble, tror kveldens mest lysende ek-pel på en fullkommen ortral disiplin bygd på edle mulske hensikter.

lomstene Munch fikk, ga han nt videre til orkestrets te-fløytist Doriot Anthony yer — vel for hennes glimde innsats i Ravels komposi-n. Ellers ble Munch og hans nfonikere hyllet med glødende eistring og et utall av frem-lelser.

Pauline Hall

TRONDHEIM

PRESS

VERDENS GANG
Oslo

4/67

76

Boston Symphony Orchestra erobrer Oslo

Det var sannelig litt av et tiltak av A/S Impresario i samarbeid med The American National and Theatre Academy! De greidde å få beveget Boston symfonikerne og deres eminente dirigent Charles Munch til også å avlegge Oslo en visitt som snarest, på den Europa-turnéen det berømte ensemblet foretar i anledning av dets 75-årige beståen. Et skår i gleden var det naturligvis at Norges hovedstad fremdeles bare har et konserthus på papiret å by slike celebre gjester. Nå måtte altså Folketeatret gjøre tjenesten. Inneklemt i et umulig teppearrangement satt de over 100 mann og to kvinner som orkestret består av, men selv i den langt fra ideelle akustikken ble denne gjesteopptreden en musikalsk opplevelse, en høytidsstund som sent vil glemmes.

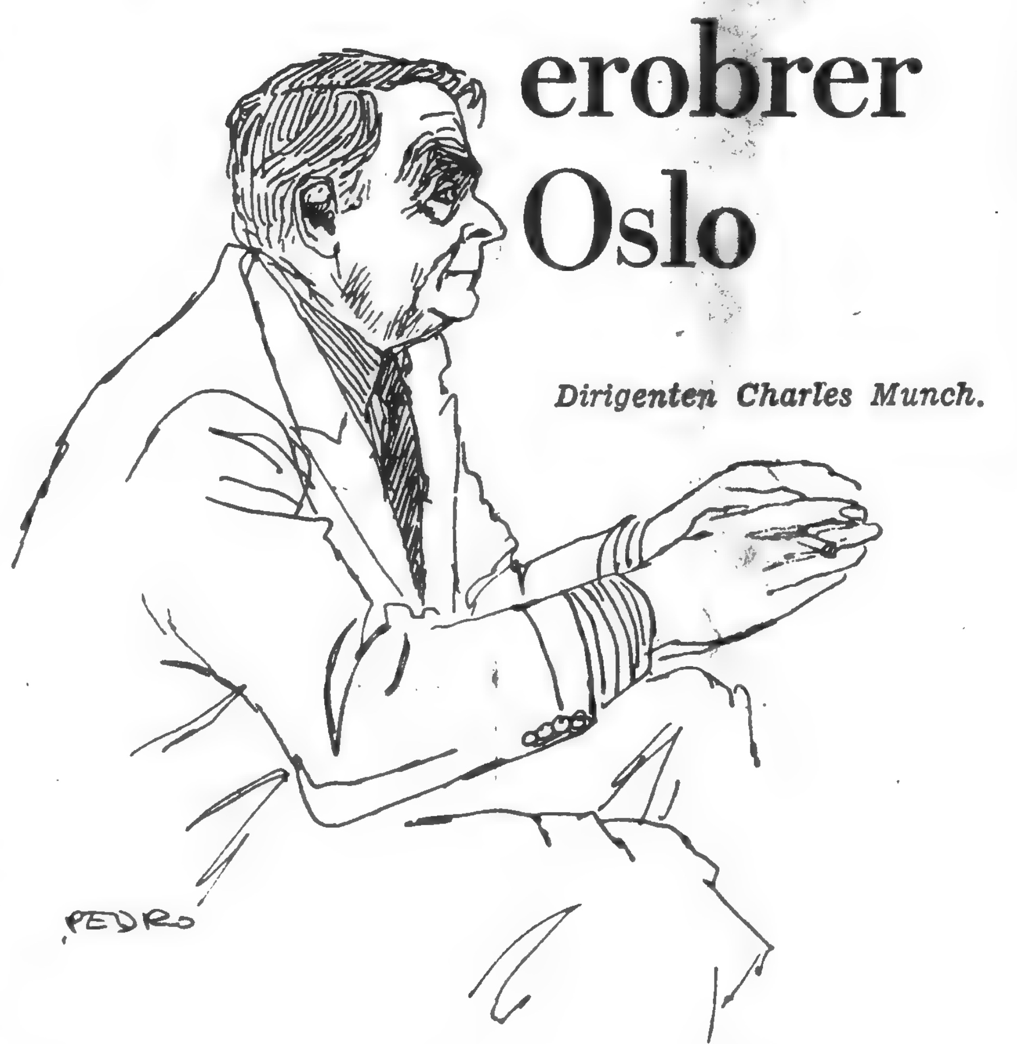
Etter nå å ha sett og hørt Charles Munch «in person», er jeg ikke i tvil om at han rangerer som en av nåtidens aller fineste orkesterdirigenter. Usedvanlig sympatisk både i framtreden, i sin direksjon som i den kunstneriske interpretasjon. I hver eneste frase er Munch så levende og intenst med, ja han er vel nærmest ekstatisk henrevet av komposisjonen han tolker, slik at også enhver tilhører må føle «det store suset». Likevel unngår Munch enhver utvendighet, enhver overflødig geberde. Bare i noen ganske få ekstatiske øyeblikk (Beethoven) arbeider kroppen med, ellers greier det seg med hans usannsynlig vitale, ledige, elegante og ytterst distinkte slagvirtuositet. Men så har han da også et av verdens mest vidunderlige instrumenter å spille på. Et fullt utbygd symfoniorkester, med f. eks. 12 bratsjer, 12 celli, 6 horn og alle treblåserne firedoblet! Enhver pult i dette glimrende samspilte orkesteret er besatt med en utvalt musiker, og på konsertmesterplassen sitter Richard Burgin, som bekledde samme stilling i vårt eget filharmoniske orkester ved starten. Fiolingruppen var det første man festet seg ved på konserten lørdag: de krevende figurasjonene i førstesatsen av «Eroica» hadde en bemerkelsesverdig lys letthet og eleganse i en fullkommen transparent klarhet. De klang simpelthen som spilt av en eneste mann, med en presisjon som ikke kan tenkes finere. Og etterhvert som de forskjellige gruppene passerte revy, viste det seg at denne nitide orkesterdisiplinen var gjennomført til punkt og prikke overalt. Fenomenalt! På samme måte må foredragets noblesse og uttrykkets karakter betegnes.

I Beethovens symfoni kom forresten — på grunn av akustikken — ikke alle instrumentene fullt til sin rett. F. eks. klang hornene i cherzoens trio nesten som om musikerne skulle sitte bak teppet og blåse. Langt fordelaktigere var lokalet for den helt annerledes artete instrumentasjon i Piston og Ravel. Walter Pistons Symfoni nr. 6 — formodentlig av aller nyeste datum — var et interessant bekjentskap. Den har en vakker og flytende melodikk og er både komposisjonell og i sitt innhold lødigere enn andre ting av denne USA-komponisten. Symfonien beveger seg helt på tonal grunn, og hver av de fire satsene har sin personlige — og sterkt kontrasterende — tone. Et betydelig alvor var framherskende i adagiosatsen, mens siste sats var gjennomført lystig og frisk.

Avslutningen dannet så Ravels lekre og gnistrende «Daphnis et Chloë-suite, ovrdådig rik og raffinert i den suverene gjengivelsen. Solofløytistinnen fikk en fortjent ekstra påskjønnelse for sitt skjønt framførte svære parti.

Så begynte de mange framkallelser av den store dirigenten, som elskverdigst overførte viraken til orkesteret. Kjell Boysen, formann i Filharmonisk Selskap, overbrakte hilsener og takk fra musikernes norske kolleger, og ønsket vel møtt igjen i Oslos nye Konserthus, under det fulltallige publikumets begeistrede tilslutning.

Reimar Riefling.



Dirigenten Charles Munch.

Charles Munch

[90]

STAV

76

(7) Boston

kestret startet med å spille »Ja, vi elsker« og »Stars and stripes«. Deretter fulgte Beethovens 3. Symfoni, »Eroica«, i en fremførelse som ble noe helt uvanlig for en norsk konsertgjenger på grunn av orkestrets størrelse og Munchs elegante ledelse. Neste verk var 6. Symfoni av Walter Piston. Piston er en amerikansk komponist som i sitt hjemland er meget populær og ofte spilt, men som her hjemme er forholdsvis ukjent. Symfonien hadde en uvant og fremmedartet klang, men særlig i den andre satsen var der mange vakre og fine partier.

Som siste verk i konserten fikk vi høre »Daphnis og Cloé« av Maurice Ravel, og det ble vel også konsertens høydepunkt. Det stemningsmettede musikkstykke fikk en glimrende og virtious fremførelse som nærmest satte publikum i ekstase. Det ble klappet og trampet og ropt bravo. Dirigenten fikk blomster, som han delte med orkestrets fløytespillerske, som var solist i »Daphnis og Chloé«.

Det ble holdt taler, men på grunn av den dårlige akustikken i teatret var det umulig for andre enn publikum på de forreste radene å oppfatte hva som ble sagt av hvem. I en samtale med noen av musikerne fikk Aftenbladet bekreftet at akustikken var mindre god. Det virket som om lyden for en stor del forsvant opp under scenehuset, sa de.

Det er virkelig å ønske at neste gang Oslo får et så gedigent besøk, har byen et bedre lokale til disposisjon.

KARI THOMSEN

Konsertbolaget

1956 · 1957

FLYGEL eller PIANO

Nydell

NYDELL PIANO AB
DROTTNINGGATAN 106
(HÖRNET TEGNÉRGATAN)

TEL. 215270

STOCKHOLM

STORT URVAL AV GODA FABRIKAT I ALLA PRISLÄGEN
BEKVÄMA BETALNINGSVILLKOR
UTHYRNINGAR

The Boston Symphony Orchestra

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA grundades 1881 av en ung man från Boston, Henry L. Higginson, som egentligen skulle bli banktjänsteman, men vars stora intresse var musik. 1881 kunde han få sin dröm uppfylld att i Boston få en permanent orkester, som skulle framföra Mozart, Beethoven, Brahms och Schubert etc.

Början blev anspråkslös. Mr. Higginson engagerade de bästa musiker han kunde finna i Europa och en ung dirigent med påtaglig talang, Georg Henschel, och Boston, som varit mer litterär än musikalisk, lät sig påverkas av projektet för symfonisk tillväxt.

Den förste dirigenten Henschel var pionjär, den andre, Wilhelm Gericke från Wien, finslipade den, och den tredje var Arthur Nikisch, som kom till Boston vid 34 års ålder. Emil Paur avlöste honom, och 1898 kom Gericke tillbaka. År 1900 flyttade orkestern till sitt eget konserthus, det nybyggda Symphony Hall.

Nu var tidpunkten inne att välja en dirigent, som kunde göra denna orkester till en av de främsta i USA. Mr Higginson fann denne dirigent i Karl Muck. Dr. Muck stannade till 1918, då han på grund av kriget var tvungen att draga sig tillbaka.

Vid denna tid slutade även Mr Higginson och orkestern överlämnades i kommunal vård. Henry Rabaud kom från Paris för att dirigera under en säsong, varefter han överlämnade taktpinnen till sin kollega Pierre Monteux, som gav orkestern liv i en ny riktning genom stor utvidgning av repertoaren.

5 år senare blev den ryske dirigenten Serge Koussevitzky, orkesterns ledare under ett kvarts sekel, under vilken tid hans och orkesterns namn blev oskiljaktligt förbundna med den mest uttrycksfulla skönhet i symfonisk framställning.

Ludwig van Beethoven .... Symfoni Ess-dur nr 3 op. 55 (Eroica)

Som bekant var detta verk från början tillägnat Napoleon. Det har påståtts — kanske med orätt — att det varit marskalk Bernadotte, som givit Beethoven den första impulsen att skriva en symfoni till Napoleons ära; Bernadotte fungerade nämligen år 1798 som fransk ambassadör i Wien och sammanträffade då med Beethoven. I alla händelser låg tanken och grodde hos mästaren. Den franska republikens dåvarande förste konsul hade med sina segrar väckt entusiasm över hela Europa, och det är mycket naturligt, att den demokratiske och frihetsälskande, republikanskt sinnade Beethoven i honom såg sitt hjälteideal förkroppsligat. År 1803 började han arbeta på symfonien, vilken blev färdig på våren året därpå. Hans lärjunge Ferdinand Ries berättar, att på Beethovens bord låg ett partitur till symfonien, på vars titelband stod: överst Bonaparte och längst ned Luigi van Beethoven, ej ett ord mer. Just vid denna tid, den 18 maj 1804, lät Napoleon emellertid utropa sig till kejsare. Ries förde nyheten till Beethoven, som råkade i raseri och bröt ut: ”Är inte heller han annat än en vanlig människa! Nu kommer också han att trampa alla mänskliga rättigheter under fötterna och ge fritt lopp åt sin äregirighet; han kommer nu att ställa sig över alla andra och bli en tyrann!” Därpå rev Beethoven titelbladet mitt itu och kastade det på golvet. Senare erhöll symfonien den mera allmänna titeln ”Sinfonia eroica”.

Walter Piston .... Symfoni nr 6

Walter Pistons symfoni nr 6 är skriven för Boston Symfoniorkester tillägnad minnet av Serge och Natalie Koussevitzky.

Om symfonien säger Piston själv:

”Det är ju bekant att två orkestrar icke låter lika och att samma orkester låter olika under olika dirigenter. En komponist måste vara medveten härom och hans framställning av klagan måste medge en viss smidighet.

Då jag skrev min sjätte symfoni insåg jag, att det var en ganska ovanlig situation att komponera för en bestämd orkester, en orkester som jag vuxit upp med och som jag kände synnerligen väl. Varje not jag skrev ned hade en bestämd klarhet och det var ovanligt lätt att skriva för de olika instrumenten.

Första satsen är flytande och expressiv i sonatform, den andra satsen är ett scherzo, den tredje ett fridfullt adagio, på ett tema som spelas av en solocello, tema nummer två är för en flöjt samt det fjärde och den energiska finalen består av två kontrasterande temata. Symfonien är komponerad utan andra anspråk än att göra musik som skall spelas och få åhörarna att lyssna.”

Maurice Ravel .... ”Daphnis och Chloë”, symfoniska fragment nr 2

Ravels Daphnis och Chloë skrevs för Ryska baletten så tidigt som 1910. Det är ett märkligt faktum. Daphnis och Chloë kommer högt upp vid en gradering av musikalisk radikalism i vårt århundrade. I viktiga avseenden är musiken lika avancerad som Stravinskijs Våroffer; skillnaden ligger i att Stravinskij är radikal på ryska, Ravel på franska. Men impressionismens finess och subtilitet i nyanserna har Daphnis och Chloë skrivit, men också med ett herravälde över den väldiga orkesterapparaten — den har Ryska balettens resurser till förutsättning — som ger oss instrumentationsvirtuosen Maurice Ravels mästerskap i koncentrat.

Balettens handling byggde på en senantik roman av Longos, en historia om herdeparet Daphnis och Chloë, om hur Chloë blir bortrövad men räddas av Pan. I den andra sviten har hon redan återkommit, Daphnis får veta hur, och sedan Chloë har uppenbarat sig, framställer de i en dans hur Pan spelar för syrinx; baletten slutar med en ”dance générale”, där backanter och backantinnor uttrycker sin glädje. Genom att ge sviten beteckningen ”symfoniska fragment”, har ju Ravel rätt tydligt angivit att han icke betraktar musiken som illustrativ, den skall kunna höras fristående. Musikens integritet är som alltid en självklarhet för honom.

En fanfar för...

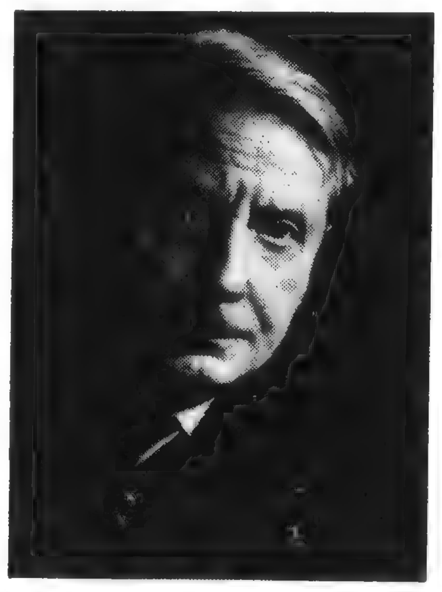
BOSTON
SYMPHONY
ORCHESTRA

LM 1893 Daphnis et Chloé (Ravel) — dirigent: Charles Munch
LM 1900 Symphonie Fantastique (Berlioz) — dirigent: Charles Munch
LM 1923 Symfoni nr 5 (Beethoven) Symfoni nr 8 (Schubert) — dirigent: Charles Munch
LB 16461 Romeo och Julia (Berlioz) — dirigent: Charles Munch
LC 16485 Fausts fördömelse (Berlioz) — dirigent: Charles Munch
L 16082 Symfoni nr 3 »Eroica» (Beethoven) — dirigent: Sergej Koussevitzky
L 16043 Symfoni nr 5 (Tjajkovskij) — dirigent: Sergej Koussevitzky
L 17093 Violinkonsert i D-dur (Brahms) — Violin: Jasha Heifetz — dirigent Sergej Koussevitzky
L 16492 Pianokonsert nr 2 (Chopin) Pianokonsert nr 4 (Saint-Saens) — Piano: Alexander Brailowsky dirigent: Charles Munch

RCA det bästa skivköpet

FÖRSTER
Generalagent: Tel. 10 28 82
AB SVENSKA PIANOFABRIKEN, Vasagatan 23-25

Charles Munch



är född i Strassbourg 1891. Modern var från Frankrike och fadern från Elsass. Charles Munch har vuxit upp i en familj av framstående musiker och i en atmosfär av musikalisk tradition. 1949 kom Munch till Boston och blev efter en lysande karriär i Europa Boston-Orkesterns dirigent och konstnärlige ledare. I Paris, där Munch var förste dirigent vid Musikkonservatoriet, grundade han Paris' Filharmoni.

Grotrian-Steinweg
Representant:
AB SVENSKA PIANOFABRIKEN · Vasagatan 23—25 · Tel. 10 28 82

SVENSKA PIANOFABRIKEN

pianot i toppklass

AB SVENSKA PIANOFABRIKEN
Vasagatan 23—25 · Tel. 10 28 82

BÄSTA PIANO
i varje prisklass

Goda betalningsvillkor

Nydell

Hör själv

DROTTNINGGATAN 106
(Hörnet Tegnérgatan) Tel. 21 52 70

Löfbergs leder

i ton, kvalitet och stil sedan 1881. Se vår utställning Malmskillnadsgatan 34 (vid Hamng.)
AB J. P. LÖFBERGS
PIANOFABRIK
Kungl. Hovleverantör

Nyströms
KARLSTAD
i främsta ledet beträffande ton och kvalitet
Ensamförsäljning för Stockholm:
LUDV. OHLSONS
10 44 12 KONSERTHUSET 10 44 16
PIANO

BLÜTHNER
LUDV. OHLSONS
10 44 12 KONSERTHUSET 10 44 16
PIANO

Konserthuset, Stora Salen — måndagen den 3 september 1956 Konsertbolaget och The American National Theatre and Academy presenterar

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Dirigent: CHARLES MUNCH

Program:

LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN (1770—1827)	Symfoni Ess-dur nr 3 op. 55 (»Eroica») Allegro con brio Marcia funebre: Adagio assai Scherzo: Allegro vivace Finale: Allegro molto

PAUS

WALTER PISTON (f. 1894)	Symfoni nr 6 Fluendo espressivo Leggerissimo vivace Adagio sereno Allegro energico
MAURICE RAVEL (1875—1937)	»Daphnis och Chloë», symfoniska fragment nr 2 Daggryning — Pantomim Dans

STEINWAY & SONS
PIANO-LUNDHOLMS, REGERINGSGATAN 9 - TEL. 10 06 11, 10 13 09

BECHSTEIN HOFFMANS BECHSTEIN
1832
Malmskillnadsgatan 46 · Stockholm

Svensk ton
som tjusat världen
MALMSJÖ
ett namn med klang
AB FÖRENADE
PIANO- & ORGELFABRIKER, Arvika - Stockholm

EDMOND-pianon
Gediget svenskt hantverk
MARTIN STRÖMS PIANOMAGASIN
KAMMAKARGATAN 41 (inv. Upplandsgatan)
Telefon: 21 21 46, 20 85 30

☆ Världsberömda artister
☆ Världsberömda inspelningar
☆ Världens ledande märken
HIS MASTERS VOICE · Capitol · ODEON Parlophone · Columbia
ELECTRIC & MUSICAL INDUSTRIES LTD. HAYES, ENGLAND

FÖRSTKLASSIG REPERTOAR
VÄRLDSARTISTER
PERFEKT LJUDKVALITET
Decca LP-skivor
(långspelande)

GÖTEBORGS BANK
Grundad 1848
GÖTEBORG STOCKHOLM
till näringslivets och förmögenhetsförvaltningens tjänst

Jussi Björling
Marian Anderson
Arturo Toscanini
Jasha Heifetz
Artur Rubinstein
Arthur Fiedler
Charles Munch

Några av de världsartister Ni möter på

RCA

det bästa skivköpet

Ät och njut
ITALIENSKT
på intima och trivsamma restaurant Frati tel. 115284
REGERINGSGATAN 16 · STOCKHOLM

Konsertbolaget
anlitar alltid
UTEREKLAMS
affischpelare

Ibach
PIANON
FLYGLAR
GREVTUREGATAN 16

Dominera
koncentrera repetera med klar målsättning

AB SVENSKA TELEGRAMBYRÅN
Stockholm Göteborg Malmö Hälsingborg Borås

För musikälskaren

Från gregoriansk sång till modern tid
Hi-Fi — LP-skivor
med världsberömda artister

Deutsche Grammophon

FLYGRESEBYRÅN AB
Specialbyrån för flygresor

Auktoriserad av IATA

BIBLIOTEKSGATAN 12 · STOCKHOLM · TEL. 236990

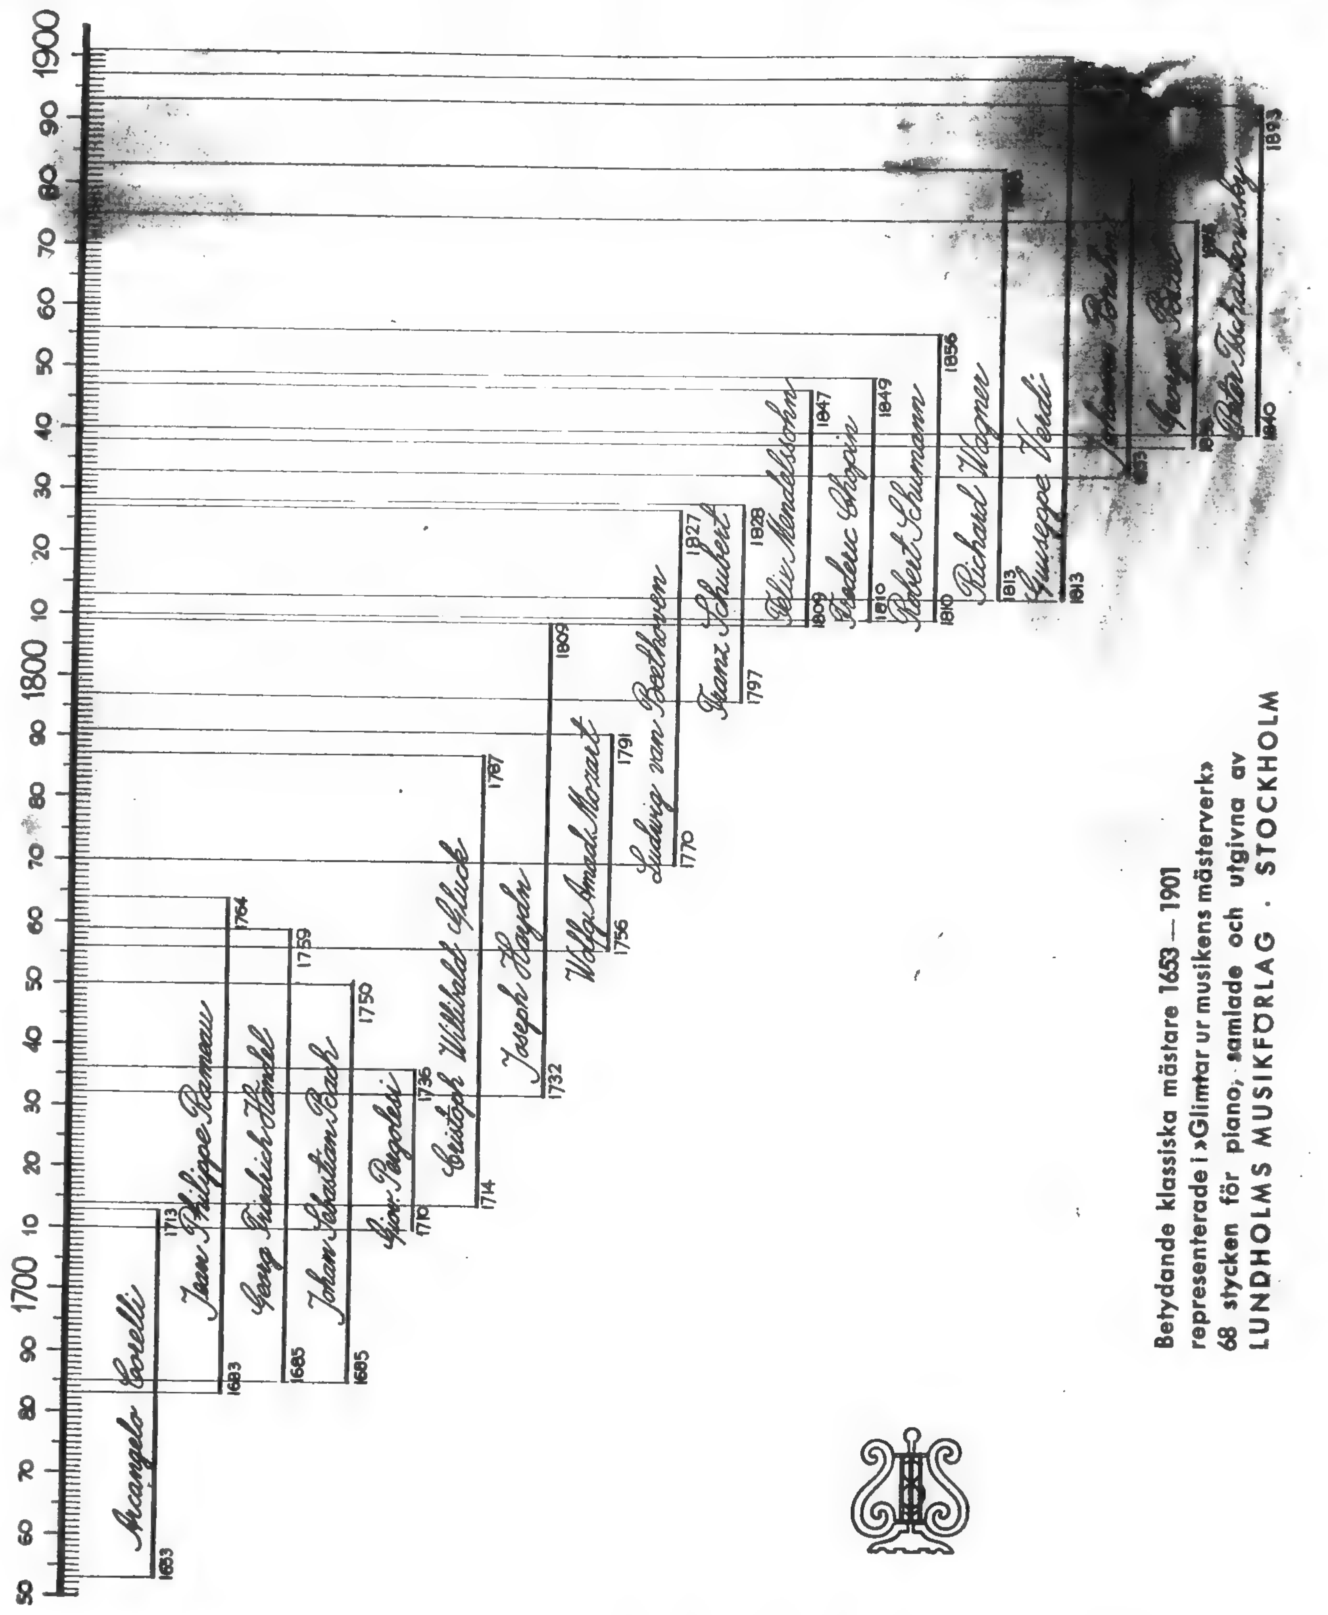
Hör med oss...

innan Ni ger Er ut på resa. Vilket program Ni än har — affärer, studier eller rekreation — kan våra experter komponera en tilltalande färd. Vi spelar över hela registret: tåg, buss, båt eller flyg. Låt oss ordna alla detaljer, och Ni får njuta av en lugn och harmonisk resa i dur från ouvertyr till final.

SJ RESEBYRÅER
Aukt. av Sv. Trafikföretagens Råd.

Vasagatan 1, 228000 · NK, 230000 · PUB, 224040 · Ostermans, 671389
Götgatan 19, 443060 · Vällingbyplan 2, 378495 · HÄGERSTEN: Sparbanksvägen 29, 459739
SUNDBYBERG: Sturegatan 35, 288810

Nordiska Tryckeri AB · Stockholm 1956



Betydande klassiska mästare 1653—1901
representerade i »Glimtar ur musikens mästerverk»
68 stycken för piano, samlade och utgivna av
LUNDHOLMS MUSIKFÖRLAG · STOCKHOLM

STEINWAY

FLYGLAR-PIANON

Regeringsgatan 9 · 10 06 11, 10 13 09

PIANO-LUNDHOLMS

Representant i GÖTEBORG:
Lundholms Göteborg Eftr.
Södra Hamngatan 43

Representant i MALMÖ:
Herm. Malmström
Kalendegatan 7

REDUCTION

RATIO

18x

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

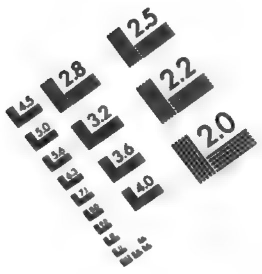
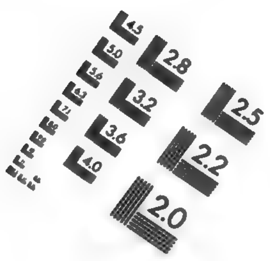
2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

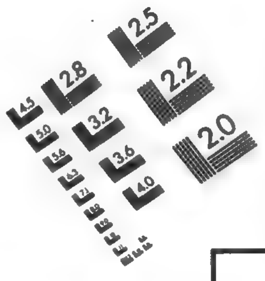


2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

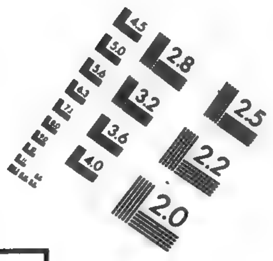


4.5
2.8
5.0
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

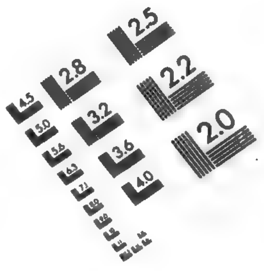
PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



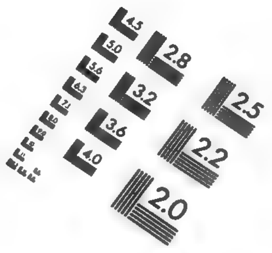
2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
5.0
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0



4.5
2.8
5.0
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
5.0
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0

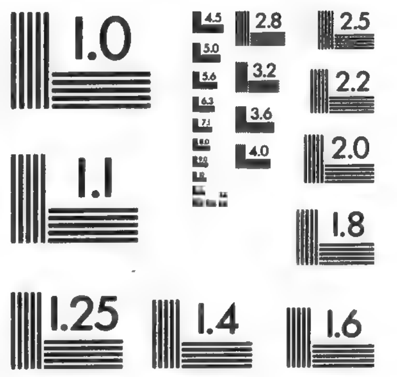


4.5
2.8
5.0
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
4.5
2.8
2.5
5.0
3.2
2.2
5.6
3.6
2.0
4.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

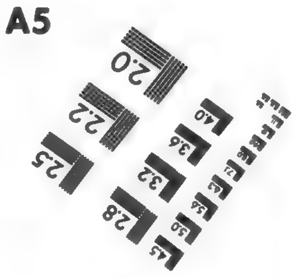
A5

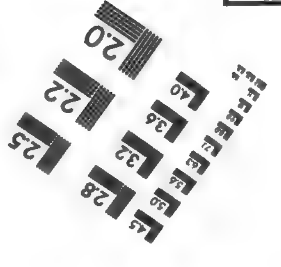


2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
5.0
2.8
4.5

2.0
4.0
3.6
2.2
3.2
5.0
2.8
4.5
2.5

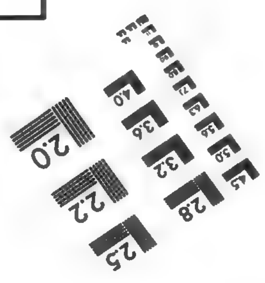
A4

A3



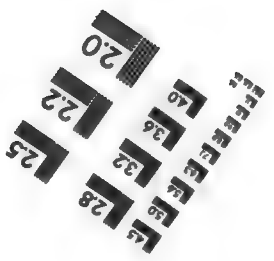
2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
5.0
2.8
4.5

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS



2.0
4.0
3.6
2.2
3.2
5.0
2.8
4.5
2.5

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
5.0
2.8
4.5

4.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.0
4.0
3.6
2.2
3.2
5.0
2.8
4.5
2.5

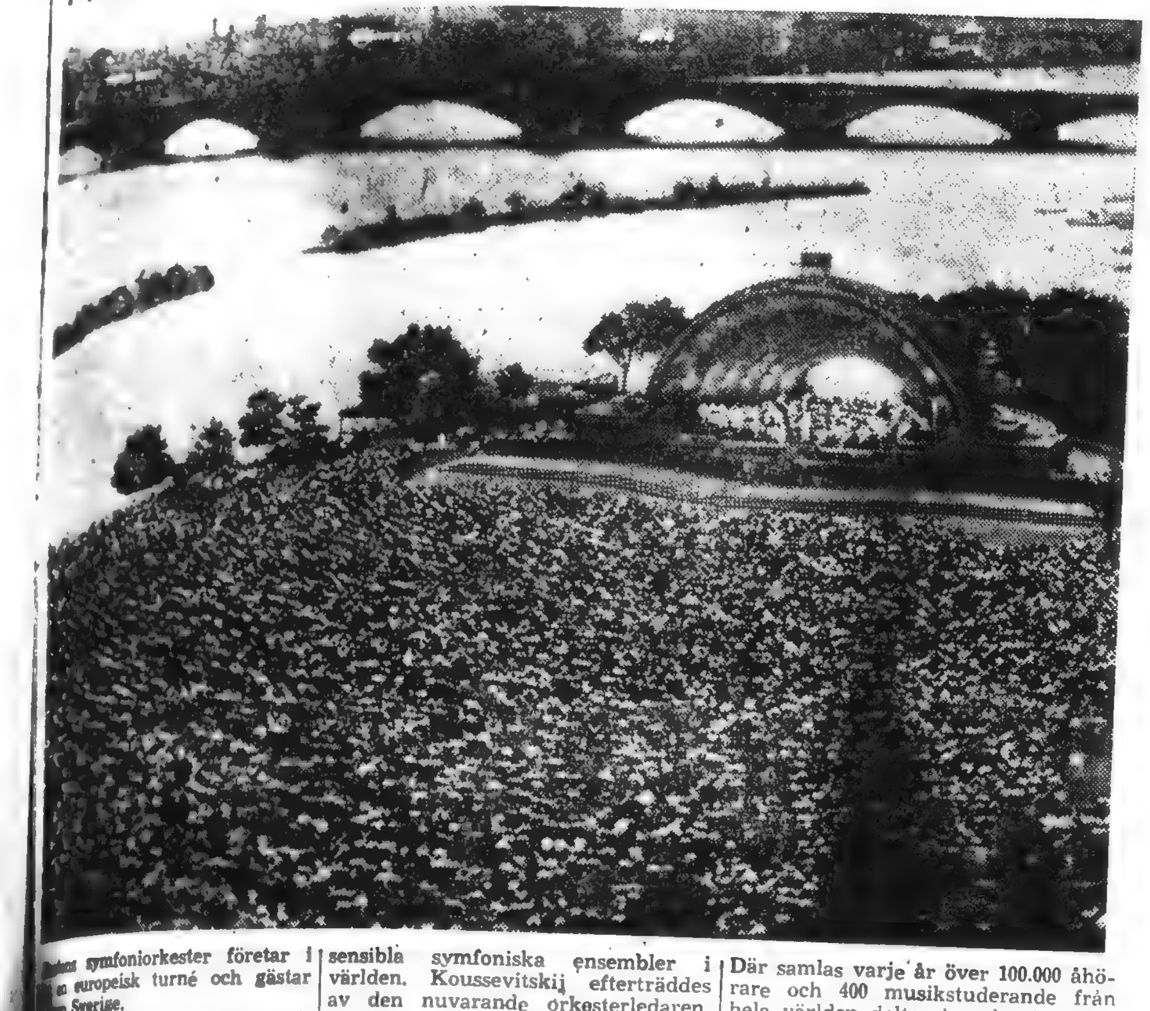
3.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

AB PRESS-URKLIPP
AB SVENSKA TELEGRAMBYRÅNS
AVDELNING FÖR PRESSURKLIPP
Svenska Argus
Internationell byrå för tidningsurklipp
STOCKHOLM 1
Telefon 23 88 40 (Rikss. 23 89 40)

Ny Tid
Göteborg
~~Socialdemokratisk~~
17 AUG 1956
/ 19

Musik för miljoner



symfoniorkester företar i en europeisk turné och gästar Sverige. symfoniorkester räknas till i USA. Sergej Koussevitskij ledare för bostonorkestern i 25 till 1949. Under hans formades orkestern till en fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder europaturnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter. Varje sommar dirigerar Münch också vid Berkshire-festivalen i Tanglewood, Massachusetts. Där samlas varje år över 100.000 åhörare och 400 musikstuderande från hela världen deltar i undervisningen vid orkesterns sommarskola Berkshire Music Center.

Bilden visar hur stor publik orkestern har när den ger sommarkonsert på stranden av Charles-floden. 20.000 var det den här gången.

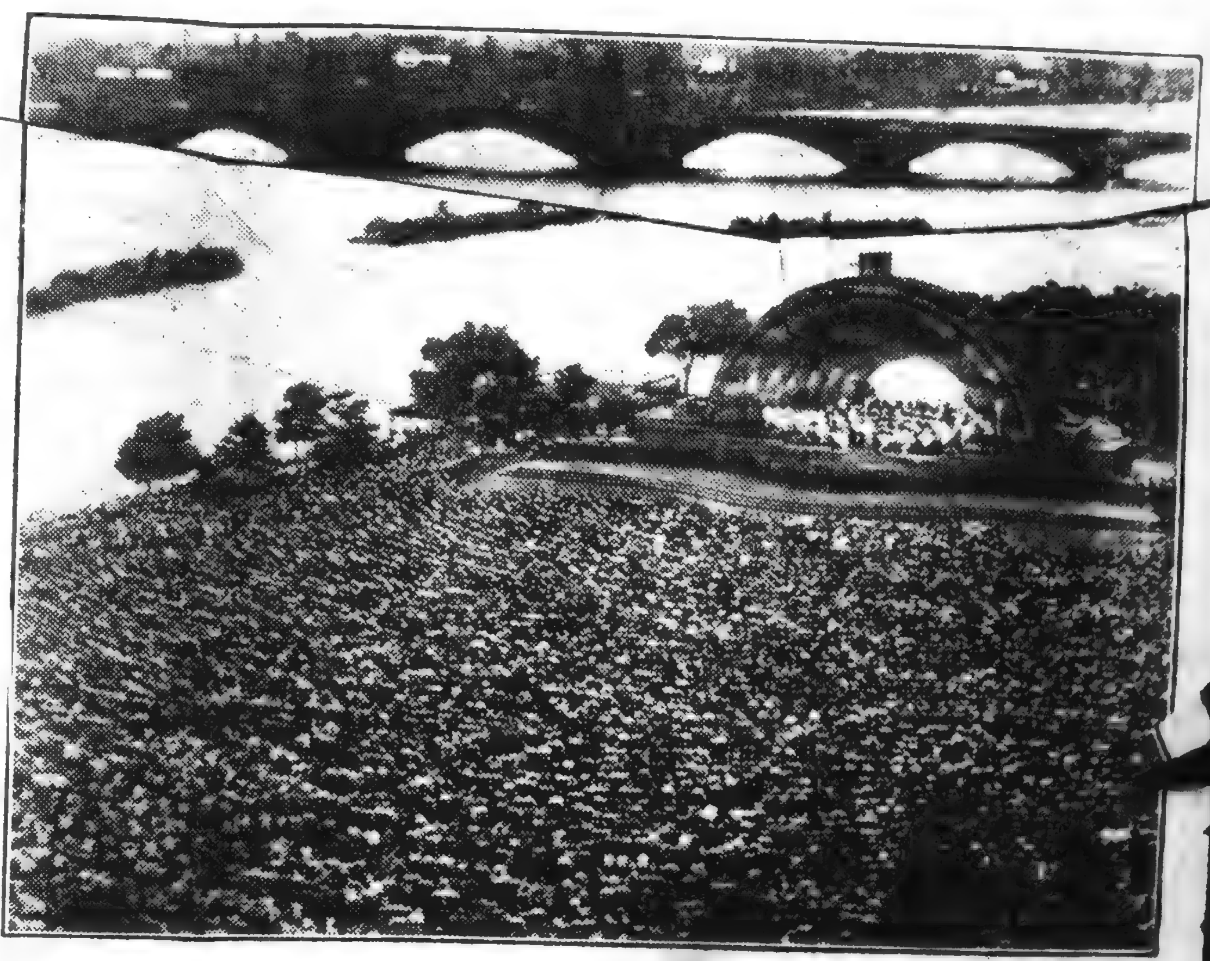
AB PRESS-URKLIPP
AB SVENSKA TELEGRAMBYRÅNS
AVDELNING FÖR PRESSURKLIPP
Svenska Argus
Internationell byrå för tidningsurklipp
STOCKHOLM 1
Telefon 23 88 40 (Rikss. 23 89 40)

Göteborgs Tidningen
21 AUG 1956
19

Symfoniorkestern typisk för USA

Brist på opera GAV SÄRSTÄLLNING

För över 45 år sedan, då Gustav Mahler nyligen hade övertagit ledningen av New York Philharmonic Society, skrev han till sin vän Bruno Walter i Wien: "Min orkester här är en typisk amerikansk orkester — trög och utan talang". Trots att han vid andra tillfällen mycket entusiastiskt uttalade sig om Bostons symfoniorkester och kallade den "ersten Ranges", så sammanfaller hans anmärkning om sina egna musiker närmare med den uppfattning om det amerikanska musiklivet som var förhärskande utanför USA omkring sekelskiftet.



De sommarkonserter som Bostonsymfonin ger på stranden av Charles-floden är mycket populära och samlar ofta över 20.000 åhörare.

Nu har kritiker och musikälskare ändrat mening. Det finns nu 30 stora symfoniorkestrar i USA vars medlemmar alla är yrkesmusiker. Det finns också flera hundra mindre orkestrar som är sammansatta dels av yrkesmusiker och dels av amatörer. Därtill kommer de tusentals amatörorkestrarna vid lägre och högre skolor. Ledarna för de stora orkestrarna bär världsberömda namn: Charles Münch, Eugene Ormandy, Dimitri Mitropoulos, Bruno Walter, Pierre Monteux, Erich Leinsdorf, Leopold Stokowski, Fritz Reiner, Leonard Bernstein och Vladimir Golschmann, för att nämna några.

Svår början

Symfonimusikens historia i USA är relativt kort. De svårigheter som musiker och orkestrar hade att kämpa mot var till en början mycket stora. I Amerika fanns inga hov eller slott där en Haydn kunde vistas och inga förmögna ädlingar som kunde underhålla en Beethoven. Få filantroper eller finansiärer valde att stödja en symfoniorkester.

New York Philharmonic Society bildades emellertid redan 1842 och blev den första stora orkestern. Den följdes av New York Symphony Society 1878. (De två New York-orkestrarna slogs tillsammans 1928.) Bostons symfoniorkester firade under säsongen 1955—56 sitt 75-årsjubileum och Chicagos symfoniorkester är 65 år. Cincinnatis orkester daterar sig tillbaka till 1895 och Philadelphia-orkestern bildades år 1900.

"Första fiolen"

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

De europeiska symfoniorkestrarnas mindre framträdande ställning kan förklaras med att de var bihang till operan, underhölls av den och inte kunde konkurrera om allmänhetens gunst. Londons filharmoniker, som bildades 1813, gav aldrig mer än 10 konserter per säsong förrän på 1930-talet.

I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester. Men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap. Det finns dock över 90 operaensembler i landet, som antingen turnerar eller ger föreställningar bara på sommaren.

> Med anledning av sitt 75-årsjubileum företar Bostons symfoniorkester i höst en europeisk turné. Den medverkar bl a vid festspelen i Edinburgh och skall ge fyra konserter i Sovjetunionen. Ingen amerikansk orkester har tidigare besökt detta land. Även Sverige får besök och Bostonsymfonin konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. I denna artikel av H. B. Garland berättas om hur de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna från en blygsam början nått sin nuvarande prominenta ställning.

220 konserter

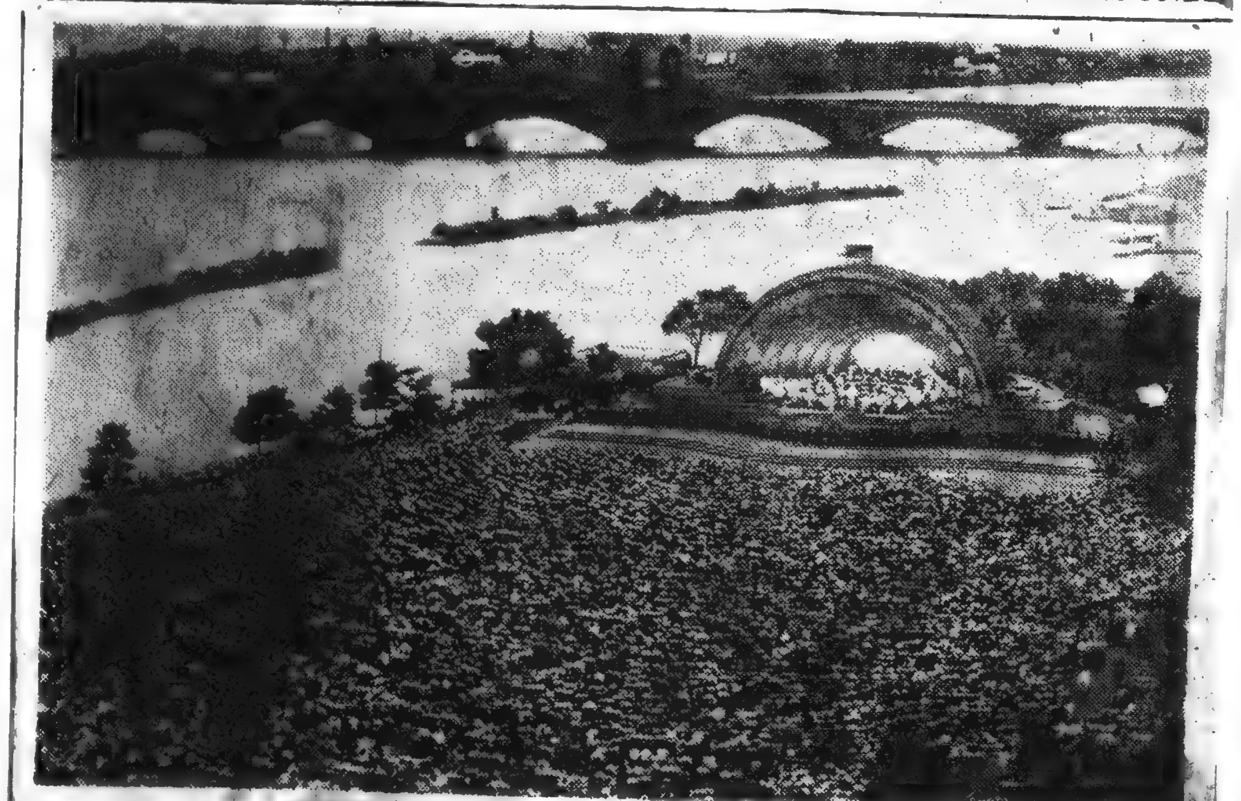
Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Sergej Koussevitskij var ledare för Bostonorkestern i 25 år, från 1924 till 1949. Under hans ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europaturnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter. Varje sommar dirigerar Münch också vid Berkshire-festivalen i Tanglewood, Massachusetts. Där samlas varje år över 100.000 åhörare och 400 musikstuderande från hela världen deltar i undervisningen vid orkesterns sommarskola Berkshire Music Center.

Först musik på tivoli

Philadelphia-orkestern, som ifjol sommar gjorde en utomordentligt framgångsrik turné i Europa, räknar sitt ursprung från en sommarorkester som på 1890-talet konserterade på ett nöjesfält i staden. Dess ledare, den tyske musikern Fritz Scheel, samlade omkring sig 85 musiker och 1 november år 1900 gav den nya symfoniorkestern sin debutkonsert. Scheel och Carl Pohlig lade grunden, men det var Stokowski och Ormandy förunnat att av orkestern skapa det världsberömda instrument den nu är.

Morgonbladet
Aug 18, 1956

SVENSKA MORGONBL



De sommarkonserter som Bostonsymfonin ger på stranden av Charles-floden är mycket populära och samlar ofta över 20.000 åhörare.

Symfonin spelar första fiolen

> Med anledning av sitt 75-årsjubileum företar Bostons symfoniorkester i höst en europeisk turné. Den medverkar bl. a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och skall ge fyra konserter i Sovjetunionen. Ingen amerikansk orkester har tidigare besökt detta land. Även Sverige får besök och Bostonsymfonin konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. I denna artikel av H. B. Garland berättas om hur de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna från en blygsam början nått sin nuvarande prominenta ställning.

För över 45 år sedan, då Gusav Mahler nyligen hade över- git ledningen av New York hilharmonic Society, skrev han til sin vän Bruno Walter i en: »Min orkester här är en typisk amerikansk orkester — och utan talang». Trots han vid andra tillfällen myc- entusiastiskt uttalade sig om ons symfoniorkester och de den »ersten Ranges», så manfaller hans anmärkning sina egna musiker närmare den uppfattning om det rikanska musiklivet som var ärskande utanför USA om- g sekelskiftet.

har kritiker och musik- are ändrat mening. Enighe- är stor om att de amerikan- symfoniorkestrarna under enaste årtiondena har ryckt n till en rangplats och konst- igt nått utomordentligt högt. musikkritiker skrev nyligen »symfoniorkestrarna är den rikanska musikkulturens grad». Och detta är verkli- ett faktum.

Det finns nu 30 stora symfo- niorkestrar i USA vars medlemmar alla är yrkesmusiker. Det finns också flera hundra mindre orkestrar som är sammansatta dels av yrkesmusiker och dels av amatörer. Därtill kommer de tusentals amatörorkestrarna vid lägre och högre skolor. Ledarna för de stora orkestrarna bär världsberömda namn: Charles Münch, Eugene Ormandy, Dimitri Mitropoulos, Bruno Walter, Pierre Monteux, Erich Leinsdorf, Leopold Stokowski, Fritz Reiner, Leonard Bernstein och Vladimir Golschmann, för att nämna några.

En svår början

Symfonimusikens historia i USA är relativt kort. De svårigheter som musiker och orkestrar hade att kämpa emot ar till en början mycket stora. Amerika fanns inga hov eller slott där en Haydn kunde vistas och inga förmögna ädlingar som kunde underhålla en Beethoven. Få filantroper eller finansiärer valde att stödja en symfoniorkester.

New York Philharmonic Society bildades emellertid redan 842 och blev den första stora rkestern. Den följdes av New ork Symphony Society 1878. De två New York-orkestrarna ogs tillsammans 1928.) Bostons symfoniorkester firade under säsongen 1955-56 sitt 75-årsjubileum och Chicagos symfoniorkester är 65 år. Cincinnatis orkester daterar sig tillbaka till 1895 och Philadelphia-orkestern bildades år 1900.

Symfonin spelar första fiolen

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. Covent Garden i London, L'Opéra i Paris och La Scala i Milano betraktas som överlägsna symfoniorkestrarna i dessa städer. De europeiska symfoniorkestrarnas mindre framträdande ställning kan förklaras med att de var bihang till operan, underhölls av den och inte kunde konkurrera om allmänhetens gunst. Londons filharmoniker, som bildades 1813, gav aldrig mer än 10 konserter per säsong förrän på 1930-talet.

I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfoniens ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Minneapolis och San Francisco, för att räkna upp några, har orkestrar bestående av över 100 musiker. Men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap. Det finns dock över 90 operaensembler i landet, som antingen turnerar eller ger föreställningar bara på sommaren.

Bostonsäsong med 220 konserter

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Serge Koussevitskij var ledare för Bostonorkestern i 25 år, från 1924 till 1949. Under hans ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna från en blygsam början nått sin nuvarande prominenta ställning.

---

USA

För över 45 år sedan, då Gustav Mahler [illegible] New York Philharmonic Society, skrev han till sin vän Bruno Walter i Wien: "Min orkester här är en typisk amerikansk orkester — trög och utan talang". Trots att han vid andra tillfällen mycket entusiastiskt uttalade sig om Bostons symfoniorkester och kallade den "ersten Ranges", så sammanfaller hans anmärkning om sina egna musiker närmare med den uppfattning om det amerikanska musiklivet som var förhärskande utanför USA omkring sekelskiftet.

De sommarkonserter som Bostonsymfonin ger på stranden av Charles-floden är mycket populära och samlar ofta över 20.000 åhörare.

Nu har kritiker och musikälskare ändrat mening. Enigheten är stor om att de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna under de senaste årtiondena har ryckt fram till en rangplats och konstnärligt nått utomordentligt högt. En musikkritiker skrev nyligen att "symfoniorkestrarna är den amerikanska musikkulturens ryggrad". Och detta är verkligen ett faktum.

Det finns nu 30 stora symfoniorkestrar i USA vars medlemmar alla är yrkesmusiker. Det finns också flera hundra mindre orkestrar som är sammansatta dels av yrkesmusiker och dels av amatörer. Därtill kommer de tusentals amatörorkestrarna vid lägre och högre skolor. Ledarna för de stora orkestrarna bär världsberömda namn: Charles Münch, Eugene Ormandy, Dimitri Mitropoulos, Bruno Walter, Pierre Monteux, Erich Leinsdorf, Leopold Stokowski, Fritz Reiner, Leonard Bernstein och Vladimir Golschmann, för att nämna några.

Av

H. B. Garland

★

Symfonimusikens historia i USA är relativt kort. De svårigheter som musiker och orkestrar hade att kämpa mot var till en början mycket stora. I Amerika fanns inga hov eller slott där en Haydn kunde vistas och inga förmögna ädlingar som kunde underhålla en Beethoven. Få filantroper eller finansiärer valde att stödja en symfoniorkester.

New Y[illegible] Society bildades [illegible] och blev [illegible] av New York Symphony Society 1878. (De två New York-orkestrarna slogs tillsammans 1928.) Bostons symfoniorkester firade under säsongen 1955-56 sitt 75-årsjubileum och Chicagos symfoniorkester är 65 år. Cincinnatis orkester daterar sig tillbaka till 1895 och Philadelphia-orkestern [illegible]

★

[illegible]

Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. Covent Garden i London, L'Opera i Paris och La Scala i Milano betraktas som överlägsna symfoniorkestrarna i dessa städer. De europeiska symfoniorkestrarnas mindre framträdande ställning kan förklaras med att de var bihang till operan, underhölls av den och inte kunde konkurrera om allmänhetens gunst. Londons filharmoniker, som bildades 1813, gav aldrig mer än 10 konserter per säsong förrän på 1930-talet.

I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Minneapolis och San Francisco, för att räkna upp några, har orkestrar bestående av över 100 musiker. Men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap. Det finns dock över 90 operaensembler i landet, som antingen turnerar eller ger föreställningar bara på sommaren.

★

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Sergej Koussevitskij var ledare för Bostonorkestern i 25 år, från 1924 till 1949. Under hans ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europaturnén. Från oktober till mitten a augusti ger orkestern omkring 22 konserter. Varje sommar dirigera Münch också vid Berkshire-festivalen i Tanglewood, Massachusetts. Där samlas varje år över 100.000 åhörare och 400 musikstuderande från hela världen deltar i undervisningen vid orkesterns sommarskola Berkshire Music Center.

Den första utlandsturné som företogs av någon amerikansk symfoniorkester gjordes 1920 av New Yorks symfonisällskap. Under sin mer än 100-åriga tillvaro har New Yorks filharmoniker under kortare eller längre tid letts av en rad världsberömda dirigenter, bland dem Igor Stravinsky, Gustav Mahler, Bruno Walter, Richard Strauss, John Barbirolli och Arturo Toscanini. Under senare år har Leopold Stokowski, George Szell, Guido Cantelli och Dimitri Mitropoulos framträtt på podiet i Carnegie Hall.

★

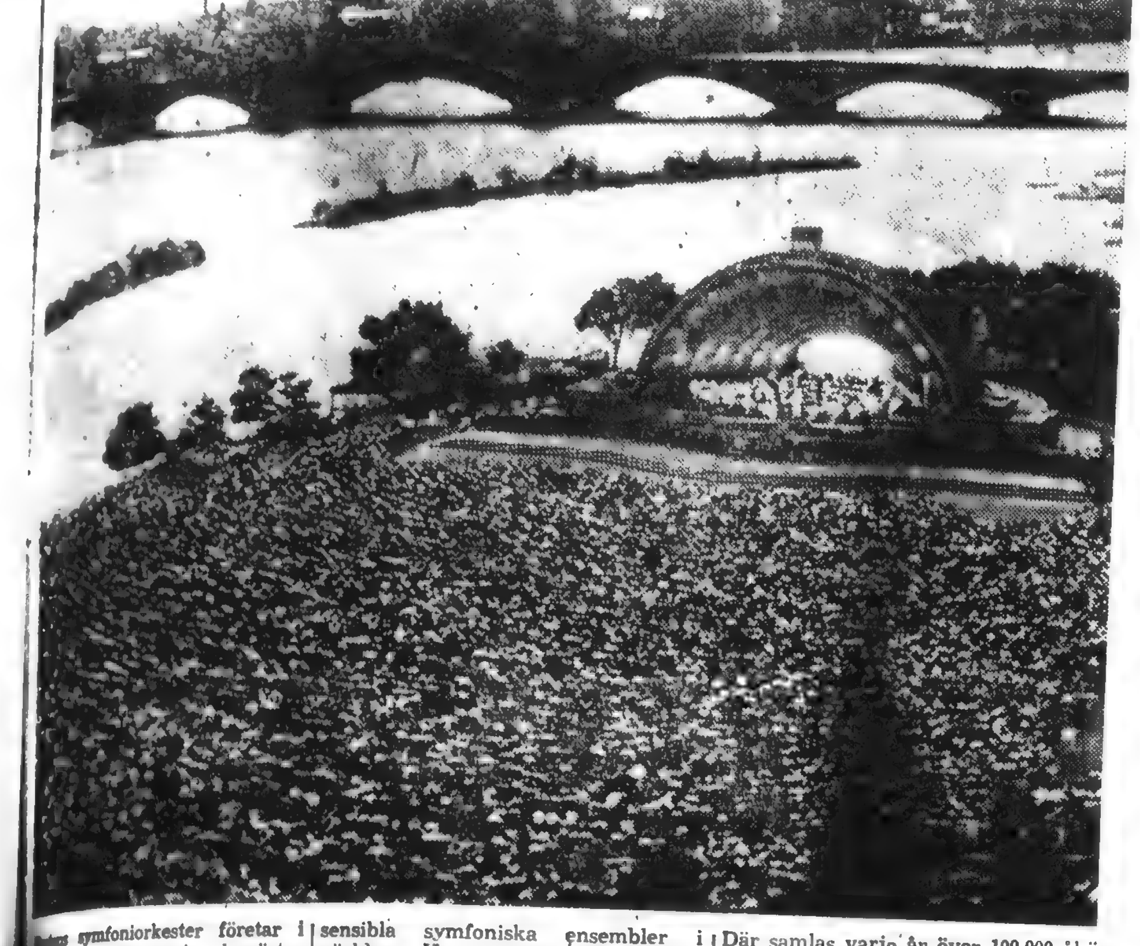
Philadelphia-orkestern, som i fjol sommar gjorde en utomordentligt framgångsrik turné i Europa, räknar sitt ursprung från en sommarorkester som på 1890-talet konserterade på ett nöjesfält i staden. Dess ledare, den tyske musikern Fritz Scheel, samlade omkring sig 85 musiker och i november år 1900 gav den nya symfoniorkestern sin debutkonsert. Scheel och Carl Pohlig lade grunden, men det var Stokowski och Ormandy förunnat att av orkestern skapa det världsberömda instrument den nu är.

I en översikt om symfonimusikens roll i det amerikanska kulturlivet får man inte glömma bort radions betydelse. Den har kraftigt bidragit till att öka intresset för symfonisk musik. Början gjordes 1933 då Frank Black för första gången dirigerade National Broadcasting Companys stråkorkester. NBC:s symfoniorkester organiserades 1937 och då Toscanini under säsongen 1937-38 dirigerade denna orkester frångick musikkritikerna sina vanor och anmälde f.f.g. konserterna på samma sätt som vanliga symfonikonserter.

AB PRESS-URKLIPP
AB SVENSKA TELEGRAMBYRÅNS
AVDELNING FÖR PRESSURKLIPP
Svenska Argus
Internationell byrå för tidningsurklipp
STOCKHOLM 1
Telefon 23 88 40 (Rikss. 23 89 40)

Ny Tid
Göteborg
Socialdemokratisk
17 AUG 1956
/ 19

Musik för miljoner



symfoniorkester företar i en europeisk turné och gästar Sverige. symfoniorkester räknas till i USA. Sergej Koussevitskij för bostonorkestern i 25 till 1949. Under hans formades orkestern till en fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder europaturnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter. Varje sommar dirigerar Münch också vid Berkshire-festivalen i Tanglewood, Massachusetts. Där samlas varje år över 100.000 åhörare och 400 musikstuderande från hela världen deltar i undervisningen vid orkesterns sommarskola Berkshire Music Center.

Bilden visar hur stor publik orkestern har när den ger sommarkonsert på stranden av Charles-floden. 20.000 var det den här gången.

AB PRESS-URKLIPP
AB SVENSKA TELEGRAMBYRÅNS
AVDELNING FÖR PRESSURKLIPP
Svenska Argus
Internationell byrå för tidningsurklipp
STOCKHOLM 1
Telefon 23 88 40 (Rikss. 23 89 40)

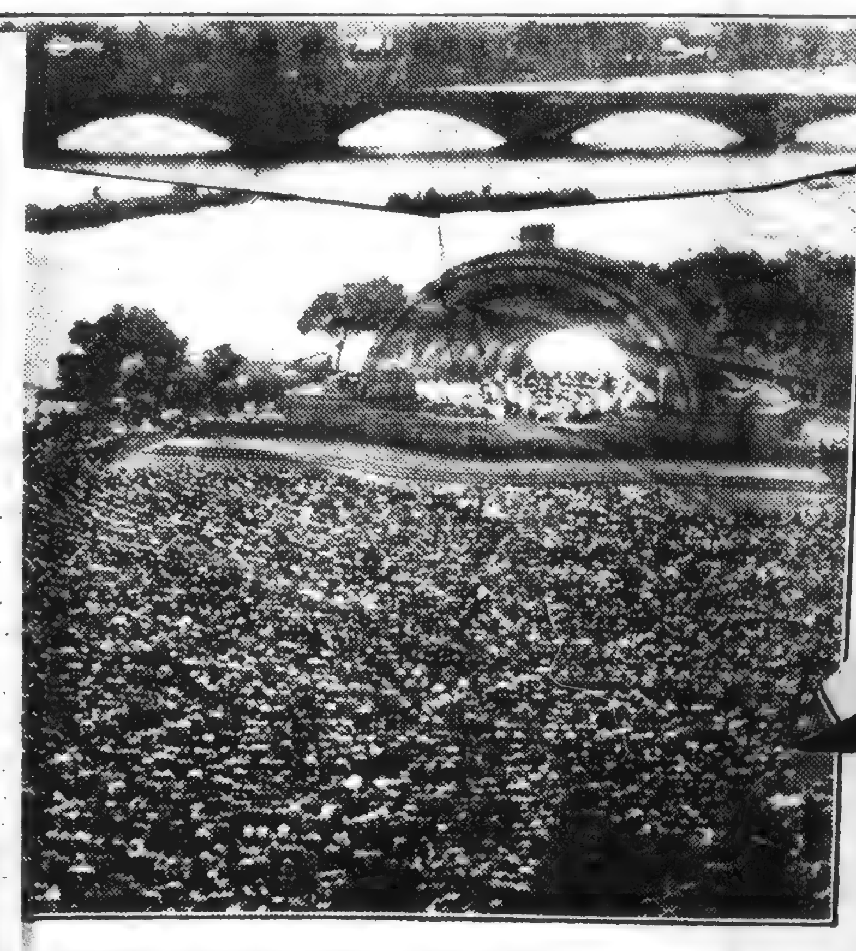
Göteborgs Tidningen
21 AUG 1956
19

Symfoniorkestern typisk för USA

Brist på opera

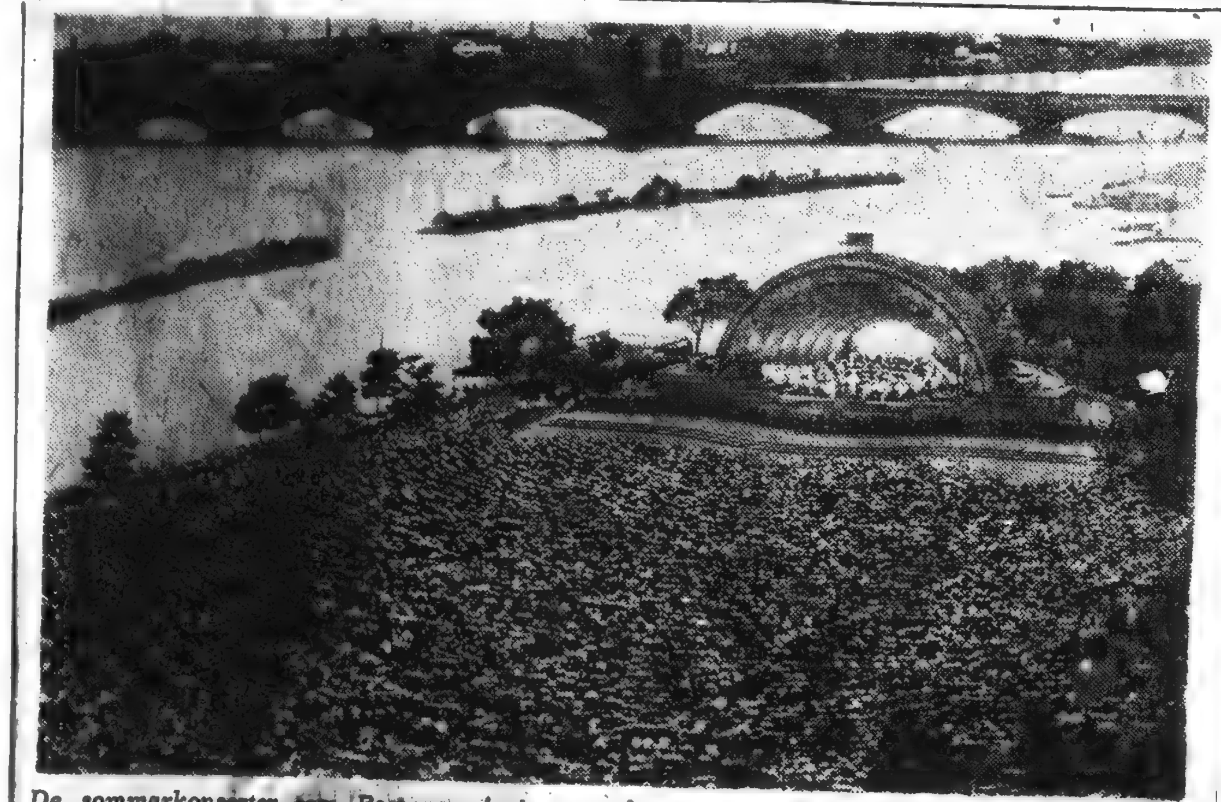
AB PRESSURKLIPP
Kl. V. Kyrkogata 10, Stockholm
Tel. 238840 (rikssamtal: 238940)
Postgironummer: 3248
Telegramadress: Telegrambyrån

Norrbottens Kuriren
Luleå
Moderat
20 AUG 1956
19



onsymfonin ger på stranden av Charles-floden är mycket popu- och samlar ofta över 20.000 åhörare.

Morgenbladet
Aug 18, 1956



De sommarkonserter som Bostonsymfonin ger på stranden av Charles-floden är mycket populära och samlar ofta över 20.000 åhörare.

Symfonin spelar första fiolen

För över 45 år sedan, då Gus- av Mahler nyligen hade över- git ledningen av New York hilharmonic Society, skrev han ti sin vän Bruno Walter i Wen: »Min orkester här är en tyisk amerikansk orkester — tr och utan talang». Trots han vid andra tillfällen myc- entusiastiskt uttalade sig om ons symfoniorkester och de den »ersten Ranges», så manfaller hans anmärkning sina egna musiker närmare den uppfattning om det rikanska musiklivet som var ärskande utanför USA om- g sekelskiftet.

u har kritiker och musik- are ändrat mening. Enighe- är stor om att de amerikan- symfoniorkestrarna under enaste årtiondena har ryckt n till en rangplats och konst- igt nått utomordentligt högt. musikkritiker skrev nyligen »symfoniorkestrarna är den rikanska musikkulturens grad». Och detta är verkligen ett faktum.

Det finns nu 30 stora symfoniorkester i USA vars medlemmar alla är yrkesmusiker. Det finns också flera hundra mindre orkestrar som är sammansatta dels av yrkesmusiker och dels av amatörer. Därtill kommer de tusentals amatörorkestrarna vid lägre och högre skolor. Ledarna för de stora orkestrarna bär världsberömda namn: Charles Münch, Eugene Ormandy, Dimitri Mitropoulos, Bruno Walter, Pierre Monteux, Erich Leinsdorf, Leopold Stokowski, Fritz Reiner, Leonard Bernstein och Vladimir Golschmann, för att nämna några.

Med anledning av sitt 75-årsjubileum företar Bostons symfoniorkester i höst en europeisk turné. Den medverkar bl. a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och skall ge fyra konserter i Sovjetunionen. Ingen amerikansk orkester har tidigare besökt detta land. Även Sverige får besök och Bostonsymfonin konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. I denna artikel av H. B. Garland berättas om hur de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna från en blygsam början nått sin nuvarande prominenta ställning.

En svår början

Symfonimusikens historia i USA är relativt kort. De svårigheter som musiker och orkestrar hade att kämpa emot ar till en början mycket stora. Amerika fanns inga hov eller lott där en Haydn kunde vistas och inga förmögna ädlingar som kunde underhålla en Beethoven. Få filantroper eller finansiärer valde att stödja en symfoniorkester.

New York Philharmonic Society bildades emellertid redan 1842 och blev den första stora rkestern. Den följdes av New York Symphony Society 1878. De två New York-orkestrarna ogs tillsammans 1928.) Bostons symfoniorkester firade under säsongen 1955-56 sitt 75-årsjubileum och Chicagos symfoniorkester är 65 år. Cincinnatis orkester daterar sig tillbaka till 1895 och Philadelphia-orkestern bildades år 1900.

Symfonin spelar första

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. Covent Garden i London, L'Opéra i Paris och La Scala i Milano betraktas som överlägsna symfoniorkestrarna i dessa städer. De europeiska symfoniorkestrarnas mindre framträdande ställning kan förklaras med att de var bihang till operan, underhölls av den och inte kunde konkurrera om allmänhetens gunst. Londons filharmoniker, som bildades 1813, gav aldrig mer än 10 konserter per säsong förrän på 1930-talet.

I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfoniens ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Minneapolis och San Francisco, för att räkna upp några, har orkestrar bestående av över 100 musiker. Men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap. Det finns dock över 90 operaensembler i landet, som antingen turnerar eller ger föreställningar bara på sommaren.

Bostonsäsong med 220 konserter

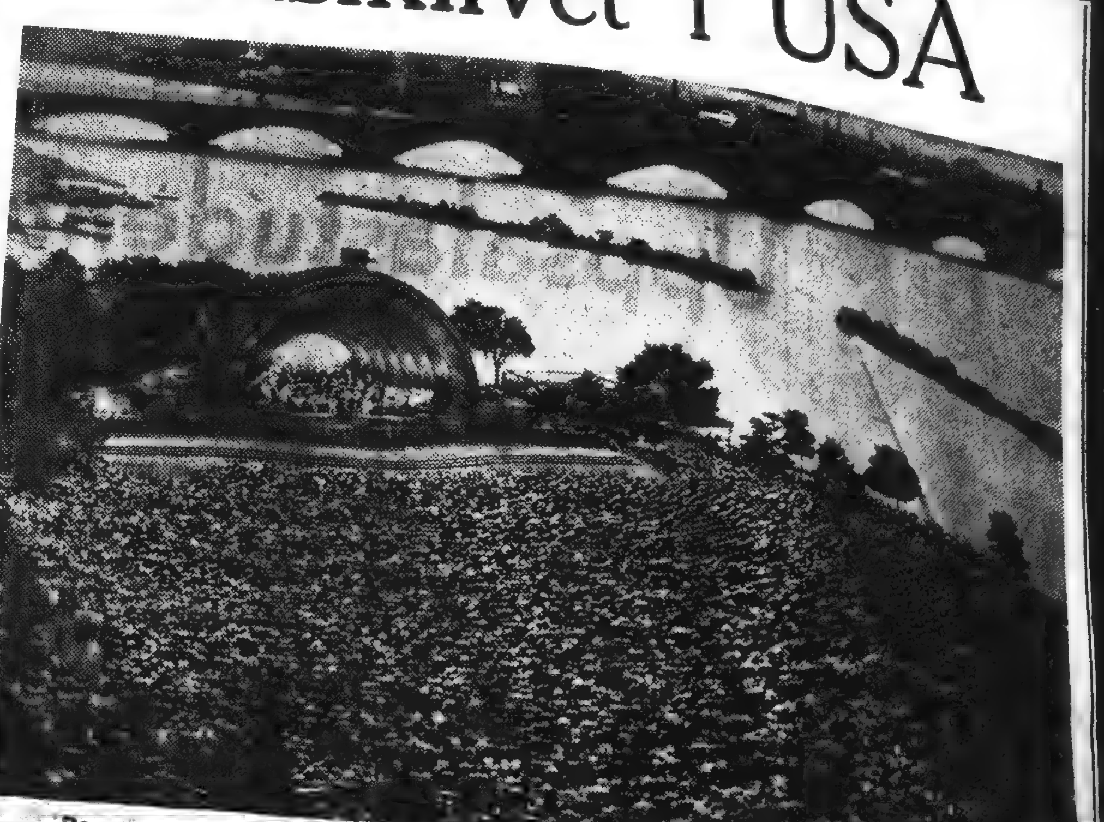
Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Serge Koussevitskij var ledare för Bostonorkestern i 25 år, från 1924 till 1949. Under hans ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes

---

Kultur Aktuellt

Musiklivet i USA

Med anledning av sitt 75-årsjubileum företar Bostons symfoniorkester i höst en europeisk turné. Den medverkar bl.a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och skall ge fyra konserter i Sovjetunionen. Ingen amerikansk orkester har tidigare besökt detta land. Även Sverige får besök och Bostonsymfonin konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. I denna artikel av H.B. Garland berättas om hur de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna från en blygsam början nått sin nuvarande prominenta ställning.



De sommarkonserter som Bostonsymfonin ger på stranden av Charles-floden är mycket populära och samlar ofta över 20.000 åhörare.

För över 45 år sedan, då Gustav Mahler nyligen hade övertagit ledningen av New York Philharmonic Society, skrev han till sin vän Bruno Walter i Wien: "Min orkester här är en typisk amerikansk orkester — trög och utan talang". Trots att han vid andra tillfällen mycket entusiastiskt uttalade sig om Bostons symfoniorkester och kallade den "ersten Ranges", så sammanfaller hans anmärkning om sina egna musiker närmare med den uppfattning om det amerikanska musiklivet som var förhärskande utanför USA omkring sekelskiftet.

Nu har kritiker och musikälskare ändrat mening. Enigheten är stor om att de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna under de senaste årtiondena har ryckt fram till en rangplats och konstnärligt nått utomordentligt högt. En musikkritiker skrev nyligen att "symfoniorkestrarna är den amerikanska musikkulturens ryggrad". Och detta är verkligen ett faktum.

Det finns nu 30 stora symfoniorkestrar i USA vars medlemmar alla är yrkesmusiker. Det finns också flera hundra mindre orkestrar som är sammansatta dels av yrkesmusiker och dels av amatörer. Därtill kommer de tusentals amatörorkestrarna vid lägre och högre skolor. Ledarna för de stora orkestrarna bär världsberömda namn: Charles Münch, Eugene Ormandy, Dimitri Mitropoulos, Bruno Walter, Pierre

Av

H. B. Garland

Monteux, Erich Leinsdorf, Leopold Stokowski, Fritz Reiner, Leonard Bernstein och Vladimir Golschmann, för att nämna några.

★

Symfonimusikens historia i USA är relativt kort. De svårigheter som musiker och orkestrar hade att kämpa mot var till en början mycket stora. I Amerika fanns inga hov eller slott där en Haydn kunde vistas och inga förmögna ädlingar som kunde underhålla en Beethoven. Få filantroper eller finansiärer valde att stödja en symfoniorkester.

New York Philharmonic Society bildades [illegible] 1842 och blev [illegible] följdes av New York Symphony Society 1878. (De två New York-orkestrarna slogs tillsammans 1928.) Bostons symfoniorkester firade under säsongen 1955-56 sitt 75-årsjubileum och Chicagos symfoniorkester är 65 år. Cincinnatis orkester daterar sig tillbaka till 1895 och Philadelphia-orkestern bildades år 1900.

★

[illegible]

[illegible] Förhållandet är likartat

Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. Covent Garden i London, L'Opera i Paris och La Scala i Milano betraktas som överlägsna symfoniorkestrarna i dessa städer. De europeiska symfoniorkestrarnas mindre framträdande ställning kan förklaras med att de var bihang till operan, underhölls av den och inte kunde konkurrera om allmänhetens gunst. Londons filharmoniker, som bildades 1813, gav aldrig mer än 10 konserter per säsong förrän på 1930-talet.

I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Minneapolis och San Francisco, för att räkna upp några, har orkestrar bestående av över 100 musiker. Men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap. Det finns dock över 90 operaensembler i landet, som antingen turnerar eller ger föreställningar bara på sommaren.

★

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Sergej Koussevitskij var ledare för Bostonorkestern i 25 år, från 1924 till 1949. Under hans ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europaturnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter. Varje sommar dirigerar Münch också vid Berkshire-festivalen i Tanglewood, Massachusetts. Där samlas varje år över 100.000 åhörare och 400 musikstuderande från hela världen deltar i undervisningen vid orkesterns sommarskola Berkshire Music Center.

Den första utlandsturné som företogs av någon amerikansk symfoniorkester gjordes 1920 av New Yorks symfonisällskap. Under sin mer än 100-åriga tillvaro har New Yorks filharmoniker under kortare eller längre tid letts av en rad världsberömda dirigenter, bland dem Igor Stravinsky, Gustav Mahler, Bruno Walter, Richard Strauss, John Barbirolli och Arturo Toscanini. Under senare år har Leopold Stokowski, George Szell, Guido Cantelli och Dimitri Mitropoulos framträtt på podiet i Carnegie Hall.

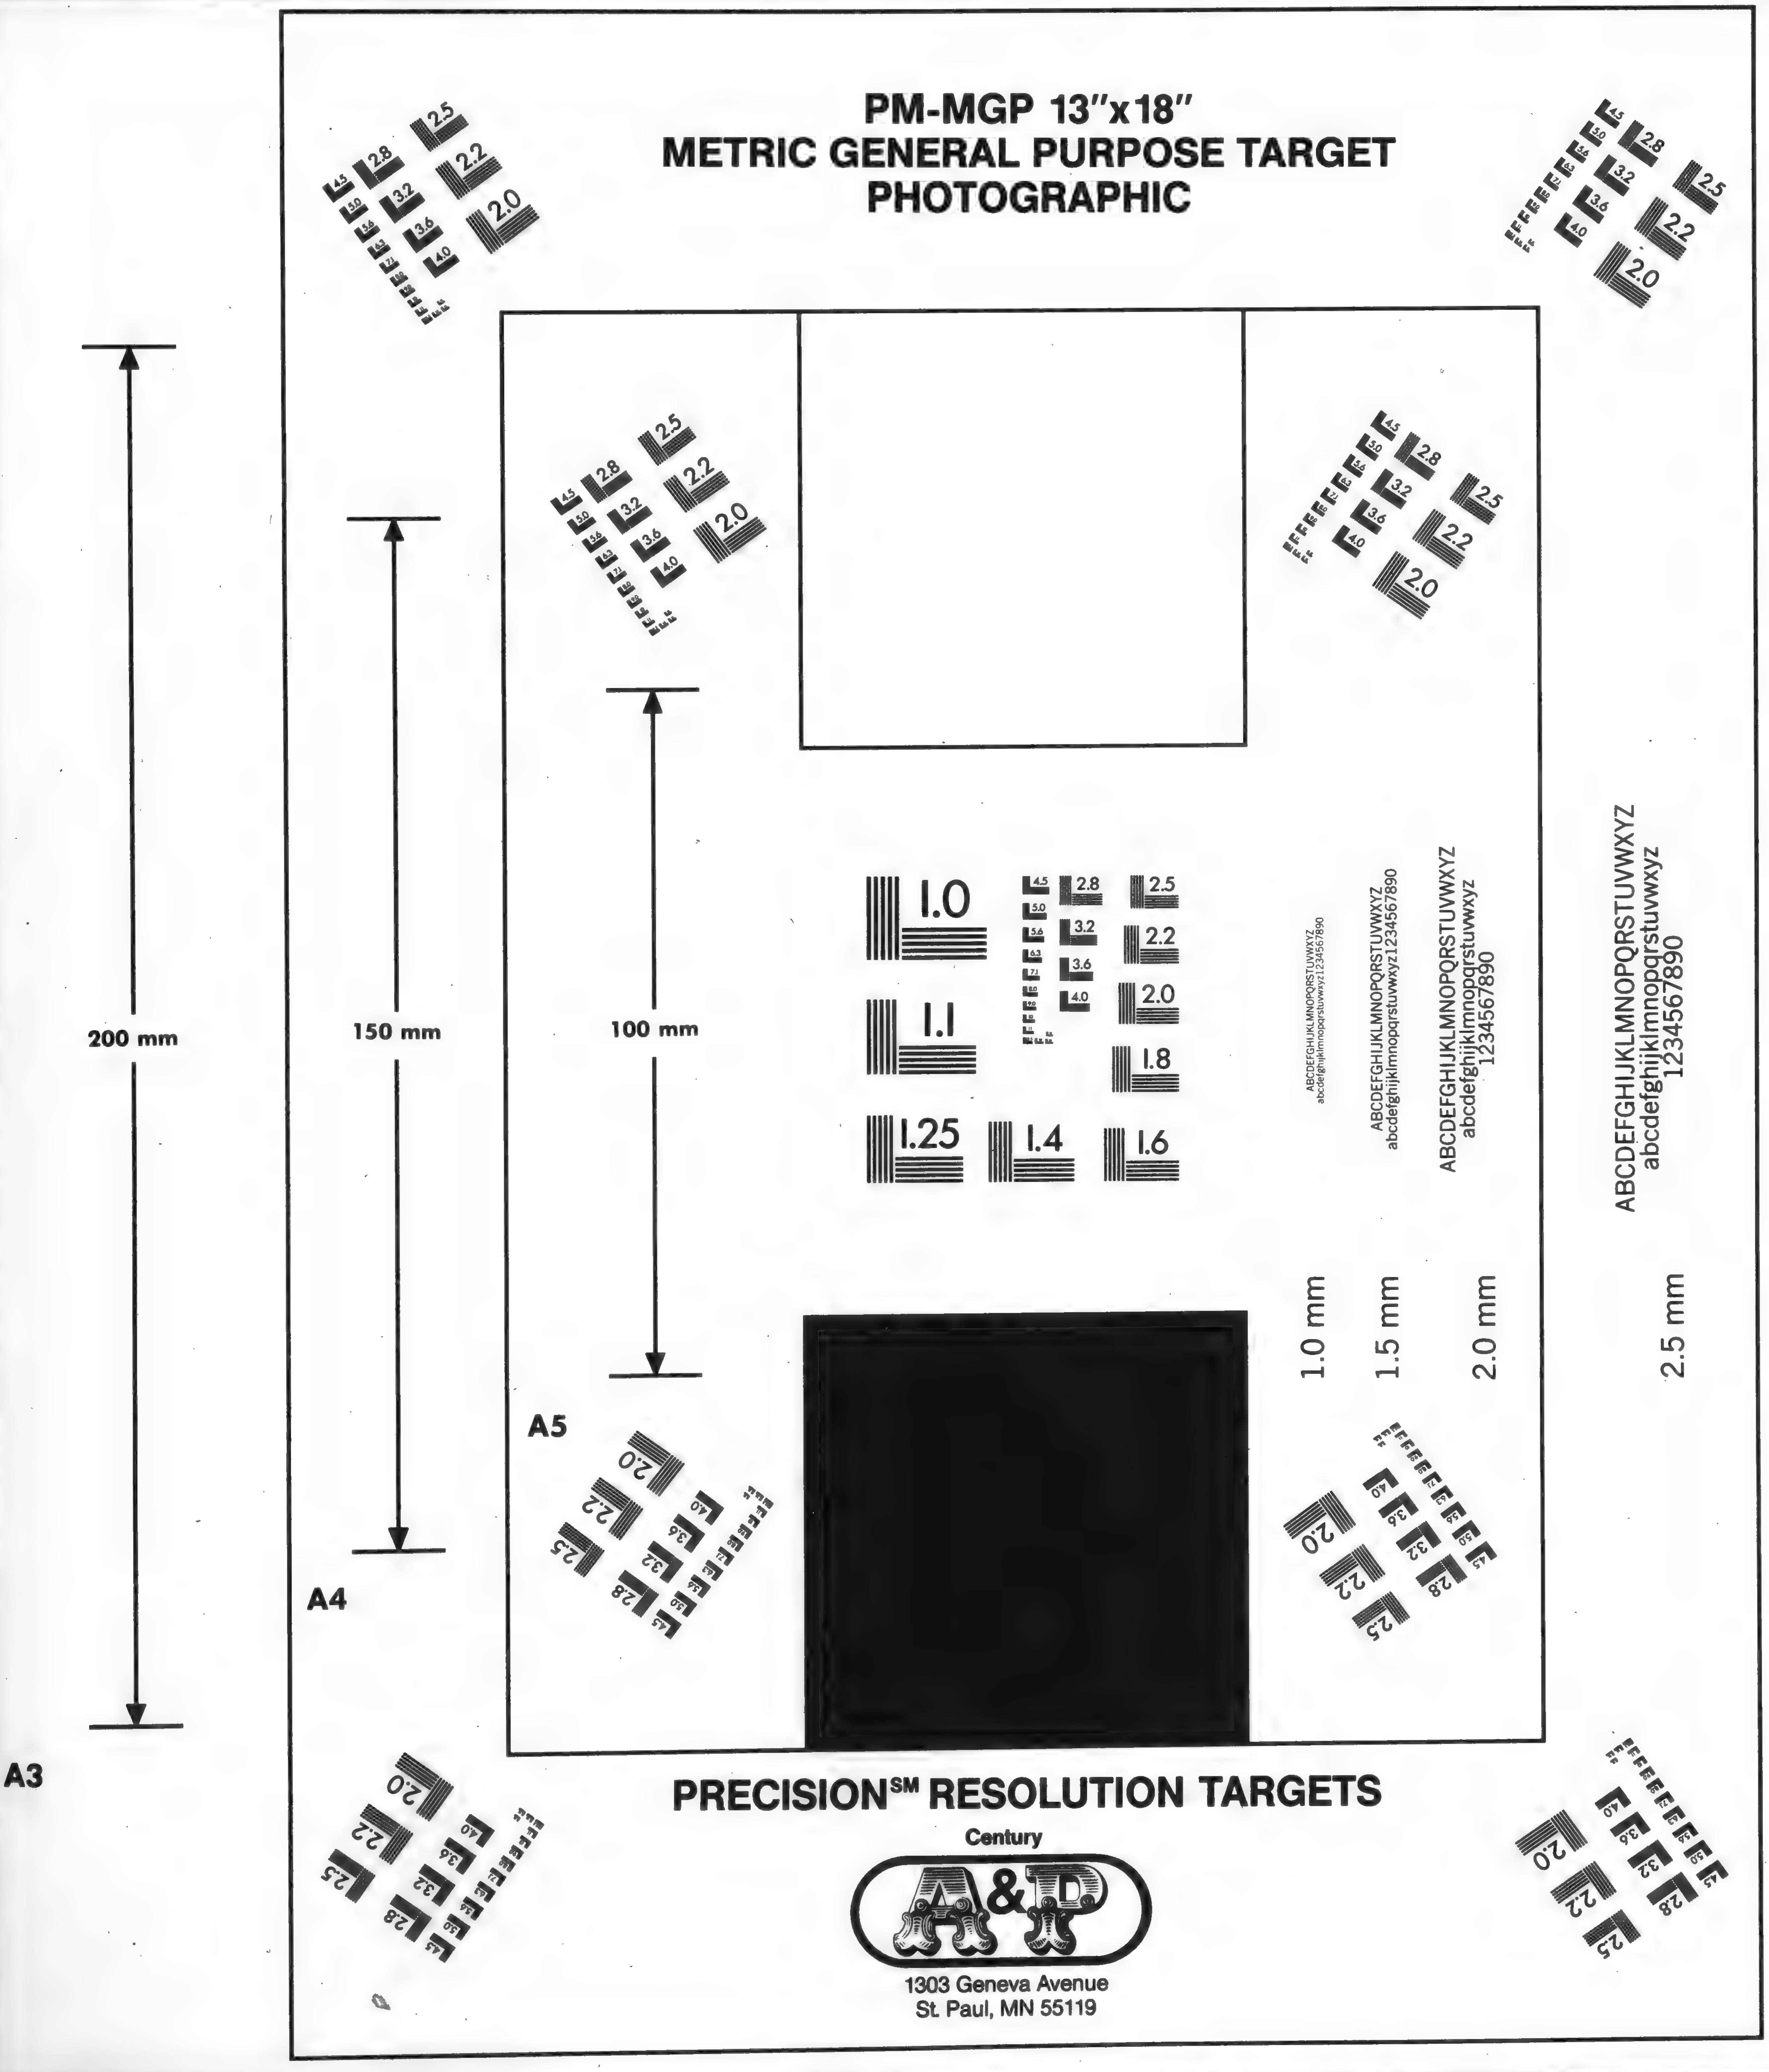
★

Philadelphia-orkestern, som i fjol sommar gjorde en utomordentligt framgångsrik turné i Europa, räknar sitt ursprung från en sommarorkester som på 1890-talet konserterade på ett nöjesfält i staden. Dess ledare, den tyske musikern Fritz Scheel, samlade omkring sig 85 musiker och i november år 1900 gav den nya symfoniorkestern sin debutkonsert. Scheel och Carl Pohlig lade grunden, men det var Stokowski och Ormandy förunnat att av orkestern skapa det världsberömda instrument den nu är.

I en översikt om symfonimusikens roll i det amerikanska kulturlivet får man inte glömma bort radions betydelse. Den har kraftigt bidragit till att öka intresset för symfonisk musik. Början gjordes 1933 då Frank Black för första gången dirigerade National Broadcasting Companys stråkorkester. NBC:s symfoniorkester organiserades 1937 och då Toscanini under säsongen 1937-38 dirigerade denna orkester frångick musikkritikerna sina vanor och anmälde f.f.g. konserterna på samma sätt som vanliga symfonikonserter.

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
8.0
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A3
A4
A5
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

[9]

AB PRESS-URKLIPP
AB SVENSKA TELEGRAMBYRÅNS
AVDELNING FÖR PRESSURKLIPP
Svenska Argus
Internationell byrå för tidningsurklipp
STOCKHOLM 1
Telefon 23 88 40 (Rikss. 23 89 40)

Ny Tid
Göteborg
~~Socialdemokratisk~~
17 AUG 1956
19

Musik för miljoner

...s symfoniorkester företar i ... en europeisk turné och gästar ... Sverige.

...s symfoniorkester räknas till ... i USA. Sergej Koussevitskij ... för bostonorkestern i 25 ... till 1949. Under hans ...mades orkestern till en ... fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder europaturnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter. Varje sommar dirigerar Münch också vid Berkshire-festivalen i Tanglewood, Massachusetts. Där samlas varje år över 100.000 åhörare och 400 musikstuderande från hela världen deltar i undervisningen vid orkesterns sommarskola Berkshire Music Center.

Bilden visar hur stor publik orkestern har när den ger sommarkonsert på stranden av Charles-floden. 20.000 var det den här gången.

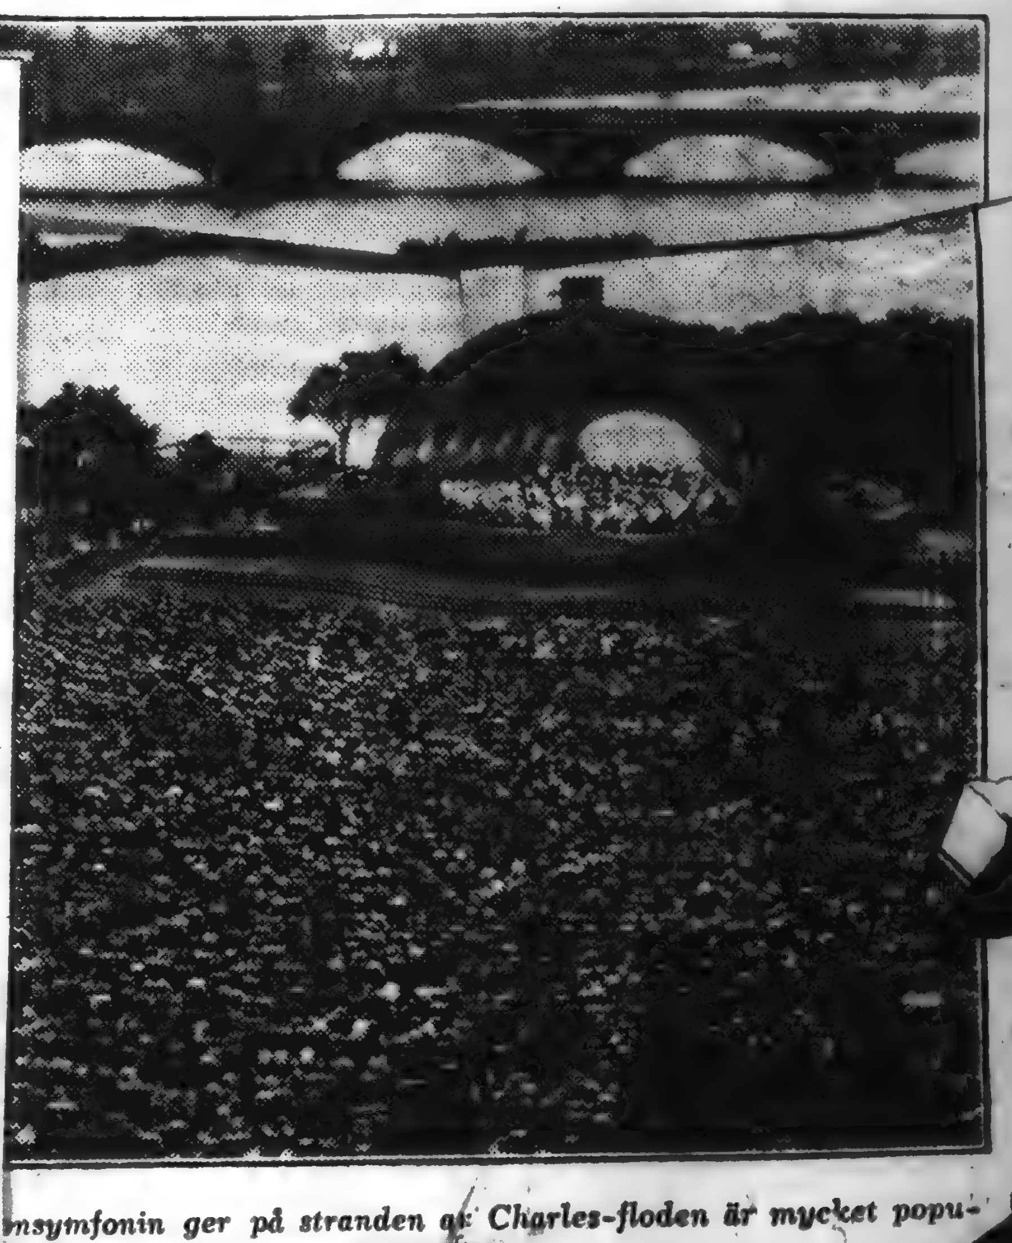
AB PRESS-URKLIPP
AB SVENSKA TELEGRAMBYRÅNS
AVDELNING FÖR PRESSURKLIPP
Svenska Argus
Internationell byrå för tidningsurklipp
STOCKHOLM 1
Telefon 23 88 40 (Rikss. 23 89 40)

Göteborgs Tidningen
21 AUG 1956
19

4 GÖTEBORGS-TIDNINGEN Tisdag 21 augusti 1956

Symfoniorkestern typisk för USA

Brist på opera



...nsymfonin ger på stranden av Charles-floden är mycket popu-... och samlar ofta över 20.000 åhörare.

AB PRESSURKLIPP
Kl. V. Kyrkogata 10, Stockholm
Tel. 238840 (rikssamtal: 238940)
Postgironummer: 3248
Telegramadress: Telegrambyrån

Norrbottens Kuriren
Luleå
Moderat
20 AUG 1956
19

Morgenbladet
Aug 18. 1956

SVENSKA MORGONBL

De sommarkonserter som Bostonsymfonin ger på stranden av Charles-floden är mycket populära och samlar ofta över 20.000 åhörare.

Symfonin spelar första fiolen

Med anledning av sitt 75-årsjubileum företar Bostons symfoniorkester i höst en europeisk turné. Den medverkar bl. a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och skall ge fyra konserter i Sovjetunionen. Ingen amerikansk orkester har tidigare besökt detta land. Även Sverige får besök och Bostonsymfonin konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. I denna artikel av H. B. Garland berättas om hur de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna från en blygsam början nått sin nuvarande prominenta ställning.

För över 45 år sedan, då Gus... av Mahler nyligen hade över... git ledningen av New York ...hilharmonic Society, skrev han ... sin vän Bruno Walter i ...en: »Min orkester här är en ... amerikansk orkester — ... och utan talang». Trots ...an vid andra tillfällen myc... ...ntusiastiskt uttalade sig om ...ons symfoniorkester och ...de den »ersten Ranges», så ...manfaller hans anmärkning ...sina egna musiker närmare ... den uppfattning om det ...rikanska musiklivet som var ...härskande utanför USA omkring sekelskiftet.

... har kritiker och musik...are ändrat mening. Enighe... är stor om att de amerikan... symfoniorkestrarna under ...senaste årtiondena har ryckt symfoniorkester firade under säsongen 1955–56 sitt 75-...

Italien. Covent Garden i London, L'Opéra i Paris och La Scala i Milano betraktas som överlägsna symfoniorkestrarna i dessa städer. De europeiska symfoniorkestrarnas mindre framträdande ställning kan förklaras med att de var bihang till operan, underhölls av den och inte kunde konkurrera om allmänhetens gunst. Londons filharmoniker, som bildades 1813, gav aldrig mer än 10 konserter per säsong förrän på 1930-talet.

I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfoniens ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester. New York, Boston

---

Moderat

NORRBOTTENS-KURIREN Måndagen den 20 Augusti 1956

Musiklivet i USA

Kultur Aktuellt

Med anledning av sitt 75-årsjubileum företar Bostons symfoniorkester i höst en europeisk turné. Den medverkar bl.a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och skall ge fyra konserter i Sovjetunionen. Ingen amerikansk orkester har tidigare besökt detta land. Även Sverige får besök och Bostonsymfonin konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. I denna artikel av H.B. Garland berättas om hur de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna från en blygsam början nått sin nuvarande prominenta ställning.

För över 45 år sedan, då Gustav Mahler nyligen hade övertagit ledningen av New York Philharmonic Society, skrev han till sin vän Bruno Walter i Wien: "Min orkestar här är en typisk amerikansk orkester — trög och utan talang". Trots att han vid andra tillfällen mycket entusiastiskt uttalade sig om Bostons symforkester och kallade den "ersten Ranges", så sammanfaller hans anmärkning om sina egna musiker närmare med den uppfattning om det amerikanska musiklivet som var förhärskande utanför USA omkring sekelskiftet.

Nu har kritiker och musikälskare ändrat mening. Enigheten är stor om att de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna under de senaste årtiondena har ryckt fram till en rangplats och konstnärligt nått utomordentligt högt. En musikkritiker skrev nyligen att "symfoniorkestrarna är den amerikanska musikkulturens ryggrad". Och detta är verkligen ett faktum.

Det finns nu 30 stora symfoniorkestrar i USA vars medlemmar

Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. Covent Garden i London, L'Opera i Paris och La Scala i Milano betraktas som överlägsna symfoniorkestrarna i dessa städer. De europeiska symfoniorkestrarnas mindre framträdande ställning kan förklaras med att de var bihang till operan, underhölls av den och inte kunde konkurrera om allmänhetens gunst. Londons filharmoniker, som bildades 1813, gav aldrig mer än 10 konserter per säsong förrän på 1930-talet.

I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins

nén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 22... konserter. Varje sommar dirigerar Münch också vid Berkshire-festivalen i Tanglewood, Massachusetts. Där samlas varje år över 100.000 åhörare och 400 musikstuderande från hela världen deltar i undervisningen vid orkesterns sommarskola Berkshire Music Center.

Den första utlandsturné som företogs av någon amerikansk symfoniorkester gjordes 1920 av New Yorks symfonisällskap. Under sin mer än 100-åriga tillvaro har New Yorks filharmoniker under kortare eller längre tid letts av en rad världsberömda dirigenter,

De sommarkonserter som Bostonsymfonin ger på stranden av Charles-floden är mycket populära och samlar ofta över 20.000 åhörare.

20 AUG 1956

nsymfonin ger på stranden av Charles-floden är mycket popuoch samlar ofta över 20.000 åhörare.

Morgenbladet
Aug 18, 1956

SVENSKA MORGONBL

De sommarkonserter som Bostonsymfonin ger på stranden av Charles-floden är mycket populära och samlar ofta över 20.000 åhörare.

Symfonin spelar första fiolen

Med anledning av sitt 75-årsjubileum företar Bostons symfoniorkester i höst en europeisk turné. Den medverkar bl. a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och skall ge fyra konserter i Sovjetunionen. Ingen amerikansk orkester har tidigare besökt detta land. Även Sverige får besök och Bostonsymfonin konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. I denna artikel av H. B. Garland berättas om hur de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna från en blygsam början nått sin nuvarande prominenta ställning.

För över 45 år sedan, då Gustav Mahler nyligen hade övertagit ledningen av New York Philharmonic Society, skrev han till sin vän Bruno Walter i Wien: »Min orkester här är en typisk amerikansk orkester — trög och utan talang». Trots att han vid andra tillfällen mycket entusiastiskt uttalade sig om Bostons symfoniorkester och kallade den »ersten Ranges», så sammanfaller hans anmärkning om sina egna musiker närmare med den uppfattning om det amerikanska musiklivet som var förhärskande utanför USA omkring sekelskiftet.

Nu har kritiker och musikälskare ändrat mening. Enigheten är stor om att de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna under de senaste årtiondena har ryckt fram till en rangplats och konstnärligt nått utomordentligt högt. En musikkritiker skrev nyligen att »symfoniorkestrarna är den amerikanska musikkulturens ryggrad». Och detta är verkligen ett faktum.

Det finns nu 30 stora symfoniorkestrar i USA vars medlemmar alla är yrkesmusiker. Det finns också flera hundra mindre orkestrar som är sammansatta dels av yrkesmusiker och dels av amatörer. Därtill kommer de tusentals amatörorkestrarna vid lägre och högre skolor. Ledarna för de stora orkestrarna bär världsberömda namn: Charles Münch, Eugene Ormandy, Dimitri Mitropoulos, Bruno Walter, Pierre Monteux, Erich Leinsdorf, Leopold Stokowski, Fritz Reiner, Leonard Bernstein och Vladimir Golschmann, för att nämna några.

En svår början

Symfonimusikens historia i USA är relativt kort. De svårigheter som musiker och orkestrar hade att kämpa emot var till en början mycket stora. I Amerika fanns inga hov eller slott där en Haydn kunde vistas och inga förmögna ädlingar som kunde underhålla en Beethoven. Få filantroper eller finansiärer valde att stödja en symfoniorkester.

New York Philharmonic Society bildades emellertid redan 1842 och blev den första stora orkestern. Den följdes av New York Symphony Society 1878. (De två New York-orkestrarna slogs tillsammans 1928.) Bostons symfoniorkester firade under säsongen 1955–56 sitt 75-årsjubileum och Chicagos symfoniorkester är 65 år. Cincinnatis orkester daterar sig tillbaka till 1895 och Philadelphia-orkestern bildades år 1900.

Symfonin spelar första fiolen

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. Covent Garden i London, L'Opéra i Paris och La Scala i Milano betraktas som överlägsna symfoniorkestrarna i dessa städer. De europeiska symfoniorkestrarnas mindre framträdande ställning kan förklaras med att de var bihang till operan, underhölls av den och inte kunde konkurrera om allmänhetens gunst. Londons filharmoniker, som bildades 1813, gav aldrig mer än 10 konserter per säsong förrän på 1930-talet.

I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfoniens ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Minneapolis och San Francisco, för att räkna upp några, har orkestrar bestående av över 100 musiker. Men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap. Det finns dock över 90 operaensembler i landet, som antingen turnerar eller ger föreställningar bara på sommaren.

Bostonsäsong med 220 konserter

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Serge Koussevitskij var ledare för Bostonorkestern i 25 år, från 1924 till 1949. Under hans ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes

---

NORRBOTTENS-KURIKEN Måndagen den 20 Augusti 1956

Kultur Aktuellt

Musiklivet i USA

Med anledning av sitt 75-årsjubileum företar Bostons symfoniorkester i höst en europeisk turné. Den medverkar bl.a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och skall ge fyra konserter i Sovjetunionen. Ingen amerikansk orkester har tidigare besökt detta land. Även Sverige får besök och Bostonsymfonin konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. I denna artikel av H.B. Garland berättas om hur de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna från en blygsam början nått sin nuvarande prominenta ställning.

De sommarkonserter som Bostonsymfonin ger på stranden av Charles-floden är mycket populära och samlar ofta över 20.000 åhörare.

Av

H. B. Garland

För över 45 år sedan, då Gustav Mahler nyligen hade övertagit ledningen av New York Philharmonic Society, skrev han till sin vän Bruno Walter i Wien: "Min orkester här är en typisk amerikansk orkester — trög och utan talang". Trots att han vid andra tillfällen mycket entusiastiskt uttalade sig om Bostons symfoniorkester och kallade den "ersten Ranges", så sammanfaller hans anmärkning om sina egna musiker närmare med den uppfattning om det amerikanska musiklivet som var förhärskande utanför USA omkring sekelskiftet.

Nu har kritiker och musikälskare ändrat mening. Enigheten är stor om att de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna under de senaste årtiondena har ryckt fram till en rangplats och konstnärligt nått utomordentligt högt. En musikkritiker skrev nyligen att "symfoniorkestrarna är den amerikanska musikkulturens ryggrad". Och detta är verkligen ett faktum.

Det finns nu 30 stora symfoniorkestrar i USA vars medlemmar alla är yrkesmusiker. Det finns också flera hundra mindre orkestrar som är sammansatta dels av yrkesmusiker och dels av amatörer. Därtill kommer de tusentals amatörorkestrarna vid lägre och högre skolor. Ledarna för de stora orkestrarna bär världsberömda namn: Charles Münch, Eugene Ormandy, Dimitri Mitropoulos, Bruno Walter, Pierre Monteux, Erich Leinsdorf, Leopold Stokowski, Fritz Reiner, Leonard Bernstein och Vladimir Golschmann, för att nämna några.

*

Symfonimusikens historia i USA är relativt kort. De svårigheter som musiker och orkestrar hade att kämpa mot var till en början mycket stora. I Amerika fanns inga hov eller slott där en Haydn kunde vistas och inga förmögna ädlingar som kunde underhålla en Beethoven. Få filantroper eller finansiärer valde att stödja en symfoniorkester.

New York Philarmonic Society bildades emellertid redan 1842 och blev den första stora orkestern. Den följdes av New York Symphony Society 1878. (De två New York-orkestrarna slogs tillsammans 1928.) Bostons symfoniorkester firade under säsongen 1955–56 sitt 75-årsjubileum och Chicagos symfoniorkester är 65 år. Cincinnatis orkester daterar sig tillbaka till 1895 och Philadelphia-orkestern bildades år 1900.

★

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper Wien. Förhållandet är likartat Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. Covent Garden i London, L'Opera i Paris och La Scala i Milano betraktas som överlägsna symfoniorkestrarna i dessa städer. De europeiska symfoniorkestrarnas mindre framträdande ställning kan förklaras med att de var bihang till operan, underhölls av den och inte kunde konkurrera om allmänhetens gunst. Londons filharmoniker, som bildades 1813, gav aldrig mer än 10 konserter per säsong förrän på 1930-talet.

I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Minneapolis och San Francisco, för att räkna upp några, har orkestrar bestående av över 100 musiker. Men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap. Det finns dock över 90 operaensembler i landet, som antingen turnerar eller ger föreställningar bara på sommaren.

★

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Sergej Koussevitskij var ledare för Bostonorkestern i 25 år, från 1924 till 1949. Under hans ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europaturnén. Från oktober till mitten augusti ger orkestern omkring 2 konserter. Varje sommar dirigerar Münch också vid Berkshire-festivalen i Tanglewood, Massachusetts. Där samlas varje år över 100.000 åhörare och 400 musikstuderande från hela världen deltar i undervisningen vid orkesterns sommarskola Berkshire Music Center.

Den första utlandsturné som företogs av någon amerikansk symfoniorkester gjordes 1920 av New Yorks symfonisällskap. Under sin mer än 100-åriga tillvaro har New Yorks filharmoniker under kortare eller längre tid letts av en rad världsberömda dirigenter, bland dem Igor Stravinsky, Gustav Mahler, Bruno Walter, Richard Strauss, John Barbirolli och Arturo Toscanini. Under senare år har Leopold Stokowski, George Szell, Guido Cantelli och Dimitri Mitropoulos framträtt på podiet i Carnegie Hall.

★

Philadelphia-orkestern, som i fjol sommar gjorde en utomordentligt framgångsrik turné i Europa, räknar sitt ursprung från en sommarorkester som på 1890-talet konserterade på ett nöjesfält i staden. Dess ledare, den tyske musikern Fritz Scheel, samlade omkring sig 85 musiker och i november år 1900 gav den nya symfoniorkestern sin debutkonsert. Scheel och Carl Pohlig lade grunden, men det var Stokowski och Ormandy förunnat att av orkestern skapa det världsberömda instrument den nu är.

I en översikt om symfonimusikens roll i det amerikanska kulturlivet får man inte glömma bort radions betydelse. Den har kraftigt bidragit till att öka intresset för symfonisk musik. Början gjordes 1933 då Frank Black för första gången dirigerade National Broadcasting Companys stråkorkester. NBC:s symfoniorkester organiserades 1937 och då Toscanini under säsongen 1937–38 dirigerade denna orkester frångick musikkritikerna sina vanor och anmälde f.f.g. konserterna på samma sätt som vanliga symfonikonserter.

AB PRESS-URKLIPP
AB SVENSKA TELEGRAMBYRÅNS
AVDELNING FÖR PRESSURKLIPP
Svenska Argus
Internationell byrå för tidningsurklipp
STOCKHOLM 1
Telefon 20 88 40 (Rikssl. 23 89 40)

Örnsköldsviks Allehanda
Folkpartiet
20 AUG 1956
T9

ÖRNSKÖLDSVIKS ALLEHANDA måndag 20 augusti

MUSIKLIVET I USA

domineras av symfoniorkestrarna

Med anledning av sitt 75-årsjubileum företar Bostons symfoniorkester i höst en europeisk turné. Den medverkar bl.a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och skall ge fyra konserter i Sovjetunionen. Ingen amerikansk orkester har tidigare besökt detta land. Även Sverige får besök och Bostonsymfonin konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. I denna artikel av H.B. Garland berättas om hur de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna från en blygsam början nått sin nuvarande prominenta ställning.

För över 45 år sedan, då Gustav Mahler nyligen hade övertagit ledningen av New York Philharmonic Society, skrev han till sin vän Bruno Walter i Wien: "Min orkester här är en typisk amerikansk orkester — trög och utan talang". Trots att han vid andra tillfällen mycket entusiastiskt uttalade sig om Bostons symfoniorkester och kallade den "ersten Ranges", så sammanfaller hans anmärkning om sina egna musiker närmare med den uppfattning om det amerikanska musiklivet som var förhärskande utanför USA omkring sekelskiftet.

Nu har kritiker och musikälskare ändrat mening. Enigheten är stor om att de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna under de senaste årtiondena har ryckt fram till en rangplats och konstnärligt nått utomordentligt hög. En musikkritiker skrev nyligen att "symfoniorkestrarna är den amerikanska musikkulturens ryggrad". Och detta är verkligen ett faktum.

Det finns nu 30 stora symfoniorkestrar i USA vars medlemmar alla är yrkesmusiker. Det finns också flera hundra mindre orkestrar som är sammansatta dels av yrkesmusiker och dels av amatörer. Därtill kommer de tusentals amatörorkestrarna vid lägre och högre skolor. Ledarna för de stora orkestrarna bär världsberömda namn: Charles Münch, Eugene Ormandy, Dimitri Mitropoulos Bruno Walter, Pierre Monteux, Erich Leinsdorf, Leopold Stokowski, Fritz Reiner, Leonard Bernstein och Vladimir Golschmann, för att nämna några.

En svår början.

Symfonimusikens historia i USA är relativt kort. De svårigheter som musiker och orkestrar hade att kämpa mot var till en början mycket stora. I Amerika fanns inga hov eller slott där en Haydn kunde vistas och inga förmögna ädlingar som kunde underhålla en Beethoven. Få filantroper eller finansiärer valda att stödja en symfoniorkester.

New York Philharmonic Society bildades emellertid redan 1842 och blev den första stora orkestern. Den följdes av New York Symphony Society 1878. (De två New-York-orkestrarna slogs tillsammans 1928.) Bostons symfoniorkester firade under säsongen 1955—56 sitt 75-årsjubileum och Chicagos symfoniorkester är 65 år. Cincinnatis orkester daterar sig tillbaka till 1895 och Philadelphia-orkestern bildades år 1900.

Symfonin spelar första fiolen.

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. Covent Garden i London, L'Opera i Paris och La Scala i Milano betraktas som överlägsna symfoniorkestrarna i dessa städer. De europeiska symfoniorkestrarnas mindre framträdande ställning kan förklaras med att de var bihang till operan, underhölls av den och inte kunde konkurrera om allmänhetens gunst. Londons filharmoniker, som bildades 1813, gav aldrig mer än 10 konserter per säsong förrän på 1930-talet.

I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit St. Louis, Los Angeles, Minneapolis och San Francisco, för att räkna upp några, har orkestrar bestående av över 100 musiker. Men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap. Det finns dock över 90 operaensembler i landet, som antingen turnerar eller ger föreställningar bara på sommaren.

Bostonsäsong med 220 konserter.

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Sergej Koussevitskij var ledare för Bostonorkestern i 25 år, från 1924 till 1949. Under hans ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europaturnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter. Varje sommar dirigerar Münch också vid Berkshire-festivalen i Tanglewood, Massachusetts. Där samlas varje år över 100.000 åhörare och 400 musikstuderande från hela världen deltar i undervisningen vid orkesterns sommarskola Berkshire Music Center.

Den första utlandsturné som företogs av någon amerikansk symfoniorkester gjordes 1920 av New Yorks symfonisällskap. Under sin mer än 100-åriga tillvaro har New Yorks filharmoniker under kortare eller längre tid letts av en rad världsberömda dirigenter, bland dem Igor Stravinsky, Gustav Mahler, Bruno Walter, Richard Strauss, John Barbirolli och Arturo Toscanini. Under senare år har Leopold Stokowski, George Szell, Guido Cantelli och Dimitri Mitropoulos framträtt på podiet i Carnegie Hall.

Först musik på tivoli.

Philadelphia-orkestern, som ifjol sommar gjorde en utomordentligt framgångsrik turné i Europa, räknar sitt ursprung från en sommaorkester som på 1890-talet konserterade på ett nöjesfält i staden. Dess ledare, den tyske musikern Fritz Scheel, samlade omkring sig 85 musiker och i november år 1900 gav den nya symfoniorkestern sin debutkonsert. Scheel och Carl Pohlig lade grunden, men det var Stokowski och Ormandy förunnat att av orkestern skapa det världsberömda instrument den nu är.

I en översikt om symfonimusikens roll i det amerikanska kulturlivet får man inte glömma bort radions betydelse. Den har kraftigt bidragit till att öka intresset för symfonisk musik. Början gjordes 1933 då Frank Black för första gången dirigerade National Broadcasting Companys stråkorkester. NBC:s symfoniorkester organiserades 1937 och då Toscanini under säsongen 1937—38 dirigerade denna orkester frångick musikkritikerna sina vanor och anmälde f.f.g. konserterna på samma sätt som vanliga offentliga symfonikonserter.

---

terlig gärning och näen sjukdom, som bara
ryta.
r i Leipzig begav sig
ris för att söka full-tion. Han fick åtskill-n valde att sätta upp ter, Paris filharmoni-en lät inte vänta på blev snart känd för nden av avantgardis-för lysande tolkningar nella orkesterstycken ka europeiska huvud hans rykte även utan-

★

efter sin debut som mndes Münch till ämsta och mest efterntpost, som ledare för ncerts och professuren edare vid Pariskonserfattning som han uppe-7-45. Efter krigsslutet rad gästengagement i av världen, däribland ramgångsrika i Boston, att han senare perma-orkestern.
som orkesterledare och ng om dirigentens roll berättat i sin bok "ja
. Han skriver: "At konsert innebär en oer-ning av nervös energi.
tar i sina memoarer att tt framförande av sin

★

ünch ambition att bli
brukar berätta om hur blev en gång i sin er en konsert i hem-han hörde någon bland vorda orkestern, men ndra om man verkligen dirigenten med. Att vaär inte ett yrke, utan

overtyr "Frances-Juges" alldeles utmattad sträckte ut sig över pukorna och snyftade. Detta är ingenting att le åt. Han hade dirigerat ett av sina egna verk, han hade förbrukat en del av sin själ. Varje uttolkare av musik måste vara i stånd till en sådan fullständig bikt. Är han inte det, då måste han byta yrke".

Östersunds Posten
767
Moderat
1 SEP 1956

Lördag 1 sept. 1956

Bostons symfoniorkester kommer till Sverige

Charles-Bostonsymfonien konserterar på flodens strand för 20.000 människor.

Med anledning av sitt 75-års-jubileum företar Bostons symfoniorkester i höst en europeisk turné. Den medverkar bl. a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och skall ge fyra konserter i Sovjetunionen. Ingen amerikansk orkester har tidigare besökt detta land. Även Sverige får besök och Bostonsymfonin konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. I denna artikel berättas om hur de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna från en blygsam början nått sin nuvarande prominenta ställning.

För över 45 år sedan, då Gustav Mahler nyligen hade övertagit ledningen av New York Philharmonic Society, skrev han till sin vän Bruno Walter i Wien: "Min orkester här är en typisk amerikansk orkester — trög och utan talang". Trots att han vid andra tillfällen mycket entusiastiskt uttalade sig om Bostons symfoniorkester och kallade den "ersten Ranges", så sammanfaller hans anmärkning om sina egna musiker närmare med den uppfattning om det amerikanska musiklivet som var förhärskande utanför USA omkring sekelskiftet.

Nu har kritiker och musikälskare ändrat mening. Enigheten är stor om att de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna under de senaste årtiondena har ryckt fram till en rangplats och konstnärligt nått utomordentligt högt. En musikkritiker skrev nyligen att "symfoniorkestrarna är den amerikanska musikkulturens ryggrad". Och detta är verkligen ett faktum.

Det finns nu 30 stora symfoniorkestrar i USA vars medlemmar alla är yrkesmusiker. Det finns också flera hundra mindre orkestrar som är sammansatta dels av yrkesmusiker och dels av amatörer. Därtill kommer de tusentals amatörorkestrarna vid lägre och högre skolor. Ledarna för de stora orkestrarna bär världsberömda namn: Charles Münch, Eugene Ormandy, Dimitri Mitropoulos, Bruno Walter Pierre Monteux, Erich Leinsdorf, Leopold Stokowski, Fritz Reiner, Leonard Bernstein och Vladimir Golschmann, för att nämna några.

Symfonomusikens historia i USA är relativt kort. De svårigheter som musiker och orkestrar hade att kämpa mot var till en början mycket stora. I Amerika fanns inga hov eller slott där en Haydn kunde vistas och inga förmögna ädlingar som kunde underhålla en Beethoven. Få filantroper eller finansiärer valde att stödja en symfoniorkester.

New York Philharmonic Society bildades emellertid redan 1842 och blev den första stora orkestern. Den följdes av New York Symphony Society 1878. (De två New York-orkestrarna slogs tillsammans 1928). Bostons symfoniorkester firade under säsongen 1955—56 sitt 75-årsjubileum och Chicagos symfoniorkester är 65 år. Cincinnatis orkester daterar sig tillbaka till 1895 och Philadelpia-orkestern bildades år 1900.

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. Covent Garden i London, L'Opera i Paris och La Scala i Milano betraktas som överlägsna symfoniorkestrarna i dessa städer. De europeiska symfoniorkestrarnas mindre framträdande ställning kan förklaras med att de var bihang till operan, underhölls av den och inte kunde konkurrera om allmänhetens gunst. Londons filharmoniker, som bildades 1813, gav aldrig mer än 10 konserter per säsong förrän på 1930-talet.

I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington Chicago Cliveland, Detroit St. Louis, Los Angeles, Minneapolis och San Francisco, för att räkna upp några har orkestrar bestående av över 100 musiker. Men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap. Det finns dock över 90 operaensembler i landet, som antingen turnerar eller ger föreställningar bara på sommaren.

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Sergej Koussevitskij var ledare för Bostonorkestern i 25 år, från 1924 till 1949. Under hans ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europaturnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter. Varje sommar dirigerar Münch också vid Berkshire-festivalen i Tanglewood, Massachusetts. Där samlas varje år över 100.000 åhörare och 400 musikstuderande från hela världen deltar i undervisningen vid orkesterns sommarskola Berkshire Music Center.

[9

Den första utlandsturné som företogs av någon amerikansk symfoniorkester gjordes 1920 av New Yorks symfonisällskap. Under sin mer än 100-åriga tillvaro har New Yorks filharmoniker under kortare eller längre tid letts av en rad världsberömda dirigenter, bland dem Igor Stravinsky, Gustav Mahler, Bruno Walter Richard Strauss John Barbirolli och Arturo Toscanini. Under senare år har Leopold Stokowski, George Szell, Guido Cantelli och Dimitri Mitropoulos framträtt på podiet i Carnegie Hall.

Philadelphia-orkestern, som ifjol sommar gjorde en utomordentligt framgångsrik turné i Europa, räknar sitt ursprung från en sommarorkester som på 1890-talet konserterade på ett nöjesfält i staden. Dess ledare, den tyske musikern Fritz Scheel, samlade omkring sig 85 musiker och i november år 1900 gav den nya symfoniorkestern sin debutkonsert. Scheel och Carl Pohling lade grunden, men det var Stokowski och Ormandy förunnat att av orkestern skapa det världsberömda instrument den nu är.

I en översikt om symfonimusikens roll i det amerikanska kulturlivet får man inte glömma bort radions betydelse. Den har kraftigt bidragit till att öka intresset för symfonisk musik. Början gjordes 1933 då Frank Black för första gången dirigerade National Broadcasting Companys stråkorkester. NBC:s symfoniorkester organiserades 1937 och då Toscanini under säsongen 1937—38 dirigerade denna orkester frångick musikkritikerna sina vanor och anmälde för första gången konserterna på samma sätt som vanliga offentliga symfoniorkestrar.

H. B. Carland

INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU

Norrbottens Kuriren
Luleå
767
Moderat
28 AUG 1956

NORRBOTTENS-KURIREN Tisdagen den 28 Augusti 1956

Kultur Aktuellt

Bostonsymfoniens ledare

Bostons symfoniorkester konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. Orkestern befinner sig på en Europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum. Den skall medverka bl.a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och ge konserter även i Oslo, Köpenhamn och Helsingfors. Två konserter vardera i Moskva och Leningrad står också på programmet. Bostonsymfonins ledare är sedan 1949 Charles Münch, som tidigare aldrig besökt Sverige. I denna artikel berättas om Münchs musikaliska karriär.

Av

Norman Smith

Den kände amerikanske kompositören och kritikern Virgil Thompson skrev 1934, efter en rundresa i Europa, att han i Paris hade funnit en orkesterledare som en dag borde kunna efterträda Sergej Koussevitskij som ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester. Det tog 15 år innan Thompsons spådom gick i uppfyllelse, men då Koussevitskij 1949 steg ner från dirigentpallen blev Charles Münch hans efterträdare.

Trots att Münch bara två år tidigare hade bytt ut konsertmästarens violin i den berömda Gewandhaus orkestern i Leipzig mot taktpinnen i Paris visade han alltså redan 1934 att han besatt många av de egenskaper som hade givit Koussevitskij hans världsrykte. Han var väl förtrogen med hela den traditionella repertoaren, gick i bräschen för den moderna musiken och utstrålade den odefinierbara personliga magnetism som skiljer en stor dirigent från en medelmåtta.

Münch uppgift i Boston var långtifrån lätt. Visserligen skulle han överta en orkester som enligt samstämmiga vittnesmål var bland de yppersta i världen, men Koussevitskij hade varit ledare för Bostonsymfonin i ett kvartsekel och den var i så hög grad hans verk att identifikationen nästan var fullständig. Dessutom hade Koussevitskij i det traditionstrogna Boston närmast blivit en institution, lika fast rotad i Bostonbornas medvetande som stadens minnesmärken från det amerikanska frihetskriget.

Men också musiktraditionerna i Boston har djupa rötter. En av traditionerna är att på allt sätt bistå symfoniorkesterns ledare i hans arbete och att ge honom största möjliga frihet. Detta har skett ända sedan den musikälskande Henry Lee Higginson, som härstammade från en av New Englands köpmansläkter, bildade orkestern 1881 och sedan varje år fram till 1919 både bokstavligt och bildlikt talat stod för fiolerna.

★

Under de sex år Münch lett orkestern har han visat sig vara en värdig efterträdare till Koussevitskij. Orkestern låter annorlunda under Münch än under företrädaren, men skillnaden är som mellan en målning av Rembrandt och en av Tizian, av vilken ingendera är ett mindre mästerverk därför att de är utförda i olika stilar.

Bostonsymfonin fortsätter att framföra och introducera ny och obekant musik. Som ett led i firandet av sitt 75-årsjubileum har orkestern presenterat nya verk av 15 internationellt kända europeiska och amerikanska kompositörer, däribland Benjamin Britten och Darius Milhaud från Europa och Aaron Copland och Howard Hanson från USA. Orkestern firade 50-årsjubileet på samma sätt och då uppfördes f.f.g. sådana verk som Stravinskijs Psalmsymfoni, Hindemiths konsert för stråkar och blåsare och Aaron Coplands symfoniska ode.

Münch, som fyller 65 år den 26 sept., dagen efter den sista konserten under europaturnén, är född i Strasbourg, där hans far var kantor. Han fick sin första musikaliska utbildning vid musikkonservatoriet i hemstaden, som nu förestås av hans bror Fritz. Efter ytterligare studier i Paris och militärtjänst under första världskriget återvände Münch till Strasbourg som konsertmästare i stadens orkester och tjänstgjorde samtidigt som lärare vid konservatoriet. Senare flyttade han till Leipzig som konsertmästare i Gewandhaus-orkestern under Wilhelm Furtwängler.

★

Det var Münch ambition att bli dirigent. Han brukar berätta om hur upprörd han blev en gång i sin ungdom efter en konsert i hemstaden, då han hörde någon bland publiken lovorda orkestern, men samtidigt undra om man verkligen behövde ha dirigenten med. Att vara dirigent är inte ett yrke, utan ett heligt kall, säger Münch, det är ibland en prästerlig gärning och nästan en feber, en sjukdom, som bara döden kan avbryta.

Efter åtta år i Leipzig begav sig Münch till Paris för att söka fullfölja sin ambition. Han fick åtskilliga anbud, men valde att sätta upp en egen orkester, Paris filharmoniker. Framgången lät inte vänta på sig och han blev snart känd för sina framföranden av avantgardistisk musik och för lysande tolkningar av traditionella orkesterstycken. Gästspel i olika europeiska huvudstäder spred hans rykte även utanför Frankrike.

★

Bara fem år efter sin debut som dirigent utnämndes Münch till Frankrikes främsta och mest eftertraktade dirigentpost, som ledare för Société des Concerts och professuren som orkesterledare vid Pariskonservatoriet, en befattning som han uppehöll från 1937-45. Efter krigsslutet tog han en rad gästengagement i olika delar av världen, däribland två mycket framgångsrika i Boston, som ledde till att han senare permanent knöts till orkestern.

Om sitt liv som orkesterledare och sin uppfattning om dirigentens roll har Münch berättat i sin bok "jag är dirigent". Han skriver: "Att dirigera en konsert innebär en oerhörd förbrukning av nervös energi. Berlioz berättar i sina memoarer att han efter ett framförande av sin overtyr "Frances-Juges" alldeles utmattad sträckte ut sig över pukorna och snyftade. Detta är ingenting att le åt. Han hade dirigerat ett av sina egna verk, han hade förbrukat en del av sin själ. Varje uttolkare av musik måste vara i stånd till en sådan fullständig bikt. Är han inte det, då måste han byta yrke".

CUTTING BUREAU

Östersunds Posten
767
Moderat
1 SEP 1956

Lördag 1 sept. 1956

Bostons symfoniorkester kommer till Sverige

Charles-Bostonsymfonien konserterar på flodens strand för 20.000 människor.

Med anledning av sitt 75-års-jubileum företar Bostons symfoniorkester i höst en europeisk turné. Den medverkar bl. a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och skall ge fyra konserter i Sovjetunionen. Ingen amerikansk orkester har tidigare besökt detta land. Även Sverige får besök och Bostonsymfonin konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. I denna artikel berättas om hur de amerikanska symfoniorkestrarna från en blygsam början nått sin nuvarande eminenta ställning.

över 45 år sedan, då Gustav er nyligen hade övertagit av New York Philharty, skrev han till sin Walter i Wien: "Min en typisk ameri- — trög och utan han vid andra tillsiastiskt uttalasymfoniorkes- "ersten Ran- hans an- musiker ning om som var kring are r kämpa mot var till en början mycket stora. I Amerika fanns inga hov eller slott där en Haydn kunde vistas och inga förmögna ädlingar som kunde underhålla en Beethoven. Få filantroper eller finansiärer valde att stödja en symfoniorkester.

New York Philharmonic Society bildades emellertid redan 1842 och blev den första stora orkestern. Den följdes av New York Symphony Society 1878. (De två New York-orkestrarna slogs tillsammans 1928). Bostons symfoniorkester firade under säsongen 1955—56 sitt 75-årsjubileum och Chicagos symfoniorkester är 65 år. Cincinnatis orkester daterar sig tillbaka till 1895 och Philadelpia-orkestern bildades år 1900.

en ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. visserligen uppbyggda efter mönster men är ändå mera för Amerika än någon an- v seriös musik. I inget har symfoniorkestern land har operan alla rummet. Ingen Tyskland eller n nog att anse klass som Berlin elörhållan- annien, Garch as som orkestrarna i europeiska symmindre framträning kan förklaras med var bihang till operan, unhölls av den och inte kunde konkurrera om allmänhetens gunst. Londons filharmoniker, som bildades 1813, gav aldrig mer än 10 konserter per säsong förrän på 1930-talet.

I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington Chicago Cliveland, Detroit St. Louis, Los Angeles, Minneapolis och San Francisco, för att räkna upp några har orkestrar bestående av över 100 musiker. Men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap. Det finns dock över 90 operaensembler i landet, som antingen turnerar eller ger föreställningar bara på sommaren.

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Sergej Koussevitskij var ledare för Bostonorkestern i 25 år, från 1924 till 1949. Under hans ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europaturnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter. Varje sommar dirigerar Münch också vid Berkshire-festivalen i Tanglewood, Massachusetts. Där samlas varje år över 100.000 åhörare och 400 musikstuderande från hela världen deltar i undervisningen vid orkesterns sommarskola Berkshire Music Center.

Den första utlandsturné som företogs av någon amerikansk symfoniorkester gjordes 1920 av New Yorks symfonisällskap. Under sin mer än 100-åriga tillvaro har New Yorks filharmoniker under kortare eller längre tid letts av en rad världsberömda dirigenter, bland dem Igor Stravinsky, Gustav Mahler, Bruno Walter Richard Strauss John Barbirolli och Arturo Toscanini. Under senare år har Leopold Stokowski, George Szell, Guido Cantelli och Dimitri Mitropoulos framträtt på podiet i Carnegie Hall.

Philadelphia-orkestern, som ifjol sommar gjorde en utomordentligt framgångsrik turné i Europa, räknar sitt ursprung från en sommarorkester som på 1890-talet konserterade på ett nöjesfält i staden. Dess ledare, den tyske musikern Fritz Scheel, samlade omkring sig 85 musiker och i november år 1900 gav den nya symfoniorkestern sin debutkonsert. Scheel och Carl Pohling lade grunden, men det var Stokowski och Ormandy förunnat att av orkestern skapa det världsberömda instrument den nu är.

I en översikt om symfonimusikens roll i det amerikanska kulturlivet får man inte glömma bort radions betydelse. Den har kraftigt bidragit till att öka intresset för symfonisk musik. Början gjordes 1933 då Frank Black för första gången dirigerade National Broadcasting Companys stråkorkester. NBC:s symfoniorkester organiserades 1937 och då Toscanini under säsongen 1937—38 dirigerade denna orkester frångick musikkritikerna sina vanor och anmälde för första gången konserterna på samma sätt som vanliga offentliga symfoniorkestrar. H. B. Carland

[9

STOCKHOLMS-TIDNINGEN Tisdagen den 4 Sept. 1956

I rampljuset

FYRA NYA FILMER

Utanför lagen

(Aveny)

Amerikansk polis på jakt efter en liga som med hjälp av skumma handelsmetoder prånglar ut falska dollarsedlar. Historien bär här och var en viss dokumentär prägel och det må nu vara hänt, men det myckna pratandet i filmens början och de småsentimentala

Myggan — namnlös spion

(Lyran, Göta Lejon)

En tysk film om litet av varje. Spioneri, kärlek, svartsjuka, tacksamhet och skuld är pusselbitarna i historien om en kvinnlig spion, som börjar som privatdetektiv åt en svartsjuk äkta man (Karrari) och slutar som utforskare av sin uppdragsgivares skumma vapenaffärer. Hennes ställning försvåras av att hon en gång räddats till livet av Karrari och att hon, yrkesspionen för vilken kärlek inte får existera, blir förälskad i den polisman, som är efter Karraris skalp.

Bitarna är tillyxade av en manusförfattare, som grundligt undgår att väcka intresse och regissören som plockar i pusslet har mycket tunga händer. Det enda som fängslar är Gustav Knuth i rollen som Karrari. Stedt

Gangsterfällan

(Strand, Cora)

När publiken kom ut på gatan visslade den Ri-Fi-Fi och det låg något i det, ty beröringspunkterna är starka även om "Gangsterfällan" inte kommer upp i samma klass som föregångaren.

Filmen är ändå en hyfsad men från produkt. Det sparas inte på krutet och tjutande bildäck är det gott om, men det gör inte så mycket, ty bakom puffrorna, krutröken och liken glimmar det då och då till av fin fransk filmhumor. Rollbesättningen — Henri Vidal dantagen — kunde ha varit tre. Det var minst sagt pin- att möta gamle Erich von eim i hans snöpliga scener. unde ha besparats de få met-

Engelbrekt.

Boston Symphony orchestra

har i dessa spalter presenterats ingående, dels av mig i onsdags, dels genom en artikel i senaste söndagsnumret. Det är begripligt, att det var med en god portion av nyfikenhet som man på måndagen gick till Konserthuset för att erfara, hur orkestern och dirigenten, Charles Munch, motsvarade sina respektive rykten.

Sedan den tid då Boston-orkesterns musiker lär ha rekryterats från speciella europeiska länder för speciella stämmor, har orkesterkulturen i USA berikats i så hög grad, kvalitativt såväl som kvantitativt, att man nu för tiden knappast behöver "gå över ån efter vatten", allra helst som en ström av musiker sedan länge gått "över pölen" till USA. Orkesterkulturen hos den månghövdade skaran måste därför betecknas såsom en i huvudsak amerikansk produkt.

Och den produkten är fin. I Beethovens "Eroica" fick man ett osedvanligt intryck av homogenitet och fulltonighet i klangen. Trumpeterna och pukan var väl kanske ibland något för överväldigande, men de kraftiga hornpassen i finalen verkade enbart välgörande. Munchs eldiga temperament satte mycket påtagligt sin prägel på det hela: yttersatserna livliga och "sorgmarschen" andades mera kraft än tragik.

Publiken kunde varit livligare, men knappast mera spontant entusiastisk.

Efter pausen kom en symfoni nr 6 av en amerikan, Walter Piston (1894), vilket verk är skrivet för Bostonorkestern och tillägnat dess tidigare ledare, Koussevitzky.

Symfonin är moderat modärn och tager väl vara på orkesterns klangresurser; det blev intrycket av första satsen. Den andra är ett virtuost scherzo, och det behövs sannerligen en ensemble av Bostonorkesterns kvalitet för att kunna klara dess blixtsnabba passagespel. Efter den satsens spirituella slut hörde man ett beundrande sus i publiken. Tredje satsens cantabla melodik är mera naturlig än första satsens, och avslutningen poetisk. Finalen gör ett livligt och festligt intryck. Men den positiva behållningen av denna symfoni, som för resten ligger bra för Munchs kraftnatur, är det briljanta orkesterfyrverkeriet i scherzosatsen. Och framförallt det hypervirtuosa sätt, på vilket orkestern klarade detsamma.

I Ravels "Daphnis och Cloë" fick man till slut verkligen erfara vilket klangraffinemang denna orkester kan prestera. Allt har klangcharm: de enstaka blåsarsolisterna med den mirakulösa kvinnliga flöjtisten Doriot Anthony Dwyer i spetsen, de smärre ensemblerna av olika instrument, den stora stråkstyrkan, den mäktiga mässingkören. Det blev i alla fall, trots all klanglig glans, Charles Munchs eldsjäl, som gjorde detta Ravels mästerliga balettfragment till en upplevelse av alldeles särskilt slag. Jag har hört stycket förut och tyckt det vara ganska indifferent. I Munchs tolkning blev det en vidunderlig sak.

Publiken jublade, prof. Theorell och Munch harangerade varandra (men intet hördes). Det kom massor av blommor, däribland en stor bukett röda rosor till den storartade flöjtistdamen.

Och så gick man, en stark upplevelse rikare.

Kurt Atterberg

MUSIK

Bostons symfoniorkester

fyller i år sjuttifem och gör med anledning därav en kolossal raid genom Europa. Den började på Irland, fortsatte i Edinburgh, Köpenhamn och Oslo och inträffade på måndagen i Stockholm. Sedan går färden vidare till Finland, Ryssland, Tjeckoslovakien, Österrike, Västtyskland, Schweiz, Frankrike och England.

Vi hade nog tur som fick höra orkestern innan den hann avverka alltför många storstäder; konsertresor av denna typ är enormt ansträngande i flera avseenden och kan inte hela tiden bjuda på samma konstnärliga kvalitet. Nu var orkesterklangen fortfarande så fräsch

Två av orkestermedlemmarna är svenskar: Stanley Benson (till vänster), som spelar 1:a violin, och Earl Hedberg, viola.

som vi känner den från alla de berömda grammofoninspelningarna — fast så där enastående märklig tyckte jag knappast att den verkade. Men man får ju ha måttliga pretentioner, och Bostonsymfonikerna utgör i alla fall en av världens bästa orkestrar, det kan inte förnekas. Ryss-amerikanen Sergej Kussevitskij, dirigent åren 1924—1949, hjälpte till att skapa orkesterns världsrykte. Han efterträddes av Charles Munch (eller Münch, som han egentligen heter, eftersom hans far var elsassare), och under hans ledning gick måndagskvällens konsert.

Kussevitskij var specialist på impressionistiska klangflöden, och man tyckte sig också i Ravels andra svit ur musiken till baletten "Daphnis och Chloë" märka hur hans ande svävade över partituret. Det blev ibland nästan för mycket av sus och brus och sjudande. Den avslutande dansen hade mer karaktär av kraftprestation än av koreografiskt artisteri.

Att resa till Europa och spela Beethovens "Eroica" förefaller kanske lite onödigt. Den utfördes dock mycket bra, men första satsens allegro con brio ledde alltför mycket tanken till Sousa. Att Munch på programmet hade tagit upp Walter Pistons sjätte symfoni var synnerligen glädjande. Han är ju en av Förenta staternas mest omtalade tonsättare och har särskilt varit föremål för Bostonorkesterns uppmärksamhet. Om symfonin hade visat intressantare drag, så hade det naturligtvis varit bra. Nu frapperades man egentligen bara av scherzot, som verkligen var mycket kvickt.

Publiken i Stora konserthussalen visade sin tacksamhet med starka applåder, och Konsertföreningen uppvaktade den imponerande Charles Munch och hans musiker med blomster.

C B—g

SVENSKA DAG

Teater, mus

Boston Symp

Höstens konsertsäsong kunde knap past ha fått en flottare spelöppnin Boston Symphony Orchestra hitflug genom Konsertbolagets och The Ameri can National Theatre and Academy försorg, ledd av Charles Munch o försedd med jättestora gladioluskvast längs podierampen! Feststämningen öv de prominenta gästernas konsert måndagskvällen var säkrad från förs början, fast höga biljettpriser och d tum i tidigaste laget grusade arrang rernas förhoppningar om fullsatt s long. Den relativt talrika publik so fanns sörjde i alla händelser för präl tiga ovationer.

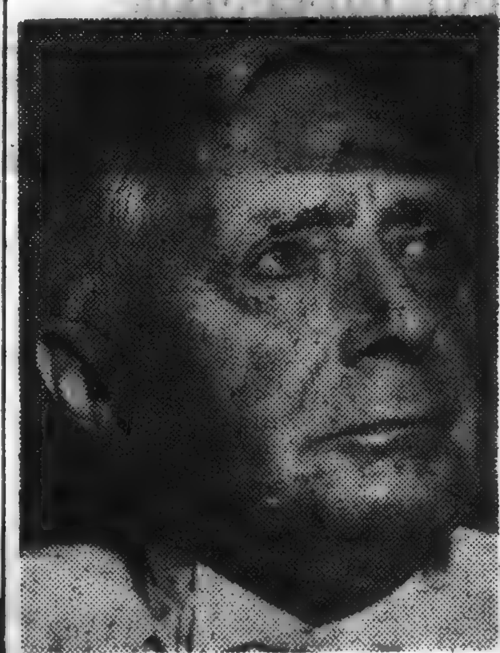
Den berömda orkestern — grunda 1881 av en mr Higginson — har un der sitt sjuttiofemåriga tillvaro och un der dirigenter som Nikisch och Koussevitskij gått från klarhet till klarhet. Såsom envar kunnat konstatera på talrika grammofoninspelningar. Knivskarp konkurrens om platserna, hårda anställningsvillkor och ansvaret för växande världsrykte har gjort orkestern till något så paradoxalt som en samling virtuoser, trimmad till perfekt disciplin. I viss mån har väl dess ideal och effektivitet också formats under trycket av den amerikanska publikens anspråk. Resultatet är i många hänseenden kolossalt imponerande, men är inte alldeles utan avigsidor.

Orkesterns styrka är det Svåra och det Artistiska. Det partitur är väl inte skrivet, som inte Bostons symfoniorkester skulle klara på ett par-tre repetitioner. Nu kom musikerna direkt från flygmaskiner och inledde med att spela Beethovens "Eroica" så prickfritt och [illegible] som om det vore en barnlek. Det gick som ett vigt [illegible] och kunde säkert spelas separat (fast av rätt få orkestrar). Vad den (svagaste) långsamma satsen beträffar är det enbart längden som står i rimlig proportion till tonsättarens ambitioner.

Kvällens höjdpunkt blev emellertid inte oväntat Ravels "Daphnis et Chloe" nr 2. Här blev orkesterpodiet som en kokande trollgryta full av lysande färgämnen som ständigt ingick nya skiftande, skimrande föreningar. Munch rörde om med små, osvikligt säkra rörelser och drev fram eruptionerna med en häxmästarens besvärjande kraft. Här fick man definitivt synen förvänd — vem frågade efter vad som fanns under inför denna bländande yta? Som uppvisning i kollektivt — närmare hundrahövdat — artisteri stod detta slutnummer på toppen av vad som för närvarande står i mänsklig förmåga.

I. B—n.

"Dirigentens yrke det mest krävande"



Charles Munch.

— Att vara dirigent är ett heligt kall, jag känner mig stundom som en präst, säger Charles Munch, ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester.

I sin nyligen utkomna bok "I am a conductor" utvecklar han temat närmare. Inget yrke är så krävande som dirigentens. Femton års arbete och studier räcker inte för att göra en dirigent av en person som saknar den rätta inre hänförelsen och den magnetism som kan förhäxa både musikerna och publiken. Uttalandet visar vad Charles Munch fordrar av sig själv.

Han är fransman från början, uppväxt i Strassburg. Bachs musik omgav honom från barnsben. Både hans far och en farbror till honom dirigerade Bach i var sin kyrka i var sin stad. Själv hade Munch lett fyra olika orkestrar i Paris innan han 1949 kallades till Förenta staterna för att efterträda den legendariske Sergej Kussevitskij som dirigent för Bostons symfoniorkester, den äldsta i Amerika, grundad av Henry Lee Higginson 1881 med Europas bästa orkestrar som förebilder.

*

Monsieur Topaze

Göteborgs Posten

Liberal

7767

5 SEP 1956

"Att vara dirigent är ej ett yrke – det är ett heligt kall!"

Bostons symfoniorkester konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. Orkestern befinner sig på en europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 70-årsjubileum. Den skall medverka bl. a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och ge konserter även i Oslo, Köpenhamn och Helsingfors. Två konserter vardera i Moskva och Leningrad står också på programmet. Bostonsymfonins ledare är sedan 1949 Charles Münch, som tidigare aldrig besökt Sverige. I denna artikel berättas om Münchs musikaliska karriär.

Den kände amerikanske kompositören och kritikern Virgil Thompson skrev 1934, efter en rundresa i Europa, att han i Paris hade funnit en orkesterledare som en dag borde kunna efterträda Sergej Koussevitskij som ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester. Det tog 15 år innan Thompsons spådom gick i uppfyllelse, men då Koussevitskij 1949 steg ner från dirigentpallen blev Charles Münch hans efterträdare.

Trots att Münch bara två år tidigare hade bytt ut konsertmästarens violin i den berömda Gewandhaus-orkestern i Leipzig mot taktpinnen i Paris visade han alltså redan 1934 att han besatt många av de egenskaper som hade givit Koussevitskij hans världsrykte. Han var väl förtrogen med hela den traditionella repertoaren, gick i bräschen för den moderna musiken och utstrålade den odefinierbara personliga magnetism som skiljer en stor dirigent från en medelmåtta.

Münchs uppgift i Boston var långtifrån lätt. Visserligen skulle han överta en orkester som enligt samstämmiga vittnesmål var bland de yppersta i världen, men Koussevitskij hade varit ledare för Bostonsymfonin i ett kvartssekel och den var i så hög grad hans verk att identifikationen nästan var fullständig. Dessutom hade Koussevitskij i det traditionstrogna Boston närmast blivit en institution, lika fast rotad i bostonbornas medvetande som stadens minnesmärken från det amerikanska frihetskriget.

Men också musiktraditionerna i Boston har djupa rötter. En av traditionerna är att på allt sätt bistå symfoniorkesterns ledare i hans arbete och att ge honom största möjliga frihet. Detta har skett ända sedan den musikälskande Henry Lee Higginson, som härstammade från en av New Englands köpmansläkter, bildade orkestern 1881 och sedan varje år fram till 1919 både bokstavligt och bildligt talat stod för fiolerna.

Under de sex år Münch lett orkestern har han visat sig vara en värdig efterträdare till Koussevitskij. Orkestern låter annorlunda under Münch är under företrädaren, men skillnaden är som mellan en målning av Rembrandt och en av Tizian, av vilken ingendera är ett mindre mästerverk därför att de är utförda i olika stilar.

Bostonsymfonin fortsätter att framföra och introducera ny och obekant musik. Som ett led i firandet av sitt 70-årsjubileum har orkestern presenterat nya verk av 15 internationellt kända europeiska och amerikanska kompositörer, däribland Benjamin Britten och Darius Milhaud från Europa och Aaron Copland och Howard Hanson från USA. Orkestern firade 50-årsjubileum på samma sätt och då uppfördes f. f. g. sådana verk som Stravinskijs Psalmsymfoni, Hindemiths konsert för stråkar och blåsare och Aaron Coplands symfoniska ode.

Münch, som fyller 65 år den 26 sept., dagen efter den sista konserten under europaturnén, är född i Strasbourg, där hans far var kantor. Han fick sin första musikaliska utbildning vid musikkonservatoriet i hemstaden, som nu förestås av hans bror Fritz. Efter ytterligare studier i Paris och militärtjänst under första världskriget återvände Münch till Strasbourg som konsertmästare i stadens orkester och tjänstgjorde samtidigt som lärare vid konservatoriet. Senare flyttade han till Leipzig som konsertmästare i Gewandhaus-orkester under Wilhelm Fürtwängler.

Det var Münchs ambition att bli dirigent. Han brukar berätta om hur upprörd han blev en gång i sin ungdom efter en konsert i hemstaden, då han hörde någon bland publiken lovorda orkestern, men samtidigt undra om man verkligen behövde ha dirigenten med. Att vara dirigent är inte ett yrke, utan ett heligt kall, säger Münch, det är ibland en prästerlig gärning och nästan en feber, en sjukdom, som bara döden kan avbryta.

Efter åtta år i Leipzig begav sig Münch till Paris för att söka fullfölja sin ambition. Han fick åtskilliga anbud, men valde att sätta upp en egen orkester, Paris filharmoniker. Framgången lät inte vänta på sig och han blev snart känd för sina framföranden av avantgardistisk musik och för lysande tolkningar av traditionella orkesterstycken. Gästspel i olika europeiska huvudstäder spred hans rykte även utanför Frankrike.

Bara fem år efter sin debut som dirigent utnämndes Münch till Frankrikes främsta och mest eftertraktade dirigentpost, som ledare för Société des Concerts och professuren som orkesterledare vid Paris-konservatoriet, en befattning som han uppehöll åren 1937—45. Efter krigsslutet tog han en rad gästengagement i olika delar av världen, däribland två mycket framgångsrika i Boston, som ledde till att han senare permanent knöts till orkestern.

Om sitt liv som orkesterledare och sin uppfattning om dirigentens roll har Münch berättat i sin bok »Jag är dirigent».Han skriver: »Att dirigera en konsert innebär en oerhörd förbrukning av nervös energi. Berlioz berättar i sina memoarer att han efter ett framförande av sin ouvertyr Francs-Juges alldeles utmattad sträckte ut sig över pukorna och snyftade. Detta är ingenting att le åt. Han hade dirigerat ett av sina egna verk, han hade förbrukat en del av sin själ. Varje uttolkare av musik måste vara i stånd till en sådan fullständig bikt. Är han inte det, då måste han byta yrke.»

Norman Smith.

EN TIDNINGEN

Konsertsäsongens upptakt

Sept. 4

blev [illegible] bländande. The Boston Symphony Orchestra gästade oss på måndagen och inledde därmed konserternas rad denna termin, och det var en inledning som det som hädanefter kommer få svårt att följa upp. Sedan länge har bostonorkestern rykte om sig att vara en av USA:s och världens främsta — den har haft dirigenter som Arthur Nikisch och Karl Muck, som hörde till grundläggarna av dess standard, och Serge Koussevitzky, som stabiliserade den. Nu leds den av Charles Munch, en bland de största av de stora orkesterledarna, och något mera perfekt och svindlande skicklighet i orkesterspel är det bostonorkestern presterade torde inte stå att få.

Det är nästan alltför perfekt. Åtminstone blev detta intrycket av återgivandet av Beethovens Eroicasymfoni: ett väloljat, absolut störningsfritt spel, en effektfull planering av uppläggningen av verket och ett prickfritt realiserande av planen in i minsta detalj, ett spel med snudd på det övermänskliga och på det omänskliga. Det blev en uppvisning mer än en tolkning, och den patetiske, med känslor och tankar brottande Beethoven, som en gång skrev verket, var ganska långt borta.

Samma fantastiska virtuositet kännetecknade framförandet av Walter Pistons sjätte symfoni och Ravels Daphnis och Chloe, men där var det mera berättigat, [illegible] den kolossala skickligheten nödvändig. Utan den hade det amerikanska verket [illegible], blekt och jämligen intetsägande [illegible] ett strålande [illegible] av [illegible] och påpasslighet. Och Ravels "symfoniska fragment" blev en klangfest, en orgie, ett fyrverkeri, och man charmades, förleddes och hypnotiserades oemotståndligt.

F. H. T.

STOCKHOLMS-TIDNINGEN Tisdagen den 4 Sept. 1956

I rampljuset

FYRA NYA FILMER

Utanför lagen

(Aveny)

Amerikansk polis på jakt efter en liga som med hjälp av skumma handelsmetoder prånglar ut falska dollarsedlar. Historien bär här och var en viss dokumentär prägel och det må nu vara hänt, men det myckna pratandet i filmens början och de småsentimentala

Myggan — namnlös spion

(Lyran, Göta Lejon)

En tysk film om litet av varje. Spioneri, kärlek, svartsjuka, tacksamhet och skuld är pusselbitarna i historien om en kvinnlig spion, som börjar som privatdetektiv åt en svartsjuk äkta man (Karrari) och slutar som utforskare av sin uppdragsgivares skumma vapenaffärer. Hennes ställning försvåras av att hon en gång räddat livet av Karrari och att hon yrkesspion, för vilken kärlek inte får existera, blir förälskad i den polisman, som är efter Karraris skalp.

Bitarna är tillyxade av en manusförfattare, som grundligt undgår att väcka intresse och regissören som plockar i pusslet har mycket tunga händer. Det enda som fängslar är Gustav Knuth i rollen som Karrari. Stedt

Gangsterfällan

(Strand, Cora)

När publiken kom ut på gatan visslade den Ri-Fi-Fi och det låg något i det, ty beröringspunkterna är starka även om "Gangsterfällan" inte kommer upp i samma klass som föregångaren.

Filmen är ändå en hyfsad menfrån produkt. Det sparas inte på krutet och tjutande bildäck är det gott om, men det gör inte så mycket, ty bakom puffrorna, krutröken och liken glimmar det då och då till av fin fransk filmhumor.

Rollbesättningen — Henri Vidal dantagen — kunde ha varit tre. Det var minst sagt pinatt möta gamle Erich von eim i hans snöpliga scener. unde ha besparats de få met-Engelbrekt.

*

MUSIK

Bostons symfoniorkester

fyller i år sjuttifem och gör med anledning därav en kolossal raid genom Europa. Den började på Irland, fortsatte i Edinburgh, Köpenhamn och Oslo och inträffade på måndagen i Stockholm. Sedan går färden vidare till Finland, Ryssland, Tjeckoslovakien, Österrike, Västtyskland, Schweiz, Frankrike och England.

Vi hade nog tur som fick höra orkestern innan den hann avverka alltför många storstäder; konsertresor av denna typ är enormt ansträngande i flera avseenden och kan inte hela tiden bjuda på samma konstnärliga kvalitet. Nu var orkesterklangen fortfarande så fräsch

Två av orkestermedlemmarna är svenskar: Stanley Benson (till vänster), som spelar 1:a violin, och Earl Hedberg, viola.

som vi känner den från alla de berömda grammofoninspelningarna — fast så där enastående märklig tyckte jag knappast att den verkade. Men man får ju ha måttliga pretentioner, och Bostonsymfonikerna utgör i alla fall en av världens bästa orkestrar, det kan inte förnekas. [illegible]-amerikanen Sergej Kussevitskij, dirigent åren 1924—1949, bidrog till att skapa orkesterns världsrykte. Han efterträddes av Charles Munch (eller Münch, som han egentligen heter, eftersom hans far var elsassare), och under hans ledning gick måndagskvällens konsert.

Kussevitskij var specialist på impressionistiska klangflöden, och man tyckte sig också i Ravels andra svit ur musiken till baletten "Daphnis och Chloë" märka hur hans ande svävade över partituret. Det blev emellanåt nästan för mycket av sus och brus och sjudande. Den avslutande dansen hade mer karaktär av kraftprestation än av koreografiskt artisteri.

Att resa till Europa och spela Beethovens "Eroica" förefaller kanske lite onödigt. Den utfördes dock mycket bra, men första satsens allegro con brio ledde alltför mycket tanken till Sousa. Att Munch på programmet hade tagit upp Walter Pistons sjätte symfoni var synnerligen glädjande. Han är ju en av Förenta staternas mest omtalade tonsättare och har särskilt varit föremål för Bostonorkesterns uppmärksamhet. Om symfonin hade visat intressantare drag, så hade det naturligtvis varit bra. Nu frapperades man egentligen bara av scherzot, som verkligen var mycket kvickt.

Publiken i Stora konserthussalen visade sin tacksamhet med starka applåder, och Konsertföreningen uppvaktade den imponerande Charles Munch och hans musiker med blomster.

C B—g

Boston Symphony orchestra

har i dessa spalter presenterats ingående, dels av mig i onsdags, dels genom en artikel i senaste söndagsnumret. Det är begripligt, att det var med en god portion av nyfikenhet som man på måndagen gick till Konserthuset för att erfara, hur orkestern och dirigenten, Charles Munch, motsvarade

---

SVENSKA DAGBLADET. Sept 4

Teater, musik och film

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Höstens konsertsäsong kunde knappast ha fått en flottare spelöppning. Boston Symphony Orchestra hitflugen genom Konsertbolagets och The American National Theatre and Academys försorg, ledd av Charles Munch och försedd med jättestora gladioluskvastar längs podierampen! Feststämningen över de prominenta gästernas konsert på måndagskvällen var säkrad från första början, fast höga biljettpriser och datum i tidigaste laget grusade arrangörernas förhoppningar om fullsatt salong. Den relativt talrika publik som fanns sörjde i alla händelser för präktiga ovationer.

Den berömda orkestern — grundad 1881 av en mr Higginson — har under sin sjuttiofemåriga tillvaro och under dirigenter som Nikisch och Koussevitskij gått från klarhet till klarhet. Såsom envar kunnat konstatera på talrika grammofoninspelningar. Knivskarp konkurrens om platserna, hårda anställningsvillkor och ansvaret för växande världsrykte har gjort orkestern till något så paradoxalt som en samling virtuoser, trimmad till perfekt disciplin. I viss mån har väl dess ideal och effektivitet också formats under trycket av den amerikanska publikens anspråk. Resultatet är i många hänseenden kolossalt imponerande men är inte alldeles utan avigsidor.

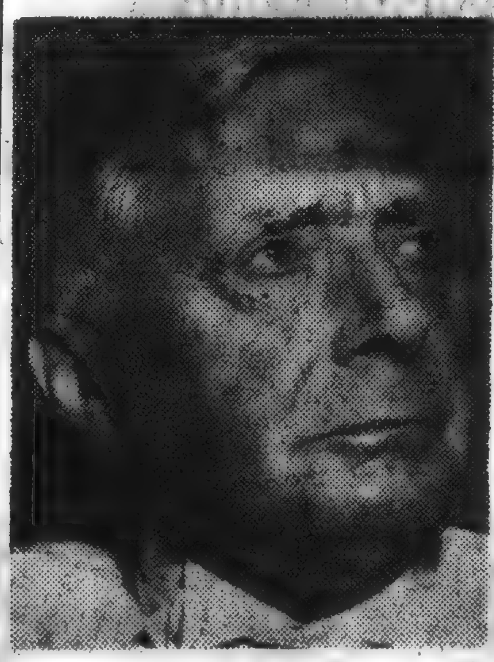
Orkesterns styrka är det Svåra och det Artistiska. Det partitur är väl inte skrivet, som inte Bostons symfoniorkester skulle klara på ett par-tre repetitioner. Nu kom musikerna direkt från flygmaskiner och inledde med att spela Beethovens "Eroica" så prickfritt och grant som om det vore en barnlek. Det gick bara alltför lätt! Munch lät första satsen glida längs raka spår, förlitande sig på orkesterns materiella intensitet, utnyttjade dess följsamhet i sorgmarschen, gjorde tempotrick för att öka scherzots verkan och rusade genom delar av finalen. Triumfalt slut och stort jubel och en tomhetskänsla efter det inte på djupet sagda.

Desto mera helhjärtat kunde man avnjuta orkesterns fantastiska skicklighet i amerikanaren Walter Pistons sjätte symfoni. Som konstverk är symfonien föga märkvärdig, men den är skriven just för denna orkester och ställer ut dess förtjänster i en rad brokiga marknadsstånd. Andra satsen är på sätt och vis bäst. Den är virvlande snabb, rolig som ett vigt akrobatnummer och kunde säkert spelas separat (fast av rätt få orkestrar). Vad den (svagaste) långsamma satsen beträffar är det enbart längden som står i rimlig proportion till tonsättarens ambitioner.

Kvällens höjdpunkt blev emellertid inte oväntat Ravels "Daphnis et Chloe" nr 2. Här blev orkesterpodiet som en kokande trollgryta full av lysande färgämnen som ständigt ingick nya skiftande, skimrande föreningar. Munch rörde om med små, osvikligt säkra rörelser och drev fram eruptionerna med en häxmästarens besvärjande kraft. Där fick man definitivt synen förvänd — vem frågade efter vad som fanns innunder inför denna bländande yta? Som uppvisning i kollektivt — närmare hundrahövdat — artisteri stod detta slutnummer på toppen av vad som för närvarande står i mänsklig förmåga.

I. B—n.

"Dirigentens yrke det mest krävande"



Charles Munch.

— Att vara dirigent är ett heligt kall, jag känner mig stundom som en präst, säger Charles Munch, ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester.

I sin nyligen utkomna bok "I am a conductor" utvecklar han temat närmare. Inget yrke är så krävande som dirigentens. Femton års arbete och studier räcker inte för att göra en dirigent av en person som saknar den rätta inre hänförelsen och den magnetism som kan förhäxa både musikerna och publiken. Uttalandet visar vad Charles Munch fordrar av sig själv.

Han är fransman från början, uppväxt i Strassburg. Bachs musik omgav honom från barnsben. Både hans far och en farbror till honom dirigerade Bach i var sin kyrka i var sin stad. Själv hade Munch lett fyra olika orkestrar i Paris innan han 1949 kallades till Förenta staterna för att efterträda den legendariske Sergej Kussevitskij som dirigent för Bostons symfoniorkester, den äldsta i Amerika, grundad av Henry Lee Higginson 1881 med Europas bästa orkestrar som förebilder.

*

Monsieur Topaze

[94]

INTERN[illegible] PRESS
CUT[illegible] BUREAU

Göteborgs Posten

Lib[illegible]

7/61

5 SEP 1956

"Att vara dirigent är ej ett yrke – det är ett heligt kall!"

Bostons symfoniorkester konserterar i Stockholm den 3 september. Orkestern befinner sig på en europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 70-årsjubileum. Den skall medverka bl. a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och ge konserter även i Oslo, Köpenhamn och Helsingfors. Två konserter vardera i Moskva och Leningrad står också på programmet. Bostonsymfonins ledare är sedan 1949 Charles Münch, som tidigare aldrig besökt Sverige. I denna artikel berättas om Münchs musikaliska karriär.

Den kände amerikanske kompositören och kritikern Virgil Thompson skrev 1934, efter en rundresa i Europa, att han i Paris hade funnit en orkesterledare som en dag borde kunna efterträda Sergej Koussevitskij som ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester. Det tog 15 år innan Thompsons spådom gick i uppfyllelse, men då Koussevitskij 1949 steg ner från dirigentpallen blev Charles Münch hans efterträdare.

Trots att Münch bara två år tidigare hade bytt ut konsertmästarens violin i den berömda Gewandhaus-orkestern i Leipzig mot taktpinnen i Paris visade han alltså redan 1934 att han besatt många av de egenskaper som hade givit Koussevitskij hans världsrykte. Han var väl förtrogen med hela den traditionella repertoaren, gick i bräschen för den moderna musiken och utstrålade den odefinierbara personliga magnetism som skiljer en stor dirigent från en medelmåtta.

Münchs uppgift i Boston var långtifrån lätt. Visserligen skulle han överta en orkester som enligt samstämmiga vittnesmål var bland de yppersta i världen, men Koussevitskij hade varit ledare för Bostonsymfonin i ett kvartssekel och den var i så hög grad hans verk att identifikationen nästan var fullständig. Dessutom hade Koussevitskij i det traditionstrogna Boston närmast blivit en institution, lika fast rotad i bostonbornas medvetande som stadens minnesmärken från det amerikanska frihetskriget.

Men också musiktraditionerna i Boston har djupa rötter. En av traditionerna är att på allt sätt bistå symfoniorkesterns ledare i hans arbete och att ge honom största möjliga frihet. Detta har skett ända sedan den musikälskande Henry Lee Higginson, som härstammade från en av New Englands köpmansläkter, bildade orkestern 1881 och sedan varje år fram till 1919 både bokstavligt och bildligt talat stod för fiolerna.

Under de sex år Münch lett orkestern har han visat sig vara en värdig efterträdare till Koussevitskij. Orkestern låter annorlunda under Münch är under företrädaren, men skillnaden är som mellan en målning av Rembrandt och en av Tizian, av vilken ingendera är ett mindre mästerverk därför att de är utförda i olika stilar.

Bostonsymfonin fortsätter att framföra och introducera ny och obekant musik. Som ett led i firandet av sitt 70-årsjubileum har orkestern presenterat nya verk av 15 internationellt kända europeiska och amerikanska kompositörer, däribland Benjamin Britten och Darius Milhaud från Europa och Aaron Copland och Howard Hanson från USA. Orkestern firade 50-årsjubileum på samma sätt och då uppfördes f. f. g. sådana verk som Stravinskijs Psalmsymfoni, Hindemiths konsert för stråkar och blåsare och Aaron Coplands symfoniska ode.

Münch, som fyller 65 år den 26 sept., dagen efter den sista konserten under europaturnén, är född i Strasbourg, där hans far var kantor. Han fick sin första musikaliska utbildning vid musikkonservatoriet i hemstaden, som nu förestås av hans bror Fritz. Efter ytterligare studier i Paris och militärtjänst under första världskriget återvände Münch till Strasbourg som konsertmästare i stadens orkester och tjänstgjorde samtidigt som lärare vid konservatoriet. Senare flyttade han till Leipzig som konsertmästare i Gewandhaus-orkester under Wilhelm Fürtwängler.

Det var Münchs ambition att bli dirigent. Han brukar berätta om hur upprörd han blev en gång i sin ungdom efter en konsert i hemstaden, då han hörde någon bland publiken lovorda orkestern, men samtidigt undra om man verkligen behövde ha dirigenten med. Att vara dirigent är inte ett yrke, utan ett heligt kall, säger Münch, det är ibland en prästerlig gärning och nästan en feber, en sjukdom, som bara döden kan avbryta.

Efter åtta år i Leipzig begav sig Münch till Paris för att söka fullfölja sin ambition. Han fick åtskilliga anbud, men valde att sätta upp en egen orkester, Paris filharmoniker. Framgången lät inte vänta på sig och han blev snart känd för sina framföranden av avantgardistisk musik och för lysande tolkningar av traditionella orkesterstycken. Gästspel i olika europeiska huvudstäder spred hans rykte även utanför Frankrike.

Bara fem år efter sin debut som dirigent utnämndes Münch till Frankrikes främsta och mest eftertraktade dirigentpost, som ledare för Société des Concerts och professuren som orkesterledare vid Paris-konservatoriet, en befattning som han uppehöll åren 1937—45. Efter krigsslutet tog han en rad gästengagement i olika delar av världen, däribland två mycket framgångsrika i Boston, som ledde till att han senare permanent knöts till orkestern.

Om sitt liv som orkesterledare och sin uppfattning om dirigentens roll har Münch berättat i sin bok »Jag är dirigent». Han skriver: »Att dirigera en konsert innebär en oerhörd förbrukning av nervös energi. Berlioz berättar i sina memoarer att han efter ett framförande av sin overtyr Francs-Juges alldeles utmattad sträckte ut sig över pukorna och snyftade. Detta är ingenting att le åt. Han hade dirigerat ett av sina egna verk, han hade förbrukat en del av sin själ. Varje uttolkare av musik måste vara i stånd till en sådan fullständig bikt. Är han inte det, då måste han byta yrke.»

Norman Smith.

[illegible] TIDNINGEN

Konsertsäsongens upptakt

Sept. 4

blev [illegible] bländande. The Boston Symphony Orchestra gästade oss på måndagen och inledde därmed konserternas rad denna termin, och det var en inledning som det som hädanefter kommer få svårt att följa upp. Sedan länge har bostonorkestern rykte om sig att vara en av USA:s och världens främsta — den har haft dirigenter som Arthur Nikisch och Karl Muck, som hörde till grundläggarna av dess standrad, och Serge Koussevitzky, som stabiliserade den. Nu leds den av Charles Munch, en bland de största av de stora orkesterledarna, och något mera perfekt och svindlande skicklighet i orkesterspel är det bostonorkestern presterade torde inte stå att få.

Det är nästan alltför perfekt. Åtminstone blev detta intrycket av återgivandet av Beethovens Eroicasymfoni; ett väloljat, absolut störningsfritt spel, en effektfull planering av uppläggningen av verket och ett prickfritt realiserande av planen in i minsta detalj, ett spel med snudd på det övermänskliga och på det omänskliga. Det blev en uppvisning mer än en tolkning, och den patetiske, med känslor och tankar brottande Beethoven, som en gång skrev verket, var ganska långt borta.

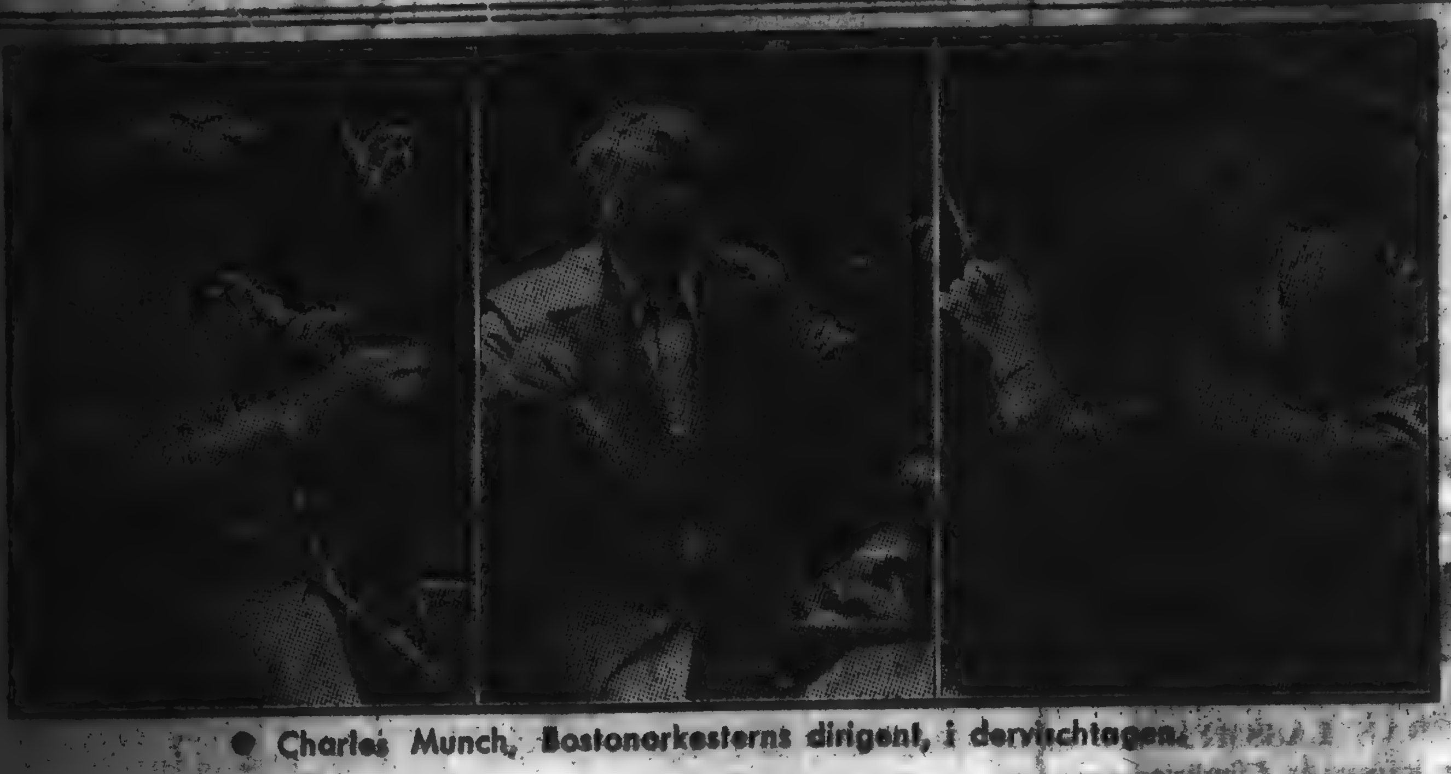
Samma fantastiska virtuositet kännetecknade framförandet av Walter Pistons sjätte symfoni och Ravels Daphnis och Chloe, men där var det mera [illegible] där [illegible] den kolossala skickligheten [illegible]. Utan den hade det amerikanska verket blivit blekt och tämligen intetsägande [illegible] till ett strålande konststycke av [illegible] och [illegible]. Och Ravels "symfoniska fragment" blev en klangfest, en orgie, ett fyrverkeri, och man charmerades, förleddes och hypnotiserades oemotståndligt.

F. H. T.

Telefon 23 88 40 (Rikss. 23 89 40)
CUTTING BUREAU
Aftontidningen
Stockholm
Socialdemokratisk
8 SEP 1956

Engl

8 sept. AT



● Charles Munch, Bostonorkesterns dirigent, i dervischtagen.

Moses Pergament:

AMERIKANSKT och svenskt

DET LIGGER alltfort något i det av européer med en liten ironisk accent upprepade amerikanska uttrycket Biggest in the world. Det är inte bara ryssarna som på alla områden vill vara de främsta i världen, amerikanerna vill det också, och mer därtill. De vill först och främst att allt amerikanskt ska vara störst och främst. Det gäller t.o.m. inom konsten, fast det som bekant alltid är lättare att prestera väldigheter än värden. Vid musikfestivalen i somras i Stockholm gav ju amerikanen Session ett överväldigande belägg härpå med sin tonsatta Theokritosidyll, som företedde en orkestral elefantsjuka [illegible] framskridet sta[illegible]

Det kan f[illegible] och konst[illegible] [illegible] fiktioner. [illegible] är det dock inte, [illegible] att den bländande och [illegible] virtuositetens fanfar det moment av [illegible] tvivelaktigt värde i orkesterns och dirigentens första och enda framträdande in natura på svensk mark. Emellertid, för att inte inge mina läsare den falska [illegible]ningen av en orkester, vars [illegible] efter en närgången [illegible]skning måste nedvärderas, vill jag först erinra om programmets sista nummer — svit nr 2 ur Ravels balett Daphnis och Chloë — där orkesterns fenomenala tekniska kapacitet i förening med dirigentens strålande ingivelse (på hans mest personliga hemmaplan) åstadkom det stora bländverket.

● Charles Munch

var en livaktig och mycket uppmärksammad parisisk storhet — dirigent bl. a. för den välrenommerade Konservatorieorkestern — då han efter Sergei Koussevitzkys avgång 1948 blev ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester. En lysande rad företrädare hade under årens lopp svetsat ihop ensemblen och skapat både tradition och disciplin. Det räcker att nämna Nikisch, Muck och Monteux. Redan den i vissa stycken utomordentlige Koussevitsky hade under sin dirigenttid i Boston fallit för en delvis opportun, delvis någorlunda motiverad amerikanisering. Denna gick närmast ut på en utökning av orkestern, vilket i sin tur medförde frestelsen att fördubbla besättningen [illegible] när det gällde klassikernas [illegible]seendet) anspråkslösa partitur [illegible] räckte inte med 2 flöjter, [illegible] klarinetter, o.s.v. Minst [illegible], helst ännu mer!

[illegible] möjligt att de väldiga salarna i USA betingar sådana åtgärder. På mig verkar det uteslutande som en förgrovning av klangen, och det intrycket fick jag också när Bostonorkestern framförde Beethovens "Eroica" här i Konserthuset. Denna orkester som gjort de finaste inspelningar även av klassisk litteratur, inspelningar med idealisk akustisk balans och förnäm, genomkultiverad tongivning — hur kan den plötsligt klinga lite grov? Ja, det beror naturligtvis på två omständigheter. Dels finns det i en vanlig konsertsal inga akustiska regleringsmöjligheter av samma art som i en inspelningsstudio. Dels kan en dirigent ha vaknare öron för stil och klangfinesser hos en tonsättare än hos en annan.

● Charles Munchs "Eroica"

började grovhugget, med de ledsagande åttondelarna framhamrade av andra fiolen och bratschen som om det gällt att stansa ett hårt slående rytmiskt mönster. Det står dock p (piano, svagt) hos Beethoven! Man saknade överhuvud den fina dynamiska gradation i utförandet av symfonin, som denna orkesters grammofoninspelningar tillåtit oss förutsätta. Även första satsens ovanligt snabb[illegible] och nästan mekaniskt framdr[illegible] tempo, som på ett ganska [illegible] sitt förändrade musiker[illegible], uteslöt ett oförbehållsam[illegible]ande.

Amerikan[illegible] symfoni bj[illegible] större fröjd för [illegible] I dess [illegible] sats fick [illegible] briljera [illegible] ensemble[illegible] hämtat [illegible] jär, ett gefundenes [illegible] elegant dirigent och en [illegible]gen på tekniska läckerheter. [illegible] opus låg [illegible] bättre till för Charles Munch än Beethovens heroiska symfoni. Allra bäst stämde hans musikernaturell ihop med Ravels överdådigt instrumenterade orkestrala fyrverkeri i slutbilden av Daphnis och Chloë. Denna blixtrande och sprakande klangmassa vällde in i salen med den oemotståndliga kraften hos ett genialt imiterat naturfenomen — i fransk impressionistisk anda och regi. De kunde också vara våldsamma när de ville, dessa blida franska färgdrömmare i toner. En Debussy, en Ravel. Och Charles Munch var hemma här, hemma och saligt förskriven åt Ravels daimon. Han rasade som en dervisch, orkestern spelade som besatt och publiken fick en oavbruten serie elchocker. Undra på att den skrek till slut.

● Från vår hemmafront

finns det ett par glädjande händelser att anteckna, båda från Kungl. teatern. [illegible] Schymberg [illegible]rudade sig förra lördagen för omväxlings skull i Konstanzes ("Enleveringen") spanska dräkt och grandezza. Fru Schymberg har inte alltid varit i nivå med sig själv den sista tiden, som det uppgivits mest beroende på ohälsa. Hon lär ha varit sjuk även nämnda kväll, men därav märktes inte ett spår. Hon sjöng och spelade som i fornstora dar, och det var en fröjd både att se och höra hennes fina tolkning av partiet och rollen.

Som Blonde trippade denna gång Margareta Hallin omkring, sprittande livlig och snabb som en sädesärla. Hon har en viss benägenhet att förväxla opera och operett. Behåll gärna humöret, fru Hallin, men tappa inte stilen! Mozart skiljer sig en aning från både Offenbach och Lehar, även när han är på sitt mest skämtsamma humör. Vid sidan av Hjördis Schymbergs mogna konst framstod den nya Blondes vokala ofullgångenhet kanske tydligare än vanligt. Men ännu en gång: Margareta Hallin är en tillgång som med åren kan bli ovärderlig.

Till sist var det Sigurd Björlings nya roll som kung Philip i Verdis Don Carlos. Det är inte lätt att ersätta en oförglömlig scenfigur som Joel Berglunds Philip, men faktum är att hr Björling klarade det på ett högst berömvärt sätt. Han klarade det, men fick oss ingalunda att glömma företrädaren. Tvärtom mindes man den förre Philip i varje situation, ja, så gott som i varje attityd, varje gest, varje tonfall. Det var mao en styv imitation av en utomordentlig förebild. Men det var ju också John Forsells Don Juan. Där hette förebilden d'Andrade.

● Någon nyhet

var inte Blanche Thebom framträdande som Delila efter sex års bortovaro. Hon inledde därmed sitt aktuella gästspel på Kungl. teatern och återkommer om söndag som Elisabeth i Tannhäuser. Det blir dags att skriva om henne då.

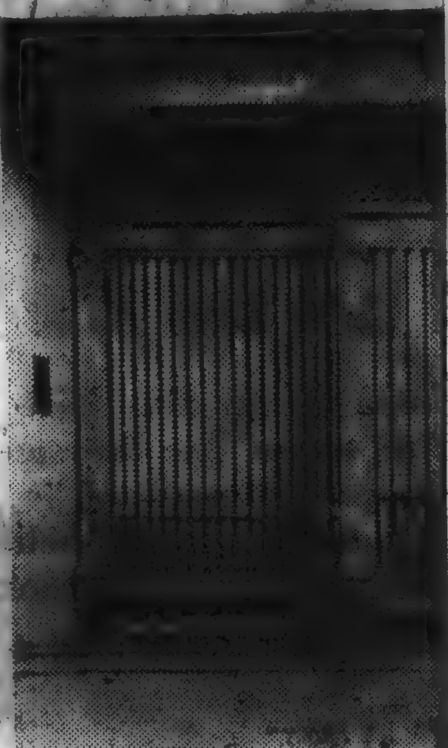
---

onsdag 19 sept. 1956

En livskraftig Boston Symphony

Boston Symphony Orchestra är ett namn med klang. Flera generationers musikälskare har vant sig att med välbehag och [illegible] lyssna till den orkestern — via platta oss vanliga [illegible] emellan. I år fyller orkestern 75 år, men av åldern märks platt intet. Tvärtom är den ute och firar jubileet med en stor konsertturné genom en rad länder i Europa, bl a Sverige som nyligen gästats.

Under årens lopp har en lång rad fina dirigenter varit orkesterns instruktörer. En av dem var den berömde Wagner-dirigenten Carl Muck som under förra kriget var krigsfånge i USA, samtidigt som han dirigerade Boston-musikerna. Den som nu leder orkesterns öden är fransmannen Charles [illegible] tysk, eftersom han är född i Elsass-Lothringen, men hans förtrogenhet med och inlevelse i franskt kynne gör honom lika spirituell som kunnig.



Här ses en del av Bostons s[illegible]

Hur elegant och lyhörd han är som dirigent kan man studera på några RCA-inspelningar med Charles Munch. En platta bjuder på två så utsökta saker som Beethovens femma och Schuberts ofullbordade (RCA LM 1923 A). Båda inspelningarna står på toppen. »Femmans» demoni och »ödesmättnad» framträder med klarhet och en rent musikantisk finess som gläder. Schubert-symfonins romantik och melodik, som har folkvisans omedelbarhet i varpen, är lika suveränt tolkad.

Ett annat kynne präglar Berlioz Symphonie Fantastique op 14 (RCA LM 1900 A). Här härskar högromantiken som framför allt genom Berlioz kom att introducera impressionismen. Bostonmusikerna är skickliga, och den stora formen med en mångfald tjusiga detaljer lever vackert under Charles Munchs händer. Symfonin är ett av Berlioz stora verk och särskilt värdefull i en så idealisk inspelning. Ett bra kliv fram i tiden kan man ta genom att lyssna till Ravels Daphnis et Chloe (RCA A12R 0171). Det är en koreografisk symfoni. Ursprungligen skrev Ravel denna musik som ren balettmusik och med den ryska koreografen Diaghilev som »påfösare». Den tillkom år 1912. Numera spelas den lika ofta utan dans. För RCA-inspelningens utomordentliga kvalitet svarar inte bara Charles Munch och musikerna utan minst lika mycket den framstående körledaren Robert Shaw med sångare [illegible] niskt elegant tolkning av Georges Alès, Pierre Coddée och Ruggero Gerlin.

TRE RYSSAR

med lika många särarter presenterar RCA, Metronome och Amadeo. Tjajkovskijs välkända pianokonsert nr 1, som filmen höll på att göra ett örhänge av, finns på RCA (LM-1969). Sovjetunionens just nu kanske förnämsta pianist, Emil Gilels, åstadkommer underverket att med fin poesi och perfektaste inlevelse ge nytt, sprudlande liv åt denna välkända konsert. Fritz Reiner och Chicago Symphony Orchestra ledsagar intensivt och friskt. Konserten är ju musik man särskilt gärna lyssnar till, och mer än gärna i detta utförande, som renderar hrr Gilels och Reiner högsta betyg.

Rachmaninov förbinder man med hans pianokonsert nr [illegible] — den har blivit mest omtyckt. Men han har en omfattande komposition bakom sig, och hans symfoni nr 1 bevisar att han redan som 22-åring var förvånansvärt

---

STOCKHOLMS-TIDNINGEN Tisdagen den 4

RYSSFARARE [illegible] amerikaner som [illegible] kvinnorna och 10[illegible] tons symfoniork[illegible] emot att ta en [illegible] måndagen konse[illegible] holm — se rec[illegible] på tisdagen [illegible] fvh [illegible] Moskva. Chef[illegible] rigenten, [illegible] les Munc[illegible] i sitt [illegible] [illegible] Pasquale [illegible] menten de har [illegible] försäkrade för en[illegible] lon dollar . . .

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184 Strand, London, W.C.2

Extract from
MUSIC and MUSICIANS
LONDON
See overleaf

DATE — OCT 1956

from P. E. Burke in STOCKHOLM

4767

STOCKHOLM had the honour of being one of the first hosts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its European Tour and was rewarded by some really superb playing by this splendid orchestra under its conductor Charles Munch. The rich liquid melody of Maurice Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe flowed out in the Stockholm Konserthuset and the only complaint which could possibly be made was that the first suite of this French masterwork should have been played as well. The Sixth Symphony of the American composer Walter Piston was given a precise performance enabling the Stockholm audience to judge it on its merits.

Even if the conductor's hard driving of his orchestra in the first and final movements of Beethoven's Eroica, which opened the Stockholm concert, did not find favour with all listeners, it did at least demonstrate the firm discipline of the Boston Orchestra, its excellent precision and perfect timing with no ragged entrances. The string sections were perfection itself, the woodwinds excellent and if the brass sounded too hard at times that could perhaps be blamed on the imperfect Konserthuset acoustics.

Stockholm Opera opened its autumn season with The Mastersingers, in which the leading roles were sung by Set Svanholm, who is now the artistic director of the Royal Opera, and Aase Nordmo-Lövberg, a young Norwegian soprano who has distinguished herself at the Stockholm Opera. Then came Bengt Peterson's exquisite new production of Mozart's delightful The Seraglio. This was its third recent performance here—the previous two came at the very end of the Stockholm Festival this summer—and there were some interesting cast changes. Margaretta Hallin appeared as Blonde, while the part of Constanze was sung by the internationally known Swedish soprano Hjordis Schymberg. Arne Henriksen was [illegible] a very pleasant Belmonte, while the [illegible] Näslund was obliged to show [illegible] skill as an actor in the non-[illegible] role of the Pasha, which he did in magnificent [illegible] Erik Sk[illegible]'s décor and costumes were a delight and once again the lighting department of the Stockholm Opera demonstrated that it is second to none.

The New York Metropolitan's [illegible] Thebom, this autumn's guest artist, made her first appearance as Delilah in Samson and D[illegible] opposite Set Svanholm. The part of the High Priest was taken by Sigurd Björling, a role which he had [illegible] the Metropolitan but not previously in Stockholm.

[95]

Telefon 23 88 40 (Rikss. 23 89 40)

Aftontidningen
Stockholm
Socialdemokratisk

8 SEP 1956

8 sept. AT

● Charles Munch, Bostonorkesterns dirigent, i dervischtagen.

Moses Pergament:

AMERIKANSKT och svenskt

DET LIGGER alltfort något i det av européer med en liten ironisk accent upprepade amerikanska uttrycket Biggest in the world. Det är inte bara ryssarna som på alla områden vill vara de främsta i världen, amerikanerna vill det också, och mer därtill. De vill först och främst att allt amerikanskt ska vara störst och främst. Det gäller t.o.m. inom konsten, där det som bekant alltid är lättare att prestera väldigheter än värden. Vid musikfestivalen i somras i Stockholm gav ju amerikanen Session ett överväldigande belägg härpå med sin tonsatta Theokritos-idyll, som företedde en orkestral elefants[illegible] i långt framskridet sta[illegible]

Det kan [illegible] och konstig[illegible] ning av Bost[illegible] orkesterns pre[illegible] med ovanstående [illegible] flektioner. Men [illegible] är det dock inte, för [illegible] sidan om all den bländande och hänryckande virtuositeten fanns det [illegible] av synnerligen tvivelaktigt värde i orkesterns och dirigentens första och enda framträdande in natura på svensk mark. Emellertid, för att inte inge mina läsare den falska föreställningen av en orkester, vars världsberömmelse efter en närgående granskning måste nedvärderas åtskilligt, vill jag först erinra om programmets sista nummer — sviten nr 2 ur Ravels balett Daphnis och Chloë — där orkesterns fenomenala tekniska kapacitet i förening med dirigentens strålande insats (på hans mest personliga hemmaplan) åstadkom det stora bländverket.

● Charles Munch

var en livaktig och mycket uppmärksammad parisisk storhet — dirigent bl. a. för den välrenommerade konservatorieorkestern — då han efter Sergei Koussevitzkys avgång 1948 blev ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester. En lysande rad föregångare hade under årens lopp svetsat ihop ensemblen och skapat både tradition och disciplin. Det räcker att nämna Nikisch, Muck och Monteux. Redan den i vissa stycken utomordentlige Koussevitsky hade under sin dirigenttid i Boston fallit för en delvis opportun, delvis någorlunda motiverad amerikanisering. Denna gick närmast ut på en utökning av orkestern, vilket i sin tur medförde frestelsen att fördubbla besättningen t.o.m. när det gällde klassikernas (i det avseendet) anspråkslösa partitur. Det räckte inte med 2 flöjter, 2 oboer, 2 klarinetter, o. s. v. Minst dubbelt opp, helst ännu mer!

Det är möjligt att de väldiga salarna i USA betingar sådana åtgärder. På mig verkar det uteslutande som en förgrovning av klangen, och det intrycket fick jag också när Bostonorkestern framförde Beethovens "Eroica" här i Konserthuset. Denna orkester som gjort de finaste inspelningar även av klassisk litteratur, inspelningar med idealisk akustisk balans och förnäm, genomkultiverad tongivning — hur kan den plötsligt klinga lite grov? Ja, det beror naturligtvis på två omständigheter. Dels finns det i en vanlig konsertsal inga akustiska regleringsmöjligheter av samma art som i en inspelningsstudio. Dels kan en dirigent ha vaknare öron för stil och klangfinesser hos en tonsättare än hos en annan.

● Charles Munchs "Eroica"

började grovhugget, med de ledsagande åttondelarna framhamrade av andra fiolen och bratschen som om det gällt att stansa ett hårt slående rytmiskt mönster. Det står dock p (piano, svagt) hos Beethoven! Man saknade överhuvud den fina dynamiska gradation i utförandet av symfonin, som denna orkesters grammofoninspelningar tillåtit oss förutsätta. Även första satsens ovanligt [illegible] och nästan mekaniskt framdri[illegible] tempo, som på ett ganska ödesdigert sätt förändrade musikens karaktär, uteslöt ett oförbehållsamt godkännande.

Amerikanen Walter Pistons sjätte symfoni bjöd inte på någon större fröjd för [illegible] örat eller själen. I dess snabba och lekfulla andra sats fick orkestern dock tillfälle briljera med sin sagolika spel- och ensembleteknik, [illegible] var som hämtat ur en symfonisk bonbonjär, ett gefundenes Fressen för en elegant dirigent och en orkester sugen på tekniska läckerheter. Pistons opus låg tydligen bättre till för Charles Munch än Beethovens heroiska symfoni. Allra bäst stämde hans musikernaturell ihop med Ravels överdådigt instrumenterade orkestrala fyrverkeri i slutbilden av Daphnis och Chloë. Denna blixtrande och sprakande klangmassa vällde in i salen med den oemotståndliga kraften hos ett genialt imiterat naturfenomen — i fransk impressionistisk anda och regi. De kunde också vara våldsamma när de ville, dessa blida franska färgdrömmare i toner. En Debussy, en Ravel. Och Charles Munch var hemma här, hemma och saligt förskriven åt Ravels daimon. Han rasade som en dervisch, orkestern spelade som besatt och publiken fick en oavbruten serie elchocker. Undra på att den skrek till slut.

● Från vår hemmafront

finns det ett par glädjande händelser att anteckna, båda från Kungl. teatern. Hjördis Schymberg

Forts. [illegible]

skrudade sig förra lördagen för omväxlings skull i Konstanzes ("Enleveringen") spanska dräkt och grandezza. Fru Schymberg har inte alltid varit i nivå med sig själv den sista tiden, som det uppgivits mest beroende på ohälsa. Hon lär ha varit sjuk även nämnda kväll, men därav märktes inte ett spår. Hon sjöng och spelade som i fornstora dar, och det var en fröjd både att se och höra hennes fina tolkning av partiet och rollen.

Som Blonde trippade denna gång Margareta Hallin omkring, sprittande livlig och snabb som en sädesärla. Hon har en viss benägenhet att förväxla opera och operett. Behåll gärna humöret, fru Hallin, men tappa inte stilen! Mozart skiljer sig en aning från både Offenbach och Lehar, även när han är på sitt mest skämtsamma humör. Vid sidan av Hjördis Schymbergs mogna konst framstod den nya Blondes vokala ofullgångenhet kanske tydligare än vanligt. Men ännu en gång: Margareta Hallin är en tillgång som med åren kan bli ovärderlig.

Till sist var det Sigurd Björlings nya roll som kung Philip i Verdis Don Carlos. Det är inte lätt att ersätta en oförglömlig scenfigur som Joel Berglunds Philip, men faktum är att hr Björling klarade det på ett högst berömvärt sätt. Han klarade det, men fick oss ingalunda att glömma föregångaren. Tvärtom mindes man den förre Philip i varje situation, ja, så gott som i varje attityd, varje gest, varje tonfall. Det var mao en styv imitation av en utomordentlig förebild. Men det var ju också John Forsells Don Juan. Där hette förebilden d'Andrade.

● Någon nyhet

var inte Blanche Theboms framträdande som Delila efter sex års bortovaro. Hon inledde därmed sitt aktuella gästspel på Kungl. teatern och återkommer om söndag som Elisabeth i Tannhäuser. Det blir dags att skriva om henne då.

---

onsdag 19 sept. 1956

En livskraftig Boston Symphony

Här ses en del av Bostons s

Boston Symphony Orchestra är ett namn med klang. Flera generationers musikälskare har vant sig att med välbehag och instämmande lyssna till den orkestern — via platta oss vanliga dödliga emellan. I år fyller orkestern 75 år, men av åldern märks platt intet. Tvärtom är den ute och firar jubileet med en stor konsertturné genom en rad länder i Europa, bl a Sverige som nyligen gästats.

Under årens lopp har en lång rad fina dirigenter varit orkesterns instruktörer. En av dem var den berömde Wagner-dirigenten Carl Muck som under förra kriget var krigsfånge i USA, samtidigt som han dirigerade Boston-musikerna. Den som nu leder orkesterns öden är fransmannen Charles Munch. Till börden är han tysk, eftersom han är född i Elsass-Lothringen, men hans förtrogenhet med och inlevelse i franskt kynne gör honom lika spirituell som kunnig.

Hur elegant och lyhörd han är som dirigent kan man studera på några RCA-inspelningar med Charles Munch. En platta bjuder på två så utsökta saker som Beethovens femma och Schuberts ofullbordade (RCA LM 1923 A). Båda inspelningarna står på toppen. »Femmans» demoni och »ödesmättnad» framträder med klarhet och en rent musikantisk finess som gläder. Schubert-symfonins romantik och melodik, som har folkvisans omedelbarhet i varpen, är lika suveränt tolkad.

Ett annat kynne präglar Berlioz Symphonie Fantastique op 14 (RCA LM 1900 A). Här härskar högromantiken som framför allt genom Berlioz kom att introducera impressionismen. Boston-musikerna är skickliga, och den stora formen med en mångfald tjusiga detaljer lever vackert under Charles Munchs händer. Symfonin är ett av Berlioz stora verk och särskilt värdefull i en så idealisk inspelning. Ett bra kliv fram i tiden kan man ta genom att lyssna till Ravels Daphnis et Chloe (RCA A12R 0171). Det är en koreografisk symfoni. Ursprungligen skrev Ravel denna musik som ren balettmusik och med den ryska koreografen Diaghilev som »påfösare». Den tillkom år 1912. Numera spelas den lika ofta utan dans. För RCA-inspelningens utomordentliga kvalitet svarar inte bara Charles Munch och musikerna utan minst lika mycket den framstående körledaren Robert Shaw med sångare niskt elegant tolkning av Georges Alés, Pierre Coddée och Ruggero Gerlin.

TRE RYSSAR

med lika många särarter presenterar RCA, Metronome och Amadeo. Tjajkovskijs välkända pianokonsert nr 1, som filmen höll på att göra ett örhänge av, finns på RCA (LM-1969). Sovjetunionens just nu kanske förnämsta pianist, Emil Gilels, åstadkommer underverket att med fin poesi och perfektaste inlevelse ge nytt, sprudlande liv åt denna välkända konsert. Fritz Reiner och Chicago Symphony Orchestra ledsagar intensivt och friskt. Konserten är ju musik man särskilt gärna lyssnar till, och mer än gärna i detta utförande, som renderar hrr Gilels och Reiner högsta betyg.

Rachmaninov förbinder man med hans pianokonsert nr [illegible] — den har blivit mest omtyckt. Men han har en omfattande komposition bakom sig, och hans symfoni nr 1 bevisar att han redan som 22-åring var förvånansvärt

---

STOCKHOLMS-TIDNINGEN Tisdagen den 4 Sept. 1956

RYSSFARARE är det inte många amerikaner som är, men de två kvinnorna och 103 männen i Bostons symfoniorkester har inget emot att ta en titt på Sovjet. På måndagen konserterade de i Stockholm — se rec. på annan plats — och på tisdagen är de redan i Helsingfors [illegible] till Leningrad och Moskva. Chef för det hela är dirigenten, [illegible] 65-årige Charles Munch (se lilla bilden) och i sitt sällskap har han bl. a. cherokeeindianen Samuel Mayes (längst [illegible] på stora bilden), som spelar cello, harpisten [illegible] Luetcke och [illegible] Pasquale (viola). [illegible] menten de har med sig är vara försäkrade för en dryg halv miljon dollar ...

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184 Strand, London, W.C.2

Extract from
MUSIC and MUSICIANS
See overleaf LONDON

DATE — OCT 1956

from P. E. Burke in STOCKHOLM

STOCKHOLM had the honour of being one of the first hosts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its European Tour and was rewarded by some really superb playing by this splendid orchestra under its conductor Charles Munch. The rich liquid melody of Maurice Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe flowed out in the Stockholm Konserthuset and the only complaint which could possibly be made was that the first suite of this French masterwork should have been played as well. The Sixth Symphony of the American composer Walter Piston was given a precise performance enabling the Stockholm audience to judge it on its merits.

Even if the conductor's hard driving of his orchestra in the first and final movements of Beethoven's Eroica, which opened the Stockholm concert, did not find favour with all listeners, it did at least demonstrate the firm discipline of the Boston Orchestra, its excellent precision and perfect timing with no ragged entrances. The string sections were perfection itself, the woodwinds excellent and if the brass sounded too hard at times that could perhaps be blamed on the imperfect Konserthuset acoustics.

Stockholm Opera opened its autumn season with The Mastersingers, in which the leading roles were sung by Set Svanholm, who is now the artistic director of the Royal Opera, and Aase Nordmo-Lövberg, a young Norwegian soprano who has distinguished herself at the Stockholm Opera. Then came Bengt Peterson's exquisite new production of Mozart's delightful The Seraglio. This was its third recent performance here—the previous two came at the very end of the Stockholm Festival this summer—and there were some interesting cast changes. Margaretta Hallin appeared as Blonde, while the part of Constanze was sung by the internationally known Swedish soprano Hjordis Schymberg. Arne Henriksen was again a very pleasant Belmonte, while the excellent young baritone Anders Näslund was obliged to show his skill as an actor in the non-singing role of the Pasha, which he did in magnificent style. Sven Erik Skawonius's décor and costumes were a delight and once again the lighting department of the Stockholm Opera demonstrated that it is second to none.

The New York Metropolitan [illegible] Blanche Thebom, this autumn's guest artist, made her first appearance as Delilah in Samson and Delilah opposite Set Svanholm. The part of the High Priest was taken by Sigurd Björling, a role which he had sung at the Metropolitan but not previously in Stockholm.

Presentation of Boston Symphony Orchestra medal,

[illegible] hyllade Theorell

Professor Hugo Theorell fick på torsdagen ta emot en unik utmärkelse. Det skedde vid en mottagning på amerikanska [illegible]

Presentation of Boston Symphony Orchestra medal
October 18, 1956

Telefon 23 88 40 (Rikss. 23 89 40)

Aftontidningen
Stockholm
7167 Socialdemokratisk
8 SEP 1956

● Charles Munch, Bostonorkesterns dirigent, i d

DET LIGGER alltfort något i det av européer med en liten ironisk accent upprepade amerikanska uttrycket Biggest in the world. Det är inte bara ryssarna som på alla områden vill vara de främsta i världen, amerikanerna vill det också, och mer därtill. De vill först och främst att allt amerikanskt ska vara störst och främst. Det gäller t. o. m. inom konsten, där det som bekant alltid är lättare att prestera väldigheter än värden. Vid musikfestiva-

Moses Pergament:

AMERIK och s

1948 blev ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester. En lysande rad föregångare hade under årens lopp svetsat ihop ensemblen och skapat både tradition och disciplin. Det räcker att nämna Nikisch, Muck n åter molnigare men uppe- väder. Något varmare än . Temperaturen var i Stock- i kl. 7 +11°. Solen opp 5.00, 18.30.

---

VI TRE
på baksidan

En ny lag skall göra det svårare för kvackare att bedriva sin verksamhet. Det blir behandlingsförbud bl. a. för sockersjuka, epilepsi och sjukdom i samband med havandeskap. Cancer, tuberkulos, könssjukdomar har redan tidigare varit förbjudna för kvackarna.

Vi frågade i dag:

Tror ni på homeopater?

● KARL GÄDD, bilmontör: — Vet inte. Har aldrig träffat någon. Vet inte om jag tror på läkare heller. Man kanske blir frisk ändå. Det är ingen som har botat mej när jag varit sjuk. Det har gått över själv. Tror inte att jag skulle gå till en homeopat hur sjuk jag än blev.

● HENRY WIK, flottist — i det civila montör: — Nej, inte alls. Ingenting skulle få mej att söka en kvackare om jag blev sjuk. Hittills har jag klarat mej bra — det har inte blivit många besök hos riktiga läkare heller.

● RUNE SVART, lagerbiträde:

STOCKHOLMS-TIDNINGEN Tisdagen den 4 Sept 1956

RYSSFARARE är det inte många amerikaner som är, men de två kvinnorna och 103 männen i Bostons symfoniorkester har inget emot att ta en titt på Sovjet. På måndagen konserterade de i Stockholm — se rec. på annan plats — och på tisdagen är de redan i Helsingfors, fvb till Leningrad och Moskva. Chef för det hela är dirigenten, snart 65-årige Charles Munch (se lilla bilden) och i sitt sällskap har han bl. a. cherokeeindianen Samuel Mayes (längst tv på stora bilden), som spelar cello, harpisten O. Luetcke och J. Pasquale (viola). Instrumenten de har med sig är vara försäkrade för en dryg halv miljon dollar ...

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184 Strand, London, W.C.2

Extract from
MUSIC and MUSICIANS
See overleaf LONDON

DATE — OCT 1956

from P. E. Burke in
STOCKHOLM

STOCKHOLM had the honour of being one of the first hosts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its European Tour and was rewarded by some really superb playing by this splendid orchestra under its conductor Charles Munch. The rich liquid melody of Maurice Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe flowed out in the Stockholm Konserthuset and the only complaint which could possibly be made was that the first suite of this French masterwork should have been played as well. The Sixth Symphony of the American composer Walter Piston was given a precise performance enabling the Stockholm audience to judge it on its merits.

Even if the conductor's hard driving of his orchestra in the first and final movements of Beethoven's Eroica, which opened the Stockholm concert, did not find favour with all listeners, it did at least demonstrate the firm discipline of the Boston Orchestra, its excellent precision and perfect timing with no ragged entrances. The string sections were perfection itself, the woodwinds excellent and if the brass sounded too hard at times that could perhaps be blamed on the imperfect Konserthuset acoustics.

Stockholm Opera opened its autumn season with The Mastersingers, in which the leading roles were sung by Set Svanholm, who is now the artistic director of the Royal Opera, and Aase Nordmo-Lövberg, a young Norwegian soprano who has distinguished herself at the Stockholm Opera. Then came Bengt Peterson's exquisite new production of Mozart's delightful The Seraglio. This was its third recent performance here —the previous two came at the very end of the Stockholm Festival this summer—and there were some interesting cast changes. Margaretta Hallin appeared as Blonde, while the part of Constanze was sung by the internationally known Swedish soprano Hjordis Schymberg. Arne Henriksen was again a very pleasant Belmonte, while the excellent young baritone Anders Näslund was obliged to show his skill as an actor in the non-singing role of the Pasha, which he did in magnificent style. Sven Erik Skawonius's décor and costumes were a delight and once again the lighting department of the Stockholm Opera demonstrated that it is second to none.

The New York Metropolitan star Blanche Thebom, this autumn's guest artist, made her first appearance as Delilah in Samson and Delilah opposite Set Svanholm. The part of the High Priest was taken by Sigurd Björling, a role which he had sung at the Metropolitan but not previously in Stockholm.

Telefon 23 88 40 (Rikss. 23 89 40)

Västerbottens Folkblad
Umeå
7167
Socialdemokratisk
19 SEP 1956

onsdag 19 sept. 1956

En livskraftig 75-åring
Boston Symphony Orchestra

Boston Symphony Orchestra är ett namn med klang. Flera generationers musikälskare har vant sig att med välbehag och bestämmande lyssna till den orkestern — via platta oss vanliga dödliga emellan. I år fyller orkestern 75 år, men av åldern märks platt intet. Tvärtom är den ute och firar jubileet med en stor konsertturné genom en rad länder i Europa, bl a Sverige som nyligen gästats.

Under årens lopp har en lång rad fina dirigenter varit orkesterns instruktörer. En av dem var den berömde Wagner-dirigenten Carl Muck som under förra kriget var krigsfånge i USA, samtidigt som han dirigerade Boston-musikerna. Den som nu leder orkesterns öden är fransmannen Charles Munch. Till börden är han tysk, eftersom han är född i Elsass-Lothringen, men hans förtrogenhet med och inlevelse i franskt kynne gör honom lika spirituell som kunnig.

Här ses en del av Bostons symfoniorkester i sin konsertlokal.

Hur elegant och lyhörd han är som dirigent kan man studera på några RCA-inspelningar med Charles Munch. En platta bjuder på två så utsökta saker som Beethovens femma och Schuberts ofullbordade (RCA LM 1923 A). Båda inspelningarna står på toppen. »Femmans» demoni och »ödesmättnad» framträder med klarhet och en rent musikantisk finess som gläder. Schubert-symfonins romantik och melodik, som har folkvisans omedelbarhet i varpen, är lika suveränt tolkad.

Ett annat kynne präglar Berlioz Symphonie Fantastique op 14 (RCA LM 1900 A). Här härskar högromantiken som framför allt genom Berlioz kom att introducera impressionismen. Bostonmusikerna är skickliga, och den stora formen med en mångfald tjusiga detaljer lever vackert under Charles Munchs händer. Symfonin är ett av Berlioz stora verk och särskilt värdefull i en så idealisk inspelning. Ett bra kliv fram i tiden kan man ta genom att lyssna till Ravels Daphnis et Chloe (RCA A12R 0171). Det är en koreografisk symfoni. Ursprungligen skrev Ravel denna musik som ren balettmusik och med den ryska koreografen Diaghilev som »påfösare». Den tillkom år 1912. Numera spelas den lika ofta utan dans. För RCA-inspelningens utomordentliga kvalitet svarar inte bara Charles Munch och musikerna utan minst lika mycket den framstående körledaren Robert Shaw med sångare ur New England Conservatory Chorus och Alumni Chorus. Resultatet är strålande.

nískt elegant tolkning av Georges Alés, Pierre Coddée och Ruggero Gerlin.

TRE RYSSAR

med lika många särarter presenterar RCA, Metronome och Amadeo. Tjajkovskijs välkända pianokonsert nr 1, som filmen höll på att göra ett örhänge av, finns på RCA (LM-1969). Sovjetunionens just nu kanske förnämsta pianist, Emil Gilels, åstadkommer underverket att med fin poesi och perfektaste inlevelse ge nytt, sprudlande liv åt denna välkända konsert. Fritz Reiner och Chicago Symphony Orchestra ledsagar intensivt och friskt. Konserten är ju musik man särskilt gärna lyssnar till, och mer än gärna i detta utförande, som renderar hrr Gilels och Reiner högsta betyg.

Rachmaninov förbinder man med hans pianokonsert nr 2 — den har blivit mest omtyckt. Men han har en omfattande komposition bakom sig, och hans symfoni nr 1 bevisar att han redan som 22-åring var förvånansvärt mogen. Stockholms radioorkester under Jacques Rachmilovichs ledning gör en grann uppvisning av symfonin på Metro-

---

Presentation of Boston Symphony Orchestra medal,

hyllade Theorell

Professor Hugo Theorell fick på torsdagen ta emot en unik utmärkelse. Det skedde vid en mottagning på amerikanska ambassaden, där

Presentation of Boston Symphony Orchestra medal
October 18, 1956

klang. Flera [illegible] musikälskare har vant sig att med välbehag och [illegible] lyssna till den orkestern — via platta oss vanliga dödliga emellan. I år fyller orkestern 75 år, men av åldern märks platt intet. Tvärtom är den ute och firar jubileet med en stor konsertturné genom en rad länder i Europa, bl a Sverige som nyligen gästats.

Under årens lopp har en lång rad fina dirigenter varit orkesterns instruktörer. En av dem var den berömde Wagner-dirigenten Carl Muck som under förra kriget var krigsfånge i USA, samtidigt som han dirigerade Boston-musikerna. Den som nu leder orkesterns öden är fransmannen Charles Munch. Till börden är han tysk, eftersom han är född i Elsass-Lothringen, men hans förtrogenhet med och inlevelse i franskt kynne gör honom lika spirituell som kunnig.

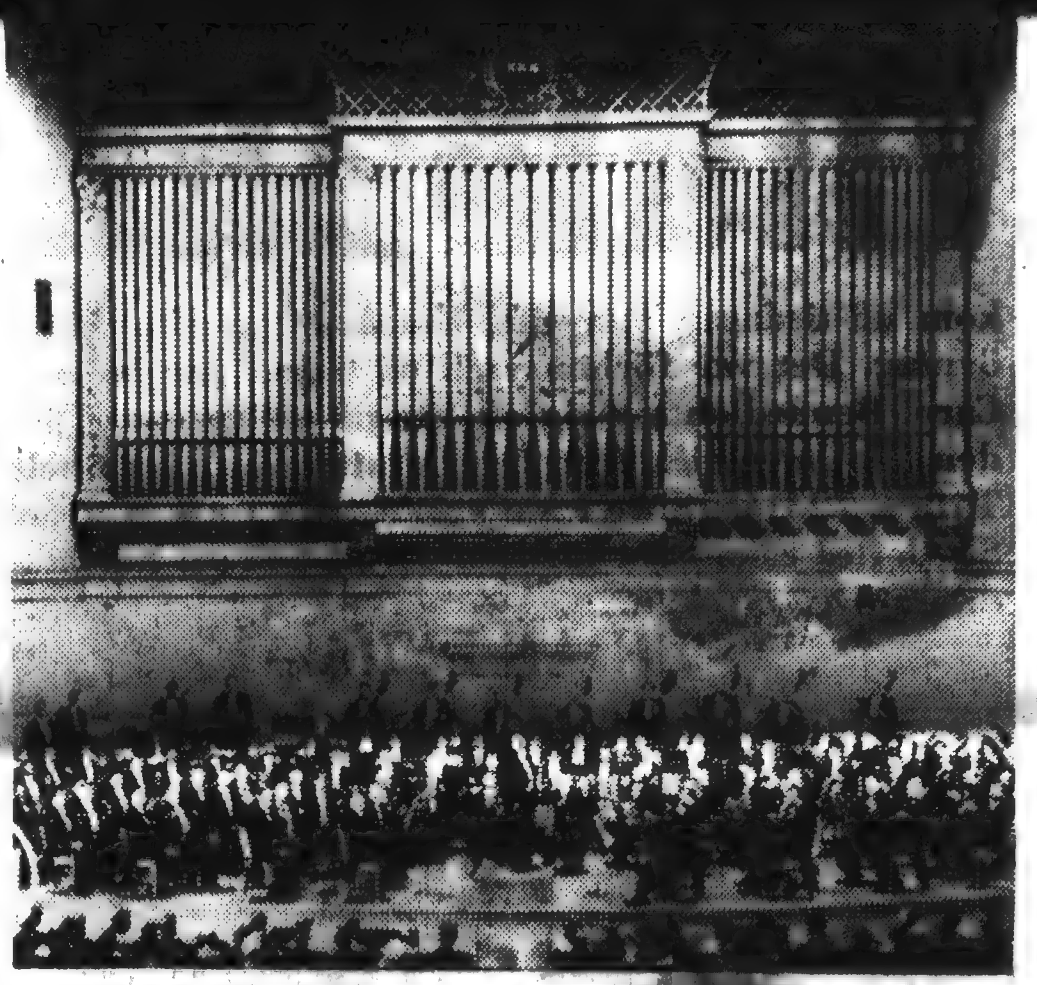
Hur elegant och lyhörd han är som dirigent kan man studera på några RCA-inspelningar med Charles Munch. En platta bjuder på två så utsökta saker som Beethovens femma och Schuberts ofullbordade (RCA LM 1928 A). Båda inspelningarna står på toppen. »Femmans» demoni och »ödesmättnad» framträder med klarhet och en rent musikantisk finess som gläder. Schubert-symfonins romantik och melodik, som har folkvisans omedelbarhet i varpen, är lika suveränt tolkad.



Här ses en del av Bostons symfoniorkester [illegible] konsertlokal.

Ett annat kynne präglar Berlioz Symphonie Fantastique op 14 (RCA LM 1900 A). Här härskar högromantiken som framför allt genom Berlioz kom att introducera impressionismen. Bostonmusikerna är skickliga, och den stora formen med en mångfald tjusiga detaljer lever vackert under Charles Munchs händer. Symfonin är ett av Berlioz stora verk och särskilt värdefull i en så idealisk inspelning. Ett bra kliv fram i tiden kan man ta genom att lyssna till Ravels Daphnis et Chloe (RCA A12R 0171). Det är en koreografisk symfoni. Ursprungligen skrev Ravel denna musik som ren balettmusik och med den ryska koreografen Diaghilev som »påfösare». Den tillkom år 1912. Numera spelas den lika ofta utan dans. För RCA-inspelningens utomordentliga kvalitet svarar inte bara Charles Munch och musikerna utan minst lika mycket den framstående körledaren Robert Shaw med sångare ur New England Conservatory Chorus och Alumni Chorus. Resultatet är strålande.

BUXTEHUDE OCH LOEILLET

Alf Linder är ingalunda obekant i Umeå. För något år sen invigningsspelade han i Backens kyrka och prisade dess orgel, den största helmekaniska i vårt land. Vi kan återknyta bekantskapen med honom via en Westminsterplatta (WN 18117), där han inleder en serie av Dietrich Buxtehudes orgelverk. Den första volymen upptar två chaconner, en passacagliga samt tre koralfantasier, bl a »Wie schön leuchtet der Morgenstern» och »Ich rufe zu dir». Alf Linder spelar på Vårfrukyrkans orgel i Skänninge, ett härligt instrument som passar Buxtehude som hand i handske. Man kan beundra den tekniskt och musikaliskt förstklassiga plattan, som lovar jättestort för fortsättningen.

Jean Baptiste Loeillet var ungefär samtida med Buxtehude, styvt ett årtionde yngre, och nederländare. För det stora flertalet musikälskare är han ett oskrivet blad, varför presentationen av honom på L'Oiseau-Lyre-London (OL 50018) är en intressant sak. Den visar en kompositör, kunnig och melodirik och livfull, som ger mersmak. Två triosonater, en violinsonat och en violincellsonat med cembalo får en eggande och tekniskt elegant tolkning av Georges Alés, Pierre Coddée och Ruggero Gerlin.

TRE RYSSAR

med lika många särarter presenterar RCA, Metronome och Amadeo. Tjajkovskijs välkända pianokonsert nr 1, som filmen höll på att göra ett örhänge av, finns på RCA (LM-1969). Sovjetunionens just nu kanske förnämsta pianist, Emil Gilels, åstadkommer underverket att med fin poesi och perfektaste inlevelse ge nytt, sprudlande liv åt denna välkända konsert. Fritz Reiner och Chicago Symphony Orchestra ledsagar intensivt och friskt. Konserten är ju musik man särskilt gärna lyssnar till, och mer än gärna i detta utförande, som renderar hrr Gilels och Reiner högsta betyg.

Rachmaninov förbinder man med hans pianokonsert nr [illegible] — den har blivit mest omtyckt. Men han har en omfattande komposition bakom sig, och hans symfoni nr 1 bevisar att han redan som 22-åring var förvånansvärt mogen. Stockholms radioorkester under Jacques Rachmilovichs ledning gör en grann uppvisning av symfonin på Metronome (CLP 508). Det är ingen djupsinnig musik, men dramatisk, omväxlande och uppåt. Och spelbar. Kort sagt bra musik.

Ett relativt nytt märke på marknaden är österrikiska Amadeo. Man blir imponerad av Amadeos intentioner då man lyssnar till dess version av Prokofievs profankantat Alexander Nevskij (AVRS 6017). Italienaren Mario Rossi med Wiens statsoperas kör och orkester samt den spanska mezzosopranen Ana Maria Iriarte åstadkommer nämligen tillsammans någonting som inte undgår göra ett djupt intryck på musikvännen. I kantaten finns också märkliga tonmålningar, effektfulla körer, ålderdomliga pentatoniska fanfarer, »motoriska» rytmer, sjätte satsens klagosång, en pärla i Prokofievs produktion, och slutsatsens färggranna intåg i Pskov. Den omsorgsfulla Amadeo-inspelningen gör Prokofiev full rättvisa.

BRITTISK MUSIK

har egentligen för liten resonans i vårt land. Lyssna t ex på hur Eric Coates dirigerar sina London Suite [illegible] Again Suite [illegible] Par[illegible] ([illegible] 1004). [illegible] Philharmonic Promenade Orchestra [illegible] sid. 7) esting [illegible] Blonde, while the part of Constanze [illegible] internationally known Swedish soprano Hjordis Schymberg. Arne Henriksen was again a very pleasant Belmonte, while the excellent young baritone Anders Näslund was obliged to show his skill as an actor in the non-singing role of the Pasha, which he did in magnificent style. Sven Erik Skawonius's décor and costumes were a delight and once again the lighting department of the Stockholm Opera demonstrated that it is second to none.

---

The New York Metropolitan star Blanche Thebom, this autumn's guest artist, made her first appearance as Delilah in Samson and Delilah opposite Set Svanholm. The part of the High Priest was taken by Sigurd Bjorling, a role which he had sung at the Metropolitan but not previously in Stockholm.

[93]

och både sviterna är kul och sund musik, värd att lyssna till när som helst. Kul har också unge Benjamin Britten haft när han komponerade Soirées Musicales och Matinées Musicales. De både sviterna skrevs som balettmusik och musiken i dom går tillbaka till Rossini. Dennes teman har Benjamin Britten vävt kring med sina arabesker och lekfulla infall. Warwick Braithwaite leder en ensemble från Covent Garden-operan på Parlophone (PMD 1020) och det hela är småtrevligt och fräscht.

Tillbaka itll den engelska visans gröna marker leder oss Father Sydney Mac Ewan i en Columbia-platta (33S 1073). Tillsammans med en orkester under Philip Green gör han en sympatiskt chosfri presentation av skotska och irländska folkvisor under titeln »Songs of Scotland and Ireland». Man lyssnar med glädje till Scotland the Brave, My Ain Folk, Loch Lamond, Mother Machree, Rose of Killarney och alla de andra.

ANTONIN DVORAK

har tillsammans med Smetana blivit tjeckernas nationalkompositör. Hans musik är alltid — eller nästan alltid — nationellt betingad. Och alla gånger är den romantiskt konstnärlig, problemfri och lätt i örat. Hans violinkonsert a-moll är en typisk exponent på hans stil. Där finns intensiv melodi, flödande välljud och musikglädje. På Telefunken (LSK 7004) spelar Georg Kulenkampff m. härlig ton och briljant teknik violinstämman, medan Berlin-symfonikerna svarar för resten. Eugen Jochum är bas för det vältrimmade basset. Den plattan går in direkt.

Den typiskt slaviska rytmen, som vi är vana vid från Dvoraks slaviska danser återfinner vi i hans Slaviska rapsodier. Han skrev tre — två av dem har Deutsche Grammophon spelat in med Bamberg-symfonikerna, under Fritz Lehmann, som exekutörer. Det är färg och glädje och ljudteknisk höjd på inspelningen (16037 LP). Vill man bli Dvorak-frälst. kan man fortsätta med hans stråkkvartett nr 3, som finns på Telefunken (LB 6061). Här finner man samma kompositörglädje åt att skriva musik för hjärtat. Philharmonia-kvartetten i Wien, bestående av hrr Gustav Swoboda, Siegfrid Rumpold, August Pioro och Richard Harand, förenar precision med god smak.

PARLÉ

Presentation of Boston Symphony Orchestra medal
October 18, 1956

(Left: Chargé d'Affaires M. W. P. Cochran (Rt. : Professor [illegible]

Bostonsymfoniker hyllade Theorell

Professor Hugo Theorell fick på torsdagen ta emot en unik utmärkelse. Det skedde vid en mottagning på amerikanska ambassaden, där USA:s chargé d'affaires William Cochran överräckte en medalj från Bostons symfoniorkester. Medaljen har präglats med anledning av orkesterns 75-årsjubileum, och mr Cochran tolkade i ett älskvärt anförande orkesterns och dess ledares uppskattning av Hugo Theorells insatser vid orkesterns besök i september.

Meningen var att medaljen skulle ha lämnats i det ögonblick då Hugo Theorell hade hållit sitt tal och lämnat sina blommor på kvällen den 3 september i Konserthuset, avslöjade överceremonimästare Joen Lagerberg. Professor Theorell var varskodd och redo, men medaljen hann inte fram i tid.

Men också på det här sättet blev det en lyckad medaljutdelning med småkakor och champagne och magnifik utsikt över den höstdisiga Djurgårdsbrunnsviken.

Professor Theorell uttryckte sin förtjusning över att nu äga ett bestående minne av den oförglömliga konserten och lät klenoden gå runt bland gästerna.

— Det gick ju bra det här, sa han efteråt. Det kan gå illa också. Häromdagen skulle jag själv dela ut två medaljer på en gång. Första omgången gick fint. Men när jag skulle räcka fram medalj nummer två upptäckte jag att jag höll i mitt cigarrettetui.

Oct. 19 '56 ★ Margaret.

Professor Hugo Theorell fick på torsdagen motta en medalj från Bostons symfoniorkester. Medaljen är präglad med anledning av orkesterns 75-årsjubileum och den överlämnades vid en mottagning på amerikanska ambassaden. Bilden visar Förenta staternas chargé d'affaires William P. Cochran och professor Hugo Theorell. Se artikel på sidan 13.

★

Musikalisk medalj till Theorell.

MT Oct. 19 '56

Till sitt Nobelpris i medicin kan professor Hugo Theorell nu också foga en mycket fin utmärkelse på sitt andra specialområde — musiken. På torsdagen överlämnade USA:s chargé d'affaires William Cochran Bostons Symfoniorkesters 75-årsmedalj till professor Theorell i hans egenskap av Konsertföreningens ordförande och förgrundsfigur inom svenskt musikliv. Orkestern har i år med anledning av sitt 75-årsjubileum genomfört en stor europeisk turné; Stockholm besöktes i september. I några av de besökta länderna har man också delat ut medaljen.

Här ses professorn — till höger — förtjust ta en titt på utmärkelsetecknet.

Presentation of Boston Symphony Orchestra medal,
October 18, 1956

(Left: Chargé d'Affaires [illegible] Cochran (Rt. Profes

- PHOTOGRAPH -
ORIGINAL STORED
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES

Presentation of Boston Symphony Orchestra medal
October 18, 1956
(Left: Chargé d'Affaires, Mr.W.P.Cochran (Rt. : Professor Hugo T

Professor Hugo Theorell fick på torsdagen motta en medalj från Bostons symfoniorkester. Medaljen är präglad med anledning av orkesterns 75-årsjubileum och den överlämnades vid en mottagning på amerikanska ambassaden. Bilden visar Förenta staternas chargé d'affaires William P. Cochran och professor Hugo Theorell. Se artikel på sidan 13.

Musikalisk medalj till Theorell.

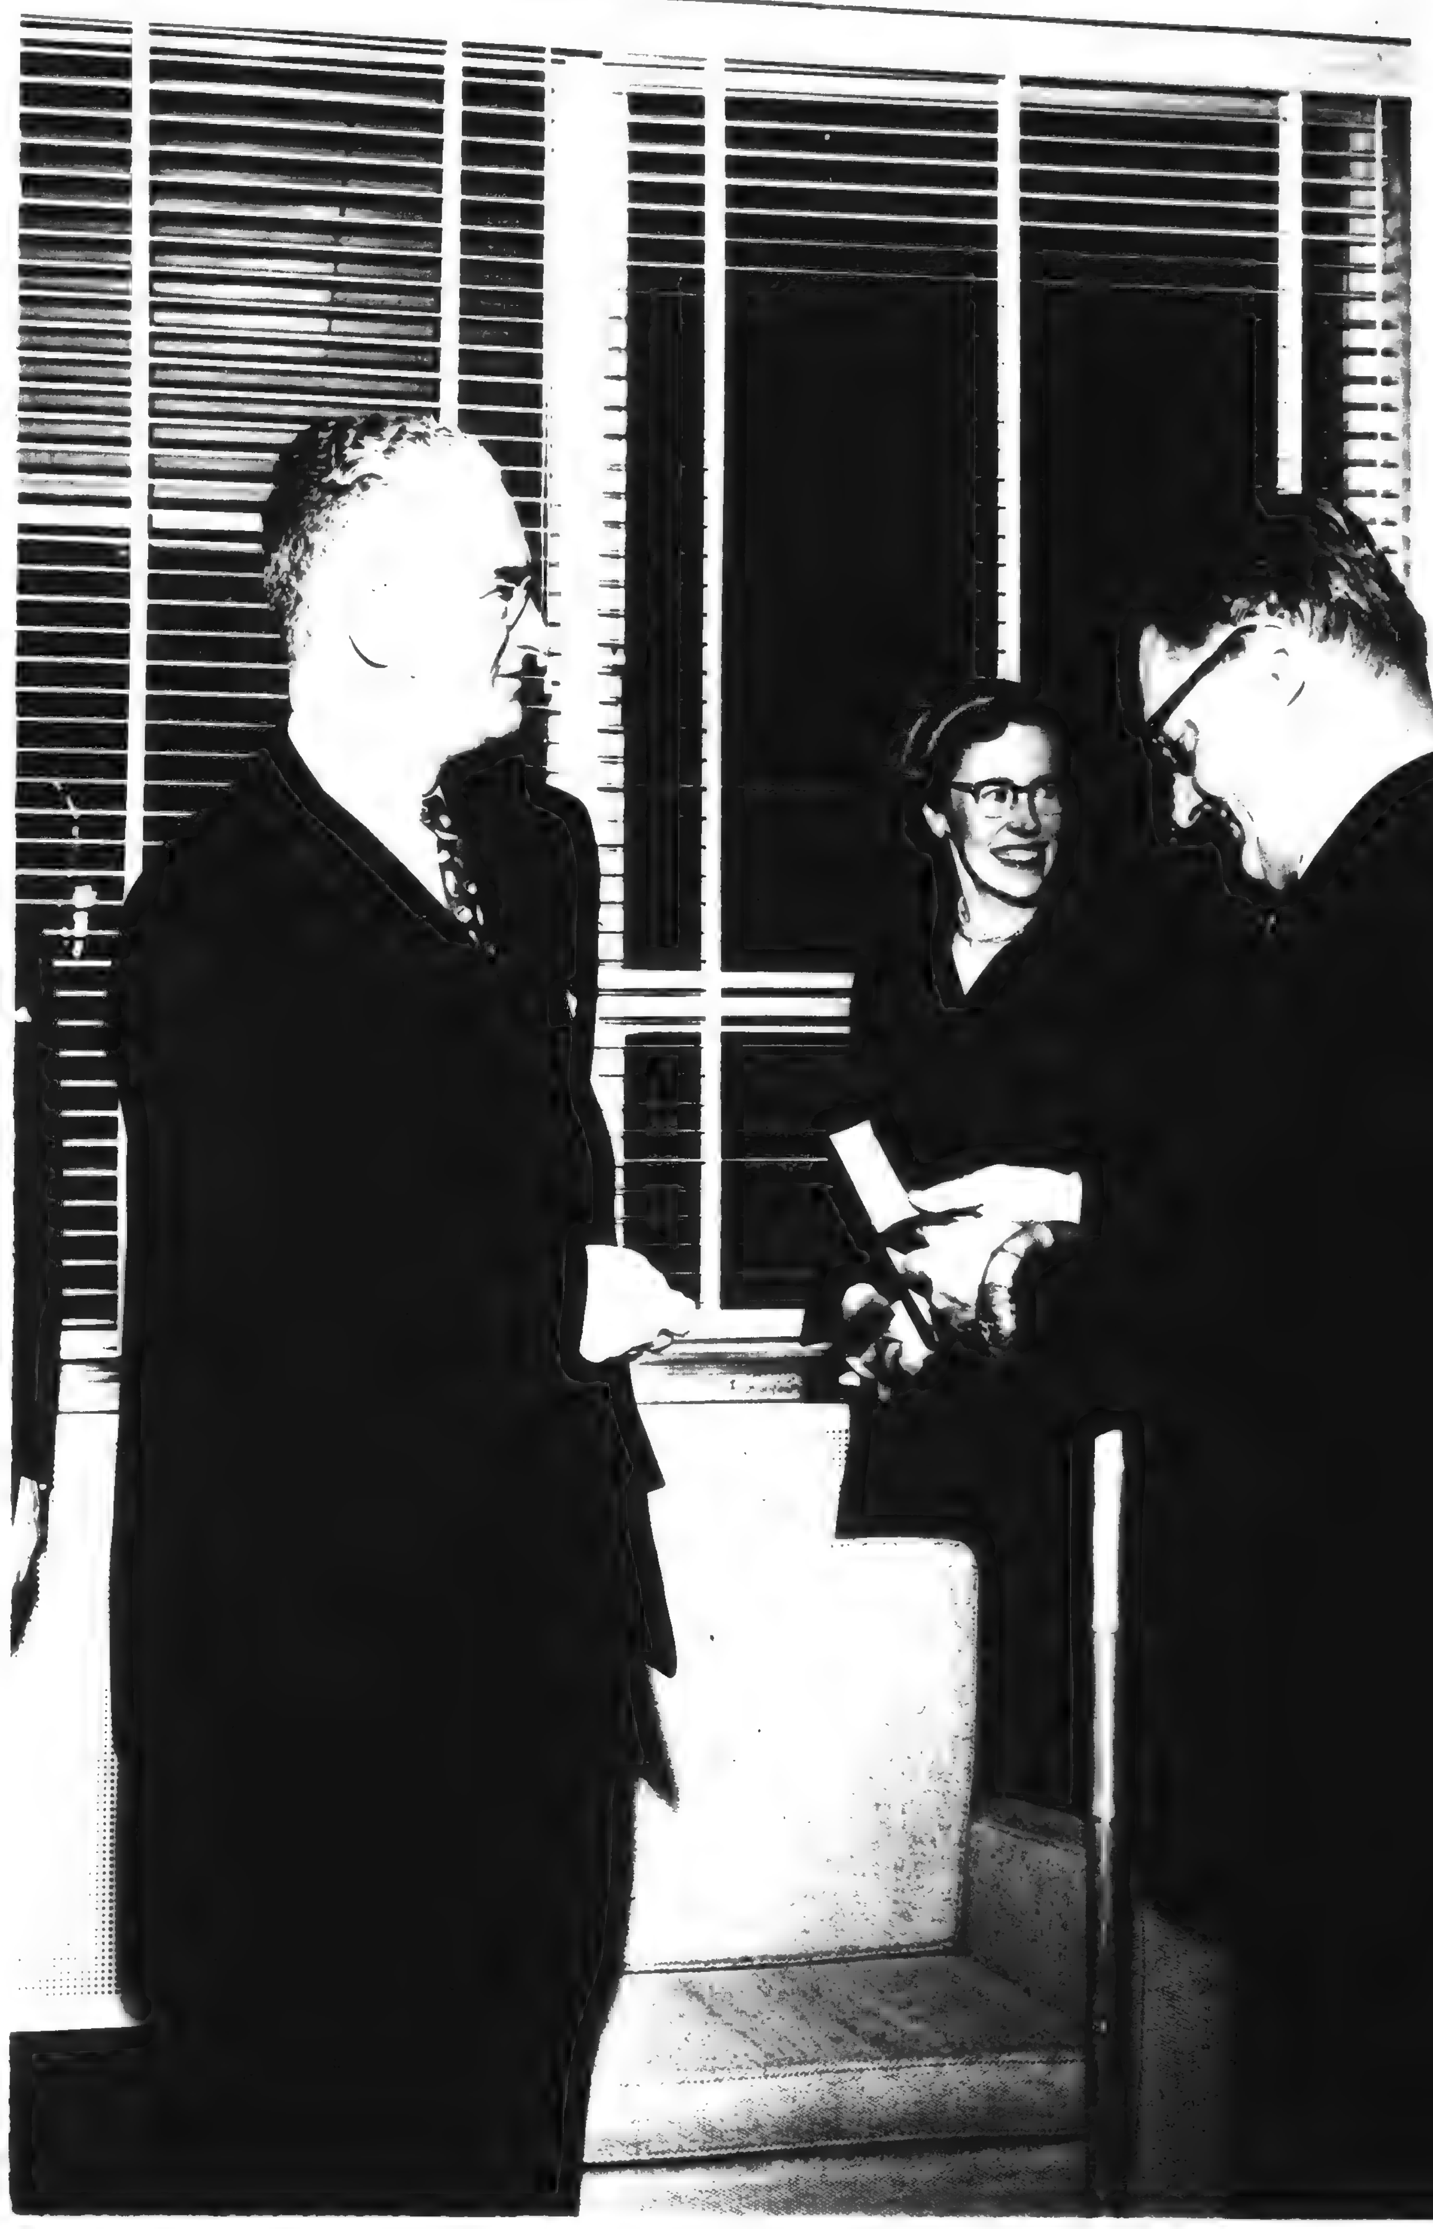
MT Oct 19 '56

Till sitt Nobelpris i medicin kan professor Hugo Theorell nu också foga en mycket fin utmärkelse på sitt andra specialområde — musiken. På torsdagen överlämnade USA:s chargé d'affaires William Cochran Bostons Symfoniorkesters 75-årsmedalj till professor Theorell i hans egenskap av Konsertföreningens ordförande och förgrundsfigur inom svenskt musikliv. Orkestern har i år med anledning av sitt 75-årsjubileum genomfört en stor europeisk turné; Stockholm besöktes i september. I några av de besökta länderna har man också delat ut medaljen.

Här ses professorn — till höger — förtjust ta en titt på utmärkelsetecknet.

Presentation of Boston Symphony Orchestra medal,
October 18, 1956
(Left: Chargé
(Rt. Profe

- PHOTOGRAPH -
ORIGINAL STORED
ELSEWHERE IN ARCHIVES



TIGHT BINDING

see also vol. II

Fin medalj till Theorell

Professor Hugo Theorell fick en förnämlig utmärkelse på amerikanska ambassaden på torsdagen: Bostons symfoniorkesters 75-årsmedalj, som bara delas ut i ett enda exemplar i varje land.

Det var inte nobelpristagaren och molekyl- och enzymprofessorn utan musikern Hugo Theorell, som hyllades med den unika medaljen. Främst fick han utmärkelsen som tack för sina insatser vid Bostonsymfonikernas gästspel hos Konsertföreningen, där han är ordförande.

För att fira 75-årsjubileet av sin tillblivelse har orkestern turnerat i en rad länder; förutom Sverige bl. a. i Norge, Danmark, Finland, England, Irland och Ryssland. Ett fåtal musikaliskt förtjänta personer — inte mer än en i varje land — har i samband med jubileumsgästspelen begåvats med medaljen, som på framsidan pryds av en knäböjande yngling med en harpa.

Utmärkelsen överlämnades till professorn av USA;s chargé d'affaires, William Cochran — se bilden — vid en mottagning på amerikanska ambassaden på torsdagseftermiddagen.

Stockholms-Tidningen
Oct. 18, 1956

Dagens Nyheter
Oct. 19 1956

Bostonorkestern tackar för sist

Professor Hugo Theorell fick i sin egenskap av Konsertföreningens ordförande en fin medalj på amerikanska ambassaden på torsdagen. USA:s chargé d'affaires, William P Cochran, överlämnade då — i närvaro av överceremonimästare Joen Lagerberg och byråchefen Backlund från UD — en bronsplakett som Bostons symfoniorkester låtit prägla för att fira sitt 75-årsjubileum. Mr Cochran hyllade professor Theorell både för att han är en så fin musiker och för att han nedlade stor möda i samband med orkesterns Sverigebesök för någon månad sedan.

— Fast det var inte jag som tog hit musikerna, utan Helmer Envall i Konsertbolaget, påpekar professor Theorell. Det var ju mycket roligt att få lyssna till denna utomordentliga orkester, som tävlar med Philadelphias — som var här i fjol — om att vara Amerikas förnämsta, Professor Theorell tar emot Bostonorkesterns medalj av USA:s chargé d'affaires, mr Cochran.

Jag har hört Bostonorkestern i Amerika flera gånger, men vill man göra en jämförelse med våra svenska orkestermedlemmar är det naturligtvis här i vårt eget konserthus som man skall lyssna till dem. Jag tycker inte att de låt sämre här än i sina lokaler i Boston, som dock är kända för sin fina akustik!

STOCKHOLMS-TIDNINGEN Sept. 2, 1956

KJELL STENSSON

Besök av BOSTONS SYMFONIKER

Efter New Yorkfilharmonien är Bostonorkestern den äldsta symfoniorkestern i Amerika. Den kan i år med välbehag och stolthet se tillbaka på en sjuttiofemårig tillvaro och firar tilldragelsen med en Europa-turné med konserter bl. a. vid Edinburgh-festspelen, i Skandinavien (Stockholm gästas den 3 september) och — som första amerikanska orkester — i Sovjetunionen.

Den grundades av en musikälskande miljonär Henry Lee Higginson, som hade den goda vanan att täcka den brist som uppstod i verksamheten ur egen ficka. Orkesterns grundare var originell också i det avseendet att han aldrig lade sig i konstnärliga frågor: orkesterns repertoar, gästdirigenter och personalproblem har alltid varit och är fortfarande en angelägenhet enbart för dess konstnärliga ledare och dirigent.

Europeiska dirigenter

Folk som inte bekänner sig till den materialistiska historieuppfattningen brukar hylla åsikten att Sveriges historia är dess konungars. Med större rätt kan man påstå att Bostonorkesterns historia är dess dirigenters. Mr. Higginson hade från början ett öppet sinne för vad goda och rutinerade dirigenter kan betyda för en ung orkesters växt och ans och införskrev från Europa sådana goda namn som stod att få. I början av 90-talet ledde sålunda den legendariske Artur Nikisch orkestern under några år. Han förde den i kontakt med den stora europeiska traditionen; själv lärde han sig i utbyte spela poker. Ett stycke in på det nya seklet var kejserlige operakapellmästaren Karl Muck dess dirigent.

Under hans tid framfördes det enda svenska opus som förekommer i orkesterns nära 600 nummer långa förteckning över framförda verk: Hugo Alfvéns tredje symfoni. Muck gjorde också 1917 de första grammofoninspelningarna med orkestern, bl. a. av Tjajkovskijs fjärde symfoni, och föregicks av en annan tysk dirigent Max Fiedler, under sin ålders höst bosatt i Stockholm. Fransmannen Pierre Monteux, som medföljer på Europa-turnén som samdirigent med orkesterns nuvarande konstnärlige ledare Charles Münch, ledde orkestern under en femårsperiod innan Serge Koussevitzky kom 1924 för att stanna i ett kvarts sekel.

Koussevitzky-epoken

Under Koussevitzkys autokratiska regim utvecklades orkestern till ett virtuosinstrument av högsta klass, i sitt hemland endast jämförbart med Philadelphiaorkestern under Stokowski och New Yorkfilharmonien under Toscanini. Koussevitzky visade sig inte bara vara en orkesteruppfostra och ensemblesammansvetare rang, han var därjämte en pi jär för modern musik, inte den amerikanska. Förteckn över hans uruppföranden Bostonorkestern är lång som lista över [illegible] i pagandan: Gershwins andra norapsodi med tonsättaren som solist, Barbers andra sym och cellokonsert, flertalet av ward Hansons och Ray Har symfonier och inte minst Bart Konsert för orkester hör till verk som för första gången klingande gestalt i Bostons phony Hall med dess magni akustik. Bartokkompositionen ställdes speciellt för Bostonork tern liksom tidigare ett annat römt verk: Stravinskijs Psalmsy foni. Till 75-årsjubileet har gått vidare på denna väg och ställt inte mindre än 15 verk 2.000 dollar stycket) av samti tonsättare, bland dem Milhau Ibert, Petrassi, Copland och V Lobos.

Boston Pops

Bostonorkestern förekom även i en något lättsinnigare klädnad som kallas Bostons menadorkester eller kortare P Denna form av konsertverk het startade redan 1895, 1930 har den med mycken och lagom mått av djupsinne av Arthur Fiedler (deras in ning av Jacob Gades Tango Ja sie var den första symfonior terinspelning som i försälj passerade miljonstrecket). dessa konserter äger rum i phony Hall: när den klassiska songen är till ända får de sittplatserna maka åt sig för möjliggöra salens omvandling ett jättekafé, där symfonike ternas högtidliga allvar ersätts en uppsluppen glättighet, rad av det populära program och stundtals möjligen ocks den förekommande vinserveri en. Under juli månad flyttar Po orkestern utomhus och ger rie konserter för tiotusentals tislyssnare på stranden av Ch les River.

Amerikas flitigaste

Säsongen är emellertid i ifrån slut med utomhuskonser na. Under senare delen av och hela augusti verkar orkest på sitt sommarställe Tanglew beläget 17 mil väster om Bo där det årligen anordnas mu festspel och där en betydande dagogisk verksamhet utövas det anslutna Berkshire Mu Center. I oktober börjar säso på nytt: av årets 52 veckor orkestern i verksamhet 46 medeltal fyra konserter per v med tillhörande repetitioner der högsäsongen spelar orke regelbundet en vecka per m utanför Boston, i New York Harvard- och Yaleuniversiteten

För denna imponerande ar prestation uppbär ingen av de orkestermedlemmarna (med medelålder som ligger under en årslön som understiger dollar. Pensionsförhållanden liberala, åtminstone efter kansk måttstock: orkesterns sionärer får hälften av den som tillkommit dem om de farande varit aktiva. Det minst anmärkningsvärda me ta arrangemang är att pens följer levnadskostnaderna: genialt enkel lösning av ett blem som även länder med cerad sociallagstiftning tyc svårt att komma till rätta

Orkesterns ledning (sedan existerar Bostonorkestern på lagsbasis) betraktar själv tern som demokratisk kult tor. Man håller sålunda fort de fast vid traditionen att 251 av platserna i Symphony till det facila priset av 60 cen följer i fråga om biljettpri ytterst motvilligt med i ningen uppåt. En vanlig ork konsert tar i omkostnader dollar i genomsnitt. Ett hus ger i intäkter 7.100 d Skillnaden multiplicerad 220 som är det årliga konse talet, ger ett imponerande u skott på drygt 300.000 dollar detta täcks ungefär hälften en stödorganisation Bostons Symfonikers Vänner, med frivilliga bidrag, varierande mellan 1 och 15.000 dollar, och resten genom bidrag från affärsdonationer, royalties på världen i Boston, grammofoninspelningar, honorar för radiomedverkan och liknande.

Grammofonskivor

Till 75-årsjubileet har RCA-Victor, som Bostonorkestern varit knuten till sedan 1917, ställt i ordning en LP-skiva, som på ena sidan upptar en summarisk genomgång av symfoniorkesterns och på andra av Pops-orkesterns historia. Den är nöjsam att lyssna till, inte minst genom de insprängda musikillustrationerna från 1917 och fram till 1956. Annars har Bostonorkestern förekommit sparsamt på grammofon i LP-tidevarvet, sannolikt beroende på att RCA-Victor ville ta ut vad som erbjöd sig av Toscanini och NBC-orkestern medan de båda var aktiva.

Koussevitzky-epoken i orkesterns historia är bättre bevarad på grammofon. Hans och orkesterns inspelningar av Prokofjevs Klassiska symfoni, av Debussys Havet, av Mendelssohns Italienska symfoni hör till det som får vara kvar i arkivet, även om det numera upptar en otidsenligt stor plats. Och deras version av Sibelius andra och femte symfonier lyser alltjämt i minnet som musikupplevelser av unikt slag.

Skall jag med ledning av grammofonskivor — jag har aldrig hört orkestern i annan form — söka summera ett totalintryck av Bostonorkestern är det ingen mening att tala om precision, den fulländade ensemblespelet, den raffinerade klangfärgrikedomen och annat mera i den stilen. Sådana epitet kan förbindas med många orkestrar, inte minst med dess ende jämbördiga konkurrent på hemmaplan, Philadelphiaorkestern.

Det som för mig i första hand skiljer Bostonorkestern från andra stora orkestrar är att det låter så påfallande vackert om dess prestationer. Det finns en noblesse i dess spel, en värme och inlevelse i dess föredrag som är [illegible] adelsmärke.

På måndag framträder den världsberömda Bostonorkestern i Stockholm. Som dirigenter på europaturnén medföljer Pierre Monteux (t. v. på bilden) och Charles Münch (t. h.). I mitten står Serge Koussevitzky, ledare av Bostonsymfonikerna under ett kvartssekel.

Sept 7

With the BSO Abroad

Berkshire Eagle Sept. 7

Hedge-Hopping in Scandinavia

By Margo Miller

This is the seventh of a series of airmailed articles from this newspaper's correspondent with the Russia-bound BSO orchestra, which played the first of its five Russian concerts in Leningrad last night.

STOCKHOLM.

ANOTHER DAY, another dollar. Another king, another korna, as the Boston Symphony rips through Scandinavia.

The big silver SAS planes set us down in Copenhagen or Olso or Stockholm, and before the propellers are still the line at the air terminal bank is ten-deep. How many kronor to the dollar? The first customer cashes traveler's checks. The second tries to convert all odd coins, from Ireland to Norway, plus six Lincoln pennies he threw in. The third never gets in line. He's that expert who bought Swedish notes back in March. If he looks puzzled instead of complacent he is just wondering whether it wouldn't have been smarter to buy them in England. Oh, well, let x equal . . .

After the bank, it's the long bus ride into the city with the buses dropping us — all six or seven score — at the official hotel. Many then are left to the mercy of whatever vehicle happens along. Those with pretty legs sit on their suitcases. Those without pretty legs sit on their suitcases. In any case, your best bet is the nearest bar where for a modest tariff, you can be assured of your bearings by multilingual waiters and plot a course to your own hotel five blocks away.

* * *

WE HAD a free day in Oslo on Sunday. Assuredly it was welcome. Since the opening concert in Cork on Aug. 24, the BSO has played eight concerts in eight successive days — two in Ireland, five in Scotland, and one in Copenhagen. And despite the fact that musicians are the world's greatest rubbernecks we were hardly noticed in the Norwegian capital. Just because we weren't wearing black hats with silk tassels hanging to the shoulders. The city was afloat with alumni of the university from the "aughty-aughts" to last year's class back to welcome the incoming plebes.

And that wasn't all. The Brazilian navy was in. The French navy was in. The Swiss navy comes tomorrow followed by Popeye.

They say Americans are the worst tourists, but not an eye bats when a member of the BSO lies down on his stomach to take a picture of Kon-Tiki's underpinnings. He may have two cameras, a light meter, and a case of film, but because he hasn't got a hat on he's a nobody. I guess if you want to be a successful hat-less tourist, be the English lady at the Café Grand. She sent her tea back to the kitchen because it was made in a bag. Mr. Tetley ain't her cup of, etc.

* * *

WELL, WE'RE doing better in the concert hall. The King of Denmark, Frederick, came to hear us at Copenhagen and followed a score during each piece. We learned protocol the hard way. Monteux bounced on stage and bowed and bowed and bowed. He couldn't find the Royal Box which gets the first obeissance, until simply by boxing the compass he hit it. The Danes thought we were an ear-splitting success, or so the paper said. And by the way, have you ever heard a Scandinavian audience in good humor? They set up a rhythmical applause that shakes the house. Monteux had to tell the men to leave the stage, finally.

In Oslo and Stockholm Munch got the flower treatment. This little ceremony has but three requisites: A forest of gladiolas and ferns strung up with satin ribbon; two speeches both in formal English, both repetitive, both halting, and lastly, a pretty girl to give the flowers to. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flute, is Munch's aide de campe in this battle of the roses. You know, I even snitched a bit of fern as a souvenir.

* * *

SCANDINAVIA is a silver mine for souvenir-hunters, and its the men who buy. We left Ireland tweedy and Scotland betartaned. Each airport we leave advises us to rid ourselves of change by buying something. If the Dublin and Edinburgh shops didn't get you the air terminals did. Prestwick Airport in Scotland created Samuel MacDiamond by virtue of Stuart plaid cuff links.

Then the buying starts all over again in the airplane. Cigarettes, about 50 cents a pack on earth, are $2.40 a carton aloft. And there's the wine cellar to replenish. "Scotch whisky, yes? Cognac, yes?" coos the purser as he makes his rounds, while underneath in the city where our first-flight plane has already landed a shopkeeper will whisper "a silver necklace, yes?"

The Norwegians and Swedes do wonders with baked enamel on silver. It's really delicious these bracelets and spoons and vases and I'm convinced if you wanted a yellow refrigerator a la mode you could probably have it made. Of course, not all like silver. There are Norwegian sweaters, Danish and Swedish crystal and all manner of wood carvings. But I wish the man who bought six matched penguins would take his affectionate little monsters off my lap. This is a small plane that we're in, and unless we give the purser a break he may never get the Scotch through.

KONSERTTITOIMISTO FAZER KONSERTDIREKTION

The

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Sinfoniakonsertti
A-Messuhallissa

Symfonikonsert
i A-Mässhallen

4. 9. 1956
klo 20

Johtaja — Dirigent

CHARLES MUNCH

Presented in cooperation with
The AMERICAN NATIONAL THEATRE AND ACADEMY

KONSERTTITOIMISTO FAZER KONSERTDIREKTION

Ohjelma

LUDWIG van BEETHOVEN .... Sinfonia III, Es-duuri op. 55 (Eroica)
(1770—1827)
I. Allegro con brio
II. Marcia funebre (Adagio assai)
III. Scherzo (Allegro vivace)
IV. Finale (Allegro molto)

VÄLIAIKA

WALTER PISTON .... Sinfonia VI
(* 1894)
I. Fluendo espressivo
II. Leggerissimo Vivace
III. Adagio Sereno
IV. Allegro energico

MAURICE RAVEL .... Musiikkia baletista Daphnis ja Chloë, sarja N:o 2
(1875—1937)
I. Päivän koitto
II. Pantomiimi
III. Tanssi

KONSERTTITOIMISTO FAZER KONSERTDIREKTION

Program

LUDWIG van BEETHOVEN .... Symfoni III, Ess-dur op. 55 (Eroica)
(1770—1827)
I. Allegro con brio
II. Marcia funebre (Adagio assai)
III. Scherzo (Allegro vivace)
IV. Finale (Allegro molto)

PAUS

WALTER PISTON .... Symfoni VI
(* 1894)
I. Fluendo espressivo
II. Leggerissimo Vivace
III. Adagio Sereno
IV. Allegro energico

MAURICE RAVEL .... Musik ur baletten Daphnis och Chloë, svit nr 2
(1875—1937)
I. Daggryning
II. Pantomim
III. Dans

CHARLES MUNCH
ja
BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI

RCA-levyillä

CHARLES MUNCH
och
BOSTONS SYMFONIORKESTER

på RCA-skivor

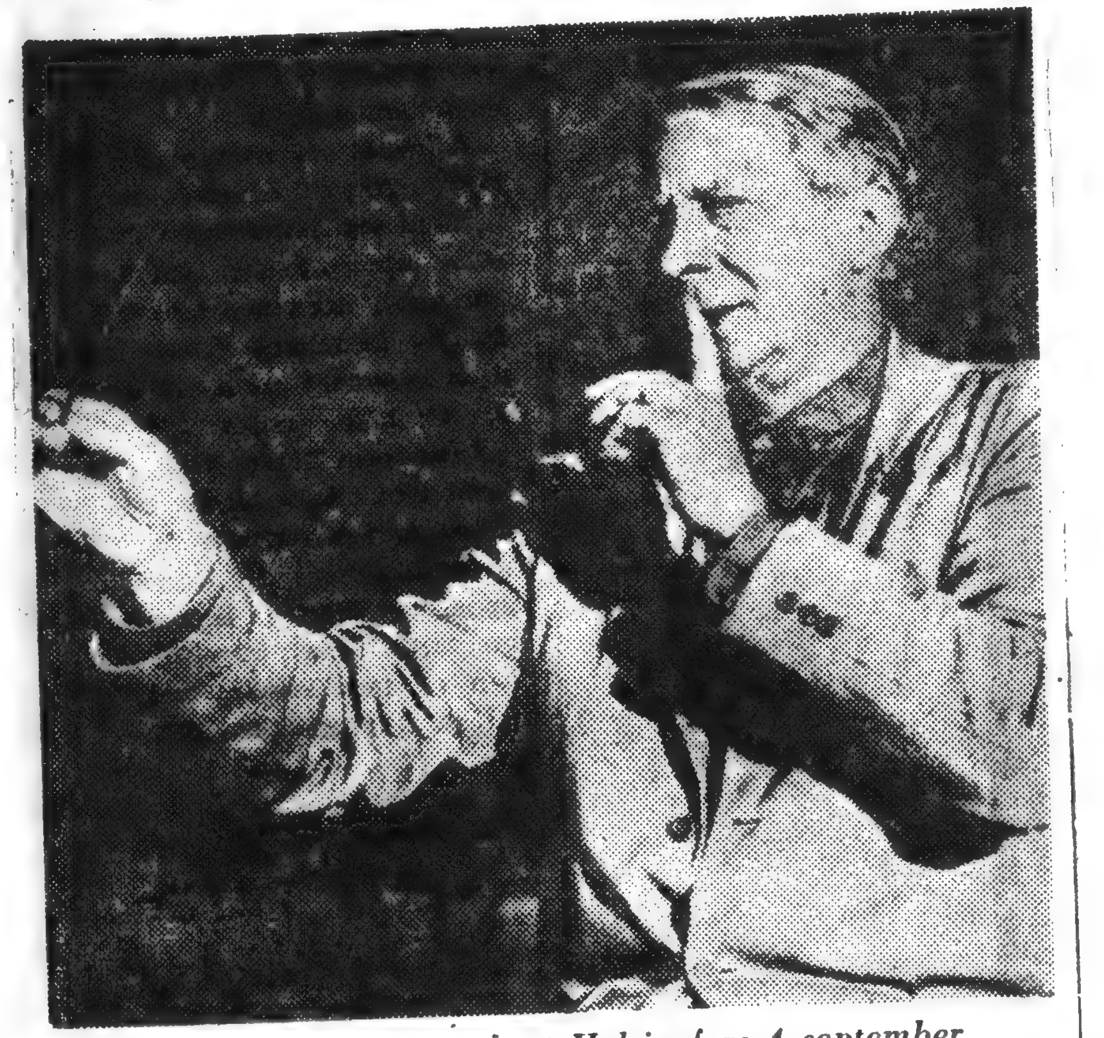
Musiikki — FAZER — Musik
LEVYAULA SKIVAULAN
Aleksanterink. 11 Alexandersg.

MERCATORIN KIRJAPAINO

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Hbl.
Pvm 17/8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniker spelar här 4 sept.



Charles Münch dirigerar i Helsingfors 4 september.

Åter ett filharmoniskt storevenemang väntar Helsingfors: Bostons symfoniorkester med Charles Münch som dirigent spelar i Mässhallen den 4 september, på väg till konserter i Leningrad och Moskva.

Med orkestern kommer också fru Olga Koussevitzky på ett första finlandsbesök. Hon är änka efter Boston Symphony Orchestra's dirigent under en lång följd av år Serge Koussevitzky, och har i egenskap av ordförande i kommittén för Sibelius-året nedlagt ett betydande arbete på att göra Sibelius' musik hörd över hela världen. Välkänd är Koussevitzkys Musikstiftelse, som bl. a. i fjol tilldelade den unge kompositen Eino Rautavaara ett stipendium för studier i Tanglewood, vid en sommarskola för musik som upprätthålls av Bostons symfoniorkester och Berkshirefestivalen.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Hels. San.
Pvm 19/8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Munch ja Bostonin sinfonikot saapuvat

Charles Munch

Ulkolaisia sinfoniaorkestereitten parhaita on viime vuosina vieraillut maassamme jotakuinkin tasaisin väliajoin, näistä useimpien matkat leveysasteillemme ovat liittyneet Sibeliusviikon runsaaseen ohjelmaan. Aivan erikoisella ilolla on tervehdittävä uutista Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin saapumisesta pääkaupunkiin alkavan syksyn ensimmäisenä musiikkitapahtumana, ajankohtana, jolloin kesän jälkeen musiikinnälkä taas on ehkä suurimmillaan.

Boston Symphony Orchestran syntysanojen lausuja oli nuori bostonilainen vannoutunut musiikin ystävä ja muusikko Henry L. Higginson, porvarilliselta ammatiltaan pankkiiri. Musiikkiopintojensa aikana Wienissä v. 1860 hän oivalsi mikä merkitys kaupungin omalla sinfoniaorkesterilla saattaa olla — ja mitä puuttui hänen omasta kotikaupungistaan. V. 1881 hän ryhtyi toteuttamaan aatettaan vakinaisen orkesterin perustamiseksi Bostoniin "toimimaan klassillisten musiikkiteosten, lähinnä sinfonioitten esittämistä varten".

Alku oli pakostakin vaatimaton. Higginson palkkasi parhaat Euroopasta saatavat muusikot ja johtajaksi kiinnitettiin nuori lahjakas Georg Henschel. Bostonin kaupunki, jota tähän asti kirjallisuus oli kiinnostanut enemmän kuin musiikki, antoi nyt sinfoniaorkesterin pyrinnöille täyden tukensa. Itävaltalainen kapellimestari Wilhelm Gericke, joka v. 1884 muutti Bostoniin, vaikutti uupumattomalla tarmollaan orkesterin soittotaidon paranemiseen ja hioutumiseen. Hänen seuraajansa Arthur Nikisch kohotti yhä esitysten tulkinnallista puolta huomattavasti, samoin hänen jälkeensä Emil Paur. Gericke palasi jälleen v. 1898 orkesterin johtajaksi, ja soittajiston suorituskyky kehittyi vähitellen kohti yhä suurempaa kypsyyttä. Vuosi 1900 on merkittävä vaihe: tällöin orkesteri pääsi muuttamaan omaan konserttisaliin, uuden uutukaiseen Symphony Hall'iin.

Taipaleella kohti suuria päämääriä oltiin nyt päästy lopullisesti avoveteen, ja tavoitteet asetettiin yhä korkeammalle. Kun uuden kapellimestarin valinta jälleen tuli ajankohtaiseksi Higginson käsitti, että orkesterin taso jo edellytti varsin huomattavaa johtajaa. Pitkän valinnan jälkeen päädyttiin Karl Muckiin, kauttaaltaan hienostuneeseen, ansioituneeseen ja musikaaliseen kapellimestariin, joka sitten paria taukoa lukuunottamatta (vv. 1908 ja 1912, jolloin Max Fiedler oli hänen sijaisenaan) yhtämittaisesti pysyi tehtävässään aina v. 1918 asti. Tällöin hän sotatilan vuoksi oli pakoitettu luopumaan uuden maailman sen ajan huomattavimman ja erittäin elegantin sinfoniaorkesterin johdosta.

Näihin aikoihin myös Higginson jätti vastuunalaisen tehtävänsä ja orkesterin hallintoa varten perustettiin johtokunta. Kapellimestariksi valittiin pariisilainen Henri Rabaud. Hänen seuraajanaan oli seuraavan viiden vuoden ajan Pierre Monteux, intomielinen ja väsymätön tulisielu, jonka ansiosta ohjelmisto laajentui ja rikastui huomattavasti samalla kun orkesterisointikin kypsyi ja avartui. Monteux'in jälkeen alkoi orkesterin historiassa aikakausi, joka nykypolvellekin on varsin tuttu: ohjakset otti käsiinsä Serge Koussevitzky. Puuttumatta lähemmin hänen henkilöönsä ja kajoamatta tarkemmin hänen elämäntyöhönsä voidaan sanoa, että hänen toimintansa neljännesvuosisadan ajan orkesterimusiikin kohottamiseksi sinfoniataiteen kaikkein korkeimmille huipuille liitti hänen nimensä kiinteästi Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin suursaavutuksiin.

Charles Munchin johtajakausi alkoi v. 1949. Hän tuli tähän tehtävään ollessaan kunniansa huipulla, takanaan merkittävä ura Euroopassa. Munch on syntynyt Strassburgissa. Isä oli elsassilainen urkuri, äiti ranskatar, ja suuri sisarusparvi varsin musikaalinen. Nuori viuluniekka Charles oli syntymäkaupunkinsa konservatoriossa ensin oppilaana ja sitten opettajana, soittaen samalla myös orkesterin konserttimestarina. Pariisissa hän sittemmin johti Pariisin Sinfoniaorkesteria, Lamoureux- ja Straram-orkestereita, oli monet vuodet Pariisin Konservatorion orkesterin vakinaisena johtajana, ja perusti vihdoin Pariisin Filharmonikot. Vuonna 1948 hän johti Orchestre National de la Radiodiffusion Francaise'a sen Amerikan-kiertueella.

Ryhdyttyään Bostonin Sinfonikkojen johtajaksi hän jo ensimmäisten viikkojen aikana vei orkesteria kohti uutta kulta-aikaa. Hänen johtajakautensa onkin muodostunut varsin voimakkaaksi nousuksi orkesterille, joka vuosikymmenien aikana on ollut kenties parhain välikappale tekemään Bostonin tunnetuksi ympäri maailmaa.

Nykyisin orkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu vastaava "valtojen" orkesteri. Toimintavuosi käsittää 46 viikkoa, josta talvikautena 30 viikon aikana annetaan 63 konserttia Bostonissa ja vierailukiertue vie kuusi viikkoa. Vuosittaiset Berkshire-musiikkijuhlat Tanglewoodissa sitovat orkesterin kuuden viikon ajaksi heinä-elokuussa ulkoilmakonsertteja varten. Arthur Fiedlerin johtama "The Boston Pops"-viihdeorkesteri on osa normaalitoimintaa, sen konsertit ovat joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa niinikään ilmaiset kävelykonsertit Charles River'illä. Tämän lisäksi työsaralla on vielä runsaasti radioesiintymisiä ja levytyksiä.

Orkesteri kävi ensi vierailulla Euroopassa v 1952, mutta saapuu nyt ensi kerran Suomeen, todella tervetulleena syyskonserttikauden lähtölaukauksena.

Bostonin sinfonikkojen mukana saapuu maahamme myös kuuluisan Serge Koussevitzkyn vaimo. Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky on USA:n Sibelius-komitean puheenjohtaja ja hän on jatkanut suurenmoisesti puolisonsa työtä Sibeliuksen musiikin hyväksi USA:ssa.

```
Kuva-Posti
Chief editor: Olli Ohtomies
Circulation: 56.500
Picture magazine ( popular style, foreign and domestic items
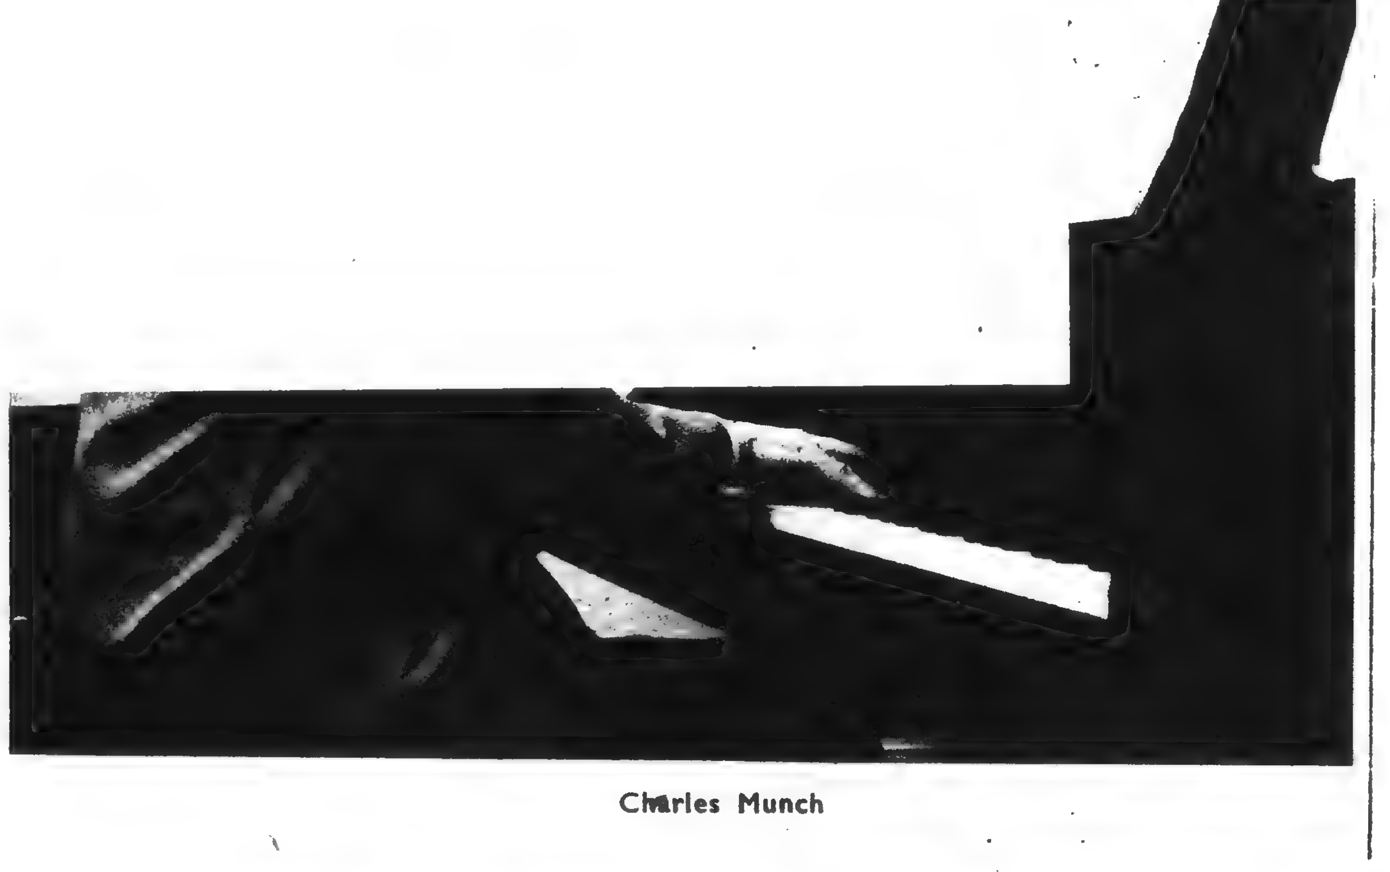
Once a week
Nº 35, August 30, 1956
```



Charles Munch

ENSI VIERAILULLE SUOMEEN

Syksyn huomattava musiikkitapahtuma, Bostonin sinfonikkojen vierailu on ovella. Syyskuun 4. päivänä tuodaan Helsinkiin musiikkia 125 henkilön ja kokonaisen instrumenttikuormallisen voimalla. Ja saman päivän iltana saa Messuhallillinen suomalaista konserttiyleisöä ainutlaatuisen tilaisuuden olla henkilökohtaisesti läsnä maailmankuulun Boston Sinfony Orchestran esityksessä, joka on kyseisen orkesterin ensimmäinen Suomessa.

Orkesteri saapuu Tukholmasta ja jatkaa jo heti konsertin jälkeisenä aamuna matkansa Leningradiin. Vierailu ei siis muodostu pitkäksi. Mutta sitä antoisammaksi ja arvokkaammaksi, arvaamme. Ohjelmassa on Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonia, Ravelin sarja Daphnis & Chloë sekä ensiesityksenä Suomessa Walter Pistonin tänä vuonna valmistunut 6. sinfonia.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on Yhdysvaltain sinfoniaorkestereista suosituin ja ahkerin — se konsertoikin enemmän kuin yksikään toinen: yksistään Bostonissa normaalin 30-viikkoisen talvisesongin aikana 63 konserttia! Tähän suurponnistukseen harjoittaa ja johtaa Bostonin sinfonikkoja strassburgilaissyntyinen Charles Munch, loistavaurainen taitaja ja kuuluisuus jo ennen Amerikkaan siirtymistään 1949. Hänen johtajakautensa on alusta lähtien muodostunut varsin kunniakkaaksi orkesterille — ja levytysten välityksellä suuriarvoiseksi, maailmanlaajaksi mainokseksi koko Bostonin kaupungille.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Hels. San.
Pvm 30 8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

KIRJALLISUUS JA TAIDE

Charles Münch

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pitää konsertin Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan-kiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi. Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myos Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Tukholmassa, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuuluu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. Vuodesta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria johtanut Charles Münch, jonka musikaalista uraa seuraava artikkeli käsittelee.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopan-matkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitzkya Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajankorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmin oli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo vuonna 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston, hän oli modernin musiikin esitaistelija ja hän säteili sitä vaikeasti kuvattavaa henkilökohtaista magneettisuutta, joka erottaa suuren johtajan keskinkertaisesta.

Münchin tehtävä Bostonissa oli kaikkea muuta kuin helppo. Tosin hän sai johdettavakseen orkesterin, joka oli erinomaisimpia maailmassa, mutta Koussevitzky oli ollut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja neljännesvuosisadan ja se oli niin suuressa määrin hänen työtään, että samaistus oli miltei täydellistä. Sitä paitsi oli Koussevitzky perinteitä rakastavassa Bostonissa tullut suorastaan elimelliseksi osaksi kaupunkia, yhtä lujasti bostonilaisten tietoisuuteen juurrutetuksi kuin kaupungin vapaussodan muistomerkki. Mutta myös musiikkiperinteillä on Bostonissa syvät juuret. Eräs näistä perinteistä on kaikin tavoin auttaa sinfoniaorkesterin johtajaa hänen työssään ja antaa hänelle mahdollisimman suuri vapaus.

Uusi johtaja, uusi sävy

Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittautunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizianin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi, että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-vuotisjuhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukossaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Copland ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttorina. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi. Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi kuultuaan kerran erään konsertin jälkeen kotikaupungissaan, että joku yleisön joukosta kiitti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle, Sosiété des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterinjohtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatoriossa, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—1945. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa. Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tästä tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan "I Am A Conductor" (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: "Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta. Berlioz kertoo, että hän "Francs-Juges" alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tälläiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia."

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Hbl.
Pvm 17/8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniker spelar här 4 sept.

Charles Münch dirigerar i Helsingfors 4 september.

Åter ett filharmoniskt storevenemang väntar Helsingfors: Bostons symfoniorkester med Charles Münch som dirigent spelar i Mässhallen den 4 september, på väg till konserter i Leningrad och Moskva.

Med orkestern kommer också fru Olga Koussevitzky på ett första finlandsbesök. Hon är änka efter Boston Symphony Orchestra's dirigent under en lång följd av år Serge Koussevitzky, och har i egenskap av ordförande i kommittén för Sibelius-året nedlagt ett betydande arbete på att göra Sibelius' musik hörd över hela världen. Välkänd är Koussevitzkys Musikstiftelse, som bl. a. i fjol tilldelade den unge kompositören Eino Rautavaara ett stipendium för studier i Tanglewood, vid en sommarskola för musik som upprätthålls av Bostons symfoniorkester och Berkshirefestivalen.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Hels. San.
Pvm 19/8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Munc
sinfonikot

Ulkolaisia sinfoniaorkestereitten parhaita on viime vuosina vieraillut maassamme jotakuinkin tasaisin väliajoin, näistä useimpien matkat leveysasteillemme ovat liittyneet Sibeliusviikon runsaaseen ohjelmaan. Aivan erikoisella ilolla on tervehdittävä uutista Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin saapumisesta pääkaupunkiin alkavan syksyn ensimmäisenä musiikkitapahtumana, ajankohtana, jolloin kesän jälkeen musiikinnälkä taas on ehkä suurimmillaan.

Boston Symphony Orchestran syntysanojen lausuja oli nuori bostonilainen vannoutunut musiikin ystävä ja muusikko Henry L. Higginson, porvarilliselta ammatiltaan pankkiiri. Musiikkiopintojensa aikana Wienissä v. 1860 hän oivalsi mikä merkitys kaupungin omalla sinfoniaorkesterilla saattaa olla — ja mitä puuttui hänen omasta kotikaupungistaan. V. 1881 hän ryhtyi toteuttamaan aatettaan vakinaisen orkesterin perustamiseksi Bostoniin "toimimaan klassillisten musiikkiteosten, lähinnä sinfonioitten esittämistä varten".

Alku oli pakostakin vaatimaton. Higginson palkkasi parhaat Euroopasta saatavat muusikot ja johtajaksi kiinnitettiin nuori lahjakas Georg Henschel. Bostonin kaupunki, jota tähän asti kirjallisuus oli kiinnostanut enemmän kuin musiikki, antoi nyt sinfoniaorkesterin pyrinnöille täyden tukensa.

konferenssin istunnossa tukevansa Dullesin suunnitelmaa ja pysytelleet miltei kokonaan erillään virallisten istuntojen ulkopuolisista neuvotteluista.

Erään Skandinaavian maan edustaja sanoi, ettei niillä ole mitään syytä sekaantua neuvotteluihin istuntojen ulkopuolella asian tässä vaiheess.., mutta myöhemmin se voi tulla ajankohtaiseksi riippuen siitä, miten konferenssi kehittyy.

Kairo suosii Espanjan välittävää kantaa

★1 Kairo, 18. 8. (UP) Hallitusta lähellä olevat piirit

Kiistan yksityiskohdat eivät merkitse niin paljoa kuin se tosiasia, että luotsit voivat keskeyttää koko kanavaliikenteen. Tietoja liikkuu jo joidenkin luotsien "sairastumisesta", jotka ovat vain verukkeita haluttomuudelle työskennellä egyptiläisten johdolla.

Jos tilannetta vielä jatkuu, lomaa kaipaavat ja siihen oikeutetut ylirasitetut luotsit voivat vässyä odottamiseen. Silloin on edessä mielenkiintoinen tilanne, koska kanavaliikenne keskeytyy ilman, että Egyptiä voidaan suoranaisesti syyttää tästä. Toisaalta ei voida myöskään syyttää länsivaltoja, jos luotsit eivät halua tehdä työtä. Egypti tosin on uhannut vankeusrangaistuksella eroavia, mutta jos tällaisia todetaan, länsivallat saavat heti käteensä valtin, sillä luotsit ovat pääasiallisesti ulkomaalaisia. Yhteensä heitä on parisataa,

---

Charles Munch

ENSI VIERAILULLE SUOMEEN

Syksyn huomattava musiikkitapahtuma, Bostonin sinfonikkojen vierailu on ovella. Syyskuun 4. päivänä tuodaan Helsinkiin musiikkia 125 henkilön ja kokonaisen instrumenttikuormallisen voimalla. Ja saman päivän iltana saa Messuhallillinen suomalaista konserttiyleisöä ainutlaatuisen tilaisuuden olla henkilökohtaisesti läsnä maailmankuulun Boston Sinfony Orchestran esityksessä, joka on kyseisen orkesterin ensimmäinen Suomessa.

Orkesteri saapuu Tukholmasta ja jatkaa jo heti konsertin jälkeisenä aamuna matkaansa Leningradiin. Vierailu ei siis muodostu pitkäksi. Mutta sitä antoisammaksi ja arvokkaammaksi, arvaamme. Ohjelmassa on Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonia, Ravelin sarja Daphnis & Chloë sekä ensiesityksenä Suomessa Walter Pistonin tänä vuonna valmistunut 6. sinfonia.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on Yhdysvaltain sinfoniaorkestereista suosituin ja ahkerin — se konsertoikin enemmän kuin yksikään toinen: yksistään Bostonissa normaalin 30-viikkoisen talvisesongin aikana 63 konserttia! Tähän suurponnistukseen harjoittaa ja johtaa Bostonin sinfonikkoja strassburgilaissyntyinen Charles Munch, loistavavarainen taitaja ja kuuluisuus jo ennen Amerikkaan siirtymistään 1949. Hänen johtajakautensa on alusta lähtien muodostunut varsin kunniakkaaksi orkesterille — ja levytysten välityksellä suuriarvoiseksi, maailmanlaajaksi mainokseksi koko Bostonin kaupungille.

NYA PRESSEN
Ap: 24, 1956

På progra

BOSTONS symfoniker inleder konsertsäsongen

HÖSTENS KONSERTPROGRAM är i huvudsak klart så när som på Stadsorkesterns detaljprogram, som i början av nästa vecka slås fast av stadens musiknämnd och först därefter kan ges publicitet. Vissa jubileumskonserter, som stadsorkestern håller, känner man dock till nu redan. Upptakten för höstsäsongen blir verkligt förnämlig genom Boston-symfonikernas första besök i vårt land på genomresa till Sovjetunionen. Med Bostons symfoniorkester kommer i september dirigenterna Charles Munch och Pierre Monteux, den sistnämnde framträder dock inte här, Natalie Koussewitsky och konsertmästaren Richard Burg, tidigare verksam vid vår stadsorkester.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRA
LEIKELMÄPALVE
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Etelä-Suom
Pvm 31/8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Kirja

---

etjussa vih. Kaario Hämäläinen ekä KPT:stä molemmat välihyökkääjät Asko Korhonen ja Veijo Taskinen.

Pallo-Pojat—TuTo 5—2

Turussa löi Pallo-Pojat cup-ottelussa Turun Toverit maalein 5—2 (4—0).

KPV:lle voitto Kokkolassa

Suomen-sarjan länsilohkon ottelussa KPV voitti GBK:n 2—1 (1—0).

ja Koiviston 16,18
et Tampereella

Urh. 1.56,2, 2) S. Ranta, TP 1.58,2, 3) A. Werhtmann, Saksa 1.59,2. — Nuorten 800 m: 1) O. Joensuu, Haka 2.02,8. — 17-v. 1000 m: 1) A. Müchler, Saksa 2.43,4, 2) J. Raittila, TU-38 2.43,4. — 3000 m: 1) R. Hankia, KouU 8.39,0, 2) N. Sorrela, Tikkurilan Kaj. 8.41,5, 3) R. Järvinen, TU-38 8.42,6. — Kuula: 1) R. Koivisto, Loimaan Jankko 16,18, 2) E. Mäkinen, TP 14,45. — Kiekko: 1) K. Jouppila, SeiU 47,22, 2) A. Repo, Anjalan Liitto 46,40, 3) P. Kylliäinen, OU 45,29. — Moukari: 1) Bob Backus, USA 59,04, 2) V. Hoffren, PoPy 54,85, 3) L. Heiniö, TU-38 46,10. — Korkeus: 1) Albert Koskinen, Nokian Pyry 190, 2) K. af Ursin, TP ja K. Tiikkaja, Tampereen Yritys 185 — Nuorten korkeus: 1) R. Toivonen, Sysmän Sisu 180 — Pituus 1) M. Järvinen, T:reen Yritys 674 — 4x100 m 1) TKT 44,6, 2) TP 44,8, 3) Eiringhaus 45,7. — Naisten 80 mn aidat 1) Anna-Liisa Soilammi, Haka 13,4, 2) Sirkka Hytönen, TU-38 13,6.

Hellsten Hesperiassa TMP–LMV ottelussa

Tänään eletään Hesperiassa herkullisia hetkiä Lahden ja TMP:n kohdatessa toisensa. Lahti on vielä — huonon juoksutilinsä vuoksi — putoamispeikon hyppysissä, TMP puolestaan hypistelee mailoja "kullankiilto" silmissään. Pisteet ovat molemmille osapuolille tärkeitä. — Ehkäpä ottelusta löytyisi viitteitä vielä Itä—Länsi-ottelun valitsijaherroillekin — liian myöhäänkö? — Mutta ei tässä vielä kaikki: 15 minuuttia ennen ottelua siis klo 16.45 juostaan Hesperiassa kunnari nopeamminkin kuin ehkä koskaan aikaisemmin. Kirkkain yleisurheilutähtemme Voitto Hellsten on nimittäin luvannut järjestäjille tulevansa kokeilemaan kunnarinjuoksua, joka saadaan ehkä kelloista lukea "Suomen ennätykseksi". Vauhdikas ottelu vauhdikkaine alkuineen alkaa Hesperiassa siis klo 16.45.

URIRAHASTO
PALVELU
San.
56
LISUU
AIDE
Mün

NY[illegible]SSEN
Aug. 30, 1956

mmet

Charles Münch kommer med Bostonsymfonin

BOSTONS SYMFONIORKES-
TER konserterar i Helsingfors en 4 september. Orkestern benner sig på en Europaturné om anordna's i samband med ess 75-årsjubileum. Den skall edverka bl. a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och ge konserter även
Oslo, Köpenhamn och Stockholm. Två konserter vardera i Moskva och Leningrad står ocksä på programmet. Bostonsymfonins ledare är sedan 1949
Charles Münch.

DEN KÄNDE AMERIKANSKE
OMPOSITÖREN och kritikern Virl Thompson skrev 1934, efter en undresa i Europa, att han i Paris de funnit en orkesterledare som n dag borde kunna efterträda Ser-ej Koussevitskij som ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester. Det tog 15 r innan Thompsons spådom gick i uppfyllelse, men då Koussevitskij
1949 steg ner från dirigentpallen blev
Charles Münch hans efterträdare.

TROTS ATT MÜNCH bara två år tidigare hade bytt ut konsertmästarens violin i den berömda Gewandhaus orkestern i Leipzig mot taktpinnen i Paris visade han alltså re-dan 1934 att han besatt många av de egenskaper som hade givit Kous-sevitskij hans världsrykte. Han var väl förtrogen med hela den traditio-nella repertoaren, gick i bräschen för den moderna musiken och utstrålade den odefinierbara person-liga magnetism som skiljer en stor dirigent från en medelmåtta.

MÜNCHS UPPGIFT i Boston var långtifrån lätt. Visserligen skulle han överta en orkester som enligt samstämmiga vittnesmål var bland de yppersta i världen, men Koussevitskij hade varit ledare för Bostonsymfonin i ett kvartsekel och den var i så hög grad hans verk att identifikationen nästan var fullständig. Dessutom hade Koussevitskij i det traditionstrogna Boston närmast blivit en institution, lika fast rotad i bostonbornas medvetande som stadens minnesmärken från det amerikanska frihetskriget.

MEN OCKSÅ musiktraditionerna i Boston har djupa rötter. En av traditionerna är att på allt sätt bistå symfoniorkesterns ledare i hans arbete och att ge honom största möjliga frihet.

Ny dirigent, ny ton

UNDER DE SEX ÅR Münch lett orkestern har han visat sig vara en värdig efterträdare till Koussevitskij. Orkestern låter annorlunda under Münch än under företrädaren, men skillnaden är som mellan en målning av Rembrandt och en av Tizian, av vilken ingendera är ett mindre mästerverk därför att de är utförda i olika stilar.

BOSTONSYMFONIN fortsätter att framföra och introducera ny och obekant musik. Som ett led i firandet av sitt 75-årsjubileum har orkestern presenterat nya verk av 15 internationellt kända europeiska och amerikanska kompositörer däribland Benjamin Britten och Darius Milhaud från Europa och Aaron Copland och Howard Hanson från USA.

MÜNCH, som fyller 65 år den 26 sept., är född i Strasbourg, där hans far var kantor. Han fick sin första musikaliska utbildning vid musikkonservatoriet i hemstaden, som nu förestås av hans bror Fritz. Efter ytterligare studier i Paris och militärtjänst under första världskriget återvände Münch till Strasbourg som konsertmästare i stadens orkester och tjänstgjorde samtidigt som lärare vid konservatoriet. Senare flyttade han till Leipzig som konsertmästare i Gewandhaus-orkestern under Wilhelm Furtwängler.

Forts. på sid. 11

Ett heligt kall, en feber

DET VAR MÜNCHS AMBITION att bli dirigent. Han brukar berätta om hur upprörd han blev en gång i sin ungdom efter en konsert i hemstaden, då han hörde någon bland publiken lovorda orkestern, men samtidigt undra om man verkligen behövde ha dirigenten med. Att vara dirigent är inte ett yrke, utan ett heligt kall, säger Münch, det är ibland en prästerlig gärning och nästan en feber, en sjukdom, som bara döden kan avbryta.

EFTER ÅTTA ÅR i Leipzig begav sig Münch till Paris för att söka fullfölja sin ambition. Han fick åtskilliga anbud, men valde att sätta upp en egen orkester, Paris filharmoniker. Framgången lät inte vänta på sig och han blev snart känd för sina framföranden av avantgardistisk musik och för lysande tolkningar av traditionella orkesterstycken.

Att utge sig själv

BARA FEM ÅR efter sin debut som dirigent utnämndes Münch till Frankrikes främsta och mest eftertraktade dirigentpost, som ledare för Société des Concerts och professuren som orkesterledare vid Pariskonservatoriet, en befattning som han uppehöll från 1937—45. Efter krigsslutet tog han en rad gästengagement i olika delar av världen, däribland två mycket framgångsrika i Boston, som ledde till att han senare permanent knöts till orkestern.

OM SITT LIV som orkesterledare och sin uppfattning om dirigentens roll har Münch berättat i sin bok "Jag är dirigent". Han skriver: "Att dirigera en konsert innebär en oerhörd förbrukning av nervös energi. Berlioz berättar att han efter ett framförande av sin uvertyr "Francs-Juges" alldeles utmattad sträckte ut sig över pukorna och snyftade. Detta är ingenting att le åt. Han hade dirigerat ett av sina egna verk, han hade förbrukat en del av sin själ. Varje uttolkare av musik måste vara i stånd till en sådan fullständig bikt. Är han inte det, då måste han byta yrke."

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ursa
Lehti: Etelä-Suomen St.
Pvm 31/8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Kirjallisuus ja taide

CHARLES MÜNCHIN TIE BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERIN JOHTAJAKSI

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopankiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi. Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myös Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa, Tukholmassa ja Helsingissä, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuuluu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. V:sta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria johtanut Charles Münch, jonka musiikaalista uraa seuraava artikkeli käsittelee.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopan-matkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitzkya Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennenkuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajankorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmin oli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo vuonna 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston, hän oli modernin musiikin esitaistelija ja hän säteili sitä vaikeasti kuvattavaa henkilökohtaista magneettisuutta, joka erottaa suuren johtajan keskinkertaisesta.

Münchin tehtävä Bostonissa oli kaikkea muuta kuin helppo. Tosin hän sai johdettavakseen orkesterin, joka oli erinomaisimpia maailmassa, mutta Koussevitzky oli ollut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja neljännesvuosisadan ja se oli niin suuressa määrin hänen työtään, että samaistus oli miltei täydellistä. Sitä paitsi oli Koussevitzky perinteitä rakastavassa Bostonissa tullut suorastaan elimelliseksi osaksi kaupunkia, yhtä lujasti bostonilaisten tietoisuuteen juurrutetuksi kuin kaupungin vapaussodan muistomerkki. Mutta myös musiikkiperinteillä on Bostonissa syvät juuret. Eräs näistä perinteistä on kaikin tavoin auttaa sinfoniaorkesterin johtajaa hänen työssään ja antaa hänelle mahdollisimman suuri vapaus.

Uusi johtaja, uusi sävy

Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittautunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizianin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukossaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Copland ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. p:nä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

Pyhä kutsumus, kuume

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi. Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi kuultuaan kerran erään konsertin jälkeen kotikaupungissaan, että joku yleisön joukosta kiitti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle. Societe des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterinjohtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatoriossa, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—1945. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan »I Am A Conductor» (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: »Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta Berlioz kertoo, että hän 'Francs-Juges' alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittätyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tällaiseen täydelliseen rippittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia.»

Uusi Kuvalehti
Chief editor: Ilmari Turja
Circulation: 51.600
Predominantly domestic a fairs, neutral but anti-swedish
Once a week
№ 35, August 31, 1956

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ursa
Lehti: Hels. San.
Pvm 31/8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä. on Amerikan monista suurista singoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia, Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko

[100]

KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LMÄPALVELU
ls. San.
8 19 56

ALLISUUS
A TAIDE
rles Münch

YR...SEN
aug. 30, 1956

mmet

Charles Münch kommer med Bostonsymfonin

BOSTONS SYMFONIORKES-ER konserterar i Helsingfors n 4 september. Orkestern be-ner sig på en Europaturné m anordnas i samband med s 75-årsjubileum. Den skall dverka bl. a. vid festspelen i inburgh och ge konserter även Oslo, Köpenhamn och Stock-lm. Två konserter vardera i oskva och Leningrad står eksa på programmet. Boston-ymfonins ledare är sedan 1949 Charles Münch.

DEN KÄNDE AMERIKANSKE OMPOSITÖREN och kritikern Vir-il Thompson skrev 1934, efter en undresa i Europa, att han i Paris hade funnit en orkesterledare som en dag borde kunna efterträda Serge Koussevitskij som ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester. Det tog 15 år innan Thompsons spådom gick i uppfyllelse, men då Koussevitskij 1949 steg ner från dirigentpallen blev Charles Münch hans efterträdare.

TROTS ATT MÜNCH bara två år tidigare hade bytt ut konsertmästa-rens violin i den berömda Gewand-haus orkestern i Leipzig mot takt-pinnen i Paris visade han alltså re-dan 1934 att han besatt många av de egenskaper som hade givit Kous-sevitskij hans världsrykte. Han var väl förtrogen med hela den traditio-nella repertoaren, gick i bräschen för den moderna musiken och ut-strålade den odefinierbara person-liga magnetism som skiljer en stor dirigent från en medelmåtta.

MÜNCHS UPPGIFT i Boston var ingalunda lätt. Visserligen skulle han överta en orkester som enligt samstämmiga vittnesmål var bland de yppersta i världen, men Koussevitskij hade varit ledare för Bostonsymfonin i ett kvartsekel och den var i så hög grad hans verk att identifikationen nästan var fullständig. Dessutom hade Koussevitskij i det traditionstrogna Boston närmast blivit en institution, lika fast rotad i bostonbornas medvetande som stadens minnesmärken från det amerikanska frihetskriget.

MEN OCKSÅ musiktraditionerna i Boston har djupa rötter. En av traditionerna är att på allt sätt bistå symfoniorkesterns ledare i hans arbete och att ge honom största möjliga frihet.

Ny dirigent, ny ton

UNDER DE SEX ÅR Münch lett orkestern har han visat sig vara en värdig efterträdare till Koussevitskij. Orkestern låter annorlunda under Münch än under företrädaren, men skillnaden är som mellan en målning av Rembrandt och en av Tizian, av vilken ingendera är ett mindre mästerverk därför att de är utförda i olika stilar.

BOSTONSYMFONIN fortsätter att framföra och introducera ny och obekant musik. Som ett led i firandet av sitt 75-årsjubileum har orkestern presenterat nya verk av 15 internationellt kända europeiska och amerikanska kompositörer däribland Benjamin Britten och Darius Milhaud från Europa och Aaron Copland och Howard Hanson från USA.

MÜNCH, som fyller 65 år den 26 sept., är född i Strasbourg, där hans far var kantor. Han fick sin första musikaliska utbildning vid musikkonservatoriet i hemstaden, som nu förestås av hans bror Fritz. Efter ytterligare studier i Paris och militärtjänst under första världskriget återvände Münch till Strasbourg som konsertmästare i stadens orkester och tjänstgjorde samtidigt som lärare vid konservatoriet. Senare flyttade han till Leipzig som konsertmästare i Gewandhaus-orkestern under Wilhelm Furtwängler.

Forts. på sid. 11

Ett heligt kall, en feber

DET VAR MÜNCHS AMBITION att bli dirigent. Han brukar berätta om hur upprörd han blev en gång i sin ungdom efter en konsert i hemstaden, då han hörde någon bland publiken lovorda orkestern, men samtidigt undra om man verkligen behövde ha dirigenten med. Att vara dirigent är inte ett yrke, utan ett heligt kall, säger Münch, det är ibland en prästerlig gärning och nästan en feber, en sjukdom, som bara döden kan avbryta.

EFTER ÅTTA ÅR i Leipzig begav sig Münch till Paris för att söka fullfölja sin ambition. Han fick åtskilliga anbud, men valde att sätta upp en egen orkester, Paris filharmoniker. Framgången lät inte vänta på sig och han blev snart känd för sina framföranden av avantgardistisk musik och för lysande tolkningar av traditionella orkesterstycken.

Att utge sig själv

BARA FEM ÅR efter sin debut som dirigent utnämndes Münch till Frankrikes främsta och mest eftertraktade dirigentpost, som ledare för Société des Concerts och professuren som orkesterledare vid Pariskonservatoriet, en befattning som han upprehöll från 1937—45. Efter krigsslutet tog han en rad gästengagement i olika delar av världen, däribland två mycket framgångsrika i Boston, som ledde till att han senare permanent knöts till orkestern.

OM SITT LIV som orkesterledare och sin uppfattning om dirigentens roll har Münch berättat i sin bok "Jag är dirigent". Han skriver: "Att dirigera en konsert innebär en oerhörd förbrukning av nervös energi. Berlioz berättar att han efter ett framförande av sin uvertyr "Francs-Juges" alldeles utmattad sträckte ut sig över pukorna och snyftade. Detta är ingenting att le åt. Han hade dirigerat ett av sina egna verk, han hade förbrukat en del av sin själ. Varje uttolkare av musik måste vara i stånd till en sådan fullständig bikt. Är han inte det, då måste han byta yrke."

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulrs
Lehti: Etelä-Suomen Sl.
Pvm 31/8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Kirjallisuus ja taide

CHARLES MÜNCHIN TIE BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERIN JOHTAJAKSI

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopankiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi. Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myös Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa, Tukholmassa ja Helsingissä, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuuluu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. V:sta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria johtanut Charles Münch, jonka musiikaalista uraa seuraava artikkeli käsittelee.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopan-matkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitzkya Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennenkuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajankorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmin oli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo vuonna 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston, hän oli modernin musiikin esitaistelija ja hän säteili sitä vaikeasti kuvattavaa henkilökohtaista magneettisuutta, joka erottaa suuren johtajan keskinkertaisesta.

Münchin tehtävä Bostonissa oli kaikkea muuta kuin helppo. Tosin hän sai johdettavakseen orkesterin, joka oli erinomaisimpia maailmassa, mutta Koussevitzky oli ollut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja neljännesvuosisadan ja se oli niin suuressa määrin hänen työtään, että samaistus oli miltei täydellistä. Sitä paitsi oli Koussevitzky perinteitä rakastavassa Bostonissa tullut suorastaan elimelliseksi osaksi kaupunkia, yhtä lujasti bostonilaisten tietoisuuteen juurrutetuksi kuin kaupungin vapaussodan muistomerkki. Mutta myös musiikkiperinteillä on Bostonissa syvät juuret. Eräs näistä perinteistä on kaikin tavoin auttaa sinfoniaorkesterin johtajaa hänen työssään ja antaa hänelle mahdollisimman suuri vapaus.

Uusi johtaja, uusi sävy

Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittautunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizianin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukossaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Copland ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. p:nä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

Pyhä kutsumus, kuume

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi. Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi kuultuaan kerran erään konsertin jälkeen kotikaupungissaan, että joku yleisön joukosta kiitti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle. Societe des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterinjohtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatoriossa, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—1945. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan »I Am A Conductor» (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: »Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta Berlioz kertoo, että hän 'Francs-Juges' alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittätyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tällaiseen täydelliseen rippitäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia.»

[100]

...kuun 4. päivänä saapuu ...amme Bostonin Filharmoninen orkesteri, joka käsittää yli 100 soittajaa. Orkesteri vierailee ensi kertaa maassamme. Tämä on ensimmäinen suuri tapaus, josta saamme oikeastaan kiittää taiteilijavaihdon lisääntymistä Neuvostoliiton ja länsimaiden välillä, sillä Helsinki tulee lähivuosina saavuttamaan vanhan otollisen asemansa 'puolimatkan krouvina'. Orkesteria johtaa kuuluisa kapellimestari Charles Munch (alla). — Konsertti radioidaan 16. 9., jolloin kuullaan Beethovenin 'Eroica'.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulrs
Lehti: Hels. San.
Pvm 31/8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Jurkka ja Sakari Jurkka sekä Vi-armariauto, Teatteri Jurkan uusi , koska teatteri ei näyttele ainoas-e ahkeraan myös maaseudulla.

ui uudelleen tutkimusaiheeseen-a. Roomassa hän syventyi koko iihen valtavaan aineistoon, joka äsitteli tätä nuorta runoilijatarta austana värikäs renessanssiaika a tutkimustensa tulokset hän nyt ulkaisee viime vuonna ilmesty-eessä teoksessaan, jossa hän tais-elee Gaspara Stampan maineen uhdistamiseksi, erittäin ansiok-aasti valottaen tämän naissielun unnelmia sonettien kehyksissä ja änen rakkautensa aaltoliikkeitä nnesta syvimpään tuskaan ja uurtumista maallisesta rakkaudes-a puhtaampiin ilmapiireihin. Hän äsittelee teoksessaan asiallisesti yös vastakkaisten tutkimusten uloksia, erittäin mielenkiintoinen n mm. Rainer Maria Rilken yönteinen suhtautuminen Gaspa-a Stampan runouteen sekä hä-een henkilökohtaisestikin.

Greta von Frenckell-Thesleffin eos on perussävyltään elämäker-allinen, mutta runojen runsas äännösvalikoima — kaikki liene-ät hänen omia käännöksiään — settaa sen huomattavasti tavan-maisen elämäkertakerronnan ylä-uolelle, olkoonkin, että teosta ... sävyttää ehkä liian

TEATTERIT

KANSALLISTEATTERI: Suurella näyttämöllä huomenna klo 19.30 näytäntökauden ensimmäisenä näytäntönä Aleksis Kiven "Seitsemän veljestä"; sunnuntaina klo 19.30 Williamsin "Kissa kuumalla katolla". — Pienellä näyttämöllä näytäntökauden ensimmäisinä näytäntöinä huomenna klo 19.30 van Drutenin "Kyyhkysen ääni" (20. kerran) ja sunnuntaina klo 19.30 Rislakin "Tapahtui kaukana".

KANSANTEATTERI-TYÖVÄENTEATTERI: Ylioppilastalossa tänään klo 19.30 John Patrickin komedia "Elokuun teehuone". Ossi Korhosen ohjaaman esityksen keskeisissä tehtävissä Marjatta Kallio, Sakari Halonen, Kunto Karapää, Artturi Laakso ja Toivo Mäkelä huomenna klo 19.30 "Elokuun teehuone".

INTIMITEATTERI: huomenna ja sunnuntaina klo 19.30 komedia "Sateentekijä" nimiosassa vierailee Kurt Ingvall, naispääosassa Mirjam Himberg, ohjaus Kerstin Nylander.

TEATTERI JURKKA: tänään ja huomenna klo 19.30 "Viattomuus kadulta", mukana Sakari Jurkka, Anu Kilpiö, Pehr-Olof Sirén ja Emmi Jurkka.

KESÄTEATTERI KONSERVATORIOSSA: tänään klo 19.30 esittävät Ella Eronen, Ritva Arvelo, Heikki Savolainen ja Mauno Hyvönen Noel Cowardin huvinäytelmän "Häämatka" viimeisen kerran.

LINNANMÄEN HUVITEATTE-

NL aug. 24. 56

Bostonin sinfonia-orkesteri vierailee

ensi kertaa maassamme. Tämä vierailu on ensimmäinen suuri tapaus, josta saamme tavallaan kiittää taiteilijavaihdon lisääntymistä Neuvostoliiton ja länsimaiden välillä. Helsinki tullee lähivuosina jälleen saavuttamaan vanhan otollisen asemansa "puolmatkan krouvina", jossa matkustavat taiteilijat pysähtyvät konsertoimaan. Luonnollisesti tämä tilanne lisää entisestäänkin konserttikautemme värikkyyttä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin mukana saapuu, paitsi Charles Munch, myös toinen kuuluisa johtaja Pierre Monteux, joka tosin ei täällä johda orkesteria. Vielä on mukana rva Natalie Koussevitzky ja orkesterin konserttimestari Richard Burgin, jonka monet maassamme tuntevat, sillä hän toimi Helsingin Kaupunginorkesterinkin konserttimestarina menneinä vuosina. Bostonin orkesterin soittajien joukossa on yksi amerikansuomalainenkin, pasunisti Kauko Kahila.

Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa jaollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Uusi Suomi
Pvm 31 8 1956.
Kirjoittaja:

Tenorikilpailuihin ilmoittautunut 22 osanottajaa

Tämän vuoden tenorikilpailut ovat herättäneet poikkeuksellista huomiota, koska tähän mennessä on osanottajia ilmoittautunut eri puolilta maata yhteensä 22. Lauantaina 15. 9. klo 18.30 alkavat Suomalaisen Kauppakorkeakoulun juhlasalissa karsinnat ja seuraavana päivänä 16. 9. klo 19.00 on samassa paikassa loppukilpailut 6 parhaan välillä.

Säestäjänä toimii pianotaiteilija Marja Oja ja pakolliseksi kilpailunumeroksi on valittu Lenskin aaria Tshaikovskin opp. "Eugen Onegin", joka on laulettava alkuperäisessä sävelkorkeudessa, mutta vapaasti valittavalla kielellä. Loppukilpailuissa kilpailijat tämän numeron lisäksi esittävät vapaavalinnaisen numeron.

★

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ainoa konsertti täällä on ensi tiistaina 4. 9. klo 20 isossa Messuhallissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri katsotaan olevan eräs maailman parhaimpia. Helsingin konsertissa on johtajana maailmankuulu orkesterinjohtaja Charles Munch. Ohjelmaan sisältyy Beethovenin kolmas sinfonia (Eroica), Pistonin sinfonia No 6 sekä Ravelin Daphnis ja Chloë-sarja no 2. Mainittakoon, että orkesterin konserttimestarina ja varajohtajana on Richard Bur-

U.S. — Ylivieska, torstaina
Pyhäjoen alimman kosken val-jaamisjaoksi muodostettu Hourur

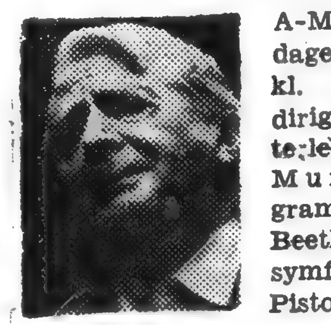
SUOMEN KULTTUURIR
LEIKELMÄPALV
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Nya Pres
Pvm 31 8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

SCEN och ESTRAD

Bostons symfoni orkesters



Charles Munch

enda ko
A-Mässh dagen d
kl. 20.
dirigeras teːledare Munch
gramme Beethov
symfoni
Pistons
6 sam
"Daph Chloë" — svit nr 2. Orkes sertmästare och vicedirige hard Burgin, välkänd äldre konsertbesökare frå han verkade som konsertm Helsingfors Stadsorkester.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIR
LEIKELMÄPALV
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Itä-Savo
Pvm 31 8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri

ainoa konsertti täällä on taina 4. 9. klo 20 isossa M lissa. Bostonin sinfonia katsotaan olevan eräs m parhaimpia. Helsingin ko on johtajana maailmank kesterinjohtaja Charles Ohjelmaan sisältyy Bee kolmas sinfonia (Eroica), sinfonia N:o 6 sekä Raveli
nis ja Chloë-sarja n:o 2.
koon, että orkesterin kon tarina ja varajohtajana on Burgin, jonka vanhempi tiyleisömme varmastikin niiltä ajoilta jolloin Bur Helsingin Kaupungin konserttimestarina.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Sos. dem.
Pvm 31 8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopankiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 1000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sen sijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jälsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, keskellä Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja 1924—49, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt tahtipuikkoa hallussaan vuodesta 1949 ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Sinfoniaork seuraavat ki vard-yliopisto teknillisen ko
jat. Jotta h suuremmitta nella orkester harjoituksia,
Hall on yhtä
nä kuin vars
sakin.

Konserttikat
vuonna orke kiertue Euro konsertoidaan nissa, Skandi messa, Neuvo slovakiassa, I Ranskassa ja nin sinfoniao ensimmäinen kesteri, joka liitossa.

Charles Mü
orkesterin m entinen johta nyt jo 31-vuot taina konse viestä kiinno orkesterin m
hamme Mrs.
suuri Suome maineikas k hard Burgin laisille tuttu, koinaan toim punginorkeste ominaisuudes

Amerikansu or

Myös eräs on mukana pasuunansoitt jonka molem suomalaisia sin Valkeako pereelta. Kau huu sujuvast lut Uuden E riossa ja Ber kuksessa, so
St. Louisin
ja ollut ki

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti: nsa
Pvm 56

u Bostonin konsertoi skuun 4.
ri on paropan-kierjärjestetty toiminnan intyy mm.
iikkijuhlilyös Oslos-inassa ja nkä lisäk-luu kaksi oskovassa
. Vuodeson orkes-Charles artikkeli sinfonia-nykyisen

orkesteri

netta saavuta soittajiston rusti vuonna ee Higginson.
ilijana tämä ryhtyi sääs-an orkesteria, an parhaitten kesterien ve-pon Saksan ja ettävissä ole-

Bostonin sinfonikot ja heidän johtajansa via muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke. Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Purgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajakorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaro Copland.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Charles Münch

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thomson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopan-matkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitzkya Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thomsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajakorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi. Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi kuultuaan kerran erään konsertin jälkeen kotikaupungissaan, että joku yleisön joukosta kiitti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle, Société des Concertsin johtajaksi ja orkesterinjohtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatorioon, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—1945. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa. Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tästä tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan "I am a Conductor" (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: "Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta. Berliez kertoo, että hän "Francs-Juges" alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tällaiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia."

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURI
LEIKELMÄPA
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Länsi-S
Pvm 1. 9 195
Kirjoittaja:

onin sinfoniaorkes
onteux, joka johti ch, joka on pitänyt
tien ja johtaa

KULTTUURIRA
ELMÄPALVE
Ulis
ya Pres
9 1956

Bosto
ntrod

mellan Bos
Pierre Mon
Koussevits
kesterns

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Uusi Suomi
Pvm 31 8 19 56.
Kirjoittaja:

Tenorikilpailuihin ilmoittautunut 22 osanottajaa

Tämän vuoden tenorikilpailut ovat herättäneet poikkeuksellista huomiota, koska tähän mennessä on osanottajia ilmoittautunut eri puolilta maata yhteensä 22. Lauantaina 15. 9. klo 18.30 alkavat Suomalaisen Kauppakorkeakoulun juhlasalissa karsinnat ja seuraavana päivänä 16. 9. klo 19.00 on samassa paikassa loppukilpailut 6 parhaan välillä.

Säes'jänä toimii pianotaiteilija Marja Oja ja pakolliseksi kilpailunumeroksi on valittu Lenskin aaria Tshaikovskin oopp. "Eugen Onegin", joka on laulettava alkuperäisessä sävelkorkeudessa, mutta vapaasti valittavalla kielellä. Loppukilpailuissa kilpailijat tämän numeron lisäksi esittävät vapaavalinnaisen numeron.

★

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ainoa konsertti täällä on ensi tiistaina 4. 9. klo 20 isossa Messuhallissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri katsotaan olevan eräs maailman parhaimpia. Helsingin konsertissa on johtajana maailmankuulu orkesterinjohtaja Charles Munch. Ohjelmaan sisältyy Beethovenin kolmas sinfonia (Eroica), Pistonin sinfonia No 6 sekä Ravelin Daphnis ja Chloë-sarja no 2. Mainittakoon, että orkesterin konserttimestarina ja varajohtajana on Richard Bur-g[illegible]

U.S. — Y l i v i e s k a, torstaina
Pyhäjoen alimman kosken val-ajoitukseksi muodostettu Hourun

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Nya Pressen
Pvm 31/8 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

SCEN och ESTRAD

Bostons symfoniorkesters

Charles Munch

enda konsert är i A-Mässhallen tisdagen den 4 sept. kl. 20. Orkestern dirigeras av orkesterledaren Charles M u n c h. Programmet upptar Beethovens tredje symfoni (Eroica), Pistons symfoni nr 6 samt Ravels "Daphnis och Chloë" — svit nr 2. Orkesterns konsertmästare och vicedirigent är Richard B u r g i n, välkänd för våra äldre konsertbesökare från den tid han verkade som konsertmästare vid Helsingfors Stadsorkester.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Maakansa
Pvm 1 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Maailmankuulu Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. päivänä. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan-kiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi. Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myös Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Tukholmassa, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuuluu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. Vuodesta 1949 lähtien on orkesteria johtanut Charles Münch. Seuraava artikkeli esittelee Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ja sen nykyisen johtajan.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä ole-16.46 metriä.

---

dollisuuden koko liigan seuraami-

Johann Strauss-säveliä. Radio-orkesteri soittaa, joht. Erik Cronvall.
Uddarbon pappi. Vilho Siivola lukee neljännentoista jakson Axel Hambraeuksen romaanista. Suom. Margareta Lehtonen.
Sää ja myöhäisuutiset.
Tanssirytmejä eri maista.
Pietro Locatellin viulusonaatti. David Oistrah soittaa, säest. Vladimir Jampolski.
Maamme.

Ularyhmä I:

Xavier Cugat orkestereineen soittaa. Tauoton äänilevykonsertti.
Lauluketju oper. Csàrdàsruhtinatar, säv. Emmerich Kàlmàn.
—17.00 Seikkailuja lastenvaunuissa.
Sarja orkesterille, säv. John Alden Carpenter.

KESKIVIIKKONA 5. 9.

Yleisohjelma:

—8.00 Aamuhartaus. Kirkkoherra Erkki Telasniemi.
Jascha Heifetz soittaa Gershwinin säveliä.
Parvekepuutarhat kukkeimmillaan. Marjatta Tyrkön selostus.
Kesää muistellessa. Liisa Linko-Malmio laulaa, säest. Gerda Weneskoski.
Kirjava nonstop.
Kirja ja nuoriso. Jukka Holopaisen kokoamia haastatteluja.
.30 Äänilevykonsertti.
.00 Sää, iltauutiset ja päivän peili.
.30 Iltahartaus. Rov. Tuure Vapaavuori.
.40 Koululääkärin puheenvuoro. Tri Sari Gylander-Peltola pakinoi.
.55 Münchenistä Wieniin. Radion Viihdeorkesteri soittaa, joht. Paavo Berglund.
.30 Hyvinvointivaltio. Hupailu, kirj. Kurt Linderborg.
.00 Matti Lehtinen laulaa, säest. Pentti Koskimies.
.25 Tämän päivän Moskovaa. Kalevi Kilven selostus.
.00 Sää ja myöhäisuutiset.
.10 Vanhaa kulttuuria kiinalaisessa maisemassa. Fil. lis. Bo Gyllensvärdin esitelmä.
.30 Sergei Rahmaninovin Pianokonsertti n:o 3 d-molli.
.10 Maamme.

TURKU:

.00—17.30 Virkistystä työn lomassa. Aulis Lindgren vierailee kahdessa Ruissalon kesäkodissa.

TORSTAINA 6. 9.

Yleisohjelma:

7.45—8.00 Aamuhartaus. Yliopettaja Ilmari Tammisto.
13.10 Alas mukavuus — eläköön kesä! Sointu Kouvo lukee Lipan pakinan.
13.30 Iskelmiä. Taru Pyhälä, laulu, ja Harry Bergströmin yhtye.
13.45 Teatterilaiva. Säveliä Jerome Kernin laulunäytelmästä.
13.55 Entisaikojen tulitikkutehdas Alastarossa. Tuomas Tuominen kertoo, haastattelijana Jorma Lundén.
.00 Radio-orkesterin päivälliskonsertti, joht. Lauri Saikkola.
.40 Kirjelaatikko ja lastentunti.

18.35 Sielullisten tekijöiden osuus sairauksissa. Prof. Lauri Saarnio esitelmöi.
18.55 Tiedon puntari (3).
19.00 Sää, iltauutiset ja päivän peili.
19.30 Venäläisiä mestareita. Kaija Weckström laulaa, säest. Heidi Sundblad-Halme.
19.50 Näköaloja. Parrasvalojen jälleen syttyessä. Arvi Kivimaa, Eino Salmelainen, Sakari Puurunen ja Matti Kassila. — Puolan kirjallista elämää. Alpo Routasuo. — Uusia filmejä. Eugen Terttula.
20.30 Kansanlauluja lasten suulla. Paavo, Leena, Helli ja Marja-Leena sekä Mikko von Deringer yhtyeineen.
20.40 Meiltä ja muualta. Jorma Juseliuksen yhtye soittaa ja Metrotytöt laulavat.
21.00 Tunneli. Jännityskuunnelma, kirj. Mabel Constanduros ja Howard Agg. Yleisradiolle suom. Toini Havu. Ohj. Markus Rautio.
22.00 Sää ja myöhäisuutiset.
22.10 Kiihtyväisyyttä. Valssi, säv. Johann Strauss.
22.20 Richard Straussin Sonaatti F-duuri sellolle ja pianolle. Artto Granroth ja Timo Mikkilä.
22.50 Kolme kuoroa.
23.00 Maamme.

Ularyhmä I:

16.00 Iskelmätaivaan tähtiä.
16.40—17.00 Nykyamerikkalaista viulumusiikkia. Louis Kaufman, säest. Anette Kaufman.
17.40 Prinssieversti ja Hirmuinen Manta. Kalle Kustaa Korkin ja Pekka Lipposen seikkailuja, kirj. Outsider, ohj. Jorma Nortimo. Kuudes jakso.
18.10 Tanssimusiikkia. Joe Loss orkestereineen soittaa.
18.35—19.00 Hector Berliozin orkesterimusiikkia.

Paikallisohjelmat:

TAMPERE:

13.00 Tampereen Pellava- ja Rautateollisuusosakeyhtiön 100-vuotisjuhla.
n. 15.30 Tauko.

PERJANTAINA 7. 9.

Yleisohjelma:

6.50—7.30 Eevan aamusoitto.
7.45—8.00 Aamuhartaus. Sotilaspast. Tauno Muukkonen.
13.10 Kevyt neljännes. Kaarlo Reinikaisen trio.
13.25 Säveltuokio.
13.45 Sienikopan tarkastelua. Lehtorit Aune Jarimo ja Ulpu Järvinen palaavat oppilaineen sieniretkeltä.
17.00 Mozartin oopperat maailman valloituksella. Maist. Jouko Tolosen levypakina.
17.40 Peipposet laulavat kansanlauluja, joht. Mikko von Deringer.
18.00 Muuttolintujen suunnistuskyky. Maist. Olavi Hytönen selostaa tähänastisten kokeiden tuloksia.
18.20 Kevyttä ja kotoista.
18.40 Taloudellinen katsaus. Ulkomaat: Ekon. Juha Laurila; kotimaa: Fil. tri Veikko Halme.
19.00 Sää, iltauutiset ja päivän peili.
19.30 Iltahartaus. Past. Simo Palosuo.
19.40 Pyhästä Yrjänästä Orpopojan valssiin. Lauri Hyrske kertoo maallisista arkkiveisuistamme.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Ilta-Sanomat
Pvm 31/8 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin

ainoa konsertti täällä on ensi tiistaina 4. 9. klo 20 isossa Messuhallissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri katsotaan olevan eräs maailman parhaimpia. Helsingin konsertissa on johtajana maailmankuulu orkesterinjohtaja Charles Munch. Ohjelmaan sisältyy Beethovenin kolmas sinfonia (Eroica), Pistonin sinfonia N:o 6 sekä Ravelin Daphnis ja Chloë-sarja n:o 2. Mainittakoon, että orkesterin konserttimestarina ja varajohtajana on Richard B u r g i n, jonka vanhempi konserttiyleisömme varmastikin muistaa niiltä ajoilta jolloin Burgin toimi Helsingin Kaupunginorkesterin konserttimestarina.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Sos. dem.
Pvm 31/8 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvo[illegible]alta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli [illegible]000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten s[illegible]ten kaupunkien orkesterien s[illegible]tajiston luku on yli 100. Pysy[illegible] oopperaseurueita on sen sij[illegible] vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerik[illegible] kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin k[illegible]minen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, jo[illegible] orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, keskellä Serge Koussevitzsky, sen kuuluisa johtaja 1924—49, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt tahtipuikkoa hallussaan vuodesta 1949 ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtaja[illegible]kautena ja hän loi orkesterin [illegible] ja entistä mainiokkaamma[illegible]. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Euroopaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa toiminaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä [illegible]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Riihimäen S[?]t.
Pvm 1 9 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Usis
19 56

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa orkesterin konsertin Helsingissäkin syyskuun 4. pnä.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Nya Pressen
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniker,
introduktörer av ny musik

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitskij, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

UPPTAKTEN för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök här — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europaturné, som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum, och medverkar vid bl. a. festspelen i Edinburgh. Med orkestern kommer dirigenterna Charles Münch — Bostonsymfonins ledare sedan 1949 — och Pierre Monteux, som på turnén dirigerar några konserter, dock inte här, och mrs Natalie Koussevitskij, en stor Finlandsvän. Det torde intressera konsertpubliken i vårt land att orkesterns ypperlige konsertmästare Richard Burgin tidigare varit verksam vid Helsingfors stadsorkester och att en av basunisterna, Kauko Kahila, är av finländskt ursprung.

DET ÄR I ÅR alltså 75 år sedan Bostons symfoniorkester grundades. Jubilaren har hyllats, men själv har orkestern firat sitt jubileum på det ovanliga sättet att den i sin tur delat ut gåvor till den musikintresserade världen. Under senaste säsongen presenterades 15 nya verk av internationellt kända kompositörer och nu alltså ges konserter i en rad europeiska länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

ATT PRESENTERA nya verk har länge varit tradition hos Bostonsymfonin. Under orkesterns tidigare år spelade sådana orkesterledare som Henschel, Nikisch och Gericke en viktig roll för att göra Johannes Brahms förstådd i USA vid en tid då kritiker på bägge sidor av Atlanten anklagade Brahms för att vara "otillgänglig". Längre fram var det Pierre Monteux' tur att under sin tid som ledare för orkestern från 1919 till 1924 introducera Igor Stravinskij. Den världsberömde dirigenten Sergej Koussevitskij, som avled 1951, ledde orkestern från 1924 till 1949. Han sökte outtröttligt efter nya begåvningar och var en av de första att erkänna och introducera Aaron Coplands och Bela Bartoks musik — för att bara nämna ett par namn. Även Sibelius stod högt på hans lista.

Symfonins betydelse

DEN STÄLLNING symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

ÄVEN I TYSKLAND har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. I Förenta staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester, men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap.

Forts. på sid. 10

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kotka Nyheter

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kansan Pohjanmaa

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kauppalehti
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin kuuluisa

Helsingissä konsertoi syyskuun 4. pnä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri, Amerikan suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Se perustettiin 75 vuotta sitten ja juhlii merkkivuottansa laajan Euroopan-kiertueen puitteissa. Vv. 1924—1949 eli neljännesvuosisadan ajan orkesteria johti Serge Koussevitzky, jonka nimi on musiikkipiireissä yhtä tunnettu kuin Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterikin. Nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, jota kuvamme esittää, nousi maineeseen Ranskassa, ja hänen johtajakautensa on merkinnyt orkesterille voimakasta nousua.

sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiviiset odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

Usis

symfoniker kommer

BOSTON . . .

Bostonsäsong med 220 konserter

NU RÄKNAS Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Under Sergej Koussevitskijs kvartssekellånga ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europaturnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter.

UNDER KOUSSEVITSKIJS TID grundade symfoniorkestern en unik musikskola, Berkshire Music Center, på egendomen Tanglewood i Massachusetts, där man varje sommar undervisar i komposition, orkester- och kammarmusik, körsång och opera. Chef för skolan är nu Charles Münch och som lärare fungerar kända kompositörer och musiker från både USA och andra länder. Tanglewood är Bostonsymfonins huvudsakliga arbetsplats på sommaren och orkestern ger livligt uppskattade friluftskonserter under den musikfestival som avslutar kurserna vid Berkshire Music Center.

Friluftskonserter i maj—juni

DEN VANLIGA VINTERSÄSONGEN om 30 veckor tar slut i april, varefter de populära "Pops"-konserterna börjar under ledning av Arthur Fiedler varje kväll i maj—juni. Fiedler dirigerar också friluftskonserterna vid Charles River.

SYMFONIORKESTERN är Bostons stolthet, och dess verksamhet omfattas med livligt intresse inte minst av de tusentals studerande vid Harvarduniversitetet och Massachusetts Institute of Technology i det närbelägna Cambridge. För att ge ungdomarna tillfälle till att utan kostnader följa orkesterns repertoar ger den offentliga repetitioner. Den stora kostnader följa orkesterns repertoar ger den offentliga repetitioner. Den stora konsertsalen är alltid fullsatt och att dirigenten ibland slår av och tar om några avsnitt är bara

VID SIN KONSERT i Helsingfors spelar orkestern: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sjätte symfonin; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilsis
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa orkesterin konsertin Helsingissäkin syyskuun 4. pnä.

symfoniker kommer

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilsis
Lehti: Nya Pressen
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniker,
introduktörer av ny musik

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitskij, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

UPPTAKTEN för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök här — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europaturné, som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum, och medverkar vid bl. a. festspelen i Edinburgh. Med orkestern kommer dirigenterna Charles Münch — Bostonsymfonins ledare sedan 1949 — och Pierre Monteux, som på turnén dirigerar några konserter, dock inte här, och mrs Natalie Koussevitskij, en stor Finlandsvän. Det torde intressera konsertpubliken i vårt land att orkesterns ypperlige konsertmästare Richard Burgin tidigare varit verksam vid Helsingfors stadsorkester och att en av basunisterna, Kauko Kahila, är av finländskt ursprung.

DET ÄR I ÅR alltså 75 år sedan Bostons symfoniorkester grundades. Jubilaren har hyllats, men själv har orkestern firat sitt jubileum på det ovanliga sättet att den i sin tur delat ut gåvor till den musikintresserade världen. Under senaste säsongen presenterades 15 nya verk av internationellt kända kompositörer och nu alltså ges konserter i en rad europeiska länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

ATT PRESENTERA nya verk har länge varit tradition hos Bostonsymfonin. Under orkesterns tidigare år spelade sådana orkesterledare som Henschel, Nikisch och Gericke en viktig roll för att göra Johannes Brahms förstådd i USA vid en tid då kritiker på bägge sidor av Atlanten anklagade Brahms för att vara "otillgänglig". Längre fram var det Pierre Monteux' tur att under sin tid som ledare för orkestern från 1919 till 1924 introducera Igor Stravinskij. Den världsberömde dirigenten Sergej Koussevitskij, som avled 1951, ledde orkestern från 1924 till 1949. Han sökte outtröttligt efter nya begåvningar och var en av de första att erkänna och introducera Aaron Coplands och Bela Bartoks musik — för att bara nämna ett par namn. Även Sibelius stod högt på hans lista.

Symfonins betydelse

DEN STÄLLNING symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

ÄVEN I TYSKLAND har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. I Förenta staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester, men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap.

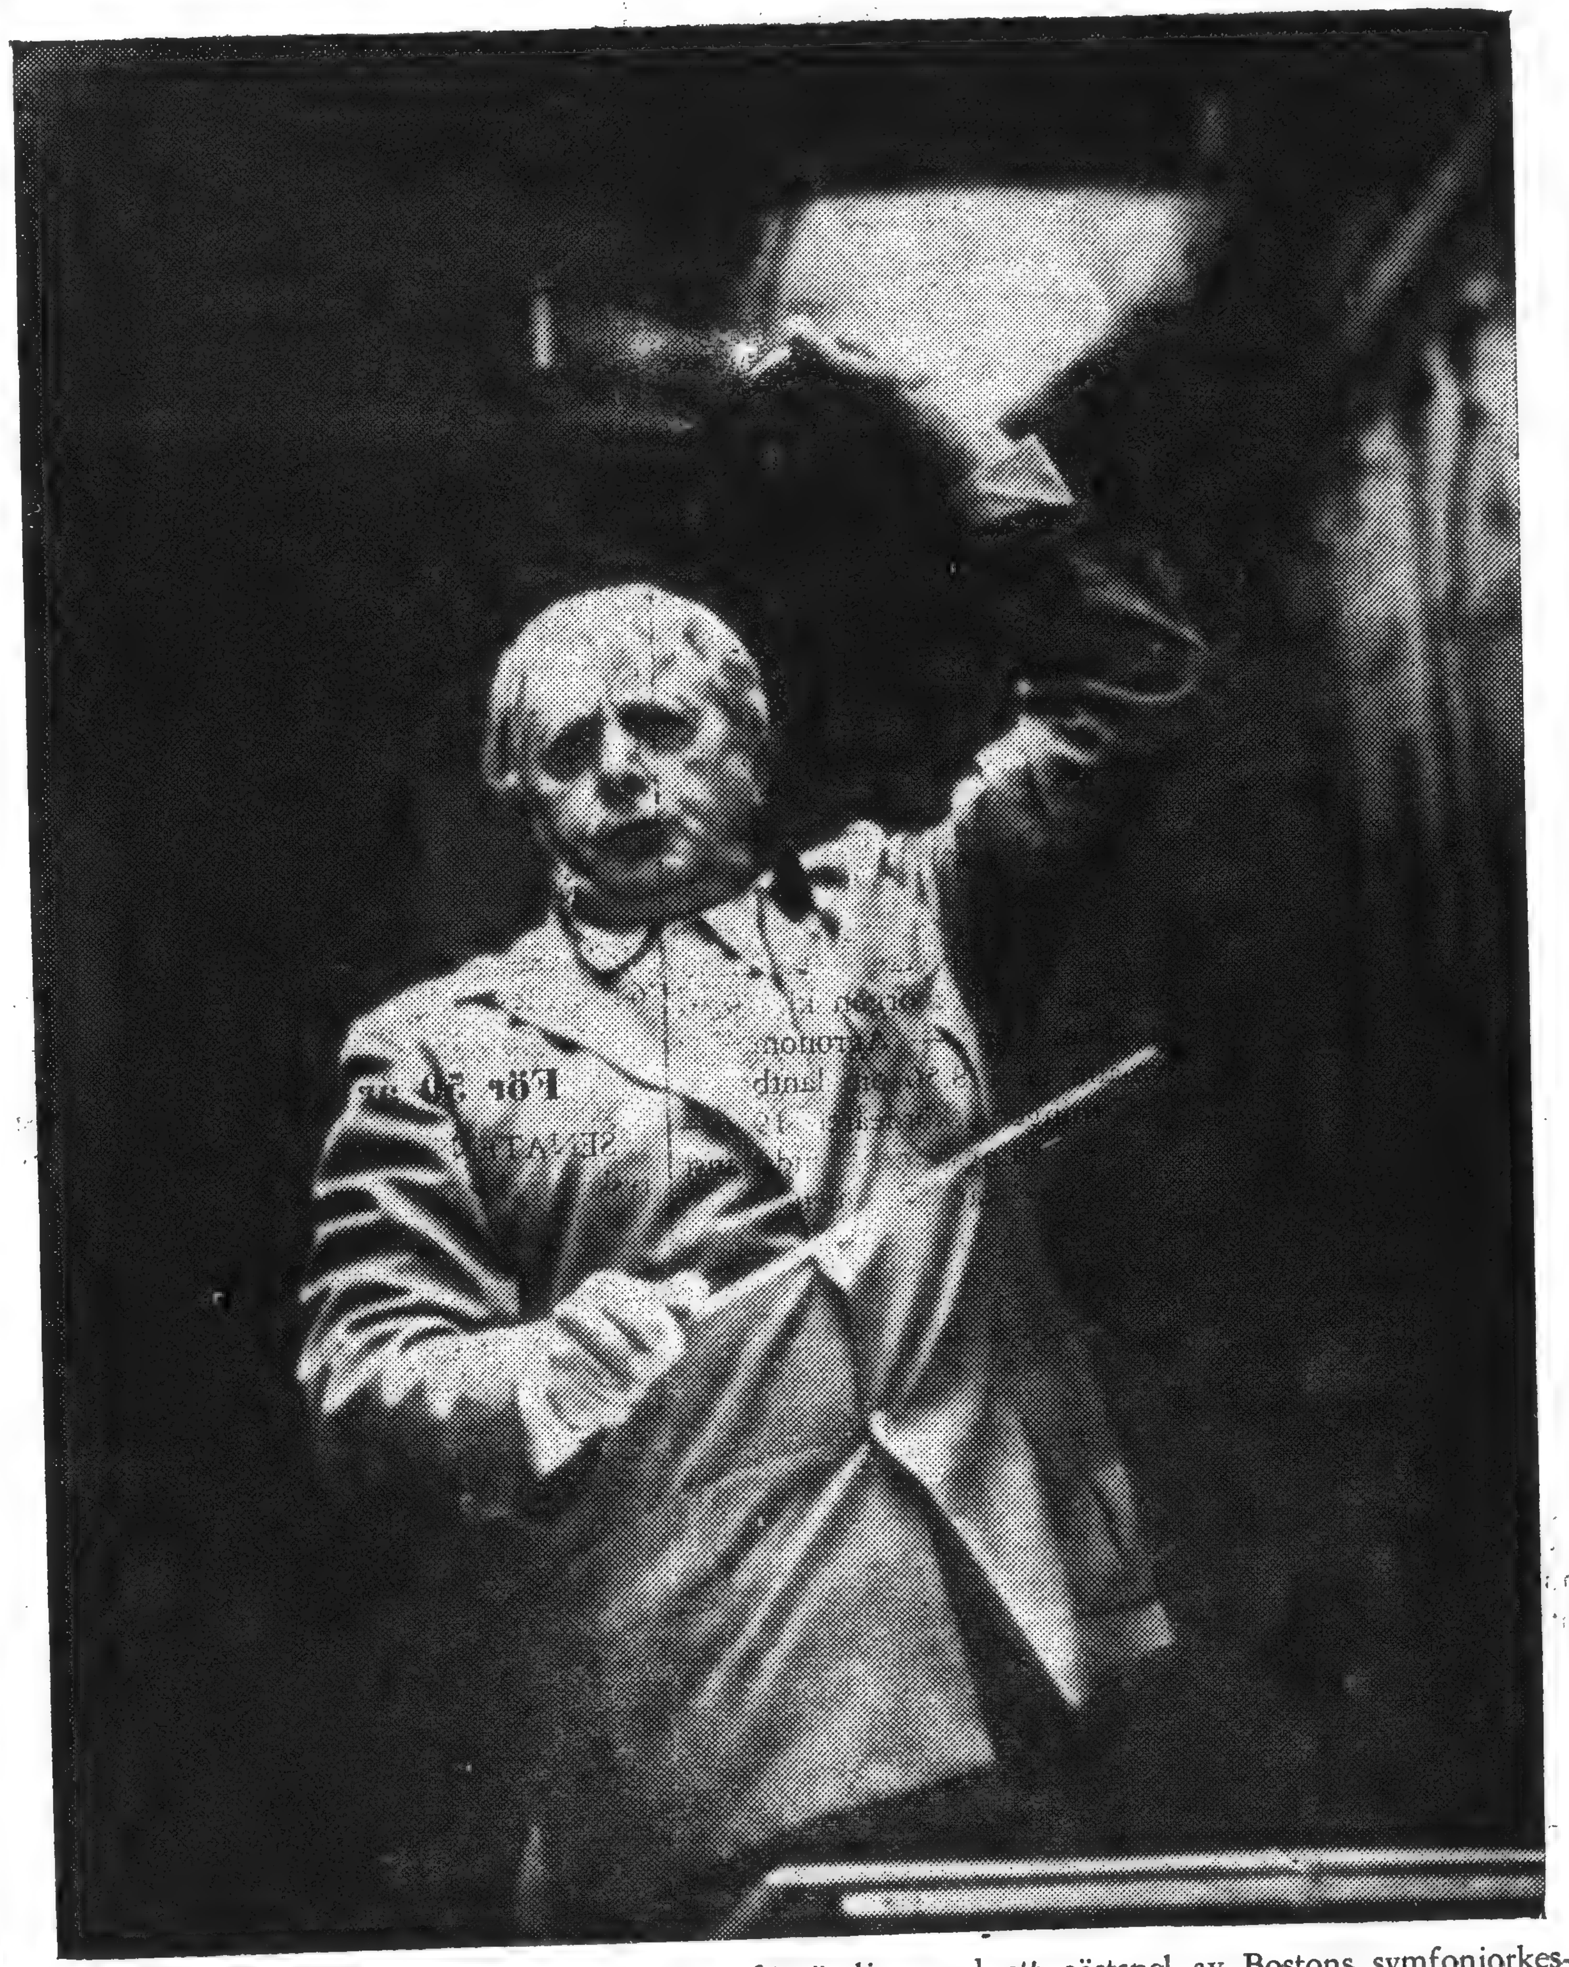
Forts. på sid. 10

[102]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 1. 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa orkesterin konsertin Helsingissäkin syyskuun 4. pnä.

Bostons symfoniker kommer



Konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors börjar verkligt förnämligt med ett gästspel av Bostons symfoniorkester den 4 september. Den världsberömda orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en större europeisk turné. Det kan ha sitt intresse att nämna att orkesterns ypperlige konsertmästare Richard Burgin tidigare varit verksam vid Helsingfors stadsorkester och att en av basunisterna, Kauko Kahila, är av finländskt ursprung.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Nya Pressen
Pvm 1 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniker,
introduktörer av ny musik

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitskij, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

UPPTAKTEN för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök här — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europaturné, som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum, och medverkar vid bl. a. festspelen i Edinburgh. Med orkestern kommer dirigenterna Charles Münch — Bostonsymfonins ledare sedan 1949 — och Pierre Monteux, som på turnén dirigerar några konserter, dock inte här, och mrs Natalie Koussevitskij, en stor Finlandsvän. Det torde intressera konsertpubliken i vårt land att orkesterns ypperlige konsertmästare Richard Burgin tidigare varit verksam vid Helsingfors stadsorkester och att en av basunisterna, Kauko Kahila, är av finländskt ursprung.

DET ÄR I ÅR alltså 75 år sedan Bostons symfoniorkester grundades. Jubilaren har hyllats, men själv har orkestern firat sitt jubileum på det ovanliga sättet att den i sin tur delat ut gåvor till den musikintresserade världen. Under senaste säsongen presenterades 15 nya verk av internationellt kända kompositörer och nu alltså ges konserter i en rad europeiska länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

ATT PRESENTERA nya verk har länge varit tradition hos Bostonsymfonin. Under orkesterns tidigare år spelade sådana orkesterledare som Henschel, Nikisch och Gericke en viktig roll för att göra Johannes Brahms förstådd i USA vid en tid då kritiker på bägge sidor av Atlanten anklagade Brahms för att vara "otillgänglig". Längre fram var det Pierre Monteux' tur att under sin tid som ledare för orkestern från 1919 till 1924 introducera Igor Stravinskij. Den världsberömde dirigenten Sergej Koussevitskij, som avled 1951, ledde orkestern från 1924 till 1949. Han sökte outtröttligt efter nya begåvningar och var en av de första att erkänna och introducera Aaron Coplands och Bela Bartoks musik — för att bara nämna ett par namn. Även Sibelius stod högt på hans lista.

Symfonins betydelse

DEN STÄLLNING symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

ÄVEN I TYSKLAND har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. I Förenta staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester, men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap.

Forts. på sid. 10

[102]

REDUCTION

RATIO

16x

2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

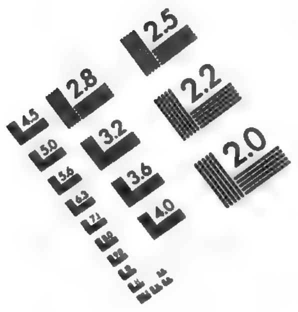
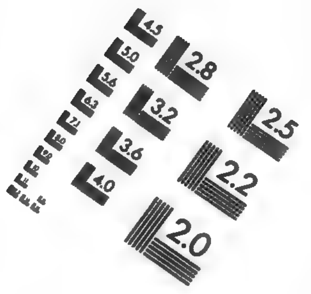
2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

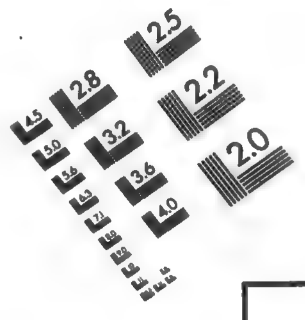


2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0

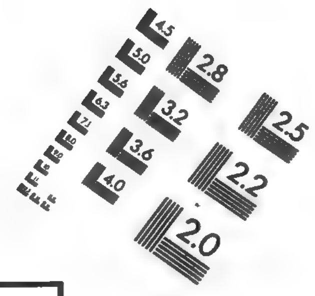


2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0

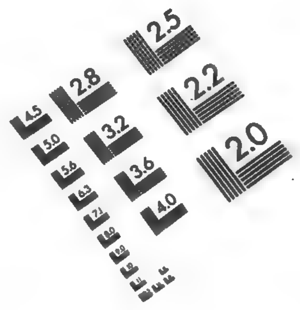
PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



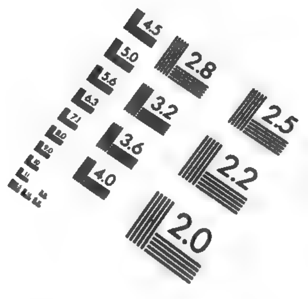
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0



2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0

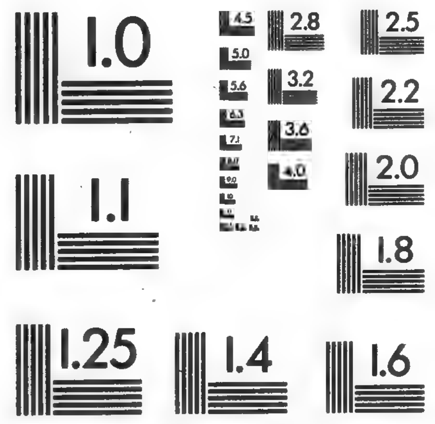


2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
2.5
2.2
2.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

1.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

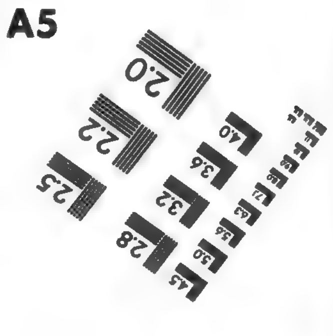
2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

A5

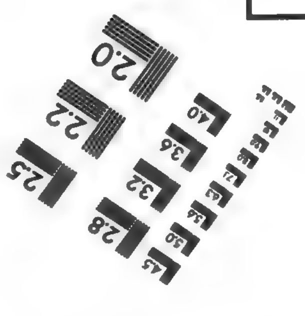


2.0
2.2
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8

2.0
3.6
2.2
3.2
2.8
2.5

A4

A3

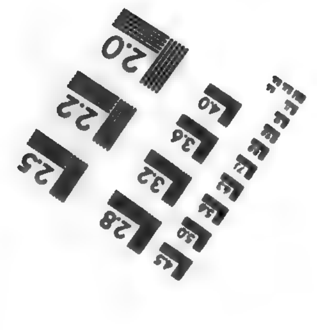


2.0
2.2
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8

PRECISIONSM RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

2.0
3.6
2.2
3.2
2.8
2.5



2.0
2.2
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8

4.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.0
3.6
2.2
3.2
2.8
2.5

3.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kouvolan Lt
Pvm 1.9. 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibeliusviikolla vieraillut Philadelphia orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieuroppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyinen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myöskin Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

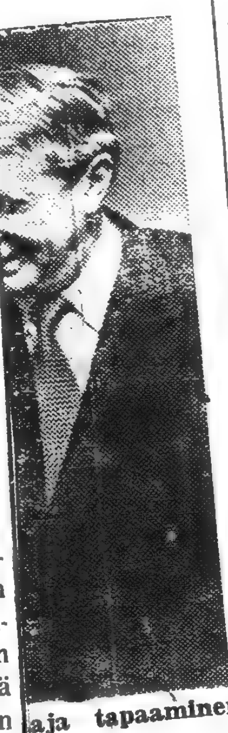
AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaokesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Loviisan Lt
Pvm 1.9. 1956
Kirjoittaja:

stonin ohtaja



aja tapaaminen.
—1924, kesk. Ser-
-1949, ja orkestetänyt hallussaan
taa Helsingissäkin

desta 1949 lähtien
sinfoniaorkesteria
Münch.
rikkalainen sävel-
Virgil Thompson
1934 Euroopan-että hän oli Pat orkesterinjohtan päivänä saattai-naan Serge Kous-nin sinfoniaorkes-

terin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajankorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmin oli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo vuonna 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston, hän oli modernin musiikin esittelijä ja hän säteili sitä vaikeasti kuvattavaa henkilökohtaista magneettisuutta, joka erottaa suuren johtajan keskinkertaisesta.

Uusi johtaja, uusi sävy

Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittautunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizienin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukossaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Copland ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

Pyhä kutsumus, kuume

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi. Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi kuultuaan kerran erään konsertin jälkeen kotikaupungissaan, että joku yleisön joukosta kiitti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle. Société des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterin johtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatoriossa, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—1945. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa. Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tästä tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan "I Am A Conductor" (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: "Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta. Berlioz kertoo, että hän "Francs-Juges" alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tällaiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia."

SUOMEN K
LEIKE
Tilaaja: ✓
Lehti: ✓
Pvm /
Kirjoittaja:

TAID.

Bostonin

Bostonin mai orkesteri, joka k
gissä syyskuun 4.
rikan monista su orkestereista ehkä mä 75-vuotista
Euroopan-kiertuee orkesteri sekä Su den 1955 Sibeliu
raillut Philadelphi
New Yorkin filhar
"kolme suurta" omaisten amerikka niaorkestereiden menomaan Bostoni jonka konsertti juh
la avaa syksyn ko Helsingissä, on kau rian ollut luonteeno musiikkiteosten esitt

SINFONIAMUSIIKI

Sinfoniaorkestereid
valloissa saavuttam arvovalta ovat ai
Syynä tähän lienee se ooppera ole koskaan seään samalla tavoin Euroopan suurissa m kuksissa — ajatelka
Wienin valtionoopper
Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta

Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille

säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — kestävän esityskautensa aikana lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symhony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kouvolan Ht
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Loviisan Ht
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

-nteri Karilo) on tullut evakko-
"Kuultavaista ei enää ole..."

elokuvana

-a kuin juonen kiinteää seuraa-
-nista alusta loppuun. Tuloksena on
-ähän sekavantuntuinen ja Tan-
-erin puheeseen töksähtämällä
-äättyvä juttu, jonka seuraaminen
-omaania lukemattomalle varmaan-
-in käy paikoin vaikeaksi. Rupeaa
-kipaamaan vanhanaikaiseksi käy-
-ää selittävää taustaääntä, joka
-uttaisi tapahtumien kuljettamises-
-a ja niiden yhteen liittämisessä.

Kohdittain elokuva on aivan erin-
-mainen. Siinä on karmaisevaa so-
-lan läheisyyttä ja kodittomuuden
-ärkyttävyyttä, Karjalan heimon
-älitöntä luonteenlaatua ja koko
-non kohtalonajan vavahduttavaa
-unnelmaa. Parhaisiin kuuluvat
-ässä mielessä odotushuoneiden
-ähtötunnelmat, matkanteko junissa
-kohti tuntemattomia päämääriä se-
-kä pommitus Kouvolaan tultaessa.

Unto Kumpulaisen kuvaus
-ansaitsee kiitoksen. Hän on osannut
-käyttää esim. valon ja varjojen te-
-okeinoja niin, että kuvauksen
-suus elokuvan onnistumisessa
-oidaan merkitä varsin painavak-
-si. Harry Bergström vastaa musiikista, joka enimmäkseen on vanhaa tuttua.

Suuri näyttelijäjoukko käsittää
sekä tuttuja että tuntemattomia nimiä. Aato Nikkasen esittäjä Santeri Karilo

-ältaisille kutsu-
-ensi-iltayleisölle
-ille ja näyttapahtu-
-mme eili-
-vakko-ro-

Kuuluja Friitala-
NAHKAPU-
Takkeja, pusero-päähine-
Poika-NAHKAPUS-
4—16 vuot-
E. Seppä-
Kouvolan my-

Kunnanjohta-
neuvo-

Maalaiskuntien ku-kaksipäiväiset neualkoivat eilen M-
Liiton uudessa kunn-
Tuusulassa. Kaikkiaa-
saapunut 54 kunnanj-
vien avauksen suorit-
johtaja Aare Eskola,
puheessaa selosti ku-
syntyvaiheita ja syit-
vat johtaneet opisto-seen. Uusi opisto me-mattavaa edistysask-kuntien luottamusmie-ranhaltijain koulutuk-
misessa, hän lausui.

Fil. tri Veikko Hal-
loudellisen tilannekatdeten tilanteen olevakellä vaikean. Aamupessa kuultiin vielä h-Reino Kuuskosken e-
heesta "Näkökohtia
nojen rahoittamisest-
roin." Kuntien luot-tällä hetkellä vaike-
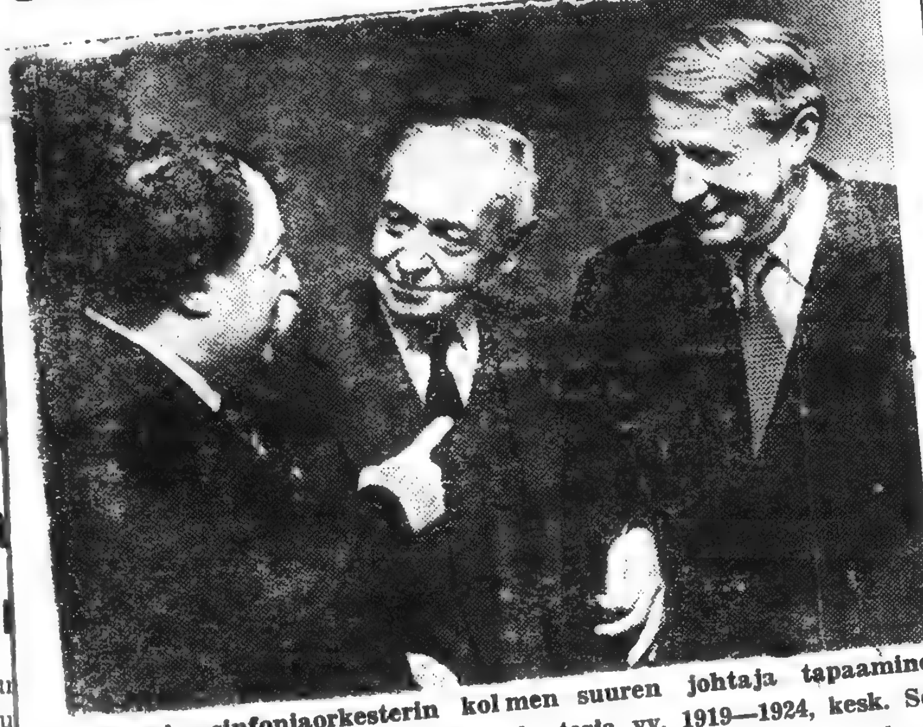
eläkelaitos voinee uu-

Charles Münch Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja



Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtaja tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitsky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pitää konsertin Helsingissä syyskuun 4 pnä. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan-kiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myös Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Tukholmassa, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuulu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. Vuodesta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria johtanut Charles Münch.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopanmatkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitskya Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajankorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmin oli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo vuonna 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston, hän oli modernin musiikin esittelijä ja hän säteili sitä vaikeasti kuvattavaa henkilökohtaista magneettisuutta, joka erottaa suuren johtajan keskinkertaisesta.

Uusi johtaja, uusi sävy

Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittautunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizienin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukossaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Copland ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

Pyhä kutsumus, kuume

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi. Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi kuultuaan kerran erään konsertin jälkeen kotikaupungissaan, että joku yleisön joukosta kiitti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle. Société des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterinjohtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatoriossa, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—1945. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa. Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tästä tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan "I Am A Conductor" (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: "Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta. Berlioz kertoo, että hän "Francs-Juges" alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tälläiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia."

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Lahti
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

TAIDE JA KIRJALLISUUS

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionooppera, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

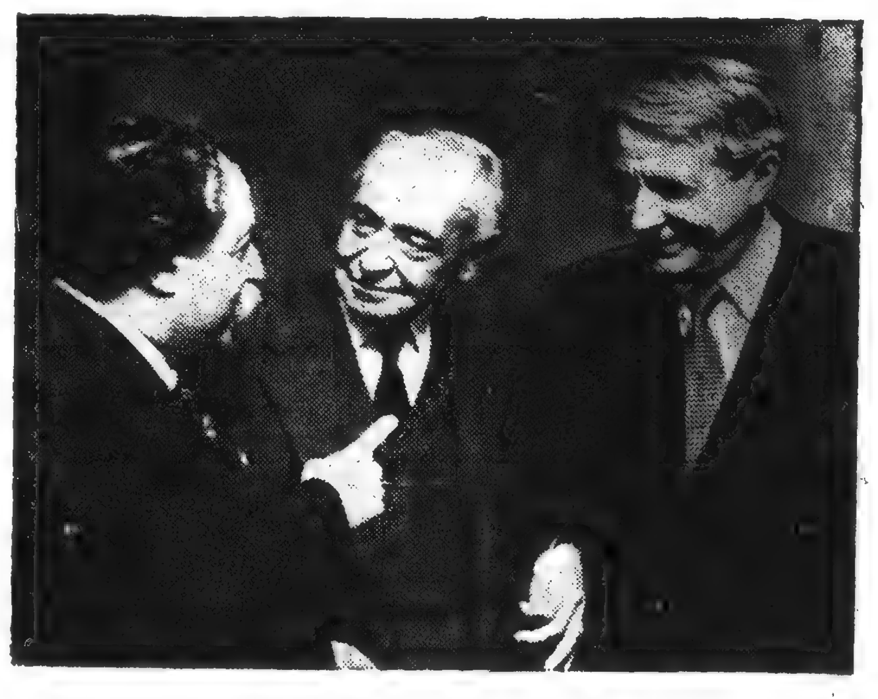
Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Kaussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa'. Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.



Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — kestävän esityskautensa aikana lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symhony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

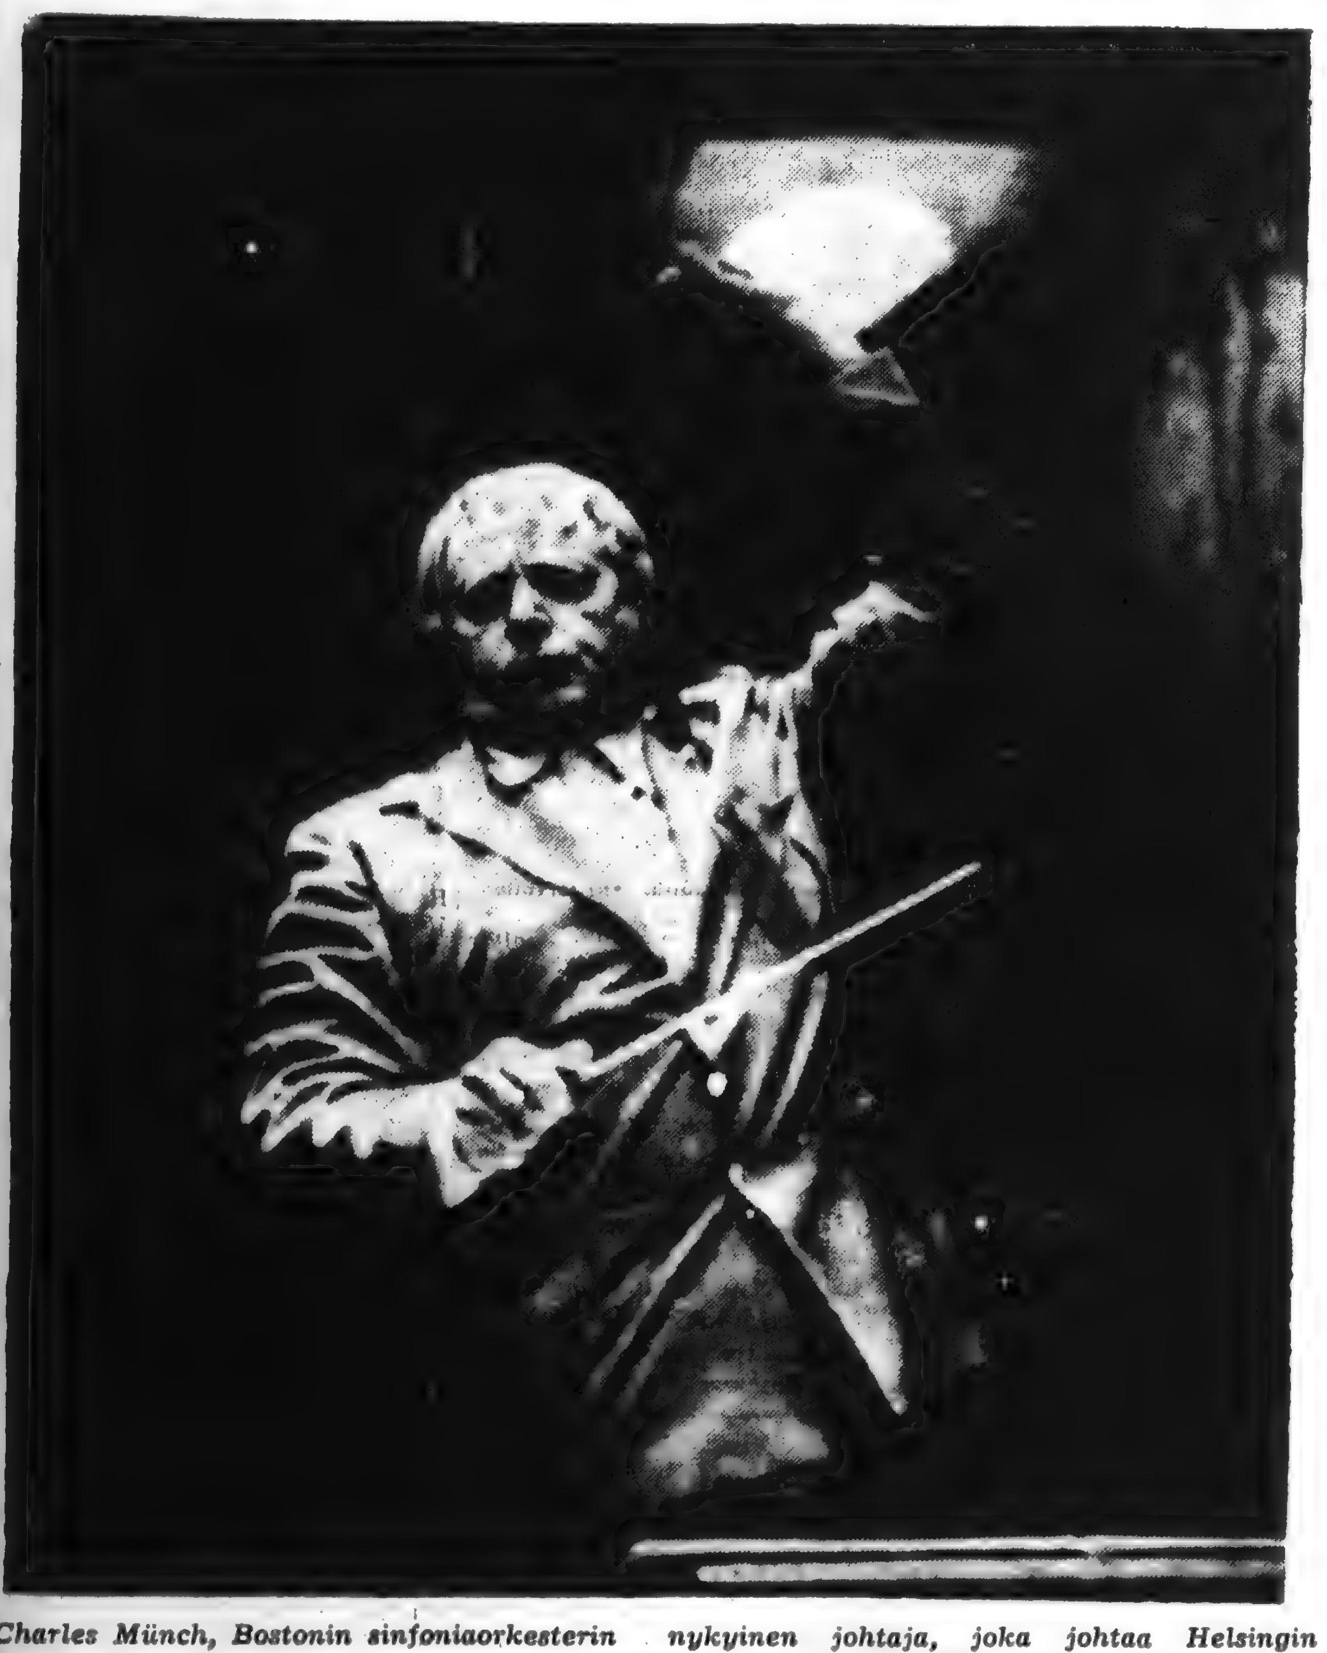
Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

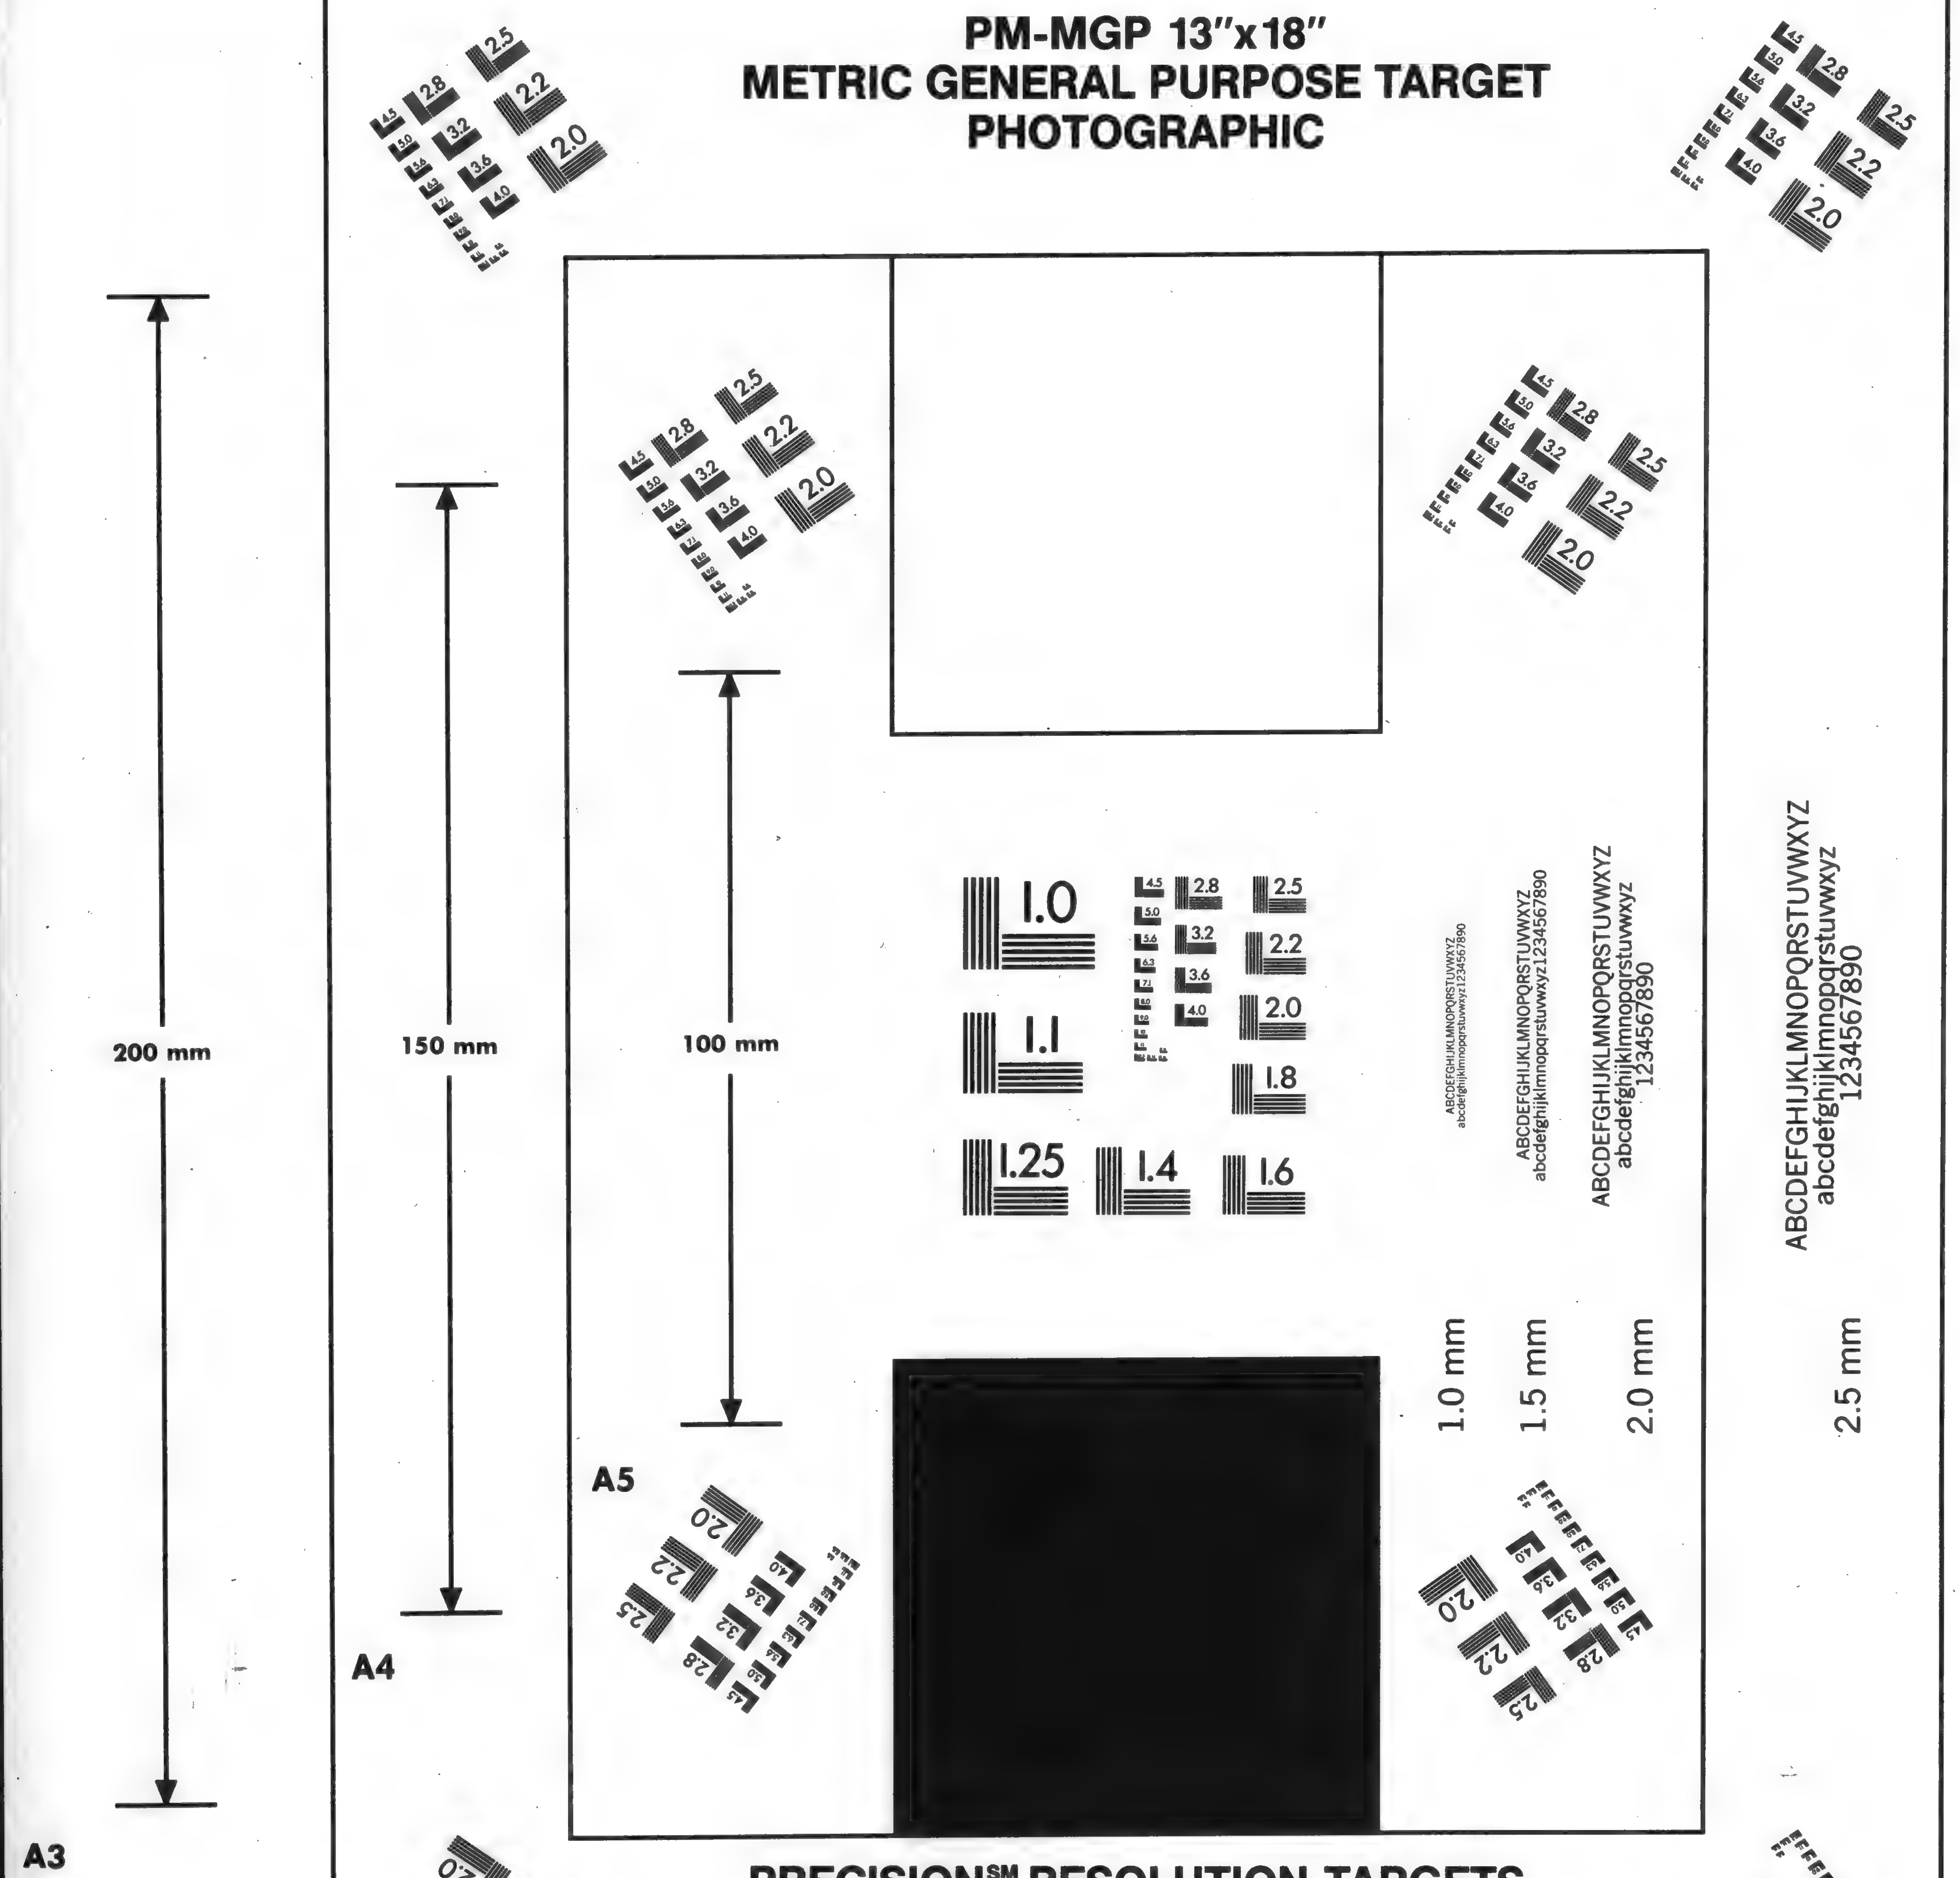
Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.



Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A3
A4
A5
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kouvolan Ht
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Loviisan Ht
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

…nteri Karilo) on tullut evakko- ”Kuultavaista ei enää ole…”

…elokuvana

…a kuin juonen kiinteää seuraa- …ista alusta loppuun. Tuloksena on …ähän sekavantuntuinen ja Tan- …erin puheeseen töksähtämällä …äättyvä juttu, jonka seuraaminen …omaania lukemattomalle varmaan- …n käy paikoin vaikeaksi. Rupeaa …aipaamaan vanhanaikaiseksi käy- …ää selittävää taustaääntä, joka …uttaisi tapahtumien kuljettamises- …a ja niiden yhteen liittämisessä.

Kohdittain elokuva on aivan erin- …mainen. Siinä on karmaisevaa so- …lan läheisyyttä ja kodittomuuden …ärkyttävyyttä, Karjalan heimon …älitöntä luonteenlaatua ja koko …uon kohtalonajan vavahduttavaa …unnelmaa. Parhaisiin kuuluvat …ässä mielessä odotushuoneiden …ähtötunnelmat, matkanteko junissa …kohti tuntemattomia päämääriä se- …kä pommitus Kouvolaan tultaessa.

Unto Kumpulaisen kuvaus …ansaitsee kiitoksen. Hän on osannut …käyttää esim. valon ja varjojen te- …okeinoja niin, että kuvauksen …suus elokuvan onnistumisessa …oidaan merkitä varsin painavak- …si. Harry Bergström vastaa musiikista, joka enimmäkseen on vanhaa tuttua.

Suuri näyttelijäjoukko käsittää sekä tuttuja että tuntemattomia nimiä. Aato Nikkasen esittäjä Santeri Karilo kuulunee ensin mainit…

…rvovaltaisille kutsu- …ille ensi-iltayleisölle …edustajille ja näyt- …n esitystä tapahtu- …det selostimme eili- …ime.

…ppäsen Evakko-ro-

Kuuluja Friitalan…
NAHKAPU…
Takkeja, puseroi… päähine…
Poikai…
NAHKAPUS…
4—16 vuot…
E.Seppä…
Kouvolan my…

Kunnanjohta…
neuvo…

Maalaiskuntien ku… kaksipäiväiset neu… alkoivat eilen M… Liiton uudessa kunn… Tuusulassa. Kaikkiaa… saapunut 54 kunnanj… vien avauksen suorit… johtaja Aare Eskola, … puheessaa selosti ku… syntyvaiheita ja syit… vat johtaneet opisto… seen. Uusi opisto me… mattavaa edistysaske… kuntien luottamusmie… ranhaltijain koulutuk… misessa, hän lausui.

Fil. tri Veikko Hal… loudellisen tilannekat… deten tilanteen oleva… kellä vaikean. Aamup… essa kuultiin vielä h… Reino Kuuskosken e… heesta ”Näkökohtia … nojen rahoittamisest… rcin.” Kuntien luot… tällä hetkellä vaike… eläkelaitos voinee uu…

Charles Münch Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtaja tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitsky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pitää konsertin Helsingissä syyskuun 4 pnä. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan-kiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myös Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Tukholmassa, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuulu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. Vuodesta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria johtanut Charles Münch.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopanmatkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Kousevitskya Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajankorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmin oli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo vuonna 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston, hän oli modernin musiikin esitaisttelija ja hän säteili sitä vaikeasti kuvattavaa henkilökohtaista magneettisuutta, joka erottaa suuren johtajan keskinkertaisesta.

Uusi johtaja, uusi sävy

Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittautunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizienin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukossaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Copland ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

Pyhä kutsumus, kuume

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi. Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi kuultuaan kerran erään konsertin jälkeen kotikaupungissaan, että joku yleisön joukosta kiitti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle. Société des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterinjohtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatoriossa, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—1945. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa. Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tästä tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan ”I Am A Conductor” (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: ”Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta. Berlioz kertoo, että hän ”Francs-Juges” alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tälläiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia.”

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Lahti
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

TAIDE JA KIRJALLISUUS

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat ”kolme suurta” useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin ”läpi” kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Kaussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti ”kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa’. Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — kestävän esityskautensa aikana lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat ”Pops”-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin

Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

Tilaaja:
Lehti: Kouvolan H.
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

[redacted]

...nteri Karilo) on tullut evakko-
"Kuultavaista ei enää ole..."

vovaltaisille kutsu-lle ensi-iltayleisölle edustajille ja näyt-esitystä tapahtu-et selostimme eili-
me.
päsen Evakko-ro-

elokuvana

a kuin juonen kiinteää seuraa-nista alusta loppuun. Tuloksena on ähän sekavantuntuinen ja Tan-
erin puheeseen töksähtämällä
äättyvä juttu, jonka seuraaminen
omaania lukemattomalle varmaan-
in käy paikoin vaikeaksi. Rupeaa
kipaamaan vanhanaikaiseksi käy-
ää selittävää taustaääntä, joka
uttaisi tapahtumien kuljettamises-
a ja niiden yhteen liittämisessä.

Kohdittain elokuva on aivan erinmainen. Siinä on karmaisevaa so-ian läheisyyttä ja kodittomuuden
ärkyttävyyttä, Karjalan heimon
älitöntä luonteenlaatua ja koko
uon kohtalonajan vavahduttavaa
unnelmaa. Parhaisiin kuuluvat
ässä mielessä odotushuoneiden
ähtötunnelmat, matkanteko junissa
kohti tuntemattomia päämääriä se-
kä pommitus Kouvolaan tultaessa.

Unto Kumpulaisen kuvaus
nsaitsee kiitoksen. Hän on osannut äyttää esim. valon ja varjojen teokeinoja niin, että kuvauksen
suus elokuvan onnistumisessa
oidaan merkitä varsin painavak-
si. Harry Bergström vastaa
musiikista, joka enimmäkseen on vanhaa tuttua.

Suuri näyttelijäjoukko käsittää
sekä tuttuja että tuntemattomia ni-
miä. Aato Nikkasen esittäjä Santeri Karilo kuulunee

Kuuluja Friitalan
NAHKAPU
Takkeja, puseroi
päähine
Poikai
NAHKAPUS
4—16 vuot
E.Seppä
Kouvolan my

Kunnanjohta
neuvo

Maalaiskuntien ku
kaksipäiväiset neu
alkoivat eilen M
Liiton uudessa kunn
Tuusulassa. Kaikkiaa
saapunut 54 kunnanj
vien avauksen suorit
johtaja Aare Eskola,
puheessaa selosti ku
syntyvaiheita ja syit
vat johtaneet opisto
seen. Uusi opisto me
mattavaa edistysaske
kuntien luottamusmie
ranhaltijain koulutuk
misessa, hän lausui,

Fil. tri Veikko Hal
loudellisen tilannekat
deten tilanteen oleva
kellä vaikean. Aamup
essa kuultiin vielä ha
Reino Kuuskosken e
heesta "Näkökohtia
nojen rahoittamisest
roin." Kuntien luot
tällä hetkellä vaike
eläkelaitos voinee uu

Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtaja tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitsky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pitää konsertin Helsingissä syyskuun 4 pnä. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan-kiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myös Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Tukholmassa, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuulu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. Vuodesta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria johtanut Charles Münch.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopan-matkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitskya Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajankorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmin oli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo vuonna 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston, hän oli modernin musiikin esitaiselija ja hän säteili sitä vaikeasti kuvattavaa henkilökohtaista magneettisuutta, joka erottaa suuren johtajan keskinkertaisesta.

Uusi johtaja, uusi sävy

Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittautunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizienin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukossaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Copland ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

Pyhä kutsumus, kuume

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi. Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi kuultuaan kerran erään konsertin jälkeen kotikaupungissaan, että joku yleisön joukosta kiitti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle. Société des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterinjohtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatoriossa, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—1945. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa. Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tästä tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan "I Am A Conductor" (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: "Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta. Berlioz kertoo, että hän "Francs-Juges" alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tällaiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia."

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Asis
Lehti: Lahti
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

TAIDE JA KIRJALLISUUS

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Kaussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa'. Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — kestävän esityskautensa aikana lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symhony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Uusimaa
Pvm 1.9. 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Taide ja kirjallisuus

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoimaan Helsinkiin

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERIN kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asemat on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheenjäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Munck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokwski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massahusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varapuheenjohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkestria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Östra Nyland

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Salon Seudun Sl
Pvm 1.9. 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Syyskuun 4 pnä saapuu maahamme Bo kesteri, joka käsittää yli 100 soittajaa. Ork maassamme. Tämä on ensimmäinen suuri ta taan kiittää taiteilijavaihdon lisääntymistä den välillä, sillä Helsinki tulee lähivuosina asemansa "puolimatkan krouvina". Orkeste mestari Charles M ü n c h (kuvassa). Kapellin esittely sisäsivuilla.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Salon Seudun Sl
Pvm 1.9. 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pitää konsertin Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan-kiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi. Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myös Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Tukholmassa, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuuluu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. Vuodesta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria johtanut Charles Münch, jonka musikaalista uraa seuraava artikkeli käsittelee.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopan-matkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saataisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitzkya Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajakorokkeen ,tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmi noli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo vuonna 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston, hän oli modernin musiikin esitaistelija ja hän säteili sitä vaikeasti kuvattavaa henkilökohtaista magneettisuutta ,joka erottaa suuren johtajan keskinkertaisesta.

UUSI JOHTAJA, UUSI SÄVY

Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittanutunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizianin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Münch ,joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupunkiin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewanhhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

PYHÄ KUTSUMUS, KUUME

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi. Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi kuultuaan kerran erään konsertin jälkeen kotikaupungissaan, että joku yleisön joukosta kiitti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskuspapin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta ,jonka vain kuolema vai katkaista.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tästä tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan "I Am A Conductor" (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: "Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta. Berlioz kertoo, että "Francs-Juges" alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tällaiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty ,hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia.'"

av Bostons symfoniorkespå en större europeisk
nästare Richard Burgin na, Kauko Kahila, är av

Huomattava orkesterivierailu

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI SAAPUU HELSINKIIN

Ensi tiistaina t.k. 4 pnä saapuu Helsinkiin huomattava, kansainvälistä kuuluisuutta saavuttanut orkesteri, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi samana päivänä Messuhallissa. Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin.

Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadephian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa.

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Orkesteri saapuu Helsinkiin kahdella tilauskoneella klo 11.20 sekä osa orkesterista Aeron koneella klo 12.40.

4]

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa v. 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

OMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
aja: Usis
ti: Uusimaa
m 1.9 1956
rjoittaja:

Taide ja kirjallisuus

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoimaan Helsinkiin

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERIN kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionooperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asemat on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheenjäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Munck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokwski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massahusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varapuheenjohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkestria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Östra Nyland

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Salon Seudun Lt
Pvm 1.9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

ymfoniker kommer

Syyskuun 4 pnä saapuu maahamme Bostonin Filharmoninen orkesteri, joka käsittää yli 100 soittajaa. Orkesteri vierailee ensi kertaa maassamme. Tämä on ensimmäinen suuri tapaus, josta saamme oikeastaan kiittää taiteilijavaihdon lisääntymistä Neuvostoliiton ja länsimaiden välillä, sillä Helsinki tulee lähivuosina saamaan vanhan otollisen asemansa "puolimatkan krouvina". Orkesteria johtaa kuuluisa kapellimestari Charles Münch (kuvassa). Kapellimestari Münchin lähempi esittely sisäsivuilla.

ästspel av Bostons symfoniorkesom bäst på en större europeisk konsertmästare Richard Burgin asunisterna, Kauko Kahila, är av

SU
L Tila
Leht
Pvm
Kirj

Huomattava orkesterivierailu

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI SAAPUU HELSINKIIN

Ensi tiistaina t.k. 4 pnä saapuu Helsinkiin huomattava, kansainvälistä kuuluisuutta saavuttanut orkesteri, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi samana päivänä Messuhallissa. Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin.

Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadephian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa.

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Orkesteri saapuu Helsinkiin kahdella tilauskoneella klo 11.20 sekä osa orkesterista Aeron koneella klo 12.40.

4

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa v. 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Uusimaa
Pvm 1/9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Taide ja kirjallisuus

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoimaan Helsinkiin

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERIN kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, että siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionooperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asemat on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheenjäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Munck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokwski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varapuheenjohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkestria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Östra Nyland
Pvm 1/9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniker kommer

Konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors börjar verkligt förnämligt med ett gästspel av Bostons symfoniorkester den 4 september. Den världsberömda orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en större europeisk turné. Det kan ha sitt intresse att nämna att orkesterns ypperlige konsertmästare Richard Burgin tidigare varit verksam vid Helsingfors stadsorkester och att en av basunisterna, Kauko Kahila, är av finländskt ursprung.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Vapaus
Pvm 1/9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

[104]

Huomattava orkesterivierailu

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI SAAPUU HELSINKIIN

Ensi tiistaina t.k. 4 pnä saapuu Helsinkiin huomattava, kansainvälistä kuuluisuutta saavuttanut orkesteri, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi samana päivänä Messuhallissa. Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin.

Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadephian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa.

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Orkesteri saapuu Helsinkiin kahdella tilauskoneella klo 11.20 sekä osa orkesterista Aeron koneella klo 12.40.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa v. 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilsis
Lehti: Eteenpäin
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pitää konsertin Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan kiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi. Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myös Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Tukholmasssa, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuuluu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. Vuodesta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfonia-orkesteria johtanut Charles Münch, jonka musikaalista uraa seuraava artikkeli käsittelee.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopan-matkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitzkya Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajakorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmin oli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo vuonna 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston, hän oli modernin musiikin esitaistelija ja hän säteili sitä vaikeasti kuvattavaa henkilökohtaista magneettisuutta, joka erottaa suuren johtajan keskinkertaisesta.

Münchin tehtävä Bostonissa oli kaikkea muuta kuin helppo. Tosin hän sai johdettavakseen orkesterin, joka oli erinomaisimpia maailmassa, mutta Koussevitzky oli ollut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja neljännesvuosisadan ja se oli niin suuressa määrin hänen työtään, että samaisuus oli miltei täydellistä. Sitä paitsi oli Koussevitzky perinteitä rakastavassa Bostonissa tullut tullut suorastaan elimelliseksi osaksi kaupunkia, yhtä lujasti bostonilaisten tietoisuuteen juurrutetuksi kuin kaupungin vapaussodan muistomerkki. Mutta myös musiikkiperinteillä on Bos-

(Jatkoa 4. sivulla)

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

(Jatkoa 1. sivulta)

Charles Münch . . .

tonissa syvät juuret. Eräs näistä perinteistä on kaikin tavoin auttaa sinfoniaorkesterin johtajaa hänen työssään ja antaa hänelle mahdollisimman suuri vapaus.

Uusi johtaja, uusi sävy

Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittanut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizianin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukossaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Coplan ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä. on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

Pyhä kutsumus, kuume

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi. Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi kuultuaan kerran erään konsertin jälkeen kotikaupungissaan, että joku yleisön joukosta kiitti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle. Sociètè des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterinjohtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatoriossa, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—45. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa. Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tästä tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan »I Am A Conductor» (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: »Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta. Berlioz kertoo, että hän »Frans-Juges» alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tällaiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia.»

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilsis
Lehti: Hämeen Yt.
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch-Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pitää konsertin Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan-kiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi. Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myös Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Tukholmassa, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuuluu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. Vuodesta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria johtanut Charles Münch.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopan-matkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitzkyn Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajankorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmin oli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo vuonna 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston, hän oli modernin musiikin esitaistelija ja hän säteili sitä vaikeasti kuvattavaa henkilökohtaista magneettisuutta, joka erottaa suuren johtajan keskinkertaisesta.

Münchin tehtävä Bostonissa oli kaikkea muuta kuin helppo. Tosin hän sai johdettavakseen orkesterin, joka oli erinomaisimpia maailmassa, mutta Koussevitzky oli ollut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja neljännesvuosisadan ja se oli niin suuressa määrin hänen työtään, että samaistus oli miltei täydellistä. Sitä paitsi oli Koussevitzky perinteitä rakastavassa Bostonissa tullut suorastaan elimelliseksi osaksi kaupunkia, yhtä lujasti bostonilaisten tietoisuuteen juurrutetuksi kuin kaupungin vapaussodan muistomerkki. Mutta myös musiikkiperinteillä on Bostonissa syvät juuret. Eräs näistä perinteistä on kaikin tavoin auttaa sinfoniaorkesterin johtajaa hänen työssään ja antaa hänelle mahdollisimman suuri vapaus.

UUSI JOHTAJA — UUSI SÄVY

Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittautunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizianin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukossaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Copland ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

PYHÄ KUTSUMUS

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi kuultuaan kerran erään konsertin jälkeen kotikaupungissaan, että joku yleisön joukosta kiitti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle, Société des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterinjohtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatoriossa, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—1945. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa. Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

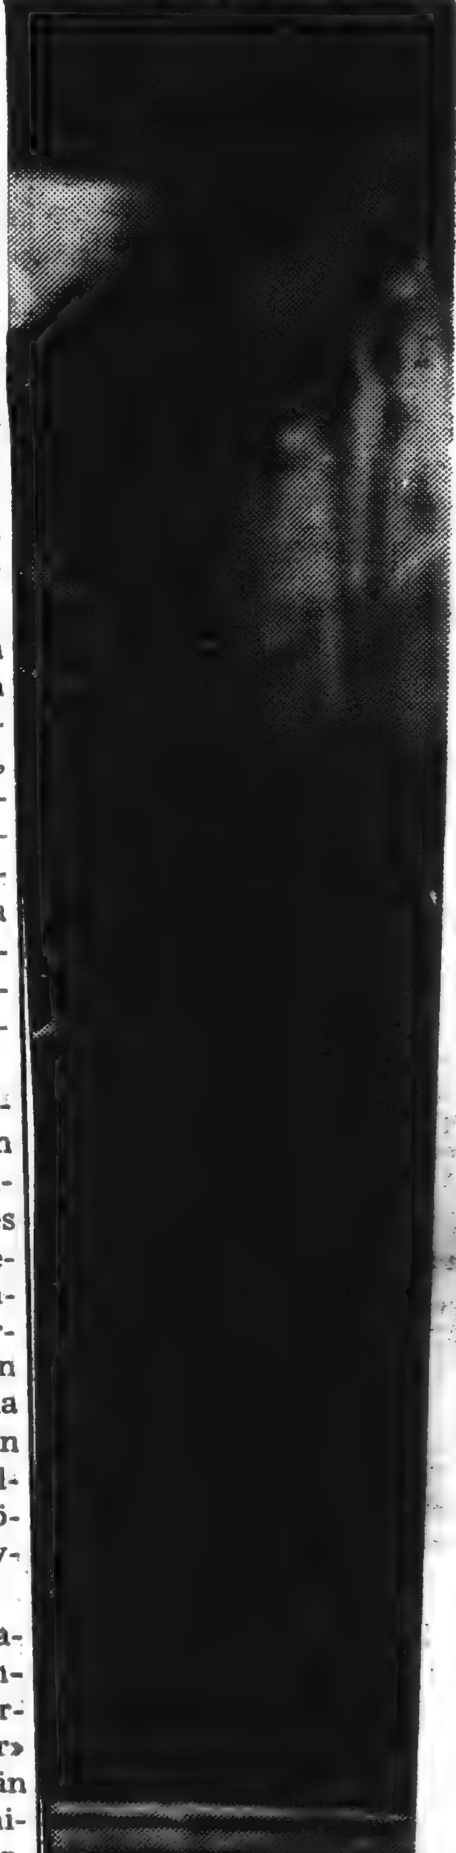
Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tästä tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan »I Am A Conductor» (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: »Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta». Berlioz kertoo, että hän »Francs-Juges» alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tällaiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia »

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilsis
Lehti: Etelä-Suomi
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen. Kuvassamme Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

---

sterdirigent



gplan till Helsingfors. Sym-
1949, Charles Münch.

[105]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Eteenpäin
Pvm 1,9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Hämeen Yt.
Pvm 1 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch-Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pitää konsertin Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan-kiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi. Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myös Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Tukholmassa, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuuluu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. Vuodesta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria johtanut Charles Münch.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopan-matkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitzkyn Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajankorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmin oli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo vuonna 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston, hän oli modernin musiikin esitaistelija ja hän säteili sitä vaikeasti kuvattavaa henkilökohtaista magneettisuutta, joka erottaa suuren johtajan keskinkertaisesta.

Münchin tehtävä Bostonissa oli kaikkea muuta kuin helppo. Tosin hän sai johdettavakseen orkesterin, joka oli erinomaisimpia maailmassa, mutta Koussevitzky oli ollut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja neljännesvuosisadan ja se oli niin suuressa määrin hänen työtään, että samaistus oli miltei täydellistä. Sitä paitsi oli Koussevitzky perinteitä rakastavassa Bostonissa tullut suorastaan elimelliseksi osaksi kaupunkia, yhtä lujasti bostonilaisten tietoisuuteen juurrutetuksi kuin kaupungin vapaussodan muistomerkki. Mutta myös musiikkiperinteillä on Bostonissa syvät juuret. Eräs näistä perinteistä on kaikin tavoin auttaa sinfoniaorkesterin johtajaa hänen työssään ja antaa hänelle mahdollisimman suuri vapaus.

UUSI JOHTAJA — UUSI SÄVY

Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittautunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizianin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukossaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Copland ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

PYHÄ KUTSUMUS

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi kuultuaan kerran erään konsertin jälkeen kotikaupungissaan, että joku yleisön joukosta kiitti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle, Société des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterinjohtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatoriossa, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—1945. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa. Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tästä tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan »I Am A Conductor» (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: »Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta». Berlioz kertoo, että hän »Francs-Juges» alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tällaiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Hangö
Pvm 1,9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Berömd amerikansk orkesterdirigent

Den 4 september anländer Bostons symfoniorkester med två extra flygplan till Helsingfors. Symfoniorkesterns konsert i Helsingfors dirigeras av orkesterns ledare sedan 1949, Charles M ü n c h.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Etelä-Suomi
Pvm 1,9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen. Kuvassamme Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

MEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
EIKELMÄPALVELU
19

Bostonin orkesteri saapuu Suomeen

Maailmankuulu Bostonin orkesteri saapuu Yhdysvalloista Suomeen ja antaa syysk. 4 pnä konsertin Helsingissä. Tämä 75-vuotias orkesteri on Yhdysvaltain kuuluisin ja nauttii kautta maailman suurta arvonantoa. Orkesterin johtajana on ranskalaissyntyinen Charles Münch (kuvassa). — Orkesterissa soittaa myös yksi suomalainen, pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila.

Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Samphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkestereitten veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschellin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Kousseyitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoittensa joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin, Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloé II.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949 ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja : Uusi
Lehti : Ht.- Häm.
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja :

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa v:sta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Bostonin maineikas sinfonia-orkesteri konsertoi Suomessa

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wien'n valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariis'n suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50 000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Bostonin maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen sinfoniaorkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa. Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila puhuu sujuvasti suomea.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

(06)

---

dirigent Charles Münch.

nsertpu-
:esterns
Richard
sam vid
och att
Kahi-
ng.
: sedan grunda-
s, men sitt juttet att vor till ärlden.
entera-
tionellt

kända kompositörer och nu alltså ges konserter i en rad av europas länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

---

lla tavalla avaa sen historian ollut
nen. Kuvassamme
yinen johtaja, joka

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: [illegible]
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin orkesteri saapuu Suomeen

»Mihinä ne miähet viipyy», jahkaasivat Myllykosken Tyyne, Nikulan Tilta ja Nikulan Lempi ruisvainiolla.

torin kimpussa. Heillä on traktorissaan kuorimakone, jolla saadaan päivässä kahden miehen voimalla pitkästi yli kymmenen mottia puhdasta paperipuuta ja kaivattua lisävaluuttaa jokapäiväisiin rahamenoihin Tässä talossa asuu nykyään kylän vanhin asukas, Justiina Karhu (o.s. Hauta), joka huhtikuussa täyttää 90 vuotta. Vielä oli mummo hyvissä voimissa, mutta valitteli reumatismin ahdistavan. — Paljon ovat muuttuneet asiat Lehmäjoella sitten kun Justiina-mummo muutti 21-vuotiaana kyettei mummo tiedä edes kaikkien nimiäkään. — On muuttunut maailma 90 vuodessa hän huokaa. — Ja muuttuu yhä nopeammin, vastaamme. me.

Seuraava paikka oli 78-vuotiaan Matti Kleemolan koti. Matti-isäntä on kylän oltermanni ja häneltä tiedustelimmekin, miltä näyttää kylän kehitys tällä haavaa. — Hyvältä, — hyvältähän se näyttää, mikäs siinä, sanoo tukeva oltermanni katsoen tarkkaavaisesti silmälasiensa takaa. Kleemola on aikaisemmin ollut rakennusmiehenä, mutta viime vuosina hän on hoitanut osuuskaupan kuivaajaa ja lajittelijaa. Tämä vanttera vanhus valitti jalkojensa tottelemattomuutta, ne kun eivät tahdo tulla kaikin ajoin suosista mukana ja se vaikeuttaa kaikkea

nilleen entistä uomaansa taa varmasti samaan kin kuin sata vuotta sitten.

— Mistähän muuten
että tämän kapean joen
Lehmäjoki, kysyimme
Latvalalta, — eikö
kiksi Sonnijoki tai mi olisi yhtä paikallaan.
dä häntä, sanoi Latvala, johtuu siitä, että joki mäjärvestä naapuripitäjän ta, ja miksi järvi järvi Lehmäjärvi se on taas asiansa. — Vettä valui vaalta ja oli mentävä tämään. Menimme
valan taloon.
miesväki oli kotosalla.

Isäntä kertoi rypsin lä leikkaamatta, — oli tuleentumatonta pari

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Itä-Häme
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa v:sta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Bostonin maineikas sinfonia-orkesteri konsertoi Suomessa

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wien'n valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariis'n suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50 000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Bostonin maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen sinfoniaorkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa. Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila puhuu sujuvasti suomea.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

106]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI SAAPUU

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Eurooppan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkestereitten veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschellin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Munck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoittensa joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloé II.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949 ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAH
LEIKELMÄPALVEL

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Jakobstads T

dirigent Charles Münch.

kända kompositörer och nu alltså ges konserter i en rad av europas länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

---

lavalla tavalla avaa tta sen historian ollut täminen. Kuvassamme
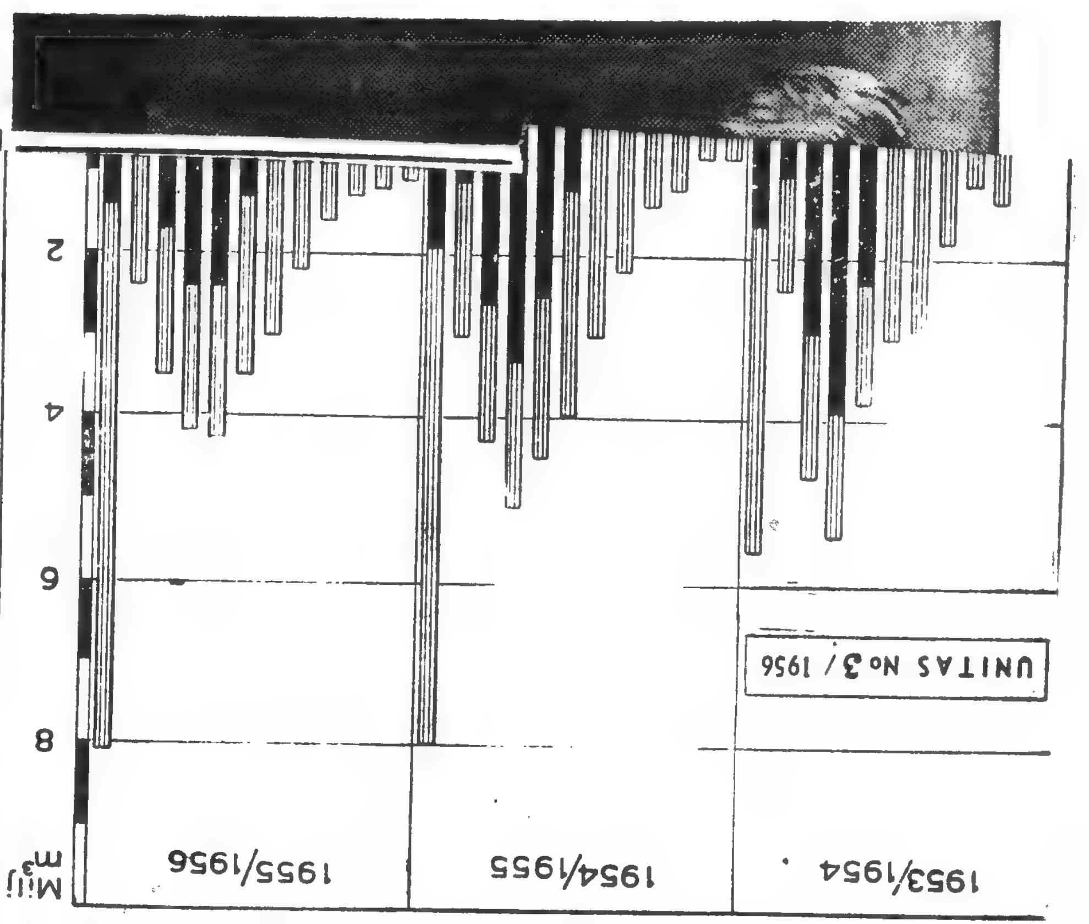
nykyinen johtaja, joka

KULTTUURIRAHASTO
ELMÄPALVELU
Usis
19 56

Bostonin orkesteri saapuu Suomeen

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja : Usis
Lehti : Itä-Häme
Pvm 1. 9. 1956
Kirjoittaja :



SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja : Usis
Lehti : [illegible]
Pvm 1. 9. 1956
Kirjoittaja :

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI SAAPUU

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Samphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkestereitten veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschellin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Munck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli [illegible]äs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoittensa joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6: Ravel: Daphnis & Chloé II.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949 ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

...la tavalla avaa
...en historian ollut
...nen. Kuvassamme
...vinen johtaja, joka

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja : Usis
Lehti : Jakobstads Tidning

[106]

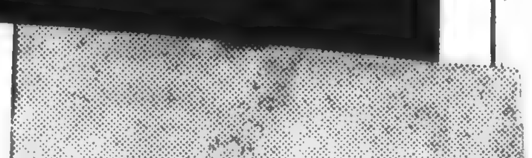
dirigent Charles Münch.

...sertpu-
...esterns
Richard
...sam vid
och att
... Kahi-
...ng.
... sedan
...grunda-
...s, men
...sitt ju-
...ttet att
...vor till
...ärlden.
...entera-
...tionellt

kända kompositörer och nu alltså ges konserter i en rad av europas länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

ULTTUURIRAHASTO
LMÄPALVELU
Usis
19 56

Bostonin orkesteri saapuu Suomeen



»Mihinä ne miähet viipyy», jahkaasivat Myllykosken Tyyne, Nikulan Tilta ja Nikula ruisvainiolla.

torin kimpussa. Heillä on traktorissaan kuorimakone, jolla saadaan päivässä kahden miehen voimalla pitkästi yli kymmenen mottia puhdasta paperipuuta ja kaivattua lisävaluuttaa jokapäiväisiin rahamenoihin Tässä talossa asuu nykyään kylän vanhin asukas, Justiina Karhu (o.s. Hauta), joka huhtikuussa täyttää 90 vuotta. Vielä oli mummo hyvissä voimissa, mutta valitteli reumatismin ahdistavan. — Paljon ovat muuttuneet asiat Lehmäjoella sitten kun Justiinamummo muutti 21-vuotiaana kyettei mummo tiedä edes kaikkien nimiäkään. — On muuttunut maailma 90 vuodessa hän huokaa. — Ja muuttuu yhä nopeammin, vastaamme. me.

Seuraava paikka oli 78-vuotiaan Matti Kleemolan koti. Matti-isäntä on kylän oltermanni ja häneltä tiedustelimmekin, miltä näyttää kylän kehitys tällä haavaa. — Hyvältä, — hyvältähän se näyttää, mikäs siinä, sanoo tukeva oltermanni katsoen tarkkaavaisesti silmälasiensa takaa. Kleemola on aikaisemmin ollut rakennusmiehenä, mutta viime vuosina hän on hoitanut osuuskaupan kuivaajaa ja lajittelijaa. Tämä vanttera vanhus valitti jalkojensa tottelemattomuutta, ne kun eivät tahdo tulla kaikin ajoin suosista mukana ja se vaikeuttaa kaikkea

nilleen entistä uo
taa varmasti sam kin kuin sata vuot

— Mistähän m
että tämän kapean
Lehmäjoki. kysyi Latvalalta, — kiksi Sonnijoki tai mi olisi yhtä paik dä häntä, sanoi L johtuu siitä, että j mäjärvestä naapuri ta, ja miksi järvi Lehmäjärvi se o asiansa. — Vettä vaalta ja oli mentä
tämään. Menimme
valan taloon,
miesväki oli kotos

Isäntä kertoi ryps
lä leikkaamatta, — tuleentumatonta par

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Hr-Häm.
Pvm 1.9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

kaikille kiusallinen. Jos vero kannettaisiin ennakkona samalla tavoin kuin muut verot, ei sitä juuri huomattaisikaan niin vähäinen se loppujen lopuksi on muihin veroihin verrattuna. — Kirkkohallitus on seurannut ja jatkuvasti seuraa verotuskysymyksen kehittymistä ja tekee parhaansa sen jouduttamiseksi. Pientä valkenemista onkin viime aikoina ollut havaittavissa. Tarkoituksena nimittäin on, että rahoitus on aivan selvä. Kun rakennuskustannukset tuntuvat olevan nousussa, ovat seurakunnat joissakin tapauksissa kiirehtineet aloittamaan rakennustyöt niin pian kuin mahdollista vaikka osa rahoituksesta olisikin hämärän peitossa. Tästä on kuitenkin ollut viime aikoina eräissä tapauksissa seurauksena, että seurakunnat ovat joutuneet taloutensa järjestämisessä suuriin vaikeuksiin. Kirkon keskus

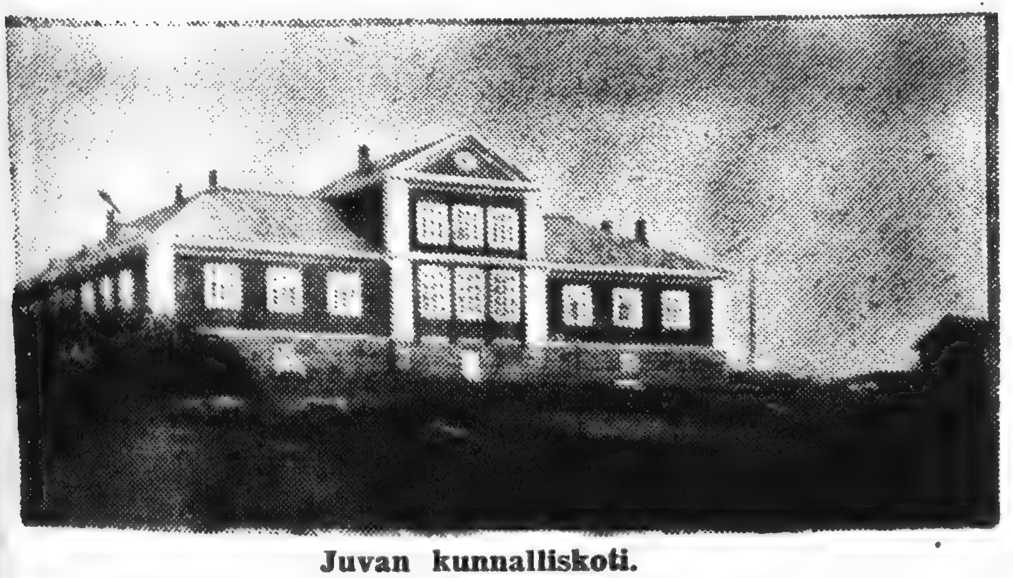
OMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Usis
1.9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

sen vaurasta väkeä. Näin kertoili meille maanviljelijä Matti Lipsanen Juvan Kaskiista.

Kunnan veroäyri on jo jonkin aikaa ollut 10 mk:ssa ja se yritetään pitää siinä jatkuvasti. Mitään suuria veronmaksajiahan kunnalla ei ole, vaan verotulot

Tästä summasta on jo etukäteen koottu n. 21 milj. mk, loput on tarkoitus hankkia lainoina ja tulevien talousarvioiden puitteissa. Ensiksi ruvetaan rakentamaan uutta osaa, johon tulee 40-paikkaisen sairasosaston lisäksi talous- ja lämpökeskukset koko rakennuskompleksia varten. Tä-

Pitäjän ajanmukainen sairaala.



Juvan kunnalliskoti.

Puumalan Viri voitti
kolmen seuran ottelun

Eilen illalla suoritettiin Sulkavalla seuraottelu yleisurheilussa Puumalan Virin, Juvan Urheilijain ja Sulkavan Urhei-Puumala 57,1, 4) Heikki Pelkonen Sulkava 57,2.

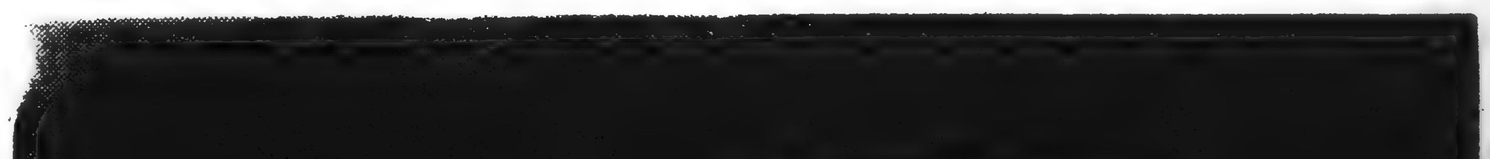
3.000 m: 1) Teuvo Vartiainen Sulkava 9.14,2, 2) Armas Ka-

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Jakobstads Tidning
Pvm 1.9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

[106]

Bostons symfoniorkester anländer



Bostonorkesterns världsberömde ledare och dirigent Charles Münch.

Upptakten för konsertsäsongen i Finland blir verkligt förnämlig genom Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök här — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen i början av september. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum och medverkar vid bl. a. festspelen i Edinburgh. Med orkestern kommer dirigenterna Charles Münch — Bostonsymfonins ledare sedan 1949 — och Pierre Monteaux, som på turnén dirigerar några konserter.

Det torde intressera konsertpubliken i vårt land att orkesterns ypperlige konsertmästare Richard Burgin tidigare varit verksam vid Helsingfors stadsorkester och att en av basunisterna, Kauko Kahila är av finländskt ursprung.

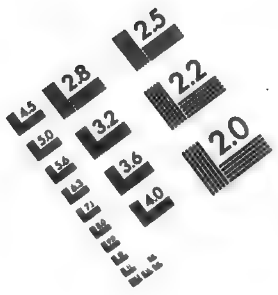
Det är i år alltså 75 år sedan Bostons symfoniorkester grundades. Jubilaren har hyllats, men själv har orkestern firat sitt jubileum på det ovanliga sättet att den i sin tur delat ut gåvor till den musikintresserade världen. Under senaste säsong presenterades 15 nya verk av internationellt kända kompositörer och nu alltså ges konserter i en rad av europas länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

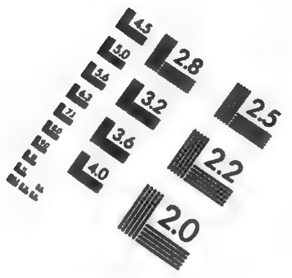
REDUCTION
RATIO
17x

2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

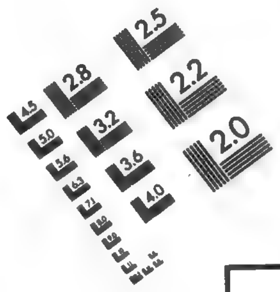
2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

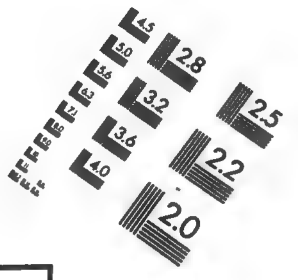
1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

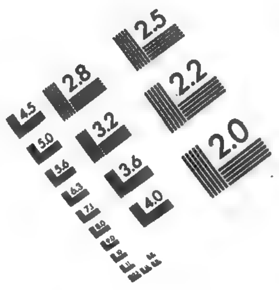


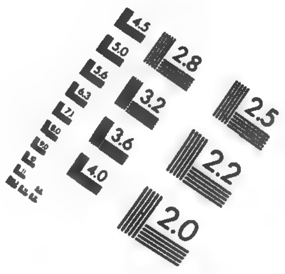


PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC





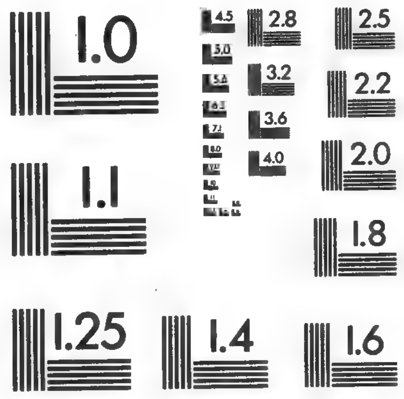




200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

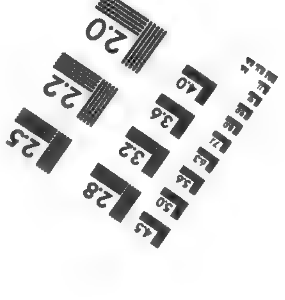
2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

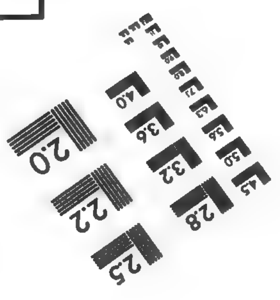
2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

A5

A4

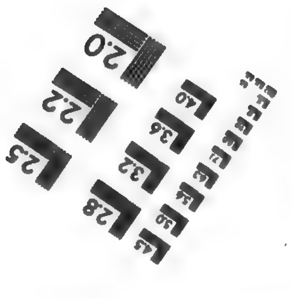
A3





PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



4.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm 19
Kirjoittaja:

"Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suurta hermoenergian kulutusta"

Charles Münchin musikaalinen ura

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pitää konsertin Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan-kiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi. Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Tukholmassa, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuuluu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. Vuodesta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria johtanut Charles Münch, jonka musikaalista uraa seuraava artikkeli käsittelee.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopan-matkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitzkya Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajankorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmin oli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo vuonna 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston, hän oli modernin musiikin esitaiteilija ja hän säteilee sitä vaikeasti kuvattavaa henkilökohtaista magneettisuutta, joka erottaa suuren johtajan keskinkertaisesta.

Münchin tehtävä Bostonissa oli kaikkea muuta kuin helppo. Tosin hän sai johdettavakseen orkesterin, joka oli erinomaisimpia maailmassa, mutta Koussevitzky oli ollut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana neljännesvuosisadan ja se oli niin suuressa määrin hänen työtään, että samaistus oli miltei täydellistä. Sitä paitsi oli Koussevitzky perinteitä rakastavassa Bostonissa tullut suorastaan elimelliseksi osaksi kaupunkia, yhä lujasti bostonilaisten tietoisuuteen juurrutetuksi kuin kaupungin vapaussodan muistomerkki. Mutta myös musiikkiperinteillä on Bostonissa syvät juuret. Eräs näistä perinteistä on kaikin tavoin auttaa sinfoniaorkesterin johtajaa hänen työssään ja antaa hänelle mahdollisimman suuri vapaus.

Uusi johtaja, uusi sävy

Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittautunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizianin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukassaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Copland ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Fritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzingiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

Pyhä kutsumus, kuume

Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tul- [illegible] Hän kertoo, kuinka hän kiihtyi [illegible] joku ylen joukosta kutti orkesteria, mutta samanaikaisesti kysyi, tarvitsiko orkesteri oikeastaan johtajaa. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzingissä Münch lähti Pariisiin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle, Société des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterinjohtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatoriossa, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—1945. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa. Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan «I Am A Conductor« (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: «Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta. Berlioz kertoo, että hän «Francs-Juges« alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tutkitsijan täytyy kyetä tällaiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia«.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Udis
Lehti: Kansan Lehti
Pvm 1/9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilm
Lehti: Työkansan
Pvm 1/9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri juhlakiertueellaan Suomessa

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konserttej[illegible] Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostane[illegible] myös se, että orkesterin mukan[illegible] saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natali[illegible] Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ys[illegible]tävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lie[illegible]nee useille suomalaisille tuttu[illegible] sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkeste[illegible]rissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalai[illegible]nen on mukana soittajistoss[illegible] Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kau[illegible] Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesterin vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi je entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajakorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui eräaksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistossa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä Ney Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun. Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

[illegible] enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — [illegible] puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen [illegible] päättyy huhtikuussa [illegible] kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta toukokesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset [illegible] orkesterin [illegible] suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Lousin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kansan Lehti
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kansan Lehti
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Maailmankuulu Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu lähipäivinä Suomeen. Orkesteri matkustaa kahdella tilauslentokoneella ollen perillä ensi tiistaina. Kuvassamme orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka johtaa myös Helsingin konsertin. — Orkesterista ja sen vaiheista lähemmin lehtemme taideosastossa.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu Suomeen

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä muusikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'in Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi je entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajakorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistossa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä Ney Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

[illegible]

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, joihin Symphony Hall on yhtä lailla täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

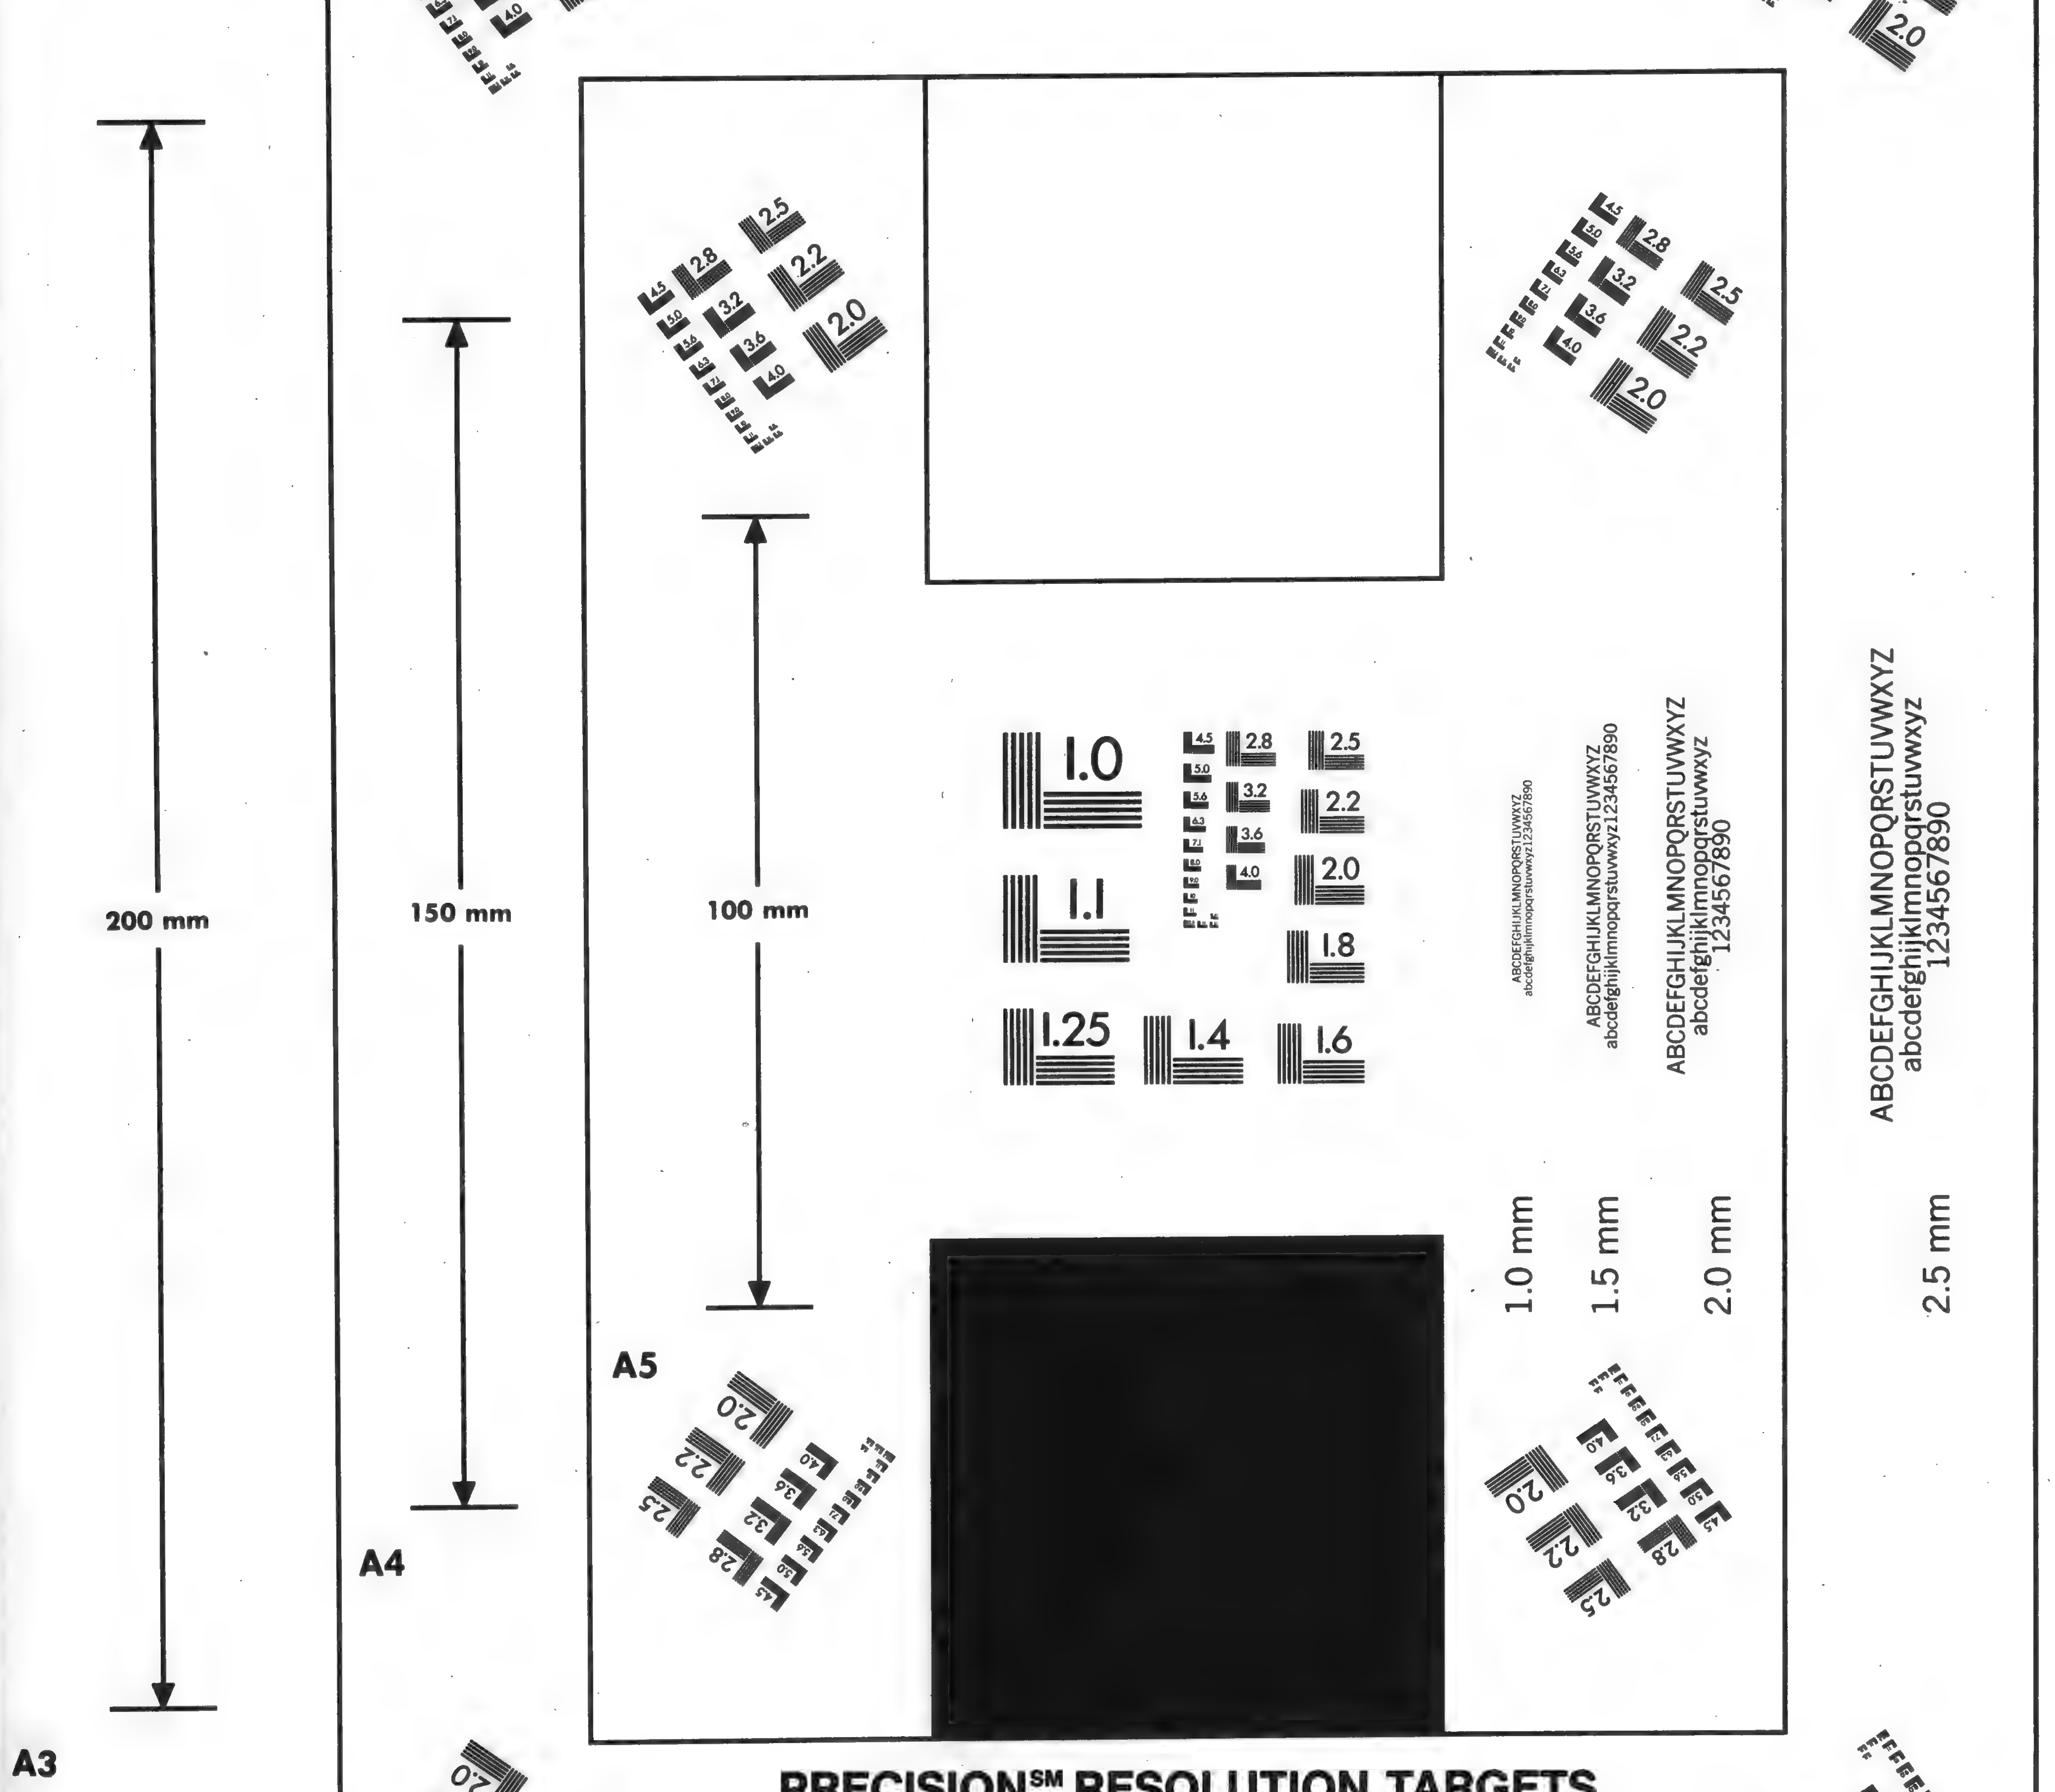
AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Lousin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A3
A4
A5
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
8.0
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ

Voimistelunopettaja

Pentti Oura

50-vuotias

Tänään täyttää 50 vuotta voimistelunopettaja Pentti Oura Kokkolassa. Hän on syntynyt Kalajoella. Ylioppilaaksi hän tuli Kokkolan Yhteislyseosta suorittaen sitten Helsingin yliopistossa voimistelunopettajan tutkinnon. Opettajatehtävissä hän on toiminut Forssan yhteiskoulussa 1932—43, jolloin siirtyi samanlaiseen tehtävään Kalajoen yhteiskouluun. Saman koulun johtajana hän toimi 1943—44 ja 1946—48. Kokkolan Yhteislyseon voimistelunopettajaksi hän tuli 1948, missä toimessa on edelleenkin. Voimistelun ohella hän on toiminut tuntiopettajana eri aineissa Kalajoella ollessaan.

Innokkaana urheilijana ja urheilun ystävänä on hän kiinteästi ollut mukana erilaisissa järjestötehtävissä. Helsingin Yliopiston Urheiluseuran sihteerin tehtävät hän hoiti opiskeluaikanaan 1930—31, Suomen Urheiluliiton valmentajana 1929—30 ja uudelleen 937—41 Kansainvälisille urhei-hyvänpuoleiset kaviot. Isä: Erl-Armo yh 792, emä: Rentun-Loisto 501046, ei: Pirkon-Renttu yh 604. Omist. Iska Nyrhilä, Ylivieska.

---

Raketus 5964, s. -51, trt, 158—158, 555 kg. Koe: 7,44—2,10 veti 8 prr. Kp. 5—8—4—2—4=23, I kl, rp. 5—6—4—2,5=17,5. Yht. 40,5 p. III palk., koepalk. Arvostelu: Hyvä rotutyyppi, hyvänpuoleinen laatutyyppi ja sukupuolityyppi, suhteellinen lihaksikas runko, vähän painunut selkä, tasaleveä kaidanlainen lautanen, kuivat hieman hajavarpaiset jalat, kapaehkot kaviot. Isä: Rake 4912, emä: Somakki 59691, ei: Tuki yh 656. Omist. T. ja G. Rudnäs, Kruunupylä.

Ruskotus 5965, s. -51, trt. 162—161, 575 kg. Koe: 7,48—2,15, veti 8 prr. Kp. 5—8—4—3—5=25, ansioluokka, rp. 5—6,5—4—3=18,5 p. Yht. 43,5 p. II palk., koepalk. Arvostelu: Hyvänpuoleiset laatutyypit, tiivis lyhyt runko, kuivanlaiset jalat, takajalat käyrähköt ja jyrkänlaiset vuohiset, hyvänpuoleiset kaviot. Isä: Aro-Rusko 5088, emä: Mukava 54055, ei: Mirkku yh 248. Omist. Jalo Hautakoski, Kaustinen.

Herpo 5966, s. -51, trt, 149—149, 490 kg. Koe: 8,46—2,04, veti 8 prr. Kp. 3—8—4—2,5—4=21,5, I kl, rp. 2,5—4,5—3,5—3=13,5. Yht. 35,5 p. Arvostelu: Välttävä laatutyyppi, hyvä rotutyyppi ja sukupuolityyppi, ahdaskylkinen pitkä kevyt runko, kuivat pieniluiset jalat, hyvänpuoleiset kaviot. Isä: Pommitus 4443, emä: Herja yh 60365. Ei: Herja yh 520. Omist. Alvar Pesola, Kannus.

Murrotus 5967, s. -51, trt. 159—159, 959 kg. Koe: 7,24—2,16, veti 8prr. Kp. 5—8—3—1,5—4=21,5, rp. 5—6,5—3,5—2,5=17,5. Yht. 39 p. Arvostelu: hyvänpuoleiset tyypit, pitkä vankka runko, vähän suippo lautanen, piirteetön kinner, muuten kuivanlaiset jalat, takajalat hieman pihdissä, hajavarpaiset, matalapohjaiset tyydyttävät kaviot.

---

elämän taipaleesta, hyvistä ja pahoista päivistä.

Mutta sellaista oli elämä Haagan kohdalta. Elämä meni jokapäiväisessä työssä joten kuten. Perhettäkin kertyi kolme valkkaa poikaa. Ostettiin luvalla oma mökki ja pärjättiin siinä kuin toisetkin. Haaga muuraili vieraan maan rakennuksilla ja hoivaili perhettään. Koti-ikävä ei vain haihtunut ja sitä tehostivat päivittäin ja vuosittain romahtaneet unelmat ja kovan opetuksen jälkeen saatu kokemus siitä, että kaikkiin unelmiin ei ole uskottava, eikä kaikkiin propagandapuheisiin luotettava.

Seitsemän pitkää vuotta odotteli Haaga pääsyä takaisin kotimaahan, kunnes muuttuneiden olosuhteiden ansiosta vuosi sitten tuo kaivattu hetki koitti. Viime keskiviikkona koitti toinen kaivattu päivä, joskaan aika ei ollut seitsemän vuoden, vaan yhden vuoden mittainen. Hänen perheensä saapui silloin Suomeen. Se on nyt vuorostaan vieraalla maalla, mutta uskoo tulevansa vähitellen toimeen. Perheen muodostavat venäläissyntyinen vaimo ja kolme poikaa.

Matka Siperiasta Suomeen kesti 8 vuorokautta. Perhe on tietenkin iloinen ja onnellinen saadessaan olla jälleen yhdessä, mutta ummikoille kieli tuottaa vaikeuksia. Hänen vaimonsa ja pojat ovat kuitenkin päättäneet oppia suomenkielen ja ummikkoympäristössä se käykin nopeasti päinsä. Muutamia suomen sanoja he jo osaavatkin ja isä toimii tulkkina tarpeen vaatiessa.

Lopullista lupaa Suomeen siirtymiseen perhe ei ole saanut, sillä äiti ja lapset ovat edelleen Neuvostoliiton kansalaisia. Lupaa yritetään tietenkin hankkia kaikki keinot käyttäen, mutta mitään varmuutta sen saannista ei ole. Tämä seikka sumentaakin jo alkanutta yhteenpääsyn tunnelmaa. Eemil Haaga säilytti sen sijaan Suomen kansallisuutensa ja aikoo nyt vakaasti pysyä Suomessa kävi kuinka kävi.

---

e Ensi-Kodeissa samat: k äidiltä ja lapselta sekä käyvältä äidiltä 10.000 mk dessa. Kotiin haluavat voi ntyä kunnissaan oman so imistonsa puoleen tai tie suoraan Salmelasta johta Ruotsalaiselta puh. 2417.

ja laskeutua tavalliselle maantielle.

Hymy etsii ystäviään.

sanoi. Cousteau on ohjannut elokuvan 'Hiljaisuuden maailma', joka sai ensimmäisen palkinnon Cannesin elokuvajuhlilla viime vuonna.

— Kaupparekisteriin on merkitty uusia toiminimiä yht. 249.

hengen huone, jossa on jo valmiina kauniita kukkia odottamassa asukkaita.

UTUKSIA

yvät.

Tulee kyllä sisään lupaa kysymättä.

Jollei saada säppiä päälle.

Ei, ei tämä ilo ole oppositiollean.

Vaikka onkin selvää selvempi sen politiikan huonoudes-

Sotakorvauksia ei ole ollut, vaan on ollut mitä parhaimmat vuodet taloudellisesti.

On eletty noususuhdanteita.

Mutta suuret hallituspuolueet ovat hassanneet niiden siunauksen sen tiensä.

Eikä mahdollisuudet ulkomaankauppaan vieläkään ole sietämättömät.

Kaupankäynti on vilkasta maailmalla ja järkevästi talouttaan hoitavat valtakunnat vahvistava [illegible]

Suuret hallituspuolueemme eivät voi nykytilanteeseen saada mitään ulkopuolelta syytä ja perustaa

---

SUOMEN KU

LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis

Lehti: Kansan Lehti

Pvm 1.9 1956

Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO

LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis

Lehti: Kansan Lehti

Pvm 1.9 1956

Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN

LEIK

Tilaaja:

Lehti:

Pvm

Kirjoittaja

Maailmankuulu Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu lähipäivinä Suomeen. Orkesteri matkustaa kahdella tilauslentokoneella ollen perillä ensi tiistaina. Kuvassamme orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka johtaa myös Helsingin konsertin. — Orkesterista ja sen vaiheista lähemmin lehtemme taideosastossa.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu Suomeen

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'in Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi je entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajakorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistossa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä [illegible] myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta [illegible] tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Lousin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: [illegible]
Lehti: Kansan lehti
Pvm 1 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu Suomeen

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'in Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi je entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajakorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistossa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä Ney Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Lousin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

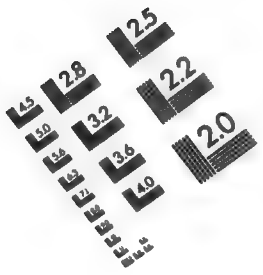
Maailmankuulu Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu lähipäivinä Suomeen. Orkesteri matkustaa kahdella tilauslentokoneella ollen perillä ensi tiistaina. Kuvassamme orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka johtaa myös Helsingin konsertin. — Orkesterista ja sen vaiheista lähemmin lehtemme taideosastossa.

REDUCTION
RATIO
18x

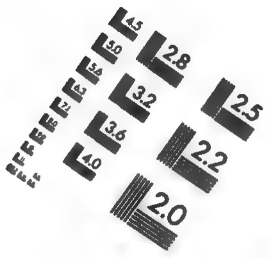
2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

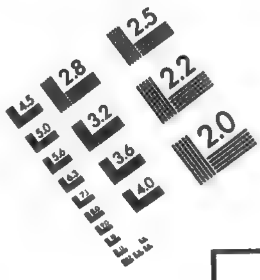


2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

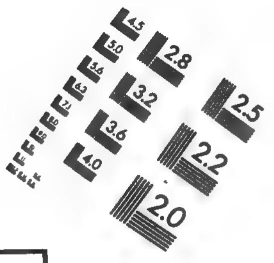


2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

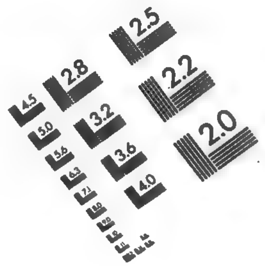
PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



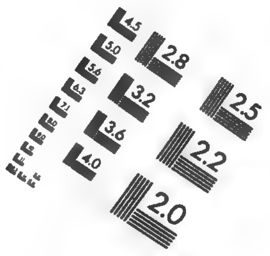
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0



2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

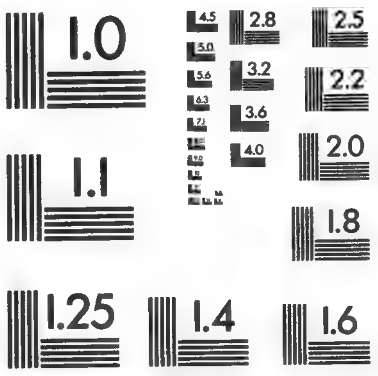


2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

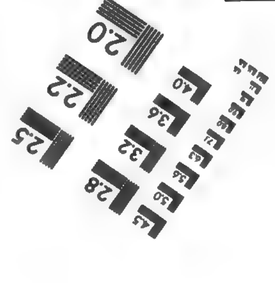
A5

2.0
2.2
2.5
3.6
4.0
3.2
2.8

2.0
2.2
2.5
4.0
3.6
3.2
2.8

A4

A3



2.0
2.2
2.5
4.0
3.6
3.2
2.8

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

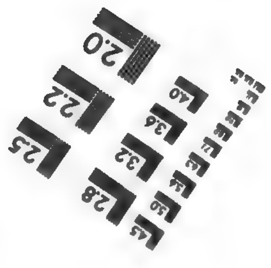
Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

2.0
2.2
2.5
4.0
3.6
3.2
2.8

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
4.5 mm 1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
3.5 mm abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
3.0 mm abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890



2.0
2.2
2.5
4.0
3.6
3.2
2.8

2.0
2.2
2.5
4.0
3.6
3.2
2.8

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm 19
Kirjoittaja

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin mainehikas sinfonia-orkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa. Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistossa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzky'n aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusetsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphonis & Chloë II.

---

asta ja Aaron Copland ja ard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.
nch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta kuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt ssburgissa, jossa hänen isänli kanttori. Münchin pyrki-senä oli tulla orkesterinjohksi. Orkesterin johtaminen le ammatti, vaan pyhä kut-us, sanoo Münch, se on jos-papin työtä ja melkein kuin netta, sairautta, jonka vain ema voi katkaista.
tuaan kahdeksan vuotta pzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin.
sai monia tarjouksia, mutta tai oman orkesterin — Parii-filharmoonikkojen — perusisen. Hän sai pian mainetta en musiikin esityksillään seperinteellisten orkesterikap-itten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.
'ain viisi vuotta tämän jäl-n Münch nimitettiin Ranskan keimmälle ja tavoitelluimmal-ohtajan paikalle. Société des certs'n johtajaksi ja orkeste-johtamisen professoriksi Pariikonservatorio[illegible] Sodan n hoiti vv. 1937—1946 [illegible] keen hän [illegible] eissa osissa maailmaa johtaen

n. kaksi erittäin menestykseltä konserttia Bostonissa Elämästään orkesterinjohtaja-ja käsityksestään tästä tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan "I Am A Conductor" (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoit-taa: "Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoener-gian kulutusta. Berlioz kertoo, että hän "Francs-Juges" alku-soittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi pata-rumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti.
Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemis-tä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musii-kin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tällaiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymi-seen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia."

Bostonin [illegible] tajana. Kesti 15 [illegible] kuin Thompsonin ennustus [illegible] toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajankorok-keen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

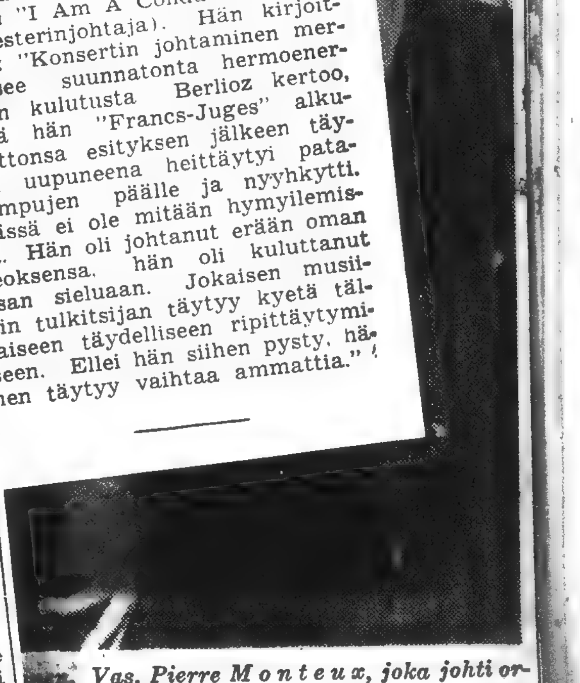
Münchin tehtävä Bostonissa oli kaikkea muuta kuin helppo. Tosin hän sai johdettavakseen orkesterin, joka oli erinomaisimpia maailmassa, mutta Koussevitzky oli ollut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja neljännesvuosisadan ja se oli niin suuressa määrin hänen työtään, että samaistus oli miltei täydellistä. Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittautunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizianin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, joukossaan Benjamin [illegible]

Bostonin sinfoniaorke[illegible] kesteria vv. 1919—19[illegible] terin nykyinen johtaja [illegible]



[illegible] Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti or[illegible] kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkes[illegible] ssaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta [illegible] issäkin.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa myös Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotiasta olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfiniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Tämän maailman mainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaudin Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entista maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachunostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri — elimellinen osa kaupunkia

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterinjohtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui [illegible]

[illegible] usein.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. [illegible]

[illegible] mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Housto-

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm 19
Kirjoittaja

Charles Münch

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pitää konsertin Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan-kiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi. Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myös Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Tukholmassa, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuuluu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. Vuodesta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria johtanut Charles Münch, jonka musikaalista uraa seuraava artikkeli käsittelee.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti vuonna 1934 Euroopan-matkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitzkya Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky vuonna 1949 jätti johtajankorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Münchin tehtävä Bostonissa oli kaikkea muuta kuin helppo. Tosin hän sai johdettavakseen orkesterin, joka oli erinomaisimpia maailmassa, mutta Koussevitzky oli ollut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtaja neljännesvuosisadan ja se oli niin suuressa määrin hänen työtään, että samaistus oli miltei täydellistä. Niiden kuuden vuoden aikana, joina Münch on johtanut orkesteria, on hän osoittautunut Koussevitzkyn arvoiseksi seuraajaksi. Orkesteri kuulostaa toisenlaiselta Münchin johtamana kuin edeltäjän aikana, mutta ero on samantapainen kuin Rembrandtin ja Tizianin taulujen välillä, joista kumpikaan ei ole pienempi mestariteos siksi että ne on maalattu eri tyylillä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukossaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Copland ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Münchin pyrkimyksenä oli tulla orkesterinjohtajaksi. Orkesterin johtaminen ei ole ammatti, vaan pyhä kutsumus, sanoo Münch, se on joskus papin työtä ja melkein kuin kuumetta, sairautta, jonka vain kuolema voi katkaista.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisiin. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Hän sai pian mainetta sekä uuden musiikin esityksillään että perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle Société des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterinjohtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatorioon [illegible] hän hoiti vv. 19[illegible] [illegible] Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa.

Elämästään orkesterinjohtajana ja käsityksestään tästä tehtävästä Münch on kertonut kirjassaan "I Am A Conductor" (Olen orkesterinjohtaja). Hän kirjoittaa: "Konsertin johtaminen merkitsee suunnatonta hermoenergian kulutusta Berlioz kertoo, että hän "Francs-Juges" alkusoittonsa esityksen jälkeen täysin uupuneena heittäytyi patarumpujen päälle ja nyyhkytti. Tässä ei ole mitään hymyilemistä. Hän oli johtanut erään oman teoksensa, hän oli kuluttanut osan sieluaan. Jokaisen musiikin tulkitsijan täytyy kyetä tällaiseen täydelliseen ripittäytymiseen. Ellei hän siihen pysty, hänen täytyy vaihtaa ammattia."

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uusi
Lehti: Uudenkaup.
Pvm 1.9. 19 56 H.
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa myös Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotiasta olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfiniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Tämän maailman mainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaudin Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun. Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachu-

nostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomenystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee [illegible] tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka [illegible] vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia [illegible] kotoisin Val[illegible] Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on [illegible] Uuden Englannin [illegible] Berkshi[illegible] soittanut [illegible] St. Louis'n sinfoniaorkesteri[illegible] kiinnitettynä B[illegible] vuodesta 1952 alkaen.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPA
Tilaaja: [illegible]
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 1.9. 19
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaor… kesteria vv. 1919—… terin nykyinen johta…

…paaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti or… y, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkes… yt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta … Helsingissäkin.

Bosto niaorkesteri — elin sa kaupunkia

Sinfoniaorkester[illegible]dysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailman [illegible] Henry Lee H[illegible] ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterinjohtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä muusikkomiehiä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui [illegible]

[illegible] usein.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusetts'in valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. K[illegible] oli ku[illegible]

[illegible] Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Housto-

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: [illegible]
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 1.9.1956

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm 19
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uusi
Lehti: Uudenkaup.
Pvm 1.9.1956 [illegible]
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa myös Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotiasta olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfiniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Tämän maailman mainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaudin Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entista maineikkaammak- [illegible] Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari [illegible] eräs Monteux'n

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachu-

nostanee myös se, että orkesterin [illegible] maahamme Mrs. [illegible] suuri Suomen- [illegible] maineikas kon- [illegible] Richard Burgin [illegible] nee [illegible] onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös [illegible] amerikansuomalainen [illegible] soittajistossa. Hän on [illegible] Kauko Kahila, jon- [illegible] vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia [illegible] Valkeakoskelta [illegible] Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila [illegible] sujuvasti [illegible] Uuden Englannin [illegible] Berkshi- [illegible] soittanut [illegible] sinfoniaor- [illegible] vuodes- [illegible]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: [illegible]
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 1.9.1956
Kirjoittaja:

TAIDE-ELÄMÄ

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri — elimellinen osa kaupunkia

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

sänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Housto-

---

Orkesterin historiaa

[illegible] Henry Lee Higginson [illegible] jäsen [illegible] rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterinjohtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. [illegible]

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. [illegible]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: [illegible]
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm [illegible] 19 56

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm 19
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uusi
Lehti: Uudenkaup.
Pvm 1.9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa myös Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotiasta olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfiniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Tämän maailman mainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaudin Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n [illegible]

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että [illegible] mm. E[illegible] R[illegible] Suom[illegible]

220 konserttia vuodessa

[illegible]

nostanee myös se, että orkesterin [illegible] maahamme Mrs. [illegible] suuri Suomen- [illegible] maineikas kon- [illegible] Richard Burgin hänee [illegible] sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka [illegible] vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia [illegible] kotoisin Val[illegible] Tampereelta. [illegible] Berkshi- [illegible] [illegible] -vuodes- [illegible]

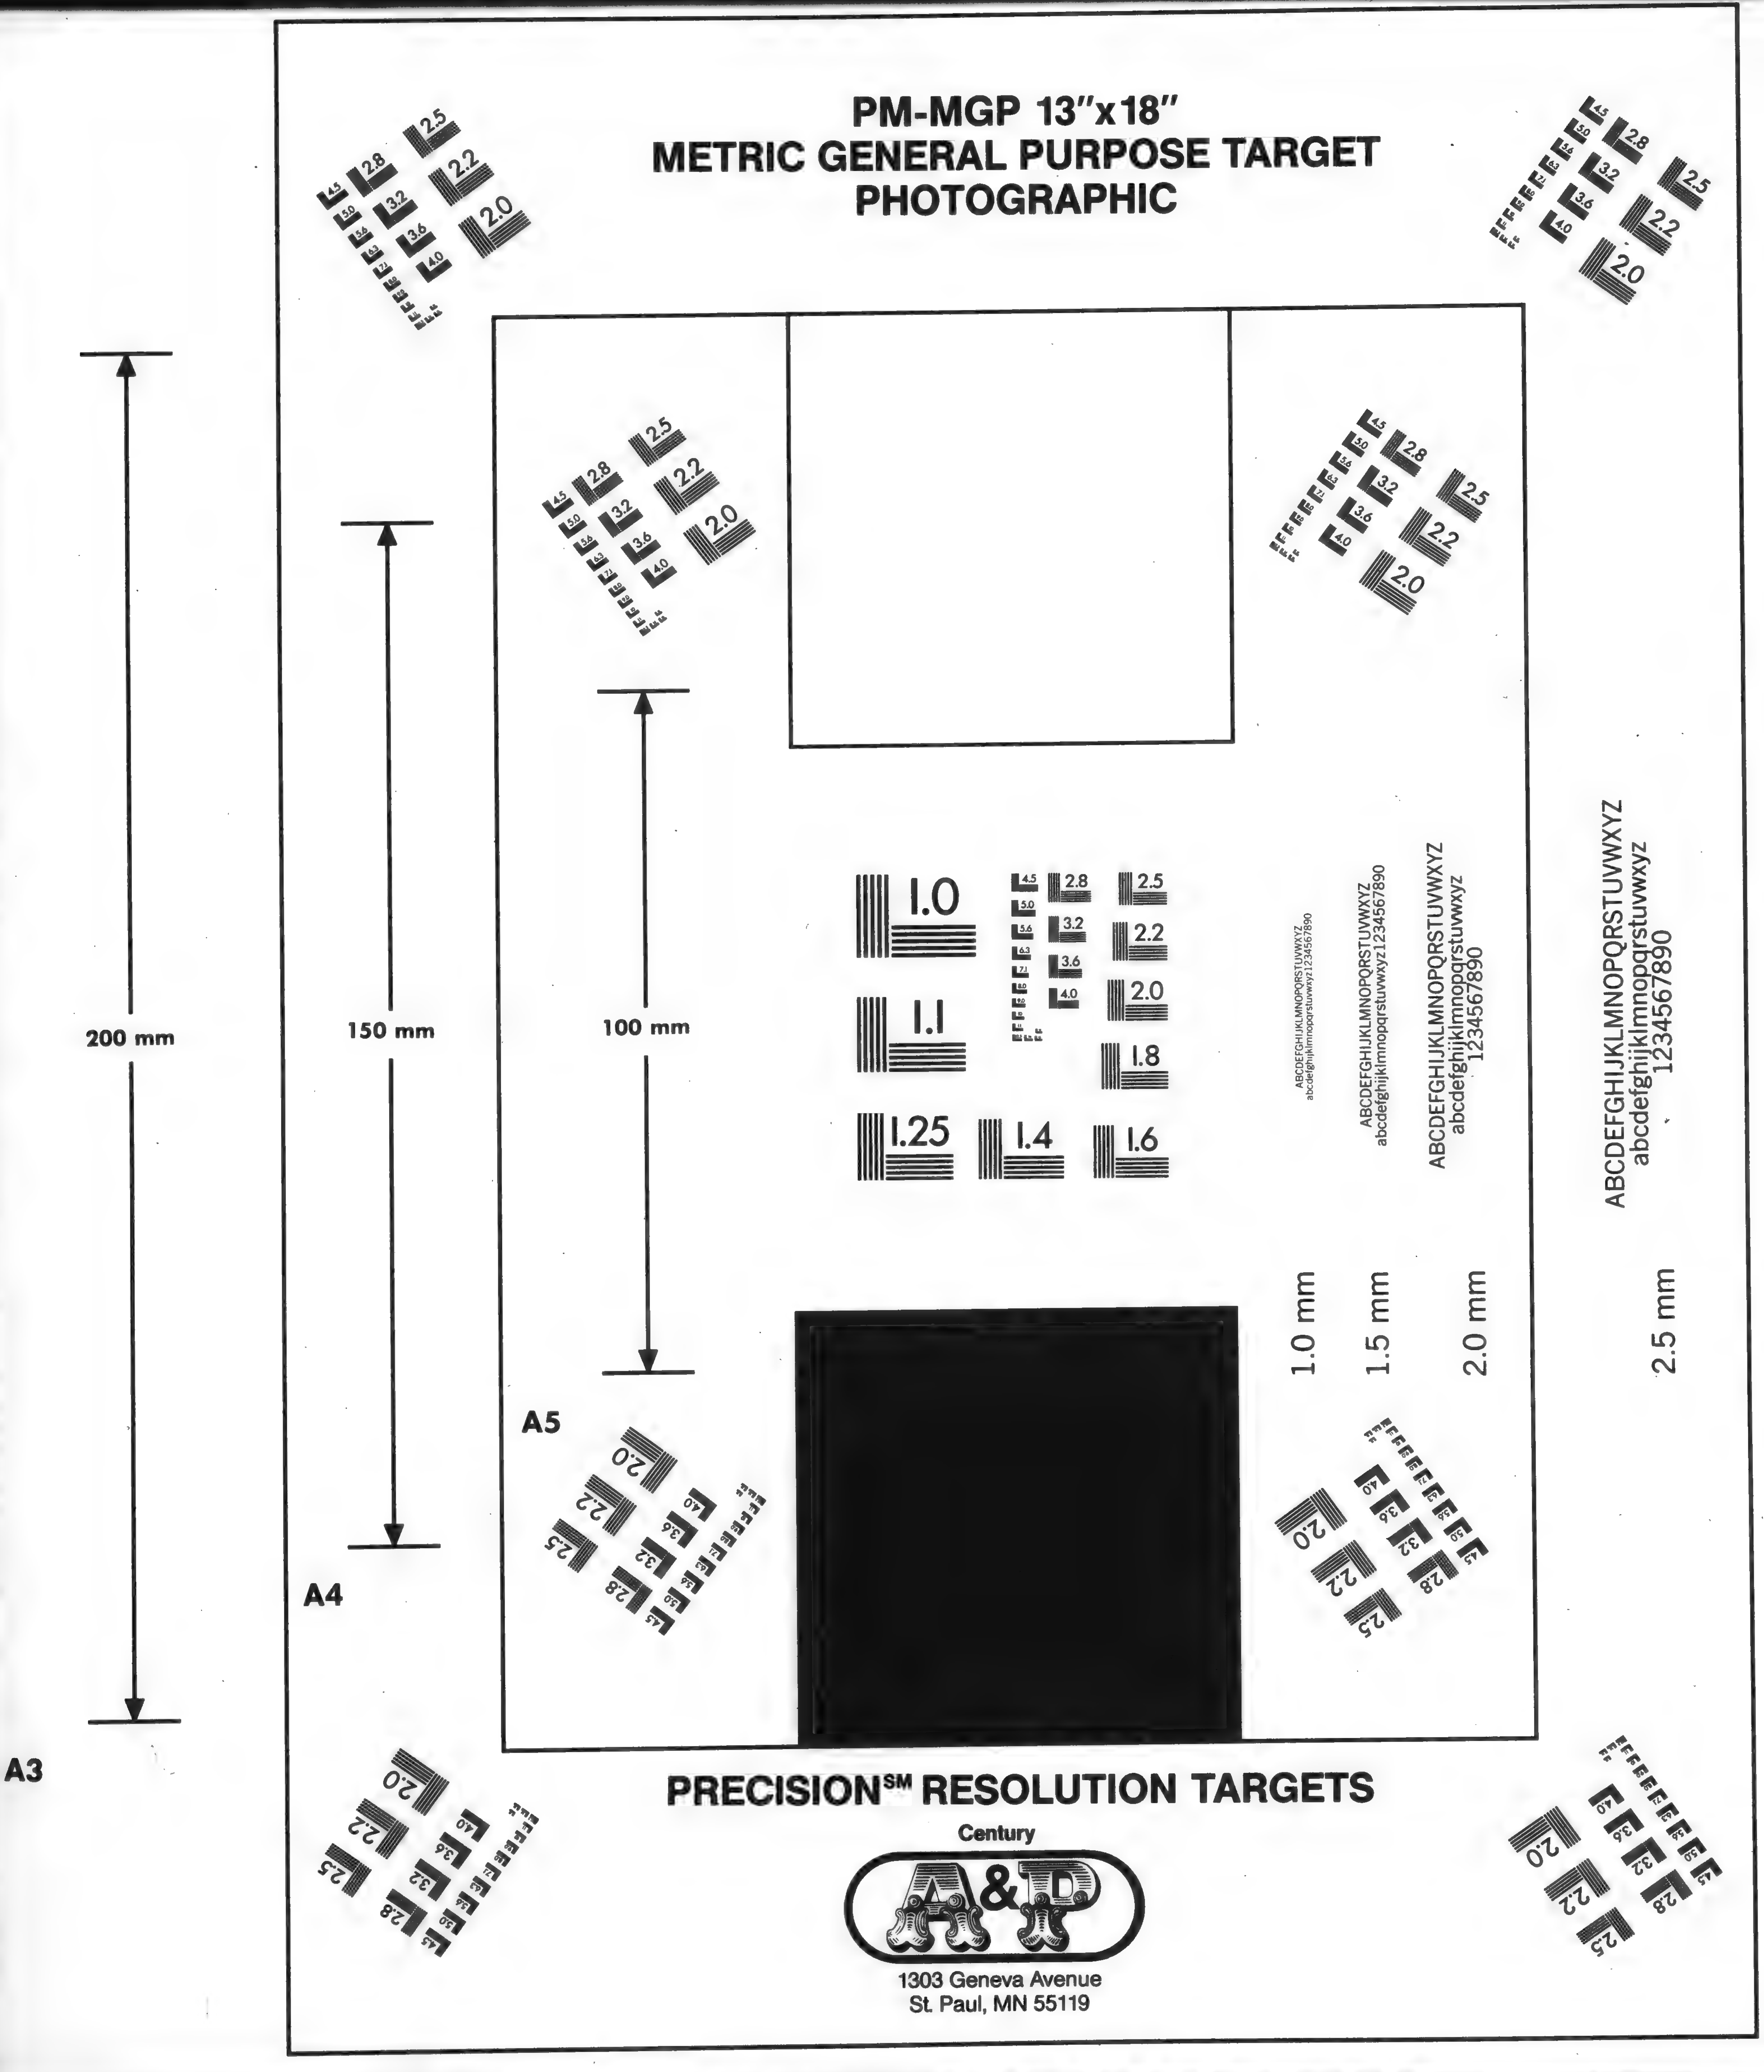
SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: [illegible]
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 1.9. 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

TAIDE-ELÄMÄ

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan ra-

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A3
A4
A5
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
8.0
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

[108]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Turun Sf.
Pvm 1.9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Pohjoismaise

pidettiin v

TURUN SANOMIEN KE

Konttori on avoinna tästä

”MAALTA PAKO”.

IRAALA paikallaan

lampun kaasut sekoittuvat leikkauksen aikana siinä määrin kloroformihöyryihin, että kaikki potilaat saavat vaikeita yskänkohtauksia, nukuttaja vaikeita henkitorvikatarreja ja lääkärit pyörtyilevät. Kerran eräs avustajalääkäri pyörtyi tästä katkusta, eikä suinkaan ole sanottu, etteikö tämä uudistu, vieläpä niin, että operatöörikin sen tekee tai molemmat yhdessä.

Tilanteen selvittämiseksi ehdotti prof. Stråhle oman sähkölaitoksen perustamista, mutta asia raukesi. Sähkövalo saatiin tänne v. 1909 ja kaasu 1930.

Puiston parantamiseksi teki silloinen ylilääkäri Paqvalin ehdotuksen ja pyysi määrärahaa 2 000 puun istuttamiseksi tälle mäelle. Todennäköisesti vain osa tästä suunnitelmasta toteutettiin. Siitä lähtöisin ovat peräisin kauniit jalavat, vaahterat ja lehmukset tällä tontilla.

Näinä 75 vuotena on lääninsairaala laajentunut valtavasti. V. 1938 valmistui, kuten kaikki tietävät, uusi paviljonki sisätauti- ja kirurgisille potilaille. Paikkoja oli 520. Tämä ei kuitenkaan enää vastaa tarvetta, koska kysyntä on tästäkin monin verroin lisääntynyt. Me elämme siinä vakaassa uskossa, että voimme niin

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Uusi Aura
Pvm 1.9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

tehdään.

Y. S. Koskimies esittää luettelon Urjalan käsityöläisistä 1600- ja 1700-luvulla. Tästä käy ilmi, että käsityöläisiä oli maaseudulla pitäjänkäsityöläisinä näillä vuosisadoilla siitä huolimatta, että merkantilistinen politiikka halusi keskittää käsityön harjoittamisen yksinomaan kaupunkien piiriin. Saamme tietää, että Urjalassa oli 1600-luvulla seppiä, räätäleitä, muurareita, suutareita, puuseppiä ja sorvareita, vieläpä kutojiakin. Seuraavalla vuosisadalla tapahtunut taloudellinen edistyminen näkyy myös uusissa käsityöläisammateissa: Urjalassa on asunut salpietarinkeittäjä, puutarhureja, säämiskäntekijöitä, kelloseppä, lasinpuhaltajia, hatuntekijä ja turkkuri aikaisemmin mainittujen ammattienharjoittajien lisäksi. Samalta kirjoittajalta on lisäksi luettelo vanhoista Lounais-Hämeen pitäjien kartoista Ruotsin arkistoissa. Historiallista tutkimusta kirjassa edustaa edellä mainittujen kirjoitusten lisäksi Esko Aaltosen ”Somerniemen kellotapuli”, jonka rakennusvaiheita ei ole aikaisemmin selvitetty.

Puhtaasti kansatieteellinen on Unto Salon laajahko tutkimus ”Kimpiastioita ja kimpitekniikkaa”. Kirjoittaja ottaa lähtökohdakseen lounaishämäläisen kimpiastiainvalmistuksen sekä Lounais-Hämeessä käytetyt astiamuodot, ja osoittaa, että kimpiastioita, so. laudoista koottuja uurteellisia ovat vielä tottumattomia liikenteeseen. Moottoriajoneuvojen kuljettajilta vaaditaan nyt entistä enemmän valppautta, sillä hekin ovat tottumattomia siihen, että lapsia liikkuu äskettäin vielä hiljaisilla katu- ja tieosuuksilla. ”Koulu” merkinnällä varustetut sinivalkoiset varoitusmerkit on entistä enemmän otettava huomioon, on hiljennettävä vauhtia ja ajettava varovaisesti.

AK ja AL kehoittavat kaikkia moottoriajoneuvojen kuljettajia pitämään mielessään turvallisuuden velvoitukset ja ajamaan siten, että lasten koulumatka on turvattu. Äänimerkki on annettava aina ja tarpeeksi ajoissa, jos lapsia kulkee tiellä.

Kuluvan vuoden onnettomuustilastoissa on murheellisia lukuja lapsille sattuneista liikenneonnettomuuksista. Autoilijoiden on turvattava lasten koulutie.

AK ja AL vetoavat myös kaikkiin lasten vanhempiin ja opettajiin kehoittaen heitä muistuttamaan lapsille ja koulunuorisolle liikenteen vaaroista ja neuvomaan, että heidän on kuljettava tien äärimmäistä reunaa silloin, kun jalkakäytävää ei ole. Pyöräiltäessä on ajettava jonossa tien oikeanpuoleista reunaa. Kaikkialla on ennen ajoväylän ylitystä pysähdyttävä ja katsottava molempiin suuntiin.

Arvoisat lasten vanhemmat ja opettajat! Neuvokaa lapsille turvallisin tie kouluun ja opettakaa heitä kulkemaan juuri tätä tie-

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Uudenkaup.
Pvm 1.9 1956 Sf.
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Munch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa myös Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotiasta olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat ”kolme suurta” useitten ta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Tämän maailman mainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria,

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Savon Sf.
Pvm 1.9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

TAIDE-ELÄMÄ

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan r

kaikki tarpeellinen hoitovälineistö pikku potilasta varten. Pentti makasi paarillaan koneen takaosassa hengityslaitteeseen kytkettynä. Hänen viereensä istuutui tri Esko Kaarsalo valmiina avustamaan, jos tarvetta ilmaantuu, ja etuistuimelle asettui tri irroittamalla sisään makasiinirakennukseen sekä edelleen välittömässä yhteydessä sijaitsevaan toimistorakennukseen, jossa oli kirveen avulla yritetty murtaa auki kassakaappi siinä kuitenkaan onnistumatta. Pienen matkalippukassan, joka sisälsi rahaa n. 1800 markkaa varas kuitenkin vei mennessään ja samoin oli auottu kaikki samassa rakennuksessa sijaisevan postitoimipaikan säilössä olevat paketit.

— Kesäkuun lopulla oli Britanniassa annettu 5.922.020 televisiolupaa, lisäyksen ollessa maaliskuun lopussa 182.427, ilmoittaa Englannin postilaitos.

kolme työmiestä 33 kg:n kuparimäärän anastamisesta yksi 10 kuukaudeksi vankeuteen ja kaksi 9 kuukaudeksi vankeuteen tuomion ollessa ehdollinen ensiksimainitulla 5 vuoden koeajalla ja viimeksimainituilla kolmen vuoden koeajalla, minkä lisäksi kukin heistä tuomittiin menettämään kansalaisluottamuksensa kolmeksi vuodeksi. Eräs 17-vuotias tyttö tuomittiin nuorena henkilönä tehdyistä kolmesta varkaudesta ja yhdestä näpistämisestä yhteensä 10 kuukaudeksi vankeuteen tuomion ollessa ehdollinen neljän vuoden koeajalla.

Korhosen ajaessa Mikkelissä Nuijamiehenkatua länteen ja juuri sivuuttaessaan Snellmaninkatua ajoi hänen ohjaamansa auton vasempaan kylkeen liikeapulainen Pekka Peltoniemi Vapo Oy:n omistamalla kuorma-autolla. Yhteentörmäyksen seurauksena kumpikin auto kärsi vaurioita ja Korhosen ohjaamassa autossa ollut merkonomi Helka Rissanen loukkaantui niin vaikeasti, että hänet oli kuljetettava lääninsairaalaan. Sairaalasta saamamme tiedon mukaan hänen tilansa ei kuitenkaan ole vakava. Mainittakoon, että Peltoniemellä ei ollut muuta kuin moottoripyörän kuljettamiseen oikeuttava lupa.

25 pölliä 70:-

TAIDE-ELÄMÄ

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriper jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan ra

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa myös Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotiasta olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfiniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Tämän maailman mainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin ko koonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaudin Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entista maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Rasnkassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Suomenmaa
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

[109]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Syd-Österbotten
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4 pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopankiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa.

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti »kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa». Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitskyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pons»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalia Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—24, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

---

ns symfoniorkester esöker Finland

s”-viihdekonsertit Arthur lerin johdolla joka ilta tou-kesäkuussa. Fielder johtaa kolme viikkoa kestävät ilt ulkoilmakonsertit Charles illä. Sitten jo alkaakin elwood ja vuoden konsertsi päättyy elokuun puolivä-Mainittava on myös runradioesiintymiset ja levy-t, jotka lisäävät orkesterin akkaa.
sertikautta jatkaa tänä
a orkesterin juhlavuoden e Eurooppaan, jonka aika-konsertoidaan Irlannissa, annissa, Skandinavian
a, Suomessa, Neuvostolii-Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itäsa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja nnissa. Bostonin sinfonia-eri on muuten ensimmäi-amerikkalainen orkesteri vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.
rles Münchin lisäksi seu-orkesterin mukana kier-sen entinen johtaja Pier-nteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, johtaa muutamia konsert-Suomalaista yleisöä kiinee myös se, että orkesterin
a saapuu maahamme Mrs.
Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Murgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, silä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Hesingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, irkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven; Lroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis&Chloë II.

nin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan ta-inen. Vas. Pierre Konteux, joka johti orkesteria vv.
-24, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja 924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles h, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

symfoniorkestern

land har operan första rummet. In-kester i Tyskland
är förmäten nog ra av samma klass Staatsoper i Beroper i Wien. Förkartat i Storbritan-e och Italien. I na däremot spela-rig samma viktiga

stonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja,
ohtaa Helsingin konsertin.

18.00. Sydämellisen juhlinnan

[169]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Työn Voima
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

75-vuotias Bostonin orkesteri saapuu Helsinkiin tiistaina

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. p:nä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lintion Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, jossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall in aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fielderin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fielder johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tangelwood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Murgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, silä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Hesingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

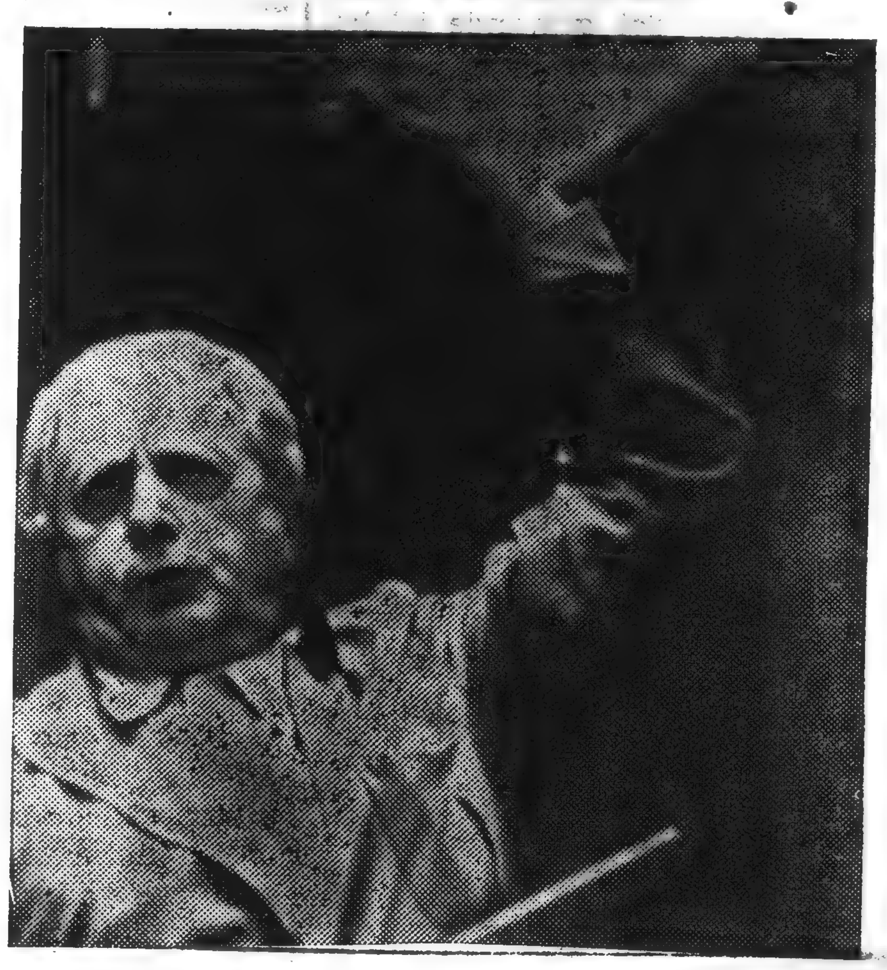
Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, irkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis&Chloé II.

Charles Münoh, Bostonin sin foniaorkesterin nykyinen joht aja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Konteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—24, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Syd-Österbotten
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

ns symfoniorkester esöker Finland



Sy

Den
rarna h
De är v tyskt m typiska nan fa annat större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. I Förenta staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga tonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Sydämellisen juhlinnan

[109]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Työn Voima
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

75-vuotias Bost saapuu Helsink

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. p:nä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista eräs kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopankiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista ---

SINFONIAMUSIIKI

Sinfoniaorkestereid
valloi sa saavuttaim arvovalta ovat a Syynä tähän lienee s
lä ooppera ole kos itsellään samalla ta
kuin Euroopan suur
kikeskuksissa — a
... Wienin valt
Lintion Covent Ga
... suurta oopperá
non Scalaa — joiss
asema on kieltämät
musiikkia tärkeämpi
sa taas on jokaisess
asukkaan kaupungis
orkesteri ja useitt
kaupunkien orkeste

natkin ovat entisel
keita. Huom.! Saim
hattulähetyksen It
niiden laatu on ko
ta ja hyvät värit: m
kea, harmaa, vihre
nen. Solmiobaarimm
nut ranskalaisia
suuret valikoimat sy sineen.

Huom.! Jäännöseriä pukuja alk. 5500:—, tummia irtohousuja alk. 1200:—, diagonaalihousuja alk. 1800:—, puseroita ja villapaitoja hyllyt tulvillaan.

Tervetuloa ostoksille!

Talvi
JYVÄSK
ASEMAK. 3
Kauppakatu 14, p

Avaamme uuden
HUONEKALULIIKKEEN
maanantaina tk. 3. pnä Äänekoskella Säästöpankin
(ent. Äänekosken Huonekaluliike).
Tervetuloa avajaiskahville.
Kauppak. 13, puh 2090. HUONEKALU

MÄKISELLÄ UUTTA!
Liikkemme sisustus kokonaan uusittu, tav
entistä paremmin esillä, joista on miellyttävä
vittavat asusteet.
SUOSITTELEMME:
Lakanakangasta 140 sm. lev. 155:—, Villaisia
alk. 950:—, Last. froteepuseroita alk. 90:—, F
suja poik. erikokoja 500:—, Silkkihousuja lal
Sifonkiliinoja 130:—, 300:—.
Tervetuloa tutustumaan uuteen liikkeeseen!
ASUSTELIIKE MÄ
Kauppakatu

Olemme siirtäneet
»roimasti» tavaraa 3—8. 9.
väliseksi ajaksi
Lanneveden myymälään:
MIESTEN PUKUJA
Kalmarin myymälään:
TYÖVAATTEITA
Kannonsahan myymälään:
SYKSYN JALKINEITA
Runsaasta varastosta onnistuvat ostot.
Osuusliike Paavonseutu

Suoraan valmistajalt
saatte edullisesti
sohvapöytä
puu- ja metallijalo
pia eri malleja.
PUUSEPÄNLIIKE PA
Puuppola

AMMATTIOPPI
TUBERKULOOTTISILLE
ELÄMÄ
VOITTAA

Osuuskunta Työn Voima II,
Jyväskylä 1556

Maat

Syyskuun 1
satokautta kosl
telyt saatiin
viime hetkessä
vottelujen jäll
jäin kannalta t
mattavasti par
talouden hinta
dotus, mutta
jan hinnan kor toman suureks
vaikuttamatta
sun kautta k
tantokustannuk
Kuluttajat taas
todeta, ettei hi
kokonaan voi
niin, ettei olis
kuluttajahintoil
Tehdyt muu
keväällä edusk
sesti hyväksym
sisältö edellyttä
määräämistä o
jien ansiotaso
muillakin aloi
mukaanlukien
suus on yleine
malla liikkeell
seurausilmiöitä
Niinpä nyt saa
heijastumia,
juurensa alku
mista. Silloin
hintojen sään
puutteessa tap
hinankorotuksia
meenpanemises
mien mielipitei

Viitasa

Viitasaare
Räsänen &
saarella on dessa kehitt
vaksi tekijä
todistaa mn
veistämö to viä ja mui
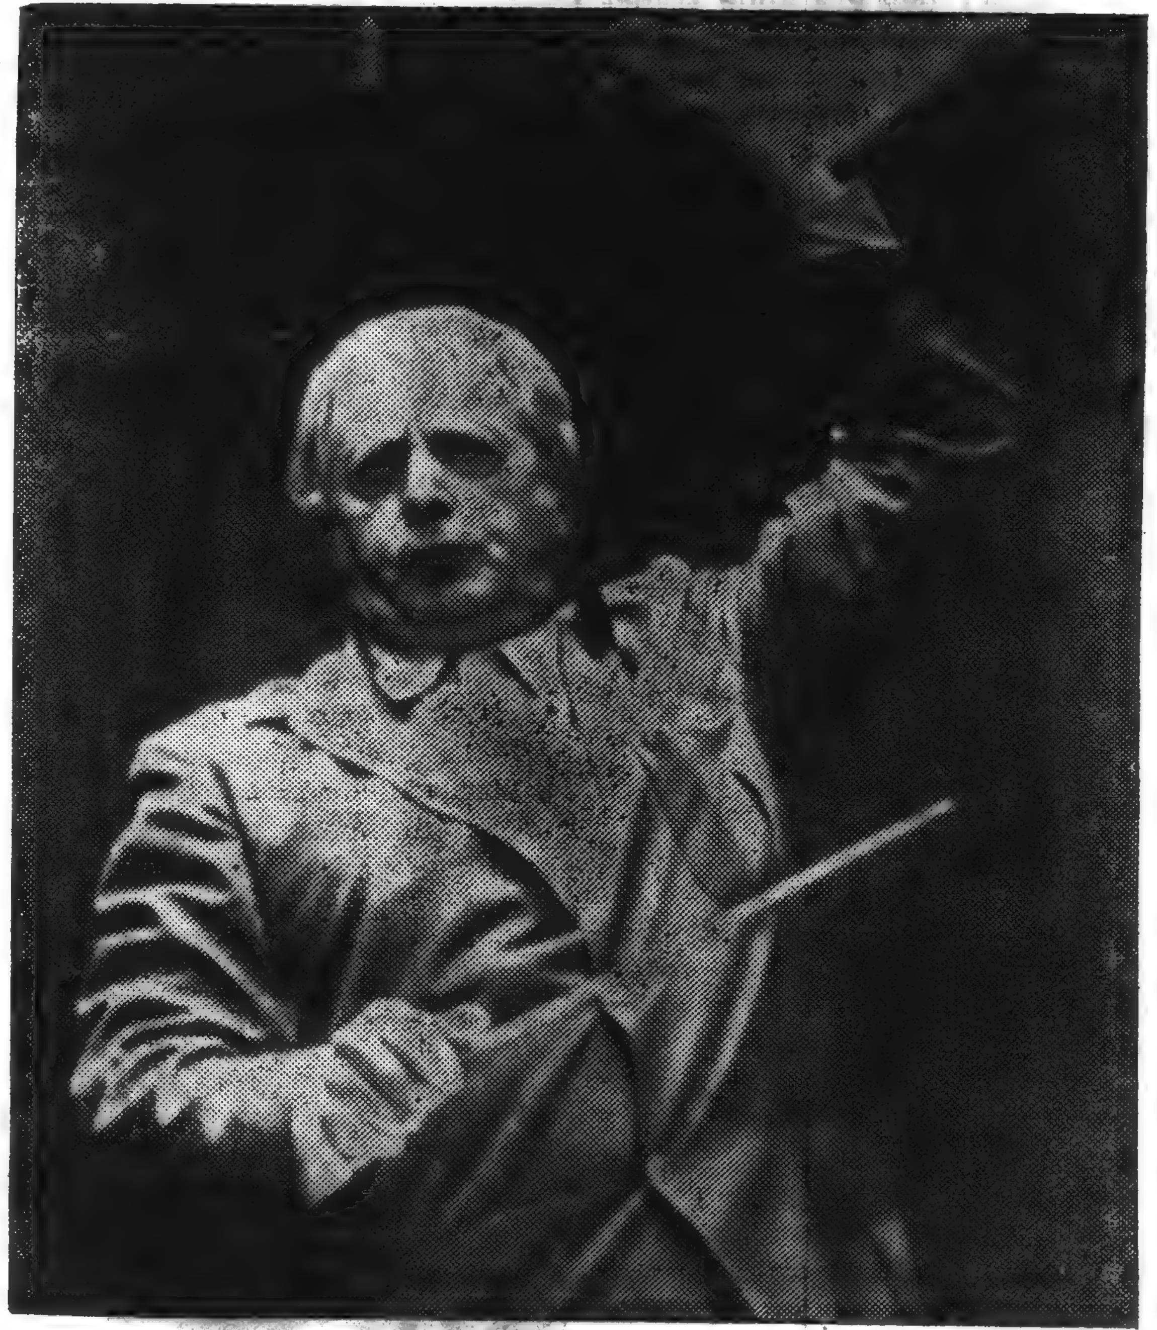
sia jo eritt
eelle. Kiviv
Eino Räsän
lemme, että
on hautaki
100 pitäjä
koskelle
saakka. T

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Hufvudstadsbl. Österbotten
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester besöker Finland



Charles Münch, Bostons symfoniorkesters nuvarande ledare, som dirigerar konserten i Helsingfors.

Upptakten för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir verkligt förnämlig genom Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök i Finland — orkestern konserterar i A-mässhallen den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum och medverkar vid bl. a. festspelen i Edinburgh. Med orkestern kommer dirigenterna Charles Münch — Bostonsymfonins ledare sedan 1949 — och Pierre Monteux, som på turnén dirigerar några konserter, dock inte här, och Mrs. Natalie Koussevitskij, en stor Finlands-vän. Det torde intressera konsertpubliken i vårt land att orkesterns ypperlige konsertmästare Richard Burgin tidigare varit verksam vid Helsingfors stadsorkester och att en av basunisterna, Kauko Kahila, är av finskt ursprung.

Det är i år alltså 75 år sedan Bostons symfoniorkester grundades. Jubilaren har hyllats, men själv har orkestern firat sitt jubileum på det ovanliga sättet att den i sin tur delat ut gåvor till den musikintresserade världen. Under senaste säsongen presenterades 15 nya verk av internationellt kända kompositörer och nu alltså ges konserter i en rad av europeiska länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

Symfonins betydelse

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. I Förenta staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50,000 invånare har en symfoniorkester, men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap.

Bostonsäsong med 220 konserter

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Under Sergej Koussevitskijs kvartssekellånga ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europa-turnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter.

Symfoniorkestern är Bostons stolthet, och dess verksamhet omfattas med livligt intresse inte minst av de tusentals studerande vid Harvard-universitetet och Massachusetts Institute of Technology i det närbelägna Cambridge. För att ge ungdomarna tillfälle till att utan stora kostnader följa orkesterns repertoar ger den offentliga repetitioner. Den stora konsertsalen är alltid fullsatt och att dirigenten ibland slår av och tar om några avsnitt är bara intressant och ökar musikkunnandet, tycker besökarna.

Vid sin konsert i Helsingfors, som den finländska publiken kan se fram emot med stora förväntningar, spelar orkestern följande program: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sjätte symfonin; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

---

stonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja
ohtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Sydämellisen juhlinnan

KULTTU
KELMÄPA
Usis
9 19

[167]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Työn Voima
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

75-vuotias Bost
saapuu Helsink

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista eniten kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopankiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista ...

SINFONIAMUSIIKI

Sinfoniaorkestereid
... saavuttanu
... ovat
Syy... lienee
... ooppera ole kos
itse... samalla ta
... Euroopan suur
kikeskuksissa — a
... Wienin valt
Lintion Covent Ga
... suurta ooppera
non Scalaa — joiss
asema on kieltämät
musiikkia tärkeämpi
sa ... on jokaisess
asukkaan kaupungis
orkesteri ja useitt
kaupunkien orkestei

natkin ovat entisel
keita. Huom.! Saim
hattulähetyksen It
niiden laatu on ko
ta ja hyvät värit: n
kea, harmaa, vihre
nen. Solmiobaarimn
nut ranskalaisia
suuret valikoimat sy
sineen.

Huom.! Jäännöseriä pukuja alk. 5500:—, tummia irtohousuja alk. 1200:—, diagonaalihousuja alk. 1800:—, puseroita ja villapaitoja hyllyt tulvillaan.

Tervetuloa ostoksille!

Talvi
JYVÄSK
ASEMAK. 3
Kauppakatu 14, p

Avaamme uuden

HUONEKALULIIKKEEN

maanantaina tk. 3. pnä Äänekoskella Säästöpankin (ent. Äänekosken Huonekaluliike).

Tervetuloa avajaiskahville.

Kauppak. 13, puh 2090. HUONEKALU

MÄKISELLÄ UUTTA!

Liikkemme sisustus kokonaan uusittu, tav
entistä paremmin esillä, joista on miellyttävä
vittavat asusteet.

SUOSITTELEMME:

Lakanakangasta 140 sm. lev. 155:—, Villaisia
alk. 950:—, Last. froteepuseroita alk. 90:—, F
suja polk. erikokoja 500:—, Silkkihousuja la
Sifonkiliinoja 130:—, 300:—.
Tervetuloa tutustumaan uuteen liikkeeseen!

ASUSTELIIKE MÄ
Kauppakatu

Olemme siirtäneet

»roimasti» tavaraa 3—8. 9.
väliseksi ajaksi

Lanneveden myymälään:
MIESTEN PUKUJA
Kalmarin myymälään:
TYÖVAATTEITA
Kannonsahan myymälään:
SYKSYN JALKINEITA

Runsaasta varastosta onnistuvat ostot.

Osuusliike Paavonseutu

Suoraan valmistajalt
saatte edullisesti

sohvapöytä

puu- ja metallijalo
pia eri malleja.

PUUSEPÄNLIIKE PA
Puuppola

AMMATTIOPPI
TUBERKULOOTTISILLE
ELÄMÄ VOITTAA

Osuuskunta Työn Voima II,
Jyväskylä 1556

Maat

Syyskuun 1
satokautta kosl
telyt saatiin
viime hetkess
vottelujen jäll
jäin kannalta t
mattavasti par
talouden hint
dotus, mutta
jan hinnan ko
toman suureks
vaikuttamatta
sun kautta k
tantokustannuk
Kuluttajat taas
todeta, ettei hi
kokonaan voi
niin, ettei olis
kuluttajahintoil

Tehdyt muu
keväällä edusk
sesti hyväksym
sisältö edellytt määräämistä o
jien ansiotasoo
muillakin aloi
mukaanlukien
suus on yleine
malla liikkeell
seurausilmiöitä
Niinpä nyt saa
heijastumia,
juurensa alku
mista. Silloin
hintojen sään
puutteessa tap
hinankorotuksia
meenpanemises
mien mielipitei

Viitasa

Viitasaare
Räsänen &
saarella on dessa kehitt
vaksi tekijä
todistaa mn
veistämö to viä ja mui
sia jo eritt
eelle. Kiviv
Eino Räsän
lemme, että
on hautaki
100 pitäjä
koskelle
saakka.

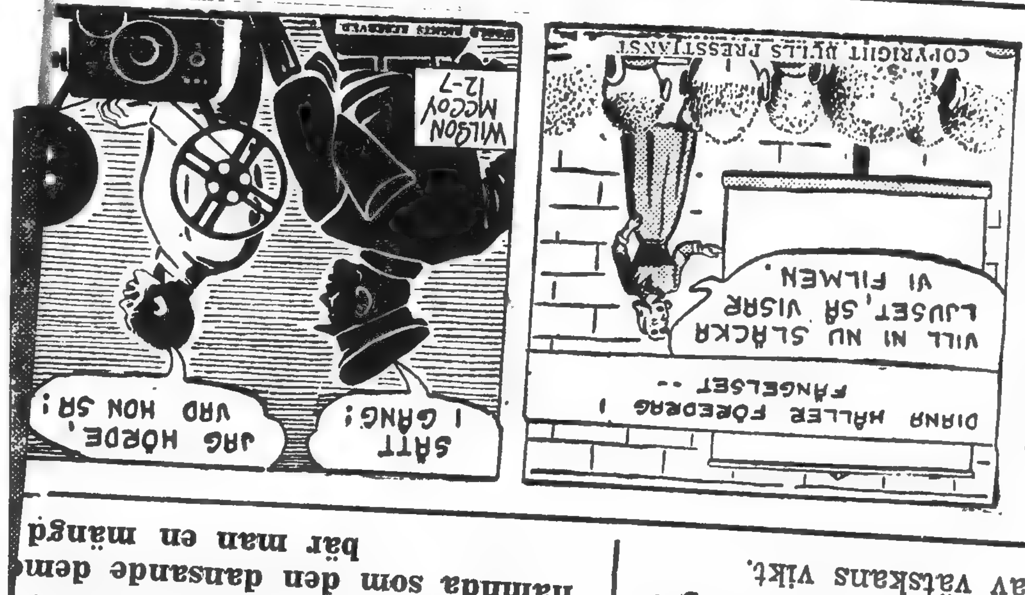
Det var inte riktigt menin



DRAGOS
DIANA HÅLLER FÖREDRAG I FÄNGELSET --
VILL NI NU SLÄCKA LJUSET, SÅ VISAR VI FILMEN.
SÄTT I GÅNG!
JAG HÖRDE, VAD HON SA!
WILSON McCOY 12-7
COPYRIGHT BULLS PRESSTJÄNST

ska tullen och seglade hem till Old England med 70,000 heveafrön under däck. Det gangsterdådet utfördes så sent som 1876.

Busfrön och heveafrön trivdes dåligt ihop, men de 2,000 plantor ... internationella överenskommelser.

Ja, detta var lite historia. Om vi nu skulle försöka ge en snabbskiss av ca-hu-chus väg från trädet till fälgen.

Många har väl varit med om att i vårens tid skatta björken på dess kärva men friska saft. Vi har gjort ett snitt i barken och sedan har vi samlat upp den rikligt sipprande vätskan i ett glas. Arbetarna på gummiplantagerna beter sig på precis samma sätt när de berövar Hevea brasiliensis dess mjölksaft — latexen.

I latexen finns kautschuken uppslammad i form av mikroskopiskt små droppar till omkring en tredjedel av vätskans vikt.

Befolkningen i Libanons huvud
dagen en slags dubbel demonstra
över Egyptens nationalisering av
uttrycka sin harm över konferen
nämnda som den dansande dem
bär man en mängd

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Karjalan Maa
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Työn Voima
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

75-vuotias Bost
saapuu Helsink

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista

SINFONIAMUSIIKI

Sinfoniaorkestereid
[illegible] saavuttaine
[illegible] ovat a Syy tähän lienee s
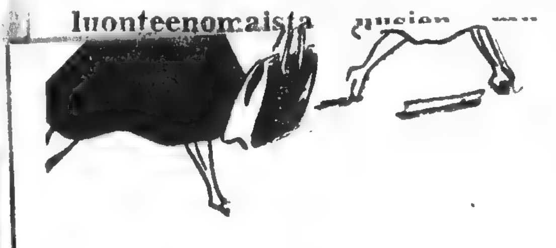
lä ooppera ole ko
itseään samalla t
kuin Euroopan suur
kikeskuksissa — a
Wienin valt
Lintion Covent Ga
nsan suurta ooppera
non Scalaa — joiss
asema on kieltämät
musiikkia tärkeämpi.
sa taas on jokaisess
asukkaan kaupungis
orkesteri ja useitt
kaupunkien orkeste



Huom.! Jäännöseriä pukuja alk. 5500:—, tummia irtohousuja alk. 1200:—, diagonaalihousuja alk. 1800:—, puseroita ja villapaitoja hyllyt tulvillaan.

Tervetuloa ostoksille!

natkin ovat entisel
keita. Huom.! Saim
hattulähetyksen It
niiden laatu on ko
ta ja hyvät värit: n
kea, harmaa, vihre
nen. Solmiobaarimn
nut ranskalaisia
suuret valikoimat sy
sineen.

v. Talvi
JYVÄSK
ASEMAK. 3

Kauppakatu 14, p

Avaamme uuden
HUONEKALULIIKKEEN
maanantaina tk. 3. pnä Äänekoskella Säästöpankin
(ent. Äänekosken Huonekaluliike).
Tervetuloa avajaiskahville.
Kauppak. 13, puh 2090. HUONEKALU

MÄKISELLÄ UUTTA!
Liikkemme sisustus kokonaan uusittu, tav
entistä paremmin esillä, joista on miellyttävä
vittavat asusteet.
SUOSITTELEMME:
Lakanakangasta 140 sm. lev. 155:—, Villaisia
alk. 950:—, Last. froteepuseroita alk. 90:—, F
suja poik. erikokoja 500:—, Silkkihousuja la
Sifonkiliinoja 130:—, 300:—.
Tervetuloa tutustumaan uuteen liikkeeseen!
ASUSTELIIKE MÄ
Kauppakatu

Olemme siirtäneet
»roimasti» tavaraa 3—8. 9. väliseksi ajaksi
Lanneveden myymälään: MIESTEN PUKUJA
Kalmarin myymälään: TYÖVAATTEITA
Kannonsahan myymälään: SYKSYN JALKINEITA
Runsaasta varastosta onnistuvat ostot.
Osuusliike Paavonseutu

Suoraan valmistajalt
saatte edullisesti
sohvapöytä
puu- ja metallijalo
pia eri malleja.
PUUSEPÄNLIIKE PA
Puuppola

AMMATTIOPPI
TUBERKULOOTTISILLE
ELÄMÄ VOITTAA

Osuuskunta Työn Voima II,
Jyväskylä 1556

— Ⓣ
Maat

Syyskuun 1
satokautta kosl
telyt saatiin
viime hetkessä
vottelujen jäll
jäin kannalta t
mattavasti par
talouden hinta
dotus, mutta
jan hinnan kor
toman suureks
vaikuttamatta
sun kautta k
tantokustannuk
Kuluttajat taas
todeta, ettei hi
kokonaan voi
niin, ettei olis
kuluttajahintoih

Tehdyt muu
keväällä edusk
sesti hyväksym
sisältö edellyttä
määräämistä o
jien ansiotasoo
muillakin aloi
mukaanlukien
suus on yleine
malla liikkeell
seurausilmiöitä
Niinpä nyt saa
heijastumia,
juurensa alku
mista. Silloin
hintojen sään
puutteessa tap
hinankorotuksia
meenpanemises
mien mielipitei

Viitasa

Viitasaare
Räsänen &
saarella on dessa kehitt
vaksi tekijä
todistaa mn
veistämö to viä ja mui
sia jo eritt
eelle. Kiviv
Eino Räsän
lemme, että
on hautakiv
100 pitäjä
koskelle
saakka. T

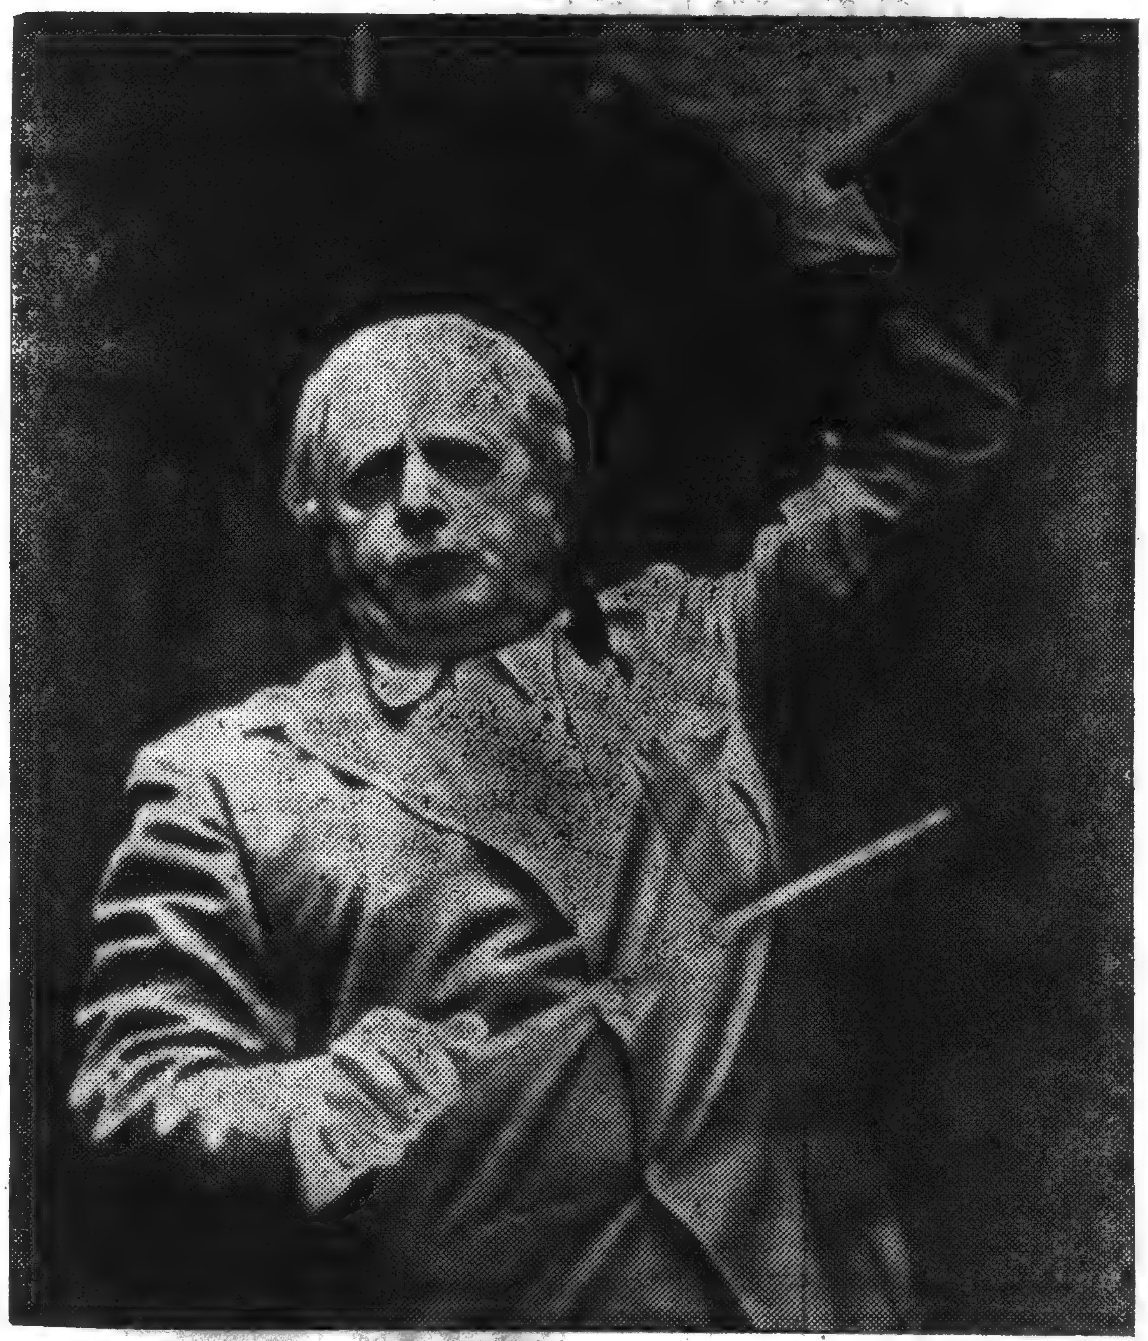
SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Syd-Österbotten
Pvm 1/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester besöker Finland



Charles Münch, Bostons symfoni orkesters nuvarande ledare, som dirigerar konserten i Helsingfors.

Upptakten för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir verkligt förnämlig genom Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök i Finland — orkestern konserterar i A-mässhallen den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum och medverkar vid bl. a. festspelen i Edinburgh. Med orkestern kommer dirigenterna Charles Münch — Bostonsymfonins ledare sedan 1949 — och Pierre Monteux, som på turnén dirigerar några konserter, dock inte här, och Mrs. Natalie Koussevitskij, en stor Finlands-vän. Det torde intressera konsertpubliken i vårt land att orkesterns ypperlige konsertmästare Richard Burgin tidigare varit verksam vid Helsingfors stadsorkester och att en av basunisterna, Kauko Kahila, är av finskt ursprung.

Det är i år alltså 75 år sedan Bostons symfoniorkester grundades. Jubilaren har hyllats, men själv har orkestern firat sitt jubileum på det ovanliga sättet att den i sin tur delat ut gåvor till den musikintresserade världen. Under senaste säsongen presenterades 15 nya verk av internationellt kända kompositörer och nu alltså ges konserter i en rad av europeiska länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

Symfonins betydelse

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. I Förenta staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50,000 invånare har en symfoniorkester, men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap.

Bostonsäsong med 220 konserter

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Under Sergej Koussevitskijs kvartssekellånga ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europa-turnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter.

Symfoniorkestern är Bostons stolthet, och dess verksamhet omfattas med livligt intresse inte minst av de tusentals studerande vid Harvard-universitetet och Massachusetts Institute of Technology i det närbelägna Cambridge. För att ge ungdomarna tillfälle till att utan stora kostnader följa orkesterns repertoar ger den offentliga repetitioner. Den stora konsertsalen är alltid fullsatt och att dirigenten ibland slår av och tar om några avsnitt är bara intressant och ökar musikkunnandet, tycker besökarna.

Vid sin konsert i Helsingfors, som den finländska publiken kan se fram emot med stora förväntningar, spelar orkestern följande program: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sjätte symfonin; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

---

tonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja
ohtaa Helsingin konsertin.

[109]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Työn Voima
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

75-vuotias Bost
saapuu Helsink

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. p:nä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien mu

SINFONIAMUSIIKI

Sinfoniaorkestereid
vaikutus saavuttaina
-vovalta ovat a Syynä tähän lienee s
lä ooppera ole ko
itseään samalla ta
kuin Euroopan suur
kikeskuksissa — a,
Wienin valt
Lintion Covent Ga
suurta oopperà
non Scalaa — joiss
asema on kieltämät
musiikkia tärkeämpi.
sa taas on jokaisess
asukkaan kaupungis
orkesteri ja useitt
kaupunkien orkeste

natkin ovat entisel
keita. Huom.! Saim
hattulähetyksen It
niiden laatu on ko
ta ja hyvät värit: m
kea, harmaa, vihre
nen. Solmiobaarimn
nut ranskalaisia
suuret valikoimat sy
sineen.

Huom.! Jäännöseriä pukuja alk. 5500:—, tummia irtohousuja alk. 1200:—, diagonaalihousuja alk. 1800:—, puseroita ja villapaitoja hyllyt tulvillaan.

Tervetuloa ostoksille!

Talvi
JYVÄSK
ASEMAK. 3
Kauppakatu 14, p

Avaamme uuden

HUONEKALULIIKKEEN

maanantaina tk. 3. pnä Äänekoskella Säästöpankin
(ent. Äänekosken Huonekaluliike).

Tervetuloa avajaiskahville.

Kauppak. 13, puh 2090. HUONEKALU

MÄKISELLÄ UUTTA!

Liikkemme sisustus kokonaan uusittu, tav
entistä paremmin esillä, joista on miellyttävä
vittavat asusteet.

SUOSITTELEMME:

Lakanakangasta 140 sm. lev. 155:—, Villaisia p
alk. 950:—, Last. froteepuseroita alk. 90:—, F
suja poik. erikokoja 500:—, Silkkihousuja lal
Sifonkiliinoja 130:—, 300:—.
Tervetuloa tutustumaan uuteen liikkeeseen!

ASUSTELIIKE MÄ
Kauppakatu

Olemme siirtäneet

»roimasti» tavaraa 3—8. 9.
väliseksi ajaksi

Lanneveden myymälään:
MIESTEN PUKUJA
Kalmarin myymälään:
TYÖVAATTEITA
Kannonsahan myymälään:
SYKSYN JALKINEITA

Runsaasta varastosta onnistuvat ostot.

Osuusliike Paavonseutu

Suoraan valmistajalt
saatte edullisesti

sohvapöytä

puu- ja metallijalo
pia eri malleja.

PUUSEPÄNLIIKE PA
Puuppola

AMMATTIOPPI
TUBERKULOOTTISILLE
ELÄMÄ VOITTAA

Osuuskunta Työn Voima II,
Jyväskylä 1556

Maat

Syyskuun 1
satokautta kosl
telyt saatiin
viime hetkessä
vottelujen jäll
jäin kannalta t
mattavasti par
talouden hinta
dotus, mutta
jan hinnan kor
toman suureks
vaikuttamatta
sun kautta k
tantokustannuk
Kuluttajat taas
todeta, ettei hi
kokonaan voi
niin, ettei olis
kuluttajahintoil
Tehdyt muu
keväällä edusk
sesti hyväksym
sisältö edellyttä
määräämistä o
jien ansiotasoo
muillakin aloi
mukaanlukien
suus on yleine
malla liikkeell
seurausilmiöitä
Niinpä nyt saa
heijastumia,
juurensa alku
mista. Silloin
hintojen sään
puutteessa tapa
hinankorotuksia
meenpanemises
mien mielipitei

Viitasa

Viitasaare
Räsänen &
saarella on dessa kehitt
vaksi tekijä
todistaa mn
veistämö to viä ja mui
sia jo eritt
eelle. Kiviv
Eino Räsän
lemme, että
on hautaki
100 pitäjä
koskelle
saakka.

---

ska tullen och seglade hem till Old England med 70,000 heveafrön under däck. Det gangsterdådet utfördes så sent som 1876.

Busfrön och heveafrön trivdes dåligt ihop, men de 2.000 plantor ternationella överenskommelser.

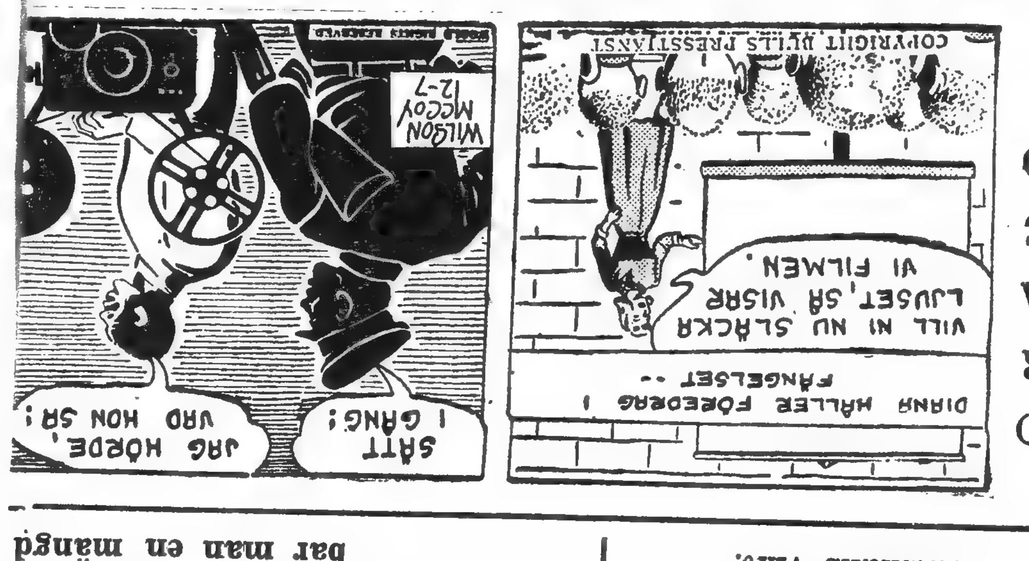
Ja, detta var lite historia. Om vi nu skulle försöka ge en snabbskiss av ca-hu-chus väg från trädet till fälgen.

Många har väl varit med om att i vårens tid skatta björken på dess kärva men friska saft. Vi har gjort ett snitt i barken och sedan har vi samlat upp den rikligt sipprande vätskan i ett glas. Arbetarna på gummiplantagerna beter sig på precis samma sätt när de berövar Hevea brasiliensis dess mjölksaft — latexen.

I latexen finns kautschuken uppslammad i form av mikroskopiskt små droppar till omkring en tredjedel av vätskans vikt.

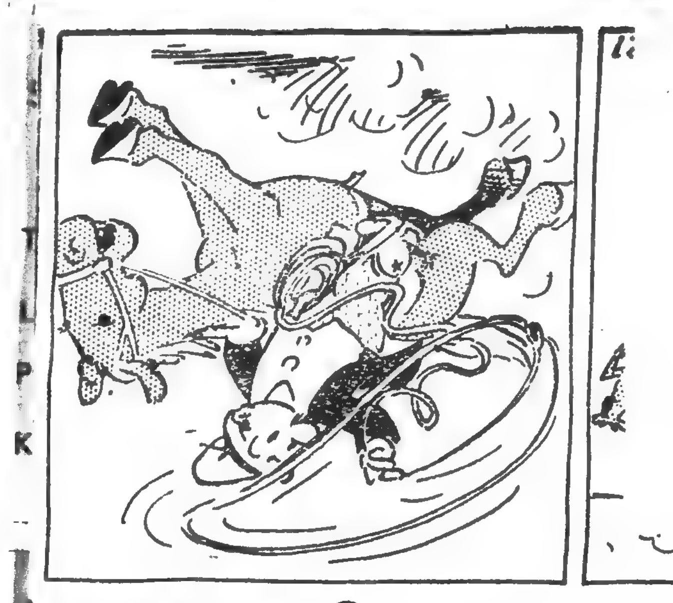
Befolkningen i Libanons huvud
dagen en slags dubbel demonstra
över Egyptens nationalisering av
uttrycka sin harm över konferen
nämnda som den dansande dem
bär man en mängd

DRAGOS



DIANA HÅLLER FÖREDRAG I FÄNGELSET --
VILL NI NU SLÄCKA LJUSET, SÅ VISAR VI FILMEN.
SÄTT I GÅNG!
JAG HÖRDE, VAD HON SA!
WILSON McCOY 12-7
COPYRIGHT BULLS PRESSTJÄNST

Det var inte riktigt menin



SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Kajalan Maa
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

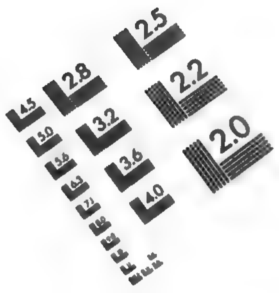
Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

REDUCTION
RATIO
17x

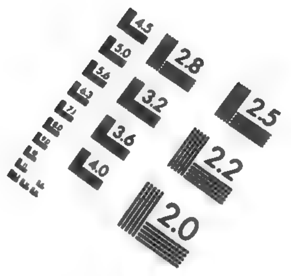
2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

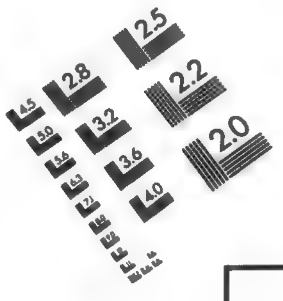


2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0

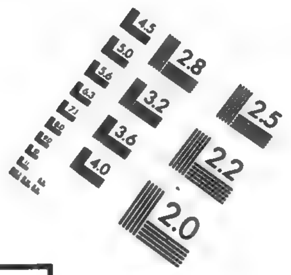


2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0

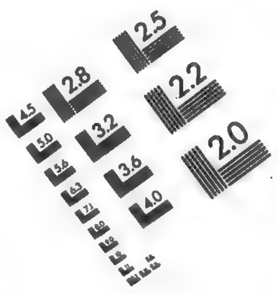
PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



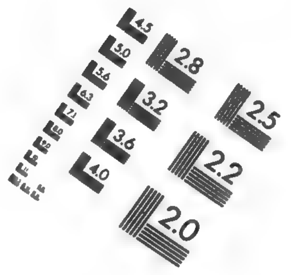
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0



2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0

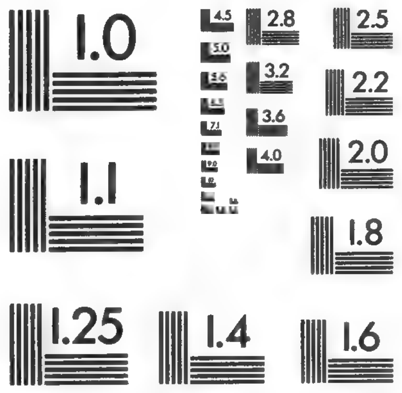


2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

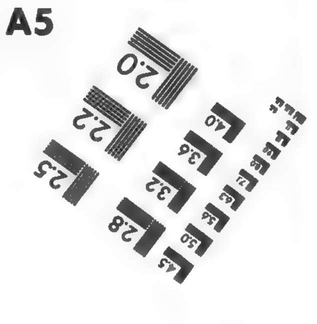
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.5 mm

A5



2.0
2.2
2.5
4.0
3.6
3.2
2.8

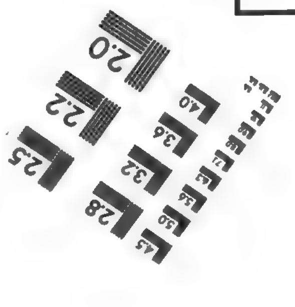
4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

A4

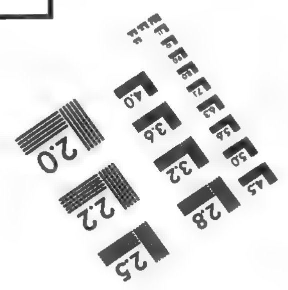
A3

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8

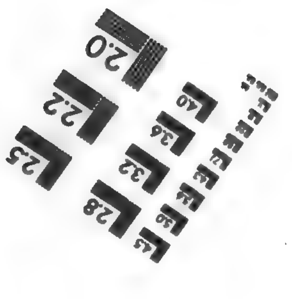


4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

4.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8

4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Ilris
Liitto
2 9 19 56

Charles Münch johtaa.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4 pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä .

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitsky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitskyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhteyistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa".

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitsky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bo[illegible]

My[illegible] on mukana [illegible] pasuuni[illegible] ovat [illegible] suomalaisia [illegible] sin Valkeakoski[illegible] Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu [illegible] konservatoriossa [illegible] Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa [illegible] ja St. [illegible] sinfoniaorkesterissa ja [illegible] ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Etelä-Suomen St.
Pvm 2 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Kuulu Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Suomessa syyskuun alussa. Kuvassamme orkesterin johtaja Charles Münch, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja
Lehti:
Pvm 19
Kirjoittaja

Bostonin Sinfonikot

Syyskonserttikauden avauksena on todellinen suurtapahtuma: Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti Messuhallissa tiistaina syysk. 4. pnä klo 20.

Tämän, alallaan maailman parhaimpiin lukeutuvan orkesterin johtaja on kuuluisa ranskalainen kapellimestari Charles Munch, jonka loistelias ura ensin Pariisissa ja sitten Yhdysvalloissa on tunnettu.

Orkesterin korkean kansainvälisen tason ohella on myös sen 110 henkilöä käsittävä jäsenistö varsin kansainvälinen kokoonpanoltaan. Paitsi syntyperäisiä amerikkalaisia on mukana syntyperäisiä ranskalaisia, venäläisiä, saksalaisia, hollantilaisia, tanskalaisia, itävaltalaisia, tshekkoslovakialaisia, italialaisia, unkarilaisia, romanialaisia, bulgarialaisia ja egyptiläisiä. Onpa mukana suomalainenkin nimi, pasunisti Kauko Kahila.

Orkesteri saapuu Helsinkiin lentoteitse Tukholmasta konserttipäivän aamuna, ja konsertin jälkeisenä päivänä matka jatkuu edelleen Leningradiin, jossa on kaksi konserttia, ja sieltä Moskovaan. Messuhallin konsertti on niinollen orkesterin ainoa esiintyminen maassamme. Ohjelma käsittää Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, Pistonin sinfonian N:o 6, joka on sävelletty Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin parʼaikaa vietettävän 75-vuotisjuhavuoden kunniaksi, sekä musiikkia Ravelin baletista Daphnis ja Chloë, sarja N:o 2 (Päivän koitto, Pantomiimi ja Tanssi).

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan.

*

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Kajalainen
Pvm 2 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin vierailee Suomessa

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sen sijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussévitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti »kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa». Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri [illegible] musiikkikeskuksen, Berkshiren [illegible] Tanglewoodissa Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Einojuhani Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

[illegible] Harvardin yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Munchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan

(Jatk. siv. 6.)

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Munch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

---

erin nykyinen johta
sertin.

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaor rikan monista suurista sinfoni oloaan Euroopan-kiertueella j kolla vieraillut Philadelphian ta» useitten erinomaisten am Bostonin orkesterille, jonka ko singissä, on kautta sen histor
nen. — Kuvassamme Charles syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amemä 75-vuotista olemassa-vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viimoonikot ovat »kolme suurjoukossa. Nimenomaan syn konserttikauden Helmusiikkiteosten esittämi-nykyinen johtaja, joka

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Ilris
Liitto
2 9 19 56

Pe... jälleen k...

Emäntä Amalia Illikainen, o.s. Hökkä Yli-Iin Keskikylässä.

50-VUOTIAITA:

50 vuotta täyttää huomenna, maanantaina talon emäntä Fanni Maria Pyhtiälä, o.s. Kamula Pattijoen Pyhtilänperällä. Hän on syntynyt Siikajoella, josta avioliiton solmittuaan muutti Pyhtilänperälle. Emäntä Pyhtiälä on toiminut ansiokkaasti kotinsa ja perheensä hyväksi. Ahkerana ja tunnollisena perheenäitinä hän on esimerkillisellä tavalla kasvattanut ja kouluttanut lapsensa. Taloudenhoidossaan hän on erikoisesti kiinnittänyt huomiota karjatalouden kehittämiseen. Vaativasta ja aikaavievästä työstään huolimatta emäntä Pyhtiälältä on riittänyt aikaa myös kodin ulkopuolella oleviin harrastuksiin. Niinpä hän oli aikoinaan lotta ja ns. järjestön toimiva jäsen. —Liitto onnittelee.

Neuloja Aili S... Rundelin Oulussa.

Putkityömies Anders Justus Brännkärr Oulussa.

Merikapteeni Kurt William Grönlund Oulussa.

Emäntä Martta Matilda Kytökorpi o.s. Lehtola Oulaisten Pohjasenperällä.

Neiti Hilja Emilia Pirkola Pyhäjoen Ypparissä.

Työmies Yrjö Fredrik Tuohimaa Kiimingin Alakylässä.

Lastaaja Kaarlo Vilhelm Ikonen Haukiputaan Kuivasjärvellä.

Pienviljel. Toivo Henrik Flink Vihannissa.

Tallettakaa SAMPO pankkiin
Rajaton verovapaus

...pi kuitenkin ruveta juomaan kahvia, selittäen että hän on juonut sitä niin paljon sinä päivänä. Paikalle saapunut isäntä nousee arkun kannelta, jolla on istunut, avaa arkun, ottaa tupesta puukkonsa ja leikkaa kotitekoisesta juustosta aika kimpaleen. Sen hän asettaa kämmenelleen, ojentaa pastorille ja sanoo närkästyneenä:

"Syökös pastori sitten juustoa?"

(A. L. — Piippola)

SILMÄLASINNE VALMISTUVAT TAIDOLLA JA TARKASTI OIKEIN
Pekuri
OPTINEN ERIKOISLIIKE
J. H. PEKURI OY.
KIRKKOK. 21 OULU

Oulaisten leikkuupuimuri toiminnassa

Paikkakunnan ensimmäinen leikkuupuimuri nähtiin viime perjantaina Oulaisissa, jossa sitä esiteltiin kunnan omistamal-

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Etelä-Suomen Sl.
Pvm 2 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Kuulu Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsert[illegible] [illegible] syyskuun alussa. Kuvassamme orkesterin johtaja Charles Münch, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja
Lehti
Pvm 19
Kirjoittaja

Bostonin Sinfonikot

Syyskonserttikauden avauksena on todellinen suurtapahtuma: Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti Messuhallissa tiistaina syysk. 4. pnä klo 20.

Tämän, alallaan maailman parhaimpiin lukeutuvan orkesterin johtaja on kuuluisa ranskalainen kapellimestari Charles Munch, jonka loistelias ura ensin Pariisissa ja sitten Yhdysvalloissa on tunnettu.

Orkesterin korkean kansainvälisen tason ohella on myös sen 110 henkilöä käsittävä jäsenistö varsin kansainvälinen kokoonpanoltaan. Paitsi syntyperäisiä amerikkalaisia on mukana syntyperäisiä ranskalaisia, venäläisiä, saksalaisia, hollantilaisia, tanskalaisia, itävaltalaisia, tshekkoslovakialaisia, italialaisia, unkarilaisia, romanialaisia, bulgarialaisia ja egyptiläisiä. Onpa mukana suomalainenkin nimi, pasunisti Kauko Kahila.

Orkesteri saapuu Helsinkiin lentoteitse Tukholmasta konserttipäivän aamuna, ja konsertin jälkeisenä päivänä matka jatkuu edelleen Leningradiin, jossa on kaksi konserttia, ja sieltä Moskovaan. Messuhallin konsertti on niinollen orkesterin ainoa esiintyminen maassamme. Ohjelma käsittää Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, Pistonin sinfonian N:o 6, joka on sävelletty Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin par'aikaa vietettävän 75-vuotisjuhlavuoden kunniaksi, sekä musiikkia Ravelin baletista Daphnis ja Chloë, sarja N:o 2 (Päivän koitto, Pantomiimi ja Tanssi).

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan.

*

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Lapin Kansa
Pvm 2 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filmiharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen. — Kuvassamme Charles Münch, Postonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

...erin nykyinen johta...
...sertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Kajaalainen
Pvm 2 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin vierailee Suomessa

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sen sijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussévitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti »kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa». Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi. [illegible]

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti [illegible] musiikki[illegible] [illegible] Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa. [illegible] yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Munchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan

(Jatk. siv. 6.)

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

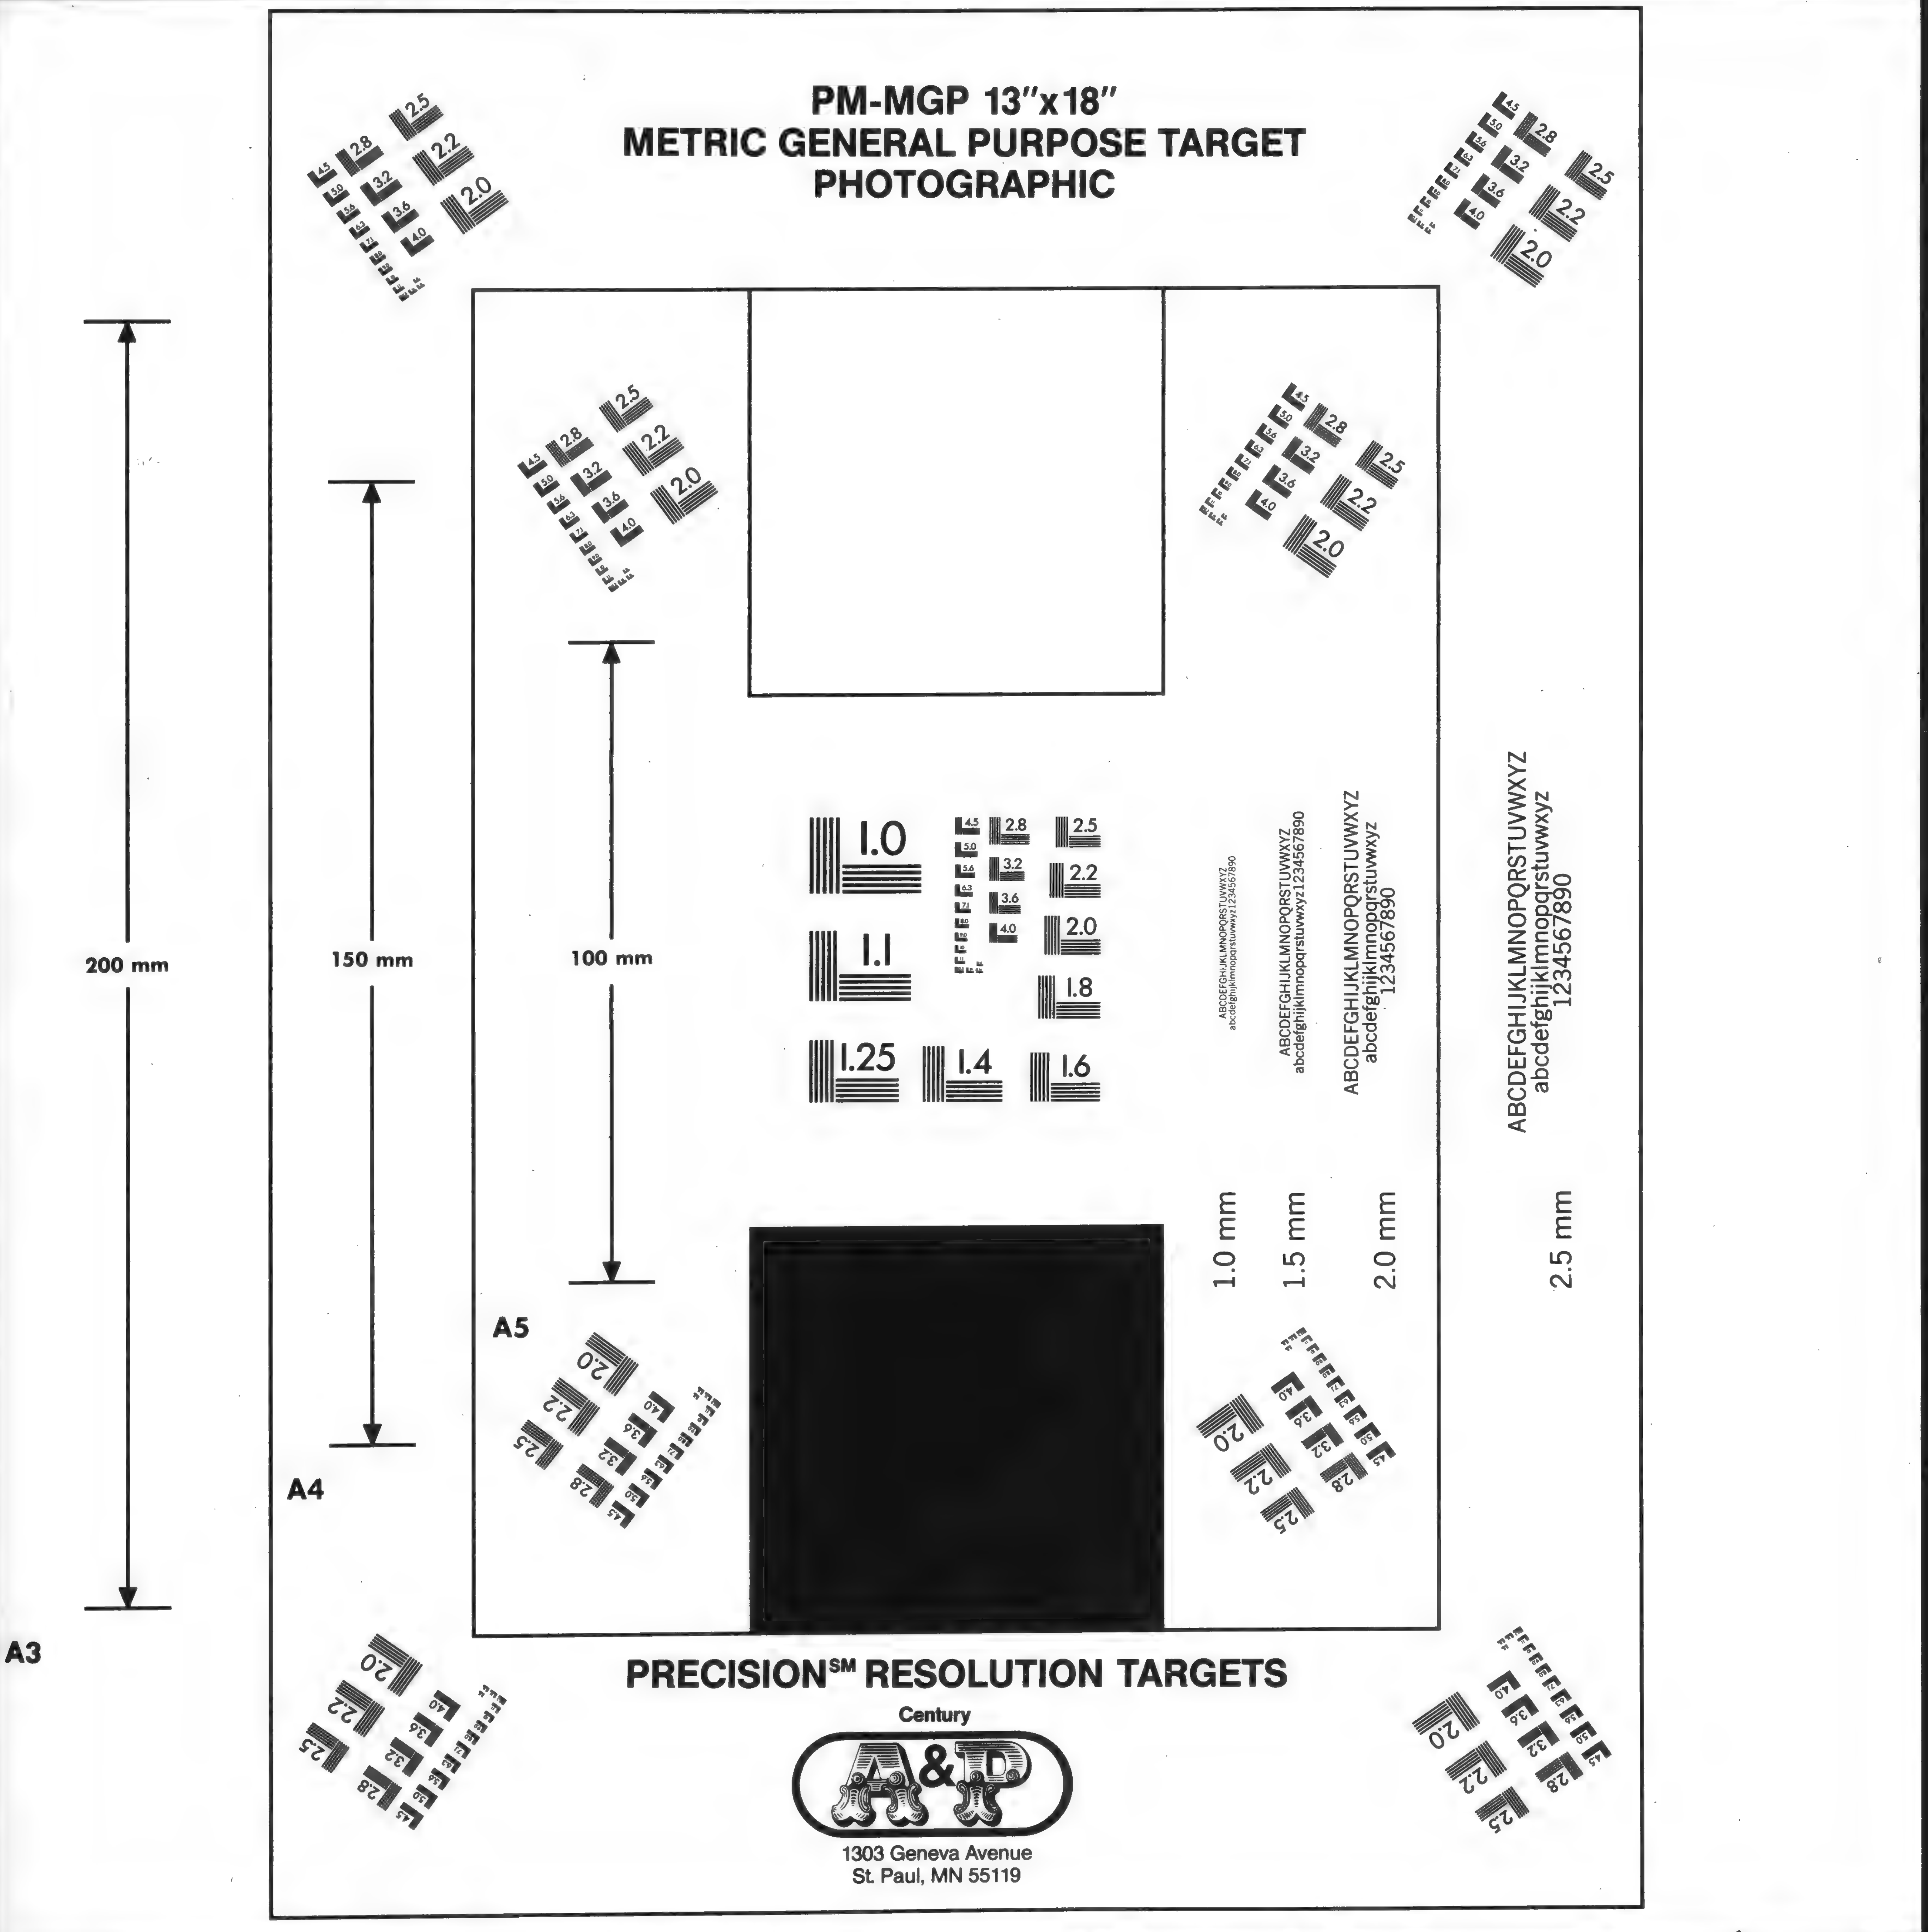
REDUCTION

RATIO

14x



PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A3
A4
A5
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

[110]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Liitto
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

pailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitskyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa".

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitsky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Etelä-Suomen S.
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Kuulu Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Suomessa syyskuun alussa. Kuvassamme orkesterin johtaja Charles Münch, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm /7 19
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin Sinfonikot

Syyskonserttikauden avauksena on todellinen suurtapahtuma: Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti Messuhallissa tiistaina syysk. 4. pnä klo 20.

Tämän, alallaan maailman parhaimpiin lukeutuvan orkesterin johtaja on kuuluisa ranskalainen kapellimestari Charles Munch, jonka loistelias ura ensin Pariisissa ja sitten Yhdysvalloissa on tunnettu.

Orkesterin korkean kansainvälisen tason ohella on myös sen 110 henkilöä käsittävä jäsenistö varsin kansainvälinen kokoonpanoltaan. Paitsi syntyperäisiä amerikkalaisia on mukana syntyperäisiä ranskalaisia, venäläisiä, saksalaisia, hollantilaisia, tanskalaisia, itävaltalaisia, tshekkoslovakialaisia, italialaisia, unkarilaisia, romanialaisia, bulgarialaisia ja egyptiläisiä. Onpa mukana suomalainenkin nimi, pasunisti Kauko Kahila.

Orkesteri saapuu Helsinkiin lentoteitse Tukholmasta konserttipäivän aamuna, ja konsertin jälkeisenä päivänä matka jatkuu edelleen Leningradiin, jossa on kaksi konserttia, ja sieltä Moskovaan. Messuhallin konsertti on niinollen orkesterin ainoa esiintyminen maassamme. Ohjelma käsittää Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, Pistonin sinfonian N:o 6, joka on sävelletty Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin parhaikaa vietettävän 75-vuotisjuhlavuoden kunniaksi, sekä musiikkia Ravelin baletista Daphnis ja Chloë, sarja N:o 2 (Päivän koitto, Pantomiimi ja Tanssi).

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan.

*

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Lapin Kansa
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filmiharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen. — Kuvassamme Charles Munch, Postonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Kajalainen
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin vierailee Suomessa

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sen sijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti »kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa». Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

muodostunut orkesterille voimak- nittava on myös runsaat radioesiinsa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Leningradiin, jossa on kaksi konserttia, ja sieltä Moskovaan. Messuhallin konsertti on niinollen orkesterin ainoa esiintyminen maassamme. Ohjelma käsittää Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, Pistonin sinfonian N:o 6, joka on sävelletty Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin parʼaikaa vietettävän 75-vuotisjuhavuoden kunniaksi, sekä musiikkia Ravelin baletista Daphnis ja Chloë, sarja N:o 2 (Päivän koitto, Pantomiimi ja Tanssi).

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan.

*

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Lapin Kansa
Pvm 2 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Kuulu Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Suomessa syyskuun alussa. Kuvassamme orkesterin johtaja Charles Münch, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filmiharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen. — Kuvassamme Charles Münch, Postonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Kajalainen
Pvm 2 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin vierailee Suomessa

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sen sijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

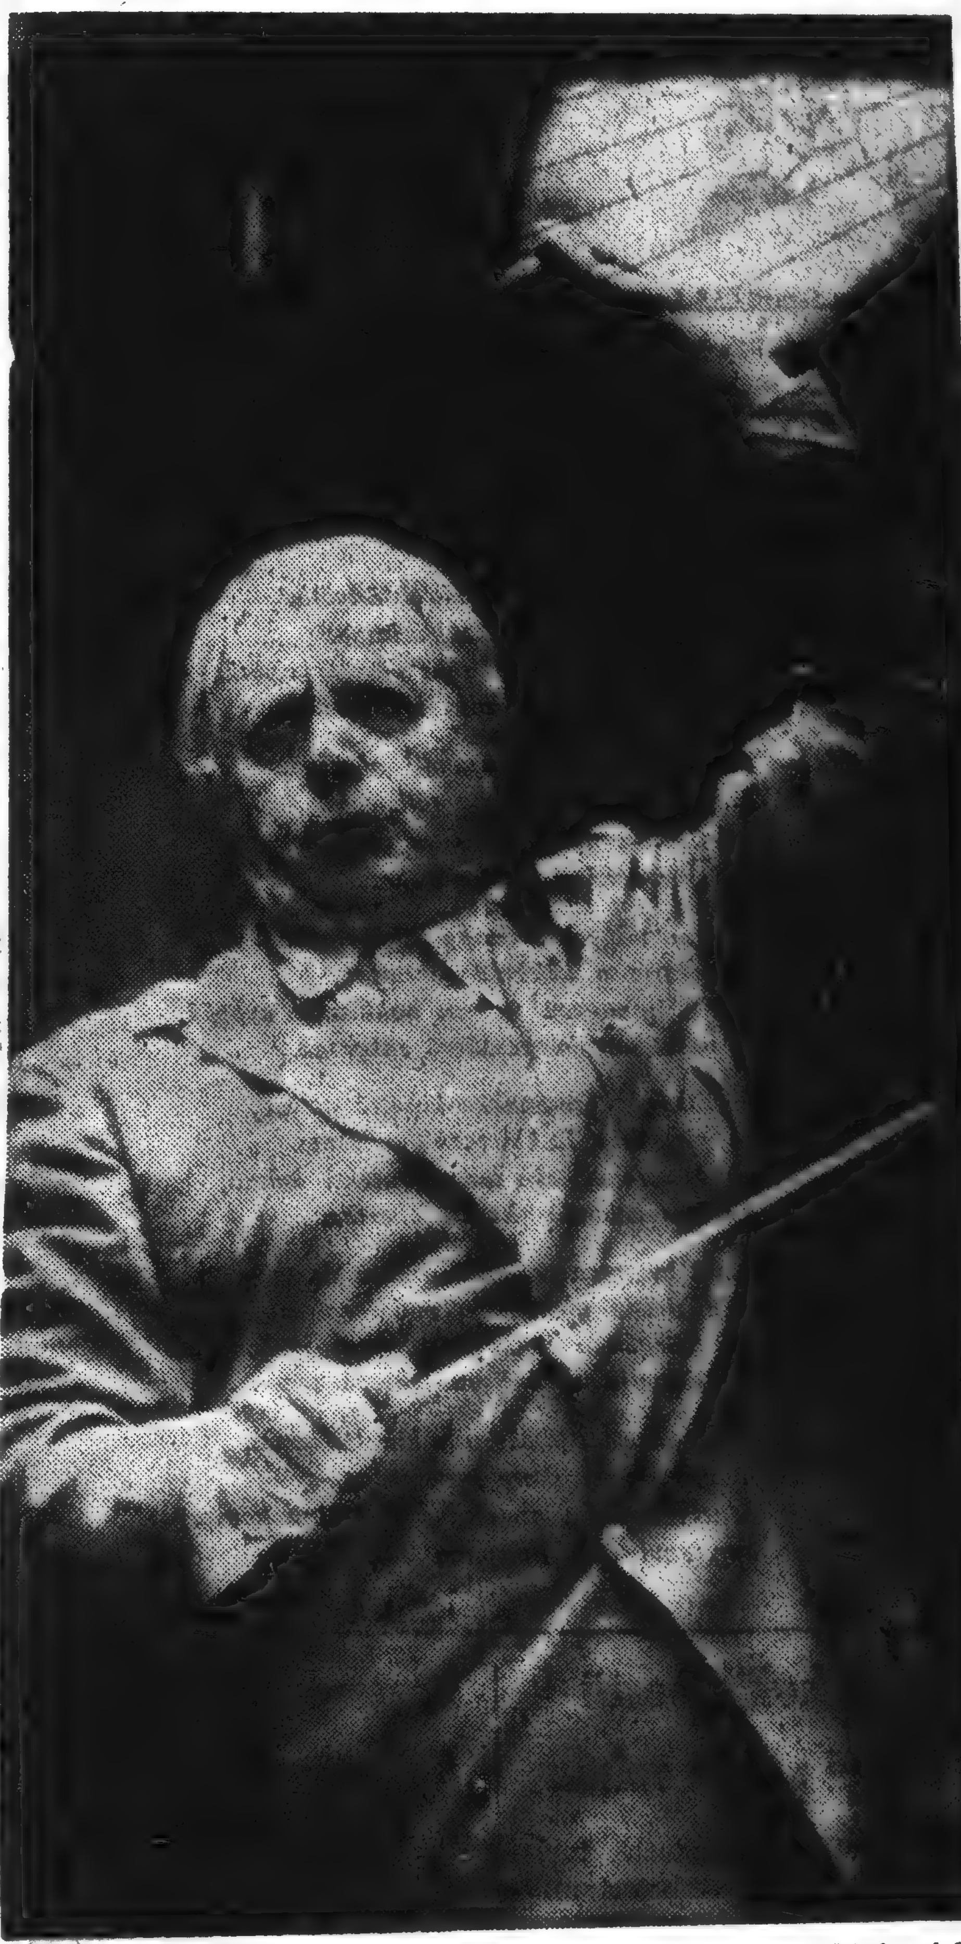
ORKESTERIN HISTORIA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussévitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti »kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa». Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.



Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

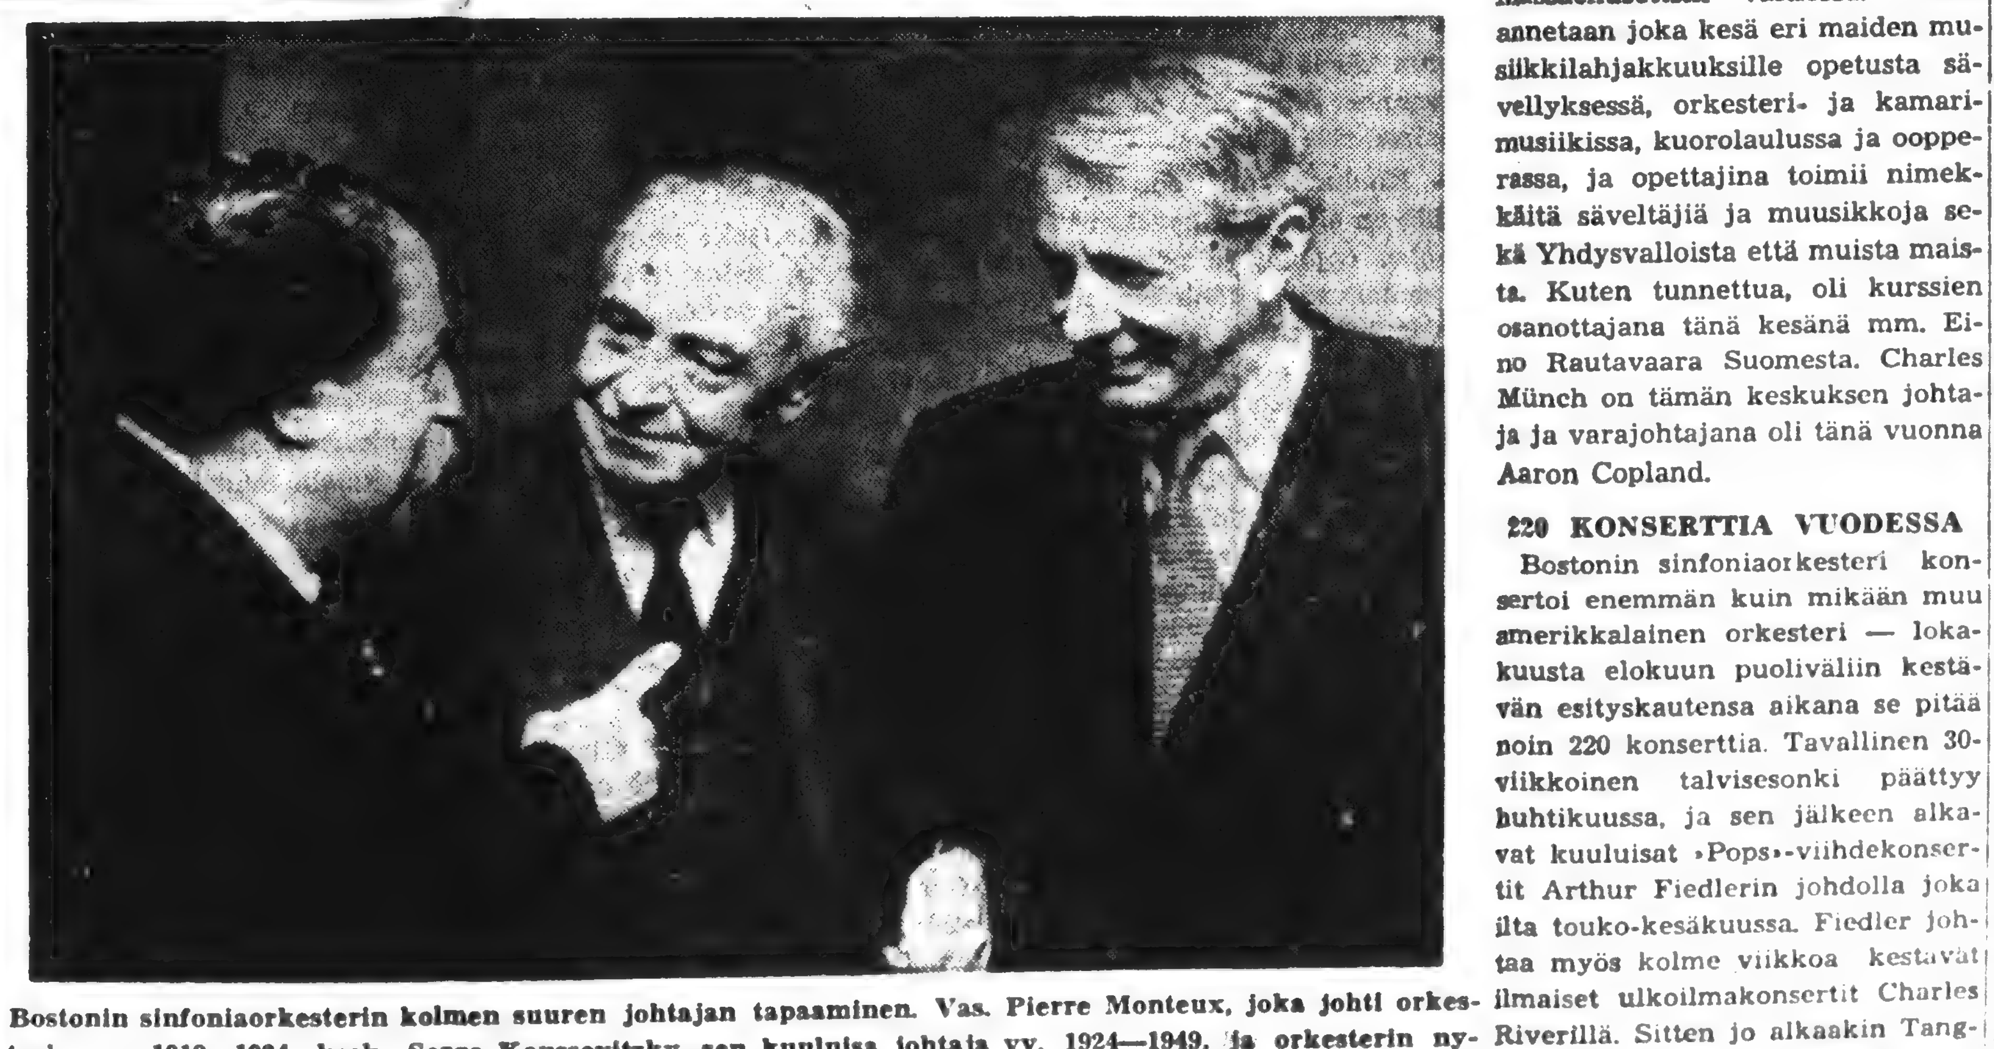
Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Hassachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan

(Jatk. siv. 6.)



Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

REDUCTION
RATIO
19x

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
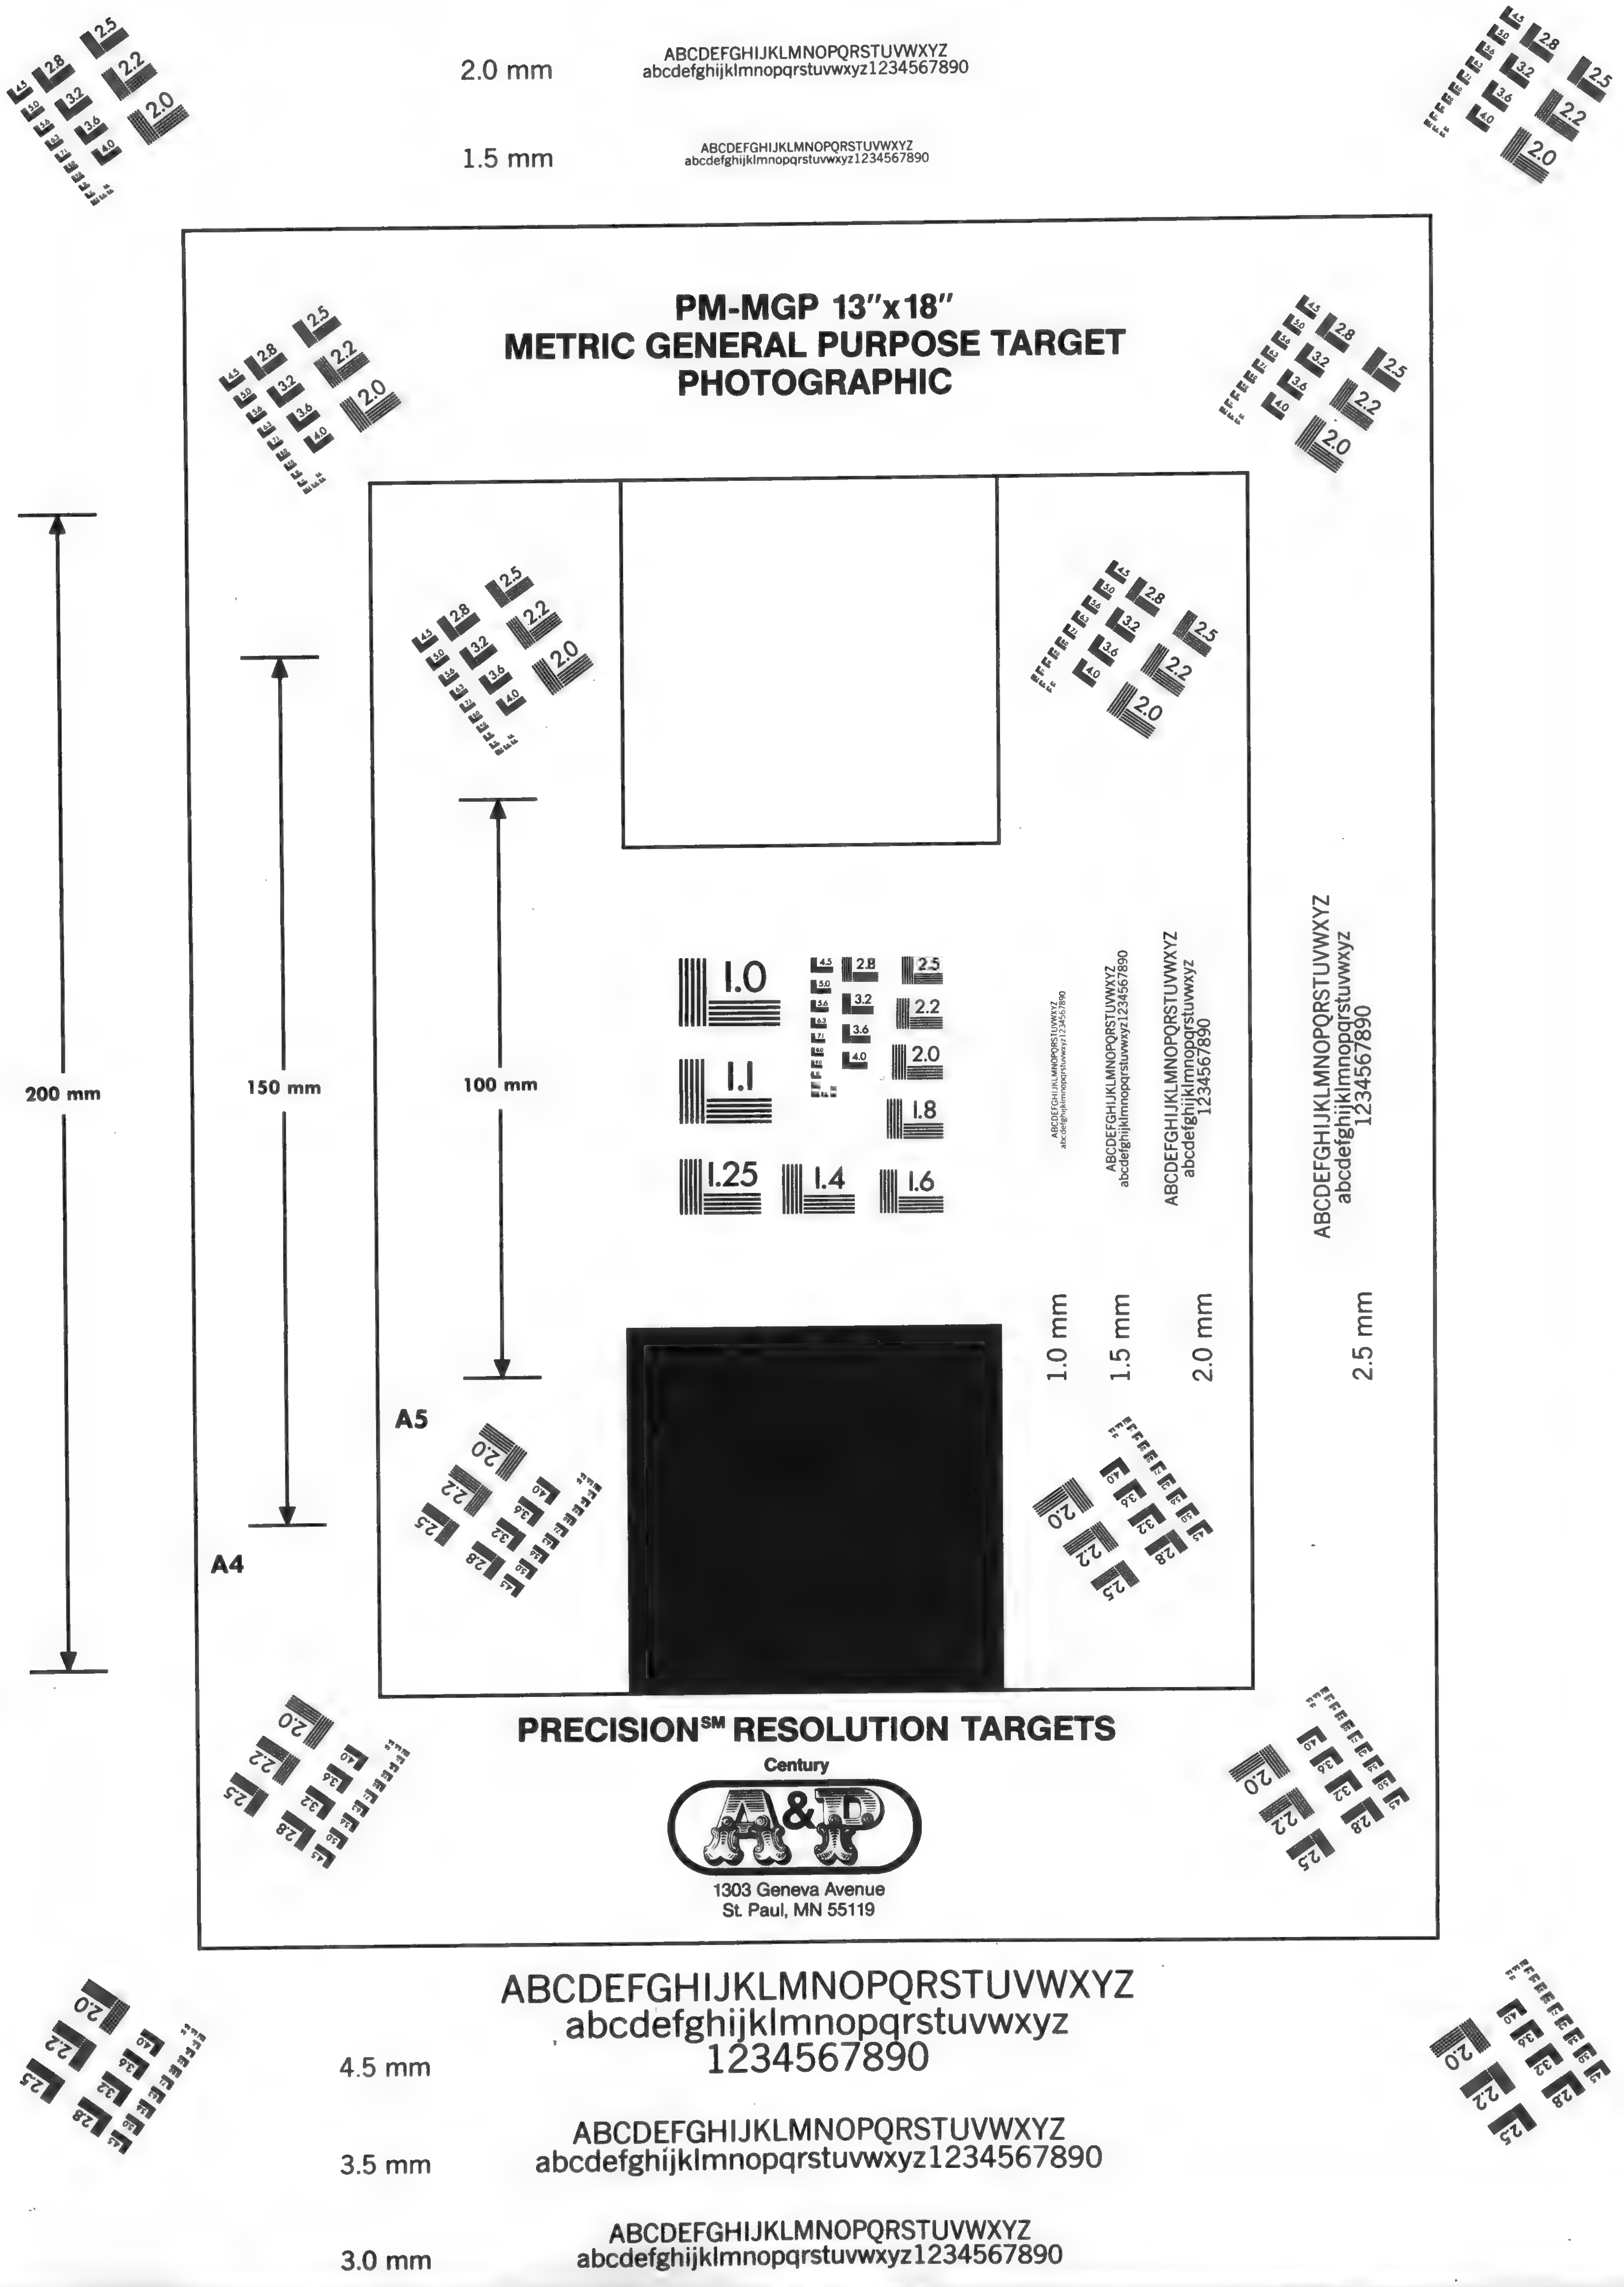
2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.5 mm

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
4.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
3.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
3.0 mm

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja Ursis
Lehti Hämeen kansa
Pvm 2 9 1956
Kirjoittaja

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmonikot ovat »kolme suurta« useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei sielläkään ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin läpi kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chigagossa ja San Franciscossa. Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemm. ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'in johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti »kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa«. Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tangewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtaja oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops«-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajist. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumaa, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloe II.

1956 — N:o 217 — 9

Walter Piston ja hänen VI sinfoniansa

Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin lähestyvän konsertin ohjelma tarjoaa kuultavaksemme erään mielenkiintoisen uutuuden, Walter Pistonin em. orkesterin juhlavuodeksi säveltämän, vasta äskettäin valmistuneen VI. sinfonian.

Walter Piston on syntynyt Mainessa v. 1894. Hänen isoisänsä oli italialaissyntyinen nimeltään Pistone. Kodin piirissä musiikkia ei juuri harrastettu, mutta kun perhe v. 1905 oli muuttanut Bostoniin, nuori Walter sai isältään lahjaksi viulun.

Nuoruusvuodet kuuluivat etsikkoaikaan, konepiirtäjäksi hän valmistui v. 1912, mutta havitteli sitten taidemaalarin uraa, ja päätti opintonsa Massachusettsin taidekoulussa v. 1916. Sotavuosina hän palveli laivaston soittokunnassa saksofonistina (!), mutta oli tällä välin edistynyt myös viulunsoitossa niin että hänen uranvalintansa kallistui musiikin puolelle. Opiskeltuaan musiikkia ensin Harvardin yliopistossa hän matkusti Parisiin, mutta ei päässyt oppilaaksi, koska oli jo 30-vuotias. Sen sijaan hän joutui mitä parhaimpiin käsiin, Nadia Boulangerin oppilaaksi.

Nuorena säveltäjänä hän nyt omaksui lopullisesti uudet musiikkivirtaukset, ja pian esitettiin Pariisissa hänen ensimmäiset teoksensa. Kun hän v. 1926 palasi Harvardiin hänellä oli mukanaan huomiotaherättävät "Kolme kappaletta huilulle, klarinetille ja fagotille". Kaksi vuotta myöhemmin Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri esitti hänen sävellyksensä "Symphonic Piece".

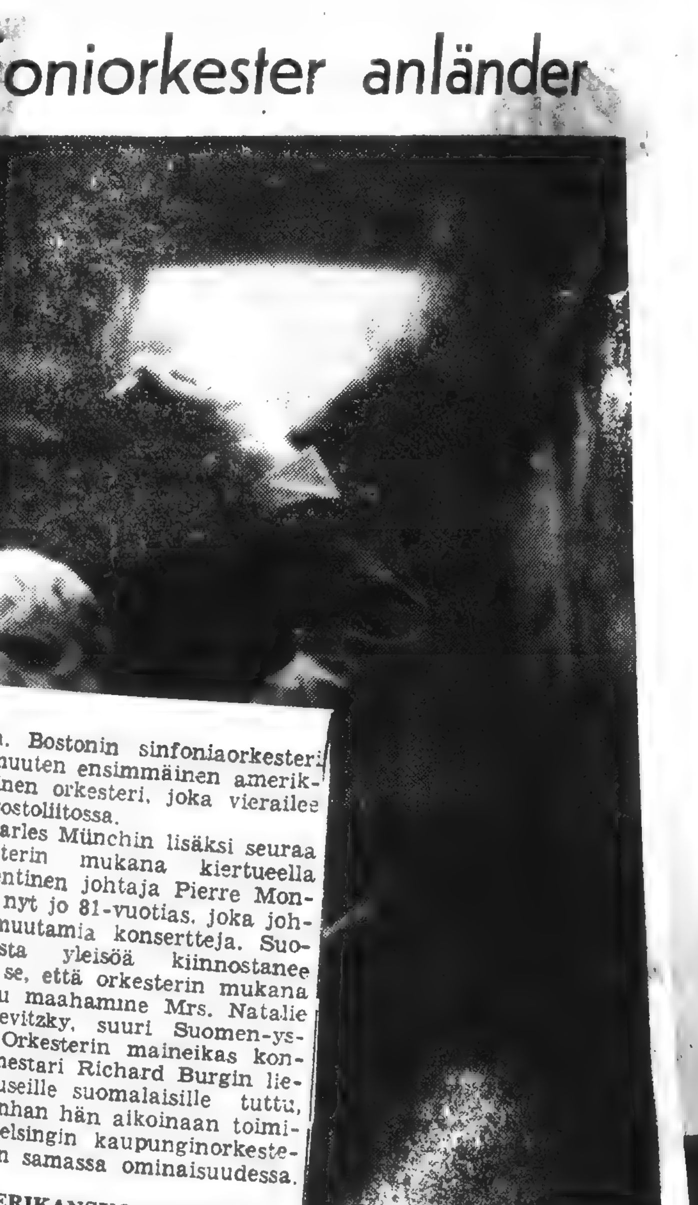
Pistonin varhaisemmasta tuotannosta mainittakoon konsertto (1933), konsertino pianolle ja kamariorkesterille (1937) baletti "The incredible flutist" (1938) sekä viulukonsertto (1939). Ensimmäinen sinfonia valmistui v. 1937, seuraavat vv. 1943, -47 ja -50. Orkesterimusiikin lisäksi mainittakoon vielä kolme jousikvartettia, kvintetti huilulle ja jousille, sonaatteja, kuoroteoksia ja pianomusiikkia. Koko hänen sävellystuotantonsa voidaan jakaa kahteen osaan, v. 1938, ja sen jälkeen sävellettyyn. Aikaisempi vaihe oli kokonaisuuteen pyrkivän ja assimiloivan nykysävellystekniikan leimaama, jälkimmäinen pyrkimystä suoraviivaisuuteen ja pelkistykseen.

Walter Pistonin VI sinfonia on sävelletty Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin ja The Koussevitzky Music Foundationin tilauksesta ja se on omistettu Serge ja Natalie Koussevitzkylle. [illegible] sinfoniaa koskeviin kysymyksiin säveltäjä antoi [illegible] kiintoisen selvityksen:

— Säveltäessäni [illegible] niaani minulle [illegible] keni tilanteen [illegible] mittäin se, että [illegible] tyä orkesteria varten, jonka [illegible] kana kaiken lisäksi [illegible] vanut ja jonka [illegible] jin. Jokainen kirjoittama [illegible] ajatuksissani [illegible] ikäänkuin seuraillen [illegible] ka ovat soittinten [illegible] miä. Pidättyin [illegible] kään sinfoniasta pianolla [illegible] kistusmielessä.

Tästä sinfoniastani ei [illegible] ennakolta sanottavaa, [illegible] kin toivon, että sitä kuunneltaisiin [illegible] käsittelevä [illegible]. Ohjelman ilmaisemat [illegible] otsikot selventävät osien yleis[illegible] netta. Ensimmäinen osa [illegible] maattinen [illegible], luisteva ja [illegible] meikäs, toinen scherzo, kevyt ja vilkas. Kolmas on tyyni adagio, [illegible] teeman soittaa sello ja toinen huilu. Neljäntenä on voimakas finaali vastakohtaisine teemoineen. — Sinfonia on sävelletty vain soittajien [illegible] ja kuunneltavaksi — ilman muita tarkoituksia tai tavoitteita.

[illegible]foniorkester anländer



[illegible], som dirigerar konserten i [illegible]

[illegible] Monteux' tur att under sin tid som ledare för orkestern från 1919 till 1924 introducera Igor Stravinskij. Den världsberömde dirigenten Serge Koussevitskij, som av[illegible] 1924 till 1949. Han sökte outtröttligt efter nya begåvningar och var en av de första att erkänna och introducera Aaron Coplands och Bela Bartoks musik — för att bara nämna ett par namn. Även Sibelius stod högt på hans lista.

Symfonins betydelse

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera [illegible]

[illegible] Koussevitskijs kvartssekellånga ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren Charles Münch, som också leder Europa-turnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter.

Under Koussevitskijs tid grundade symfoniorkestern en unik musikskola, Berkshire Music Center, på egendomen Tanglewood i Massachusetts, där man varje sommar undervisar i komposition, orkester- och kammarmusik, körsång och opera. Chef för skolan är nu Charles Münch och som lä[illegible]

[illegible] vid Harvarduniversitetet och Massachusetts Institute of Technology i det närbelägna Cambridge. För att ge ungdomarna tillfälle till att utan stora kostnader följa orkesterns repertoar ger den offentliga repetitioner. Den stora konsertsa[illegible]

Vid sin konsert i Helsingfors, som den finländska publiken kan se fram emot med stora förväntningar, spelar orkestern följande program: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sjätte symfonin; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

[illegible] I Förenta staterna spelade operan [illegible] viktiga roll som [illegible] är säkert den [illegible] ställning i USA. Varje [illegible] mer än 50.000 invånare [illegible] en symfoniorkester. [illegible] New York, Chicago [illegible] Francisco [illegible] skap.

[illegible] symfonins huvudsakliga arbetsplats på sommaren och orkestern ger [illegible] fri-luftskonserter under den musikfestival som avslutar kurserna vid Berkshire Music Center.

Den vanliga vintersäsongen [illegible] 30 veckor tar slut i april, [illegible] de populära "Pops" [illegible] under ledning av Arthur Fiedler [illegible] Fiedler [illegible] konserterna [illegible]

[illegible] Filharmoniker som [illegible] stora i USA. Under Serge Koussevitskijs kvartssekelledning formades orke[illegible] inte minst av de tusentals studerande vid Harvarduniversitetet och Massachusetts Institute of Technology i det närbe[illegible]

[illegible] Pierre M[illegible] 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitskij [illegible] 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

Charles Münch, Bostons symfoniorkesters nuvarande ledare, som dirigerar konserten i Helsingfors.

SUOMEN KULTTUURI[illegible]
LEIKELMÄPAL[illegible]
Tilaaja Ursis
Lehti Iisalmen [illegible]
Pvm 2 9 1956
Kirjoittaja

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja Ulis
Lehti Hämeen Kansa
Pvm 2 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja

1956 — N:o 217 — 9

Walter Piston ja hänen VI sinfoniansa

Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin lähestyvän konsertin ohjelma tarjoaa kuultavaksemme erään mielenkiintoisen uutuuden, Walter Pistonin em. orkesterin juhlavuodeksi säveltämän, vasta äskettäin valmistuneen VI. sinfonian.

Walter Piston on syntynyt Mainessa v. 1894. Hänen isoisänsä oli italialaissyntyinen nimeltään Pistone. Kodin piirissä musiikkia ei juuri harrastettu, mutta kun perhe v. 1905 oli muuttanut Bostoniin, nuori Walter sai isältään lahjaksi viulun.

Nuoruusvuodet kuuluivat etsikkoaikaan, konepiirtäjäksi hän valmistui v. 1912, mutta havitteli sitten taidemaalarin uraa, ja päätti opintonsa Massachusettsin taidekoulussa v. 1916. Sotavuosina hän palveli laivaston soittokunnassa saksofonistina (!), mutta oli tällä välin edistynyt myös viulunsoitossa niin että hänen uranvalintansa kallistui musiikin puolelle. Opiskeltuaan musiikkia ensin Harvardin yliopistossa hän matkusti Pariisiin, mutta ei päässyt oppilaaksi, koska oli jo 30-vuotias. Sen sijaan hän joutui mitä parhaimpiin käsiin, Nadia Boulangerin oppilaaksi.

Nuorena säveltäjänä hän nyt omaksui lopullisesti uudet musiikkivirtaukset, ja pian esitettiin Pariisissa hänen ensimmäiset teoksensa. Kun hän v. 1926 palasi Harvardiin hänellä oli mukanaan huomiotaherättävät "Kolme kappaletta huilulle, klarinetille ja fagotille". Kaksi vuotta myöhemmin Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri esitti hänen sävellyksensä "Symphonic Piece".

Pistonin varhaisemmasta tuotannosta mainittakoon konsertto (1933), konsertino pianolle ja kamariorkesterille (1937) baletti "The incredible flutist" (1938) sekä viulukonsertto (1939). Ensimmäinen sinfonia valmistui v. 1937, seuraavat vv. 1943, -47 ja -50. Orkesterimusiikin lisäksi mainittakoon vielä kolme jousikvartettia, kvintetti huilulle ja jousille, sonaatteja, kuoroteoksia ja pianomusiikkia. Koko hänen sävellystuotantonsa voidaan jakaa kahteen osaan, v. 1938, ja sen jälkeen sävellettyyn. Aikaisempi vaihe oli kokonaisuuteen pyrkivän ja assimiloivan nykysävellystekniikan leimaamaa, jälkimmäinen pyrkimystä suoraviivaisuuteen ja pelkistykseen.

Walter Pistonin VI sinfonia on sävelletty Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin ja The Koussevitzky Music Foundationin tilauksesta ja se on omistettu Serge ja Natalie Koussevitzkylle. Vastatessaan [illegible] sinfoniaa koskeviin kysymyksiin säveltäjä antoi seuraavan mielenkiintoisen selvityksen:

— Säveltäessäni [illegible] niaani minulle kesken kaiken ulkeni tilanteen [illegible] mittäin se, että [illegible] tyä orkesteria varten, joita me kana kaiken [illegible] vanut ja jonka [illegible] jin. Jokainen kirjoitettu nuotti ajatuksissani [illegible] ikäänkuin seuraillen [illegible] ka ovat soitinten [illegible] miä. Pidätyin soittamasta [illegible] kään sinfoniasta pianolla edes [illegible] kistusmielessä.

Tästä sinfoniasta [illegible] ennakolta sanottava, [illegible] kin toivon, että [illegible] sim [illegible] häiritseviä etukäteis[illegible] liityksiä. Ohjelman [illegible] etsikot [illegible] netta. Ensimmäinen osa [illegible] maattinmuotoinen, [illegible] meikää, toinen scherzo, [illegible] vilkas. Kolmas on tyyni [illegible] tämän teeman soittaa [illegible] toisen kuulu. Neljäntenä [illegible] makas finaali vastakohtaisine [illegible] moineen. — Sinfonia on sävelletty vain [illegible] ja kuunneltavaksi — ilman muita tarkoituksia tai tavoitteita.

JOMEN KULTTUURI
LEIKELMÄPAL
Tilaaja Ulis
Lehti Iisalmen
Pvm 2 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja

Be

Boston
orkesteri
[illegible] sy [illegible] kan m orkester
Tämä
an Eur va orke vuoden vierailu r ja N ket ovat ten erin ten sii kossa. N orkesteri
juhlavali konsertti kautta s teenomai esten es

SINFO

Sinfoni valloissa arvovalta Syynä t jä ooppe itseään kun Eu k.keskuk vain W Lontoon sin suuri Scalaa on kielti kia tärk on jokai kaan kesteri.
punkien luku on raseurue
New Yor
San Fra

Boston
kulttuuri niaorkest kaupunki suuri ylp asema on ja Symp
meistä s

ORKE

Tämän
saavuttan soittajisto perusti
Henry Lee Hig
musiikin ihailija kiiriperheen jäse rahoillaan rake teria, jonka taso parhaitten kesk orkesterien vero si kokoon Saksa parhaita käyt muusikkoja, saksalaissyntyi helin heitä j alkoi Bostonin rin toiminta.
johtajia sen
vat Gericke,
Muck, kaikki teisiin tähtä
hiä.

Ensimmäine
toi mukanaan terin kokoon
listo tuli k

M. T

Yhte

(Ta

Pe

Me p.via 14,30

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Åbo Underrättelser
Pvm 2 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester ger konsert i Finland

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitskij, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

Upptakten för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir verkligt förnämlig genom Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök i landet — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen om tisdag. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum och medverkar vid bl.a. festspelen i Edinburgh. Med orkestern kommer dirigenterna Charles Münch — Bostonsymfonins ledare sedan 1949 — och Pierre Monteux, som på turnén dirigerar några konserter, dock inte här, och mrs Natalie Koussevitskij, en stor Finlandsvän.

Det torde intressera konsertpubliken i vårt land att orkesterns ypperlige konsertmästare Richard Burgin tidigare har varit verksam vid Helsingfors stadsorkester och att en av basunisterna, Kauko Kahila, är av finländskt ursprung.

Det är alltså 75 år sedan Bostons symfoniorkester grundades. Jubilaren har hyllats, men själv har orkestern firat sitt jubileum på det ovanliga sättet att den i sin tur har delat ut gåvor till den musikintresserade världen. Under senaste säsongen presenterades 15 nya verk av internationellt kända kompositörer och nu alltså ges konserter i en rad av europeiska länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

Att presentera nya verk har länge varit tradition hos Bostonsymfonin. Under orkesterns tidigare år spelade sådana orkesterledare som Henschel, Nikisch och Gericke en viktig roll för att göra Johannes Brahms förstådd i USA vid en tid då kritiker på bägge sidor av Atlanten anklagade Brahms för att vara "otillgänglig". Längre fram var det Pierre Monteux tur att under sin tid som ledare för orkestern från 1919 till 1924 introducera Igor Stravinskij. Den världsberömde dirigenten [illegible] till 1949. Han sökte outtröttligt efter nya begåvningar och var en av de första att erkänna och introducera Aaron Coplands och Bela Bartoks musik — för att bara nämna ett par namn. Även Sibelius stod högt på hans lista.

Symfonins betydelse

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ända mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. I Förenta Staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester, men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap.

Säsong med 220 konserter

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New York filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Under Sergej Koussevitskijs kvartssekellånga ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europa-turnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter.

Under Koussevitskijs tid grundade symfoniorkestern en unik musikskola, Berkshire Music Center, på egendomen Tanglewood i Massachusetts, där man varje sommar undervisar i komposition, orkester- och kammarmusik, körsång och opera. Chef för skolan är nu Charles Münch och som lärare fungerar kända kompositörer och musiker från både USA och andra länder. Tanglewood är Bostonsymfonins huvudsakliga arbetsplats på sommaren och orkestern ger livligt uppskattade friluftskonserter under den musikfestival som avslutar kurserna vid Berkshire Music Center.

Den vanliga vintersäsongen om 30 veckor tar slut i april, varefter de populära "Pops"-konserterna börjar, under ledning av Arthur Fiedler varje kväll i maj—juni. Fiedler dirigerar också friluftskonserterna vid Charles River.

Symfoniorkestern är Bostons stolthet, och dess verksamhet omfattas med livligt intresse inte minst av de tusentals studerande vid Harvarduniversitetet och Massachusetts Institute of Technology i det närbelägna Cambridge. För att ge ungdomarna tillfälle till att utan stora kostnader följa orkesterns repertoar ger den offentliga repetitioner. Den stora konsertsa[illegible]

Vid [illegible] Helsingfors [illegible] programmet: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sjätte symfonin; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Österbottningen
Pvm 2 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester anländer

...nuvarande ledare, som dirigerar konserten i ...ingfors.

...en Sibelius stod ... lista.

...fonins ...delse

...ng symfoniorkest... ...nit i USA är unik. ...gen uppbyggda ef... ...ster, men är ändå ... för Amerika än ... fas av seriös mu... ... annat land har ...tern större presti...

...skland har operan ... Storbri... Italien. I Förenta Sta... ...remot spelade operan ...mma viktiga roll som ... Detta är säkert den ... anledningen till sym... ...ällning i USA. Varje ... mer än 50.000 inva... ... en symfoniorke... ... New York, Chi... Francisco ... skap.

...stons ... ...ed 220 ...

...kna ...as ...rka filharmoniker som ...stora i USA. Under Ser... ...ussevitskijs kvartssekel... ledning formades orkes...tern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren Charles Münch, som också leder Europa-turnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter.

Under Koussevitskijs tid grundade symfoniorkestern en unik musikskola, Berkshire Music Center, på egendomen Tanglewood i Massachusetts, där man varje sommar undervisar i kom... ... och kam... ... Bostonsymfonins huvudsakliga arbetsplats på sommaren och orkestern ger livligt uppskattade friluftskonserter under den musikfestival som avslutar kurserna vid Berkshire Music Center.

Den vanliga vintersäsongen om 30 veckor tar slut i april ... "Pops"- ... ledning av Arthur Fiedler, varje ... Fiedler diri... ...konserterna ...

...inte minst av de tusentals studerande vid Harvarduniversitetet och Massachusetts Institute of Technology i det närbe...

Charles Münch, Bostons symfoniorkesters nuvarande ledare, som dirigerar konserten i Helsingfors.

...öte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitskij, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja Ulis
Lehti Hämeen Kansa
Pvm 2 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja

1956 — N:o 217 — 9

Walter Piston ja hänen VI sinfoniansa

Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin lähestyvän konsertin ohjelma tarjoaa kuultavaksemme erään mielenkiintoisen uutuuden, Walter Pistonin em. orkesterin juhlavuodeksi säveltämän, vasta äskettäin valmistuneen VI. sinfonian.

Walter Piston on syntynyt Mainessa v. 1894. Hänen isoisänsä oli italialaissyntyinen nimeltään Pistone. Kodin piirissä musiikkia ei juuri harrastettu, mutta kun perhe v. 1905 oli muuttanut Bostoniin, nuori Walter sai isältään lahjaksi viulun.

Nuoruusvuodet kuuluivat etsikkoaikaan, konepiirtäjäksi hän valmistui v. 1912, mutta havitteli sitten taidemaalarin uraa, ja päätti opintonsa Massachusettsin taidekoulussa v. 1916. Sotavuosina hän palveli laivaston soittokunnassa saksofonistina (!), mutta oli tällä välin edistynyt myös viulunsoitossa niin että hänen uranvalintansa kallistui musiikin puolelle. Opiskeltuaan musiikkia ensin Harvardin yliopistossa hän matkusti Pariisiin, mutta ei päässyt oppilaaksi, koska oli jo 30-vuotias. Sen sijaan hän joutui mitä parhaimpiin käsiin, Nadia Boulangerin oppilaaksi.

Nuorena säveltäjänä hän nyt omaksui lopullisesti uudet musiikkivirtaukset, ja pian esitettiin Pariisissa hänen ensimmäiset teoksensa. Kun hän v. 1926 palasi Harvardiin hänellä oli mukanaan huomiotaherättävät "Kolme kappaletta huilulle, klarinetille ja fagotille". Kaksi vuotta myöhemmin Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri esitti hänen sävellyksensä "Symphonic Piece".

Pistonin varhaisemmasta tuotannosta mainittakoon konsertto (1933), konsertino pianolle ja kamariorkesterille (1937) baletti "The incredible flutist" (1938) sekä viulukonsertto (1939). Ensimmäinen sinfonia valmistui v. 1937, seuraavat vv. 1943, -47 ja -50. Orkesterimusiikin lisäksi mainittakoon vielä kolme jousikvartettia, kvintetti huilulle ja jousille, sonaatteja, kuoroteoksia ja pianomusiikkia. Koko hänen sävellystuotantonsa voidaan jakaa kahteen osaan, v. 1938. ja sen jälkeen sävellettyyn. Aikaisempi vaihe oli kokonaisuuteen pyrkivän ja assimiloivan nykysävellystekniikan leimaama, jälkimmäinen pyrkimystä suoraviivaisuuteen ja pelkistykseen.

Walter Pistonin VI sinfonia on sävelletty Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin ja The [illegible] Foundationin tilauksesta ja se on omistettu Serge ja Natalie Koussevitzkylle. [illegible] sinfoniaa koskeviin kysymyksiin säveltäjä antoi [illegible] kiintoisen selvityksen:

— Säveltäessäni [illegible] niaani minulle [illegible] keni tilanteen [illegible] mittäin se, että [illegible] tyä orkesteria varten, [illegible] kana kaiken lisäksi [illegible] vanut ja jonka [illegible] jin. Jokainen kirjoittama [illegible] ajatuksissani [illegible] ikäänkuin seuraillen [illegible] ka ovat soitinten [illegible] miä. Pidätyin soittamasta [illegible] kään sinfoniasta pianolla [illegible] kistusmielessä.

Tästä sinfoniastani [illegible] ennakolta sanottavaa, [illegible] kin toivon, että [illegible] [illegible] häiritseviä [illegible] [illegible]. Osa [illegible] [illegible] selventävät osien [illegible] netta. Ensimmäinen osa [illegible], [illegible] ja [illegible] [illegible] scherzo, [illegible] ja [illegible]. Kolmas on tyyni [illegible] [illegible] soittaa [illegible] ja [illegible]. [illegible] finaali [illegible] [illegible] — [illegible] sävelletty vain [illegible] ja [illegible] vaksi — ilman muita tarkoitusperiä tai tavoitteita.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Åbo Underrättelser
Pvm 2 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester ger konsert i Finland

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitskij, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

Upptakten för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir verkligt [illegible] Bostons symfoni[illegible] det — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen om tisdag. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europaturné som ordnats [illegible] rikssvensk nyhetsförmedling och opinionsbildning.

Också denna gang, borde vi tillägga; det är nämligen andra gången en gruppresa av detta slag anordnas. Hösten 1953 företog en skara rikssvenska journalister en liknande tur, da som nu pa inbjudan och i regi av Svenska Finlands folktingsfullmäktige. Att inbjudan nu har förnyats är redan det ett bevis för att man har ansett en kontakt av detta slag verkligt värdefull, och envar som i nagon mån följer med rikssvensk press kan intyga att värdesättningen är riktig. Den första rundturen följdes omedelbart av en månad i [illegible] övervägande god [illegible] välj[illegible]

[illegible] behandlingen av finländskt och speciellt finlandssvenskt nyhetsmaterial fylligare, personligare och sakligt mera klart nyanserad.

Att vi påpekar detta får för all del inte tolkas som om vi ville inprägla i vara kära gästande kollegers medvetande att man motser ett visst antal spaltmeter publicitet i hjärtlig ton som kvitto på inbjudan. De tio journalisterna är det svenska Finlands gäster, men de är här som yrkesfolk, för att betjäna sin publik, och avvägningen av vad de anser värt att uppmärksamma och hur de gör det är deras ensak. Det centralt värdefulla från finlandssvensk synpunkt bör anses vara själva kontakten som sådan, inte dess [illegible] [illegible] ypp[illegible] B[illegible] sa[illegible] [illegible] et [illegible] i [illegible] till ett slags [illegible] kompensation i kontakten [illegible] rikssvenska gäster: en andfådd iver att poängtera hur utomordentligt duktiga och betydelsefulla vi i själva verket är. O[illegible] det skulle ju inte förvåna [illegible] denna tendens ibland kun[illegible] komma att ta sig särskilt tr[illegible] tande uttryck just gentemot [illegible] skara företrädare för nyhe[illegible] förmedlingen och opinionsbi[illegible] ningen i det gamla moderla[illegible] det. För den eventualitet[illegible] kan det vara skäl att redan [illegible] be om tålmodig förståelse: [illegible] minoritet i osäkra och tidv[illegible] allvarligt hotade andliga o[illegible] materiella villkor blir lätt lit[illegible] egocentrisk, självhävdelsen b[illegible] kampmedel och livsvillkor. D[illegible] kan bli tjatigt — men egent[illegible] gen är det också litet rörand[illegible] särskilt som det hos oss v[illegible] också får tas som ett uttry[illegible] för en smått ängslad sträva[illegible] att bevara sambandet med d[illegible] övriga Norden, att med all ma[illegible] bibehalla och helst också vidg[illegible] var lilla plats i nordiskt me[illegible] och nordisk samkänsl[illegible] [illegible] majoritetens Finland och i mo[illegible] svarande mån även för Sverig[illegible] och de övriga nordiska gra[illegible] narna.

Ja — mycket mer kunde sä[illegible] gas inför besöket, men vi v[illegible] nogsamt att alldeles tillräck[illegible] ligt mycket kommer att bli sag[illegible] till tålmodigt lyssnande gäste[illegible] under resans tretton program[illegible] späckade dagar. Vi skall för vå[illegible] del bara tillägga att vi är glad[illegible] över att Åboland, den svensk[illegible] delen av vad vi inte utan e[illegible] speciell tonvikt benämne[illegible] Egentliga Finland, har fått s[illegible] pass stort utrymme i program[illegible] m.t. Och vi vill med uppriktig[illegible] kollegial hjärtlighet hälsa de[illegible] rikssvenska journalistgruppe[illegible] välkommen, samtidigt som v[illegible] hoppas att rundturen skall b[illegible] saklig och personligt givand[illegible]

Pressröster

UTSIKTERNA INOM LANTBRUKET ÄR DYSTRA, fastslår Maakansa i en höstledare i sitt gårdagsnummer. Säden har slagits ner av regnen så att den knappast kan skördas med maskinads index och planerar en n[illegible] gottgörelse. Huruda[n], det f[illegible] man se då förhandlingsrevan[illegible] na mellan arbetsmarknadsorga[illegible] nisationerna och regeringens f[illegible] reträdare snart inleds. Det b[illegible] höver knappast sägas att pe[illegible]

NYHET!!!
FOTSTÖD

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Österbottningen
Pvm 2 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester anländer

Charles Münch, Bostons symfoniorkesters nuvarande ledare,som dirigerar konserten i Helsingfors.

Upptakten för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir verkligt förnämlig genom Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök här — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europa-turné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum och medverkar vid bl. a. festspelen i Edinburgh. Med orkestern kommer dirigenterna Charles Münch — Bostonsymfonins ledare sedan 1949 — och Pierre Monteux, som på turnén dirigerar några konserter [illegible] [illegible] Koussevitskij [illegible] [illegible] pressen [illegible] konsertpublik [illegible] vart land [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Bernhard Lorenz tidigare varit verksam vid Helsingfors stadsorkester och att en av basunisterna, Kauko Kahila, är av finskt ursprung.

Det [illegible] Boston Symfoniorkester [illegible] [illegible] europeiska länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

Att presentera nya verk har länge varit tradition hos Bostonsymfonien. [illegible] tidigare [illegible] sådana orkesterledare [illegible] Henschel [illegible] roll för att göra Johannes Brahms först [illegible] i USA vid en tid då kritiker på [illegible] sidor av Atlanten anklagade Brahms för att vara "otillgänglig". Längre fram var det Pierre Monteuxs tur att under sin tid som ledare för orkestern fran 1919 till 1924 introducera Igor Stravinskij. Den världsberomda dirigenten Sergej Koussevitskij, som avled 1951, ledde orkestern fran 1924 till 1949. Han sökte outtröttligt efter nya begavningar och var en av de första att erkänna och introducera Aaron Coplands och Bela Bartoks musik — för att bara nämna ett par namn. Även Sibelius stod högt pa hans lista.

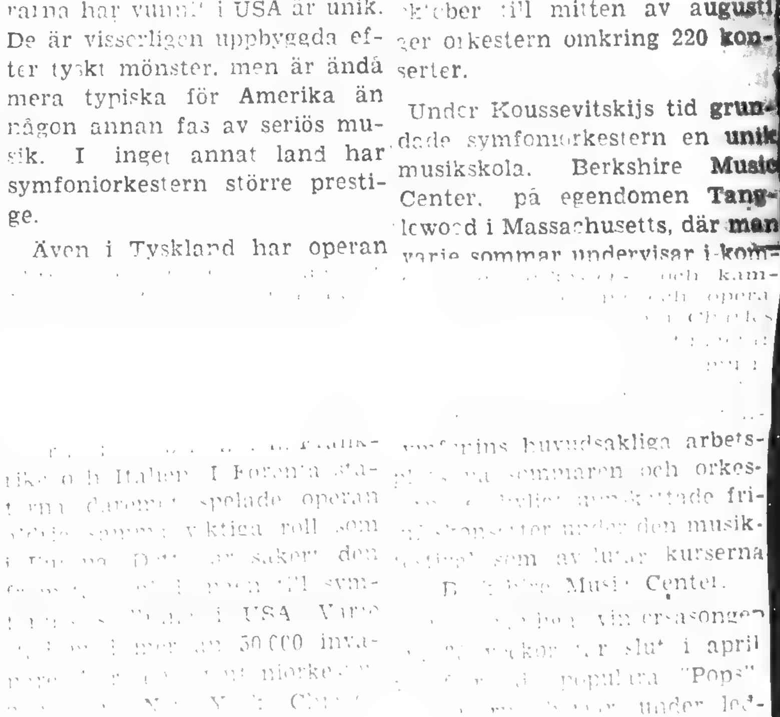
Symfonins betydelse

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan [illegible] [illegible] Italien. I Förenta staterna däremot spelade operan [illegible] viktiga roll som i Europa. [illegible] säkert den [illegible] till symfoni[illegible] i USA. Var[illegible] mer än 50 000 invånare [illegible] orke[illegible] [illegible] New York Filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Under Sergej Koussevitskijs kvartssekellånga ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren Charles Münch, som också leder Europa-turnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter.

Under Koussevitskijs tid grundade symfoniorkestern en unik musikskola, Berkshire Music Center, på egendomen Tanglewood i Massachusetts, där man varje sommar undervisar i kom[illegible] och kam[illegible] och opera [illegible] Charles [illegible] [illegible] symfonins huvudsakliga arbets[illegible] på sommaren och orkes[illegible] [illegible] frifilkonserter under den musik[illegible] som avslutar kurserna [illegible] Berkshire Music Center.

[illegible] vintersäsongen [illegible] veckor [illegible] slut i april [illegible] populära "Pops" [illegible] under ledning av Arthur Fiedler, varje [illegible] Fiedler dirigerar [illegible] friluftskonserterna [illegible] Bostons [illegible] inte minst av de tusentals studerande vid Harvarduniversitetet och Massachusetts Institute of Technology i det närbe-



Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitzky, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

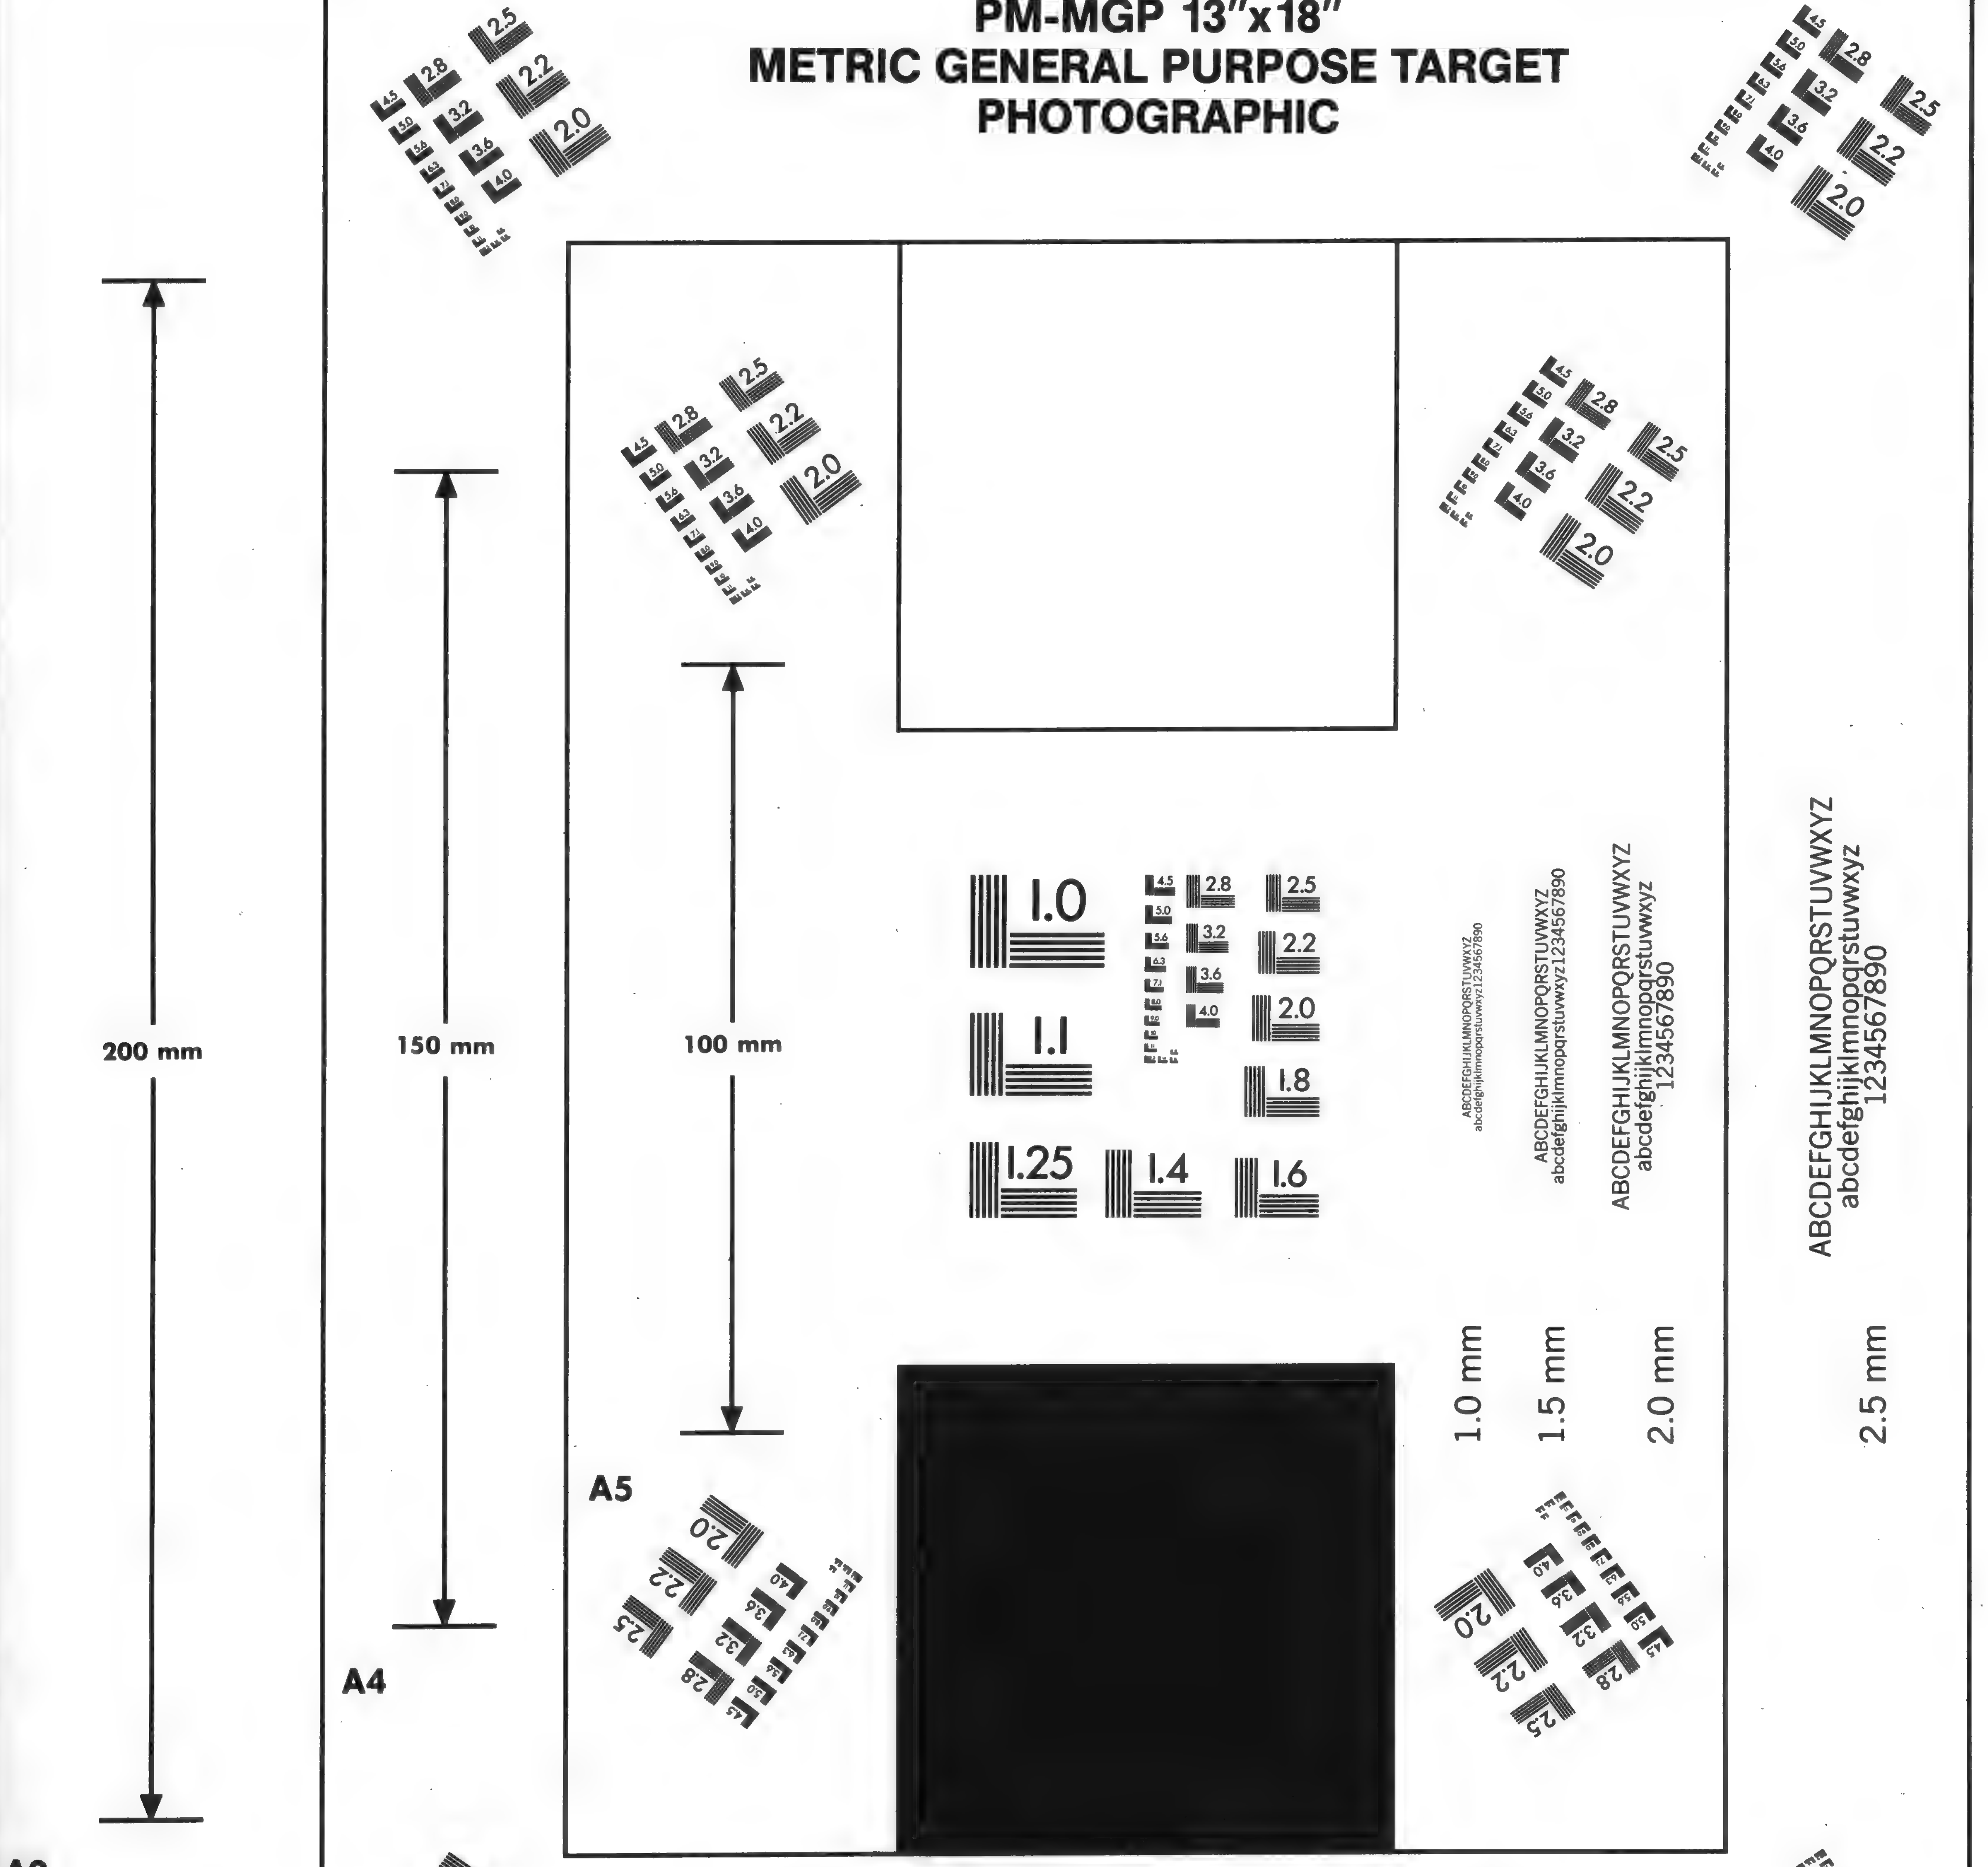
SUOMEN KULTTUURI[illegible]
LEIKELMÄPA[illegible]
Iisalmen [illegible]
2 9 19 56

REDUCTION

RATIO

14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A3
A4
A5
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
8.0
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Hämeen Kansa
Pvm 2 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

[I-2]

sinaisten harjoitusten lisäksi harrastettiin miehisiä ajanviettejä, kuten ampumiskilpailuja komeine palkintoineen ja palkinnonjakajaisineen, uintia, soutua nelisoutuisilla veneillä, säkkitappelua pukilla ja vieläpä nurmitansseja »härkäparissa» pataljoonan kapellin »pelatessa» musiikkia. Sotilasteltat olivat valkoisia ja muodostivat telttariveinä komean näkymän.

KURI JA JÄRJESTYS

olivat tiukat, käyttäytymisen säännöt vaativat. Pitkän palvelusajan takia miehistön ja heidän esimiestensä välit muodostuivat erinomaisen luottavaisiksi. »Tuntematonta sotilasta» josta ei tiedetä mikä hän on, mistä tulee ja mihin menee, ei tunnettu. Esimiehyydellä oli voimakas patriarkaalinen leima. Upseereiden kutsuttiin »parooniksi» kuten myöhemmät suomalaiset soturit kutsuivat marsalkka Mannerheimia »marskiksi», antoi lakkauttamisen aikaan päiväkäskyn, joka historiallisen merkityksensä puolesta on rinnastettavissa Döbelnin ja Mannerheimin kuuluisiin päiväkäskyihin. Ramsayn päiväkäsky kuuluu paikoitellen hieman nykykieleen mukailtuna seuraavasti.

PÄIVÄKÄSKY SUOMEN SOTAVÄELLE

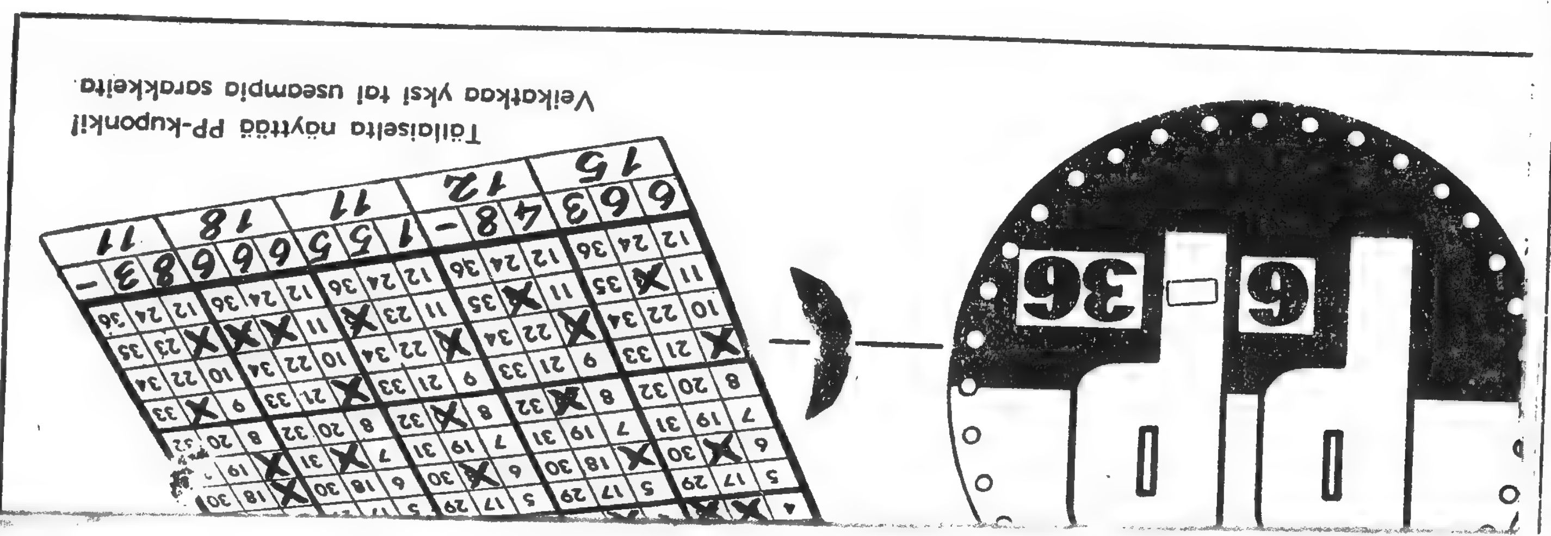
17. helmikuuta 1902. Helsinki.

1.

Anottuani vapautuksen palveluksesta on minut Armollisella päiväkäskyllä 1/14. Helmikuuta Armossa ylennetty jalkaväen kenraaliksi, samalla kun minulle on myönnetty ero palveluksesta oikeutettuna käyttämään sotilasvirkapukua.

Armollisen määräyksen perusteella on kuitenkin Suomen sotaväen reservin vakinaiset kaaderit sekä Suomen rakuunarykmentti hajoitettu, jota paitsi lakkautetaan sekä Päällikköhallitus että Suomen tarkkampujapataljoonat lyhyen ajan kuluessa, jotenka Suomen joukoista niinmuodoin ainoastaan Henkivartion 3. Suomen tarkkampujapataljoona jää jäljelle.

Vaikka minun ei sopisikaan tässä lausua arvostelua nyt hajoitettujen Suomen joukkojen sotilaskoulutuksesta, en kuitenkaan voi jättää mainitsematta, että tämä sotaväki, niin vakinaiset joukot kuin reservitkin, arvosteltiin parhaimmiten Hänen MAJESTEETTINSA KEISARI ALEKSANTERI III:nnen leirikokouksissa Lappeenrannassa vuosina 1885 ja 1891, että suomalai-



Tällaiselta näyttää PP-kuponki!
Veikatkaa yksi tai useampia sarakkeita.

SUOMEN SOSIALIDEMOKRAATTI
Sept. 2, '56

1956 — N:o 217 — 9

Walter Piston ja hänen VI sinfoniansa

Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin lähestyvän konsertin ohjelma tarjoaa kuultavaksemme erään mielenkiintoisen uutuuden, Walter Pistonin em. orkesterin juhlavuodeksi säveltämän, vasta äskettäin valmistuneen VI. sinfonian.

Walter Piston on syntynyt Mainessa v. 1894. Hänen isoisänsä oli italialaissyntyinen nimeltään Pistone. Kodin piirissä musiikkia ei juuri harrastettu, mutta kun perhe v. 1905 oli muuttanut Bostoniin, nuori Walter sai isältään lahjaksi viulun.

Nuoruusvuodet kuuluivat etsikkoaikaan, konepiirtäjäksi hän valmistui v. 1912, mutta havitteli sitten taidemaalarin uraa, ja päätti opintonsa Massachusettsin taidekoulussa v. 1916. Sotavuosina hän palveli laivaston soittokunnassa saksofonistina (!), mutta oli tällä välin edistynyt myös viulunsoitossa niin että hänen uranvalintansa kallistui musiikin puolelle. Opiskeltuaan musiikkia ensin Harvardin yliopistossa hän matkusti Parisiin, mutta ei päässyt oppilaaksi, koska oli jo 30-vuotias. Sen sijaan hän joutui mitä parhaimpiin käsiin, Nadia Boulangerin oppilaaksi.

Nuorena säveltäjänä hän nyt omaksui lopullisesti uudet musiikkivirtaukset, ja pian esitettiin Pariisissa hänen ensimmäiset teoksensa. Kun hän v. 1926 palasi Harvardiin hänellä oli mukanaan huomiotaherättävät "Kolme kappaletta huilulle, klarinetille ja fagotille". Kaksi vuotta myöhemmin Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri esitti hänen sävellyksensä "Symphonic Piece".

Pistonin varhaisemmasta tuotannosta mainittakoon konsertto (1933), konsertino pianolle ja kamariorkesterille (1937) baletti "The incredible flutist" (1938) sekä viulukonsertto (1939). Ensimmäinen sinfonia valmistui v. 1937, seuraavat vv. 1943, -47 ja -50. Orkesterimusiikin lisäksi mainittakoon vielä kolme jousikvartettia, kvintetti huilulle ja jousille, sonaatteja, kuoroteoksia ja pianomusiikkia. Koko hänen sävellystuotantonsa voidaan jakaa kahteen osaan, v. 1938 ja sen jälkeen sävellettyyn. Aikaisempi vaihe oli kokonaisuuteen pyrkivän ja assimiloivan nykysävellystekniikan leimaama, jälkimmäinen pyrkimystä suoraviivaisuuteen ja pelkistykseen.

Walter Pistonin VI sinfonia on sävelletty Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin ja The Koussevitzky [illegible] Foundationin tilauksesta ja [illegible] omistettu Serge ja Natalie Koussevitskylle. Vastatessaan [illegible] sinfoniaa koskeviin kysymyksiin säveltäjä antoi seuraavan mielenkiintoisen selvityksen:

— Säveltäessäni kuudetta sinfoniaani minulle keskeisin kaikista [illegible] kenties tilanteen erikoisluonne, nimittäin se, että tein sitä [illegible] tätä orkesteria varten, jonka [illegible] kanssa kaiken lisäksi itse olen [illegible] vanut ja jonka tunnen [illegible] jin. Jokainen kirjoitettu nuotti [illegible] ajatuksissani [illegible] ikäänkuin seuraillen [illegible] ka ovat soittinten [illegible] miä. Pidättyin soittamasta [illegible] kään sinfoniasta pianolla edes [illegible] kistusmielessä.

Tästä sinfoniastani ei ole [illegible] ennakoita sanottavaa. Pikemmin kin toivon, että sitä kuunneltaisiin ilman häiritseviä [illegible] liitykaitä. Ohjelman ilmaisemat [illegible] otsikot [illegible] ventävät osien [illegible] netta [illegible] ensimmäinen osa on [illegible] toinen, luistava ja [illegible] melkäs, toinen scherzo, kevyt ja vilkas. Kolmas on tyyni adagio, sen [illegible] teeman soittaa sello ja toisen huilu. Neljäntenä on vilkas [illegible] finaali vastakohtaisine [illegible] meineen. — Sinfonia on sävelletty vain soitettavaksi ja kuunneltavaksi — ilman muita tarkoituksia tai tavoitteita.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Åbo Underrättelser
Pvm 2 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester ger konsert i Finland

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitskij, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

Upptakten för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir verkligt förnämlig genom Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök i landet — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen om tisdag. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europaturné som ordnats i rikssvensk nyhetsförmedling och opinionsbildning.

Också denna gang, borde vi tillägga; det är nämligen andra gången en gruppresa av detta slag anordnas. Hösten 1953 företog en skara rikssvenska journalister en liknande tur, då som nu på inbjudan och i regi av Svenska Finlands folktingsfullmäktige. Att inbjudan nu har förnyats är redan det ett bevis för att man har ansett en kontakt av detta slag verkligt värdefull, och envar som i någon mån följer med rikssvensk press kan intyga att värdesättningen är riktig. Den första rundturen följdes omedelbart av en mängd i sak övervägande goda och i ton alltigenom välvilliga [illegible]

[illegible] pande behandlingen av finländskt och speciellt finlandssvenskt nyhetsmaterial fylligare, personligare och sakligt

olta leder till ett slags [illegible] kompensation i kontakten [illegible] rikssvenska gäster: en andfå iver att poängtera hur utom[illegible] dentligt duktiga och betydel[illegible] fulla vi i själva verket är. O[illegible] det skulle ju inte förvåna [illegible] denna tendens ibland ku[illegible] komma att ta sig särskilt tr[illegible] tande uttryck just gentemot [illegible] skara företrädare för nyhe[illegible] förmedlingen och opinionsbil[illegible] ningen i det gamla moderla[illegible] det. För den eventualitet[illegible] kan det vara skäl att redan [illegible] be om tålmodig förståelse: [illegible] minoritet i osäkra och tid[illegible] allvarligt hotade andliga o[illegible] materiella villkor blir lätt lit[illegible] egocentrisk, självhävdelsen b[illegible] kampmedel och livsvillkor. D[illegible] kan bli tjatigt — men egent[illegible] gen är det också litet röran[illegible] särskilt som det hos oss v[illegible] också får tas som ett uttry[illegible] för en smått ängslad sträva[illegible] att bevara sambandet med d[illegible] övriga Norden, att med all ma[illegible] bibehalla och helst också vid[illegible] vår lilla plats i nordiskt me[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] joritetens Finland och i mo[illegible] svarande mån även för Sverig[illegible] och de övriga nordiska gra[illegible] narna.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Österbottningen
Pvm 2 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester anländer

Charles Münch, Bostons symfoniorkesters nuvarande ledare som dirigerar konserten i Helsingfors.

Upptakten för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir verkligt förnämlig genom Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök här — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europa-turné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum och medverkar vid bl. a. festspelen i Edinburgh. Med orkestern kommer dirigenterna Charles Münch — Bostonsymfonins ledare sedan 1949 — och Pierre Monteux, som på turnén dirigerar några konserter, dock inte här, och Mrs. Natalie Koussevitskij [illegible] par namn. Även Sibelius stod [illegible] hans lista.

Symfonins betydelse

D[illegible] symfoniorkestrarna [illegible] i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ända mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan [illegible] tern till en av de mest full[illegible] [illegible] sensibla [illegible] i världen. [illegible] efterträddes [illegible] orkesterle[illegible] Charles Münch som ock[illegible] på turnén. Från [illegible] till mitten av augusti [illegible] orkestern omkring 220 konserter.

Under Koussevitskijs tid grundade symfoniorkestern en unik musikskola, Berkshire Music Center, på egendomen Tanglewood i Massachusetts, där man varje sommar undervisar i kom[illegible] orkester- och kam[illegible]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Åbo Underrättelser
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester ger konsert i Finland

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitskij, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

Upptakten för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir verkligt förnämlig genom Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök i landet — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen om tisdag. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europaturné som ordnats i rikssvensk nyhetsförmedling och opinionsbildning.

Också denna gång, borde vi tillägga; det är nämligen andra gången en gruppresa av detta slag anordnas. Hösten 1953 företog en skara rikssvenska journalister en liknande tur, då som nu på inbjudan och i regi av Svenska Finlands folktingsfullmäktige. Att inbjudan nu har förnyats är redan det ett bevis för att man har ansett en kontakt av detta slag verkligt värdefull, och envar som i någon mån följer med rikssvensk press kan intyga att värdesättningen är riktig. Den första rundturen följdes omedelbart av en mängd i sak övervägande goda och i ton alltigenom välvilliga ledare, resebrev och specialartiklar i den då representerade delen av Sveriges press. Och vad som på längre sikt har varit minst lika glädjande och värdefullt: man tycker sig kunna spåra att självsynen har gjort också den löpande behandlingen av finländskt och speciellt finlandssvenskt nyhetsmaterial fylligare, personligare och sakligt mera klart nyanserad.

Att vi påpekar detta får för all del inte tolkas som om vi ville inprägla i våra kära gästande kollegers medvetande att man motser ett visst antal spaltmeter publicitet i hjärtlig ton som kvitto på inbjudan. De tio journalisterna är det svenska Finlands gäster, men de är här som yrkesfolk, för att betjäna sin publik, och avvägningen av vad de anser värt att uppmärksamma och hur de gör det är deras ensak. Det centralt värdefulla från finlandssvensk synpunkt bör anses vara själva kontakten som sådan, inte dess omedelbart mätbara

ofta leder till ett slags

kompensation i kontakten rikssvenska gäster: en andf iver att poängtera hur utom dentligt duktiga och betydel fulla vi i själva verket är. O det skulle ju inte förvåna denna tendens ibland ku komma att ta sig särskilt tr tande uttryck just gentemot skara företrädare för nyhe förmedlingen och opinionsbil ningen i det gamla moderla det. För den eventualitet kan det vara skäl att redan be om tålmodig förståelse: minoritet i osäkra och tid allvarligt hotade andliga o materiella villkor blir lätt lit egocentrisk, självhävdelsen b kampmedel och livsvillkor. D kan bli tjatigt — men egent gen är det också litet röran särskilt som det hos oss också får tas som ett uttry för en smått ängslad sträva att bevara sambandet med d övriga Norden, att med all ma bibehålla och helst också vid vår lilla plats i nordiskt me vetande och nordisk samkänsl Och inte minst just i det avs endet föreställer vi oss att har en uppgift som sträcker s en god bit utanför vår eg tränga krets, en uppgift av b tydelse också för den finska m joritetens Finland och i mo svarande mån även för Sverig och de övriga nordiska gra narna.

Ja — mycket mer kunde s gas inför besöket, men vi v nogsamt att alldeles tillräc ligt mycket kommer att bli sag till tålmodigt lyssnande gäste under resans tretton program späckade dagar. Vi skall för vå del bara tillägga att vi är glad över att Åboland, den svensk delen av vad vi inte utan e speciell tonvikt benämne Egentliga Finland, har fått s pass stort utrymme i program met. Och vi vill med uppriktig kollegial hjärtlighet hälsa de rikssvenska journalistgruppe välkommen, samtidigt som v hoppas att rundturen skall b sakligt och personligt givand

Pressröster

UTSIKTERNA INOM LANTBRUKET ÄR DYSTRA, fastslår Maakansa i en höstledare i sitt gårdagsnummer. Säden har slagits ner av regnen så att den knappast kan skördas med maskiner — och åkrarna är förövrigt så uppblötta att de inte bär tunga redskap. I denna situation har det inte varit angenämt för lantmännen att läsa vad som har skrivits i pressen om en förment väldig ökning av lantbruksinkomsten.

[illegible]

nads index och planerar en n gottgörelse. Hurudan, det f man se då förhandlingstreva na mellan arbetsmarknadsorg nisationerna och regeringens f reträdare snart inleds. Det b höver knappast sägas att pe spektiven ute i landsbygden me avseende på skörden, stubbh rorna och skogsaffärerna sam den sannolika utvecklingen a sysselsättningen inte är sådan att talet om nya lönhöjninga kunde vinna genklang och fö stae'se. Detta kommer FFC uta tvivel lätt att märka om det i leder sin frejdiga ilmatsch. FF har skäl att minnas, att om de går i spetsen, följer andra efte

Övergangen till september in nebär också att den politiska s songen bojar. Denna gang finn inte i detta avseende något tyd ligt "trappsteg". De ekonomisk

NYHET!!!
FOTSTÖD
av stalplast

[illegible]

Kangasniemi & K:nit
FOTSTODSAVDELNINGEN
Åbo [illegible] 10

Piece".

Pistonin varhaisemmasta tuotannosta mainittakoon konsertto (1933), konsertino pianolle ja kamariorkesterille (1937) baletti "The incredible flutist" (1938) sekä viulukonsertto (1939). Ensimmäinen sinfonia valmistui v. 1937, seuraavat vv. 1943, -47 ja -50. Orkesterimusiikin lisäksi mainittakoon vielä kolme jousikvartettia, kvintetti huilulle ja jousille, sonaatteja, kuoroteoksia ja pianomusiikkia. Koko hänen sävellystuotantonsa voidaan jakaa kahteen osaan, v. 1938 ja sen jälkeen sävellettyyn. Aikaisempi vaihe oli kokonaisuuteen pyrkivän ja assimiloivan nykysävellystekniikan leimaamaa, jälkimmäinen pyrkimystä suoraviivaisuuteen ja pelkistykseen.

Walter Pistonin VI sinfonia on sävelletty Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesjin. Jokainen kirjoitettu [illegible] ajatuksissani [illegible] ikäänkuin seuraillen [illegible] ka ovat seitinten [illegible] miä. Pidätyin [illegible] kään sinfoniasta pianolla [illegible] kistusmielessä.

Tästä sinfoniastani [illegible] ennakolta sanottavaa [illegible] kin toivon, että sitä [illegible] siltä ilman häiritseviä [illegible] liitykiä. Ohjelman [illegible] otsikot selventävät [illegible] netta. Ensimmäinen [illegible] naattimuotoinen, [illegible] meikäs, toinen scherzo, [illegible] vilkas. Kolmas on tyyni [illegible] toisen huilu. Neljäntenä [illegible] makna finaali [illegible] moineen. — Sinfonia [illegible] vain seitsemän [illegible] vaksi — ilman muita [illegible] tai tavoitteita.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Österbottningen
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester anländer

Charles Münch, Bostons symfoniorkesters nuvarande ledare, som dirigerar konserten i Helsingfors.

Upptakten för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir verkligt förnämlig genom Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök här — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europa-turné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum och medverkar vid bl. a. festspelen i Edinburgh. Med orkestern kommer dirigenterna Charles Münch — Bostonsymfonins ledare sedan 1949 — och Pierre Monteux, som på turnén dirigerar några konserter, dock inte här, och Mrs. Natalie Koussevitskij, en stor Finlands-vän. Det torde intressera konsertpubliken i vårt land att orkesterns ypperlige konsertmästare Richard Burgin tidigare varit verksam vid Helsingfors stadsorkester och att en av basunisterna, Kauko Kahila, är av finskt ursprung.

Det är i år alltså 75 år sedan Bostons Symfoniorkester grundades. Jubilaren har hyllats, men själv har orkestern firat sitt jubileum på det ovanliga sättet att den i sin tur delat ut gåvor till den musikintresserade världen. Under senaste säsongen presenterades 15 nya verk av internationellt kända kompositörer och nu alltså ges konserter i en rad av europeiska länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

Att presentera nya verk har länge varit tradition hos Bostonsymfonin. [illegible] Johannes Brahms [illegible] i USA [illegible] Brahms [illegible] Pierre Monteux [illegible] 1919 till 1924 [illegible] Stravinskij. Den världsberömda dirigenten Sergej Koussevitskij [illegible] från 1924 [illegible] erkänna och introducera Aaron Coplands och Bela Bartoks musik — för att bara nämna ett par namn. Även Sibelius stod högt på hans lista.

Symfonins betydelse

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. I Förenta staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester, men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap.

Bostonsäsong med 220 konserter

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar o. New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Under Sergej Koussevitskijs kvartssekellånga ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europa-turnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter.

Under Koussevitskijs tid grundade symfoniorkestern en unik musikskola, Berkshire Music Center, på egendomen Tanglewood i Massachusetts, där man varje sommar undervisar i komposition, orkester- och kammarmusik, körsång och opera. Chef för skolan är nu Charles Münch och som lärare fungerar kända kompositörer och musiker från både USA och andra länder. Tanglewood är Bostonsymfonins huvudsakliga arbetsplats på sommaren och orkestern ger livligt uppskattade friluftskonserter under den musikfestival som avslutar kurserna vid Berkshire Music Center.

Den vanliga vintersäsongen om 30 veckor tar slut i april, varefter de populära "Pops"-konserterna börjar, under ledning av Arthur Fiedler, varje kväll i maj—juni. Fiedler dirigerar också friluftskonserterna vid Charles River.

Symfoniorkestern är Bostons stolthet, och dess verksamhet omfattas med livligt intresse inte minst av de tusentals studerande vid Harvarduniversitetet och Massachusetts Institute of Technology i det närbe-

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Kousseritzky, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

OMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Uusi
Iisalmen St.
2 9 19 56
joittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri.

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50,000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Montenx'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolis Pierre Monteux'in johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti «kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa«. Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscaninin oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat «Pops«-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Oskesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Broica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloe II.

---

men suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv.
vitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles llussan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

hicagossa ja San Franciskossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphoni Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110 ,perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa.

nut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzskyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harward-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksissa kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostolitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteuk, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalia Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

---

itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdosa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan, ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin kon-

Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalia Koussevitzky, suuri Suomenystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

[112]

OKRATTI Sept. 2, '56

6 — N:o 217 — 9

ja hänen

OMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Iisalmen St.
Pvm 2 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

KUULUTUKSIA

KUULUTUS.

Allamainittujen Vieremän nnassa suoritettavien maanmittaustoimitusten sekä niiden yhteyssä ehkä tarpeellisiksi osoittauvien piirirajankäyntien käsittelemistä varten pidetään seuraat kokoukset, jotka pidetään eremän kunnan

Kunnantalolla
tiistaina, syyskuun 18 päivänä 1956:

1) Halkominen Pesukankaan tila RN:o 6¹², Nissilän kylää, kel- 11.15;
2) Halkomiset Paavolan tilalla N:o 5⁴, Salahmin kylää, ja Paalan tilalla RN:o 47, Salahminuivion kylää, kello 12.00;
3) Halkomiset Purolan tilalla N:o 3⁹, Salahmin kylää, Puronluhdan RN:o 37 ja Purolanityn RN:o 36 tiloilla, molemat tilat Salahminkuivion kylää, llo 13.30;
4) Juho Heikki Cederbergin tkämäen tilasta RN:o 2⁸, Viemän kylässä, ostaman määrän lohkomista varten kello 14,30 kä
5) Hugo Nissisen Kilpolan tista RN:o 12⁸, Vieremän kylässä, taman määräalan lohkomista rten kello 15.00.

Näihin tilaisuuksiin kutsutaan saapumaan kaikki asianosaiset ja rajanaapurit ja kehoitetaan heitä ottamaan mukaansa selvitykset omistusoikeudestaan ja hallussaan olevat, toimitusten alaisia tiluksia koskevat kartat ja asiakirjat sekä kutsumaan toimituksiin kaksi kunnallisvaltuuston maanmittaustoimituksia varten valitsemaa uskottua miestä tai lohkomisessa heidän sijastaan kaksi esteetöntä todistajaa.

Samalla huomautetaan, että jos toimituksen hakija jää pois alkukokouksesta eikä kukaan muu vaadi toimitukseen ryhtymistä, toimitus katsotaan rauenneeksi, mutta muutoin ei asianosaisen poissaolo estä toimituksen suorittamista.

Siilinjärvi, 1 päivänä syyskuuta 1956.

Maanmittausinsinööri
J. AIRAKSINEN.

N:liiton selonteko

RUOTSIN ULKOMINISTERIÖLLE.

TUKHOLMA, 1. 9. (STT)

Neuvostoliitto antoi perjantaina ulkoministeriön pyytämän selonteon elokuun 29 päivänä sattuneesta tapauksesta, jolloin

---

SEKALAISIA I

Iisalmi—I LINJA-AUTON
alkaen 29

M. Ti. K. To. P. L. S.
Lähtö
19.30 0.15
20.00 0.45
20.15 1.00
Tulo
Yhteys Iisalmessa klo 17.05 Kuopi teen autossa, paitsi lauantai- ja s ta klo 22.05 lähtevässä Pohjolan I

(Tallettakaa)

Perunannostoaika lähestyy
Meiltä saatte tarkoitukseen sopivia lujia pärevasuja halvalla.

YLÄ-SAVON KALUSTE OY
Iisalmi — Pohjolank. 1.
Puh. 1572.

PALVELUKSEE

Miellyttävä

Jos olette 20—40-vuotias talou pystytte itsenäiseen työhön ja olet tai emäntäkoulun, on Teillä tilais hoitajana perheessä, jossa on 4 ai lämmitys. Miellyttävät työskentely

Vast. os. Rouva Hanna Vainio

OSOITEILM

Huonekalut, konttori-

ym. puualan tuotteet löydätte keestä kilpailukykyisiin hint

YLÄ-SAVON

Iisalmi — Pohjola

---

ukumäärä on 110, vuonna 1881 majuri Lee Higginson. Suurena n ihailijana tämä pankheen jäsen ryhtyi säästöan rakentamaan orkesonka taso olisi tuon ajan ten keskieurooppalaisten ien veroinen. Hän keräon Saksan ja Itävallan käytettävissä olevia koja, palkkasi nuoren syntyisen Georg Hensctä johtamaan ja niin ostonin sinfoniaorkesteinta. Muita orkesterin sen alkutaipaleilla olicke, Nikisch ja Karl alkki korkeisiin tavoitkkimiemäinen maailmansota anaan muutoksen orkeskoonpanoon. Sen soittakansainvälisemmäksi,

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Hämeen St.
Pvm 2 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

TAIDETTA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkesteriden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdosa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan, ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti »kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa». Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maitten musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimuusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

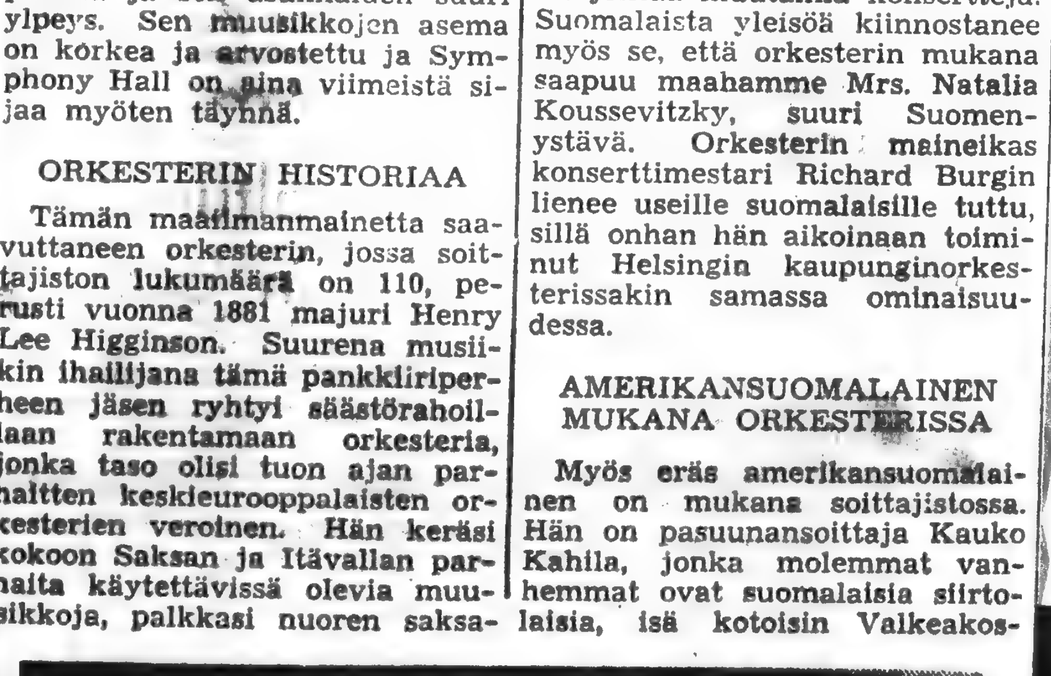
Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalia Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.



Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

---

men suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv.
vitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles llussan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikika tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciskossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphoni Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110 ,perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa.

nut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzskyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harward-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksissa kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostolitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteuk, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalia Koussevitzky, suuri Suomenystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

[112]

OKRAATTI Sept. 2. '56

56 — N:o 217 — 9

ja hänen

OMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Iisalmen Sl.
Pvm 2 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

KUULUTUKSIA

KUULUTUS.

Allamainittujen Vieremän nnassa suoritettavien maanmittaustoimitusten sekä niiden yhteydessä ehkä tarpeellisiksi osoittautuvien piirirajankäyntien käsittelemistä varten pidetään seuraavat kokoukset, jotka pidetään Vieremän kunnan

Kunnantalolla
tiistaina, syyskuun 18 päivänä 1956:

1) Halkominen Pesukankaan tilalla RN:o 6^{12}, Nissilän kylää, kello 11.15;

2) Halkomiset Paavolan tilalla RN:o 5^{4}, Salahmin kylää, ja Paavolan tilalla RN:o 47, Salahminkuivion kylää, kello 12.00;

3) Halkomiset Purolan tilalla RN:o 3^{9}, Salahmin kylää, Puronluhdan RN:o 37 ja Purolanityn RN:o 36 tiloilla, molemmat tilat Salahminkuivion kylää, kello 13.30;

4) Juho Heikki Cederbergin tkämäen tilasta RN:o 2^{8}, Vieremän kylässä, ostaman määräalan lohkomista varten kello 14.30 kä

5) Hugo Nissisen Kilpolan tilasta RN:o 12^{8}, Vieremän kylässä, ostaman määräalan lohkomista varten kello 15.00.

Näihin tilaisuuksiin kutsutaan saapumaan kaikki asianosaiset ja rajanaapurit ja kehoitetaan heitä ottamaan mukaansa selvitykset omistusoikeudestaan ja hallussaan olevat, toimitusten alaisia tiluksia koskevat kartat ja asiakirjat sekä kutsumaan toimituksiin kaksi kunnallisvaltuuston maanmittaustoimituksia varten valitsemaa uskottua miestä tai lohkomisessa heidän sijastaan kaksi esteetöntä todistajaa.

Samalla huomautetaan, että jos toimituksen hakija jää pois alkukokouksesta eikä kukaan muu vaadi toimitukseen ryhtymistä, toimitus katsotaan rauenneeksi, mutta muutoin ei asianosaisen poissaolo estä toimituksen suorittamista.

Siilinjärvi, 1 päivänä syyskuuta 1956.

Maanmittausinsinööri
J. AIRAKSINEN.

SEKALAISIA

Iisalmi—

LINJA-AUTON

alkaen 29

M. Ti. K. To. P. L. S.
Lähtö
19.30
20.00
20.15
Tulo

Yhteys Iisalmessa klo 17.05 Kuopi teen autossa, paitsi lauantai- ja s ta klo 22.05 lähtevässä Pohjolan

(Tallettakaa)

MYYTÄVÄNÄ

Perunannostoaika lähestyy

Meiltä saatte tarkoitukseen sopivia lujia pärevasuja halvalla.

YLÄ-SAVON KALUSTE OY
Iisalmi — Pohjolank. 1.
Puh. 1572.

PALVELUKSEE

Miellyttävä

Jos olette 20—40-vuotias talou pystytte itsenäiseen työhön ja olet tai emäntäkoulun, on Teillä tilais hoitajana perheessä, jossa on 4 ai lämmitys. Miellyttävät työskentely

Vast. os. Rouva Hanna Vainio

OSOITEILM

Huonekalut, konttori-

ym. puualan tuotteet löydätte keestä kilpailukykyisiin hinto

YLÄ-SAVON K

Iisalmi — Pohjola

N:liiton selonteko

RUOTSIN ULKOMINISTERIÖLLE.

TUKHOLMA, 1. 9. (STT)

Neuvostoliitto antoi perjantaina ulkoministeriön pyytämän selonteon elokuun 29 päivänä sattuneesta tapauksesta, jolloin

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Hämeen St.
Pvm 2 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

TAIDETTA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkesteriden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä

---

ukumäärä on 110, vuonna 1881 majuri Lee Higginson. Suurena ihailijana tämä pankeen jäsen ryhtyi säästöan rakentamaan orkesonka taso olisi tuon ajan ien keskieurooppalaisten ien veroinen. Hän keräon Saksan ja Itävallan käytettävissä olevia koja, palkkasi nuoren syntyisen Georg Hensctä johtamaan ja niin ostonin sinfoniaorkesteinta. Muita orkesterin sen alkutaipaleilla olicke, Nikisch ja Karl alkki korkeisiin tavoittähtääviä musiikkimie-mäinen maailmansota naan muutoksen orkeskoonpanoon. Sen soitta- kansainvälisemmäksi.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Kajala
Pvm 2 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciskossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphoni Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110 ,perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti »kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa». Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistossa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzskyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops» viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harwardyliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksissa kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostolitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteuk, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalia Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Ylä-Vuoksi
Pvm 2 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu Suomeen

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkesteriden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionooppeaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä mainekkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti »kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa.» Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia nimiä. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtaja oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Hels. San.
Pvm 2 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfonikot avaavat konserttikauden

Paitsi että syyskonserttikausi tänä vuonna alkaa tavallista aikaisemmin — mikä ilmojen puolesta lienee aivan paikallaankin — on sen avauksena todellinen suurtapahtuma: Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti Messuhallissa tiistaina syysk. 4 pnä klo 20.

Tämän, alallaan maailman parhaimpiin lukeutuvan orkesterin johtaja on kuuluisa ranskalainen kapellimestari Charles Munch, jonka loistelias ura ensin Pariisissa ja sitten Yhdysvalloissa on tunnettu.

Orkesterin korkean kansainvälisen tason ohella on myös sen 110 henkilöä käsittävä jäsenistö varsin kansainvälinen kokoonpanoltaan. Paitsi syntyperäisiä amerikkalaisia on mukana syntyperältään ranskalaisia, venäläisiä, saksalaisia, hollantilaisia, tanskalaisia, itävaltalaisia, tshekkoslovakialaisia, italialaisia, unkarilaisia, romanialaisia, bulgarialaisia ja egyptiläisiä. Onpa mukana suomalainenkin nimi, pasunisti Kauko Kahila.

Orkesteri saapuu Helsinkiin lentoteitse Tukholmasta konserttipäivän aamuna, ja konsertin jälkeisenä päivänä matka jatkuu edelleen Leningradiin, jossa on kaksi konserttia, ja sieltä Moskovaan. Messuhallin konsertti on niinollen orkesterin ainoa esiintyminen maassamme. Ohjelma käsittää Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, Pistonin sinfonian n:o 6, joka on sävelletty Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin parakaa vietettävän 75-vuotisjuhlavuoden kunniaksi, sekä musiikkia Ravelin baletista Daphnis ja Chloë, sarja n:o 2 (Päivän koitto, Pantomiimi ja Tanssi).

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Vasabladet
Pvm 2 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester besöker Finland

Möte mellan bostonorkesterns tre stora dirigenter, f. v. Pierre Monteux som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitski, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

Bostons symfoniorkester, en av de största i USA, befinner sig för närvarande på en jubileumsturné i Europa. Till turnéprogrammet hör också en konsert i Helsingfors, och i samband härmed kan vi återge en del uppgifter om den märkliga orkestern

Det är i år alltså 75 år sedan Bostons symfoniorkester grundades. Jubilaren har hyllats, men själv har orkestern firat sitt jubileum på det ovanliga sättet att den i sin tur delat ut gåvor till den musikintresserade världen. Under senaste säsongen presenterades 15 nya verk av internationellt kända kompositörer, och nu ges alltså konserter i en rad av europeiska länder, bl. a. i Sovjetunionen som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

Att presentera nya verk har länge varit tradition hos bostonorkestern. Under orkesterns tidigare år spelade sådana orkesterledare som Henschel, Nikisch och Gericke en viktig roll för att göra Johannes Brahms förstådd i USA vid en tid då kritiker på bägge sidor av Atlanten anklagade Brahms för att vara otillgänglig. Längre fram var det Pierre Monteux' tur att under sin tid som ledare för orkestern från 1919 till 1924 introducera Igor Stravinski. Den världsberömde dirigenten Sergej Koussevitski, som avled 1951 ledde orkestern från 1924 till 1949. Han sökte outtröttligt efter nya begåvningar och var en av de första att erkänna och introducera Aaron Coplands och Bela Bartoks musik — för att bara nämna ett par namn. Även Sibelius stod högt på hans lista.

SYMFONINS BETYDELSE I USA.

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. I Förenta staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfonins ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester, men bara Newyork, Chicago och San Francisko har fasta operasällskap.

BOSTONSÄSONG MED 220 KONSERTER

Nu räknas Bostons och Filadelfias symfoniorkestrar och Newyorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Under Sergej Koussevitskis kvartssekellånga ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitski efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren Charles Münch som också leder europaturnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter.

Under Koussevitskis tid grundade symfoniorkestern en unik musikskola, Berkshire music center på egendomen Tanglewood i Massachusetts, där man varje sommar undervisar i komposition, orkester- och kammarmusik, körsång och opera. Chef för skolan är nu Charles Münch, och som lärare fungerar kända kompositörer och musiker från både USA och andra länder. Tanglewood är bostonorkesterns huvudsakliga arbetsplats på sommaren, och orkestern ger livligt uppskattade friluftskonserter under den musikfestival som avslutar kurserna vid Berkshire music center.

Den vanliga vintersäsongen om 30 veckor tar slut i april, varefter de populära konserterna börjar under ledning av Arthur Fiedler, varje kväll i maj—juni. Fiedler dirigerar också friluftskonserterna vid Charles river.

Symfoniorkestern är Bostons stolthet, och dess verksamhet omfattas med livligt intresse, inte minst av de tusentals studerande vid Harvard universitetet och Massachusetts institute of technology i det närbelägna Cambridge. För att ge ungdomarna tillfälle till att utan stora kostnader följa orkesterns repertoar ger den offentliga repetitioner. Den stora konsertsalen är alltid fullsatt, och att dirigenten ibland slår av och tar om några avsnitt är bara intressant och ökar musikkunnandet, tycker besökarna.

HUFVUDSTADSBLADET

Drottningen och Sibelius vid strålande festival

Tre av huvudrollinnehavarna i Wood". I bakgrunden Donald William Spuire som Captain To Polly G

Boston Symphony Orchestra inledde sin europeiska turné med en strålande konsert i Usher Hall. Den kom, spelade och segrade. Ja, en skotsk tidning skriver att man aldrig har hört en orkester av en så hög kvalitet i Edinburgh. Det är ett fulländat spel med praktfulla stråkar och Charles Munch som en hypnotiserande dirigent. Man förstår så väl att han betraktar sin ställning som musikdirektör och dirigent som "ett heligt kall" som han själv uttryckt det. Programmet upptog bland annat Haydns symfoni nr 102, Strauss symfoniska poem "Don Juan" och Walter Pistons symfoni nr 6. Den sistnämnda var av speciellt intresse då det var första gången den spelades i Europa och även för att den komponerats med anledning av Boston Symphony Orchestras 75-årsjubileum. I går kom turen till den berömde veteranen Pierre Monteux som med majestätiskt lugn och ett minimum av rörelser dirigerade Schubert, Bartok och Paul Crestons symfoni nr 2. En intressant komposition med originella klangeffekter och rik orkestrering.

Vid en pressmottagning berättade Madame Olga Koussevitzky — änka efter den berömda dirigenten — att Boston Symphony Orchestra hade bett Sibelius skriva en symfoni — nr 8 — till orkesterns 50-årsjubileum, men tyvärr hade han varit tvungen att avböja. The Koussevitzky Music Foundation som upprättades 1942 har senare beställt verk av många berömda kompontister såsom Bartok, Hindemith, Honegger, Strawinsky, Schönberg, Milhaud, Villa-Lobos, Britten, Piston m. fl.

Mer än en kvarts miljon resenärer besöker Edinburgh under festivalen. Staden är så fullpackad med folk att den nästan spricker i sömmarna. Man står i kö överallt: i butiker, restauranger, konsertluckor och på busshållplatser. Men allt tas med gott humör ty här finns så mycket att glädja sig åt.

Den nya festivaldirektören Robert Ponsonby är bara 30 år men han är minst 6 fot lång, så han har en god överblick över situationen och håller med beundransvärt lugn de många trådarna i sin hand. Han får emellertid dela äran med Mr. Graham Cowie som Hufvudstadsbladets korrespondent i fjol beskrev som "en ängel med mustasch". Han presiderar fortfarande i The Festival Press Club där han med änglatålamod och otrolig effektivitet bistår journalister från hela världen.

Edinburgh, 1 augusti.

Fanny Aavatsmark MacTaggart

OMEN KULTTUURIRA
LEIKELMÄPALVE
Unis
Uusi Aika
2 9 19 56

Bostonin

Bostonin maineikas syyskuun 4. pnä, on A reista ehkä kuuluisin.
pan-kiertueella juhliva
Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut filharmoonikot ovat "kol rikkalaisten sinfoniaorkest
orkesterille, jonka konser
serttikauden Helsingissä, omaista uusien musiikkiteo

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhd saavuttama asema ja ovat ainutlaatuiset.
hän lienee se, ettei siellä o

nin sinfoniaorkesterin k Monteux, joka johti o sevitzky, sen kuuluisa jo johtaja Charles Münch.
tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1

oskaan lyönyt itseään s voin "läpi" kuin Eur sa musiikkikeskuksissa — mme vain Wienin va
raa, Lontoon Covent G Pariisin suurta oopper on Scalaa — joissa oop on kieltämättä sinfoni tärkeämpi. Amerikass kaisessa yli 50.000 asu ngissa sinfoniaorkester suurten kaupunkien soittajiston luku on yl oopperaseurueita on ain New Yorkissa, Chic San Franciscossa.
onissa, tuossa Ame

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Uusi Aika
Pvm 2 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1942, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleella olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin [illegible] herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajakorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesssitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistossa oli suuri ja mm Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajana toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konserteissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jo a maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica, Piston: Sinfonia 6, Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Uusi Suomi
Pvm 2 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

vaavat

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

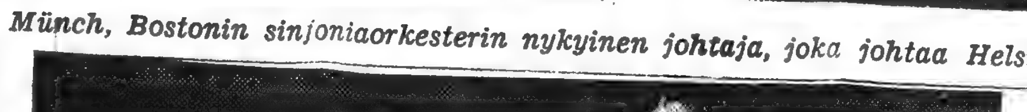
tomiimi ja Tanssi).

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Etelä-Saimaa
Pvm 3 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

johtaja, joka

esteri



Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. — Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Sergei Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica, Piston: Sinfonia 6, Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

[114]

EN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
KELMÄPALVELU
Usis
Uusi Aika
9 19 56

Ahlaisten laaja pitäjä, joka
taan on osittain hyvinkin ka
taa vieraspaikkakuntalaisesta
pilliseltä maaseutupitäjältä.
nahkiaismertoineen saa täm
täydellisemmäksi. Mutta Ahl
man perehdyttyään ja sen
kusteltuaan pääsee pikimmä
ville kuntalaisten pulmista.
omainen piirre. Työtä — mu ei paikkakunnalla juuri saa.
meksikään. Työttömyys on j
ihme, jos nuoremmat muutt
kaupunkiin. Pitäjän asukkai
60 % on pelkästään palkkat
on vielä suuri joukko kalast
Siitä huolimatta oikeistopuol
tuustossa tällä hetkellä yhd
tö. Miksi? Sosialidemokraatt
täystyöllisyyden ylläpitämine
parantaminen ja molemmissa
nassa on valtavasti korjaami

Ulkoapäin idyllinen Ahlaisten kunnallis suorittamaan täyskorjaus, jolloin sinn mit

LePaKot—Kimmo

tänään klo 15 pallokentällä.

Porilaisyleisöllä on mainio tilaisuus tänään seurata Lentopalloliiton kahden parasta kuntoa osoittaneen joukkueen välienselvittelyä. Lahtelaisjoukkue Kimmo saapuu silloin Poriin vakaassa aikomuksessa voittaa porilaisen "nuijamiesjoukkueen" LePaKot heidän kotikentällään ja viedä mestaruusmitalit Lahteen. Kolme kertaa on se ollut hopealla häviten nipin napin JoPe:lle, joka tällä erää on jo pois laskuista. Kimmon joukkuetta johtaa edelleen maaottelupelaaja "Jussi" Aaltonen. Hänen lisäkseen joukkueessa nähdään maajoukkuekatsastuksissa mukana olleet hirmualoittaja "Tane" Lahti ja Huotari. Mutta huolella on myös kotijoukkue valmistautunut tähän lujaan taidonnäyttelyyn. LePaKoilla on myös kaikki mahdollisuudet mestaruu-

eikkaa ja V

kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajana toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestä-

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Uusi Suomi
Pvm 2/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoonikot avaavat konserttikauden

Paitsi että syyskonserttikausi tänä vuonna alkaa tavallista aikaisemmin — mikä ilmojen puolesta lienee aivan paikallaankin — on sen avauksena todellinen suurtapahtuma: Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti Messuhallissa tiistaina, syysk. 4. pnä klo 20.

Tämän, alallaan maailman parhaimpiin lukeutuvan orkesterin johtaja on kuuluisa ranskalainen kapellimestari Charles Munch, jonka loistelias ura ensin Pariisissa ja sitten Yhdysvalloissa on tunnettu.

Orkesterin korkean kansainvälisen tason ohella on myös sen 110 henkilön jäsenistö varsin kansainvälinen kokoonpanoltaan. Paitsi syntyperäisiä amerikkalaisia on mukana syntyperältään ranskalaisia, venäläisiä, saksalaisia, hollantilaisia, tanskalaisia, itävaltalaisia, tshekkoslovakialaisia, italialaisia, unkarilaisia, romanialaisia, bulgarialaisia ja egyptiläisiä. Onpa mukana suomalainenkin nimi, pasunisti Kauko Kahila.

Orkesteri saapuu Helsinkiin lentoteitse Tukholmasta konserttipäivän aamuna, ja konsertin jälkeisenä päivänä matka jatkuu edelleen Leningradiin, jossa on kaksi konserttia, ja sieltä Moskovaan. Messuhallin konsertti on niinollen orkesterin ainoa esiintyminen maassamme. Ohjelma sisältää Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, Pistonin sinfonian n:o 6, joka on sävelletty Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin paraikaa vietettävän 75-vuotisjuhlavuoden kunniaksi, sekä musiikkia Ravelin baletista Daphnis ja Chloë, sarja n:o 2 (Päivän koitto, Pantomiimi ja Tanssi).

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Etelä-Saimaa
Pvm 3/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainoalaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50 000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymät ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica, Piston: Sinfonia 6, Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Vapaa Sana
Pvm 3/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN SINFOONIKOT AVAAVAT KONSERTTIKAUDEN

Paitsi että syyskonserttikausi tänä vuonna alkaa tavallista aikaisemmin — mikä ilmojen puolesta lienee aivan paikallaankin — on sen avauksena todellinen suurtapahtuma: BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERIN konsertti Messuhallissa tiistaina syysk. 4 pnä klo 20.

Tämän, alallaan maailman parhaimpiin lukeutuvan orkesterin johtaja on kuuluisa ranskalainen kapellimestari Charles

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. — Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Sergei Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

tomiimi ja Tanssi).

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan.

[114]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Uusi Aika
Pvm 2 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin

Bostonin maineikas s syyskuun 4. pnä, on Am reista ehkä kuuluisin. T
pan-kiertueella juhliva
Sibelius-viikolla vieraillu filharmoonikot ovat "koı rikkalaisten sinfoniaorkes
orkesterille, jonka konser
serttikauden Helsingissä,
omaista uusien musiikkite

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yh issa saavuttama asema ja lta ovat ainutlaatuiset.
hän lienee se, ettei siellä o

Ahlaisten laaja pitäjä, jok
taan on osittain hyvinkin ka
taa vieraspaikkakuntalaisesta
pilliseltä maaseutupitäjältä.
nahkiaismertoineen saa täm
täydellisemmäksi. Mutta Ahl
man perehdyttyään ja sen
kusteltuaan pääsee pikimmä
ville kuntalaisten pulmista.
omainen piirre. Työtä — mu
ei paikkakunnalla juuri saa.
meksikään. Työttömyys on j
ihme, jos nuoremmat muutt
kaupunkiin. Pitäjän asukkai
60 % on pelkästään palkkat
on vielä suuri joukko kalast
Siitä huolimatta oikeistopuol
tuustossa tällä hetkellä yhd
tö. Miksi? Sosialidemokraatt
täystyöllisyyden ylläpitämine
parantaminen ja molemmissa
nassa on valtavasti korjaami

Ulkoapdin idyllinen Ahlaisten kunnallis suorittamaan täyskorjaus, jolloin sinn
mit

LePaKot—Kimmo

tänään klo 15 pallokentällä.

Porilaisyleisöllä on mainio tilaisuus tänään seurata Lentopalloliiton kahden parasta kuntoa osoittaneen joukkueen välienselvittelyä. Lahtelaisjoukkue Kimmo saapuu silloin Poriin vakaassa aikomuksessa voittaa porilaisen "nuijamiesjoukkueen" LePaKot heidän kotikentällään ja viedä mestaruusmitalit Lahteen. Kolme kertaa on se ollut hopealla häviten nipin napin JoPe:lle, joka tällä erää on jo pois laskuista. Kimmon joukkuetta johtaa edelleen maaottelupelaaja "Jussi" Aaltonen. Hänen lisäkseen joukkueessa nähdään maajoukkuekatsastuksissa mukana olleet hirmualoittaja "Tane" Lahti ja Huotari. Mutta huolella on myös kotijoukkue valmistautunut tähän lujaan taidonnäyttelyyn. LePaKoilla on myös kaikki mahdollisuudet mestaruu-

---

eikkaa ja V

kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajana toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestä-

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Uusi Suomi
Pvm 2 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoonikot avaavat konserttikauden

Paitsi että syyskonserttikausi tänä vuonna alkaa tavallista aikaisemmin — mikä ilmojen puolesta lienee aivan paikallaankin — on sen avauksena todellinen suurtapahtuma: Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti Messuhallissa tiistaina, syysk. 4. pnä klo 20.

Tämän, alallaan maailman parhaimpiin lukeutuvan orkesterin johtaja on kuuluisa ranskalainen kapellimestari Charles Munch, jonka loistelias ura ensin Pariisissa ja sitten Yhdysvalloissa on tunnettu.

Orkesterin korkean kansainvälisen tason ohella on myös sen 110 henkilön jäsenistö varsin kansainvälinen kokoonpanoltaan. Paitsi syntyperäisiä amerikkalaisia on mukana syntyperältään ranskalaisia, venäläisiä, saksalaisia, hollantilaisia, tanskalaisia, itävaltalaisia, tshekkoslovakialaisia, italialaisia, unkarilaisia, romanialaisia, bulgarialaisia ja egyptiläisiä. Onpa mukana suomalainenkin nimi, pasunisti Kauko Kahila.

Orkesteri saapuu Helsinkiin lentoteitse Tukholmasta konserttipäivän aamuna, ja konsertin jälkeisenä päivänä matka jatkuu edelleen Leningradiin, jossa on kaksi konserttia, ja sieltä Moskovaan. Messuhallin konsertti on niinollen orkesterin ainoa esiintyminen maassamme. Ohjelma sisältää Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, Pistonin sinfonian n:o 6, joka on sävelletty Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin paraikaa vietettävän 75-vuotisjuhlavuoden kunniaksi, sekä musiikkia Ravelin baletista Daphnis ja Chloë, sarja n:o 2 (Päivän koitto, Pantomiimi ja Tanssi).

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Vapaa Sana
Pvm 3 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN SINFOONIKOT AVAAVAT KONSERTTIKAUDEN

Paitsi että syyskonserttikausi tänä vuonna alkaa tavallista aikaisemmin — mikä ilmojen puolesta lienee aivan paikallaankin — on sen avauksena todellinen suurtapahtuma: BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERIN konsertti Messuhallissa tiistaina syysk. 4 pnä klo 20.

Tämän, alallaan maailman parhaimpiin lukeutuvan orkesterin johtaja on kuuluisa ranskalainen kapellimestari Charles Munch, jonka loistelias ura ensin Pariisissa ja sitten Yhdysvalloissa on tunnettu.

Orkesterin korkean kansainvälisen tason ohella on myös sen 110 henkilöä käsittävä jäsenistö varsin kansainvälinen kokoonpanoltaan. Paitsi syntyperäisamerikkalaisia on mukana syntyperältään ranskalaisia, venäläisiä, saksalaisia, hollantilaisia, tanskalaisia, itävaltalaisia, tshekkoslovakialaisia, italialaisia, unkarilaisia, romanialaisia, bulgarialaisia ja egyptiläisiä. Onpa mukana suomalainenkin nimi, pasunisti Kauko Kahila.

Orkesteri saapuu Helsinkiin lentoteitse Tukholmasta konserttipäivän aamuna, ja konsertin jälkeisenä päivänä matka jatkuu edelleen Leningradiin, jossa on kaksi konserttia, ja sieltä Moskovaan. Messuhallin konsertti on niinollen orkesterin ainoa esiintyminen maassamme. Ohjelma käsittää Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, Pistonin sinfonian n:o 6, joka on sävelletty Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin paraikaa vietettävän 75-vuotisjuhlavuoden kunniaksi, sekä musiikkia Ravelin baletista Daphnis ja Chloë, sarja n:o 2 (Päivän koitto, Pantomiimi ja Tanssi).

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan.

---

neekö korpun poisjääminen kah-öydästämme vaikuttanut se, et»kastamista» pidetään sopimat-nana — kuiva korppuhan vaa-aina välillä kostutusta — vai mistusvaikeudetko ovat olleet eenä, sillä murea korppu aivan tamattoman käsissä ei niin vain nykään.
Hyvän korpun tärkeimpiä omiisuuksia on mureus, joka taas ein riippuu jauhoista. Yleensä rkeat jauhot ovat sopivimpia hän tarkoitukseen. Rasvamäästä ja laadusta riippuu myöskin rpun n on h utta j uan a ita. T rkeintä on h ntavie lleita nneita easti h e ehdi ä leiv ävällä v inta pa islämp

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Etelä-Saimaa
Pvm 3 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainoalaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50 000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymät ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica, Piston: Sinfonia 6, Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

REDUCTION

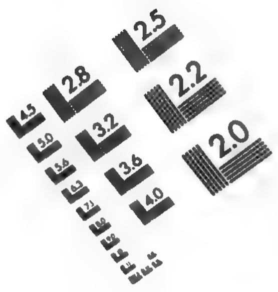
RATIO

17x

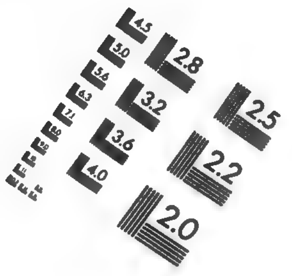
2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

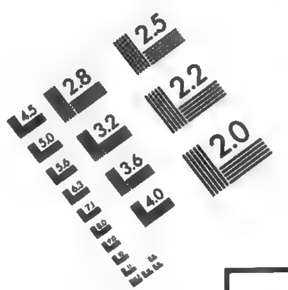


2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6

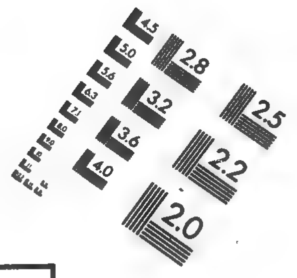


2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0
4.5
5.0
5.6

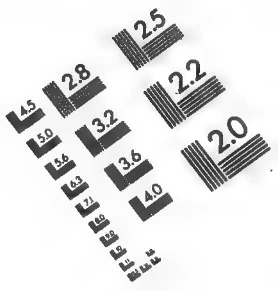
PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



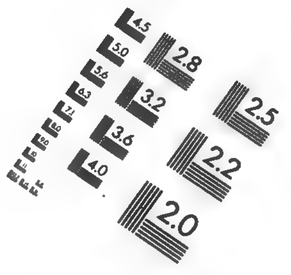
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6



2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0
4.5
5.0
5.6



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6

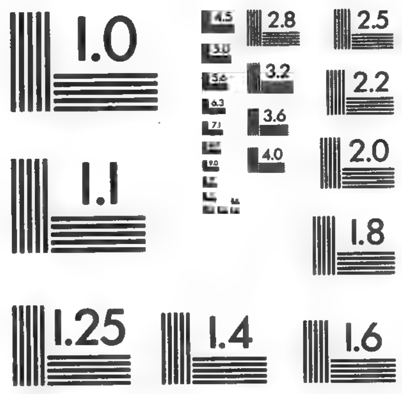


2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0
4.5
5.0
5.6

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
4.5
2.8
2.5
5.0
3.2
2.2
5.6
3.6
4.0
2.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

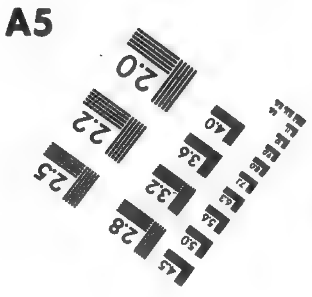
1.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

A5

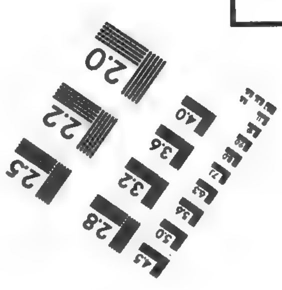


2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
5.6
5.0
4.5

4.0
2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5
5.6
5.0
4.5

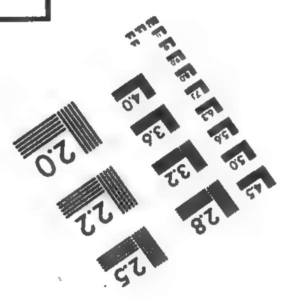
A4

A3



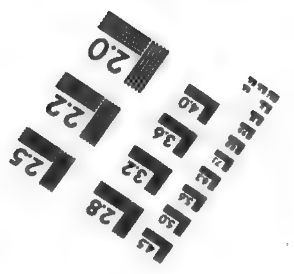
2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
5.6
5.0
4.5

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

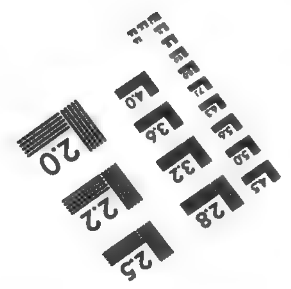


4.0
2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5
5.6
5.0
4.5

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
5.6
5.0
4.5



4.0
2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5
5.6
5.0
4.5

4.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Savo
Pvm 3 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

CHARLES MÜNCH, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfonia-orkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sipelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50 000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higinson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä mainehikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Perkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloe II.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Keskipohjanmaa
Pvm 3 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso oli tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—24, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—49, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Nünch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusetsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphny Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

SUOMEN KULTTUURI
LEIKELMÄPAL

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Karjalan Maa
Pvm 3 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ko l nen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, jok a kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja nyt hallussaan orkesterin tah t ja johtaa Hel

---

historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Sharles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Konsertissaan A-messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

---

na päivänä matka leen Leningradiin, jossa on konserttia, ja sieltä Mosk Messuhallin konsertti on ni orkesterin ainoa esiinty maassamme. Ohjelma k
Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian
tonin sinfonian N:o 6, joka velletty Bostonin sinfoniaor rin paraikaa vietettävän 75-v juhlavuoden kunniaksi, sekä siikkia Ravelin baletista Da ja Chloe, sarja N:o 2 (päivän to, Pantomiimi ja Tanssi).
Tasavallan presidentti ja r Kekkonen kunnioittavat konse läsnäolollaan.

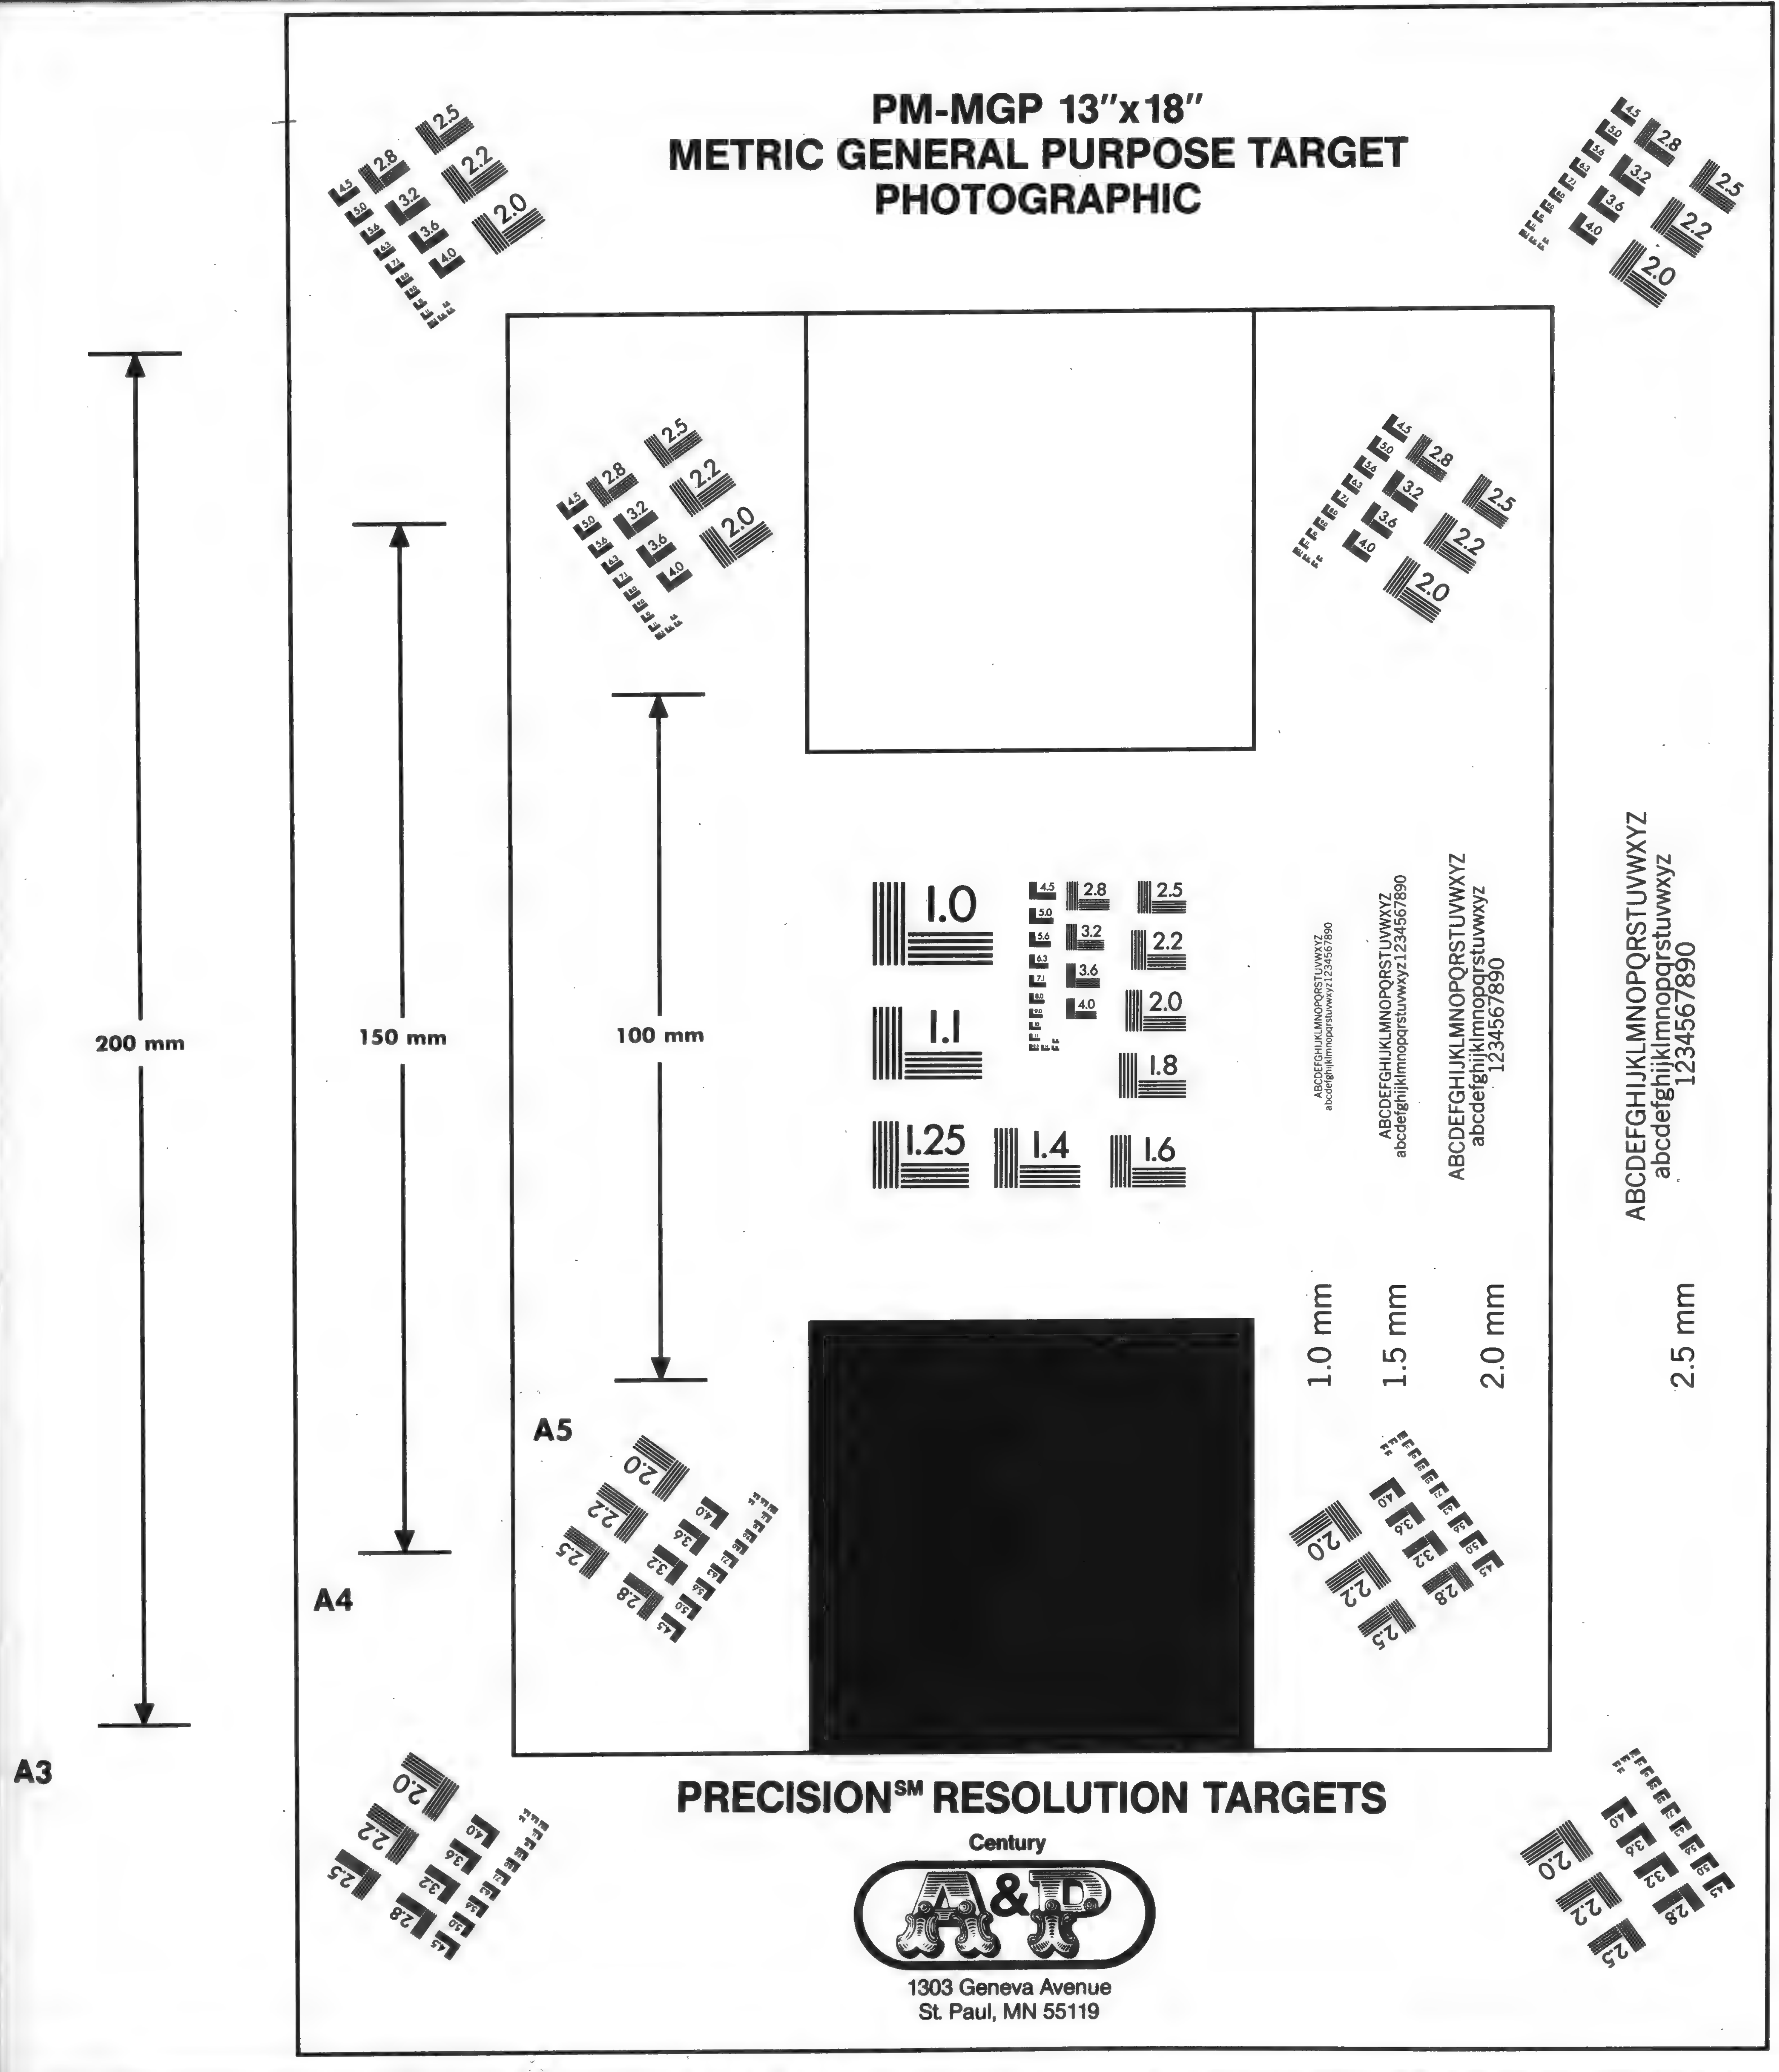
REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
5.0
3.2
2.0
5.6
3.6
6.3
4.0
7.1
8.0
200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm
A5
A4
A3

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Savo
Pvm 3/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

CHARLES MÜNCH, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfonia-orkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomais-

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Keskipohjanmaa
Pvm 3/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionooppeaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso oli tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch

On tämän keskuksen joh ra ... ma oli tänä vuo
Co...d.

220 konserttia vuo

B...onin sinfoniaorke

Bostonin sinfoniaorkeste
Pierre Monteux, joka joh vitzky, sen kuuluisa joh taja Charles Nünch, jok vuodesta 19

SUOMEN KULTTUURI
LEIKELMÄPAL

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Karjalan Maa
Pvm 3/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ko
nen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, jok
kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaj nyt hallussaan orkesterin tah ja johtaa He

ten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higinson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä mainehikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Perkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkesterissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloe II.

---

historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Sharles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Konsertissaan A-messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

---

na päivänä matka jatkuu leen Leningradiin, josta on konserttia, ja sieltä Mosko Messuhallin konsertti on niin
orkesterin ainoa esiintym
maassamme. Ohjelma käsi
Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian,
tonin sinfonian N:o 6, joka on velletty Bostonin sinfoniaorke
rin paraikaa vietettävän 75-vuo
juhlavuoden kunniaksi, sekä
siikkia Ravelin baletista Daph
ja Chloe, sarja N:o 2 (päivän k
to, Pantomiimi ja Tanssi).

Tasavallan presidentti ja ro
Kekkonen kunnioittavat konser
läsnäolollaan.

[115]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Keskipohjanmaa
Pvm 3/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIR
LEIKELMÄPALV

EN KUL
IKELM
Ilris
Björn
9 aja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso oli tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—24, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—49, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Nünch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusetsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphny Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

---

na päivänä ma
leen Leningradiin, jos konserttia, ja sieltä Moskov Messuhallin konsertti on niinc
orkesterin ainoa esiintym
maassamme. Ohjelma käsi
Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian,
tonin sinfonian N:o 6, joka on
velletty Bostonin sinfoniaorke
rin paraikaa vietettävän 75-vuo
juhlavuoden kunniaksi, sekä
siikkia Ravelin baletista Daph
ja Chloe, sarja N:o 2 (päivän k
to, Pantomiimi ja Tanssi).
Tasavallan presidentti ja rou
Kekkonen kunnioittavat konser
läsnäolollaan.

---

merikkalaisten sinfokestereiden joukossa.
nomaan Bostonin or-rille, jonka konsertti valla tavalla avaa sykonserttikauden Helsin-on kautta sen histo-ollut luonteenomaista n musiikkiteosten esit-
en.

aorkestereiden Yhdyssaavuttama asema ja ar-ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syy-n lienee se, ettei siellä ole koskaan lyönyt itmalla tavoin "läpi" kuin
suurissa musiikkikes— ajatelkaamme vain
valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Gardenia, Pariisin suurta tai Milanon Scalaa — opperan asema on kieltänfoniamusiikkia tärkeämikassa taas on jokaisessa 00 asukkaan kaupungissa rkesteri, ja useitten suurpunkien orkesterien soit-luku on yli 100. Pysyviä eurueita on sensijaan w Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja nciscossa issa, tuossa Amerikan in kehdossa, on sinfoniaelimellinen osa kaupunsen asukkaiden suuri yln muusikkojen asema on ja arvostettu ja Sympho-l on aina viimeistä sijaa täynnä.
än maailmanmainetta saa-een orkesterin, jossa soit-n lukumäärä on 110, pe-vuonna 1881 majuri Hen-e Higinson. Suurena mu-ihailijana tämä pankkiieen jäsen ryhtyi säästö-aan rakentamaan orkestenka taso olisi tuon ajan tten keskieurooppalaisten erien veroinen. Hän keokoon Saksan ja Itävallan ta käytettävissä olevia kkoja, palkkasi nuoren aissyntyisen Georg Henheitä johtamaan ja niin
Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteiminta. Muita orkesterin la sen alkutaipaleilla oli-Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl kaikki korkeisiin tavoittähtääviä musiikkimie-mäinen maailmansota toi an muutoksen orkesterin panoon. Sen soittajisto tuninvälisemmäksi, ja johtaorkesterin uusi johtokunta

1918 nimitti Henri Ra-Pariisista ja sitä seuraa-vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, lläkin 75-vuotisen toimin-ulakiertueella johtaa muukonsertteja. Myös ohjelmonipuolistui Pierre Mon-johtajakautena ja hän loi rin uudeksi ja entistä mai-ammaksi. Richard Burgin, rin konserttimestari, oli onteux'n suuria löytöjä.
na 1924 astui johtajankole Serge Koussevitzky py-aikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen johtajakautenaan orkes-avutti suunnattoman arvoa monien erinomaisten kil-den joukossa. Koussejohdolla orkesteri muoerääksi maailman täydellitä ja esteettisesti herkim-sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä dittiin orkesteriksi, joka
"kauneinta musiikkia maa-
". Uusien musiikkiteosten ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja
Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi
Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-Amerikan sinfoniaorkeste-historiassa — Stokowski Philadelphian orkesteria ja ini oli vielä New Yorkin oonikkojen johdossa.
onna 1949, jolloin Koussey erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Perkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloe II.

uu

saa-soit-erusti
Lee ihain jäakeno olikieuveroi-aksan täviskkasi
Georg
n ja rkes-sterin
olivat
Muck, täh-

a toi sterin
o tuohta-kunta abau-vana joka nnan tamia mojoh-sterin aamsterin
Mon-

anko-y py-änen rkesarvon kilevitzostul mis-mistä neh-soitti maspanos
n. Si-
. Tä-alkaa eiden

historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Sharles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Konsertissaan A-messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Münch,

UOMEN K
LEIKE
aaja: Ils
hti: Kai
4 rjoittaja:

n sin
erre
Kouss ykyin orkes
Hels

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulvis
Lehti: Savo
Pvm 3 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

pi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higinson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tu-

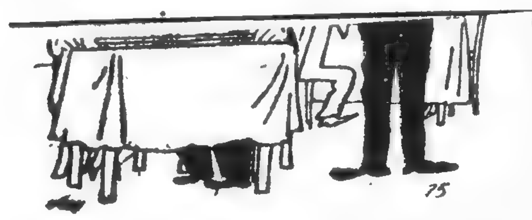
— lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulvis
Lehti: Keskipohjanmaa
Pvm 3 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:



— Miksi h . . . ssä ette kirjoita ruokalistaanne ymmärrettävällä kielellä!

Muistettavia tilaisuuksia

Haapajärven Laulumiesten

toimintakauden alkajaistilaisuus pidetään Suomenselän kabinetissa tänään klo 20. Kauden avauskahville toivotaan saapuvan kaikkien entisten jäsenten sekä kaikkien muidenkin laulumiesten.

Retkelle P-Ruotsiin halvalla

K-P:n piirin pyöräilyjoukkue matkustaa Luulajaan pyöräilyotteluun P-Ruotsia vastaan. Matka suoritetaan linja-autolla. Lähtö perj. 7. 9. ja takaisin Ruotsista lähdetään sunn. 9. 9. Autossa on vielä vapaita paikkoja. Matkalle haluavia pyydetään tekemään paikkatilaukset Otto Viljamaa, Nivala, Eino Vesisenaho, Kannus ja Arvo Maunumäki, Kälviä, joilta saa lähempiä tietoja matkasta.

tensä Kalle Hanhisalon ja Ann Strömin (ent. Nissilä) kunniakjuhlahetken rukoushuoneella. Ka kaiset vieraat olivat saapuneet ju laan puolisoineen. Tervetuliaisp heen piti seuran pj. Maija Erkki ja juhlapuheen Eemil Erkkil Kvartetti (Ahto Niemelä, Eino Paavo Jukkola ja Kaarlo Erkkilä esitti lauluohjelmaa Eero Erkkilä toimiessa säestäjänä. Lausunt esitti Jenny Hanhisalo. Lisäksi vi raille puhui raittiuslautakunnan Kalle Lukkarila ja vieraiden pu lesta vastasi Kalle Hanhisalo.

Vetelin sotainvalidien ao:n

yleinen kokous pidettiin eil osuusmeijerillä. Kokouksessa käs teltiin Si-viikon asioita. Mukana piirisiht. Nousiainen, joka selo Si-viikon järjestelmää, teroitti k räyksen tärkeyttä ja antoi suunt viivoja alkavan viikon toiminnal Sotatapaturmalain muutoskysymy siä esittivät jäsenet piirisiht. No siaiselle, joka niitä selosti. Keräy päälliköksi keräystä varten valitti Antti A. Heikkilä ja koko pitäj käsittäviksi kerääjiksi Urho Ris harju ja Santeri Klemola sekä na jaoston jäsenistä yksi näiden lisä si. Autoja ja traktoreita päätetti pyytää niiden omistajilta eri kylil auttamaan keräystä. Juhlatoimin jätettiin johtokunnalle.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaa
Lehti
Pvm 19
Kirjoitt

Bostonin sinfoonikot avaat konserttikauden

Paitsi että syyskonserttikausi tänä vuonna alkaa tavallista aikaisemmin — mikä ilmojen puolesta lienee aivan paikallaankin — on sen avauksena todellinen suurtapahtuma: Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti Messuhallissa tiistaina syysk. 4 pnä klo 20.

Tämän, alallaan maailman parhaimpiin lukeutuvan orkesterin johtaja on kuuluisa ranskalainen kapellimestari Charles Munch, jonka loistelias ura ensin Pariisissa ja sitten Yhdysvalloissa on tunnettu.

Orkesterin korkean kansainvälisen tason ohella on myös sen 110 henkilöä käsittävä jäsenistö varsin kansainvälinen kokoonpanoltaan Paitsi syntyperäisiä amerikkalaisia on mukana syntyperältään ranskalaisia, venäläisiä, saksalaisia, hollantilaisia, tanskalaisia, itävaltalaisia, tshekkoslovakialaisia, italialaisia, unkarilaisia, romanialaisia, bulgarialaisia ja egyptiläisiä. Onpa mukana suomalainenkin nimi, pasunisti Kauko Kahila.

Orkesteri saapuu Helsinkiin lentoteitse Tukholmasta konserttipäivän aamuna, ja konsertin jälkeisenä päivänä matka jatkuu edelleen Leningradiin, jossa on kaksi konserttia, ja sieltä Moskovaan. Messuhallin konsertti on niinollen orkesterin ainoa esiintyminen maassamme. Ohjelma käsittää Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, Pistonin sinfonian N:o 6, joka on sävelletty Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin paraikaa vietettävän 75-vuotisjuhlavuoden kunniaksi, sekä musiikkia Ravelin baletista Daphnis ja Chloe, sarja N:o 2 (päivän koitto, Pantomiimi ja Tanssi).

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulvis
Lehti: Karjalan Maa
Pvm 3 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin mainelkas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4 pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—24, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—49, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaudin Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Sharles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia nimiä. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voitokkaaksi nousuksi.

Konsertissaan Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

N KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Ulvis
Göteborgs-Tid
9 19 56

...ales Münch, Boston...

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulvis
Lehti: Kaillis-
Pvm 4 9
Kirjoittaja:

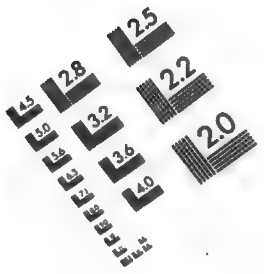
[115]

REDUCTION
RATIO
18x

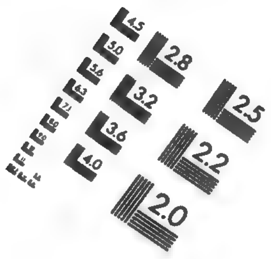
2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

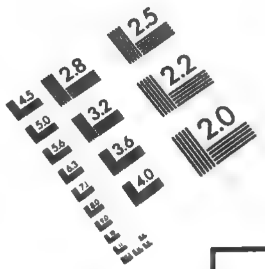


2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

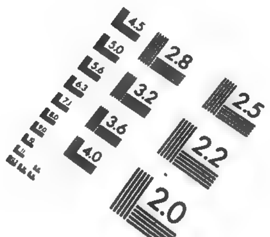


2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

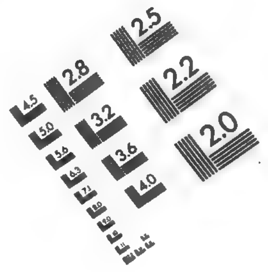
PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



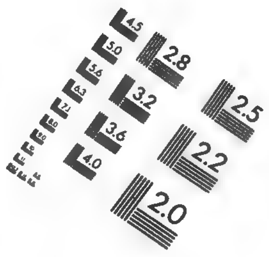
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0



2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0



2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

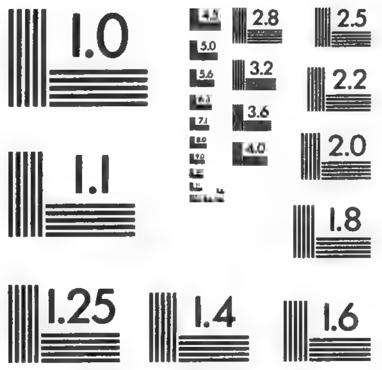


2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6

1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

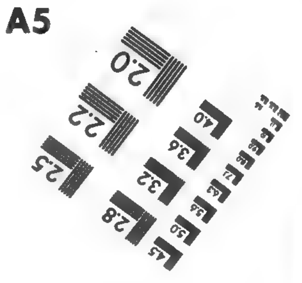
A5

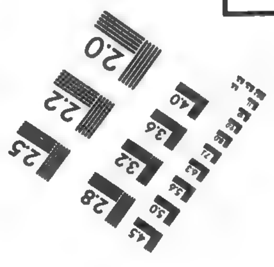


2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

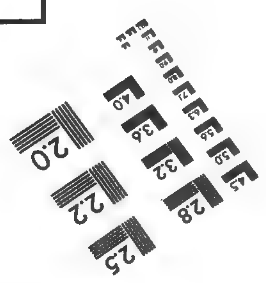
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

A4

A3



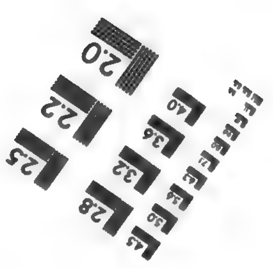
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0



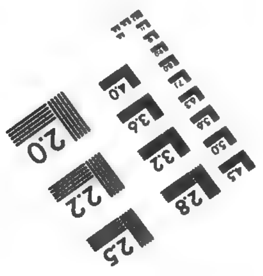
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0



2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

4.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Ulis
Björneborgs Tidning
4 9 1956

TUURIRAHASTO
ÄPALVELU
Lau
19 5

foonikot araat aikauden

konserttikausi ta-
a tavallista aikaiä ilmojen puolesta
aikallaankin — on todellinen suurta-
onin Sinfoniaorkes-essuhallissa tiis-
pa klo 20.
an maailman parutuvan orkesterin
uluisa ranskalainen
Charles Munch, jonensin Pariisissa ja
lloissa on tunnettu.
orkean kansainväli-
a on myös sen 110
ävä jäsenistö varsin
kokoonpanoltaan
äisiä amerikkalaisia
typerältään ranskaiä, saksalaisia, hol-kalaisia, itävaltalai-vakialaisia, italialai-
sia, romanialaisia, a egyptiläisiä. Onpa
aisenkin nimi, pa-Kahila.
puu Helsinkiin len-
imasta konserttipäikonsertin jälkeise-atka jatkuu edeliin, jossa on kaksi
sieltä Moskovaan.
onsertti on niinollen
inen esiintyminen
Ohjelma käsittää
Eroica-sinfonian, Pis-
n N:o 6, joka on sä-nin sinfoniaorkestevietettävää 75-vuotiskunniaksi, sekä mun baletista Daphnis
N:o 2 (päivän koitja Tanssi).
presidentti ja rouva
niottavat konserttia

Charles Münch, Bostons symfoniorkesters nuvarande ledare, som dirigerar konserten i Helsingfors. Mera om Münch på sid 3.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Björneborgs Tidning
Pvm 4 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch till Helsingfors med Bostonsymfonin

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Sergej Koussevitzky, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

Bostons symfoniorkester konserterar i Helsingfors i dag. Orkestern befinner sig på en Europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum. Den skall medverka bl. a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och ge konserter även i Oslo, Köpenhamn o. Stockholm. Två konserter vardera i Moskva och Leningrad står också på programmet. Bostonsymfonins ledare är sedan 1949 Charles Münch och i denna artikel berättas om hans musikaliska karriär.

Den kände amerikanske kompositören och kritikern Virgil Thompson skrev 1934, efter en rundresa i Europa, att han i Paris hade funnit en orkesterledare som en dag borde kunna efterträda Sergej Koussevitskij som ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester. Det tog 15 år innan Thompsons spådom gick i uppfyllelse, men då Koussevitskij 1949 steg ner från dirigentpallen blev Charles Münch hans efterträdare.

Trots att Münch bara två år tidigare hade bytt ut konsertmästarens violin i den berömda Gewandhaus orkestern i Leipzig mot taktpinnen i Paris visade han alltså redan 1934 att han besatt många av de egenskaper som hade givit Koussevitskij hans världsrykte. Han var väl förtrogen med hela den traditionella repertoaren, gick i bräschen för den moderna musiken och utstrålade den odefinierbara personliga magnetism som skiljer en stor dirigent från en medelmåtta.

Münchs uppgift i Boston var långtifrån lätt. Visserligen skulle han överta en orkester som enligt samstämmiga vittnesmål var bland de yppersta i världen, men Koussevitskij hade varit ledare för Bostonsymfonin i ett kvartsekel och den var i så hög grad hans verk att identifikationen nästan var fullständig. Dessutom hade Koussevitskij i det traditionstrogna Boston närmast blivit en institution, lika fast rotad i bostonbornas medvetande som stadens minnesmärken från det amerikanska frihetskriget.

Men också musiktraditionerna i Boston har djupa rötter. En av traditionerna är att på allt sätt bistå symfoniorkesterns ledare i hans arbete och att ge honom största möjliga frihet.

Ny dirigent, ny ton

Under de sex år Münch lett orkestern har han visat sig vara en värdig efterträdare till Koussevitskij. Orkestern låter annorlunda under Münch än under företrädaren, men skillnaden är som mellan en målning av Rembrandt och en av Tizian, av vilken ingendera är ett mindre mästerverk därför att de är utförda i olika stilar.

Bostonsymfonin fortsätter att framföra och introducera ny och obekant musik. Som ett led i firandet av sitt 75-årsjubileum har orkestern presenterat nya verk av 15 internationellt kända europeiska och amerikanska kompositörer, däribland Benjamin Britten och Darius Milhaud från Europa och Aaron Copland och Howard Hanson från USA.

Münch, som fyller 65 år den 26 september, är född i Strasbourg, där hans far var kantor. Han fick sin första musikaliska utbildning vid musikkonservatoriet i hemstaden, som nu förestås av hans bror Fritz. Efter ytterligare studier i Paris och militärtjänst under första världskriget återvände Münch till Strasbourg som konsertmästare i staden orkester och tjänstgjorde samtidigt som lärare vid konservatoriet. Senare flyttade han till Leipzig som konsertmästare i Gewandhausorkestern under Wilhelm Furtwängler.

Ett heligt kall, en feber

Det var Münchs ambition att bli dirigent. Han brukar berätta om hur upprörd han blev en gång i sin ungdom efter en konsert i hemstaden, då han hörde någon bland publiken lovorda orkestern, men samtidigt undra om man verkligen behövde ha dirigenten med. Att vara dirigent är inte ett yrke, utan ett heligt kall, säger Münch, det är ibland en prästerlig gärning och nästan en feber, en sjukdom, som bara döden kan avbryta.

Efter åtta år i Leipzig begav sig Münch till Paris för att söka fullfölja sin ambition. Han fick åtskilliga anbud, men valde att sätta upp en egen orkester, Paris filharmoniker. Framgången lät inte vänta på sig och han blev snart känd för sina framföranden av avantgardistisk musik och för lysande tolkningar av traditionella orkesterstycken.

Att utge sig själv

Bara fem år efter sin debut som dirigent utnämndes Münch till Frankrikes främsta och mest eftertrakade dirigentpost, som ledare för Société des Concerts och professuren som orkesterledare vid Pariskonservatoriet, en befattning som han uppehöll från 1937—45. Efter krigsslutet tog han en rad gästengagement i olika delar av världen, däribland två mycket framgångsrika i Boston, som ledde till att han senare permanent knöts till orkestern.

Om sitt liv som orkesterledare och sin uppfattning om dirigentens roll har Münch berättat i sin bok ”Jag är dirigent”. Han skriver: ”Att dirigera en konsert innebär en oerhörd förbrukning av nervös energi. Berlioz berättar att han efter ett framförande av sin overtyr ”Francs-Juges” alldeles utmattad sträckte ut sig över pukorna och snyftade. Detta är ingenting att le åt. Han hade dirigerat ett av sina egna verk, han hade förbrukat en del av sin själ. Varje uttolkare av musik måste vara i stånd till en sådan fullständig bikt. Är han inte det, då måste han byta yrke.”

—o—

---

ki johti Phia ja Toscanini
filharmoonik-

oitti Koussevitzdeksi johtaeräs Ransjohtavia hah-utensa on le voimakmessuhallissa me musiik-tapahtumana.

avan ohjel-ica; Piston:
Daphnis &

LAINEN
TERISSA

ahjomala'nen ossa. Hän on ko Kahila.
nemmat ovat
isä kotoiäiti Tampe-
joka puhuu
on opiskellut
servatoriossa kkikeskukses-
nin ja St.
issa ja tonin sin-sta 1952

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Kiillis-Häme
Pvm 4 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, keskellä Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin tänään tapahtuvassa konsertissa.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Päijänmaan Kansa
Pvm 4 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Maailmankuulu Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eilen lalla Helsingissä. kuuluisan orkesterin johta Charles Münch.

[116]

standen. Dessutom hade Koussevitskij i det traditionstrogna Boston närmast blivit en institution, lika fast rotad i bostonbornas medvetande som stadens minnesmärken från det amerikanska frihetskriget.

Men också musiktraditionerna i Boston har djupa rötter. En av traditionerna är att på allt sätt bistå symfoniorkesterns ledare i hans arbete och att ge honom största möjliga frihet.

Ny dirigent, ny ton

Under de sex år Münch lett orkestern har han [illegible] värdig efterträdare till Koussevitskij. Orkestern låter annorlunda under Münch än under företrädaren, men skillnaden är som mellan en malning av Rembrandt och en av Tizian, av vilken ingendera är ett mindre mästerverk därför att de är utförda i olika stilar.

Bostonsymfonin fortsätter att framföra och introducera ny och obekant musik. [illegible] av 15 [illegible] Benjamin Britten och Darius Milhaud [illegible] Aaron Copland och Howard Hanson från USA.

[illegible] 65 år den 26 september, född i Strasbourg, där [illegible] kantor. Han fick sin [illegible] vid [illegible] staden. [illegible] Fritz. [illegible] Paris och [illegible] världs- [illegible] Münch till Stras- [illegible] [illegible] Leipzig [illegible] Gewandhausorkestern under Wilhelm Furtwängler.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Uris
Björneborgs Tidning
4 9 1956

TUURIRAHASTO
ÄPALVELU
Lauant...
19..

foonikot avaat ... illkauden

konserttikausi ta-
a tavallista aika-ä ilmojen puolesta
aikallaankin — on todellinen suurta-
onin Sinfoniaorkes-
essuhallissa tiis-
pää klo 20.
ssan maailman pareutavan orkesterin
uluisa ranskalainen
Charles Munch, jon-n ensin Pariisissa ja
lloissa on tunnettu.
orkean kansainväli-
la on myös sen 110
ävä jäsenistö varsin
kokoonpanoltaan
äisiä amerikkalaisia
ntyperältään ranskaiä, saksalaisia, hol-
kalaisia, itävaltalai-
vakialaisia, italialai-
sia, romanialaisia,
a egyptiläisiä. Onpa
laisenkin nimi, pa-Kabila.
puu Helsinkiin len-
imasta konserttipäi-
a konsertin jälkeisematka jatkuu edeldiin, jossa on kaksi
sieltä Moskovaan.
onsertti on niinollen
inen esiintyminen
Ohjelma käsittää
Eroica-sinfonian, Pis-
n N:o 6, joka on säonin sinfoniaorkestevietettävän 75-vuotis-juhlaa, sekä mu-
n baletista Daphnis
i N:o 2 (päivän koit-i ja Tanssi).
presidentti ja rouva unioittavat konserttia

Charles Münch, Bostons symfoniorkesters nuvarande ledare, som dirigerar konserten i Helsingfors. Mera om Münch på sid 3.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Koillis-Häme
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin tänään tapahtuvassa konsertissa.

johti Phi-
a ja Toscanini
filharmoonik-

oli Koussevitz-uudeksi johtaeräs Rans-
johtavia hah-akautensa or-terille voimak-

A-messuhallissa
amme musiik-tapahtumana.
uraavan ohjeloica; Piston:
Daphnis &

MALAINEN
ESTERISSA

ansuomalainen ossa. Hän on Auko Kahila.
mmat ovat
isä kotoiäiti Tampe-
joka puhuu
on opiskellut
servatoriossa
kkikeskukses-
onin ja St.
ssa ja stonin sin-
sta 1952

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Pohjanmaan Kansa
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Maailmankuulu Bostinin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eilen illalla Helsingissä. Esitämme kuuluisan orkesterin johtaja Charles Münch.

[116]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Hangö
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonsymfonin

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitsky, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch, som dirigerar konserten i H:fors.

Charles Münch till Hfors

Bostons symfoniorkester konserterar i Helsingfors den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig på en Europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum. Den skall medverka bl.a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och ge konserter även i Oslo, Köpenhamn och Stockholm. Två konserter vardera i Moskva och Leningrad står också på programmet. Bostonsymfonins ledare är sedan 1949 Charles Münch och i denna artikel berättas om hans musikaliska karriär.

Den kände amerikanske kompositören och kritikern Virgil Thompson skrev 1934, efter en rundresa i Europa, att han i Paris hade funnit en orkesterledare som en dag borde kunna efterträda Sergej Koussevitskij som ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester. Det tog 15 år innan Thompsons spådom gick i uppfyllelse, men då Koussevitskij 1949 steg ner från dirigentpallen blev Charles Münch hans efterträdare.

Trots att Münch bara två år tidigare hade bytt ut konsertmästarens violin i den berömda Gewandhaus orkestern i Leipzig mot taktpinnen i Paris visade han alltså redan 1934 att han besatt många av de egenskaper som hade givit Koussevitskij hans världsrykte. Han var väl förtrogen med hela den traditionella repertoaren, gick i bräschen för den moderna musiken och utstrålade den odefinierbara personliga magnetism som skiljer en stor dirigent från en medelmåtta.

Münchs upgift i Boston var långtifrån lätt. Visserligen skulle han överta en orkester som enligt samstämmiga vittnesmål var bland de yppersta i världen, men Koussevitskji hade varit ledare för Bostonsymfonin i ett kvartsekel och den var i så hög grad hans verk att identifikationen nästan var fullständig. Dessutom hade Koussevitskij i det traditionstrogna Boston närmast blivit en institution, lika fast rotad i bostonbornas medvetande som stadens minnesmärken från det amerikanska frihetskriget.

Forts. sid. 4. Charles Münch...

Men också musiktraditionerna i Boston har djupa rötter. En av traditionerna är att på allt sätt bistå symfoniorkesterns ledare i hans arbete och att ge honom största möjliga frihet.

Ny dirigent, ny ton

[illegible] Koussevitskij. Orkestern låter annorlunda under Münch än under företrädaren, men skillnaden är som mellan en målning av Rembrandt och en av Tizian, av vilken ingendera är ett mindre mästerverk därför att [illegible]

[illegible]

---

vårt land alltjämt besvärades av en dold inflation, som kunde ställa till oreda i framtiden, ansågs opåkallade, ty den ekonomiska politiken med sina subventionsmättade budgeter hade lett till förträffliga resultat.

När den ensidigt konsumentvänliga subventionspolitiken nu ser ut att leda till orimligheter och en fortsättning av inflationen förefaller oundgaelig, känner man sig pa samma håll besvärad. Man söker inte orsakerna där de närmast star att finna, utan kommer med förklaringar om — dold inflation. Minister Tiainen förklarade nyligen att vi har att dragas med en konserverad inflation, som beror på eftersläpning i tjänstemannalöner, lantbrukspriser och hyror. Detta är helt visst riktigt, men orsakerna till att denna dolda inflation inte har kunnat övervinnas torde vara ministern välbekänta. Likaså borde ministern ha sig bekant att den n.v. inflationen inte enbart beror av "gamla" faktorer, utan att inflationen i år har mottagit nya impulser fran håll som ligger ministern mycket nära. Vi skall inte skylla vårigheterna bara på det förgångna, också nutiden har sin skuld i de urusla arrangemangen.

VON FIEANDT OCH

[illegible]

---

skrift av områdets köpebrev jämte lantmätarintyg över utbrytningsåtgärder, avskrift av hyreskontrakt eller kommunens eller ett stabilt bolags förbindelse om tomtens försäljning eller förhyrning, varvid för de fall, då tomten icke godkännes till inteckning då lånet sökes, kommunen bör gira utredning därom, om den kommer att godkänna annan tillfällig säkerhet på högst 3 års tid;

c) utredning därom, om sökanden tidigare erhållit statslån (även lån för bostadsaktie anses som sådant);

d) sökandes ämbetsbetyg beträffande familjeförhållandena;

e) byggnadsinspektörens intyg, att på byggnadstomten byggnadsarbeten icke påbörjats;

f) sökandes egen försäkran, att byggnadsarbeten icke påbörjats och icke påbörjas förrän Arava givit sitt tillstånd härtill;

g) annan utredning sökanden anser behövlig.

Penninginrättningarnas bevis rörande primärlån behöver i detta skede ej nödvändigtvis fogas till låneansökningarna, men det är dock önskvärt med tanke på påskyndande av byggnadsarbetena inkommande vår och för klarläggandet av den totala finansieringen.

Ansökningshandlingarna rörande utvidgning:

Beträffande byggnadsplanerna för förstoring se ovan (i ansökningsblanketten, Aravas blankett nr 2, antecknas i övre kanten: 'Laajennus'), men dessutom krävès

a) tilläggsbilaga (Aravas blankett nr 29) jämte där nämnda tilläggsutredningar, där uppgifter om den gamla byggnaden ges och bör dessa uppgifter vara bestyrkta av två byggnadsexperter och försedda med deras namnunderskrifter.

Björneborg, den 4 september 1956.
470 Stadsstyrelsen.

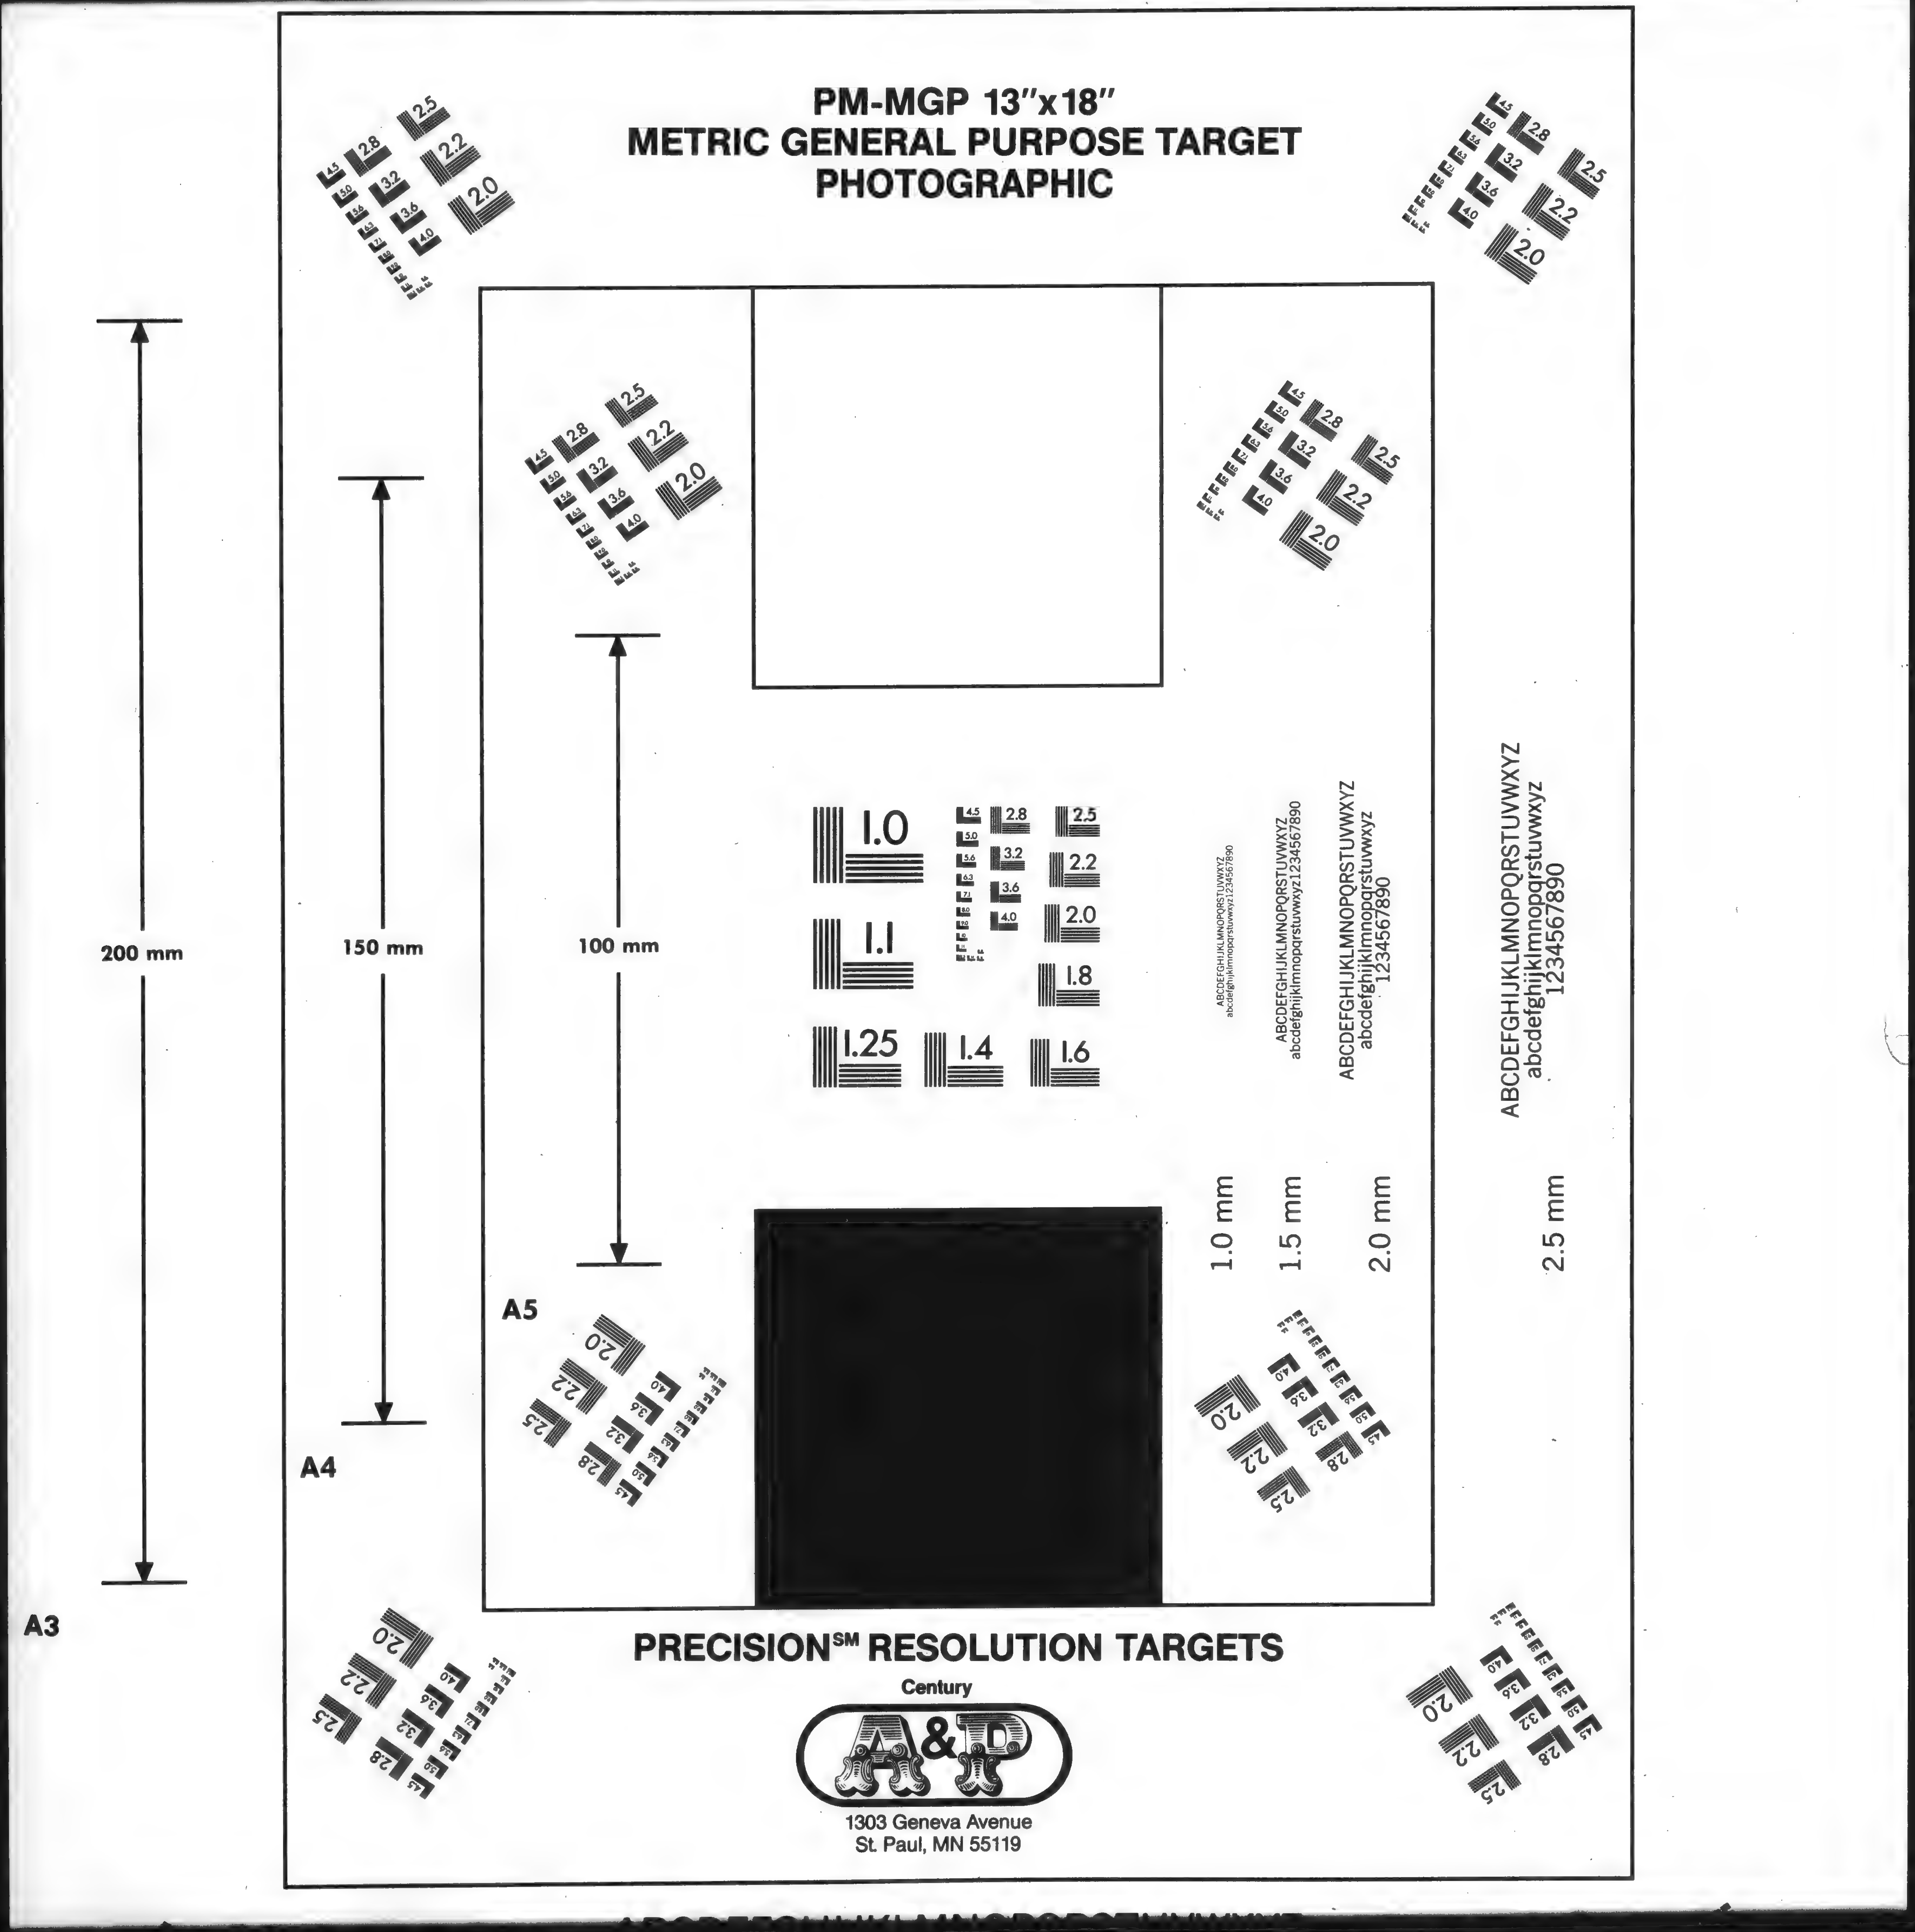
"tjurskallighet". Varför? Emedan den inte ger krediter. Det finns enligt hr A. andra stora värden att skydda än penningvärdet, ty man måste även tryg-

[illegible]

REDUCTION

RATIO

14x



PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A3
A4
A5
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
8.0
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulris
Lehti: Björneborgs Tidning
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostons symfoniorkesters nuvarande ledare, som dirigerar konserten i Helsingfors. Mera om Münch på sid 3.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulris
Lehti: Keski-Häme
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin tänään tapahtuvassa konsertissa.

[116]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulris
Lehti: Pohjanmaan Kansa
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Maailmankuulu Bostinin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eilen illalla Helsingissä. Kuvassamme kuuluisan orkesterin johtaja Charles Münch.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulris
Lehti: Björneborgs Tidning
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

vårt land alltjämt besvärades av en dold inflation, som kunde ställa till oreda i framtiden, ansågs opåkallade, ty den ekonomiska politiken med sina subventionsmättade budgeter hade lett till förträffliga resultat.

När den ensidigt konsumentvänliga subventionspolitiken nu ser ut att leda till orimligheter och en fortsättning av inflationen förefaller oundgåelig, känner man sig på samma håll besvärad. Man söker inte orsakerna där de närmast står att finna, utan kommer med förklaringar om — dold inflation. Minister Tiainen förklarade nyligen att vi har att dragas med en konserverad inflation, som beror på eftersläpning i tjänstemannalöner, lantbrukspriser och hyror. Detta är helt visst riktigt, men orsakerna till att denna dolda inflation inte har kunnat övervinnas torde vara ministern välbekänta. Likaså torde ministern ha sig bekant att den n.v. inflationen inte enbart beror av "gamla" faktorer, utan att inflationen i år har mottagit nya impulser från håll som ligger ministern mycket nära. Vi skall inte skylla svårigheterna bara på det förgångna, också nutiden har sin skuld i de urusla arrangemangen.

VON FIEANDT OCH

lande tomten jämte lagfartsbevis, avskrift av områdets köpebrev jämte lantmätarintyg över utbrytningsåtgärder, avskrift av hyreskontrakt eller kommunens eller ett stabilt bolags förbindelse om tomtens försäljning eller förhyrning, varvid för de fall, då tomten icke godkännes till inteckning då lånet sökes, kommunen bör giva utredning därom, om den kommer att godkänna annan tillfällig säkerhet på högst 3 års tid;

c) utredning därom, om sökanden tidigare erhållit statslån (även lån för bostadsaktie anses som sådant);

d) sökandes ämbetsbetyg beträffande familjeförhållandena;

e) byggnadsinspektörens intyg, att på byggnadstomten byggnadsarbeten icke påbörjats;

f) sökandes egen försäkran, att byggnadsarbeten icke påbörjats och icke påbörjas förrän Arava givit sitt tillstånd härtill;

g) annan utredning sökanden anser behövlig.

Penninginrättningarnas bevis rörande primärlån behöver i detta skede ej nödvändigtvis fogas till låneansökningarna, men det är dock önskvärt med tanke på påskyndande av byggnadsarbetena inkommande vår och för klarläggandet av den totala finansieringen.

Ansökningshandlingarna rörande utvidgning:

Beträffande byggnadsplanerna för förstoring se ovan (i ansökningsblanketten, Aravas blankett nr 2, antecknas i övre kanten: 'Laajennus"), men dessutom kräves

a) tilläggsbilaga (Aravas blankett nr 29) jämte där nämnda tilläggsutredningar, där uppgifter om den gamla byggnaden ges och bör dessa uppgifter vara bestyrkta av två byggnadsexperter och försedda med deras namnunderskrifter.

Björneborg, den 4 september 1956.
470 Stadsstyrelsen.

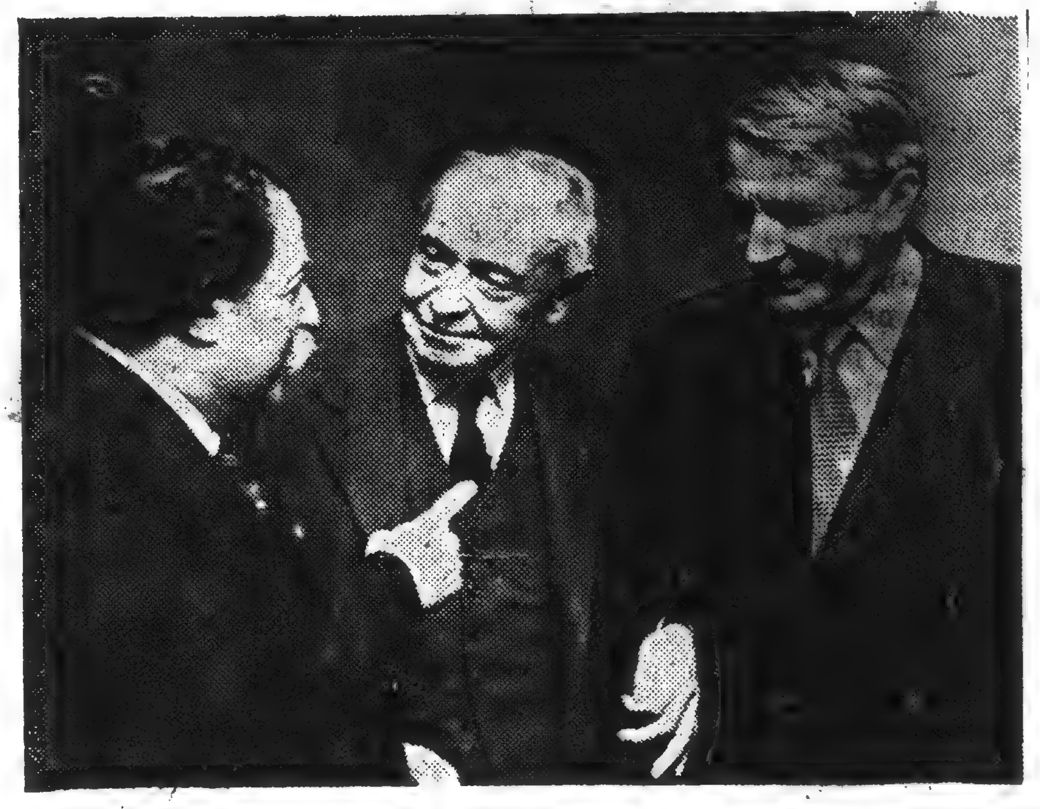
"tjurskallighet". Varför? Emedan den inte ger krediter. Det finns enligt hr A. andra stora värden att skydda än penningvärdet, ty man måste även tryg-

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulris
Lehti: Hangö
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonsymfonin



Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitsky, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch, som dirigerar konserten i H:fors.

Charles Münch till Hfors

Bostons symfoniorkester konserterar i Helsingfors den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig på en Europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum. Den skall medverka bl.a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och ge konserter även i Oslo, Köpenhamn och Stockholm. Två konserter vardera i Moskva och Leningrad står också på programmet. Bostonsymfonins ledare är sedan 1949 Charles Münch och i denna artikel berättas om hans musikaliska karriär.

Den kände amerikanske kompositören och kritikern Virgil Thompson skrev 1934, efter en rundresa i Europa, att han i Paris hade funnit en orkesterledare som en dag borde kunna efterträda Sergej Koussevitskij som ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester. Det tog 15 år innan Thompsons spådom gick i uppfyllelse, men då Koussevitskij 1949 steg ner från dirigentpallen blev Charles Münch hans efterträdare.

Trots att Münch bara två år tidigare hade bytt ut konsertmästarens violin i den berömda Gewandhaus orkestern i Leipzig mot taktpinnen i Paris visade han alltså redan 1934 att han besatt många av de egenskaper som hade givit Koussevitskij hans världsrykte. Han var väl förtrogen med hela den traditionella repertoaren, gick i bräschen för den moderna musiken och utstrålade den odefinierbara personliga magnetism som skiljer en stor dirigent från en medelmåtta.

Münchs upgift i Boston var långtifrån lätt. Visserligen skulle han överta en orkester som enligt samstämmiga vittnesmål var bland de yppersta i världen, men Koussevitskji hade varit ledare för Bostonsymfonin i ett kvartsekel och den var i så hög grad hans verk att

Charles Münch, Bostons symfoniorkesters nuvarande ledare, som dirigerar konserten i Helsingfors. Mera om Münch på sid 3.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Keski-Häme
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, keskellä Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin tänään tapahtuvassa konsertissa.

[116]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Paljanmaan Kansa
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Maailmankuulu Bostinin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eilen illalla Helsingissä. Kuvassamme kuuluisan orkesterin johtaja Charles Münch.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Hangö
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonsymfonin

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitsky, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch, som dirigerar konserten i H:fors.

Charles Münch till Hfors

Bostons symfoniorkester konserterar i Helsingfors den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig på en Europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum. Den skall medverka bl.a. vid festspelen i Edinburgh och ge konserter även i Oslo, Köpenhamn och Stockholm. Två konserter vardera i Moskva och Leningrad står också på programmet. Bostonsymfonins ledare är sedan 1949 Charles Münch och i denna artikel berättas om hans musikaliska karriär.

Den kände amerikanske kompositören och kritikern Virgil Thompson skrev 1934, efter en rundresa i Europa, att han i Paris hade funnit en orkesterledare som en dag borde kunna efterträda Sergej Koussevitskij som ledare för Bostons symfoniorkester. Det tog 15 år innan Thompsons spådom gick i uppfyllelse, men då Koussevitskij 1949 steg ner från dirigentpallen blev Charles Münch hans efterträdare.

Trots att Münch bara två år tidigare hade bytt ut konsertmästarens violin i den berömda Gewandhaus orkestern i Leipzig mot taktpinnen i Paris visade han alltså redan 1934 att han besatt många av de egenskaper som hade givit Koussevitskij hans världsrykte. Han var väl förtrogen med hela den traditionella repertoaren, gick i bräschen för den moderna musiken och utstrålade den odefinierbara personliga magnetism som skiljer en stor dirigent från en medelmåtta.

Münchs upgift i Boston var långtifrån lätt. Visserligen skulle han överta en orkester som enligt samstämmiga vittnesmål var bland de yppersta i världen, men Koussevitskji hade varit ledare för Bostonsymfonin i ett kvartsekel och den var i så hög grad hans verk att

Forts. sid. 4. Charles Münch...

identifikationen nästan var fullständig. Dessutom hade Koussevitskij i det traditionstrogna Boston närmast blivit en institution, lika fast rotad i bostonbornas medvetande som stadens minnesmärken från det amerikanska frihetskriget.

Men också musiktraditionerna i Boston har djupa rötter. En av traditionerna är att på allt sätt bistå symfoniorkesterns ledare i hans arbete och att ge honom största möjliga frihet.

Ny dirigent, ny ton

Under de sex år Münch lett orkestern har han visat sig vara en värdig efterträdare till Koussevitskij. Orkestern låter annorlunda under Münch än under företrädaren, men skillnaden är som mellan en målning av Rembrandt och en av Tizian, av vilken ingendera är ett mindre mästerverk därför att de är utförda i olika stilar.

Bostonsymfonin fortsätter att framföra och introducera ny och obekant musik. Som ett led i firandet av sitt 75-årsjubileum har orkestern presenterat nya verk av 15 internationellt kända europeiska och amerikanska kompositörer, däribland Benjamin Britten och Darius Milhaud från Europa och Aaron Copland och Howard Hanson fran USA.

Münch, som fyller 65 år den 26 sept., är född i Strassbourg, där hans far var kantor. Han fick sin första musikaliska utbildning vid musikkonservatoriet i hemstaden, som nu förestås av hans bror Fritz. Efter ytterligare studier i Paris och militärtjänst under första världskriget återvände Münch till Strasbourg som konsertmästare i stadens orkester och tjänstgjorde samtidigt som lärare vid konservatoriet. Senare flyttade han till Leipzig som konsertmästare i Gewandhaus-orkestern under Wilhelm Furtwängler.

REDUCTION

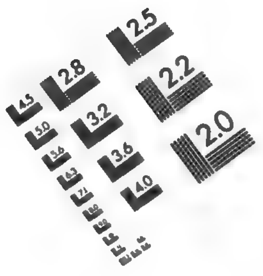
RATIO

18x

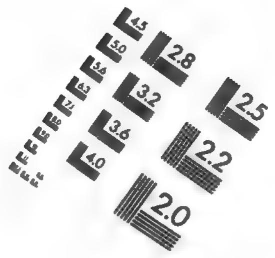
2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

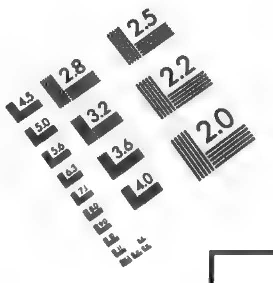


2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

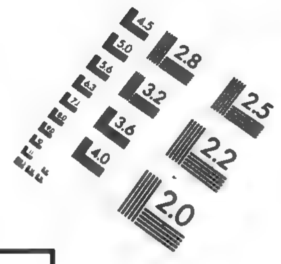


4.5
5.0
2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

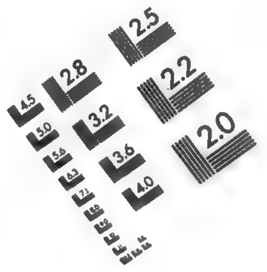
PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



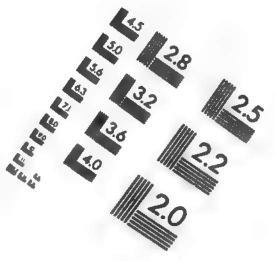
2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
3.2
2.0
5.0
3.6
4.0



4.5
5.0
2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
3.2
2.0
5.0
3.6
4.0

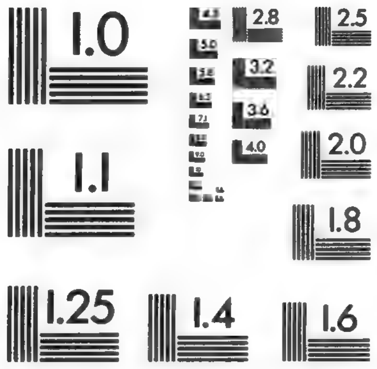


4.5
5.0
2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
2.8
2.5
5.0
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

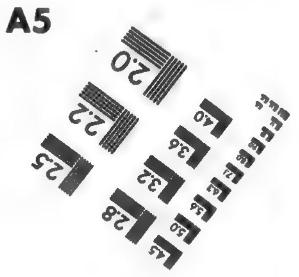
1.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

A5

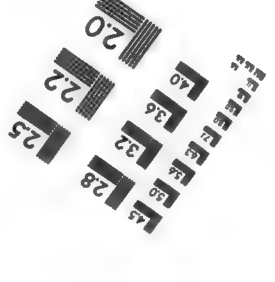


2.0
2.2
4.0
2.5
3.6
3.2
2.8
5.0
4.5

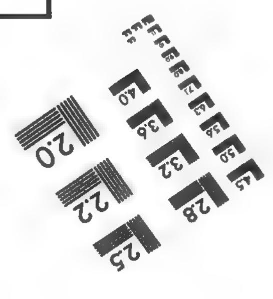
4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
5.0
2.2
2.8
4.5
2.5

A4

A3



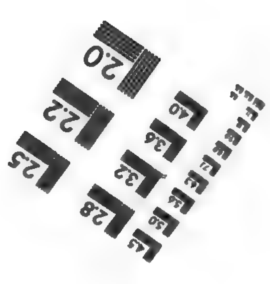
2.0
2.2
4.0
2.5
3.6
3.2
2.8
5.0
4.5



4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
5.0
2.2
2.8
4.5
2.5

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



2.0
2.2
4.0
2.5
3.6
3.2
2.8
5.0
4.5

4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
5.0
2.2
2.8
4.5
2.5

4.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Itä-Häme
Pvm 4 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Kuulu Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Helsingissä tänään, syyskuun 4 päivänä. Kuvassamme orkesterin johtaja Charles Münch.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kokkola
Pvm 4 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Syd-Österbotten
Pvm 4 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN SINFOONIKOT EUROOPAN-KIERTUEELLA

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänä-iltana, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotiasta olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertu-Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sieella juhliva orkesteri sek: belius?viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat «kolme suurta« useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin «läpi« kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme [illegible] Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Convent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa, joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chigagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimillinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen musiikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symbhonyt Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti v 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia musiikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteyx'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard, Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti «kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa«. Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesetri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annettiin joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja musikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Coplan.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops«-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös [illegible]-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus [illegible] kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

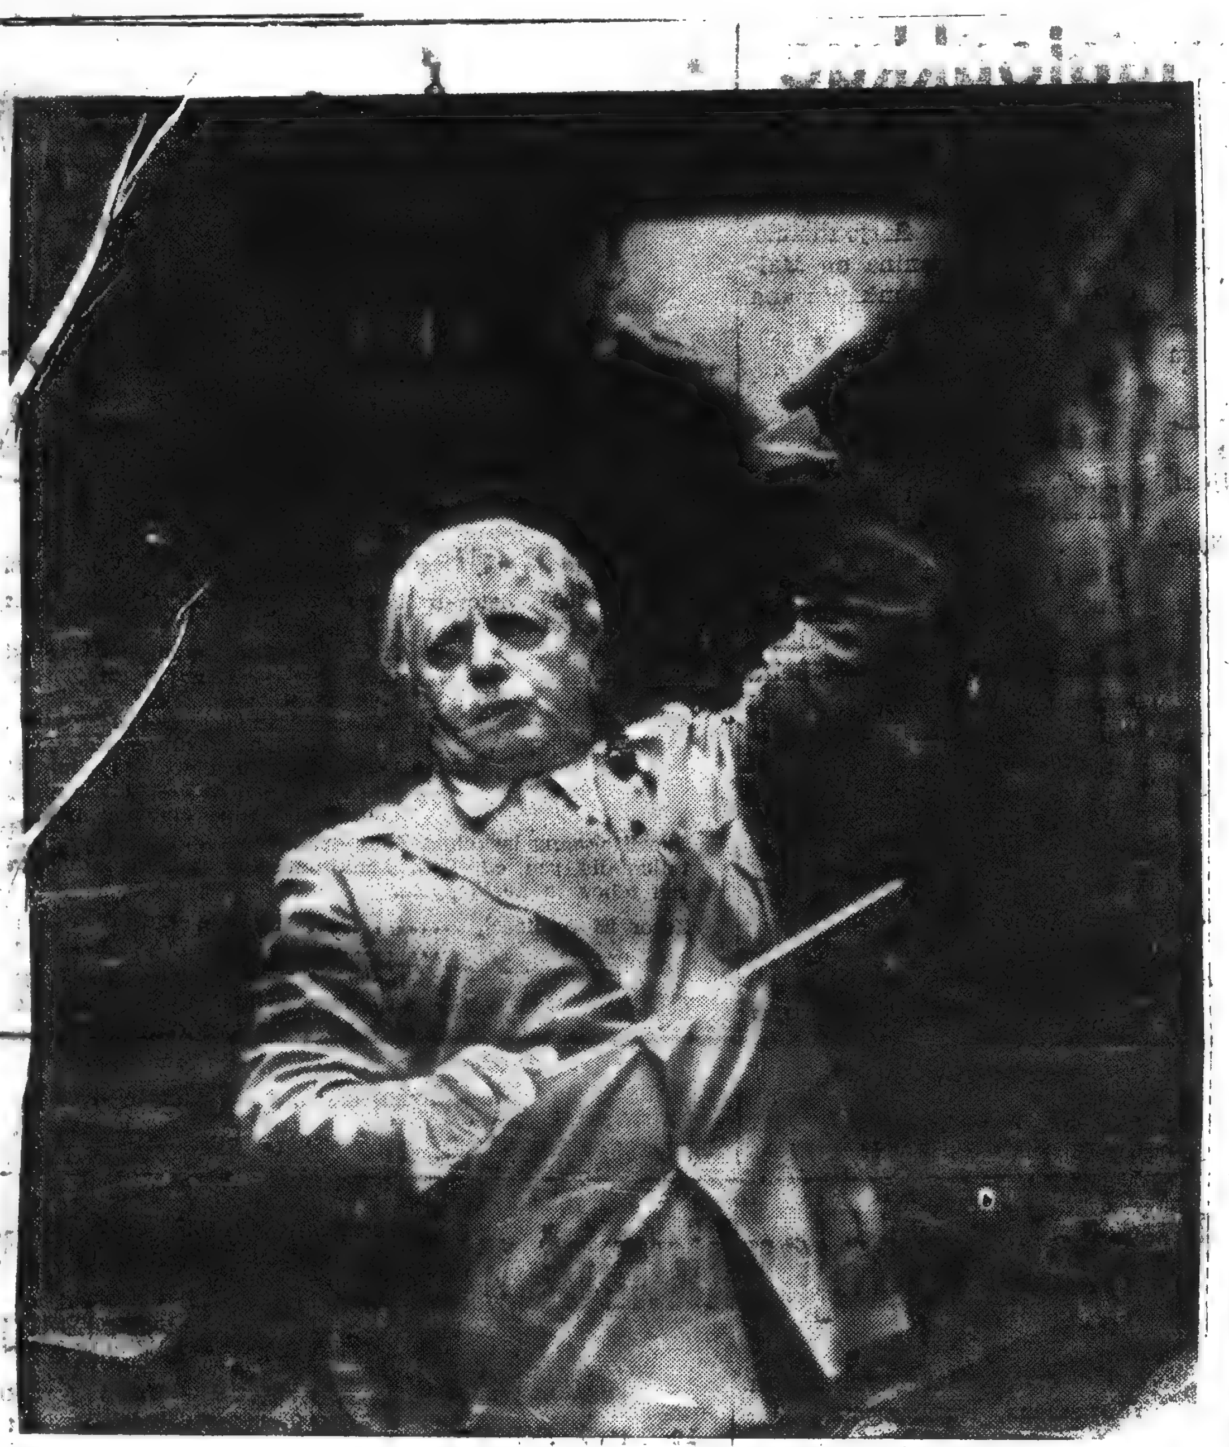
AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloe II.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—24, kesk Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv 1924—1949 ja orkesteri nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kymeen St.
Pvm 4 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:



Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI SAAPUU

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänään syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin [illegible] kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50 000 asukkaan kaupungissa [illegible] ja useitten [illegible] orkesterien [illegible] 100. [illegible] on [illegible] sa, Chicag[illegible] cossa.

200 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin [illegible] konsert[illegible] kaan muu [illegible] kesteri [illegible] puoliväliin [illegible] [illegible] kolme [illegible] ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Hanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

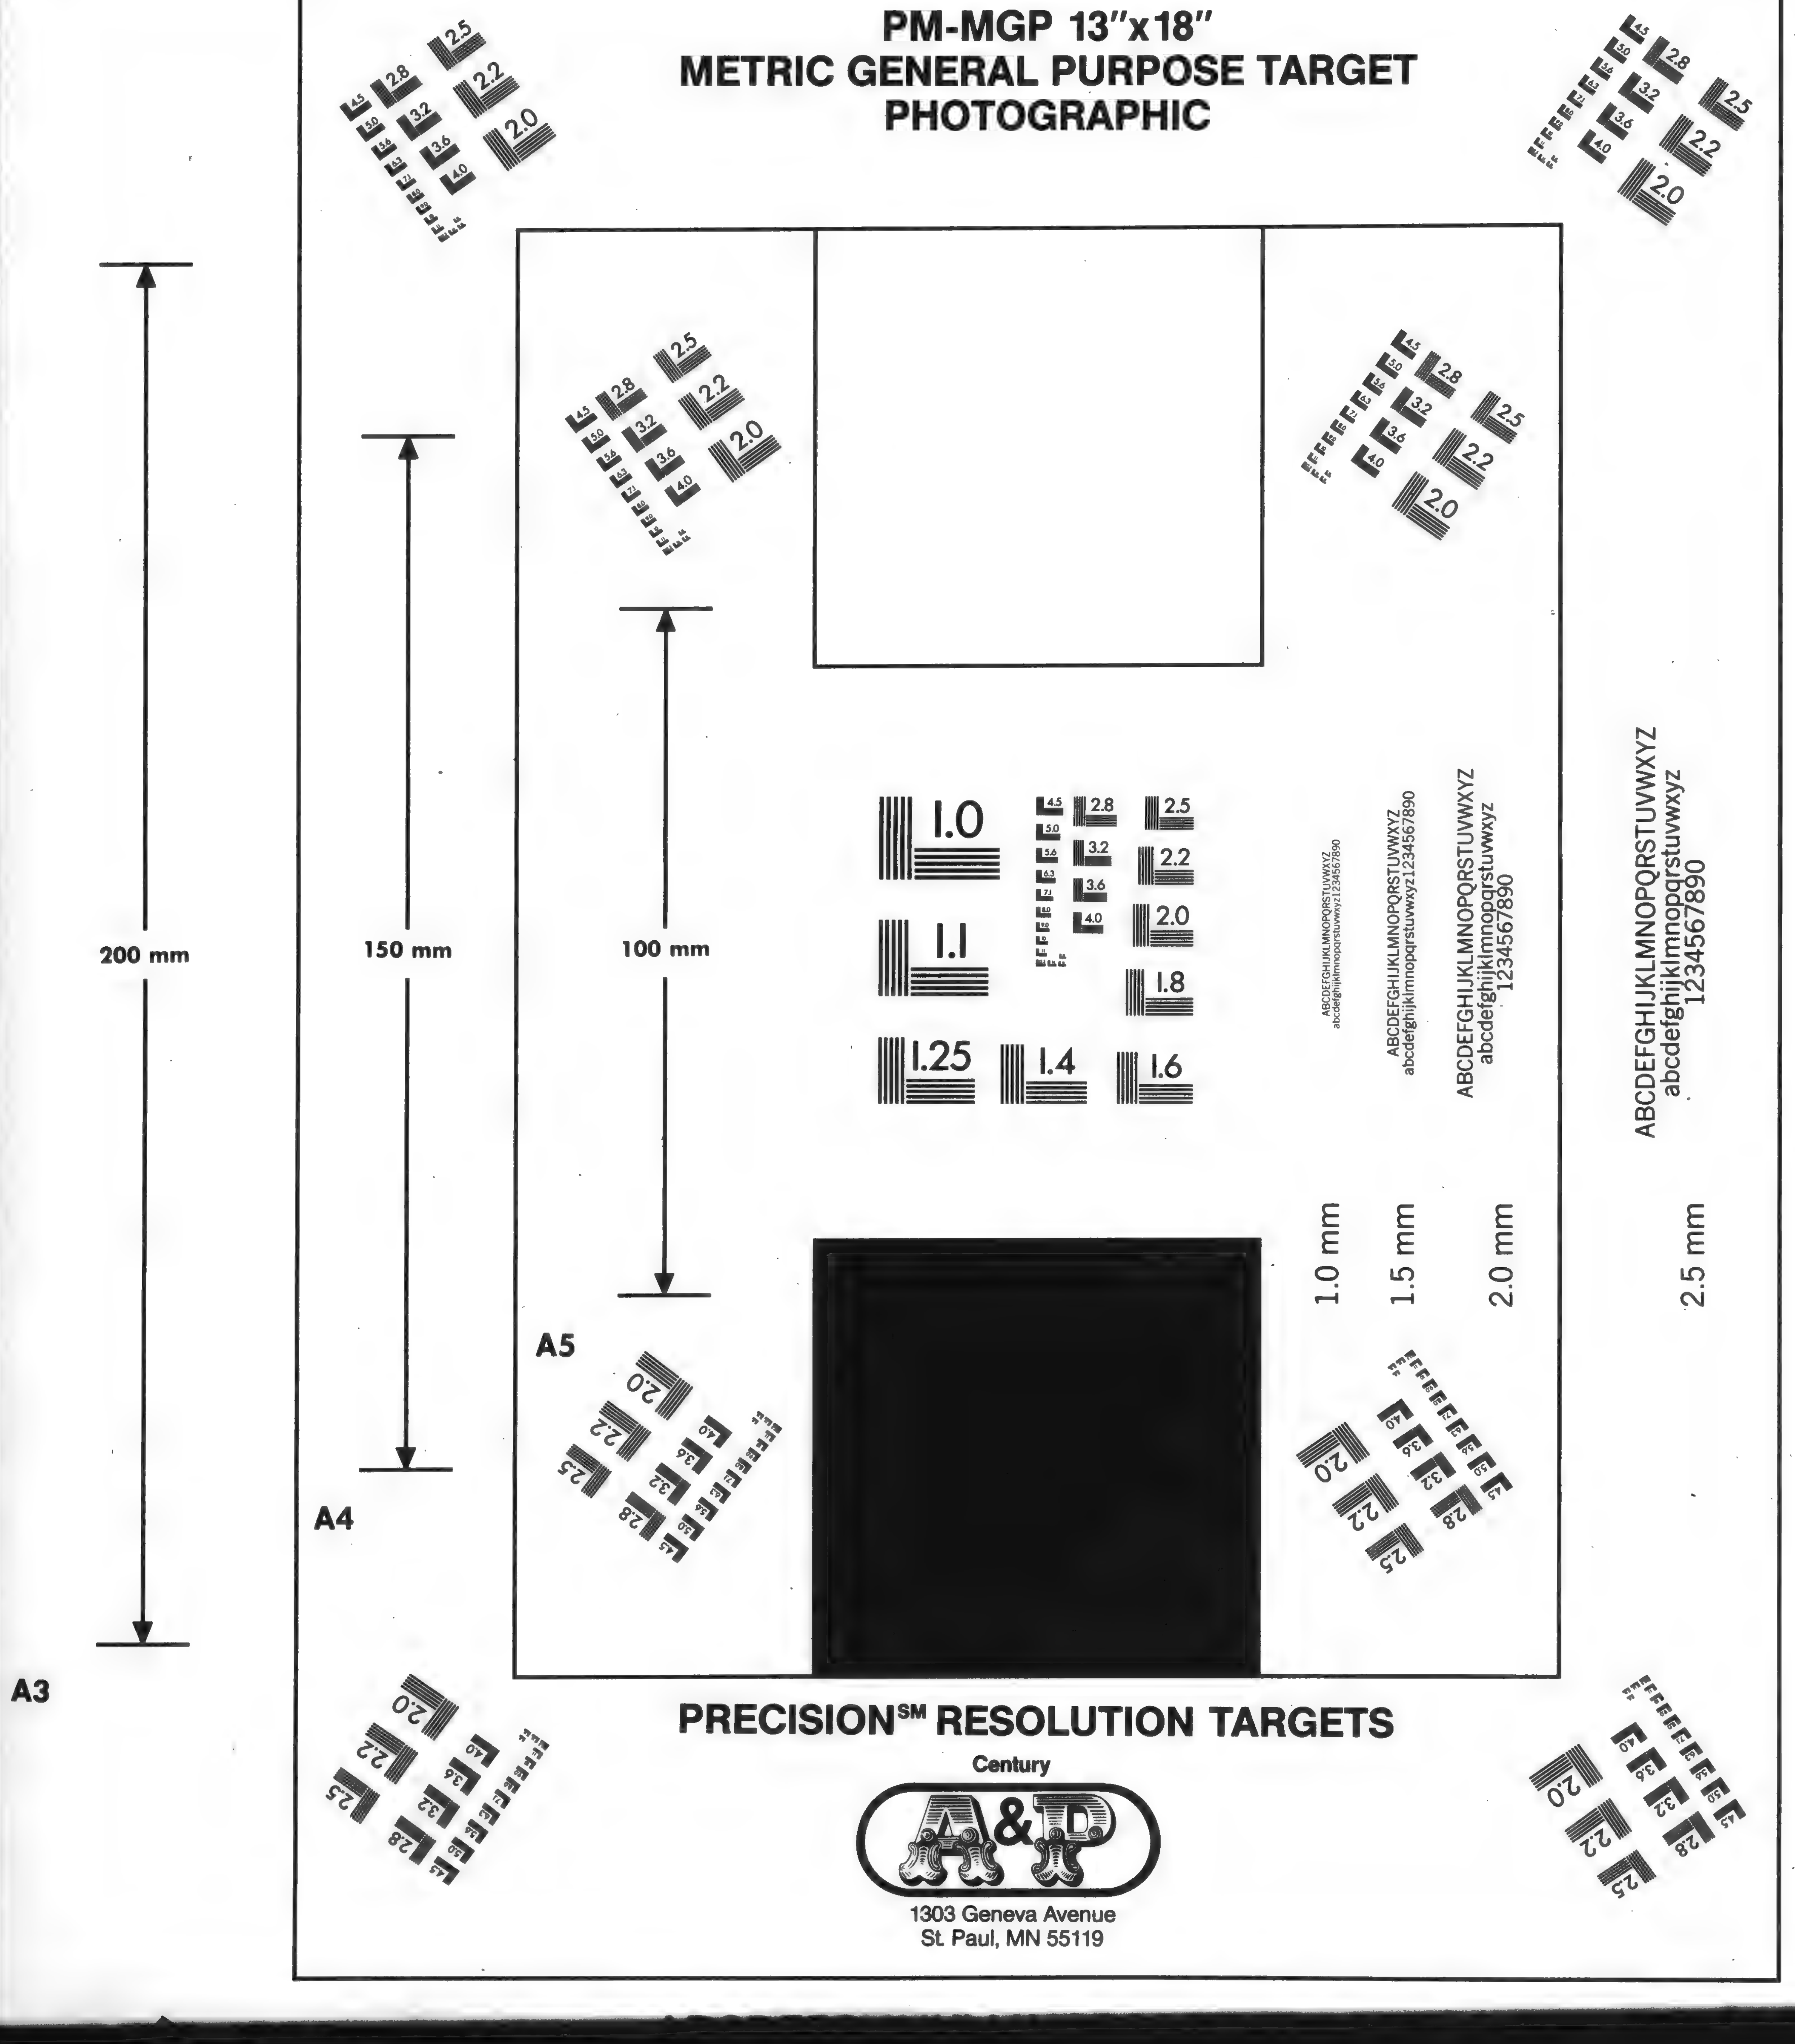
Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Lehti:
Pvm 4 9
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A5
A4
A3
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

[117]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Ht-Häme
Pvm 4 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Kuulu Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Helsingissä tänään, syyskuun 4 päivänä. Kuvassamme orkesterin johtaja Charles Münch.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kokkola
Pvm 4 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis.
Lehti: Syd-Österbotten
Pvm 4 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN SINFOONIKOT EUROOFAN- KIERTUEELLA

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänä-iltana, on Amerikan monista suurjsta sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotiasta olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertu- Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Si- eella juhliva orkesteri ·ek: belius?viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat «kolme suurta« useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin «läpi« kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Convent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa, joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chigagossa ja San Fransiscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimillinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen musiikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symbhonyt Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti v 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia musiikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteyx'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard, Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti «kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa«. Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesetri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annettiin joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja musiikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Coplan.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat «Pops«-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Har- ar-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmita kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisa siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloe II.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—24, kesk Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv 1924—1949 ja orkesteri nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kymeen St.
Pvm 4 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI SAAPUU

Bostonin maineikas sinfo-tikausi päättyy elokuun puoli-

Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostolii-

Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 4 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

el-
:in
—

reiden tonin juhlavalla serttikauden sen historian uusien Kuvassa
rin kolmen

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Münch, Bost

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Itä-Häme
Pvm 4 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Kuulu Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Helsingissä tänään, syyskuun 4 päivänä. Kuvassamme orkesterin johtaja Charles Münch.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Kymeen St.
Pvm 4 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI SAAPUU

---

koulun opettajia on seurakunnan alueella 32 ja pyhäkoululaisia 548. Ehtoollisella käynnin vähäisyys antoi aiheen huomautukseen.

Seurakuntalaisten taholta tehtiin ehdotus, että Vanhankirkon kappelissa voitaisiin järjestää ehtoollisjumalanpalveluksia. Asia jätettiin kirkkoneuvoston edelleen hoidettavaksi.

Kirkossakäynti on ollut tyydyttävää, mutta asiaa voitaisiin huomattavasti auttaa järjestämällä linja-autokuljetuksia kaukaisimmilta kyliltä.

JAT saavat näinä päivinä monet matteja esittelevä'n näyttelyyn L paansa, erään matruusin seurassa essä ovat osallisina puolustuslaitok kaisemmin on jo monasti tapahtunut (natsi-Saksa ja Jugoslavia ovat siitä huomattavampia esimerkkejä), että muutos katkerasta vihamielisyydestä ylitsevuotavaan veljenrakkauteen ei merkitse sydämen vaan politiikan muutosta. Neuvostohallituksen osoittama ystävyys on aina ollut muuan sen poliittisista keinoista.

Näin on myöskin niiden ponnistusten laita, joiden avulla pitäisi kehitettämän kauppa- ja muita taloudellisia suhteita neuvostoblokin ja afrikkalais-aasialaisten maiden kanssa.

Tämäntapainen toiminta on täysin vastakkainen sen suuntauksen rinnalla, jolle NI:n talouspolitiikka rakentuu. Hrushtshev puhui siitä raportissaan helmikuun puoluekongressille »täydellisenä poliittisena ja taloudellisena omavaraisuutena». Medvedyev oli määritellyt, että se merkitsee sitä, että kansandemokratiat muodostavat Neuvostoliiton kanssa uuden maailmanmarkkina-alueen. Tällä alueella ne löytävät koko kehitykselleen tarpeellisen tavaravalikoiman kokonaisuudessaan sekä myöskin vakituiset ostajat omille tuotteilleen.

Toisin sanoen ei neuvostoblokin tarvitse käydä kauppaa ulkopuolisten kanssa. Tästä huolimatta yrittää neuvostohallitus kehittää tämänlaatuista kaupan-

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis.
Lehti: Syd-Österbotten
Pvm 4 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitskij, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Pohjolan St.
Pvm 4 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri Suomee

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4 pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva rokesterisek Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" usein erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkesterien joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, joka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Kuvassa Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitsky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles [illegible] joka on pitänyt [illegible] rin tahtipuikkoa vuode[illegible] tien ja johtaa [illegible]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Riihimäen St.
Pvm 4 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SUOMEN KULTTUU
LEIKELMÄP
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Raahen
Pvm 4 / 9 19

Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin

Bostonin maineikas
steri, joka konserto nään syyskuun 4. p kan monista suurista stereista ehkä kuulu
-vuotista olemassaolo
n-kiertueella juhliv kä Suomessakin vuo
lius-viikolla vierai

---

ostonin sinfoniaorke
as. Pierre Monteux, erge Koussevitsky,
esterin nykyinen jo an orkesterin tahti

Tilaaja:
Lehti: Kymeen St.
Pvm 4 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja: .....

natta yrittää neuvostohallitus kehittää tämänlaatuista kaupan-

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI SAAPUU

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänään syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San franciscossa.

200 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Hanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulsis
Lehti: Riihimäen St.
Pvm 4 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja: .....

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4 pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva rokesterisek Suomessakin vuoden 1955 [illegible] raillut Philadelphian [illegible] New Yorkin [illegible] "kolme suurta" [illegible] ten amerikkalaisten [illegible] reiden joukossa. [illegible] tonin orkesterille, [illegible] juhlavalla tavalla [illegible] serttikauden [illegible] sen historian [illegible] uusien musiikkiteosten [illegible]

Kuvassa Bostonin [illegible] rin kolmen suuren [illegible] minen. Vas. Pierre [illegible] johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, [illegible] Serge Koussevitzky, [illegible] johtaja vv. 1924—1949, [illegible] nykyinen johtaja [illegible] joka on pitänyt [illegible] rin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta [illegible] tien ja johtaa [illegible]

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulris
Lehti: Lalli
Pvm 4 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI SAAPUU HELSINKIIN

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessa vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen. — Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri. Lokakuusta läpi talven ja kesän aina elokuun keskivaiheille asti kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää n. 220 konserttia. Orkesterin johtajana on Charles Münch, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

[118]

OMEN KULTTUURI
LEIKELMÄPAL
Ulris
Raahen
4 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

UUSI SUOMI* Sept. 4. '56

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti on tänä iltana

Boston Symphony Orchestra saapuu läpikulkumatkallaan Leningradiin tänään Helsinkiin ja sen ainoa konsertti on täällä isossa Messuhallissa tänä iltana klo 20. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan. 110-miehinen orkesteri soittaa Charles Munchin johdolla Bethovenin kolmannen sinfonian (Eroica), Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chloë toisen sarjan.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapunut

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Koussevitsky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulris
Lehti: Uusi Suomi
Pvm 4 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

MUSIIKKI

Charles Munch, Bostonin sinfonia-orkesterin johtaja

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pitää konsertin Helsingissä tänään. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan-kiertueella, joka on järjestetty sen 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi. Se esiintyy mm. Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla ja konsertoi myös Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa, ja Tukholmassa, minkä lisäksi ohjelmaan kuuluu kaksi konserttia sekä Moskovassa että Leningradissa. V:sta 1949 lähtien on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria johtanut Charles Münch, jonka musikaalista uraa seuraava artikkeli käsittelee.

Tunnettu amerikkalainen säveltäjä ja kriitikko Virgil Thompson kirjoitti v. 1934 Euroopan-matkan jälkeen, että hän oli Pariisissa tavannut orkesterinjohtajan, joka jonakin päivänä saattaisi kyetä seuraamaan Serge Koussevitzkya Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin johtajana. Kesti 15 vuotta ennen kuin Thompsonin ennustus kävi toteen, mutta kun Koussevitzky 1949 jätti johtajankorokkeen, tuli Charles Münch hänen seuraajakseen.

Huolimatta siitä, että Münch vain kaksi vuotta aikaisemmin oli vaihtanut konserttimestarin viulun Leipzigin kuuluisassa Gewandhaus-orkesterissa tahtipuikkoon Pariisissa, osoitti hän siis jo v. 1934, että hänellä oli monia niistä ominaisuuksista, jotka olivat hankkineet Koussevitzkylle hänen maailmanmaineensa. Hän tunsi hyvin koko tavanmukaisen ohjelmiston ja hän oli modernin musiikin esitaistelija.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri jatkaa uusien ja tuntemattomien musiikkiteosten esittämistä. 75-juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on orkesteri esittänyt 15 kansainvälisesti kuuluisan eurooppalaisen ja amerikkalaisen säveltäjän töitä, heidän joukossaan Benjamin Britten ja Darius Milhaud Euroopasta ja Aaron Copland ja Howard Hanson Yhdysvalloista.

Münch, joka täyttää 65 vuotta syyskuun 26. pnä, on syntynyt Strassburgissa, jossa hänen isänsä oli kanttori. Hän sai ensimmäisen musiikkiopetuksensa kotikaupunkinsa musiikkiopistossa, jonka johtajana on nyt hänen veljensä Pritz. Pariisissa suoritettujen lisäopintojen ja sotilaspalveluksen jälkeen Münch palasi Strassburgiin kaupungin orkesterin konserttimestarina ja oli samanaikaisesti opettajana musiikkiopistossa. Myöhemmin hän muutti Leipzigiin Wilhelm Furtwänglerin johtaman Gewandhaus-orkesterin konserttimestariksi.

Oltuaan kahdeksan vuotta Leipzigissä Münch lähti Pariisin pyrkien toteuttamaan kutsumustaan. Hän sai monia tarjouksia, mutta valitsi oman orkesterin — Pariisin filharmoonikkojen — perustamisen. Menestys oli pikaista ja hän sai pian mainetta uuden musiikin esityksillään sekä perinteellisten orkesterikappaleitten loistavilla tulkinnoillaan.

Vain viisi vuotta tämän jälkeen Münch nimitettiin Ranskan tärkeimmälle ja tavoitelluimmalle johtajan paikalle. Société des Concerts'n johtajaksi ja orkesterin johtamisen professoriksi Pariisin konservatoriossa, jota virkaa hän hoiti vv. 1937—1945. Sodan jälkeen hän vieraili johtajana useissa osissa maailmaa johtaen mm. kaksi erittäin menestyksellistä konserttia Bostonissa. Myöhemmin hänet kiinnitettiin pysyvästi orkesteriin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulris
Lehti: Sos. dem.
Pvm 4 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti on tänä iltana

Maailmankuulu Boston Symphony Orchestra saapuu läpikulkumatkallaan Leningradiin tänään Helsinkiin ja on sen ainoa konsertti täällä isossa Messuhallissa tänä iltana klo 20. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan. 110-miehinen orkesteri soittaa kuuluisan Charles Munchin johdolla Beethovenin kolmannen sinfonian (Eroica), Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Cloë toisen sarjan.

REDUCTION

RATIO

16x

2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

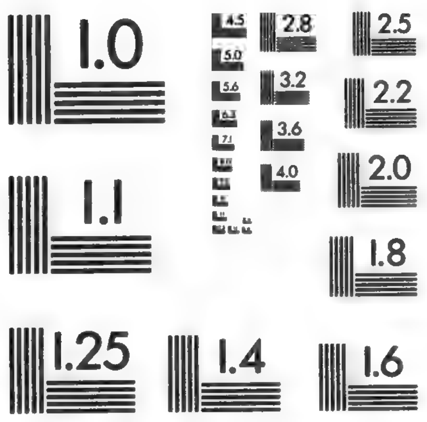
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm

A5

A4

A3

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

4.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Ursis
Lehti: Pohjolan Työ
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin kuuluisa sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu tänään

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänään, syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vierailllut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suurin ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muu-

(Jatk. 3:lla siv.)

sikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin hetkellä 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti »kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa». Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

sertoi enemmän kuin mikään konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglevood ja vuoden konsertsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa tikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runseuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusetts'in teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, vallassa, Saksassa- Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Carles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Ursis
Lehti: Salon Seudun St.
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

KOLME KUULUISAA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI SAAPUU

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänään syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat, Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren mu-

Jatk. 5. siv.

BOSTONIN...

Jatk. 4. siv.

siikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Lousin sinfoniaorkesterissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Ursis
Lehti: Hels. San.
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

KONSERTIT

Bostonilaiset saapuvat tänään

Eräs suurimmista orkesterivierailuista, mitä maassamme on ollut, alkaa tänään. Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu puolen päivän tienoilla kahdella koneella Seutulan kentälle. Mukana on orkesterin kuuluisat kapellimestarit Charles Munch ja Pierre Monteux. Jo viime yönä saapui Madame Olga Koussevitzki lentokoneella, hänet tunnetaan myös suurena Suomen ystävänä, kuten hänen puolisovainajansa Serge Koussevitzkikin oli.

Bostonilaisten vierailu alkoi Irlannista, Corkin kaupungista, ja jatkui Edinburghin festivaalien kautta [illegible] Neuvostoliittoon.

Surullinen viesti kertoo orkesterin johtajan Charles Munchin menettäneen vaimonsa tämän vierailumatkan aikana, hän kuoli Pariisissa viime viikolla.

Bostonilaisten ainoa konsertti on tänä iltana. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan. 110-miehinen orkesteri soittaa kuuluisan Charles Munchin johdolla Beethovenin kolmannen sinfonian (Eroica), Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chloë toisen sarjan.

1956.

ISUUS ja TAIDE

infoniaorkesteri ella" kiertueella

ja sihteeri Burkat selostivat aajaa ohjelmistoa

vuo- tänä Jo uden steri laa- ämä terin 1952 steri ppan laan ehkä iotta kka- Neu-

Helsingin konsertissa muodosti ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista: Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Daphnis ja Chloe" ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma sekä lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestari Charles Munch suostui kiireestään huolimatta — järjestely, harjoitukset ja konsertti yhdeksän tunnin sisällä — ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perinyt Munch osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi, myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä, mr Leonard Burkatin mieluummin vastailla kysymyksiin.

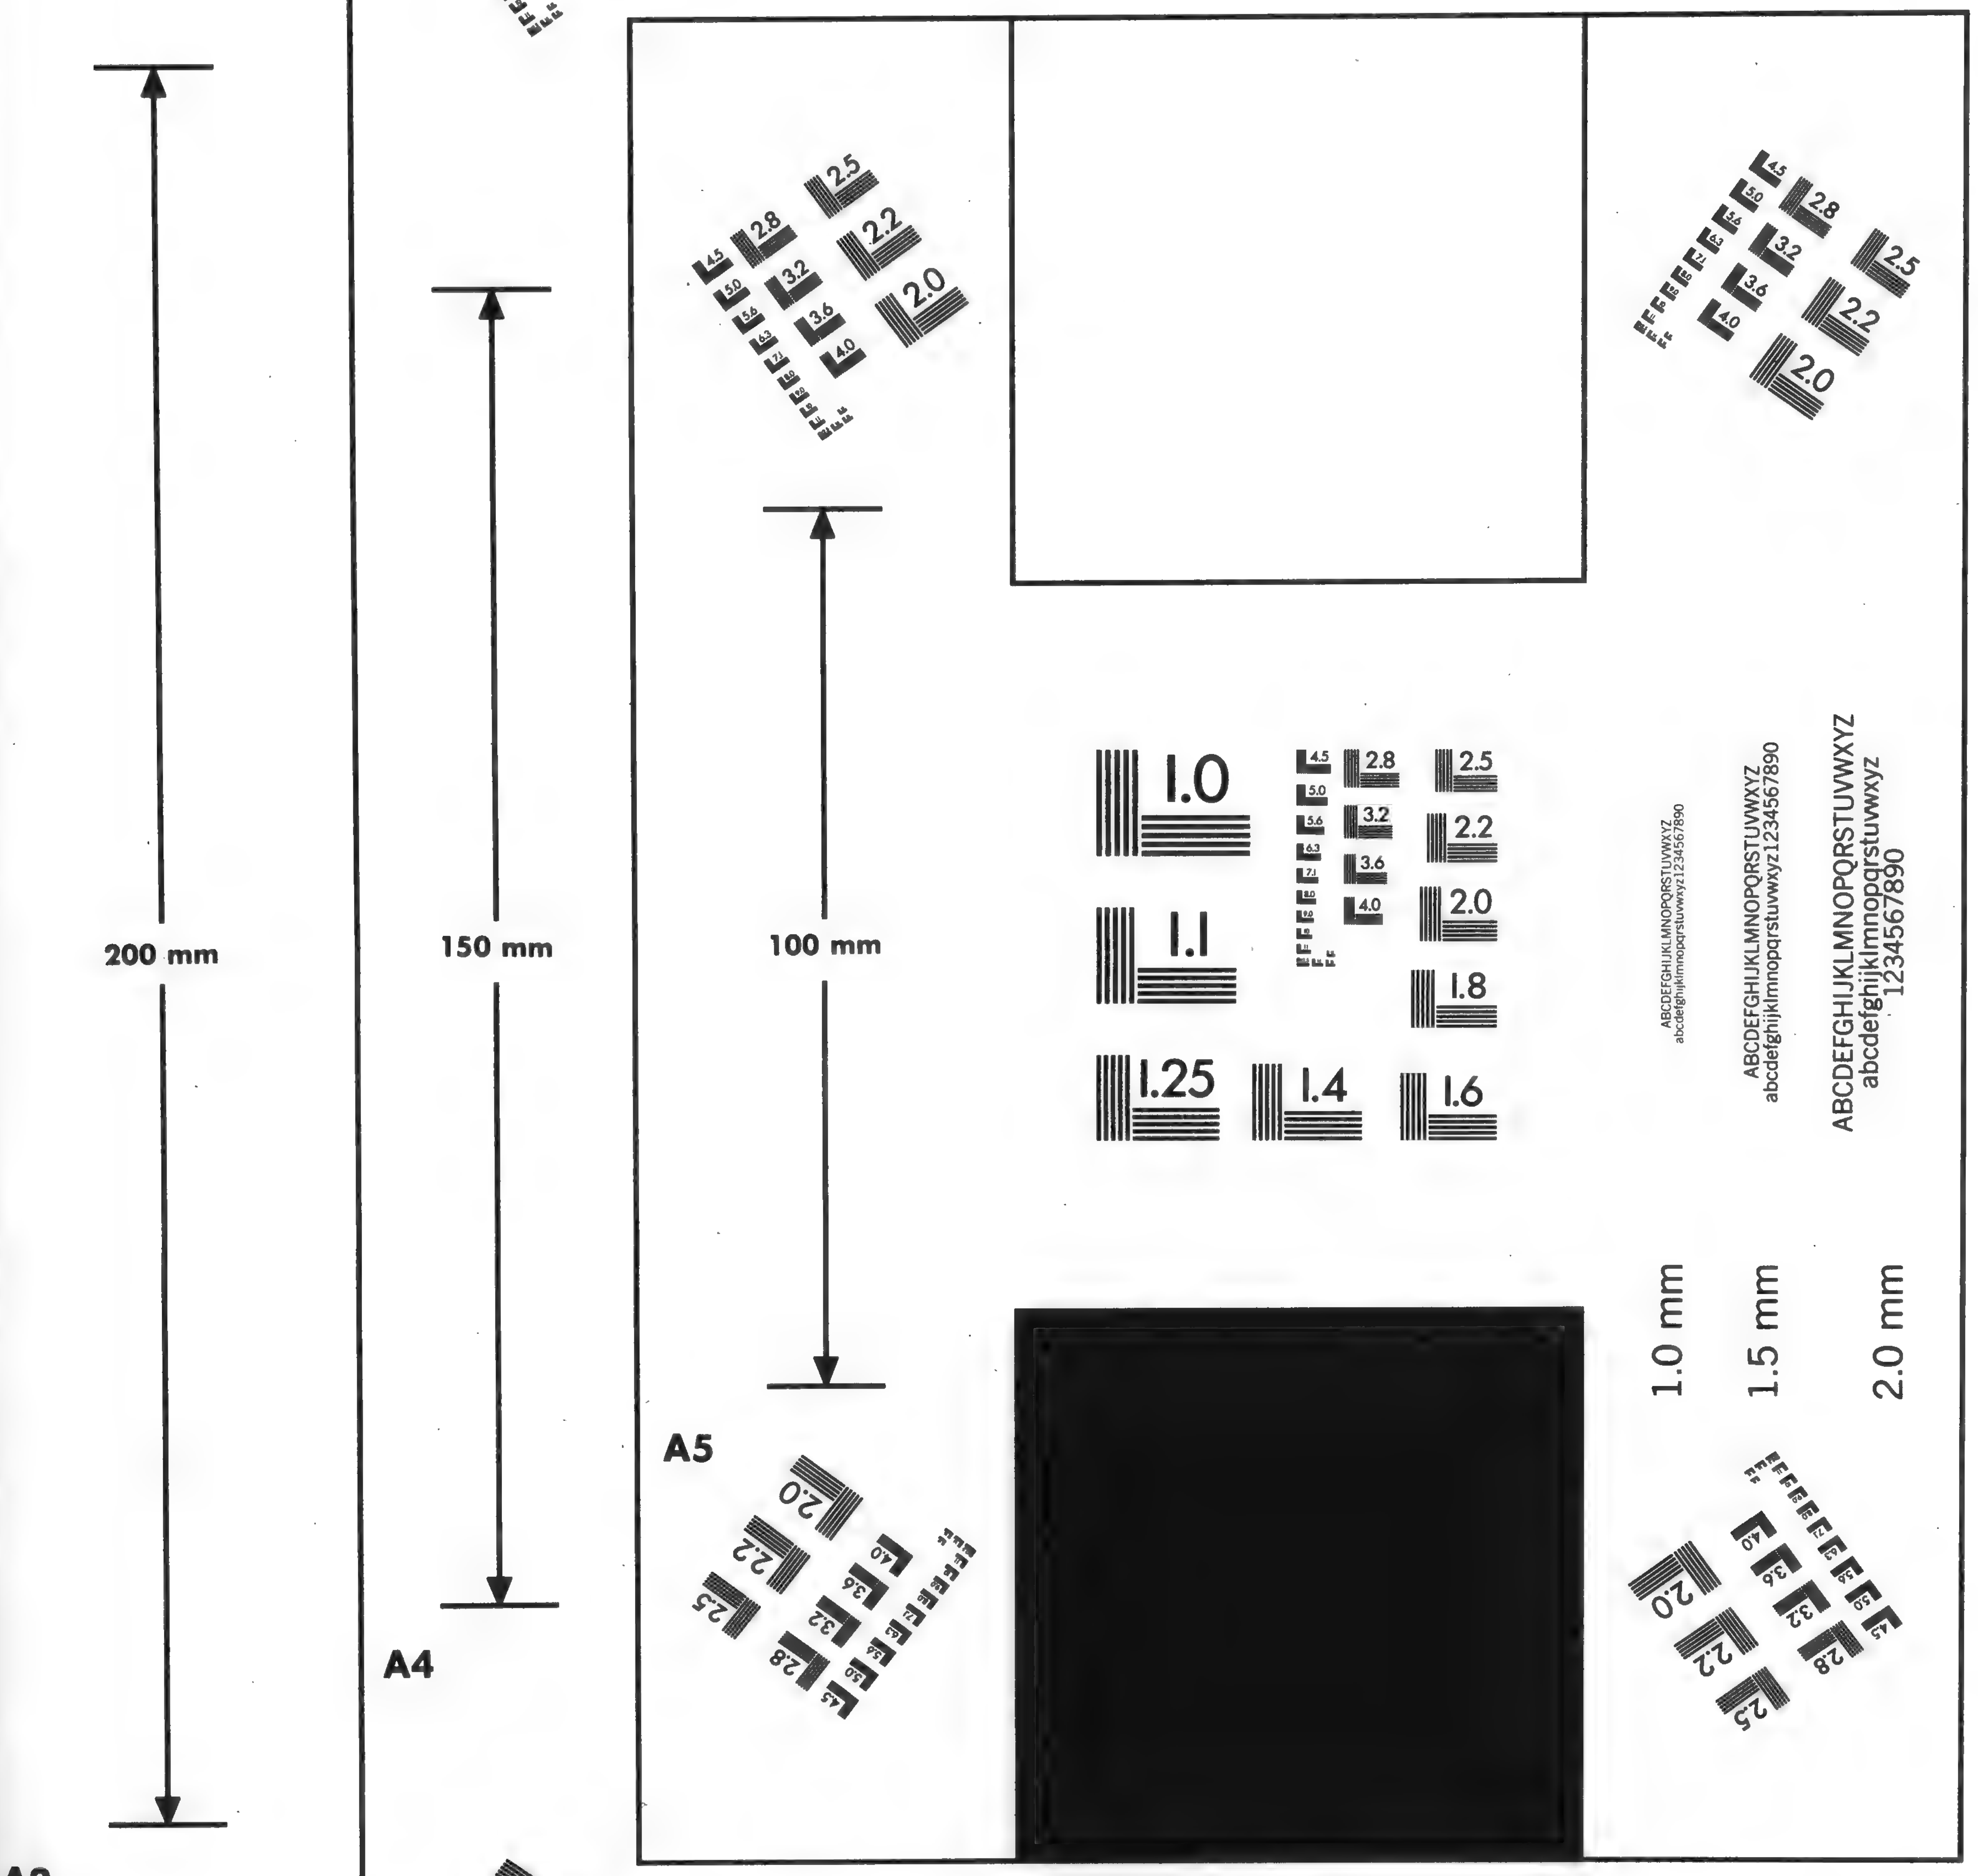
Mister Burkat kertoi tämän kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa kyllä lukuisia vierailuja USAn suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa orkesteri konsertoi kerran kuukaudessa — ja Kanadassa käy orkesteri melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin liikkeelle. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suurelta — n. 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella. Tähän esityslukuun sisältyvät kuuluisat "Pops"-konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä. Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat huomattavasti orkesterin rahoitusta. Uusimmat levytykset esittävät kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantoa, ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debussyn "San Sebastianin marttyyri", jota ei vielä ole laskettu liikkeelle.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkiin on Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa huomattavasti kasvanut viime aikoina. Vaikka Bostoninkin orkesteri antaa televisiokonsertteja, ei kuulijamäärä ole lainkaan vähentynyt. Kun Munchilta kysyttiin, mitä hän pitää televisiokonserttien johtamisesta, kohautti hän olkapäitään hymyillen hyväntahtoisesti.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Munch sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Munch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatar-puolisoa hän oli kuullut 1905 Strassburgissa. Muuten, innostui Munch itse kertomaan, esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia, ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet mahduttaa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet. Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusinta musiikkituotantoa amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin Edinburgin musiikkijuhlilla tapahtuneen [illegible]

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A3
A4
A5
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
8.0
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ursis
Lehti: Pohjolan Työ
Pvm 4 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin kuuluisa sinfonia-orkesteri saapuu tänään

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänään, syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suurin ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muu-

(Jatk. 3:lla siv.)

sikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin hetkellä 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti »kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa». Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berks-välissä. Mainittava on myös runseuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusetts'in teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustånnuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, vallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Carles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

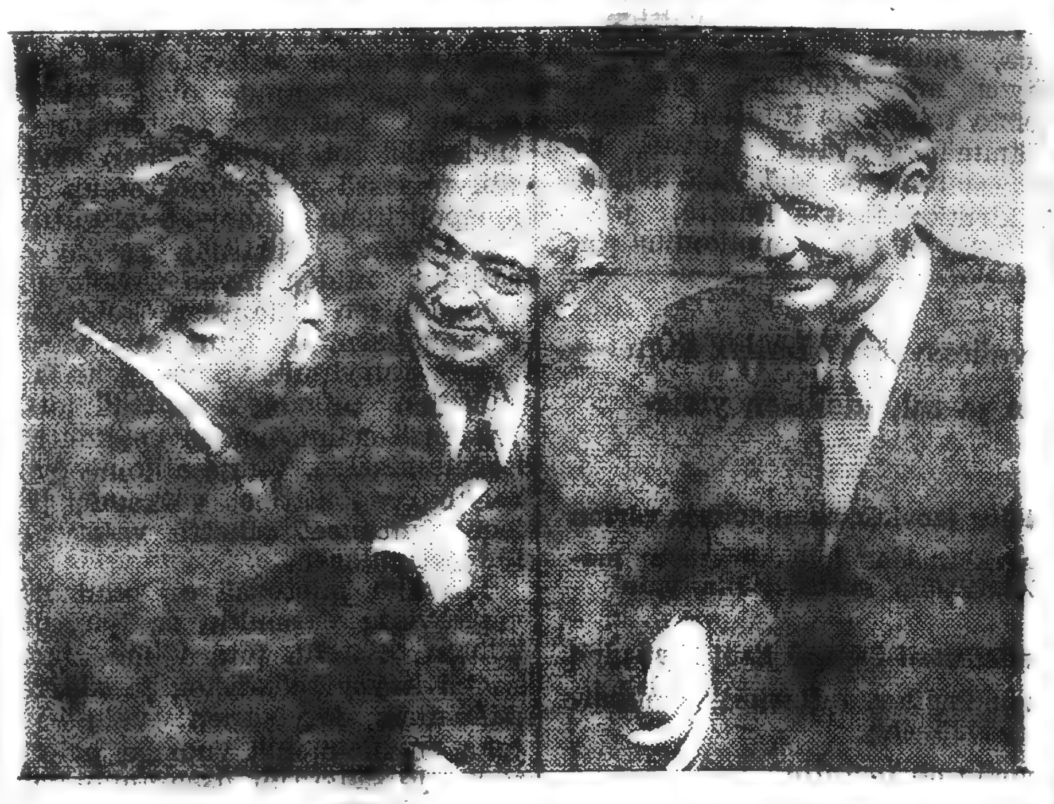
Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ra-

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ursis
Lehti: Salon Seudun St.
Pvm 4 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

KOLME KUULUISAA



Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI SAAPUU

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänään syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren mu-

Jatk. 5. siv.

BOSTONIN...

Jatk. 4. siv.

siikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ursis
Lehti: Hel. San.
Pvm 4. 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

KONSERTIT

Bostonilaiset saapuvat tänään

Eräs suurimmista orkesterivierailuista, mitä maassamme on ollut, alkaa tänään. Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu puolen päivän tienoilla kahdella koneella Seutulan kentälle. Mukana on orkesterin kuuluisat kapellimestarit Charles Munch ja Pierre Monteux. Jo viime yönä saapui Madame Olga Koussevitzki lentokoneella, hänet tunnetaan myös suurena Suomen ystävänä, kuten hänen puolisovainajansa Serge Koussevitzkikin oli.

Bostonilaisten vierailu alkoi Irlannista, Corkin kaupungista, ja jatkui Edinburghin festivaalien kautta [illegible] Neuvostoliittoon.

Surullinen viesti kertoo orkesterin johtajan Charles Munchin menettäneen vaimonsa tämän vierailumatkan aikana, hän kuoli Pariisissa viime viikolla.

Bostonilaisten ainoa konsertti on tänä iltana. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan. 110-miehinen orkesteri soittaa kuuluisan Charles Munchin johdolla Beethovenin kolmannen sinfonian (Eroica), Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chloë toisen sarjan.

956

1956 — N:o 219 — 7

ISUUS ja TAIDE

infoniaorkesteri ella" kiertueella

ja sihteeri Burkat selostivat aajaa ohjelmistoa

Helsingin konsertissa muodosti ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista: Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Daphnis ja Chloe" ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma sekä lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestari Charles Munch suostui kiireestään huolimatta — järjestely, harjoitukset ja konsertti yhdeksän tunnin sisällä — ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perinyt Munch osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi, myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä, mr Leonard Burkatin mieluummin vastailla kysymyksiin.

Mister Burkat kertoi tämän kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa kyllä lukuisia vierailuja USAn suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa orkesteri konsertoi kerran kuukaudessa — ja Kanadassa käy orkesteri melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin liikkeelle. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suurelta — n. 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella. Tähän esityslukuun sisältyvät kuuluisat "Pops"-konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä. Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat huomattavasti orkesterin rahoitusta. Uusimmat levytykset esittävät kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantoa, ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debussyn

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin kuuluisa sinfonia-orkesteri saapuu tänään

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänään, syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suurin ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muu-

(Jatk. 3:lla siv.)

sikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin hetkellä 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti »kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa». Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

sertoi enemmän kuin mikään konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglevood ja vuoden konserttsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa tikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runseuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusetts'in teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, vallassa, Saksassa- Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Carles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO

LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Ilris

Lehti: Hels. San.

Pvm 4/9 1956

Kirjoittaja:

KONSERTIT

Bostonilaiset saapuvat tänään

Eräs suurimmista orkesterivierailuista, mitä maassamme on ollut, alkaa tänään. Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu puolen päivän tienoilla kahdella koneella Seutulan kentälle. Mukana on orkesterin kuuluisat kapellimestarit Charles M u n c h ja Pierre M o n t e u x. Jo viime yönä saapui Madame Olga K o u s s e v i t z k i lentokoneella, hänet tunnetaan myös suurena Suomen ystävänä, kuten hänen puolisovainajansa Serge Koussevitzkikin oli.

Bostonilaisten vierailu alkoi Irlannista, Corkin kaupungista, ja jatkui Edinburghin festivaalien kautta tänne ja edelleen Neuvostoliittoon.

Surullinen viesti kertoo orkesterin johtajan Charles Munchin menettäneen vaimonsa tämän vierailumatkan aikana, hän kuoli Pariisissa viime viikolla.

Bostonilaisten ainoa konsertti on tänä iltana. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva K e k k o n e n kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan. 110-miehinen orkesteri soittaa kuuluisan Charles Munchin johdolla Beethovenin kolmannen sinfonian (Eroica), Bostonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chloë toisen sarjan.

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänään syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa, tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Robaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren mu-

Jatk. 5. siv.

BOSTONIN...

Jatk. 4. siv.

siikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Lousin sinfoniaorkesterissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

956.

ISUUS ja TAIDE

infoniaorkesteri ella" kiertueella

ja sihteeri Burkat selostivat aajaa ohjelmistoa

Helsingin konsertissa muodosti ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista: Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Daphnis ja Chloe" ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma sekä lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestari Charles M u n c h suostui kiireestään huolimatta — järjestely, harjoitukset ja konsertti yhdeksän tunnin sisällä — ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perinyt Munch osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi, myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä, mr Leonard B u r k a t i n mieluummin vastailla kysymyksiin.

Mister Burkat kertoi tämän kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa kyllä lukuisia vierailuja USAn suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa orkesteri konsertoi kerran kuukaudessa — ja Kanadassa käy orkesteri melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin liikkeelle. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suurelta — n. 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella. Tähän esityslukuun sisältyvät kuuluisat "Pops"-konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä. Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat huomattavasti orkesterin rahoitusta. Uusimmat levytykset esittävät kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantoa, ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debussyn "San Sebastianin marttyyri", jota ei vielä ole laskettu liikkeelle.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkiin on Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa huomattavasti kasvanut viime aikoina. Vaikka Bostoninkin orkesteri antaa televisiokonsertteja, ei kuulijamäärä ole lainkaan vähentynyt. Kun Munchilta kysyttiin, mitä hän pitää televisiokonserttien johtamisesta, kohautti hän olkapäitään hymyillen hyväntahtoisesti.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Munch sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Munch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatar-puolisoa hän oli kuullut 1905 Strassburgissa. Muuten, innostui Munch itse kertomaan, esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia, ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet [illegible] taa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet. Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusinta musiikkituotantoa amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin Edinburgin musiikkijuhlilta tapahtuneen radioinnin avulla.

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin kuuluisa sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu tänään

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänään, syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suurin ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan par-

erityisessä suosiossa. Ojitetuille soille on noussut kauniita tiheitä taimikoita, joiden hoito on kuitenkin yleensä jäänyt suorittamatta. Tällaisten taimikoiden kunnostamiseen on risusavotoissa kiinnitetty suurta huomiota, sillä onhan selvää, että huomattavilla kustannuksilla aikaansaatua kasvualustan parannusta on käytettävä hyväksi mahdollisimman tehokkaasti ja tämä tapahtuu juuri siten, että ojitusalueella kasvavan taimikon kehitystä hidastavat ja haittaavat syyt ja esteet poistetaan.

Risusavottojen arvo on epäilemättä niin suuri, että niiden aiheuttamat kustannukset korvautuvat runsaasti, vaikka niitä on jouduttu paikotellen suorittervehtii mustia alamaisiaan teelta maan pääkaupungissa, ebassa.

iolimiljoonaa mk. Hankintakkuiden antama ansiotulo oli manaikaisesti yli 21 miljoonaa k. Kun metsien sivutuotteet, Woodin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

sertoi enemmän kuin mikään konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglevood ja vuoden konserttsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa tikausi päättyy elokuun puoli-

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Hels. San.
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

KONSERTIT

Bostonilaiset saapuvat tänään

Eräs suurimmista orkesterivierailuista, mitä maassamme on ollut, alkaa tänään. Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri saapui puolen päivän tienoilla kahdella koneella Seutulan kentälle. Mukana on orkesterin kuuluisat kapellimestarit Charles Munch ja Pierre Monteux. Jo viime yönä saapui Madame Olga Koussevitzki lentokoneella, hänet tunnetaan myös suurena Suomen ystävänä, kuten hänen puolisovainajansa Serge Koussevitzkikin oli.

Bostonilaisten vierailu alkoi Irlannista, Corkin kaupungista, ja jatkui Edinburghin festivaalien kautta viime ja Neuvostoliittoon.

Surullinen viesti kertoo orkesterin johtajan Charles Munchin menettäneen vaimonsa tämän vierailumatkan aikana, hän kuoli Pariisissa viime viikolla.

Bostonilaisten ainoa konsertti on tänä iltana. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittavat konserttia läsnäolollaan. 110-miehinen orkesteri soittaa kuuluisan Charles Munchin johdolla Beethovenin kolmannen sinfonian (Eroica), Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chloë toisen sarjan.

SAAPUU

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänään syyskuun 4. pnä, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

SINFONIAMUSIIKIN SUOSIO

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

ORKESTERIN HISTORIAA

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikodun, Berkshiren mu-

Jatk. 5. siv.

BOSTONIN...

Jatk. 4. siv.

siikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat. Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symphony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Lousin sinfoniaorkesterissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

VAPAA SANA
Syysk. 4. 1956

1956 — N:o 219 — 7

KIRJALLISUUS ja TAIDE

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri "historiallisella" kiertueella

Kapellimestari Munck ja sihteeri Burkat selostivat orkesterin laajaa ohjelmistoa

Helsingin musiikkielämän "vuoden suuri tapahtuma" sattui tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-vierailullaan. Tämä Euroopan-kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo vuonna 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eräissä länsi-Euroopan maissa. Tällä konserttimatkallaan orkesteri "kirjoittaa historiaa" ehkä merkittävämmin kuin neljä vuotta sitten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin konsertissa muodosti ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista: Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Daphnis ja Chloe" ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma sekä lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestari Charles Munch suostui kiireestään huolimatta — järjestely, harjoitukset ja konsertti yhdeksän tunnin sisällä — ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perinyt Munch osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi, myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä, mr Leonard Burkatin mieluummin vastailla kysymyksiin.

Mister Burkat kertoi tämän kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa kyllä lukuisia vierailuja USAn suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa orkesteri konsertoi kerran kuukaudessa — ja Kanadassa käy orkesteri melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin liikkeelle. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suurelta — n. 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella. Tähän esityslukuun sisältyvät kuuluisat "Pops"-konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä. Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat huomattavasti orkesterin rahoitusta. Uusimmat levytykset esittävät kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantoa, ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debussyn "San Sebastianin marttyyri", jota ei vielä ole laskettu liikkeelle.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkiin on Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa huomattavasti kasvanut viime aikoina. Vaikka Bostoninkin orkesteri antaa televisiokonsertteja, ei kuulijamäärä ole lainkaan vähentynyt. Kun Munchilta kysyttiin, mitä hän pitää televisiokonserttien johtamisesta, kohautti hän olkapäitään hymyillen hyväntahtoisesti.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Munch sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Munch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatar-puolisoa hän oli kuullut 1905 Strassburgissa. Muuten, innostui Munch itse kertomaan, esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia, ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet [illegible] taa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet. Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusinta musiikkituotantoa amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin Edinburgin musiikkijuhlilta tapahtuneen radioinnin avulla.

TIGHT BINDING

HUFVUDSTA

Piston, amerikansk symfoniker

r inför någonting oöverträff- ovanligt i konstväg: den ninga Boston-filharmonins Troligen skulle den farit om inte vårt lilla land kun- över en musikalisk gloria ingen världsberömd konstnär semble gärna vill försumma delaktig av. Det är alltså n Sibelius som vi åter får för den förestående njutär en vacker gest att upp- rdlandets musikverk i finaste när man kommer som gäst. rrelsutan är det ännu intres- om gästerna bjuder välut- usik från det land där orkes- hemma. Walter Pistons sjät- foni är ett bemärkt och upp- verk inom den hittills rätt ade symfoniska produktionen Den är alldeles ny och pre- s för första gången i Euro- Boston-orkestern som jämte telse The Koussevitzky Music ation har beställt den. Kom- n har följaktligen tänkt sig m en minnesvård över den ra mångåriga dirigenten och första hustru, Natalie.

ponisten påpekar att verket är inspirerat av Boston-orkes- rs klang och tolkning har som i blodet så att han hela under skapandet "hörde" de han skrev ned. För att inte hörselintrycket avhöll han sig t ens kontrollera resultatet på Han har låtit instrumenten era!

komponister skriver för en sär- orkester som de har speciell till är inte ovanligt. Vi dock endast ett fall: Rimskij- ovs färgsprakande Spanskt o, tillägnat den kejserliga ij-teaterns orkester. Piston ligt sina kollegers utsago en stark orkestertekniker, så lik- med den ryska operamästaren allande.

eten sträcker sig även till Pis- urriculum vitae. Liksom den ade Piston föga samband med n förrän som fullvuxen. j blev marinofficer, Piston ritare och konstmålare, men första världskriget tjänade amerikanska flottans musikkår de sig spela saxofon. På egen hade han därtill lärt sig spela ven han kände en stark drag- ll musiken som levnadsbana, en smula vid Harvards et och reste sedan till e. Med sina trettio år kun- inte mera skrivas in som konservatoriet i Paris, men stället som lärjunge av den a Nadja Boulanger.

1926 återvände till Har- han med sig "Tre pjäser rinett och fagott", vilka pmärksamhet. Han blev småningom professor vid ngen som väl närmast konservatorium Rimskij r och direktor vid kon- St Petersburg. Längre g dock inte likheterna, dömmer ryssen och näm- Piston de närmaste åren r konserter, baletten The flutist samt en symfoni. ndrade han sin stil, och r 1938 har den rätlinjiga, som gett hans senare och kammarmusik dess prägel och en smickran- tning.

Piston härstammar från emigranter som tecknade Pistone. Han är en tyst- nlig man med utpräglad ch har till sitt yttre sätt n romantiska typen, han arna förband med italien- ker — han är amerikanare teria. Den första arrangerades för fyra år sedan, men nu står ännu flere länder på programmet. Ur vår synpunkt trevligast var det ju att Finland denna gång togs med i res-

Finlandia och YL på gästspel i Boston sjöng tre sånger — perfekt, för-

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Savon Kansa
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

HS Sept. 4, 56

Musiikkia muista maista

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Edinburghin festivaaleilla Euroopan-kiertueensa alkajaisiksi. Englantilaiset kriitikot laskivat aseensa täydellisesti. "Manchester Guardian" kirjoittaa: "Bostonin sinfonikot olivat parempia kuin Royal Philharmonic yhtä ehdottomasti kuin olivat parempia kuin Scottish National, BBC tai Hallé. Onneksi itsekunnioituksellemme se oli yhtä selvästi parempi kuin New York Philharmonic, Concertgebow tai Berliinin filharmonikot. Niin kimmeltävää korvalle oli sen soitto eilen illalla, että ainakaan tuolle illalle ei ole mahdollista löytää muististaan mitään siihen verrattavaa." Ja muita mielipiteitä: "Tosiasiassa ei maailmassa voi olla parempaa orkesteria", "Sen ääni on yksi ainoa ihmeellisen rikas silkkinen kudos".

Bostonilaisilla näyttää olevan erittäin laaja ohjelmisto kiertueellaan, mistään yhdestä ainoasta täysin harjoitellusta "edustus"-ohjelmasta ei voi olla puhetta. Paitsi täälläkin soitettavaa ohjelmaa on orkesterilla "mukanaan" ainakin seuraavat teokset: Richard Strauss: "Don Juan", Dukas: "Noidan oppipoika", Schubert: sinfonia nro 9, Bartok: Konsertto orkesterille, Paul Creston: sinfonia (1944) ja yksi Haydnin sinfonia.

* * *

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu vierailulle Suomeen

Bostonin mainehikas sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu tänään Suomeen konsertoidakseen jo samana iltana Helsingissä. Orkesteri on ehkä kuuluisin Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista. 75 vuotta kestäneen toimintansa aikana se on vieraillut monissa Euroopankin maissa.

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan, ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Ilta-Sanomat
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Charles Munch Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä tänään, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniamusiikin suosio

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin "läpi" kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkaamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Munck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux'n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaammaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajakorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soittaa "kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa". Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm. Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Sinfoniaorkesterin toimintaa seuraavat kiinteästi myös Harvard-yliopiston ja Massachusettsin teknillisen korkeakoulun opiskelijat Jotta heillä olisi tilaisuus suuremmitta kustannuksitta kuunnella orkesteria, se pitää julkisia harjoituksia, jolloin Symohony Hall on yhtä ääriään myöten täynnä kuin varsinaisissa konserteissakin.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Bethoven: Eroica: Piston: Sinfonia 6: Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

[120]

TIGHT BINDING

HUFVUDSTA

r Piston, amerikansk symfoniker

kir inför någonting oöverträff- n ovanligt i konstväg: den mmiga Boston-filharmonins t. Troligen skulle den farit d om inte vårt lilla land kun- s över en musikalisk gloria ingen världsberömd konstnär nsemble gärna vill försumma delaktig av. Det är alltså en Sibelius som vi åter får för den förestående njutir en vacker gest att upp- ärdlandets musikverk i finaste g när man kommer som gäst. rrelsutan är det ännu intres- e om gästerna bjuder välut- usik från det land där orkes- r hemma. Walter Pistons sjät- foni är ett bemärkt och upp- verk inom den hittills rätt sade symfoniska produktionen . Den är alldeles ny och pre- s för första gången i Euro- Boston-orkestern som jämte ftelse The Koussevitzky Music tion har beställt den. Kom- n har följaktligen tänkt sig m en minnesvård över den s mångåriga dirigenten och första hustru, Natalie.

ponisten påpekar att verket r inspirerat av Boston-orkes- ars klang och tolkning har nom i blodet så att han hela under skapandet "hörde" de an skrev ned. För att inte örselintrycket avhöll han sig ens kontrollera resultatet på Han har låtit instrumenten era!

omponister skriver för en sär- rkester som de har speciell till är inte ovanligt. Vi dock endast ett fall: Rimskij- ovs färgsprakande Spanskt o, tillägnat den kejserliga ij-teaterns orkester. Piston ligt sina kollegers utsago en stark orkestertekniker, så lik- med den ryska operamästaren llande.

ten sträcker sig även till Pis- rriculum vitae. Liksom den de Piston föga samband med n förrän som fullvuxen. blev marinofficer, Piston itare och konstmålare, men första världskriget tjänade merikanska flottans musikkår de sig spela saxofon. På egen ade han därtill lärt sig spela en han kände en stark drag- musiken som levnadsbana. en smula vid Harvards och reste sedan till . Med sina trettio år kun- nte mera skrivas in som onservatoriet i Paris, men tället som lärjunge av den Nadja Boulanger.

1926 återvände till Har- an med sig "Tre pjäser rinett och fagott", vilka märksamhet. Han blev måningom professor vid gen som väl närmast konservatorium Rimskij och direktor vid kon- St Petersburg. Längre dock inte likheterna, mmer ryssen och näm- ston de närmaste åren konserter, baletten The utist samt en symfoni. drade han sin stil, och 1938 har den rätlinjiga, som gett hans senare och kammarmusik dess prägel och en smickran- ning.

Piston härstammar från emigranter som tecknade Pistone. Han är en tyst- lig man med utpräglad har till sitt yttre rätt romantiska typ som man förband med italien- — han är amerikanare

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Savon Kansa
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja: ....

HS Sept. 4, '56

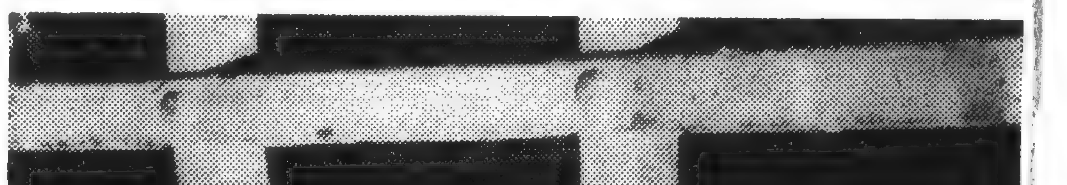
Musiikkia muista maista

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Edinburghin festivaaleilla Euroopan-kiertueensa alkajaisiksi. Englantilaiset kriitikot laskivat aseensa täydellisesti. "Manchester Guardian" kirjoittaa: "Bostonin sinfonikot olivat parempia kuin Royal Philharmonic yhtä ehdottomasti kuin olivat parempia kuin Scottish National, BBC tai Hallé. Onneksi itsekunnioituksellemme se oli yhtä selvästi parempi kuin New York Philharmonic, Concertgebow tai Berliinin filharmonikot. Niin kimmeltävää korvalle oli sen soitto eilen illalla, että ainakaan tuolle illalle ei ole mahdollista löytää muististaan mitään siihen verrattavaa." Ja muita mielipiteitä: "Tosiasiassa ei maailmassa voi olla parempaa orkesteria", "Sen ääni on yksi ainoa ihmeellisen rikas silkkinen kudos".

Bostonilaisilla näyttää olevan erittäin laaja ohjelmisto kiertueellaan, mistään yhdestä ainoasta täysin harjoitellusta "edustus"-ohjelmasta ei voi olla puhetta. Paitsi täälläkin soitettavaa ohjelmaa on orkesterilla "mukanaan" ainakin seuraavat teokset: Richard Strauss: "Don Juan", Dukas: "Noidan oppipoika", Schubert: sinfonia nro 9, Bartok: Konsertto orkesterille, Paul Creston: sinfonia (1944) ja yksi Haydnin sinfonia.

* * *

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Ilta-Sanomat
Pvm 4/9 1956
Kirjoittaja: ....



Tällainen nuori veitikka on muodostunut Muukalaiskadun varrella asuvien yhteiseksi lemmikiksi. Oravan tapaa lähes joka aamu katua reunustavan rauta-aidan harjalta, jolta se kuvanottohetkelläkin veikistelee vähääkään säikähtämättä salamavalon huikaisevaa välähdystä. Mainos on mainosta ja mitä useampia tuttavia, sitä useampia pähkinöitä…

Sähköä amatsoneille

Korealainen amatsonien saari, Chejudo, on nyt saanut sähkön. Naiset, joiden urhoollisuus on vuosisatoja ollut tunnusomaista tälle kallioiselle saarelle, työskentelevät nyt öisin voimalaitoksen valojen loisteessa, kun taas nuorempaa polvea harjoitetaan työskentelemään teollisuuden palveluksessa, mikä nyt tulee nousemaan kukoistukseen sähkön saannin yhteydessä. Ja tietysti miehetkin ovat pistäneet töpinsä peliin, vaikka heitä perinteelli-

Ilmasto on tehnyt Chejudon saaren asukkaista sitkeitä ja urhoollisia. Saari, joka sijaitsee Korean etelä-rannikon lähellä, on epävieraanvarainen muinaismuisto vulkaaniselta kaudelta, josta ovat ikävinä merkkeinä vanhat kraaterit ja laavan peittämät kalliot.

Raivoisat tuulenpuuskat pieksevät saarta kuin myrskyn kouriin joutunutta laivaa ympäri vuoden, ja asukkaat hakeutuvat laavakallioidensa taakse turvaan. Nämä korkeat kalliot suojaavat taloja ja peltoja, niin että elämä voi jatkua tuhoavien myrskytuultenkin keskellä.

Viranomaiset ovat hyvin toiveikkaita uusien voimalaitosten suhteen. Uskotaan, että ne suuressa määrin kohottavat elintasoa. Sillä nyt on tämän saaren asukkailla,

---

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu vierailulle Suomeen

Bostonin mainehikas sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu tänään Suomeen konsertoidakseen jo samana iltana Helsingissä. Orkesteri on ehkä kuuluisin Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista. 75 vuotta kestäneen toimintansa aikana se on vieraillut monissa Euroopankin maissa.

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso olisi tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan, ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Fr. sid. 1.

Europaturnén . . .

Charles Munch är född i Strassburg och har skapat sin karriär på europeisk grund, bl.a. som orkesterledare i Paris. Men efter kriget flyttade han till USA, lämnade bort ü-prickarna i sitt namn och knöts 1949 till Boston-symfonikerna. Sin franska accent har han däremot behållit, liksom passionen för holländskt 1700-talsmåleri och avsaknaden av amerikansk frejdighet och ruschighet — men som amerikan betraktar han sig ändå numera.

Han har tillochmed — om än tydligen icke utan motvilja — accepterat televisionens välsignelser och intygar att tv-konserterna snarare tycks ha ökat än minskat publikens intresse för personlig närvaro i konsertsalen. Särskilt hos den amerikanska ungdomen tycks det finnas en nyväckt entusiasm för god musik, det är aldrig brist på lyssnare, när Boston-orkestern ger sina skolungdomskonserter

Första USA-orkestern i Moskva

Sin 75-åriga tillvaro har Boston Symphony Orchestra celebrerat med en festsäsong, som kulminerar i Europaturnén — den andra i dess historia. Den första arrangerades för fyra år sedan, men nu står ännu flere länder på programmet. Ur vår synpunkt trevligast var det ju att Finland denna gång togs med i resrutten, men annars är det mest sensationella förstås att det blir två gästkonserter i Moskva Det är veterligen första gången en amerikansk orkester inbjudits att spela i östmetropolen.

Charles Munch

Hit kommer Boston-symfonikerna via Irland, Skottland och Skandinavien — vid festspelen i Edinburgh gav de fem konserter och gjorde kolossal succé. Efter Moskva går turnén vidare till Prag, Wien, Zürich, Stuttgart, München, Paris och London — varefter orkesterns 104 medlemmar och dr Munch förväntas vara pigga och utvilade för den nya säsongens start 1 oktober hemma i Boston.

Drar fram de nya

Charles Munch är inte den som hemfaller åt artighetsfraser. och sålunda får vi inte höra honom uttrycka sin glädje över att vara i Finland. Men uttrycket i hans tänkarögon när han försjunker i utsikten över Södra hamnen från Palacefönstret, eller när han tar namnen Sibelius och Järnefelt i sin mun, — det låter ana att han ingalunda är negativt inställd.

Jag minns 1954, då dirigerade jag — Sibelius har jag spelat mycket. Finlandia och YL på gästspel i Boston sjöng tre sånger — perfekt, förresten. Och Järnefelt — honom hörde jag dirigera hemma i Strassburg då jag var en ung student.

Annars sticker dr Munch med förkärlek in nya och dagsaktuella musikskaparnamn bland klassikerna på repertoaren — han och Boston-orkestern har med gemensamma krafter slagit många slag för den moderna musiken och bidragit till att dra fram i ljuset tonsättare som Copeland, Barber, Bernstein, Hanson och Piston.

[120]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Västra Nyland
Pvm 4 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester anländer

Upptakten för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir verkligt förnämlig genom Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök här — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum och medverkar vid bl. a. festspelen i Edinburgh Med orkestern kommer dirigenterna Charles Münch — Bostonsymfonins ledare sedan 1949 — och Pierre Monteux, som på turnén dirigerar några konserter, dock inte här, och Mrs. Natalie Koussevitskij, en stor Finlands-vän. Det torde intressera konsertpubliken i vårt land att orkesterns ypperlige konsertmästare Richard Burgin tidigare varit verksam vid Helsingfors stadsorkester och att en av basunisterna, Kauko Kahila, är av finskt ursprung.

Det är i år alltså 75 år sedan Bostons symfoniorkester grundades. Jubilaren har hyllats, men själv har orkestern firat sitt jubileum på det ovanliga sättet att den i sin tur delat ut gåvor till den musikintresserade världen. Under senaste säsong presenterades 15 nya verk av internationellt kända kompositörer och nu alltså ges konserter i en rad av europeiska länder, bland annat i Sovjetunionen, som ingen amerikansk orkester tidigare har besökt.

Att presentera nya verk har länge varit tradition hos Bostonsymfonin. Under orkesterns tidigare år spelade sådana orkesterledare som Henschel, Nikisch och Gericke en viktig roll för att göra Johannes Brahms förstådd i USA vid en tid då kritiker på bägge sidor av Atlanten anklagade Brahms för att vara »otillgänglig». Längre fram var det Pierre Monteuxs tur att under sin tid som ledare för orkestern från 1919 till 1924 introducera Igor Stravinskij. Den världsberömde dirigenten Sergej Koussevitskij, som avled 1951, ledde orkestern från 1924 till 1949. Han sökte outtröttligt efter nya begåvningar och var en av de första att erkänna och introducera Aaron Coplands och Bela Bartoks musik — för att bara nämna ett par namn. Även Sibelius stod högt på hans lista.

SYMFONINS BETYDELSE

Den ställning symfoniorkestrarna har vunnit i USA är unik. De är visserligen uppbyggda efter tyskt mönster, men är ändå mera typiska för Amerika än någon annan fas av seriös musik. I inget annat land har symfoniorkestern större prestige.

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkestern från 1919 till 1924, Sergej Koussevitskij, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch.

Även i Tyskland har operan alltid intagit första rummet. Ingen symfoniorkester i Tyskland eller Österrike är förmäten nog att anse sig vara av samma klass som exempelvis Staatsoper i Berlin eller Staatsoper i Wien. Förhållandet är likartat i Storbritannien, Frankrike och Italien. I Förenta staterna däremot spelade operan aldrig samma viktiga roll som i Europa. Detta är säkert den främsta anledningen till symfoninns ställning i USA. Varje stad med mer än 50.000 invånare har en symfoniorkester, men bara New York, Chicago och San Francisco har fasta operasällskap.

BOSTONSÄSONG MED 220 KONSERTER

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som de tre stora i USA. Under Sergej Koussevitskijs kvartssekellånga ledning formades orkestern till en av de mest fulländade och estetiskt sensibla symfoniska ensembler i världen. Koussevitskij efterträddes av den nuvarande orkesterledaren, Charles Münch, som också leder Europa-turnén. Från oktober till mitten av augusti ger orkestern omkring 220 konserter.

Under Koussevitskijs tid grundade symfoniorkestern en unik musikskola, Berkshire Music Center, på egendomen Tanglewood i Massachusetts, där man varje sommar undervisar i komposition, orkester- och kammarmusik, körsång och opera. Chef för skolan är nu Charles Münch och som lärare fungerar kända kompositörer och musiker från både USA och andra länder. Tanglewood är Bostonsymfonins huvudsakliga arbetsplats på sommaren och orkestern ger livligt uppskattade friluftskonserter under den musikfestival som avslutar kurserna vid Berkshire Music Center.

Den vanliga vintersäsongen om 30 veckor tar slut i april, varefter de populära »Pops»-konserterna börjar, under ledning av Arthur Fiedler, varje kväll i maj—juni. Fiedler dirigerar också friluftskonserterna vid Charles River.

Symfoniorkestern är Bostons stolthet, och dess verksamhet omfattas med livligt intresse inte minst av de tusentals studerande vid Harvard-universitetet och Massachusetts Institute of Technology i det närbelägna Cambridge. För att ge ungdomarna tillfälle till att utan stora kostnader följa orkesterns repertoar ger den offentliga repetitioner. Den stora konsertsalen är alltid fullsatt och att dirigenten ibland slår av och tar om några avsnitt är bara intressant och ökar musikkunnandet, tycker besökarna.

Vid sin konsert i Helsingfors, som den finländska publiken kan se fram emot med stora förväntningar, spelar orkestern följande program: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sjätte symfonin; Ravel: Daphnis & Chloë II.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui eilen konserttimatkalle Suomeen.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Satakunnan Kansa
Pvm 5 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pikavierailulla Suomessa

Helsingin musiikkielämän "vuoden suuri tapahtuma" sattui tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-turneellaan. Tämä Euroopan kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo v. 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa. Tällä matkallaan orkesteri "kirjoittaa historiaa" ehkä merkittävämmin kuin neljä vuotta sitten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

"Helsingin konsertissa muodostaa ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista — Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Daphnis" ja "Chloe" sekä Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma ja lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin konsertin kapellimestari Charles Münch suostui kiireestään huolimatta ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perijä osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi, myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä Mr. Leonard Burkatin vastailla kysymyksiin. Mr. Burkat kertoi kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa kyllä lukuisia vierailuja USA:n suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa kerran kuukaudessa ja Kanadassa melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suurelta. 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella. Lukuun sisältyvät kuuluisat pops-konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä. Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat orkesterin rahoitusta. Useimmat levytykset esitetään kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantona ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debussyn "San Sebastianin marttyyri", jota ei vielä ole laskettu liikkeelle.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkia kohtaan on Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa huomattavasti kasvanut. Kun Münchiltä kysyttiin, mitä hän pitää televisiokonserttien johtamisesta, kohautti hän olkapäitään hymyillen hyväntahtoisesti.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Münch sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Münch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatar-puolisoa hän oli kuullut vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa. "Muuten", innostui Münch itse kertomaan "esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia, ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet mahduttaa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet". Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusinta musiikkituotantoa amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilta tapahtuneen radioinnin avulla.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Savo
Pvm 5 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN 110-miehinen sinfoniaorkesteri saapui eilen Helsinkiin konserttimatkalla joka ulottuu mm. Neuvostoliittoon. Orkesterin johtaja maineikas Charles Münch kertoi lehdistön edustajille, että tämä konserttimatka muodostaa Bostonin sinfonikkojen 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Suomessa orkesteri esitti mm. Beethovenin "Eroica"-sinfonian. Kuvassamme orkesterin jäseniä Seutulan lentokentällä.

---

ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-turneellaan. Tämä Europan kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ylris
Lehti: Västra Nyland
Pvm 4 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester anländer

Upptakten för konsertsäsongen i Helsingfors blir verkligt förnämlig genom Bostons symfoniorkesters första besök här — orkestern konserterar i A-Mässhallen den 4 september. Orkestern befinner sig som bäst på en Europaturné som ordnats i samband med dess 75-årsjubileum och medverkar vid bl. a. festspelen i Edinburgh Med orkestern kommer dirigenterna Charles M ü n c h — Bostonsymfonins ledare sedan 1949 — och Pierre Monteux, som på turnén dirigerar några konserter, dock inte här, och Mrs. Natalie Koussevitskij, en stor Finlands-vän. Det torde intressera konsertpubliken i vårt land att orkesterns ypperlige konsertmästare Richard Burgin tidigare varit verksam

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde ork Koussevitskij, dess berömde le nuvarande dirig

symfoniorkestern större presven i Tyskland har operan id intagit första rummet.
en symfoniorkester i Tyskd eller Österrike är förmä-nog att anse sig vara av nma klass som exempelvis atsoper i Berlin eller Staatser i Wien. Förhållandet är artat i Storbritannien, Franke och Italien. I Förenta sta-na däremot spelade operan drig samma viktiga roll som i uropa. Detta är säkert den ämsta anledningen till symfo-ins ställning i USA. Varje stad ned mer än 50.000 invånare har
n symfoniorkester, men bara
New York, Chicago och San rancisco har fasta operasäll-kap.

BOSTONSÄSONG MED 220 KONSERTER

Nu räknas Bostons och Philadelphias symfoniorkestrar och New Yorks filharmoniker som

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ylris
Lehti: Satakunnan Kansa
Pvm 5 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri pikavierailulla Suomessa

Helsingin musiikkielämän "vuoden suuri tapahtuma" sattui tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-turneellaan. Tämä Euroopan kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo v. 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa. Tällä matkallaan orkesteri "kirjoittaa historiaa" ehkä merkittävämmin kuin neljä vuotta sitten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

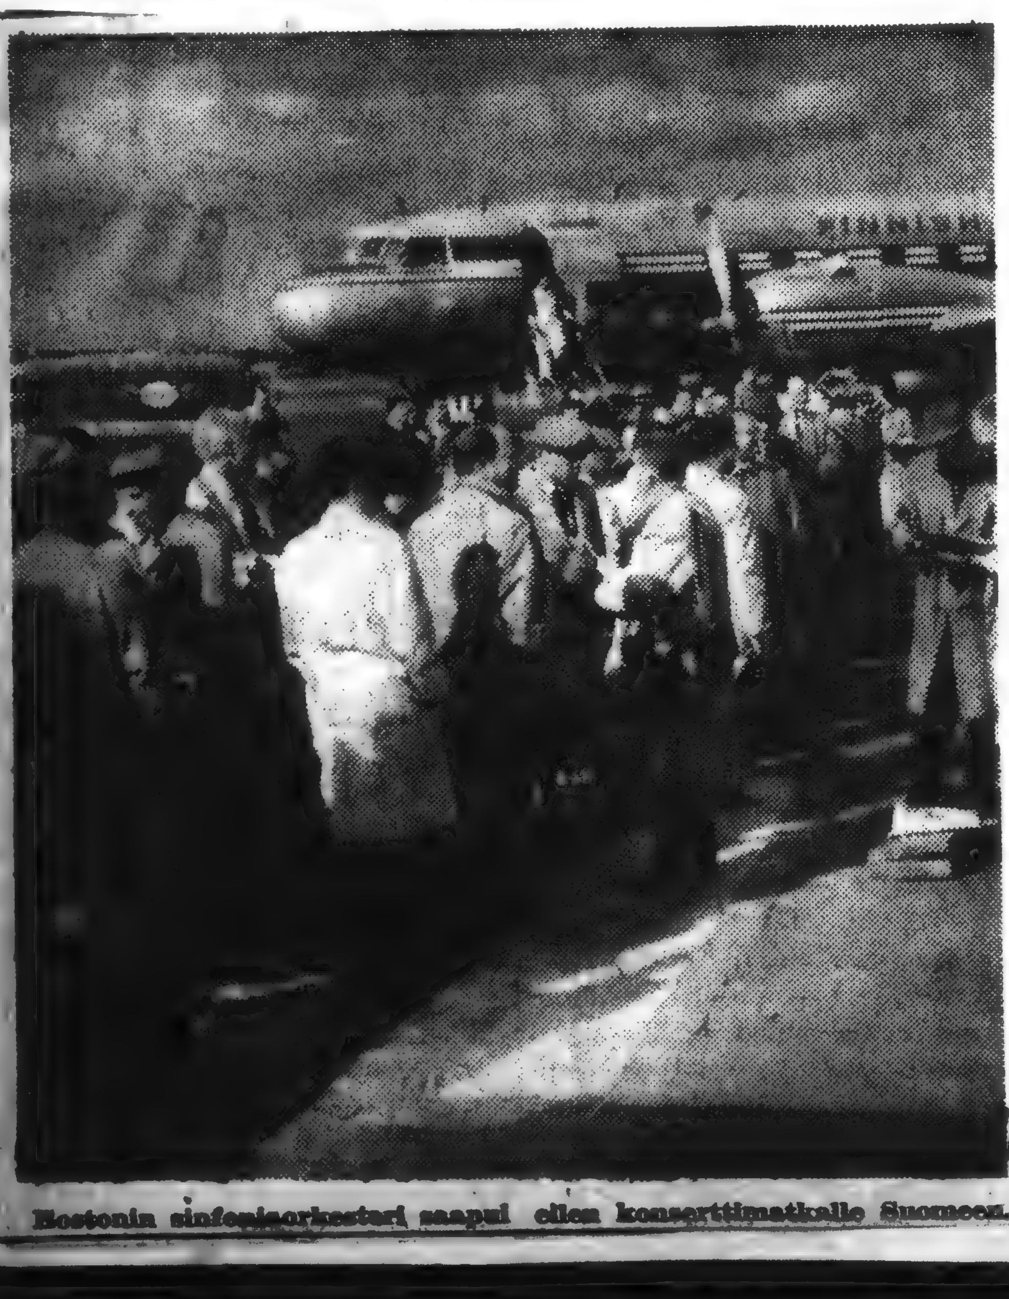
"Helsingin konsertissa muodostaa ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista — Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Daphnis" ja "Chloe" sekä Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma ja lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin konsertin kapellimestari Charles Münch suostui kiireestään huolimatta ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perijä osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi, myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä Mr. Leonard Burkatin vastailla kysymyksiin. Mr. Burkat kertoi kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa kyllä lukuisia vierailuja USA:n suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa kerran kuukaudessa ja Kanadassa melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suurelta. 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella. Lukuun sisältyvät kuuluisat pops-konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä. Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat orkesterin rahoitusta. Useimmat levytykset esitetään kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantona ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debussyn "San Sebastianin marttyyri", jota ei vielä ole laskettu liikkeelle.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkia kohtaan on Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa huomattavasti kasvanut. Kun Münchiltä kysyttiin, mitä hän pitää televisiokonserttien johtamisesta, kohautti hän olkapäitään hymyillen hyväntahtoisesti.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Münch sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Münch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatar-puolisoa hän oli kuullut vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa. "Muuten", innostui Münch itse kertomaan "esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia, ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet mahduttaa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet". Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusinta musiikkituotantoa amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilta tapahtuneen radioinnin avulla.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti: Satak
Pvm 5 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:



Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui eilen konserttimatkalle Suomeen.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm 5 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Taide

Bostonin sinfonia-orkesteri Helsinkiin

Helsingin musiikkielämän 'vuoden suuri tapahtuma' sattui tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Europpan-turneellaan. Tämä Europan kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti: Savo
Pvm 5 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN 110-miehinen sinfoniaorkesteri saapui eilen Helsinkiin konserttimatkalla joka ulottuu mm. Neuvostoliittoon. Orkesterin johtaja maineikas Charles Münch kertoi lehdistön edustajille, että tämä konserttimatka muodostaa Bostonin sinfonikkojen 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Suomessa orkesteri esitti mm. Beethovenin "Eroica"-sinfonian. Kuvassamme orkesterin jäseniä Seutulan lentokentällä.

[121]

OMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

laaja:

hti:

19

Pvm

Kir:oittaja

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin jäseniä saavuttuaan eilen lentokoneella Seutulan lentokentälle kauttakulkumatkallaan. Neuvostoliittoon.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eilen Helsingissä

Helsingin musiikkielämän "vuoden suuri tapahtuma" sattui tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopanturneellaan. Tämä Euroopan kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa. Tällä matkallaan orkesteri "kirjoittaa historiaa" ehkä merkittävämmin kuin neljä vuotta sitten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestari Charles Munch suostui kiiestään huolimatta ottamaan vasaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn nanttelin perijä osoittautui harnaahapsiseksi, myhäileväksi ja rerraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltaaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä mr.
.eonard Burkatin vastailla kysy-nyksiin. Mr. Burkat kertoi kier-ueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-uhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-niehinen orkesteri suorittaa kyllä ukuisia vierailuja USA:n suu-issa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa kerran kuukaudessa, ja Kanadassa melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaa-an suurelta, 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkia kohtaan on Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa huomattavasti kasvanut. Kun Munchilta kysyttiin mitä hän pitää televisiokonserttien johtamisesta, kohautti hän olkapäitään hymyillen hyväntahtoisesti.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Munch sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Munch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatar-puoliso hän oli kuullut vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa. Muuten, innostui Munch itse kertomaan, esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet mahduttaa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet. Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusintamusiikkituotantoa amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin. Edinburgin musiikkijuhlilta tapahtuneen radioinnin avulla. Orkesteri antoi eilistana konsertin suuressa Messuhallissa. 110-miehinen orkesteri esitti Charles Munchin johdolla Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä 2. sarjan Ravelin balettimusiikista Davhnis ja Chloe.

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

SS TELEFOTO SANOMAT

Kuuluisa Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertissaan Helsingissä eilen illalla. Johtajan korokkeella kapellimestari Charles Munch. Tilaisuutta kunnioittivat tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen läsnäolollaan.

Uusi Suomi Sept 5

[122]

mōonikkoa saapui eilen Helsingin lentokentälle, pääosa heistä Tukholmasta. Edessä vas. tri Nils-Erik Ringbom ja orkesterin johtaja Charles Mun ch (hattu päässään).

mphony Orchestra

ttui eilen
i, jossa sten olomuuden. vierai-lla, joka
Suurin
voimakä yhdelnchilllimestaeellinen ut ihvalaa allisuu-ja inhiättömän
Eilisessä aluksi oikeaan Eroica-
umarssi onaisuulkinnasppalaisen
musiikkikulttuurin hedelmöittämää seestynyttä suurpiirteisyyttä. Lopuksi taas Ravelin 2 sarja baletista Daphnis ja Chloë nousi siihen ekstaattiseen väri- ja rytmihurmioon, johon mestarillisesti kirjoitettu partituuri antaa kaikki mahdollisuudet. — Välinumerona kuultiin miellyttävänä uutuutena amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin VI sinfonia. Piston on itse sanonut, että tämä sinfonia on tarkoitettu vain "soitettavaksi ja kuunneltavaksi". Sen mukaisesti siinä olikin helposti lähestyttävää välittömyyttä, värien, rytmien ja tunneilmaisun rikkautta. Mieleen jäi erityisesti mestarillisesti kirjoitettu Vivace ja hienoa tunnelmaa henkivä Adagio sereno.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin soittajisto oli mainion kapellimestarinsa veroinen. Tämän suuren orkesterin jäsnet edustavat eri ikäpolvia ja monia kansallisuuksia niin Amerikasta kuin Euroopastakin. Ehkäpä juuri tämän vuoksi henkii kokonaisuudesta elävä taiteellisuuden taju. Tämä orkesteri ei ole kone, jonka käynti on tarkistettu äärimmäisen täsmälliseksi, vaan se on joukko yksilöllisiä taiteilijoita, joista jokaisessa on taiteen uudestiluovaa voimaa. Juuri tuo yksilöllisen vapauden säilyttäminen täydellisessä kurinalaisuudessakin on tämän soittajiston korkean tason eräänä salaisuutena. Vanhan mantereen edustajan tekisi mieli väittää juuri tämän piirteen, joka on ominaista parhaimmille eurooppalaisille orkestereille, lyvän leimansa myös Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin onnellisella tavalla.

Konserttiyleisöä oli Messuhalli täpösen täynnä; innostuneina ja juhlivina kohtasivat suosionosoitukset orkesteria ja sen johtajaa. Syyskausi alkoi todellisella tapauksella.

T. P.

aanut johtaa aista kuoroa

A NOU-nfoniaorpäivällä illalla ja nsa Leningradiin. Maanantaina oli ollut konsertti Tukholmassa, sitä ennen Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Edinburghissa. Tulossa olevat päivät ovat yhtä tiukkoja.

Siitä huolimatta oli orkesterin johtaja Charles Munch, kohdakkoin 65 vuotta täyttävä ranskalais-amerikkalainen, yhä pirteä ja tarmoa uhkuva hiljaisen leppoisalla tavallaan, kun hän hieman keskipäivän jälkeen astui Suomen kamaralle.

— Bostonin sinfoonikot ovat ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa, kertoi valkotukkainen kapellimestari Munch. Venäläisiä sinfoniaorkestereita ei ole tähän asti nähty Yhdysvalloissa, mutta toivomme vastavierailua. Leningradissa lisäksi esiinnymme myös Moskovassa, mistä matka jatkuu Prahan, Wienin, Stuttgartin, Zürichin, Pariisin ja Englannin kautta kotimaahan. Paluumatkalle lähdetään lokakuun alussa.

Euroopan kiertue, joka on orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipentuma, alkoi Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilta. Tämä oli jo kolmas kerta, jolloin Munch johti Edinburghissa. Näistä musiikkijuhlista, jotka on leimattu jopa pelkästään kaupallisiksi tilaisuuksiksi, Munch sanoi saaneensa aivan myönteisen kuvan. Edinburghissa hän esiintyi myös televisiossa. Kysyttäessä mitä hän pitää televisiossa johtamisesta, hän kohauttaa olkapäitään ja myhäilee.

Munch, jonka johtamaan orkesteriin kuuluu 110 henkeä, on ollut Bostonissa seitsemisen vuotta. Aikaisemmin hän ehti niittää mainetta Euroopassa, niin hyvin kotimaassaan Ranskassa kuin esim. Saksassa ja monissa muissa maissa.

Pienenä erikoisuutena hän mainitsee johtaneensa pari vuotta sitten Bostonissa suomalaistakin kuoroa, YLää, joka silloin oli Amerikankiertueellaan. Kuoro esitti Munchin johdolla mm. Finlandian sekä kolme kuorosävellystä ja lauloi hänen sanojensa mukaan "täydellisesti". Munch sai tällöin lahjaksi suomalaisen lasimaljakon, josta hän lausuu muutaman ylistävän sanan.

Sibeliuksen musiikin välityksellä hän on muutenkin joutunut tekemisiin Suomen kanssa. Viime kaudella oli orkesterin ohjelmistossa Sibeliuksen VII sinfonia, joka hänen mielestään on säveltäjän sinfonioista paras. Bostonin sinfoonikkojen konserttimestari Richard Burgin johti muuten Sibeliusta jo v. 1924 orkesterin kotikaupungissa pidetyssä konsertissa.

Muista suomalaisista säveltäjistä puheenollen Munch mainitsee Järnefeltin. Jo v. 1905 hän syntymäkaupunkinsa Strassburgin musiikkijuhlilla tutustui Järnefeltiin, jonka musiikkia hän on myöhemmin johtanutkin.

— Pidän niistä säveltäjistä joita johdan, hän vastaa diplomaattisesti kysymykseen, joka koskee hänen lempisäveltäjiään. Hän pitää myös modernista musiikista, ja orkesterin juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on 15 tunnetun säveltäjän töitä, mm. Britteniä, Milhaud'ta, Bernsteinia, Coplandia ja Hansonia.

Mielenkiinto musiikkia kohtaan Yhdysvalloissa on varsin suuri. Televisio on jopa lisännyt konserttien yleisömäärää. Bostonin sinfoonikoilla on kahdesti viikossa radiokonsertti, mutta silti riittää saleihinkin vielä täysi katsomo. Työtä on runsaasti, sillä orkesteri on kiertueella joka kuukausi ja pistäytyy usein myös Kanadan puolella. Euroopassa Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri vierailee nyt toisen kerran.

Levytykset näyttelevät suurta osaa orkesterin toiminnassa. Aivan äskettäin levytettiin pari uutta sinfoniaa ja muuan Debussyn suuri sävellystyö. Levytysten osuus konsertin toiminnan rahoittamisessa on erittäin huomattava.

Orkesterin jäsenistö edustaa monia eri kansallisuuksia. — Olemme kuitenkin kaikki amerikkalaisia, sanoo Munch. Kysyttäessä, pi-lissa. 110-ittivat tisiikkipals.

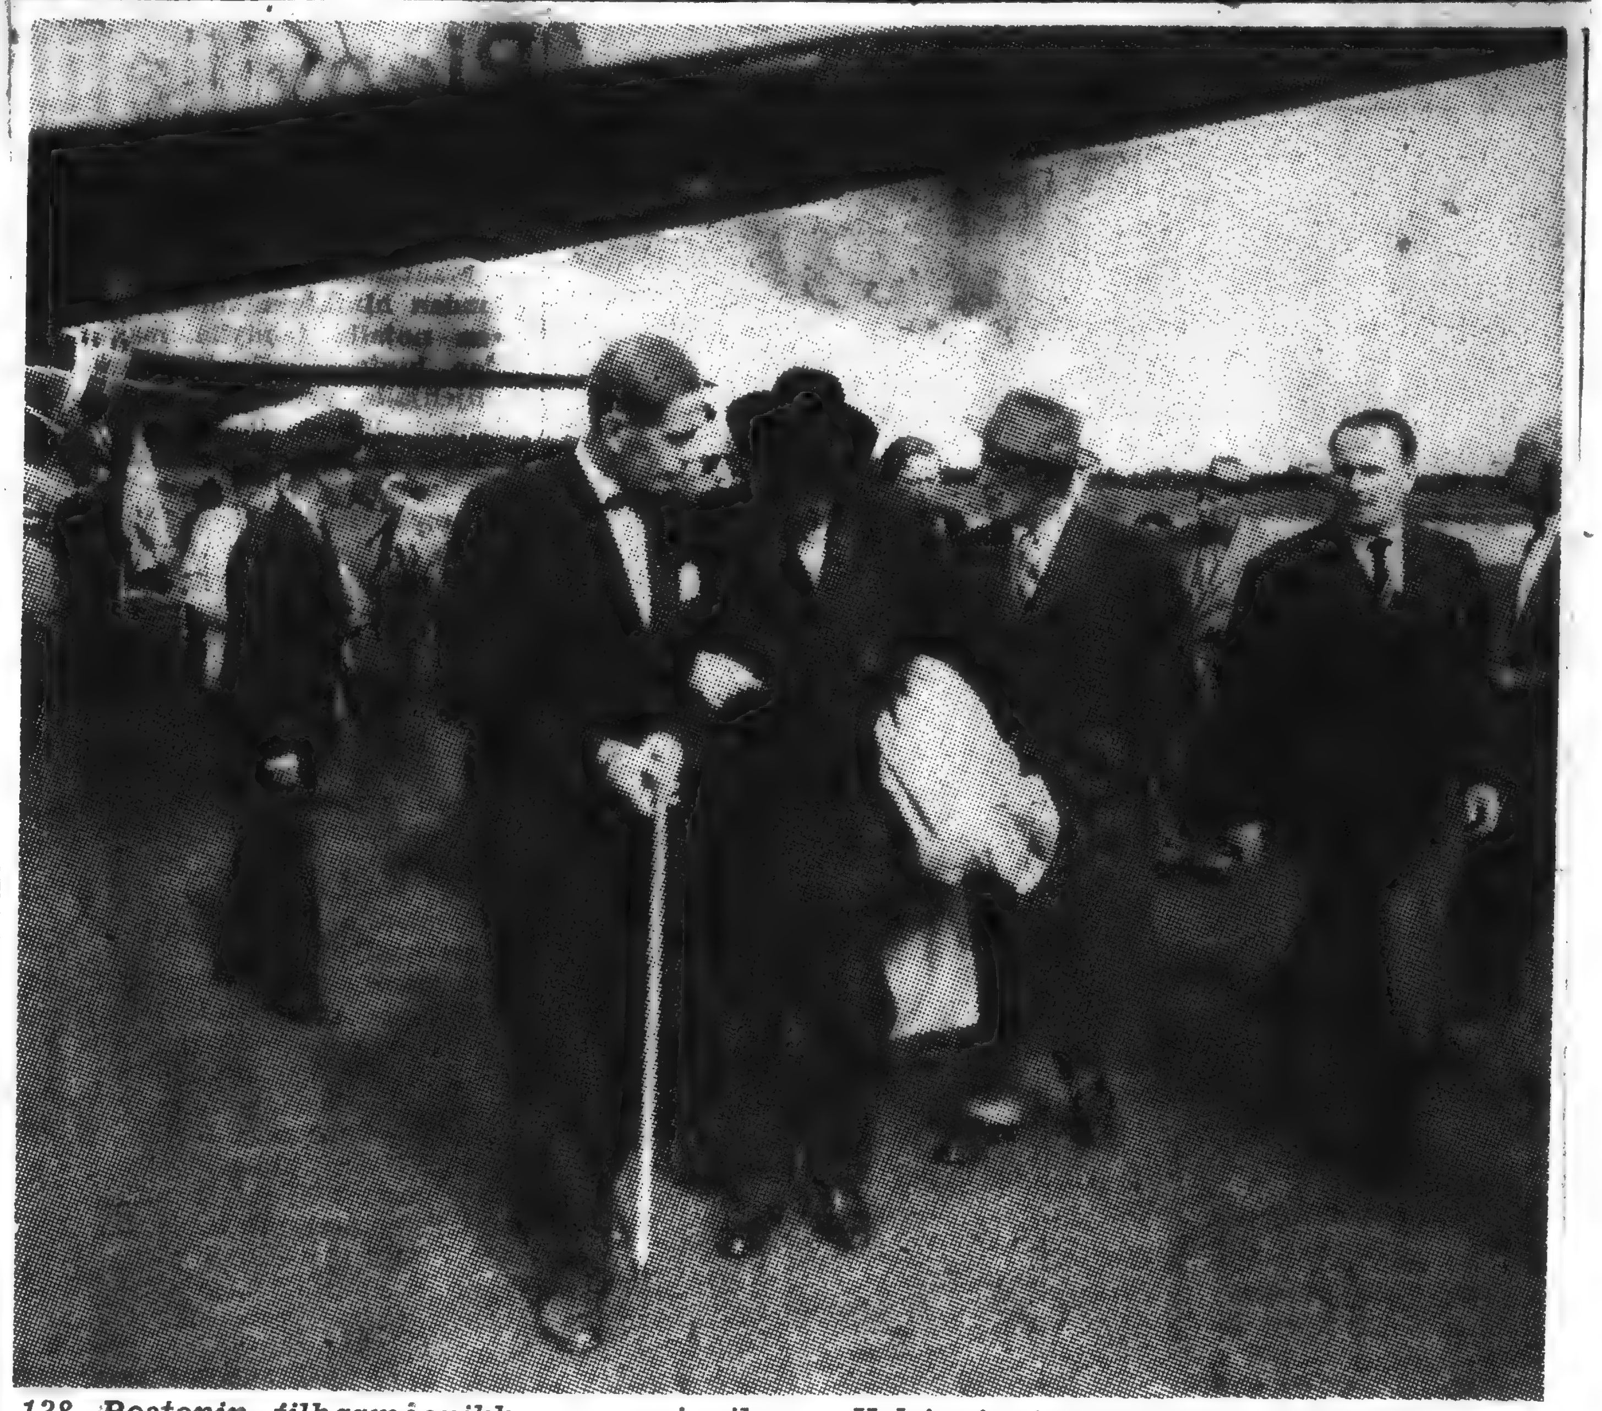
[122]

UUSI SUOMI Sept 5

SUOMI



128 Bostonin filharmoonikkoa saapui eilen Helsingin lentokentälle, pääosa heistä SAS:n vuorokoneella Tukholmasta. Edessä vas. tri Nils-Erik Ringbom ja orkesterin johtaja Charles Munch (hattu päässään).

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Arkinen Messuhalli muuttui eilen illalla taiteen temppeliksi, jossa joskus jopa unohti akustisten olosuhteidenkin mahdottomuuden. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin vierailu aloitti syyskauden tavalla, joka hevin ei lähde mielestä. Suurin ansio eilisen elämyksen voimakkuudesta kuuluu etupäässä yhdelle miehelle, Charles Munchille, suurten mittojen kapellimestarille. Munchissä ei koneellinen musiikkirobotti ole tappanut ihmistä ja taiteilijaa. Hän valaa musiikkiin suuren persoonallisuutensa voimaa, lämpimänä ja inhimillisenä virtana, ehtymättömän vitaalisesti ja sytyttävästi. Eilisessä konsertissa elävöitettiin aluksi Beethovenin jättiläishahmo oikeaan henkiseen suuruuteensa. Eroica-sinfoniassa varsinkin Surumarssi kaartui järkyttäväksi kokonaisuudeksi ja koko sinfonian tulkinnasta huokui vanhan eurooppalaisen musiikkikulttuurin hedelmöittämää seestynyttä suurpiirteisyyttä. Lopuksi taas Ravelin 2 sarja baletista Daphnis ja Chloë nousi siihen ekstaattiseen väri- ja rytmihurmioon, johon mestarillisesti kirjoitettu partituuri antaa kaikki mahdollisuudet. — Välinumerona kuultiin miellyttävänä uutuutena amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin VI sinfonia. Piston on itse sanonut, että tämä sinfonia on tarkoitettu vain ”soitettavaksi ja kuunneltavaksi”. Sen mukaisesti siinä olikin helposti lähestyttävää välittömyyttä, värien, rytmien ja tunneilmaisun rikkautta. Mieleen jäi erityisesti mestarillisesti kirjoitettu Vivace ja hienoa tunnelmaa henkivä Adagio sereno.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin soittajisto oli mainion kapellimestarinsa veroinen. Tämän suuren orkesterin jäsenet edustavat eri ikäpolvia ja monia kansallisuuksia niin Amerikasta kuin Euroopastakin. Ehkäpä juuri tämän vuoksi henkii kokonaisuudesta elävä taiteellisuuden taju. Tämä orkesteri ei ole kone, jonka käynti on tarkistettu äärimmäisen täsmälliseksi, vaan se on joukko yksilöllisiä taiteilijoita, joista jokaisessa on taiteen uudestiluovaa voimaa. Juuri tuo yksilöllisen vapauden säilyttäminen täydellisessä kurinalaisuudessakin on tämän soittajiston korkean tason eräänä salaisuutena. Vanhan mantereen edustajan tekisi mieli väittää juuri tämän piirteen, joka on ominaista parhaimmille eurooppalaisille orkestereille, lyövän leimansa myös Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin onnellisella tavalla.

Konserttiyleisöä oli Messuhalli täpösen täynnä; innostuneina ja juhlivina kohtasivat suosionosoitukset orkesteria ja sen johtajaa. Syyskausi alkoi todellisella tapauksella.

T. P.

Charles Munch:

Olen saanut johtaa suomalaista kuoroa

TIUKKAA OHJELMAA NOUDATTAVA Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui eilen päivällä Helsinkiin, konsertoi illalla ja jatkaa tänään matkaansa Leningradiin. Maanantaina oli ollut konsertti Tukholmassa, sitä ennen Oslossa, Kööpenhaminassa ja Edinburghissa. Tulossa olevat päivät ovat yhtä tiukkoja.

Siitä huolimatta oli orkesterin johtaja Charles Munch, kohdakkoin 65 vuotta täyttävä ranskalais-amerikkalainen, yhä pirteä ja tarmoa uhkuva hiljaisen leppoisalla tavallaan, kun hän hieman keskipäivän jälkeen astui Suomen kamaralle.

— Bostonin sinfoonikot ovat ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa, kertoi valkotukkainen kapellimestari Munch. Venäläisiä sinfoniaorkestereita ei ole tähän asti nähty Yhdysvalloissa, mutta toivomme vastavierailua. Leningradin lisäksi esiinnymme myös Moskovassa, mistä matka jatkuu Prahan, Wienin, Stuttgartin, Zürichin, Pariisin ja Englannin kautta kotimaahan. Paluumatkalle lähdetään lokakuun alussa.

Euroopan kiertue, joka on orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipentuma, alkoi Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilta. Tämä oli jo kolmas kerta, jolloin Munch johti Edinburghissa. Näistä musiikkijuhlista, jotka on leimattu jopa pelkästään kaupallisiksi tilaisuuksiksi, Munch sanoi saaneensa aivan myönteisen kuvan. Edinburghissa hän esiintyi myös televisiossa. Kysyttäessä mitä hän pitää televisiossa johtamisesta, hän kohauttaa olkapäitään ja myhäilee.

Munch, jonka johtamaan orkesteriin kuuluu 110 henkeä, on ollut Bostonissa seitsemisen vuotta. Aikaisemmin hän ehti niittää mainetta Euroopassa, niin hyvin kotimaassaan Ranskassa kuin esim. Saksassa ja monissa muissa maissa.

Pienenä erikoisuutena hän mainitsee johtaneensa pari vuotta sitten Bostonissa suomalaistakin kuoroa, YLää, joka silloin oli Amerikan-kiertueellaan. Kuoro esitti Munchin johdolla mm. Finlandian sekä kolme kuorosävellystä ja lauloi hänen sanojensa mukaan ”täydellisesti”. Munch sai tällöin lahjaksi suomalaisen lasimaljakon, josta hän lausuu muutaman ylistävän sanan.

Sibeliuksen musiikin välityksellä hän on muutenkin joutunut tekemisiin Suomen kanssa. Viime kaudella oli orkesterin ohjelmistossa Sibeliuksen VII sinfonia, joka hänen mielestään on säveltäjän sinfonioista paras. Bostonin sinfoonikkojen konserttimestari Richard Burgin johti muuten Sibeliusta jo v. 1924 orkesterin kotikaupungissa pidetyssä konsertissa.

Muista suomalaisista säveltäjistä puheenollen Munch mainitsee Järnefeltin. Jo v. 1905 hän syntymäkaupunkinsa Strassburgin musiikkijuhlilla tutustui Järnefeltiin, jonka musiikkia hän on myöhemmin johtanutkin.

— Pidän niistä säveltäjistä joita johdan, hän vastaa diplomaattisesti kysymykseen, joka koskee hänen lempisäveltäjiään. Hän pitää myös modernista musiikista, ja orkesterin juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on 15 tunnetun säveltäjän töitä, mm. Britteniä, Milhaud'ta, Bernsteinia, Coplandia ja Hansonia.

Mielenkiinto musiikkia kohtaan Yhdysvalloissa on varsin suuri. Televisio on jopa lisännyt konserttien yleisömäärää. Bostonin sinfoonikoilla on kahdesti viikossa radiokonsertti, mutta silti riittää saleihinkin vielä täysi katsomo. Työtä on runsaasti, sillä orkesteri on kiertueella joka kuukausi ja pistäytyy usein myös Kanadan puolella. Euroopassa Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri vierailee nyt toisen kerran.

Levytykset näyttelevät suurta osaa orkesterin toiminnassa. Aivan äskettäin levytettiin pari uutta sinfoniaa ja muuan Debussyn suuri sävellystyö. Levytysten osuus konsertin toiminnan rahoittamisessa on erittäin huomattava.

Orkesterin jäsenistö edustaa monia eri kansallisuuksia. — Olemme kuitenkin kaikki amerikkalaisia, sanoo Munch. Kysyttäessä, pi-

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Uusi
Lehti: Uusi
Pvm 5 9
Kirjoittaja:

MEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
EIKELMÄPALVELU

19 taiman uhrina Kuopio

raa 3. 9. 1956.

vaten:

liso, lapset ja laste

Sinkädessäsi, Herra, o
luki

Rakkaamme siuaan Vehmersalmen han sunnuntaina 9. 1956 klo 15, jos täten sukulaisille, apureille ja tuttav senä kutsuna ilmtaan. Kokoonnutaa kaan Heiskalaan 110.

✝

Rakas mieheni ja isäe

TAAVETT
MARTIKAINN

synt. 9. 7. 1905, sai kaimansa kotiinkutsun 9. 1956 Varpaisjärvellä.

Syvästi kaivaten:
Elina o.s. Nissinen,
Lea, Anita, Ritva, A
ja Marjaana.
Sisko ja veljet.

Kun syntinen vaan
saa nukkua haavoihin.
Herran
ja helmasta maan
taas herätä taivaassa kerran.

Sydä
KI
kaikille nii
nioitti

ANNA
HART
muistoa ja
vään suruu

Varpaisjä
mestar

Varpaisjärv mestaruuskilp
mv. Janne
Kilpailukohtei rungon leimik oli n. 50-vuo toinen n. 60 v metsä, jossa k sena. Tässä l kokonaan ja vennettava re de osoittautui edellinen.

Mallileimau metsänhoitaja sekä metsäne hiainen ja Re

Tuloksia:

1) Kalevi I
2) Aapro Ku
Ollikainen 27
277 5) Toim
Tauno Kankk
Sutinen 274 8
Iivari Vännin
pinen.

Nuorten sa
nen 262 pist
nen 261 3) E

Pitäjänmes lahjoittanut kassa.

Aikaisemmi
läleimauskilp

Kärsämäki
ja Martti T
Uuno Pirinen

Itäkoski: 1
2) Hannes T
Ukkonen 87

Korpinen:
90 2) Urho
mari Pasane

Lukkarila:
nen 92 2) To jo Lahtelin 9

Varpaisjär set: 1) Kalle ro Niiranen 87 4) Veikko mo Korhonen 85 7) Väinö
no Valkonen
Mauno Itkon

Sekalaisia ilmoituksia

Skullfrid Niskanen — Wallenin

LIIKUNTAKOULU

aloittaa jälleen toimintansa, mikäli tarpeeksi oppilaita ilmoittautuu. Ilmoittautuminen tänään keskiviikkona VPK:n talossa klo 19.

Sydämellinen

KIITOKSENI

kaikille niille, jotka muistivat minua lauluin, lahjoin, kukkasin ja adressein täyttäessäni 50 vuotta.

Einari Partanen.

Muistettavaa

Pieksämäen Työväenopisto. Kesämajatalkoot jatkuvat keskiviikkona ja perjantaina. Lähtö klo 17 opistolta. Sunnuntaina lähtö klo 8.

Pieksämäen seudun reumayhdistyksen ompeluilta on tänään keskiviikkona klo 19 terveystalossa.

Munition
Achtung Lebensgefa
Betreten verbote

Läpikulkumat miehinen orke laisuutta läsn

issa. 110-oittivat tisiikkipals.

UUSI SUOMI Sept 5 [122]

OMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

täjman uhrina Kuopio
raa 3. 9. 1956.

vaten:

liso, lapset ja laster

Sinkädessäsi, Herra, o
luki

Rakkaamme siiaan Vehmersalmen han sunnuntaina ?. 1956 klo 15, jos täten sukulaisille, apureille ja tuttav senä kutsuna ilmtaan. Kokoonnutaa kaan Heiskalaan klo.

✝

Rakas mieheni ja isäe

TAAVETT MARTIKAINN

synt. 9. 7. 1905, sai kaamansa kotiinkutsun 9. 1956 Varpaisjärvellä.

Syvästi kaivaten:

Elina o.s. Nissinen,
Lea, Anita, Ritva, A ja Marjaana.
Sisko ja veljet.

Kun syntinen vaan
saa nukkua haavoihin.
Herran
ja helmasta maan
taas herättä taivaassa kerran.

Sydä
KI
kaikille nii
nioitti

ANNA
HART
muistoa ja
vään suruu

Sekalaisia ilmoituksa

Skullfrid Niskanen — Wallenin

LIIKUNTAKOULU

aloittaa jälleen toimintansa, mikäli tarpeeksi oppilaita ilmoittautuu. Ilmoittautuminen tänään keskiviikkona VPK:n talossa klo 19.

Sydämellinen
KIITOKSENI
kaikille niille, jotka muistivat minua lauluin, lahjoin, kukkasin ja adressein täyttäessäni 50 vuotta.

Einari Partanen.

Muistettavaa

Pieksämäen Työväenopisto. Kesämajatalkoot jatkuvat keskiviikkona ja perjantaina. Lähtö klo 17 opistolta. Sunnuntaina lähtö klo 8.

Pieksämäen seudun reumayhdistyksen ompeluilta on tänään keskiviikkona klo 19 terveystalossa.

Varpaisjä mestar

Varpaisjärv mestaruuskilp mv. Janne Kilpailukohteit rungon leimik oli n. 50-vuot toinen n. 60 v metsä, jossa k sena. Tässä k kokonaan ja vennettava re de osoittautui edellinen.

Mallileimau metsänhoitaja sekä metsäne hiainen ja Re

Tuloksia:

1) Kalevi I 2) Aapro Ku Ollikainen 27 277 5) Toim Tauno Kankl Sutinen 274 8 Iivari Vännin pinen.

Nuorten sa nen 262 pist nen 261 3) E

Pitäjänmes lahjoittanut kassa.

Aikaisemm läleimauskilp

Kärsämäki ja Martti T Uuno Pirinen

Itäkoski: 1 2) Hannes T Ukkonen 87

Korpinen: 90 2) Urho mari Pasanen

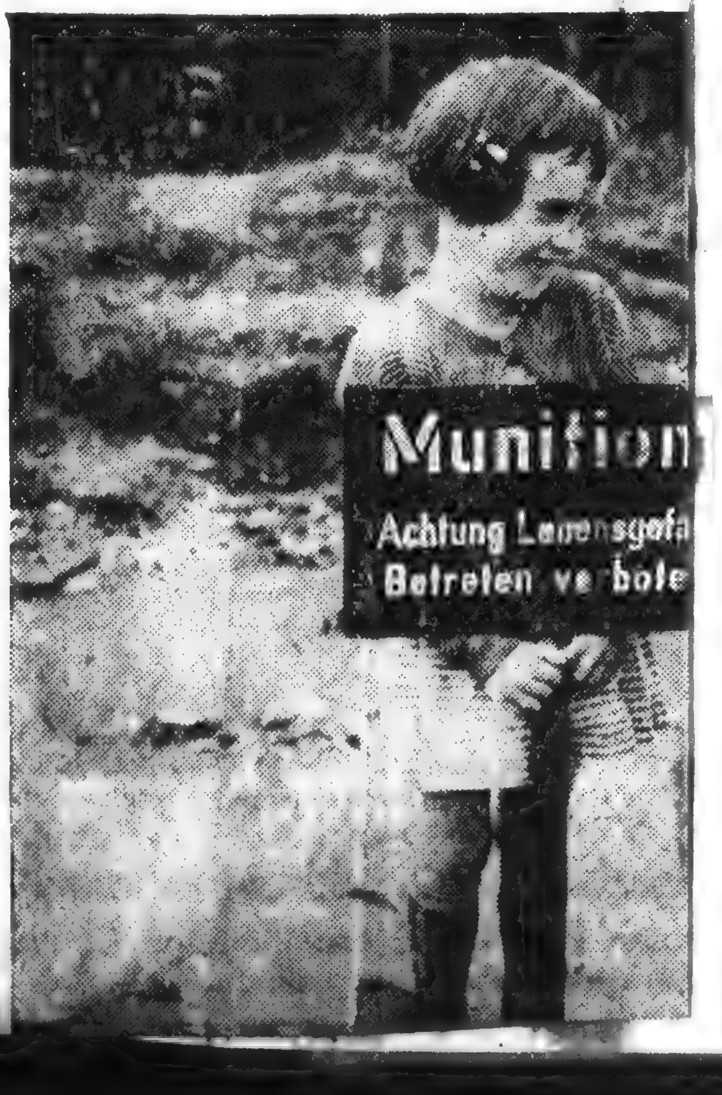
Lukkarila nen 92 2) To jo Lahtelin 9 Varpaisjär set: 1) Kalle ro Niiranen 87 4) Veikko mo Korhonen 85 7) Väinö no Valkonen Mauno Itkon



SUOMI

Krupp rakentaa valtavan terästehtaan Intiaan

— Uuden Suomen kirjeenvaihtajalta —

TUKHOLMA, tiistaina. — V. Krupp-yhtymä on saanut voiton kilpailijoistaan tarjouksissa valtavan terästeollisuuskeskuksen rakentamiseksi Rourkelaan Intiaan. Intian hallitus on näinä päivinä allekirjoittanut alustavan sopimuksen länsisaksalaisen konsortion kanssa, jonka johdossa Krupp-yhtymä on. Kysyvat Krupp-yhtymän ohella Demag ja kolme muuta suurta länsisaksalaista terästeollisuusyritystä. Lisäksi rakennetaan todellinen mallikaupunki 100.000 asukasta varten teräskeskuksen yhteyteen, niin että koko jättiläissuunnitelman kustannukset nousevat yli 200 milj. dollarin.

Länsi-Saksan teollisuus on siten saanut vahvan jalansijan Intiassa

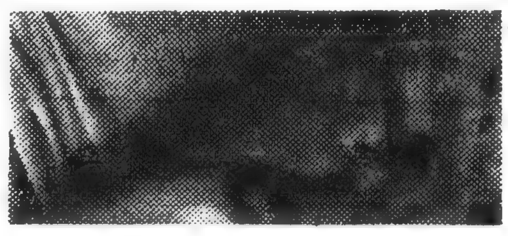
Norjan maksutase osoittaa alijäämää

— Uuden Suomen kirjeenvaihtajalta —

TUKHOLMA, tiistaina. — V.

Norjan ulkomainen maksutase on huonontunut huolestuttavassa määrin kuluvan vuoden toisen neljänneksen aikana. Norjan tilastollisen keskustoimiston tietojen mukaan maksutase osoitti tammi—maaliskuussa ylijäämää 65 milj. kruunua, mutta huhti—kesäkuussa 285 milj. kruunun vajausta, niin että koko vuoden alkupuolisko päättyi 220 milj. kruunun va-

Maahamme on saapunut ven käytössä jo kolmattakymment moottori, jonka teho on 93 hv sellä apumoottor



Metsäpuiden rodunjalostussäätiön toiminnanjohtaja, metsänhoitaja Max Hagman selosti kutsuvieraille jalostusaseman toimintaa.

ta ja perustustöistä johtuen on aseman kylvö- ja istutustyöt tänä vuonna päästy aloittamaan normaalia tuntuvasti myöhemmin, vasta kesäkuussa. Tästä ja poikkeuksellisen kuivasta alkukesästä johtuen esittäytyvät erikoisesti kylvökset nyt epätasaisina ja normaalia pienempikasvuisina.

Kesantoa on taimitarhalla normaalia enemmän, eli n. puolet peltoalasta. Käytännöllisistä syistä johtuen jakaantuu taimitarha kahteen lohkoon, joiden välimatka on n. 600 m.

Jalostusaseman tarkoituksena on kasvattaa materiaalia käytännön olosuhteissa tapahtuvaa kpl (0,20 ha), niiden joukossa useiden valittujen pluskuusien jälkeläisiä. Ulkomaisia puulajeja on taimitarhassa kylvettynä 15 eri lajiketta. Näiden taimimääriä ei voi vielä varmuudella todeta lajikkeiden siemenelle tunnusomaisen itämistavan takia. Osa siemenistä itää nimittäin vasta yhden talven ”kylmä—kostea käsittelyn” jälkeen.

Jalostusasema tulee, paitsi taimia, tuottamaan myös monistettuja vartteita. Nämä käytetään paitsi erilaisiin kokeiluihin emopuun ominaisuuksien selvittämiseksi, myös risteytystoimintaan, sekä metsäpuiden siemenviljelyksien perustamiseen.

Taimitarhassa on tällä hetkellä vartteita (mänty, kuusi, lehtikuusi, koivu, leppä ja jalot puulajit) n. 1.200 kpl (pa. 0,12 ha). Osassa vartteita voidaan jo nähdä käpyjä. Tulevaa varttamistoimintaa varten on männyn perusrunkoja n. 2.000 kpl ja lehtikuusen n. 1.000 kpl. Asema osallistuu myös kansainväliseen tutkimustoimintaan. Tästä esimerkkinä on aseman taimitarhassa parhaillaan menossa kansainvälinen poppelikoe.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Ulrich
Lehti: Uusi Suomi
Pvm 5 / 9 19 57.
Kirjoittaja:

Läpikulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon antoi Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri eilisiltana konsertin Messuhallissa. 110-miehinen orkesteri esiintyi Charles Munchin johdolla. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan. — Kuvassa Charles Munch johtaa suurorkesteria Messuhallissa. — Tarkemmin musiikkipalstoilla.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Hels. San.
Pvm 5 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: USIS
Lehti: Turun St
Pvm 5 9 1952
Kirjoittaja:

FINNISH AIRLIN
KLM

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin jäsenet muodostivat pitkän jonon Seutulan kentän passintarkastusluukulle.

Bostonilaiset saapuivat

Puolen päivän aikaan oli Seutulan kentällä tavallista suurempi ruuhka Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin saapuessa kahdella koneella. Väliin ehti laskeutua vielä yksi kone Moskovasta. Passintarkastuksessa oli pitkä jono kuuluisia muusikkoja vilkkaasti jutellen, huudellen toisiaan lehtimiesten haastateltavaksi ja laskien leikkiä. Iloisesta soittajajoukosta ei tosiaan päältä nähnyt, että he soittavat kuutena päivänä viikossa konsertin ja matkustavat miltei joka päivä siinä välissä uuteen maahan. Tänä päivänä on taas viikko tullut täyteen ja orkesteri viettää vapaapäiväänsä jo Leningradin kaduilla.

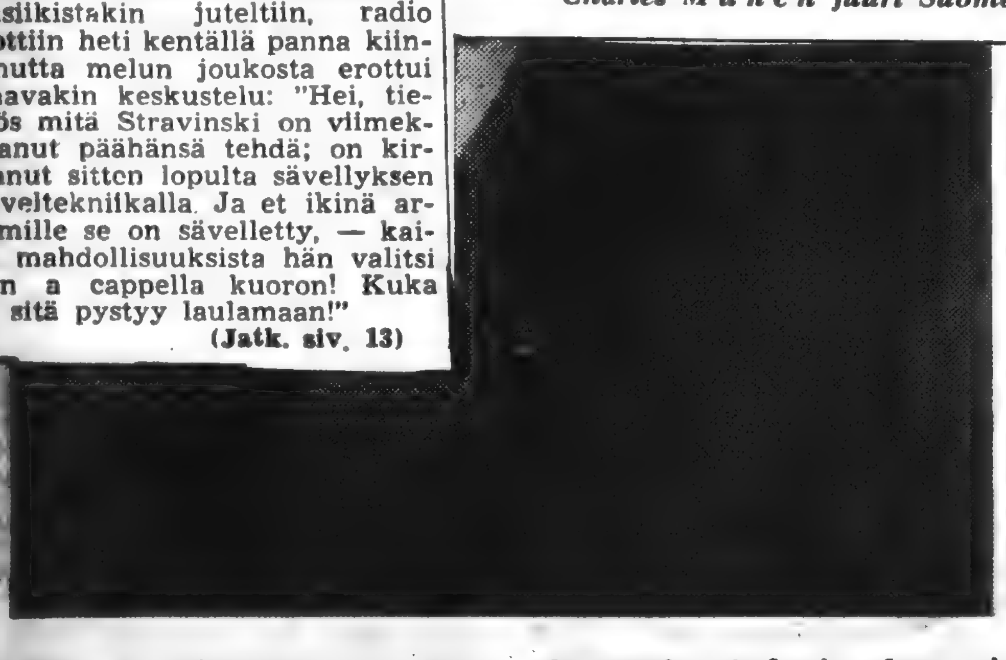
Konserttitoimisto Fazerin johtaja Roger Lindberg ja tri Nils-Eric Ringbom ottivat kentällä vastaan bostonilaiset. Charles Münch saapui ensimmäisessä koneessa sihteerinsä ja soittajajoukon kanssa. Kymmentä minuuttia myöhemmin toinen suuri kone purki muusikkolastinsa muutamaksi tunniksi Suomen kamaralle.

Kolmella bussilla, jotka tulivat täpötäyteen muusikoita ja matkalaukkuja, tehtiin iloista matkaa kohti Helsinkiä Seutulasta. Jo kentällä bussien odottaessa viimeisiä soittajia, olivat orkesterin muut jäsenet ahkerasti bussin torvien ja soittonappuloiden kimpussa päästäkseen vihdoin liikkeelle. Vauhti ei ilmeisesti ollut amerikkalainen ja kova melu vallitsi bussissa. Haettiin matkalaukkuja, kavereita ja huudettiin "Lets get going". Matkalla kukin halusi kysyä reportterilta hotellinsa ja konserttipaikan karttaansa, joten haastattelija joutui oikeastaan ristituleen.

Musiikistakin juteltiin, radio tahdottiin heti kentällä panna kiinni, mutta melun joukosta erottui seuraavakin keskustelu: "Hei, tiedätkös mitä Stravinski on viimeksi saanut päähänsä tehdä; on kirjoittanut sitten lopulta sävellyksen 12-säveltekniikalla. Ja et ikinä arvaa mille se on sävelletty, — kaikista mahdollisuuksista hän valitsi siihen a cappella kuoron! Kuka hitto sitä pystyy laulamaan!"

(Jatk. siv. 13)

LEHTIKUVA
Charles Münch juuri Suomen kamaralle saapuneena.



Eilen maahamme saapuneen Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin maineikas johtaja Charles Münch.

Euroopan-turneellaan.

Tämä Euroopan kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa. Tällä matkallaan orkesteri ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin konsertissa muodostaa ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista — Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Dahpnis ja Chloe" ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma ja lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestari Charles Münch osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä, mr staillа ky- kertoi kier- kesterin 75- ostonin 110- orittaa lu- n suurissa New York- issa kerran kuukaudessa, ja Kanadassa melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Münch sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Münch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatarpuolisoa hän oli kuullut vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa. Muuten, innostui Münch itse kertomaan, esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia, ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet mahduttaa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet. Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusinta musiikkituotantoa amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin Edinburgin musiikkijuhlilta tapahtuneen radioinnin avulla.

niaorkesteria Helsingin Messuhallissa eilen issa.

TULI
AMME

ORKESTERI SOITTI EILEN MESSUHALLISSA

Läpikulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon antoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri eilisiltana konsertin suuressa messuhallissa. 110 miehinen orkesteri esitti Charles Münchin johdolla Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä 2. sarjan Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chloe.

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

RAHASTO
ELU

---

infoniaorkesteri gin konserttikauden

vuo- sattui aihee- kon- n sin- vierai- opan-ei ole llä jo sinfonia-orkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa. Tällä matkallaan orkesteri »kirjoittaa historiaa», ehkä merkittävimmin siten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyi Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin konsertissa muodosti ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista — Beethovenin »Eroica», Ravelin »Daphnis Chloe» ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia.

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Münch Helsingin konsertin kapellimestari, sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Münch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatar-puolisoa hän oli kuullut vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa. Muuten, innostui Münch itse kertomaan, esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia, ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet mahduttaa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet. Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusinta musiikkituotantoa amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin Edinburgin musiikkijuhlilta tapahtuneen radioinnin avulla.

[123]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm
Kirjoittaja:

Konsertti Helsingissä

Läpikulkumatkalaan Neuvosto liittoon antoi Bostonin sinfoni orkesteri eilisiltana konsert Suuressa Messuhallissa. 110-mi hinen orkesteri esitti Charl Munchin johdolla Beethoven Eroica-sinfonian, amerikkalais Walter Pistonin kuudennen si fonian sekä 2. sarjan Ravelin b lettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chl

Tasavallan presidentti ja rou Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisu ta läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Hels. San.
Pvm 5/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Säätila syyskuun 4 pnä klo 20:

Islannista Etelä-Skandinavian yli Etelä-Venäjälle ulottuu korkeapaineen alue. Lapissa on matalapaineen keskus, joka liikkuu kaakkoon päin. Sen länsipuolella leviää maahamme kolea luoteinen ilmavirtaus, jossa esiintyy paikallisia sadekuuroja. Odotettavissa iltaan asti:

Ahvenanmaalla, Turun ja Porin, Uudenmaan, Hämeen ja Vaasan läänissä voimistuvaa, luoteeseen kääntyvää tuulta, lisääntyvää pilvisyyttä, paikoitellen sadekuuroja, vähän kylmempää.

Kymen, Mikkelin ja Kuopion läänissä voimistuvaa, luoteeseen tai pohjoiseen kääntyvää tuulta, puolipilvistä tai pilvistä ja monin paikoin sadekuuroja, kylmempää. — Oulun ja Lapin läänissä kohtalaista tai navakkaa pohjoistuulta, puolipilvistä tai pilvistä, monin paikoin sadekuuroja, koleaa.

Sää

Kotimaisilla havaintoasemilla eilen klo 14 (aseman nimen jälkeen ensin lämpötila, sitten tuulen suunta ja nopeus sekä lopuksi pilvisyys ja sademäärä):

Helsinki 13, SW 2, pilvistä; Turku 17, SW 3, selkeätä; Maarianhamina 18, SW 3, selkeätä; Pori 15, W 4, melkein selkeätä; Tampere 14, W 4, pilvistä; Lappeenranta 14, SW 3, melkein pilvistä; Mikkeli 13, SW 3, pilvistä; Joensuu 10, S 3, pilvistä; Kuopio, lentok. 6, SW 2, melkein pilvistä; Jyväskylä, lentok. 14, WSW 3, puolipilvistä; Kauhava 12, W 4, melkein selkeätä; Vaasa 13, WSW 4, puolipilvistä; Kajaani 10, SSW 1, pilvistä; Oulu 10, W 4, melkein selkeätä; Kuusamo 4, tyyntä, sadetta; Kemi 11, W 3, puolipilvistä; Rovaniemi, lentok. 8, W 3, pilvistä, 0,5; Sodankylä 5, S 1, heikkoa sadetta; Ivalo 6, SW 2, puolipilvistä, 2; Nuorgam 6, SW 3, pilvistä.

Lämpötila ulkomailla

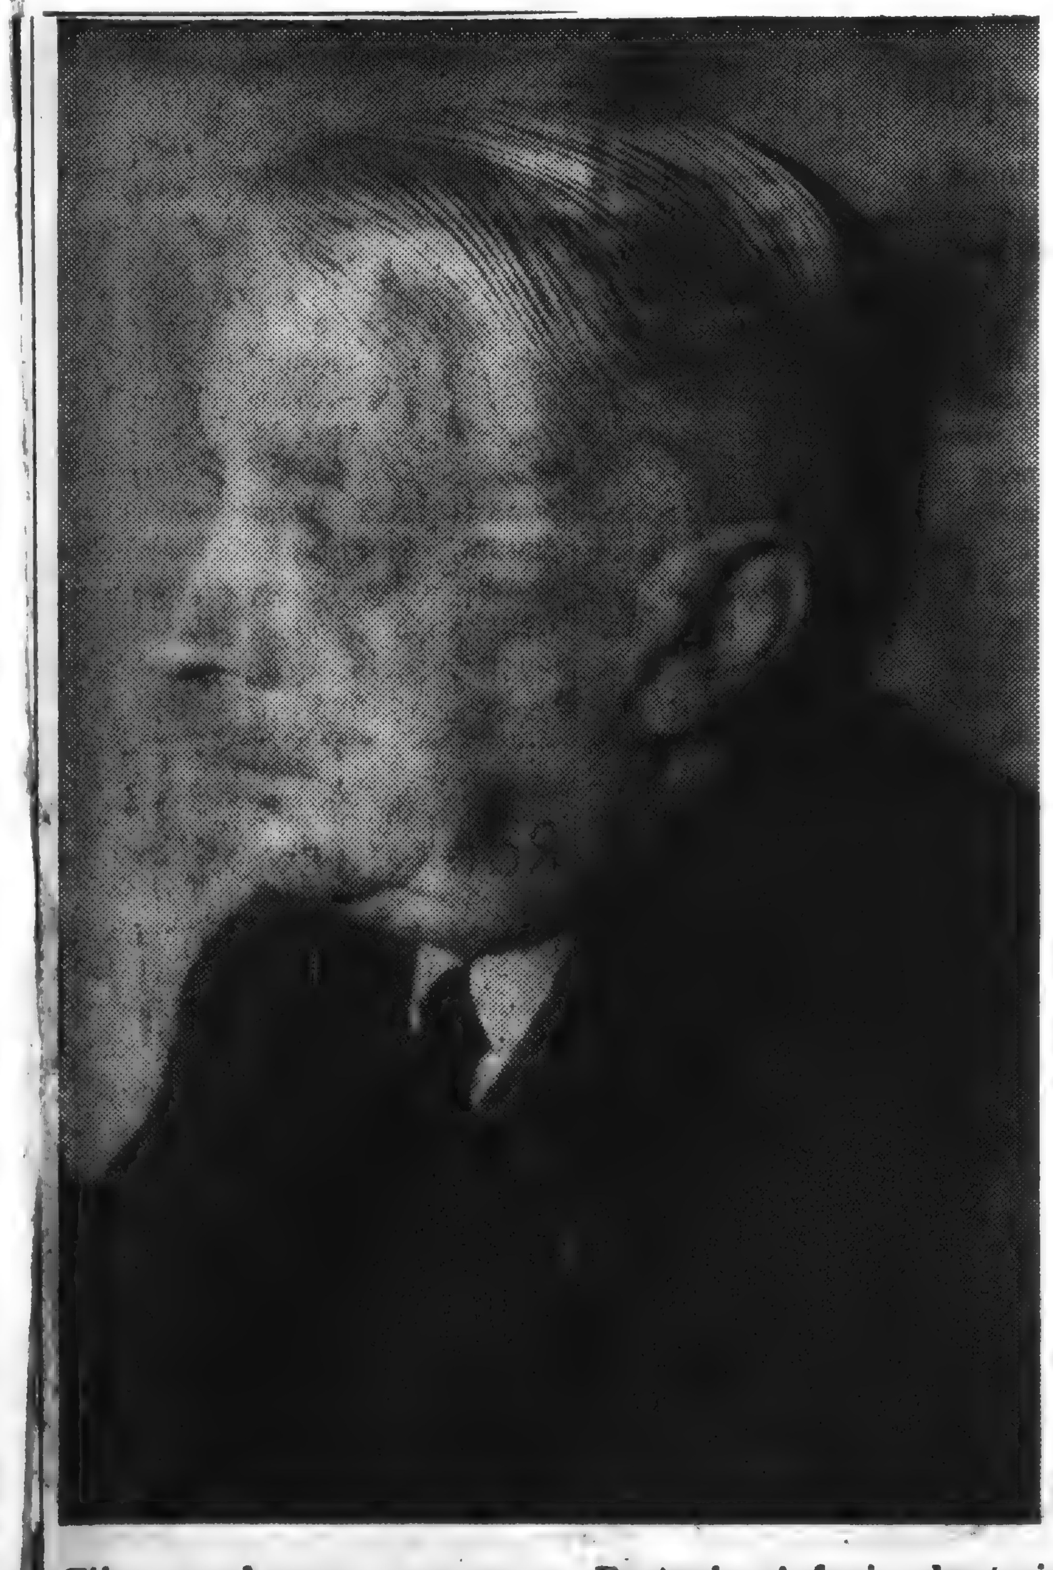
Tukholma 20, Oslo 17, Kööpenhamina 18, Berliini 20, Lontoo 16, Pariisi 16, Madrid 29, Rooma 28, Moskova 14.

Peilikirkas lattia ilmaan hankaamista

Juuri nyt on lattioiden kunnostamisaika! Antakaa niille uusi, kauniimpi, kirkkaampi ja ehdottoman kovakiiltoinen pinta! Levittäkää itsekiilloittuvaa JOHN-

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 5/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:



Eilen maahamme saapuneen Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin maineikas johtaja Charles Münch.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 5/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri
aloitti Helsingin konserttikauden

Helsingin musiikkielämän vuoden »suuri tapahtuma» sattui tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-turneellaan.

Tämä Euroopan kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfonia-orkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa. Tällä matkallaan orkesteri »kirjoittaa historiaa», ehkä merkittävimmin siten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyi Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin konsertissa muodosti ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista — Beethovenin »Eroica», Ravelin »Daphnis Chloe» ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia.

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Münch Helsingin konsertin kapellimestari, sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Münch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatar-puolisoa hän oli kuullut vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa. Muuten, innostui Münch itse kertomaan, esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia, ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet mahduttaa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet. Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusinta musiikkituotantoa amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin Edinburgin musiikkijuhlilta tapahtuneen radioinnin avulla.

[123]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: USIS
Lehti: Turun Sl.
Pvm 5/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

TS TELEFOTO

Kapellimestari Münch johtaa kuuluisaa Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria Helsingin Messuhallissa eilen pidetyssä konsertissa.

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI TULI EILEN PIKAVIERAILULLE MAAHAMME

Helsingin musiikkielämän "vuoden suuri tapahtuma" sattui tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-turneellaan.

Tämä Euroopan kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfonia-orkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa. Tällä matkallaan orkesteri ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin konsertissa muodostaa ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista — Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Dahpnis ja Chloe" ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma ja lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestari Charles Münch osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä, mr Leonard Burkatin vastailla kysymyksiin. Mr Burkat kertoi kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa lukuisia vierailuja USA:n suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa kerran kuukaudessa, ja Kanadassa melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Münch sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Münch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatarpuolisoa hän oli kuullut vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa. Muuten, innostui Münch itse kertomaan, esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia, ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet mahduttaa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet. Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusinta musiikkituotantoa amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin Edinburgin musiikkijuhlilta tapahtuneen radioinnin avulla.

ORKESTERI SOITTI EILEN MESSUHALLISSA

Läpikulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon antoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri eilisiltana konsertin suuressa messuhallissa. 110 miehinen orkesteri esitti Charles Münchin johdolla Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä 2. sarjan Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chloe.

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm 19
Kirjoittaja:

Konsertti Helsingissä

Läpikulkumatkalaan Neuvostoliittoon antoi Bostonin sinfonia-orkesteri eilisiltana konsertin Suuressa Messuhallissa. 110-miehinen orkesteri esitti Charles Munchin johdolla Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä 2. sarjan Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chloe.

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
ilaaja:
ehti:
vm 19
Kirjoittaja:

Musiikki

Bostonin sinfoonikot saapuivat Helsinkiin

Helsingin musiikielämän »vuoen suuri tapahtuma» sattui tä ä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. o ennen varsinaisen konserttiauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniarkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-turneellaan. Tämä Euroopan kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa. Tällä matkallaan orkesteri »kirjoittaa historiaa» ehkä merkittävämmin kuin neljä vuotta sitten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin konsertissa muodostaa ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista — Beethovenin »Eroica», Ravelin »Daphnis ja Chloe» ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma ja lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestari Charles Mynch suostui kiireestäun huolimatta ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perijä osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi joka antoi sihteerinsä mr. Leonard Burkatin vastailla kysymyksiin. Mr. Burkat kertoi kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa lukuisia vierailuja USA:n suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa kerran kuukaudessa, ja Kanadassa melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suurelta. 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella, mihin lukuun sisältyvät kuuluisat »pops»-konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä. Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat orkesterin rahoitusta. Useimmat levytykset esitetään kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantoa ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debussyn »San Sebastianin marttyyri» jota ei vielä ole laskettu liikkeelle.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkia kohtaan on Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa huomattavasti kasvanut. Kun Mynchiltä kysyttiin mitä hän pitää televisiokonserttien johtamisesta, kohautti hän olkapäitään hymyillen hyväntahtoisesti.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm / 19
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eilen Suomessa 75-vuotisjuhlakiertueella

— Aamulehdelle —

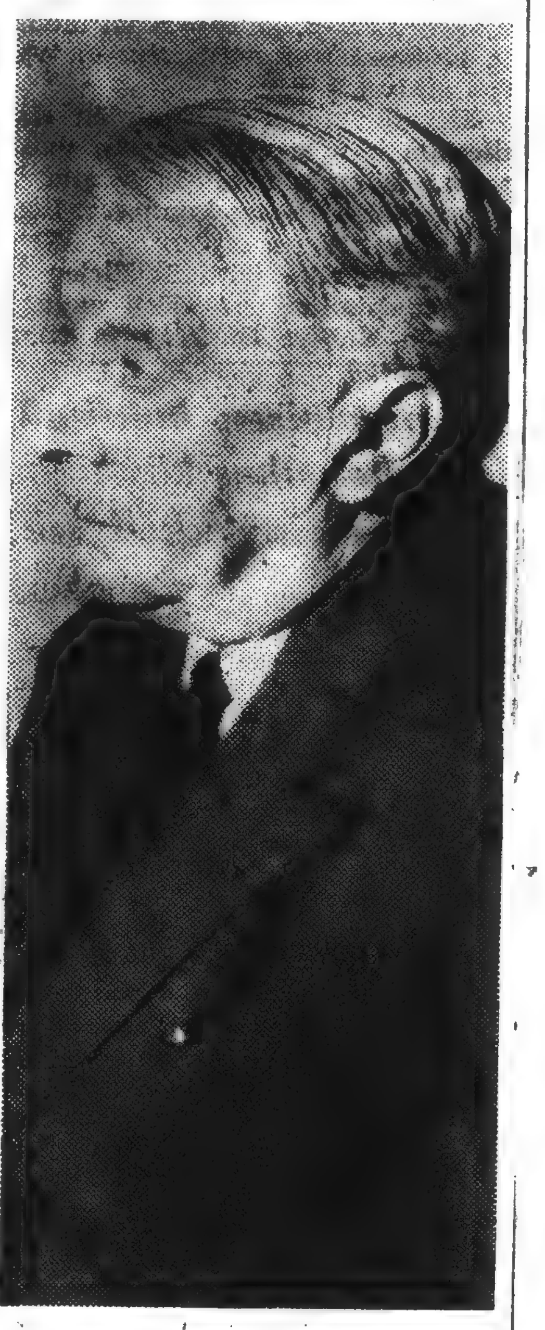
Helsingissä 4. 9.

Juhlavuottaan viettävä Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri saapui tiistaina maineikkaan kapellimestarinsa, ranskalais-amerikkalaisen Charles Münchin johtamana Helsinkiin, piti illalla konsertin Messuhallissa ja jatkaa keskiviikkona matkaansa Neuvostoliittoon.

— Tämä kiertue on orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipentuma, kertoi kapellimestari Münch, joka on ollut Bostonissa n. 7 vuotta. Hän on n. 65 vuotias hopeahiuksinen herrasmies, joka aikoo jatkaa työtään vielä kauan. — Ainakin 10 vuotta, lohduttaa hän bostonilaisia, jotka pelkäävät hänen jättävän heidät liian pian.



Charles Munch.

Orkesteri aloitti kiertueensa Edinburghista, jossa Munch toimi johtajana musiikkijuhlilla. Sieltä jatkui matka Kööpenhaminan, Oslon ja Tukholman kautta Helsinkiin. Vuoroaan odottavat mm. Leningrad, Moskova, Praha, Wien, Stuttgart, Zürich ja Pariisi. Kotimatkalle lähdetään kuukauden vaihteessa.

Münlh, jonka Englannin kielessä on ranskalainen korostus, on syntynyt Strassburgissa. Jo ennen sotaa hän sai mainetta etevänä kapellimestarina. V. 1949 hänestä tuli Serge Koussevitzkyn seuraaja Bostoniin.

Hän on johtanut lukemattomia orkestereita ja välillä myös kuoroa. YL:n vieraillessa Yhdysvalloissa pari vuotta sitten Münch johti Finlandian ja joitakin kuorosävellyksiä ja sai kuorolta lahjaksi suomalaisen lasimaljakon. Kuoro lauloi hänen sanojensa mukaan "täydellisesti".

Sibeliusta hän on johtanut usein. Viime kauden ohjelmistossa oli Sibeliuksen 7. sinfonia, jota Münch pitää suuressa arvossa. Suomalaisista säveltäjistä hän tuntee myös Järnefeltin, johon hän tutustui jo 1905 Strassburgin musiikkijuhlilla.

Münch suhtautuu myönteisesti nykyaikaiseen musiikkiin. Orkesterin juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on 15 tunnetun nykyaikaisen säveltäjän teoksia, sekä eurooppalaisten että amerikkalaisten säveltäjien tuotantoa. M nch mainitsee mm. Coplandin, Howard Hansonin, Bernsteinin ja Milhaudin.

Yhdysvalloissa tunnetaan suurta mielenkiintoa musiikkia kohtaan. Televisio on lisännyt harrastusta, ja vaikka Bostonin sinfonikoilla on radiokonsertteja kahdesti viikossa, on sali aina täynnä. Orkesteri on kiertueella joka kuukausi esiintyen eri puolilla Yhdysvaltoja ja usein myös Kanadassa.

Konserttien lisäksi on orkesterilla runsaasti levytyksiä, joilla on suuri merkitys myös taloudellisessa mielessä. Juuri ennen matkalle lähtöä saatiin levytetyksi kaksi sinfoniaa ja eräs Debussyn sävellys. — OSP.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uns
Lehti: Maakansa
Pvm 5/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Kirjallisuus ja taide

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri valloitti eilen helsinkiläiset

Helsingin musiikkielämän "vuoden suuri tapahtuma" sattuu tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapunut pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-vierailullaan. Tämä Euroopan-kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo vuonna 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eräissä länsi-Euroopan maissa. Tällä konserttimatkallaan orkesteri "kirjoittaa historiaa" ehkä merkittävämmin kuin neljä vuotta sitten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin konsertissa muodosti ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista: Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Daphnis ja Chloe" ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma sekä lisäksi Dukas'ta. Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestasi Charles Münch suostui kiireestään huolimatta — järjestely, harjoitukset ja konsertti yhdeksän tunnin sisällä — ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perinnyt Münch osoittautui harmaapäiseksi, myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä mr Leonard Burkatin mieluummin vastailla kysymyksiin. Mister Burkat kertoi tämän kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa kyllä lukuisia vierailuja USA:n suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa orkesteri konsertoi kerran kuukaudessa — ja Kanadassa käy orkesteri melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin liikkeelle. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suurelta — n. 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella. Tähän esityslukuun sisältyy kuuluisat "Pops"-konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä. Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat huomattavasti orkesterin rahoitusta. Uusimmat levytykset esittävät kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantoa, ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debussyn "San Sebastianin marttyyri", jota ei vielä ole laskettu liikkeelle.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkiin on Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa huomattavasti kasvanut viime aikoina. Vaikka Bostoninkin orkesteri antaa televisiokonsertteja, ei kuulijamäärä ole lainkaan vähentynyt. Kun Münchiltä kysyttiin, mitä hän pitää televisiokonserttien johtamisesta, kohautti hän olkapäitään hymyillen hyväntahtoisesti.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Münch sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Münch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatar-puolisoa hän oli kuullut vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa. Muuten, innostui Münch itse kertomaan, esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia, ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet mahduttaa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet. Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusinta musiikkituotantoa amerikkalainen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin Edinburgin musiikkijuhlilta tapahtuneen radioinnin avulla.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uns
Lehti: Hbl.
Pvm 5/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester

Att i Helsingfors höra en av världens förnämsta orkestrar är förvisso någonting ovanligt. Men så skedde emellertid i går. Bostons symfoniorkester spelade i A-Mässhallen under Charles Munchs ledning. Och redan i de första takterna av Beethovens Eroica upplevde man denna orkesters sällsamma klang trots att de akustiska förhållandena i Mässhallen ingalunda är de bästa tänkbara.

Det var intressant att se och höra denna eminenta orkesterledare i aktion. Hans gestaltning är stark och personlig. Han kan tillåta sig friheter i tempobehandlingen såsom i Beethovens trea. De musikaliska tankarna ger han en påfallande avrundning. Musiken andas, häftigare eller långsammare, men blir aldrig andfådd. Den logiska uppbyggnaden är alltid förhanden, en inre balans likaså. En manlig fasthet tycks prägla hans musicerande, som inte lånar sig åt ovidkommande ting eller ytligt bländverk.

Och denna orkester i denna mästarhand är en unik företeelse. Den tekniska perfektionen gränsar till det yttersta man kan förmå. Stämvävnaden, virtuost passageverk, allt framstår klart. Klangen är slaggfri och fyllig, och tonkvaliteten ypperlig. Man fäste sig t. ex. i Ravels Svit nr 2 ur baletten Daphnis och Chloë vid enskilda blåsarinlägg, artistiskt förnämliga och atmosfärskapande. Den ravelska musiken gestaltades för övrigt synnerligen fint och karaktärsfullt utan extra överdrifter, och den kulminerade i en överdådig klang- och rytmfest. På programmet stod också ett amerikanskt opus, Walter Pistons sjätte symfoni, ett med gott handalag skrivet, musikantiskt betonat verk. Moderat i sin modernism, väl förankrat i tonal grund. Det rytmiska elementet spelade en framträdande roll. Här visade sig dirigenten som en hängiven interpret av nyare musik.

Konserten var i sin helhet en rik upplevelse och en bejublad tilldragelse i vårt konsertliv.

Efter slutnumret uppvaktades orkestern och dess dirigent av Helsingfors stads musiknämnd och Stadsorkestern, Radioorkestern och YL.

E. B.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
a: Uns
Ilta Sanomat
/9 1956
ttaja:

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI

Loistava ilta, josta kiitos lankeaa ilmiömäiselle orkesterille ja sen mainiolle johtajalle — murheellinen ilta, josta kiitos Helsingin kaupungille, jolla ei ole varaa omistaa yhtään kunnollista konserttisalia. Tästä konserttitalokysymyksestä lienee puhuttu jo satakunta vuotta. Ajatellaan kai: yksi häpeäpilkku monien muiden musiikkikulttuuriin liittyvien lisäksi ei niin paljon haittaa. Tämä pilkku on vain yksi näkyvimmistä tai paremminkin kuuluvimmista.

A-Messuhallikaan ei loppujen lopuksi pystynyt turmelemaan eilistä konserttia. Nyrkkeilykilpailuakustiikka tosin aiheutti sen, että monet hienot soinnilliset nyanssit tulivat kuulijan tajuntaan pikemminkin aavistuksena siitä, miten kaikki olisi voinut soida tyydyttävässä ympäristössä. Läpi Messuhallin akustisen sumunkin kimmelsi kuitenkin sellainen teos kuin Ravelin Daphnis ja Chloë-sarja tuhatvivahteisine väreineen esityksenä, jonka verroille nousevaa on vaikea edes kuvitella.

Uutuutena kuuluu Bostonin orkesterin kiertueohjelmaan Walter Pistonin VI sinfonia, joka on varta vasten tätä orkesteria varten kirjoitettu Teos on ehditty soittaa jo nauhoitettuna radiossamme. Vakavahenkinen pohjavire ja vankka ammattitaito antavat teokselle sympaattisen yleissävyn. Vakuuttavimman vaikutuksen tekivät kaksi ensimmäistä osaa, varsinkin toinen, jonka sekä aihe- että soitinnuskeksinnöt olivat tuoreita. Hitaassa osassa samoinkuin finaalissa ote ei säilynyt aivan samana, vaan oli tavanomaisempaa lajia.

Charles Munch on korkean luokan orkesteripäällikkö, loistavan ammattitaidon omaava taitaja ja samalla hieno taiteilija, jolle tekniikka ei missään vaiheessa kohoa määräävään asemaan. Ravelin sarjan tulkintaa pitäisin illan taiteellisena huippuna, ja säveltäjä saa olla todella kiitollinen sellaisesta esityksestä, minkä Pistonin sinfonia sai osakseen. Beethovenin Eroican tulkinta ei kaikessa erinomaisuudessaankaan kohonnut aivan edellämainittujen tasolle — mutta vertauskohtahan olikin kovin mahdollinen, bostonilaisten omat esitykset! Sinfonian ensimmäinen osa tuntui kulkevan vähän kuin verryttelyn ja totuttautumisen merkeissä, mutta sitten jo surumarssi kohosi järkyttävin kaarroksin kuin vain harvoin, ja scherzo oli säkenöivä niin teknillisesti kuin henkevyydessäänkin. Finaalissa oli sitä Prometheus-tulta, joka niin mielellään tämän osan tunnelmiin yhdistetään.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri kuuluu kaiken kaikkineen aikamme musiikkielämän ihmeisiin. Sen soittoa luonnehdittaessa voisi ehkä sanoa, että orkesteri on eräänlainen keskiverto parhaiden amerikkalaisten ja eurooppalaisten orkestereiden välillä. Sen teknillinen taso on huippukorkea, kuten amerikkalaisilta suurorkestereilta on totuttu odottamaan, mutta samalla orkesterin soinnissa ja tulkinnassa on samansuuntainen kultivoitu sävy kuin eurooppalaisilla valiosoittajistoilla. Suuri ilta näinkin, vielä suurempi, jos ympäristö olisi ollut toisenlainen.

J. K—nen.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2

Extract from
MUSIC AND MUSICIANS,
London.

from Kai Maasalo in

HELSINKI

THE visit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to Helsinki made an interesting beginning to the musical season, and under Charles Munch they played with incomparable virtuosity and spirit.

Between September 11 and 14 the traditional Scandinavian Music Festival took place in Helsinki—the northern countries, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Iceland and Finland, organise these festivals in turn.

There were two symphony concerts in this year's gathering, also a chamber music recital and a popular concert. The Radio Symphony Orchestra, under Nils-Eric Fougstedt, played among other things the Third Symphony by the Swedish composer Gunnar Bucht and a Piano Concerto by the Finnish composer Einar Englund, who was soloist.

Helsinki Symphony Orchestra, under Tauno Hannikainen, included in its programme a Violin Concerto by the Swedish composer John Fernström, in which Otto Kyndel was soloist, a piano concerto by the Danish composer Niels Viggo Bentzon with the composer at the piano; and Vade Mors, a work by the Norwegian, Harald Saeverud.

Other interesting works heard during the Festival were a song cycle by the Icelandic composer Jan Thorarinson, a cycle for mixed choir by the Norwegian, Knud Nystedt, with the Oslo Choir, the Quartetto alla Serenata by the Swedish composer Lars-Erik Larsson, and the Suite for String Quartet by the Finnish composer Eino Rautavaara played by the Kyndel Quartet

[124]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm ..... / 19
Kirjoittaja:

Musiikki

Bostonin sinfoonikot saapuivat Helsinkiin

Helsingin musiikielämän »vuoden suuri tapahtuma» sattui tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-turneellaan. Tämä Euroopan kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa. Tällä matkallaan orkesteri »kirjoittaa historiaa» ehkä merkittävämmin kuin neljä vuotta sitten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin konsertissa muodostaa ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista — Beethovenin »Eroica», Ravelin »Daphnis ja Chloe» ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma ja lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestari Charles Mynch suostui kiireestäun huolimatta ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perijä osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi joka antoi sihteerinsä mr. Leonard Burkatin vastailla kysymyksiin. Mr. Burkat kertoi kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa lukuisia vierailuja USA:n suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa kerran kuukaudessa, ja Kanadassa melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suurelta. 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella, mihin lukuun sisältyvät kuuluisat »pops»-konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä. Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat orkesterin rahoitusta. Useimmat levytykset esitetään kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantoa ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debussyn »San Sebastianin marttyyri» jota ei vielä ole laskettu liikkeelle.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkia kohtaan on Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa huomattavasti kasvanut. Kun Mynchiltä kysyttiin mitä hän pitää televisiokonserttien johtamisesta, kohautti hän olkapäitään hymyillen hyväntahtoisesti.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: USIS
Lehti: Aamulehti
Pvm 5 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eilen Suomessa 75-vuotisjuhlakiertueella

— Aamulehdelle —

Helsingissä 4. 9.

Juhlavuottaan viettävä Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri saapui tiistaina maineikkaan kapellimestarinsa, ranskalais-amerikkalaisen Charles Münchin johtamana Helsinkiin, piti illalla konsertin Messuhallissa ja jatkaa keskiviikkona matkaansa Neuvostoliittoon.

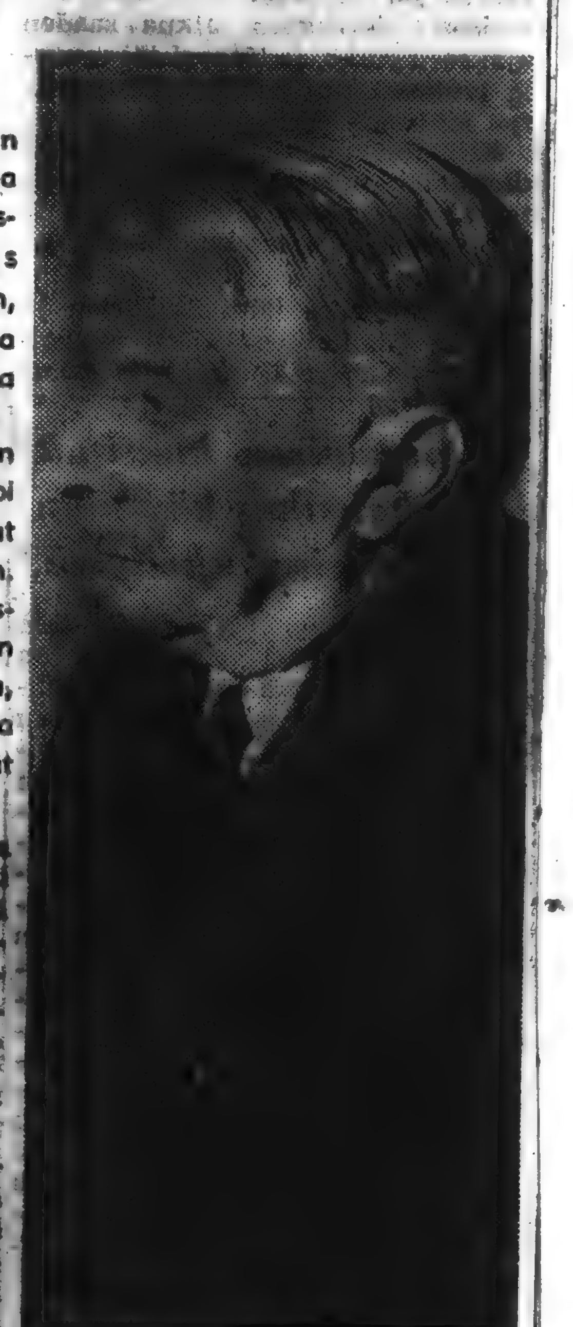
— Tämä kiertue on orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipentuma, kertoi kapellimestari Münch, joka on ollut Bostonissa n. 7 vuotta. Hän on n. 65 vuotias hopeahiuksinen herrasmies, joka aikoo jatkaa työtään vielä kauan. — Ainakin 10 vuotta, lohduttaa hän bostonilaisia, jotka pelkäävät hänen jättävän heidät liian pian.

Orkesteri aloitti kiertueensa Edinburghista, jossa Munch toimi johtajana musiikkijuhlilla. Sieltä jatkui matka Kööpenhaminan, Oslon ja Tukholman kautta Helsinkiin. Vuoroaan odottavat mm. Leningrad, Moskova, Praha, Wien, Stuttgart, Zürich ja Pariisi. Kotimatkalle lähdetään kuukauden vaihteessa.

Münih, jonka Englannin kielessä on ranskalainen korostus, on syntynyt Strassburgissa. Jo ennen sotaa hän sai mainetta etevänä kapellimestarina. V. 1949 hänestä tuli Serge Koussevitzkyn seuraaja Bostoniin.

Hän on johtanut lukemattomia orkestereita ja välillä myös kuoroa. YL:n vieraillessa Yhdysvalloissa pari vuotta sitten Münch johti Finlandian ja joitakin kuorosävellyksiä ja sai kuorolta lahjaksi suomalaisen lasimaljakon. Kuoro lauloi hänen sanojensa mukaan "täydellisesti".

Sibeliusta hän on johtanut usein. Viime kauden ohjelmistossa oli Sibeliuksen 7. sinfonia, jota Münch pitää suuressa arvossa. Suomalaisista säveltäjistä hän tuntee myös Järnefeltin, johon hän tutustui jo 1905 Strassburgin musiikkijuhlilla.



Charles Munch.

Münch suhtautuu myönteisesti nykyaikaiseen musiikkiin. Orkesterin juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on 18 tunnetun nykyaikaisen säveltäjän teoksia, sekä eurooppalaisten että amerikkalaisten säveltäjien tuotantoa. Münch mainitsee mm. Coplandin, Howard Hansonin, Bernsteinin ja Milhaudin.

Yhdysvalloissa tunnetaan suurta mielenkiintoa musiikkia kohtaan. Televisio on lisännyt harrastusta, ja vaikka Bostonin sinfonikoilla on radiokonsertteja kahdesti viikossa, on sali aina täynnä. Orkesteri on kiertueella joka kuukausi esiintyen eri puolilla Yhdysvaltoja ja usein myös Kanadassa.

Konserttien lisäksi on orkesterilla runsaasti levytyksiä, joilla on suuri merkitys myös taloudellisessa mielessä. Juuri ennen matkalle lähtöä saatiin levytetyksi kaksi sinfoniaa ja eräs Debussyn sävellys. — OSP.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Maakansa
Pvm 5 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Kirjallisuus ja taide

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri valloitti eilen helsinkiläiset

Helsingin musiikkielämän "vuoden suuri tapahtuma" sattuu tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua on Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapunut pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-vierailullaan. Tämä Euroopan-kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo vuonna 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eräissä länsi-Euroopan maissa. Tällä konserttimatkallaan orkesteri "kirjoittaa historiaa" ehkä merkittävämmin kuin neljä vuotta sitten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin konsertissa muodosti ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista: Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Daphnis ja Chloe" ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma sekä lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestasi Charles Münch suostui kiireestään huolimatta — järjestely, harjoitukset ja konsertti yhdeksän tunnin sisällä — ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perinnyt Münch osoittautui harmaapäiseksi, myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä, mr Leonard Burkatin mieluummin vastailla kysymyksiin. Mister Burkat kertoi tämän kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa kyllä lukuisia vierailuja USA:n suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa orkesteri konsertoi kerran kuukaudessa — ja Kanadassa käy orkesteri melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin liikkeelle. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suurelta — n. 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella. Tähän esityslukuun sisältyy kuuluisat "Pops"-konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä. Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat huomattavasti orkesterin rahoitusta. Uusimmat levytykset esittävät kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantoa, ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debussyn "San Sebastianin marttyyri", jota ei vielä ole laskettu liikkeelle.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkiin on Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa huomattavasti kasvanut viime aikoina. Vaikka Bostoninkin orkesteri antaa televisiokonsertteja, ei kuulijamäärä ole lainkaan vähentynyt. Kun Münchiltä kysyttiin, mitä hän pitää televisiokonserttien johtamisesta, kohautti hän olkapäitään hymyillen hyväntahtoisesti.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Münch sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Münch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatar-puolisoa hän oli kuullut vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa. Muuten, innostui Münch itse kertomaan, esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia, ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet mahduttaa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet. Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusinta musiikkituotantoa amerikkalainen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin Edinburgin musiikkijuhlilta tapahtuneen radioinnin avulla.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: HBl
Pvm 5 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostons symfoniorkester

Att i Helsingfors höra en av världens förnämsta orkestrar är förvisso någonting ovanligt. Men så skedde emellertid i går. Bostons symfoniorkester spelade i A-Mässhallen under Charles Munchs ledning. Och redan i de första takterna av Beethovens Eroica upplevde man denna orkesters sällsamma klang trots att de akustiska förhållandena i Mässhallen ingalunda är de bästa tänkbara.

Det var intressant att se och höra denna eminenta orkesterledare i aktion. Hans gestaltning är stark och personlig. Han kan tillåta sig friheter i tempobehandlingen såsom i Beethovens trea. De musikaliska tankarna ger han en påfallande avrundning. Musiken andas, häftigare eller långsammare, men blir aldrig andfådd. Den logiska uppbyggnaden är alltid förhanden, en inre balans likaså. En manlig fasthet tycks prägla hans musicerande, som inte lånar sig åt ovidkommande ting eller ytligt bländverk.

Och denna orkester i denna mästarhand är en unik företeelse. Den tekniska perfektionen gränsar till det yttersta man kan förmå. Stämvävnaden, virtuost passageverk, allt framstår klart. Klangen är slaggfri och fyllig, och tonkvaliteten ypperlig. Man fäste sig t. ex. i Ravels Svit nr 2 ur baletten Daphnis och Chloë vid enskilda blåsarinlägg, artistiskt förnämliga och atmosfärskapande. Den ravelska musiken gestaltades för övrigt synnerligen fint och karaktärsfullt utan extra överdrifter, och den kulminerade i en överdådig klang- och rytmfest. På programmet stod också ett amerikanskt opus, Walter Pistons sjätte symfoni, ett med gott handalag skrivet, musikantiskt betonat verk. Moderat i sin modernism, väl förankrat i tonal grund. Det rytmiska elementet spelade en framträdande roll. Här visade sig dirigenten som en hängiven interpret av nyare musik.

Konserten var i sin helhet en rik upplevelse och en bejublad tilldragelse i vårt konsertliv.

Efter slutnumret uppvaktades orkestern och dess dirigent av Helsingfors stads musiknämnd och Stadsorkestern, Radioorkestern och YL.

E. B.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: Ilta-Sanomat
Pvm 5 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI

Loistava ilta, josta kiitos lankeaa ilmiömäiselle orkesterille ja sen mainiolle johtajalle — murheellinen ilta, josta kiitos Helsingin kaupungille, jolla ei ole varaa omistaa yhtään kunnollista konserttisalia. Tästä konserttitalokysymyksestä lienee puhuttu jo satakunta vuotta. Ajatellaan kai: yksi häpeäpilkku monien muiden musiikkikulttuuriin liittyvien lisäksi ei niin paljon haittaa. Tämä pilkku on vain yksi näkyvimmistä tai paremminkin kuuluvimmista.

A-Messuhallikaan ei loppujen lopuksi pystynyt turmelemaan eilistä konserttia. Nyrkkeilykilpailuakustiikka tosin aiheutti sen, että monet menot soinnilliset nyanssit tulivat kuulijan tajuntaan pikemminkin aavistuksena siitä, miten kaikki olisi voinut soida tyydyttävässä ympäristössä. Läpi Messuhallin akustisen sumunkin kimmelsi kuitenkin sellainen teos kuin Ravelin Daphnis ja Chloë-sarja tuhatvivahteisine väreineen esityksenä, jonka verroille nousevaa on vaikea edes kuvitella.

Uutuutena kuuluu Bostonin orkesterin kiertueohjelmaan Walter Pistonin VI sinfonia, joka on varta vasten tätä orkesteria varten kirjoitettu. Teos on ehditty soittaa jo nauhoitettuna radiossamme. Vakavahenkinen pohjavire ja vankka ammattitaito antavat teokselle sympaattisen yleissävyn. Vakuuttavimman vaikutuksen tekivät kaksi ensimmäistä osaa, varsinkin toinen, jonka sekä aihe- että soitinnuskeksinnöt olivat tuoreita. Hitaassa osassa samoinkuin finaalissa ote ei säilynyt aivan samana, vaan oli tavanomaisempaa lajia.

Charles Munch on korkean luokan orkesteripäällikkö, loistavan ammattitaidon omaava taitaja ja samalla hieno taiteilija, jolle tekniikka ei missään vaiheessa kohoa määräävään asemaan. Ravelin sarjan tulkintaa pitäisin illan taiteellisena huippuna, ja säveltäjä saa olla todella kiitollinen sellaisesta esityksestä, minkä Pistonin sinfonia sai osakseen. Beethovenin Eroican tulkinta ei kaikessa erinomaisuudessaankaan kohonnut aivan edellämainittujen tasolle — mutta vertauskohtahan olikin kovin mahdollinen, bostonilaisten omat esitykset! Sinfonian ensimmäinen osa tuntui kulkevan vähän kuin verryttelyn ja totuttautumisen merkeissä, mutta sitten jo surumarssi kohosi järkyttävin kaaroksin kuin vain harvoin, ja scherzo oli säkenöivä niin teknillisesti kuin henkevyydessäänkin. Finaalissa oli sitä Prometheus-tulta, joka niin mielellään tämän osan tunnelmiin yhdistetään.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri kuuluu kaiken kaikkineen aikamme musiikkielämän ihmeisiin. Sen soittoa luonnehdittaessa voisi ehkä sanoa, että orkesteri on eräänlainen keskiverto parhaiden amerikkalaisten ja eurooppalaisten orkestereiden välillä. Sen teknillinen taso on huippukorkea, kuten amerikkalaisilta suurorkestereilta on totuttu odottamaan, mutta samalla orkesterin soinnissa ja tulkinnassa on samansuuntainen kultivoitu sävy kuin eurooppalaisilla vaheoittajistoilla. Suuri ilta näinkin, vielä suurempi, jos ympäristö olisi ollut toisenlainen.

J. K—nen.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2

Extract from
MUSIC AND MUSICIANS,
London. NOV 1956

4767

— from Kai Maasalo in —
HELSINKI

THE visit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to Helsinki made an interesting beginning to the musical season, and under Charles Munch they played with incomparable virtuosity and spirit.

Between September 11 and 14 the traditional Scandinavian Music Festival took place in Helsinki—the northern countries, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Iceland and Finland, organise these festivals in turn.

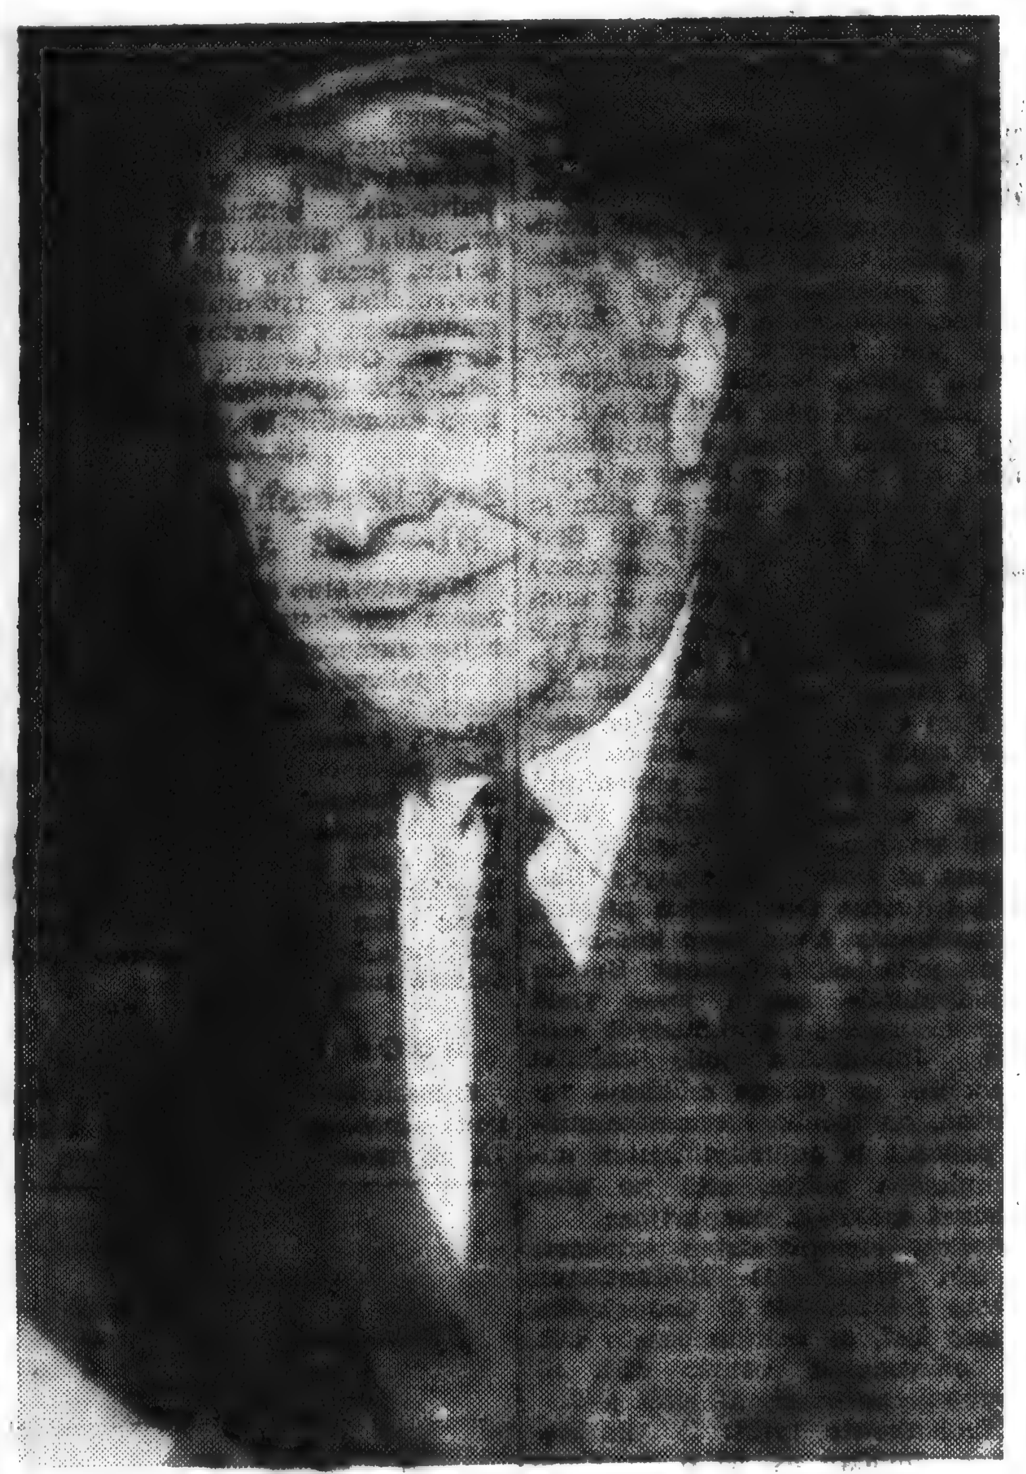
There were two symphony concerts in this year's gathering, also a chamber music recital and a popular concert. The Radio Symphony Orchestra, under Nils-Eric Fougstedt, played among other things the Third Symphony by the Swedish composer Gunnar Bucht and a Piano Concerto by the Finnish composer Einar Englund, who was soloist.

Helsinki Symphony Orchestra, under Tauno Hannikainen, included in its programme a Violin Concerto by the Swedish composer John Fernström, in which Otto Kyndel was soloist, a piano concerto by the Danish composer Niels Viggo Bentzon with the composer at the piano and Vade Mecum, a work by the Norwegian, Harald Saeverud.

Other interesting works heard during the Festival were a song cycle by the Icelandic composer Jan Thorarinson, a cycle for mixed choir by the Norwegian, Knud Nystedt, with the Oslo Choir, the Quartetto alla Serenata by the Swedish composer Lars-Erik Larsson, and the Suite for String Quartet by the Finnish composer Eino Rautavaara played by the Kyndel Quartet.

[124]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: [illegible]
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 5/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:



Charles Munch on luvannut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterille vielä 10 vuotta!

Charles Munch kuunteli oppipoikana Järnefeltejä

(SS) Charles Munchia, joka eilen johti Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin konsertin Messuhallissa, on melkein yhtä vaikea haastatella kuin trappistimunkkia. Mieluummin hän keskustelee lempeiden sinisien silmiensä ilmeillä, kohauttamalla alistuvasti olkapäitä tai levittämällä ihastuksesta käsivarret kuin sylin avaukseen. Tämä on täysin luonnollista. Hänen todellinen äänensä ”kimmeltää korvaan” ja ”on kuin yksi ainoa ihmeellisen rikas silkkinen kudos”, kuten Manchester Guardian kirjoitti äsken Edinburghin musiikkijuhlilla. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri puhuu hänen puolestaan enemmän kuin sanat ja lisäksi parhaiten maailmassa, väitetään.

Näin runolliseksi tulee reportteri tavattuaan kapellimestari Charles Munchin, mutta asiallinen selitys hänen hiljaiseen charmiinsa on lähinnä se, että ranskalainen Munch puhuu hieman heikosti englantia, jolla haastattelua käytiin ja sen tähden hän olikin ottanut sivustatuekseen sihteerinsä Leonard Burkatin.

Edinburghissa alkanut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin konserttikiertue Euroopassa jatkuu tiiviisti. Eilen päivällä saavuttiin Helsinkiin ja illalla esiinnyttiin, edellisenä iltana se tapahtui Tukholmassa, ja tänään jatkuu matka Moskovaan ja sieltä edelleen Prahaan, Wieniin, Stuttgartiin, Müncheniin. Ja ennen kuin ollaan taas kotona Bostonissa lokakuun 1 päivänä, on Charles Munch ehtinyt täyttää myös 65 vuotta ja johtaa konsertit vielä Zürichissä, Bernissä, Pariisissa, Chartresissa ja Englannissa.

Saako olla Boston?

Kun Munch eilen ennen lounasta Hotel Palacen kabinetissa pani tupakaksi, odotti häntä veikeä yllätys. Suomalainen lehtimies kiiruhti tarjoamaan hänelle meikäläistä savuketta, Bostonia! Vilpitön ihastus kuvastui hänen herkiltä kasvoiltaan ja laadun hän tietenkin totesi erinomaiseksi.

Suhteet Sibeliukseen? Sibeliuksen 7. sinfonia esitettiin orkesterin 75-vuotisjuhlavuonna mestarin 90-vuotispäivänä ja juuri seitsemättä Munch pitää suosikkina. Hän muistuttaa siitä, että Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin konserttimestari Richard Burgin ensimmäisenä USA:ssa esitti Sibeliuksen viulukonserton (1924), ja että hän tulkitsi sen jälleen syntymäpäivänä viime joulukuussa.

Järnefelt on toinen suomalainen säveltäjä, jonka teoksia Munch on tulkinnut. Kosketus tapahtui jo yli puoli vuosisataa sitten Strassbourgissa, Munchin syntymäkaupungissa. Nuorena opiskelijana 1905 Charles Munch oli yleisön joukossa, kun Armas Järnefelt johti konsertin, jossa hänen puolisonsa Maikki lauloi. Kaunis muisto hänellä on myös YL:n vierailusta Bostonissa, jolloin Munch itse johti Finlandian ja kolme pientä suomalaista kuorolaulua. ”Kuoron taiteellinen taso oli täydellinen”, toteaa Munch, eikä unohda mainita kuoron hänelle muistoksi jättämää lasimaljakkoa.

Charles Munch vie nyt ensimmäisen amerikkalaisen orkesterin Neuvostoliittoon ja hän toivoo, että Moskovassa otetaan esiin venäläisen orkesterin vastavierailu USA:han. Bostonin sinfonikot antavat siellä kaksi konserttia, joista ensimmäisen ohjelma on sama kuin Helsingissä. Toisen konsertin säveltäjänimet ovat Haydn, Copland, Strauss (Don Juan) ja Dukas, mikä merkitsee varmaan ”Taikurin oppipoikaa”. Munchille se tulee merkitsemään, että hänen oma taikasauvansa ulottuu maailman ympäri.

Hex.

Helsingin musiikkielämän ”vuoden suuri tapahtuma”, Boston Symphony Orchestran vierailu avasi eilen illalla konserttikauden Messuhallissa tasavallan presidentin puolisoineen kunnioittaessa tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan. Kuvassa oik. kapellimestari Charles Munch kumartuu soittajiston puoleen ja hänen tahtipuikkonsa näyttää koskettavan konserttimestari Richard Burginin viulua, samaa, jolla tämä soitti Sibeliuksen konserton Yhdysvalloissa ensi kerran 1924.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uni
Lehti: Hbl.
Pvm 5/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin Sinfonisen orkesterin konsertti

Upeasti alkoi eilen Messuhallissa pääkaupunkimme syyskonserttikausi. A-messuhallin esiintyjäkorokkeelle nousi maailmankuulu Boston Symphony Orchestra toistasataa miestä käsittävänä taiteilijayhtymänä. Orkesteri on halunnut korostaa 75 vuotta kestänyttä mitä menestyksellisintä toimintaansa ja lähtenyt ”amerikoista” konserttimatkalle Eurooppaan, etäisimpänä kohteena Neuvostoliitto.

Helsinki sai Tukholman välietappina kunnian eilen nauttia sanotun orkesterin taiturimaisesta soitosta. Tähän tapaukseen liittyy muutakin. Tiedämme, että Bostonin Sinfoninen Orkesteri on jo vuosikymmeniä suhtautunut mitä suopeimmin mestarimme Jean Sibeliuksen orkesterisävellyksiin. Jo v. 1912 esitettiin Sibeliuksen I sinfonia Bostonissa Munchin johdolla ja kolmisenkymmentä vuotta sitten tehty tilasto osoitti, että Sibelius oli Bostonin sanotun orkesterin säveltäjäluettelossa kuudentena Beethovenin, Mozartin, Wagnerin, Bachin ja Debussyn jälkeen. Erikoisen suuret ansiot on Sibeliustulkitsijana ollut Serge Koussevitzkyllä, kapellimestarina vv. 1924—1949. Kun orkesterin [illegible] joukossa varmasti on taiteilijoita, joilla on ollut palava halu ”Sibeliuksen maahan” ja meillä täällä on ollut kunnianasiana kiittää Sibelius-tulkitsijoita, oli pohja valmis yhteisen ja mitä kiinteimmän säveltaiteellisen ja tunnelmarakenteisen vuorovaikutuksen syntymiselle.

Ohjelmaan käytiin käsiksi niinsanoaksemme amerikkalaisen asiallisesti. Ulkonaisesta juhlallisuudesta puhuivat vain esiintyjäkoroketta koristaneet punarehevät gladiolukset. Ja kun presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen orkesterin ja yleisön heitä tervehtien seisaalleen nousten, oli asettunut paikoilleen, saatiinkin jo jäädä odottamaan kapellimestarin saapumista. Hän, Charles Munch, nuorekas ikämies, saapui korokkeelleen riuskasti kuin nuorukainen. Ohjelma voitiin aloittaa ja sen ensimmäisenä numerona oli Beethovenin III eli Eroica-sinfonia.

Kiinnitämme huomion Bostonin Symphony Orchestran kaikuun. Sille on ominaista muitten valio-orkesterien tapaan soinnin selvyys ja herkkä yhteensulautuvaisuus. Jouset hoitavat tehtävänsä jalolla ilmeellä, puupuhaltimien puhdas äänen esiinloihdinta ei jätä toivomisille sijaa ja läkkipuhaltimet tietävät osuutensa: ei minkäänlaista räikeyttä kuulu vimmissakaan fortissimoissa. Lyhyesti: orkesterin niinsanoaksemme fyysinen puoli täytti korkeat vaatimukset ,(mikäli messuhallin kyseenalainen akustiikka päästi yleensä soitinvivahteet esille).

Entä Charles Munch! Hän johti perin selväpiirteisin liikkein. Kyllä siitä totisesti taiteilijat tiesivät rytmin pääiskun eli rytmirakenteen a:n ja o:n. Samalla hänellä oli kipinä, joka tekee kapellimestarin persoonallisuudeksi. Hän osasi itse innostua ja valaa tarmonsa ja innoituksensa sähköittävät voimat myös johdettaviinsa. Beethovenin III:n sinfonian hän tulkitsi yksinkertaisen tyylikkäästi eli parhaiden wieniläisperinnäistapojen mukaisesti. Melko runsaslukuinen yleisö ymmärsi sinfonian esityksen korkeatasoisuuden ja se palkitsi sekä kapellimestarin että orkesterin pitkillä suosionosoituksilla.

”Uutta musiikkia” edusti ohjelmassa amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin (s. 1894) VI sinfonia. Tämä, kuten sen esityskin jätti kuulijaan varsin myönteisen vaikutelman. Piston osaa paljon ja hänellä on myös omintakeista sanottavaa. Osaamiseen kuuluu se, että hän keksii kehittelyyn kiitollisia aiheita, että hän osaa kirjoittaa orkesterille soivasti, jopa värikkäästi ja että muodollisesti teos pysyy luotettavasti koossa. Teemoista jäivät erikoisesti mieleen Fluendo espressivon pääteema. Samoin sellon esittämä Adagio Serenon surumielisesti lauleleva pääteema oli kaunis. Sinfonian scherzo Leggerissimo Vivace oli sananmukaisesti hauska vaikeine jousitehtävineen jo finaali Allergo energico lopetti miehekkäin äänenpainoin antoisan sinfonian, jonka Munch tulkitsi ilmeisellä intomielisyydellä. — Ohjelman loppunumerossa, jona kuultiin Ravelin balettimusiikista ”Daphne ja Chloe” toinen sarja, orkesteri sai näyttää kykyään impressionistisen värimusiikin valöörien herkkänä toteuttajana. Menestys oli ehdoton. — Ilta kokonaisuudessaan jäi kuulijan mieleen korkeana säveltaiteellisena elämyksenä. Tämän osatekijöiksi jäivät tervehdykset, jotka Helsingin Kaupunginorkesteri, Radio-orkesteri ja Ylioppilaskunnan Laulajat kohdistivat vierailijoihin.

-la.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 5/9 1956

orkester spelar upp

en konsert i A-Mässhallen i Helsingfors. Den 110 man star-Munch Beethovens III symfoni, Eroica-symfonin, amerikanen Ravels balettmusik Daphnis et Cloë. Republikens president med sin närvaro. — Recension i Konstspalten.

kin

ukevat nat lekyajan in tuokuuluu stianin iskettu

a kohn kes-nut.

uivostoniaoruressa kesteri

a mm.
n kuu-Rave-is ja

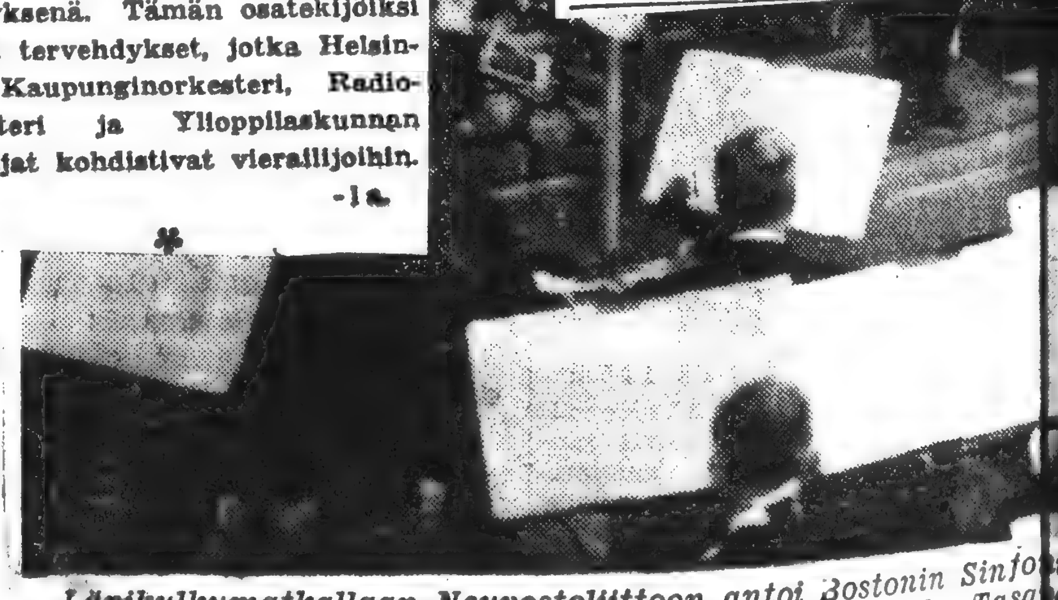
rouva
suutta

Europaturnén fin kulmen på 75-årssäsong

Den applådsvepta turnén genom Europa med vändmål i Moskva utgör kulmen på ryktbara och anrika Boston Symphony Orchestras 75-årssäsong. Men jubileet och lagrarna har inte avsatt någon triumfatorisk glans på orkesterns förnäme dirigent Charles Munch: fåmäld, försynt, lite världsfrånvarande och med sporadiska glimtar av vänlig humor i ögonen tog den vithårige maestron emot pressen efter sin ankomst till Helsingfors.

— Se sid. 8 spalt 1 —



Läpikulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon antoi Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri eilisiltana konsertin Messuhallissa. 110-miehinen orkesteri esiintyi Charles Munchin johdolla. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan. — Kuvassa Charles Munch johtaa su-orkesteria Messuhallissa. — Tarkemmin musiikkipals-toilla

[125]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Sos dem
Pvm 5 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Hbl.
Pvm 5 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
19

Bostons symfoniorkester spelar upp

Bostons symfoniorkester gav på tisdagskvällen en konsert i A-Mässhallen i Helsingfors. Den 110 man starka orkestern utförde under ledning av Charles Munch Beethovens III symfoni, Eroica-symfonin, amerikanen Walter Pistons VI symfoni och andra sviten ur Ravels balettmusik Daphnis et Cloë. Republikens president och fru Kekkonen hedrade konserten med sin närvaro. — Recension i Konstspalten.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Sos. dem
Pvm 5 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Europaturnén fin kulmen på 75-årssäsong

Den applådsvepta turnén genom Europa med vändmål i Moskva utgör kulmen på ryktbara och anrika Boston Symphony Orchestras 75-årssäsong. Men jubileet och lagrarna har inte avsatt någon triumfatorisk glans på orkesterns förnäme dirigent Charles Munch: fåmäld, försynt, lite världsfrånvarande och med sporadiska glimtar av vänlig humor i ögonen tog den vithårige maestron emot pressen efter sin ankomst till Helsingfors.

— Se sid. 8 spalt 1 —

Läpikulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon antoi Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri eilisiltana konsertin Messuhallissa. 110-miehinen orkesteri esiintyi Charles Munchin johdolla. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan. — Kuvassa Charles Munch johtaa suurorkesteria Messuhallissa. — Tarkemmin musiikkipalstoilla.

Helsingin musiikkielämän "vuoden suuri tapahtuma", Boston Symphony Orchestran vierailu avasi eilen illalla konserttikauden Messuhallissa tasavallan presidentin puolisoineen kunnioittaessa tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan. Kuvassa oik. kapellimestari Charles Munch kumartuu soittajiston puoleen ja hänen tahtipuikkonsa näyttää koskettavan konserttimestari Richard Burginin viulua, samaa, jolla tämä soitti Sibeliuksen konserton Yhdysvalloissa ensi kerran 1924.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Sos. dem.
Pvm 5 / [illegible] 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

muuttuvat kauniiksi

"illallis-käsiksi"

Se vaikuttaa nopeasti Gahns'in Maniol . . . korvaa suojaavan talikelmun, jonka saippua ja vesi liuentaa. Se valniemi. Järvenpään os. 49 p. Joukkuekilpailu: 1) Järvenpään os. 185 p. 2) Oulunkylän os. I jouk. 168 p. 3) Lohjan os. II jouk. 145 p. 4) Oulunkylän os. II jouk. 141 p. 5) Lohjan os. I jouk. 124 p.

Kunnantyöntekijäin Sos.-dem. Yhdistyksen kokouksessa 3. 9. käsiteltiin aluksi joukko keskusjärjestöiltä saapuneita kirjelmiä, joista varsinkin T-lehdistöltä saapunut yhteiskirje aiheutti laajaa keskustelua. Sos.-dem. Raittiusliiton järjestämille yhteiskunnallisille kursseille kehoitettiin yhdistyksen jäseniä osallistumaan.

Näiden asioiden käsittelyn jälkeen selosti Sos.-dem. Piirin sihteeri R. Lönnqvist kunnallisvaalivalmisteluja. Hän huomautti aluksi siitä, että tulevat vaalit tulevat olemaan eräässä mielessä hyvin mielenkiintoiset, joten työväestön olisi syytä kiinnittää niihin mitä suurinta huomiota. Sosialidemokraattien aloitteesta on kaupunginvaltuustossa saatu aikaan moniakin hyviä päätöksiä, jotka ovat olleet suurimerkityksellisiä työväestön kannalta, myöskin päätöksiä, jotka ovat olleet koko kunnan edun mukaisia. Näistä päätöksistä ja toimenpiteistä ei sosialidemokraattien taholla ole kuitenkaan tehty mitään reklaamia, joten suuri joukko äänestäjiä eivät ole ollenkaan selvillä siitä, kenen ai-

Neuvostoliittoon ja hän toivoo, että Moskovassa otetaan esiin venäläisen orkesterin vastavierailu USA:han. Bostonin sinfonikot antavat siellä kaksi konserttia, joista ensimmäisen ohjelma on sama kuin Helsingissä. Toisen konsertin säveltäjänimet ovat Haydn, Copland, Strauss (Don Juan) ja Dukas, mikä merkitsee varmaan "Taikurin oppipoikaa". Munchille se tulee merkitsemään, että hänen oma taikasauvansa ulottuu maailman ympäri.

H e x.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Hbl.
Pvm 5 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

villkor:

1. Rätt att teckna nya aktier har bolagets aktieägare samt de, vilka förvärvat sig aktieägares teckningsrätt. En ny aktie kan tecknas mot trenne gamla. Aktieteckningen sker mot emissionskupong N:o 1 och berättigar alltså tre dylika emissionskuponger till tecknande av en ny aktie.
2. Aktieteckningen begynner den 1 oktober 1956 och upphör den 31 i samma månad.
3. Teckning av aktier kan ske på samtliga Kansallis-Osake-Pankkis kontor.
4. Aktiernas pris, mark 40.000 per aktie, erlägges i tvenne rater sålunda, att hälften betalas senast den 30 november 1956 och den andra hälften senast den 30 mars 1957. Aktiernas pris bör erläggas på samma ställe, där aktieteckningen skett. För betalning, som sker minst 15 dagar före ovannämnda förfallodagar, gottskrives 6 % ränta för tiden från betalnings- till förfallodagen. För rater, som icke erlagts senast på ovannämnda förfallodagar, debiteras ränta enligt 10 % för tiden från förfallodagen till betalningsdagen. Med risk att rätten till aktierna i annat fall går förlorad bör betalning dock ske senast den 30 april 1957. Lagstadgad stämpelskatt erlägges av bolaget.
5. De nya aktierna berättigar till full dividend för år 1957.
6. Överskottet över aktiernas nominella värde vid denna aktieemission överföres till reservfonden.
7. De nya aktierna utfärdas i brev om en eller fem aktier.
8. Mot emissionskupong hörande till aktie, som är försedd med utlänningsklausul, får tecknas endast med samma klausul försedda nya aktier.
9. I fråga om outnyttjade teckningsrätter samt andra i samband med emissionen förekommande ärenden bestämmer bolagets styrelse.
10. De nya aktierna utgives mot teckningsbevis på samma plats, där aktierna tecknats, och vid en tidpunkt, som senare kungöres.

Helsin

KAJAANI OY Uth

Såsom tidigare meddelats, utb sions- och dividendkuponger för På grund härav uppmanas aktieä sina talonger, att överstyra de ga sionskuponger antingen till nota Osake-Pankkis huvudkontor, där eller till något av nämnda banks utbytet.

Aktieägarna uppmärksamgöres som försiggår instundande oktobe kupongerna på de nya talongblad

Helsing

HUNDU

I BORGÅ S

Anmäln. till Finska Kennelklubbens kan senast den 10. 9.

Arr.: Dobermannpins

Europaturnén fin kulmen på 75-årssäsong

Den applådsvepta turnén genom Europa med vändmål i Moskva utgör kulmen på ryktbara och anrika Boston Symphony Orchestras 75-årssäsong. Men jubileet och lagrarna har inte avsatt någon triumfatorisk glans på orkesterns förnäme dirigent Charles Munch: fåmäld, försynt, lite världsfrånvarande och med sporadiska glimtar av vänlig humor i ögonen tog den vithårige maestron emot pressen efter sin ankomst till Helsingfors.

— Se sid. 8 spalt 1 —

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Kansan lehti
Pvm 5 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri esiintyy Neuvostoliitossakin

Helsingin musiikkielämän 'vuoden suuri tapahtuma' sattui tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-turneellaan. Tämä Euroopan kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa. Tällä matkallaan orkesteri kirjoittaa historiaa ehkä merkittävämmin kuin neljä vuotta sitten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin konsertissa muodostaa ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista — Beethovenin'Eroica' Ravelin 'Dahpnis ja Chloe' ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma ja lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestari Charles Münch suostui kiireestään huolimatta ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perijä osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä mr. Leonard Burkatin vastailla kysymyksiin. Mr. Burkat kertoi kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa kyllä lukuisia vierailuja USA:n suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa kerran kuukaudessa, ja Kanadassa melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suurelta. 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella mihin lukuun sisältyvät kuuluisat "pops" konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä. Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat orkesterin rahoitusta. Useimmat levytykset esitetään kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantona ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debussyn 'San Sebastianin marttyyri' jota ei vielä ole laskettu liikkeelle.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkia kohtaan on Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa huomattavasti kasvanut.

Konsertti Messuhallissa eilen

Läpikulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon antoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri eilisiltana konsertin suuressa Messuhallissa. 110 miehinen orkesteri esitti Charles Münchin johdolla mm. amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä 2 sarjan Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chloe.

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Sos. dem.
Pvm 5 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Helsingin musiikkielämän "vuoden suuri tapahtuma", Boston Symphony Orchestran vierailu avasi eilen illalla konserttikauden Messuhallissa tasavallan presidentin puolisoineen kunnioittaessa tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan. Kuvassa oik. kapellimestari Charles Munch kumartuu soittajiston puoleen ja hänen tahtipuikkonsa näyttää koskettavan konserttimestari Richard Burginin viulua, samaa, jolla tämä soitti Sibeliuksen konserton Yhdysvalloissa ensi kerran 1924.

Läpikulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon antoi Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri eilisiltana konsertin Messuhallissa. 110-miehinen orkesteri esiintyi Charles Munchin johdolla. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan. — Kuvassa Charles Munch johtaa suurorkesteria Messuhallissa. — Tarkemmin musiikkipalstoilla.

Uus. [illegible] 5/9-

[125]

De stora gästspelens höstsäsong har börjat!

De stora gästspelens höstsäsong inleddes i går på ett förnämligt sätt, av Boston-symfonikerna i Helsingfors och av Svenska teatern på utländsk botten, i Oslo.

God teater, en fin föreställning med en lysande skådespelarprestation i centrum är det allmänna omdömet om Svenska teaterns gästspel i Oslo. Kritiken är genomgående entusiastisk och också de som inte tycker att Hjalmar Bergmans pjäs, "Hans Nåds testamente", inte är någon stor dikt, kapitulerar för framförandet. Se närmare sid. 5 !

• Charles Munch ledde Bostons symfoniorkester med fascinerande verkan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Kauppalehti
Pvm 5 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

)- miehisen sinfoniaorkesterin konsertoidessa helsinkiläiselle a kunnioittivat läsnäolollaan tasavallan presidentti ja rouva n chin johdolla mm. Beethovenia, Walter Pistonia ja Ravelia.

LEHTIKUVA

Charles Munch johtaa maailmankuulua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria eilen Messuhallissa pidetyssä konsertissa.

Bostonilaiset . . .

(Jatk. siv. 7)

Taas hotellitiedusteluja ja "mikä on tyypillisesti suomalaista?" "Missä voi käydä saunassa?" Äänestyksessä puolet bussimatkustajista halusi käydä saunassa. Hotellissa on sauna, selvä.

Heti kentällä haettiin haastateltavaksi orkesterin amerikansuomalainen jäsen Kauko Kahila. Hän puhuu aivan sujuvasti suomea, vaikka onkin Valloissa syntynyt. Hän kertoo rakentaneensa huvilalleen saunan "ja kaikki muutkin suomalaiset asiat". Vain pari viikkoa sitten hän kävi maassamme sukulaisiaan tervehtimässä. Kahilan vaari soitteli jo aikoinaan klarinettia Valkeakoskella kylän tanseissa ja isä oli viuluniekka. Hän poika soittaa trumpettia maailman parhaassa orkesterissa vuodesta 1952 lähtien. Aikaisemmin hän soitti 8 vuotta St. Louisin sinfoniaorkesterissa.

Toinenkin tuttu nimi on joukossa ja sen omistajaksi osoittautuu virolainen Ludwig Juht, syntyisin Tartosta. Hän kertoo soittaneensa bassoviulua Helsingissäkin vuosina 1916—18 Kaupunginorkesterin riveissä. Sitten hän oli Viron sinfoniaorkesterin soittajistossa ja Viron oopperassa. Amerikkaan hän joutui vuonna 1934, mistä lähtien hän on soittanut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterissa. Hänkin taitaa suomen kieltä vielä vuosien takaa.

Richard Burgin on harmaahiuksinen eloisa herra, orkesterin konserttimestari ja varajohtaja. Hän on ollut Helsingin Kaupunginorkesterin konserttimestarina aivan nuorena poikana. Myöhemmin hän on käynyt johtamassakin täällä ja tunsi keskikaupungille saavuttaessa suoralta kädeltä useitakin katuja ja rakennuksia. V. 1955 hän sai Ranskan valtion kunnialegioonan jäsenyyden. Mr. Burgin on innokas uuden musiikin puolustaja ja erityisesti Schönbergin ihailija. Hän on soittanut monia Schönbergin teoksia ja johtanutkin niitä, viimeksi Bostonin orkesterin kanssa mestarin "Musik zu einer Lichtspielscene". Lisäksi hän on esittänyt kaikki Schönbergin kvartetot, Webernin pieniä kappaleita ja orkesterin kanssa aika lailla Alban Bergiä.

Bussissa kääntyy puhe meikäläisiin kapellimestareihin. Kysytään onko Mr. Hannikainen täällä vai USA:ssa. Monikin soittaja tulee mukaan keskusteluun. Muistavat kyllä Hannikaisen, johti kuusi konserttia vakinaisena vierailijana bostonilaisten kanssa. Hyvänä kapellimestarina he hänet muistavat "ja hän on niin harvinaisen miellyttävä persoonallisuus".

Orkesterissa on matkalla 105 miestä, tai joukossa on oikeammin kaksi naistakin, toinen huilun ja toinen harpun soittaja. Edelleen on matkassa managereita, sihteerejä ja lehtimiehiä. Mr. Rudolf Elie on orkesterin virallinen lehtimies ja myös musiikkiarvostelija (The Boston Herald). Hän kirjoittaa matkakertomusta orkesterin vaiheista ja haastatteli innokkaasti haastattelijaa hänkin, halusi mennä saunaan ja halusi ostaa suomalaista lasia.

Neuvostoliiton matkastaan eivät orkesterilaiset tiedä mitään, vain sen, että huomenna lähdetään ja että Neuvostoliitto huolehtii sitten kaikesta. (Muualla Euroopassa he matkustavat osaksi orkesterin osaksi Yhdysvaltain hallituksen avun turvin).

Charmikas Charles Munch

otti heti saavuttuaan lehdistön edustajat vastaan sihteerinsä kanssa (Munch ei puhu englantia hyvin.) Vierailumatka on varmasti ollut johtajalle tavattoman raskas, sillä kolme päivää ennen ensimmäistä konserttia Corkissa, Irlannissa, saapui viesti, että hänen vaimonsa on kuollut koko kesän vakavasti sairastettuaan Pariisissa. Hautajaiset olivat ensimmäistä konserttia edeltäneenä päivänä.

Charles Munch on tunnettu uuden musiikin suosijana ja johtajana. Tälläkin matkalla on orkesterilla kahdeksan eri ohjelmaa ja jokaiseen liittyy yksi moderni amerikkalainen teos. Munch on johtanut mm. Barberin, Coplandin, Hansonin, Pistonin, Sessionsin ja Bernsteinin sävellyksiä. Myös Charles Ives, Yhdysvaltain suuri rohkea mies ja ikuinen etsijä, jota muuten aniharvoin esitetään teosten teknillisen vaikeuden vuoksi, on ollut esillä useinkin. Viimeksi Tanglewoodissa Munch johti Ivesin sävellyksen "The Unanswered Question".

Äänilevyistä saadut tulot merkitsevät huomattavaa osaa BSO:n taloudessa. Juuri ennen matkaa orkesteri levytti Martinun sinfonian ja Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian. Ne eivät ole vielä edes ilmestyneet. Munch uskoo että radio- ja äänilevyt ovat merkinneet musiikkisivistyksen leviämiselle tavattoman paljon. Myös televisio, jota syyttä aluksi pelättiin yleisön vähentäjäksi, on osoittanut mahdollisuutensa yleisön musiikinharrastuksen lisääjänä. "Television panos musiikin hyväksi riippuu kokonaan siitä, mitä siinä esitetään, tietysti" toteaa Munch. Edinburghissa heidän konserttinsa lähetettiin myös television kautta.

Munchin silmiin ilmestyy äkkiä iloinen tuike, kun hän huomaa pöydällä Boston-savukkeita. Ja niitäpä hän haluaa ihastuneena polttaa koko haastattelun ajan. "Musiikkijuhlat? En ole samaa mieltä kuin Sir Thomas Beecham, joka sanoo kaikkia musiikkijuhlia roskaksi. Edinburghissakin oli kuulijakunta harrasta ja vakavasti taiteeseen suhtautuvaa".

Suomen musiikista puheenollen Munch mainitsi että ensimmäinen kosketus Sibeliuksen musiikkiin hänellä oli vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa (kotikaupunki), jossa Järnefelt vieraili kapellimestarina ja hänen vaimonsa esiintyi solistina. Nykyisin on hänen mielisinfoniansa Sibeliuksen seitsemäs. Munch kertoo että orkesterin konserttimestari Burgin oli ensimmäinen, joka Amerikassa esitti Sibeliuksen viulukonserton. Ylioppilaskunnan laulajiin oli Munch myös ihastunut. Hänellä on yhä muistona helposta yhteistyöstä ihastuttava suomalainen lasimaljakko. "Perfect chorus".

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri esiintyy nyt ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina Neuvostoliitossa ja Munch toivoo että jokin orkesteri sieltä tulisi vastavierailulle USA:han. Kysyttäessä mikä orkesteri, ei Munch osannut nimetä mieleistään "En tunne lainkaan sikäläisiä orkestereita."

Mr. Munch on harras maalaustaiteen ihailija ja hän kerää erityisesti 1700-luvun hollantilaista maalaustaidetta, jota hänellä on kallisarvoinen kokoelma.

Orkesterin toinen johtaja tällä matkalla on Pierre Monteux, joka saapuu vasta myöhemmin maahamme. Hän johtaa Neuvostoliitossa osan konserteista. Edelleen jo toissayönä saapui maahamme Mrs. Olga Koussevitzki, joka viipyy muutaman päivän Helsingissä.

Bostonilaiset

Aivan kauden alkajaisiksi tuli vuoden ehdoton huipputapaus Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri kulkee vaativalla "maailman parhaan nimellä", joten odotukset olivat luonnollisesti valtavat. On aivan toinen asia lukea, että orkesteri on paras mitä inhimillisin kyvyin ajatella voi, ja toinen asia on kokea se, kuten eilen täysi messuhallillinen yleisöä sai tehdä.

Orkesterin ääni on pelkkää riemua korville. Ennen kaikkea ihaili ehdotonta kaikkien soitinryhmien balanssia olipa sitten kyseessä huumaava forte tai pianissimo. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on jaloin soitin mitä ihmiskunnalla on ollut hallinnassaan.

Koko kiertueella on kaikissa ohjelmissa mukana yksi amerikkalainen sinfonia, täällä esitettiin Pistonin kuudes sinfonia (erikoisesti tälle orkesterille kirjoitettu). Sinfonia on varmaa ja hallittua työtä. Joskus tuntui, että käytetyllä materiaalilla ei aina ole sisällön katetta, säveltäjä tuntui paikoin "pelaavan aikaa". Yleisvaikutelma sinfoniasta oli varmasti hallittu suoritus, ei suuremmin persoonallinen. Vankkaa tunnetun pedagogin työtä, sanoisin. Viimeinen osa oli epäilemättä sinfonian heikoin, scherzo ehkä vahvin.

Mr. Charles Munch tulkitsi erittäinkin Beethovenin kolmannessa sinfoniassa suurella suvereeniteetilla, rauhallisesti ja varmasti hän antoi musiikin kehittyä kauneuteensa. Suoritus tuntui olevan kaiken materian yläpuolella, aineettoman helppouden ja selvyyden tuntu leijui suorituksen yllä.

Konserttia kunnioitti läsnäolollaan tasavallan presidentti ja runsaasti diplomaattikuntaa. Selvää on että musiikkiväki oli in corpore paikalla.

M-i V-i.

---

phony Orchestra

ande prengskänhet

ar de en kunnande, suggestivarde Eroica-symfonin med fascinerande ver-kan, värvade vänner åt Walter nog tions alla ta tänk-

Pistons 6. symfoni, ett ytterst gediget, spirituellt, och ingen djärvt verk, och tjänade utan reservation med en glans- och temperamentsfull tolkning av Ravels "Daphnis och Chloë" svit.

Självfallet blev gästerna entusiastiskt hyllade på alla sätt.

L. F.

De stora gästspelens höstsäsong har börjat!

De stora gästspelens höstsäsong inleddes i går på ett förnämligt sätt, av Boston-symfonikerna i Helsingfors och av Svenska teatern på utländsk botten, i Oslo.

God teater, en fin föreställning med en lysande skådespelarprestation i centrum är det allmänna omdömet om Svenska teaterns gästspel i Oslo. Kritiken är genomgående entusiastisk och också de som inte tycker att Hjalmar Bergmans pjäs, "Hans Nåds testamente", inte är någon stor dikt, kapitulerar för framförandet. Se närmare sid. 5 !

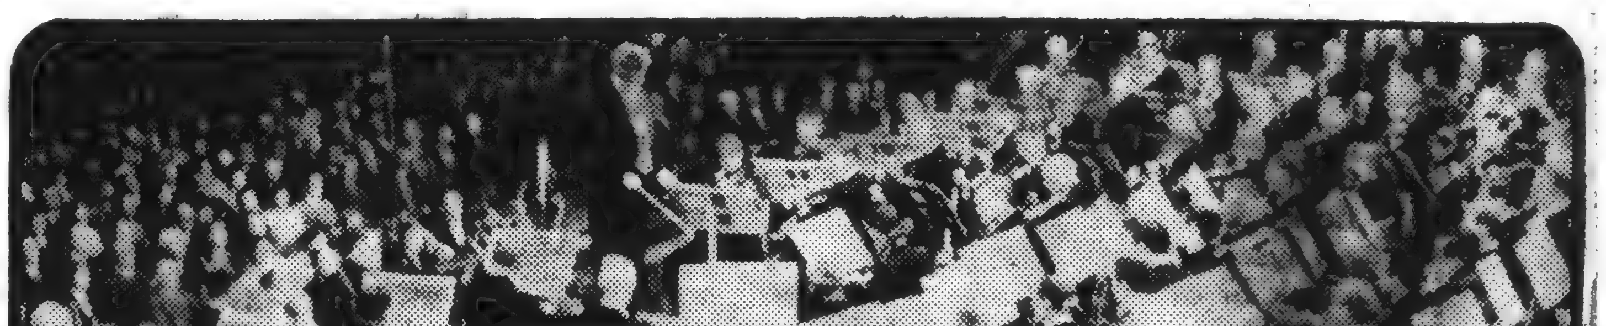
• Charles Munch ledde Bostons symfoniorkester med fascinerande verkan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Kauppalehti
Pvm 5/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Messuhallissa kuultiin eilen suurta musiikkia Bostonin 110- miehisen sinfoniaorkesterin konsertoidessa helsinkiläiselle yleisölle läpikulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon. Tilaisuutta kunnioittivat läsnäolollaan tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen. Orkesteri esitti kapellimestarinsa Charles Munchin johdolla mm. Beethovenia, Walter Pistonia ja Ravelia.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Nya Pressen
Pvm 5/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Succé för Boston Symphony Orchestra



The Boston Symphony Orchestra är naturligtvis fullt jämbördig med de 'stora' orkestrar som gästat oss på senare tid, måhända ännu bättre. Dylika jämförelser är förresten fåfänga och onödiga; det må vara nog att säga, att denna korporations alla grupper uppfyller högsta tänkbara önskningar beträffande precision, virtuositet, klangskönhet o. s. v.

I Charles Munch har de en dirigent av största kunnande, starkaste inlevelse och suggestivkraft. Han framförde Eroica-symfonin med fascinerande verkan, värvade vänner åt Walter Pistons 6. symfoni, ett ytterst gediget, spirituellt, och inget djärvt verk, och tjusade utan reservation med en glans- och temperamentsfull tolkning av Ravels "Daphnis och Chloë" svit.

Självfallet blev gästerna entusiastiskt hyllade på alla sätt.

L. F.

[126]

Watzin'in
KERATIN
paras lääke hiuksiin

Hyvin kuivat hiukset tarvitsevat "Erikoisrasvaista". Siitä imeytyy hiuksiin sarveisaineita ja öljyä tukan tulematta tahmeaksi. Se tappaa bakteereja, estää hilseen muodostuksen ja tekee hiukset joustaviksi ja hyvin asettuviksi. Watzinin Keratin "Normaali" hiusvettä ja Keratin Brilliantinea suositellaan päänahan syyhytessä tai saatua jonkin taudin. Watzinin Keratin on koeteltua!

Punainen tulppa on merkkinä kirkkaasta rasvattomasta liuoksesta nimeltään Normaali

Keltainen tulppa on merkkinä jonkinverran rasvaisesta liuoksesta nimeltään Rasvainen

Musta tulppa on merkkinä erikoisrasvaisesta liuoksesta nimeltään Erikoisrasvainen parhaassa orkesterissa vuodest 1952 lähtien. Aikaisemmin hän soit i 8 vuotta St. Louisin sinfoniaor kesterissa.

I, HELSINKI

Toinenkin tuttu nimi on joukos sa ja sen omistajaksi osoittautu virolainen Ludwig Juht, syntyi in Tartosta. Hän kertoo soitta eensa bassoviulua Helsingissäki uosina 1916—18 Kaupunginorke erin riveissä. Sitten hän oli Viro nfoniaorkesterin soittajistossa iron oopperassa. Amerikkaa än joutui vuonna 1934, mistä läh en hän on soittanut Bostonin sin oniaorkesterissa. Hänkin taita uomen kieltä vielä vuosien takaa Richard Burgin on harmaa kkainen eloisa herra, orkesteri onserttimestari ja varajohtaja än on ollut Helsingin Kaupungin kesterin konserttimestarina a an nuorena poikana. Myöhemmi än on käynyt johtamassakin tää ja tunsi keskikaupungille sa uttaessa suoralta kädeltä useita n katuja ja rakennuksia. V. 19 än sai Ranskan valtion kunni gioonan jäsenyyden. Mr. Burg n innokas uuden musiikin puolu ja ja erityisesti Schönberg ailija. Hän on soittanut mon Schönbergin teoksia ja johtanutk iitä, viimeksi Bostonin orkester anssa mestarin "Musik zu ein Lichtspielscene". Lisäksi hän sittänyt kaikki Schönbergin kva etot, Webernin pieniä kappalei a orkesterin kanssa aika lail Alban Bergiä.

Bussissa kääntyy puhe meikälä n kapellimestareihin. Kysytää onko Mr. Hannikainen täällä va USA:ssa. Monikin soittaja tulee mukaan keskusteluun. Muistavat kyllä Hannikaisen, johti kuusi konserttia vakinaisena vierailijana bostonilaisten kanssa. Hyvänä kapellimestarina he hänet muistavat "ja hän on niin harvinaisen miellyttävä persoonallisuus".

Orkesterissa on matkalla 105 miestä, tai joukossa on oikeammin kaksi naistakin, toinen huilun ja toinen harpun soittaja. Edelleen on matkassa managereita, sihteerejä ja lehtimiehiä. Mr. Rudolf Elie on orkesterin virallinen lehtimies ja myös musiikkiarvostelija.

Munchin silmiin ilmestyy äkkiä iloinen tuike, kun hän huomaa pöydällä Boston-savukkeita. Ja niitäpä hän haluaa ihastuneena polttaa koko haastattelun ajan. "Musiikkijuhlat? En ole samaa mieltä kuin Sir Thomas Beecham, joka sanoo kaikkia musiikkijuhlia roskaksi. Edinburghissakin oli kuulijakunta harrasta ja vakavasti taiteeseen suhtautuvaa".

Suomen musiikista puheenollen Munch mainitsi että ensimmäinen kosketus Sibeliuksen musiikkiin hänellä oli vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa (kotikaupunki), jossa Järne-

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 5. 9. 1956
Kirjoittaja:

TAIDE ja kirjallisuus

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Konteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin.

Bostonin maineikas sinfonia-orkesteri saapui Helsinkiin

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä eilen, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philabelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin »läpi» kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa — ajatelkamme vain Wienin valtionoopperaa, Lontoon Covent Gardenia, Pariisin suurta oopperaa tai Milanon Scalaa — joissa oopperan asema on kieltämättä sinfoniamusiikkia tärkeämpi. Amerikassa taas on jokaisessa yli 50.000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

220 KONSERTTIA VUODESSA

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa ja senjälkeen alkavat kuuluisat »Pops»-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Riverillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme Mrs. Natalia Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissa samassa ominaisuudessa.

AMERIKANSUOMALAINEN MUKANA ORKESTERISSA

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatoriossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Usis
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 5. 9. 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri antoi eilisiltana konsertin Helsingissä. Kuvamme konsertista. Keskellä orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Hünch.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti

EILISILTANA HELSINGISSÄ

Läpikulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon antoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri eilisiltana konsertin suuressa Messuhallissa. 110 miehinen orkesteri esitti Charles Münchin johdolla Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä 2. sarjan Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chloe.

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: US
Lehti:
Pvm / 19
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti Helsingissä

Helsingin musiikkielämän "vuoden suuri tapahtuma" sattui tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-vierailullaan. Tämä Eurooppankiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo vuonna 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eräissä länsi-Euroopan maissa. Tällä konserttimatkallaan orkesteri "kirjoittaa historiaa" ehkä merkittävämmin kuin neljä vuotta sitten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin konsertissa muodosti ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista: Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Daphnis ja Chloe" ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma sekä lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat konserttia läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: USIS
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm / 19
Kirjoittaja:

Möte mellan Bostonsymfonins tre stora dirigenter. Från vänster: Pierre Monteux, som ledde orkesern från 1919 till 1924, Serge Koussevitzky, dess berömde ledare 1924—1949, samt orkesterns nuvarande dirigent Charles Münch, som leder orkesterns konsert i Helsingfors.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm 19
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri vieraili eilen Helsingissä

Charles Munch

Juhlavuottaan viettävä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui eilen maihinkaan kapellimestarinsa ranskalais-amerikkalaisen Charles Munchin johtamana Helsinkiin antaakseen illalla konsertin Messuhallissa ja jatkaakseen keskiviikkona matkaansa kohti Neuvostoliittoa.

Tämä kiertue on orkesterin 75-vuotisjuhlavuoden huipentuma, kertoi kapellimestari Munch, joka on ollut Bostonissa jo seitsemisen vuotta. Hän on piakkoin 65 vuotta täyttävä ja hopeahiuksinen herra, joka kuitenkin aikoo jatkaa työtään vielä pitkät ajat. Ainakin 10 vuotta lohduttaa hän bostonilaisia, jotka pelkäävät hänen jättävän heidät liian pian.

Orkesteri aloitti kiertueensa Edinburghissa, missä Munch johti musiikkijuhlilla. Sieltä jatkui matka Kööpenhaminan, Oslon ja Tukholman kautta Helsinkiin. Vuoroaan odottavat mm. Leningrad, Moskova, Praha, Wien, Stuttgart, Zürich ja Pariisi. Kotimatkalle lähdetään kuukauden vaihteessa.

Munch, jonka englanninkielessä on vielä ranskalainen korostus, on syntynyt Strasburgissa. Jo ennen sotaa hän oli saanut mainetta eteväksi kapellimestarina. V. 1949 hän tuli Sergei Koussevitckyn seuraajaksi Bostoniin.

Hän on johtanut lukemattomia konsertteja ja välillä jopa kuoroja. YL:n vieraillessa Yhdysvalloissa pari vuotta sitten Munch johti Finlandian ja joitakin kuoroteoksia saaden kuorolta lahjaksi suomalaisen lasimaljakon. Kuoro lauloi hänen sanojensa mukaan »täydellisesti».

Sibeliusta hän on johtanut usein. Viime kuukauden ohjelmistossa oli Sibeliuksen seitsemäs sinfonia, jota Munch pitää suuressa arvossa. Suomalaisista säveltäjistä hän tuntee myös Järnefeltin ja tämän puolison, laulajatar Maikki Järnefeltin, johon hän tutustui jo v. 1905 Strassburgin musiikkijuhlilla.

Munch suhtautuu muuten myönteisesti nykyaikaiseen musiikkiin. Orkesterin juhlavuoden ohjelmistossa on 15 tunnetun nykyaikaisen säveltäjän tuotantoa. Munch mainitsee mm. Copladin, Howard Hansonin, Bernsteinin ja Milhaud'n.

Yhdysvalloissa tunnetaan suurta mielenkiintoa musiikkia kohtaan. Radio on lisännyt harrastusta ja esim. Bostonin sinfonikoilla on konsertteja kahdesti viikossa, on saleissa silti täysi määrä yleisöä. Orkesteri on kiertueella joka kuukausi esiintyen tällöin eri puolilla Yhdysvaltoja ja usein myös Kanadassa.

Konserttien lisäksi on orkesterilla runsaasti levytyksiä, joilla on huomattava merkitys myös taloudellisessa mielessä.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm 19
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti: -Suomi
Pvm 5/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

TAIDE JA KIRJALLISUUS

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmissa Sibelius ollut ainoa suomalainen nimi

Helsingin musiikkielämän "vuoden suuri tapahtuma" sattui tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-turneellaan. Tämä Euroopan kiertue ei ole orkesterin ensimmäinen, sillä jo 1952 Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi Euroopan maissa. Tällä matkallaan orkesteri kirjoittaa historiaa ehkä merkittävämmin kuin neljä vuotta sitten, sillä ensimmäisenä amerikkalaisena orkesterina se esiintyy Neuvostoliitossa.

Helsingin konsertin muodostaa ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista — Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Dahpnis ja Chloe" ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma ja lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestari Charles Mynch suostui kiireestään huolimatta ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perijä osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi joka antoi sihteerinsä mr. Leonard Burkatin vastailla kysymyksiin. Mr. Burkat kertoi kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa kyllä lukuisia vierailuja USA:n suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa kerran kuukaudessa, ja Kanadassa melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin. Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suurelta. 220 konserttia lokakuussa elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella, mihin lukuun sisältyvät kuuluisat "Pops" konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä. Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat orkesterin rahoitusta. Useimmat levytykset esitetään kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantona ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debyssun "San Sebastianin marttyyri" jota ei vielä ole laskettu liikkeelle.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkia kohtaan Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa on huomattavasti kasvanut. Kun Mynchiltä kysyttiin, mitä hän pitää televisiokonserttien johtamisesta kohautti hän olkapäitään hymyillen hyväntahtoisesti.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Mynch sanoi erikoisesti pitävänsä. Mynch muisti kuitenkin opiskelijavuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatarpuolisoa hän oli kuullut vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa. Muuten, innostui Mynch itse kertomaan, esitämme paljon uusinta musiikkia, ja varsinkin tähän juhlavuoteemme olemme koettaneet mahduttaa kaikki nykyajan huomattavimmat säveltäjänimet. Suomen-konsertin ohjelmistossa edusti uusinta musiikkituotantoa amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin 6. sinfonia, johon suomalaiset radiokuuntelijat jo ovat tutustuneetkin Edinburgin musiikkijuhlilta tapahtuneen radioinnin avulla.

---

aide

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui eilen maahamme konsertoiden Helsingissä. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan kiertueella juhliva orkesteri avasi juhlavalla tavalla syksyn konserttikauden Suomen pääkaupungissa. Myös amerikansuomalainen Kauko Kahila on pasuunansoittajana mukana orkesterissa. — Kuvassa orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm 5/ 19
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin, jonne [illegible]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti: -maalainen
Pvm 5/ 19
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN MAINEIKAS sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eilen Helsingissä. Orkesteri on Amerikan monista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan juhliva orkesteri, joka nyt vierailee Euroopassa, sekä maassamme Sibelius-viikolla käväisseet Philadelphian sinfoniaorkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat USA:n »kolme suurta» orkesterimusiikin alalla. Bostonin orkesterille on kautta aikojen ollut tunnusomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen. — Kuvassamme vasemmalla orkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. [illegible] Monteux, joka toimi johtajana vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge [illegible], johtaja vv:na 1924—1949, ja oik. orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch. Hän on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin [illegible] v:sta 1949 lähtien.*

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

19

Bostonin sinfonia-orkesteri konsertoi eilen Helsingissä

Läpikulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon antoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri eilisiltana konsertin suuressa messuhallissa. 110 miehinen orkesteri esitti Charles Münchin johdolla Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä 2. sarjan Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chloe.

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

[128]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri vieraili eilen Helsingissä

Juhlavuottaan viettävä Bostonin nfoniaorkesteri saapui eilen maiehikkaan kapellimestarinsa rans-alais-amerikkalaisen Charles unchin johtamana Helsinkiin ntaakseen illalla konsertin Mesuhallissa ja jatkaakseen keskiviikona matkaansa kohti Neuvostoliittoa.

Tämä kiertue on orkesterin 75-vuotisjuhlavuoden huipentuma, kertoi kapellimestari Munch, joka on ollut Bostonissa jo seitsemisen vuotta. Hän on piakkoin 65 vuotta täyttävä ja hopeahiuksinen herra, joka kuitenkin aikoo jatkaa työtään vielä pitkät ajat. Ainakin 10 vuotta lohduttaa hän bostonilaisia, jotka pelkäävät hänen jättävän heidät liian pian.

Orkesteri aloitti kiertueensa Edinburghissa, missä Munch johti mu-siikkijuhlilla. Sieltä jatkui matka Kööpenhaminan, Oslon ja Tukhol-man kautta Helsinkiin. Vuoroaan odottavat mm. Leningrad, Moskova, Praha, Wien, Stuttgart, Zürich ja Pariisi. Kotimatkalle lähdetään kuuden vaihteessa.

Munch, jonka englanninkielessä vielä ranskalainen korostus, on syntynyt Strasburgissa. Jo ennen sotaa hän oli saanut mainetta ete-vänä kapellimestarina. V. 1949 hänestä tuli Sergei Koussevitckyn seuraaja Bostoniin.

Hän on johtanut lukemattomia orkestereita ja välillä jopa kuoroja. YL:n vieraillessa Yhdys-valloissa pari vuotta sitten Munch johti Finlandian ja joitakin kuoro-teoksia saaden kuorolta lahjaksi suomalaisen lasimaljakon.
Kuoro lauloi hänen sanojensa mu-kaan »täydellisesti».

Sibeliusta hän on johtanut usein-kin. Viime kuukauden ohjelmistos-sa oli Sibeliuksen seitsemäs sin-fonia, jota Munch pitää suuressa arvossa. Suomalaisista säveltäjistä hän tuntee myös Järnefeltin ja tämän puolison, laulajatar Maikki Järnefeltin, johon hän tutustui jo
v. 1905 Strassburgin musiikkijuh-lilla.

Munch suhtautuu muuten myönteisesti nykyaikaiseen musiikkiin.
Orkesterin juhlavuoden ohjelmis-tossa on 15 tunnetun nykyaikaisen säveltäjän tuotantoa. Munch mainitsee mm. Copladin, Howard Han-sonin, Bernsteinin ja Milhaud'n.

Yhdysvalloissa tunnetaan suurta mielenkiintoa musiikkia kohtaan.
Televisio on lisännyt harrastusta ja esim. Bostonin sinfonikoilla on radiokonsertteja kahdesti viikossa,

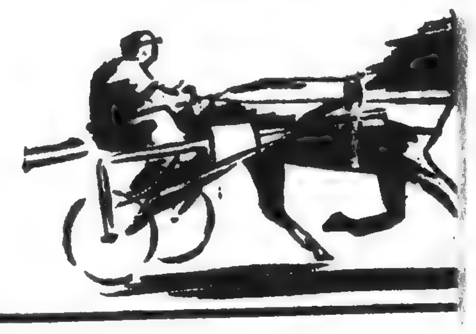
Charles Munch

on saleissa silti täysi määrä yleisöä. Orkesteri on kiertueella joka kuukausi esiintyen tällöin eri puolilla Yhdysvaltoja ja usein myös Kanadassa.

Konserttien lisäksi on orkesterilla runsaasti levytyksiä, joilla on huomattava merkitys myös taloudellisessa mielessä.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: [illegible]
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm [illegible] 19[illegible]
Kirjoittaja:

Ennennäkemättömän juhlavat ja k



TEATTERIV

Eilen lähti Lahdesta Kau opintomatkalle Leningradiin mukana oli Suomi-Neuvost henkeä. Leningradissa teat
Paluu opintomatkalta tapah

Maaseudu

kiireestään huolimatta ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perijä osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi joka antoi sihteerinsä mr. Leonard Burkatin vastailla kysymyksiin. Mr. Burkat kertoi kiertueen muodosta-

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: [illegible]
Lehti: Uusi-Suomi
Pvm 5 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Kirjallisuus ja taide

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui eilen maahamme konsertoiden Helsingissä. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan kiertueella juhliva orkesteri avasi juhlavalla tavalla syksyn konserttikauden Suomen pääkaupungissa. Myös amerikansuomalainen Kauko Kahila on pasuunansoittajana mukana orkesterissa. — Kuvassa orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja:
Lehti: [illegible]
Pvm 5 / [illegible] 19[illegible]
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisa johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien ja johtaa Helsingissäkin, jonne [illegible]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: [illegible]
Lehti: [illegible]maalainen
Pvm 5 / 9 19[illegible]
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN MAINEIKAS sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi eilen Helsingissä. Orkesteri on Amerikan monista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan juhliva orkesteri, joka nyt vierailee Euroopassa, sekä maassamme Sibelius-viikolla käväissyt Philadelphian sinfoniaorkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat USA:n »kolme suurta» orkesterimusiikin alalla. Bostonin orkesterille on kautta aikojen ollut [illegible] uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen. — Kuvassamme [illegible] orkesterin kolmen suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. [illegible] Monteux, joka toimi johtajana vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge [illegible], johtaja vv:na 1924—1949, ja oik. orkesterin nykyinen [illegible] Charles Münch. Hän on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin [illegible] v:sta 1949 lähtien.*

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

19

Bostonin sinfonia-orkesteri konsertoi eilen Helsingissä

Läpikulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon antoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri eilisiltana konsertin suuressa messuhallissa. 110 miehinen orkesteri esitti Charles Münchin johdolla Beethovenin Eroica-sinfonian, amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin kuudennen sinfonian sekä 2. sarjan Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Chloe.

Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm 5 19
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka konsertoi Helsingissä eilen, on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen. — Kuvassamme Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm / 19
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri 75-vuotisjuhlakiertueellaan

Helsingissä – lentää tänään N-liittoon

Helsingistä Vaasalle.

Juhlavuottaan viettävä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui eilen mainehikkaan kapellimestarinsa, ranskalais-amerikkalaisen Charles Munchin johtamana Helsinkiin antaakseen illalla konsertin Messuhallissa ja jatkaakseen keskiviikkona matkaansa kohti Neuvostoliittoa.

Tämä kiertue on orkesterin 75-vuotis juhlavuoden huipentuma, kertoi kapellimestari Munch, joka on ollut Bostonissa nyt seitsemisen vuotta. Hän on piakkoin 65 vuotta täyttävä, hopeahiuksinen herra, joka kuitenkin vielä aikoo jatkaa työtään pitkät ajat — ainakin 10 vuotta, lohduttaa hän bostonilaisia, jotka pelkäävät hänen jättävän heidät liian pian.

Orkesteri aloitti kiertueensa Edinburgista, missä Munch johti Musiikkijuhlilla. Sieltä matka jatkui Kööpenhaminan, Oslon ja Tukholman kautta Helsinkiin. Vuoroaan odottavat mm. Leningrad, Moskova, Praha, Wien, Stuttgart, Zürich ja Pariisi. Kotimatkalle lähdetään kuukauden vaihteessa.

Munch, jonka englanninkielessä on vielä ranskalainen korostus, on syntynyt Strasburgissa. Ennen sotaa oli hän jo saanut mainetta etevänä kapellimestarina. Vuonna 1949 hänestä tuli Serge Koussevitzkyn seuraaja Bostoniin.

Hän on johtanut lukemattomia orkestereita ja välillä jopa kuoroakin. YL:n vieraillessa Yhdysvalloissa pari vuotta sitten, Munch johti "Finlandian" ja joitakin kuorosävellyksiä saaden kuorolta lahjaksi suomalaisen lasimaljakon. Kuoro lauloi hänen sanojensa mukaan "täydellisesti".

Sibeliusta hän on johtanut useinkin. Viime kauden ohjelmistossa oli Sibeliuksen Seitsemäs sinfonia, jota Munch pitää suuressa arvossa. Suomalaisista säveltäjistä hän tuntee myös Järnefeltin, johon hän tutustui jo vuonna 1905 Strasburgin Musiikkijuhlilla.

Munch suhtautuu muuten myönteisesti nykyaikaiseen musiikkiin. Orkesterin juhla vuoden ohjelmistossa on 15 tunnetun nykyaikaisen säveltäjän töitä. On sekä eurooppalaisten että amerikkalaisten säveltäjien tuotantoa. Munch mainitsee m.m. Coplandin, Howard Hansonin, Bernsteinin ja Milhaud'n.

Yhdysvalloissa tunnetaan suurta mielenkiintoa musiikkia kohtaan. Televisio on lisännyt harrastusta ja vaikka Bostonin sinfonikoilla on radiokonsertteja kahdesti viikossa, on saleissa silti täysi määrä yleisöä. Orkesteri on kiertueella joka kuukausi esiintyen tällöin eri puolilla Yhdysvaltoja ja usein myös Kanadassa.

Konserttien lisäksi on orkesterilla runsaasti levytyksiä, joilla on huomattava merkitys myös taloudellisessa mielessä. Juuri ennen matkalle lähtöä saatiin valmiiksi kaksi sinfoniaa ja eräs Debussyn sävellys. — OSP.

Orkesterin johtaja Charles Munch johtaa orkesteriaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Ulis
Lehti: Kansan Voima
Pvm 6 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Munch juuri Suomen kamaralle saapuneena. Hän johtaa maahamme saapuneen Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin konserttia

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm / 19
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin vierailu

Helsingin musiikkielämän "vuoden suuri tapahtuma" sattui tänä vuonna aikaiseen vaiheeseen. Jo ennen varsinaisen konserttikauden alkua Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui pikavierailulle Suomeen laajalla Euroopan-turneellaan.

Helsingin konsertissa, joka oli eilen, muodosti ohjelmisto suppean läpileikkauksen musiikin eri aikakausista — Beethovenin "Eroica", Ravelin "Dahpnis" ja "Chloe" ja Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Neuvostoliitossa esitetään kerran sama ohjelma ja lisäksi Dukas'ta, Coplandia ja Haydnia.

Helsingin-konsertin kapellimestari Charles Münch suostui kiireestään huolimatta ottamaan vastaan lehtimiehet. Koussevitzkyn manttelin perijä osoittautui harmaahapsiseksi myhäileväksi ja verraten vaiteliaaksi haastateltavaksi, joka antoi sihteerinsä mv Leonard Burkatin vastailla kysymyksiin. Mr Burkat kertoi kiertueen muodostavan orkesterin 75-juhlavuoden huipun. Bostonin 110-miehinen orkesteri suorittaa kyllä lukuisia vierailuja USA:n suurissa kaupungeissa — mm. New Yorkissa kerran kuukaudessa, ja Kanadassa melkein joka kesä, mutta kauemmaksi lähdetään vain harvoin.

Orkesterin esityskauden konserttimäärä tuntuu huimaavan suureita. 220 konserttia lokakuusta elokuuhun ulottuvalla kaudella, mihin lukuun sisältyvät kuuluisat "pops" konsertit, jotka alkavat varsinaisen talvisesongin päätyttyä

Lisäksi tulevat vielä levytykset, jotka tukevat orkesterin rahoitusta. Useimmat levytykset esitetään kahden nykyajan säveltäjän Martinun ja Pistonin tuotantona ja viimeisimpiin kuuluu myös Debussyn "San Sebastianin marttyyri", jota ei vielä ole laskettu liikkeelle.

Kiinnostus sinfoniamusiikkia kohtaan on Yhdysvaltain nuorison keskuudessa huomattavasti kasvanut. Kun Münchiltä kysyttiin, mitä hän pitää televisiokonserttien johtamisesta, kohautti hän olkapäitään hymyillen hyväntahtoisesti.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin ohjelmistossa on Sibeliuksen nimi ollut ainoana Suomen musiikin edustajana. Viime kaudella esitettiin mestarin 7. sinfonia, josta Münch sanoi erityisesti pitävänsä. Münch muisti kuitenkin opiskeluvuosiltaan Armas Järnefeltin nimen, jonka laulajatar-puolisoa hän oli kuullut vuonna 1905 Strassburgissa

---

SUOMEN SOSIALDEMOKRAATTI

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri Leningradiin

Se 7.6. 1956

Keskiviikkona jatkoi tiistai-iltana Helsingissä Messuhallissa suurella menestyksellä konsertoinut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri kiertuematkaansa Leningradiin, jossa orkesteri antaa kaksi konserttia 5. ja 6. päivänä syyskuuta. Leningradista 110-miehinen orkesteri matkustaa Moskovaan, missä on myös kaksi konserttia syyskuun 8—9 päivinä.

Orkesterin Euroopan kiertue jatkuu vielä parisen viikkoa, minkä jälkeen bostonilaiset palaavat kotikaupunkiinsa aloittaakseen vakinaisen talvikautensa lokakuussa.

HUFVUDSTADSBLADET

Bostonsymfonikerna till Leningrad

Sept 6. '56

Bostons symfoniorkester, som på tisdagen med stor framgång konserterade i Helsingfors, fortsatte på onsdagen sin resa till Leningrad, där orkestern ger två konserter den 5 och 6 september. Från Leningrad reser den 110 man omfattande orkestern till Moskva där den också ger två konserter den 8 och 9 september.

Orkesterns Europa-turné fortsätter ännu ett par veckor varefter man anträder återfärden för att 1 oktober inleda den egentliga vintersäsongen i Boston (FNB)

[129]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti:
Pvm ..../.... 19
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui eilen vierailulle Suomeen ja antoi illalla ensimmäisen konserttinsa Messuhallissa. Orkesteri on parhaillaan Euroopan-kiertueella, joka on järjestetty orkesterin 75-vuotisen toiminnan kunniaksi. Orkesterin johtajana toimii saksalaissyntyinen Charles Münch (yllä).

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri Helsingissä
Avasi eilen loisteliaasti konserttikauden

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri saapui maahamme lentoteitse eilen ja antoi kaksi loistavaa konserttia eilen Helsingissä. Messuhallin täyttänyt yleisö tunsi voimakkaana suuren konserttielämyksen. Osa konsertista kuultiin radiossa. Orkesteri on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmonikot ovat "kolme suurta" useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avasi syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin 'läpi' kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa. Amerikassa on jokaisessa yli 50,000 asukkaan kaupungissa sinfoniaorkesteri, ja useitten suurten kaupunkien orkesterien soittajiston luku on yli 100. Pysyviä oopperaseurueita on sensijaan vain New Yorkissa, Chicagossa ja San Franciscossa.

Bostonissa, tuossa Amerikan kulttuurin kehdossa, on sinfoniaorkesteri elimellinen osa kaupunkia ja sen asukkaiden suuri ylpeys. Sen muusikkojen asema on korkea ja arvostettu ja Symphony Hall on aina viimeistä sijaa myöten täynnä.

Orkesterin historiaa

Tämän maailmanmainetta saavuttaneen orkesterin, jossa soittajiston lukumäärä on 110, perusti vuonna 1881 majuri Henry Lee Higginson. Suurena musiikin ihailijana tämä pankkiiriperheen

Jatk. 4. siv.

jäsen ryhtyi säästörahoillaan rakentamaan orkesteria, jonka taso oli tuon ajan parhaitten keskieurooppalaisten orkesterien veroinen. Hän keräsi kokoon Saksan ja Itävallan parhaita käytettävissä olevia muusikkoja, palkkasi nuoren saksalaissyntyisen Georg Henschelin heitä johtamaan ja niin alkoi Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin toiminta. Muita orkesterin johtajia sen alkutaipaleilla olivat Gericke, Nikisch ja Karl Muck, kaikki korkeisiin tavoitteisiin tähtääviä musiikkimiehiä.

Ensimmäinen maailmansota toi mukanaan muutoksen orkesterin kokoonpanoon. Sen soittajisto tuli kansainvälisemmäksi, ja johtajaksi orkesterin uusi johtokunta vuonna 1918 nimitti Henri Rabaud'n Pariisista ja sitä seuraavana vuonna Pierre Monteux'n, joka tälläkin 75-vuotisen toiminnan juhlakiertueella johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Myös ohjelmisto monipuolistui Pierre Monteux"n johtajakautena ja hän loi orkesterin uudeksi ja entistä maineikkaimmaksi. Richard Burgin, orkesterin konserttimestari, oli eräs Monteux'n suuria löytöjä.

Vuonna 1924 astui johtajankorokkeelle Serge Koussevitzky pysyen paikallaan 25 vuotta. Hänen pitkänä johtajakautenaan orkesteri saavutti suunnattoman arvovaltansa monien erinomaisten kilpailijoiden joukossa. Koussevitzkyn johdolla orkesteri muodostui erääksi maailman täydellisimmistä ja esteettisesti herkimmistä sinfoniayhtyeistä, ja sitä luonnehdittiin orkesteriksi, joka soitti 'kauneinta musiikkia maailmassa'. Uusien musiikkiteosten panos ohjelmistoissa oli suuri ja mm Sibeliuksen nimi esiintyi usein. Tämä oli muutenkin kulta-aikaa Amerikan sinfoniaorkestereiden historiassa — Stokowski johti Philadelphian orkesteria ja Toscanini oli vielä New Yorkin filharmoonikkojen johdossa.

Vuonna 1949, jolloin Koussevitzky erosi, valittiin uudeksi johtajaksi Charles Münch, eräs Ranskan musiikkielämän johtavia hahmoja. Hänen johtajakautensa on muodostunut orkesterille voimakkaaksi nousuksi.

Koussevitzkyn aikana sinfoniaorkesteri perusti erikoislaatuisen musiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa ja oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Finedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles Rivierillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme. Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatiossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Cloë II.

---

*

Bostonin sinfonikot matkustivat Leningradiin

Keskiviikkona jatkoi, tiistai-iltana Helsingissä Messuhallissa suurella menestyksellä konsertoinut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri kiertuematkaansa Leningradiin, jossa orkesteri antaa kaksi konserttia tk. 5—6. pnä. Leningradista 110-miehinen orkesteri matkustaa Moskovaan, missä on myös kaksi konserttia tk. 8.—9. pnä.

Orkesterin Euroopan-kiertue jatkuu vielä parisen viikkoa, minkä jälkeen bostonilaiset palaavat kotikaupunkiinsa aloittaakseen varsinaisen talvikautensa lokakuussa.

*

[130]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Unis
Lehti: Etelä-Saimaa
Pvm 6/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI vieraili tiistai-iltana A-Messuhallissa, jossa se 110 miehen voimalla Charles Munchin johtamana esitti Beethovenin Eroiaca-sinfonian, amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin VI sinfonian ja toisen osan Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Cloë. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja:
Lehti: –
Pvm ..../.... 19 6
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: ....

Lehti: ....

Pvm ....../......19

Kirjoittaja: ....

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapui e serttinsa Messuhallissa. Orkesteri o kesterin 75-vuotisen toiminnan ku
Charles Münch (yllä).

Bostonin sinfo
Avasi eilen loi

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri saapui maahamme lentoteitse eilen ja antoi kaksi loistavaa konserttia eilen Helsingissä. Messuhallin täyttänyt yleisö tunsi voimakkaana suuren konserttielämyksen. Osa konsertista kuultiin radiossa. Orkesteri on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuu-

---

Bostonin [illegible] konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avasi syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Sinfoniaorkestereiden Yhdysvalloissa saavuttama asema ja arvovalta ovat ainutlaatuiset. Syynä tähän lienee se, ettei siellä ooppera ole koskaan lyönyt itseään samalla tavoin 'läpi' kuin Euroopan suurissa musiikkikeskuksissa. Amerikassa on jokaisessa yli

---

Jussi-Pekka; Laine, Kaarina; Lund, Katariina; Lund, Marketta; Lehtelä, Anna-Liisa; Mela, Sirkka Tuulikki; Mikonsaari, Aarne; Peisa, Ulla-Maija; Peronius, Olli; Pitkänen, Ulla-Maija; Pohjamies, Timo; Raitanen, Satu; Siren, Lasse; Sundberg, Kai-Erik.

Ensimmäisiä luokkia on kolme ja niiden yhteinen oppilasmäärä nusiikkikoulun, Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksen Tanglewoodiin Massachusettsin valtiossa. Täällä annetaan joka kesä eri maiden musiikkilahjakkuuksille opetusta sävellyksessä, orkesteri- ja kamarimusiikissa, kuorolaulussa oopperassa, ja opettajina toimii nimekkäitä säveltäjiä ja muusikkoja sekä Yhdysvalloista että muista maista. Kuten tunnettua, oli kurssien osanottajana tänä kesänä mm. Eino Rautavaara Suomesta. Charles Münch on tämän keskuksen johtaja ja varajohtajana oli tänä vuonna Aaron Copland.

---

220 konserttia vuodessa

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu amerikkalainen orkesteri — lokakuusta elokuun puoliväliin kestävän esityskautensa aikana se pitää noin 220 konserttia. Tavallinen 30-viikkoinen talvisesonki päättyy huhtikuussa, ja sen jälkeen alkavat kuuluisat "Pops"-viihdekonsertit Arthur Fiedlerin johdolla joka ilta touko—kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa myös kolme viikkoa kestävät ilmaiset ulkoilmakonsertit Charles-joen rivierillä. Sitten jo alkaakin Tanglewood ja vuoden konserttikausi päättyy elokuun puolivälissä. Mainittava on myös runsaat radioesiintymiset ja levytykset, jotka lisäävät orkesterin työtaakkaa.

Konserttikautta jatkaa tänä vuonna orkesterin juhlavuoden kiertue Eurooppaan, jonka aikana konsertoidaan Irlannissa, Skotlannissa, Skandinavian maissa, Suomessa, Neuvostoliitossa, Tshekkoslovakiassa, Itävallassa, Saksassa, Ranskassa ja Englannissa. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on muuten ensimmäinen amerikkalainen orkesteri, joka vierailee Neuvostoliitossa.

Charles Münchin lisäksi seuraa orkesterin mukana kiertueella sen entinen johtaja Pierre Monteux, nyt jo 81-vuotias, joka johtaa muutamia konsertteja. Suomalaista yleisöä kiinnostanee myös se, että orkesterin mukana saapuu maahamme. Mrs. Natalie Koussevitzky, suuri Suomen-ystävä. Orkesterin maineikas konserttimestari Richard Burgin lienee useille suomalaisille tuttu, sillä onhan hän aikoinaan toiminut Helsingin kaupunginorkesterissakin samassa ominaisuudessa.

Amerikansuomalainen mukana orkesterissa

Myös eräs amerikansuomalainen on mukana soittajistossa. Hän on pasuunansoittaja Kauko Kahila, jonka molemmat vanhemmat ovat suomalaisia siirtolaisia, isä kotoisin Valkeakoskelta ja äiti Tampereelta. Kauko Kahila, joka puhuu sujuvasti suomea, on opiskellut Uuden Englannin konservatiossa ja Berkshiren musiikkikeskuksessa, soittanut Houstonin ja St. Louisin sinfoniaorkestereissa ja ollut kiinnitettynä Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteriin vuodesta 1952 lähtien.

Konsertissaan A-Messuhallissa Helsingissä, jota maamme musiikkiyleisö odottaa suurtapahtumana, orkesteri soittaa seuraavan ohjelman: Beethoven: Eroica; Piston: Sinfonia 6; Ravel: Daphnis & Cloë II.

---

* Sept. 6. 1956

Bostonin sinfonikot matkustivat Leningradiin

Keskiviikkona jatkoi, tiistai-iltana Helsingissä Messuhallissa suurella menestyksellä konsertoinut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri kiertuematkaansa Leningradiin, jossa orkesteri antaa kaksi konserttia tk. 5.—6. pnä. Leningradista 110-miehinen orkesteri matkustaa Moskovaan, missä on myös kaksi konserttia tk. 8.—9. pnä.

Orkesterin Euroopan-kiertue jatkuu vielä parisen viikkoa, minkä jälkeen bostonilaiset palaavat kotikaupunkiinsa aloittaakseen vakinaisen talvikautensa lokakuussa.

*

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: Uis

Lehti: Etelä-Saimaa

Pvm 6. 9. 1956

Kirjoittaja: ....

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERI vieraili tiistai-iltana A-Messuhallissa, jossa se 110 miehen voimalla Charles Munchin johtamana esitti Beethovenin Eroiaca-sinfonian, amerikkalaisen Walter Pistonin VI sinfonian ja toisen osan Ravelin balettimusiikista Daphnis ja Cloë. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU

Tilaaja: ....

Lehti: ....

Pvm ....../......19

Kirjoittaja: ....

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja. Orkesteri antoi eilen illalla Helsingin A-messuhallissa ainoan konsertin tuhatlukuiselle kuulijakunnalle.

[130]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Maakansa
Pvm 6 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Kirjallisuus Taide

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri

Helsinkiläisten konserttikausi alkoi viime tiistaina A-messuhallissa pidetyllä arvokkaalla konsertilla, jota kunnioittivat läsnäolollaan myöskin presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen. Raikuvien kättentaputusten säestämänä astui 110-miehisen orkesterin eteen sen ranskalais-amerikkalainen johtaja Charles Munch, jonka sytyttävien kädenliikkeiden voimasta kajahtivat ilmoille Beethovenin kolmannen (Eroica) sinfonian alkusäveleet. Mainittu sinfonia kuuluu sinfonisen kirjallisuuden kulmakiviin ja nyt kuultuna sen eräät kohdat vaikuttivat tempoiltaan ennen kuulemaamme nopeammilta, mutta surumarssiin valoi intomielinen johtaja sellaista traagillista voimaa, että sen teho kohosi korkeimpaan kulminaatioonsa. Samoin teoksen finaali, jossa säveltäjä käyttää nuoruuden teoksensa Prometheuksen erästä teemaa, oli esitystasoltaan harvinaisen korkea. Amerikkalaisen nykyaikaisen säveltäjän Walter Pistonin sävellyksiä ei ole aikaisemmin täällä esitetty. Nyt kuultu Sinfonia VI on sävelletty juuri tätä Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin 75-vuotista juhlakiertuetta varten, ja se on omistettu Serge ja Natalie Koussevitzkylle. Teoksen sisältö ei ole ensinkään räikeää modernismia, vaan ammattimiehen tarkkuustyötä, jossa piilee vaikuttavia teemoja, kuten tunnekylläinen Adagio Sereno ja mukaansatempaava Allegro energico.

Viimeisenä kuultu Maurice Ravelin "Musiikkia baletista Daphnis ja Chloe, sarja N:o 2" sai mahtavine Päivän koitto-, intomielisine Pantomiimi- ja riehakkaine Tanssiosineen yleisön haltioitumaan, joten suosionosoitukset pyrkivät jatkumaan miltei loputtomiin. Orkesterin suurimpiin ansioihin on luettava sen suuri täsmällisyys ja ehdoton kurinalaisuus, jossa ei ole pienintäkään toivomisen varaa, vaikka jäsenistö onkin kokoonpantu mitä moninaisimmista kansallisuuksista. Sen käynti ohikulkumatkallaan kaukaisessa maassamme oli kunnianosoitus meille.

V. A.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Pohjois-Suomi
Pvm 6 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on konsertoinut Helsingissä. Kuvassamme maineikkaan orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Munch.

Helsingin musiikkielämän syksyn suurin tapahtuma, Boston Symphony Orchestran vierailu avasi tiistaina konserttikauden Messuhallissa tasavallan presidentin puolisoineen kunnioittaessa tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Ti Ilris
Turun St.
6 9 19 56

Taide

Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti

Maailmankuulun, 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan juhlivan Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin Helsingin konsertti liittyi sodanjälkeisiin kuuluisien orkestereiden vierailuihin eräänlaisena päätepisteenä. Kun muistelemme Wienin Filharmoonikkoja ja Furtwängleriä, Leningradin Sinfoniaorkesteria ja Markevitsia, Filadelphian Sinfoniaorkesteria ja Ormandia, BBC:n Sinfoniaorkesteria ja Sargentia sekä nyt tuoreimpana elämyksenä Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteria ja Charles Munchia, sisällyttää tämä piiri itseensä kaiken inhimillisesti mahdollisen orkesteritaiteen alalla. Paljon mielenkiintoisia orkesteri vierailuja on toivottavasti vuosien kuluessa vielä edessämme, mutta taitamisen suhteen tuskin kuulemme mitään esimerkkeinä mainittujen orkestereiden mahdollisuuksien ylittävää.

Orkesterin nimekkäiden kapellimestareiden perinteiden nykyinen vaalija, ranskalais-amerikkalainen Charles Munch on vaikuttava persoonallisuus, jonka ulkonainen johtamistapa kyllä karttaa kaikkea johtamistaidon ulkonaisia sovinnaisia piirteitä. Lähinnä tulle mieleen Furtwängler, eikä ole mitenkään mahdotonta, että Munch olisikin omaksunut piirteitä tältä suurelta kapellimestarilta, jonka johdolla hän on soittanut. Konsertin alkunumerona soitetusta Beethovenin III sinfoniasta (Eroica) jäi ensivaikutelmana mieleen ehkä voimakkaimpana erikoisen selväpiirteinen jäsentely. Tällöin jossain määrin liikkuvaisuus tempojen suhteen etäännytti tulkinnan klassillisuuden ankarimmista mittapuista mutta Beethovenin musiikissa onkin jo tarpeellista määrätty väljyys tässä suhteessa. Vaikka klassillinen muoto saakin hänessä huipentajansa niin sisältö viittaa jo tulevaan, romantiikkaan ja siitäkin vielä eteenpäin. Tuli jälleen mieleen, että suuret taiteilijat erottautuvat hitaiden osien tulkinnoissaan yleisistä tottumuksista. Tämä toteamus koskee myöskin uutuutena soitetun Walter Pistonin IV sinfonian adagiota Säveltäjä nauttii Amerikassa suurta arvonantoa ja ensikuulemaltakin sai vaikutelman taitavasta ammattimiehestä, jolla on myöskin jotain sanottavaa. Jo vanhempaan polveen kuuluvan tekijän sävellys ei edustanut varsinaisesti uudempia tuulahduksia säveltaiteen alalla mutta sinfonia on kyllä valtaisten esittäjiensä erinomaisen tulkinnan arvoinen. Lopuksi soitetussa Ravelin balettimusiikkissa "Daphnis ja Chloe" pääsi orkesterin ja kapellimestarin virtuositeetti täyteen loistoonsa. Sävellyksen kolorismin tarjoamat effektimahdollisuudet eivät jättäneet mitään toivomisen varaa.

Runsaasti kansoitetussa Messuhallissa oli saapuvilla myöskin Tasavallan Presidentti ja Rouva Kekkonen, lukuisasti diplomaattikuntaa ja tunnettuja muusikoita. Suosionosoitukset ja useat tervehdykset olivat konsertin innostavina ulkoisina puitteina.

P. S.

vaan, missä on myös kaksi konserttia syyskuun 8—9 päivinä.

Orkesterin Euroopan-kiertue jatkuu vielä parisen viikkoa, minkä jälkeen bostonilaiset palaavat kotikaupunkiin aloittaakseen vakinaisen talvikautensa lokakuussa.

[131]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Maakansa
Pvm 6. 9. 1956.
Kirjoittaja:

Kirjallisuus Taide

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri

Helsinkiläisten konserttikausi alkoi viime tiistaina A-messuhallissa pidetyllä arvokkaalla konsertilla, jota kunnioittivat läsnäolollaan myöskin presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen. Raikuvien kättentaputusten säestämänä astui 110-miehisen orkesterin eteen sen ranskalais-amerikkalainen johtaja Charles Munch, jonka sytyttävien kädenliikkeiden voimasta kajahtivat ilmoille Beethovenin kolmannen (Eroica) sinfonian alkusäveleet. Mainittu sinfonia kuuluu sinfonisen kirjallisuuden kulmakiviin ja nyt kuultuna sen eräät kohdat vaikuttivat tempoiltaan ennen kuulemaamme nopeammilta, mutta surumarssiin valoi intomielinen johtaja sellaista traagillista voimaa, että sen teho kohosi korkeimpaan kulminaatioonsa. Samoin teoksen finaali, jossa säveltäjä käyttää nuoruuden teoksensa Prometheuksen

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Kymen Sanomat
Pvm 6/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Pohjois-Suomi
Pvm 6/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on konsertoinut Helsingissä. Kuvassamme maineikkaan orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Munch.

Helsingin musiikkielämän »vuoden suurin tapahtuma», Boston Symphony Orchestran vierailu avasi tiistaina konserttikauden Messuhallissa tasavallan presidentin puolisoineen kunnioittaessa tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Ilris
Turun Sт.
6 9 1956

Taide

Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin konsertti

Maailmankuulun, 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan juhlivan Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin Helsingin konsertti liittyi sodanjälkeisiin kuuluisien orkestereiden vierailuihin eräänlaisena päätepisteenä. Kun muistelemme Wienin Filharmoonikkoja ja Furtwängleriä, Leningradin Sinfoniaorkesteria ja Markevitsia, Filadelphian Sinfoniaorkesteria ja Ormandia, BBC:n Sinfoniaorkesteria ja Sargentia sekä nyt tuoreimpana elämyksenä Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteria ja Charles Munchia, sisällyttää tämä piiri itseensä kaiken inhimillisesti mahdollisen orkesteritaiteen alalla. Paljon mielenkiintoisia orkesteri vierailuja on toivottavasti vuosien kuluessa vielä edessämme, mutta taitamisen suhteen tuskin kuulemme mitään esimerkkeinä mainittujen orkestereiden mahdollisuuksien ylittävää.

Orkesterin nimekkäiden kapellimestareiden perinteiden nykyinen vaalija, ranskalais-amerikkalainen Charles Munch on vaikuttava persoonallisuus, jonka ulkonainen johtamistapa kyllä karttaa kaikken johtamistaidon ulkonaisia sovinnaisia piirteitä. Lähinnä tulle mieleen Furtwängler, eikä ole mitenkään mahdotonta, että Munch olisikin omaksunut piirteitä tältä suurelta kapellimestarilta, jonka johdolla hän on soittanut. Konsertin alkunumerona soitetusta Beethovenin III sinfoniasta (Eroica) jäi ensivaikutelmana mieleen ehkä voimakkaimpana erikoisen selväpiir-

---

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri matkusti

Neuvostoliittoon

Keskiviikkona jatkoi tiistai-iltana Helsingissä Messuhallissa suurella menestyksellä konsertoinut Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri kiertuematkaansa Leningradiin, jossa orkesteri antaa kaksi konserttia 5. ja 6. päivänä syyskuuta. Leningradista 110-miehinen orkesteri matkustaa Moskovaan, missä on myös kaksi konserttia syyskuun 8—9 päivinä.

Orkesterin Europan-kiertue jatkuu vielä parisen viikkoa, minkä jälkeen bostonilaiset palaavat kotikaupunkiin aloittaakseen vakinaisen talvikautensa lokakuussa.

HELS SANOMAT Sept. 6. 1956

"Sietämätöntä oli soittaa Messuhallissa"

BOSTONILAISET LÄHTIVÄT

Aikaisin eilen aamulla alkoi jo ääntyä Kaivotalon edustalle Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterien jäse- määränpää oli Leningrad. voi käsittää joukon pirteä ja iloisuutta. viikko oli joka lennetty ja annettu konsert- Tukholmaan oltiin lähdetty klo ulla perillä oltiin hotelleissa vähän ennen viittä, syötiin esti, annettiin konsertti, oltiin stökutsuilla ja kahdeksalta lla lennettiin Helsinkiin, jossa toistui sama aikataulu. "It's all" tuumii eräs soittaja "on ikävä kun ei voi tutustua kaupunkeihin ollenkaan. On vain tuntia aikaa. Päivät pitkät sitten istua lentokoneessa ja aikaa miten kuten. Tukholmassa oli aikaa kaksi tuntia, ehkä viisi tuntia. Eihän siinä mitään ehdi nähdä". Ja sitten kkaasti kysymyksiä haastattelijalle: "Taloudellinen tila, onko kauppaa Neuvostoliiton Arava-talot, arkkitehtuu- kaikki tuntui heitä kiinnosta-

Muutamat olivat ehtineet saunaan ennen konserttia, muutamat olivat ostaneet lasia ja keramiikkaa, kaikki olivat valokuvanneet. Bussimatkalla Seutulan kentälle laskettiin leikkiä ehtymättömän pirteästi.

"Hirviömäinen romu"

On termi Messuhallista konserttipaikkana. "Sietämätöntä oli soittaa siellä, kun ei kuulunut toisista mitään, mutta kaikuja kahta kauheammin." Neljä kertaa väitti eräs soittajista kuulleensa Beethovenin sinfonian "eikä tarvinnut soittaa kuin kerran". Ovatko kaikki konserttinne siellä? Soittiko BBC ja Philadelphiakin siellä? Huh.

Neuvostoliittoon bostonilaiset lensivät kahdessa ryhmässä. He ovat matkaallaan tästä lähtien täydellisesti Neuvostoliiton vieraina, kaikki huolto on naapuriemme käsissä. Koska Neuvostoliitto oli varannut vain kolme lentokonetta käyttöön, oli tehtävä kaksi matkaa Leningradiin. Kello yhdeksän starttasi ensimmäinen kone, mukanaan Charles Munch, ja kaksi muuta konetta puolen tunnin väliajoin. Kello yhdeksi koneet ehtivät takaisin Helsinkiin muita noutamaan. Ensimmäisessä koneessa lähti Pierre Monteux, joka oli koko aamun juossut lähetystöissä vielä viisumiaan hankkimassa. Monteux saapui vasta hiukan ennen konserttia maahamme, joten aikaa ei jäänyt haastatteluun, mutta parin minuutin tapaaminenkin jo antoi kuvan suunnattoman eloisesta ja viehättävästä persoonallisuudesta.

Jännittyneenä bostonilaiset tutustuvat tänään vapaapäivänään Leningradin nähtävyyksiin, illalla on jo ensimmäinen amerikkalaisen orkesterin konsertti Neuvostoliitossa.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Salmetar
Pvm 6 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

CHARLES MÜNCH, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja joka johti Helsingin konsertin tiistaina välimatkalla Moskovaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Åbo Underrättelser
Pvm 6 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

MUSIK

Bostons symfoniorkester

Det är ett glädjande tidernas tecken att i alla fall någon gång i året en internationellt ryktbar orkester besöker vårt land. Bostons symfoniorkester, som firar sitt sjuttiofemårsjubileum med en Europa-turné, hör till de ryktbaraste bland de ryktbara. Orkestern har samlat hundratio skickliga konstnärer, en tredjedel av dessa är födda i Europa, och orkesterns musik är en fest för dem som har öron till att höra. Det är omöjligt att få en riktig uppfattning om detta i radion. Stråkarnas rymd och basinstrumentens mustiga saft går totalt förlorade i den smått sprakande radiolådan. Men njutningsrikt var det inte heller alltid i Mässhallen, där det olyckliga grumlande ekot delvis hindrade en från att uppfatta glansen av guldet som stjärnexekutörerna hade att visa fram.

Charles Münch är en av de stora dirigenterna. Allt vad han gör är omsorgsfullt och mästerligt. Intet är lämnat åt slumpen, allt är genomtänkt och levandegjort av stundens engagement och inlevelse. Hans litet franska Beethoven i Eroikan var kanske ägnad att överraska med lätta temposkiftningar o. dyl. men man kunde knappast annat än tacksamt anamma.

Pistons sjätte symfoni är musikantiskt välgjord och klingande. Starkt motoriska rytmer samt kvart- och kvint-betonad harmonik och melodik var de viktigaste ingredienserna i en fast och traditionell formbyggnad. Konsertens clou blev Ravels Musik ur baletten Daphnis och Cloë, svit nr 2. Det finns intet "varmt" i denna musik, som dock är fantastiskt sensitiv och på sina ställen expansiv. Alla skuggor och dagrar i det nyansrika tonmåleriet återgavs med återupptäckandets fröjd; varje doft, varje skiftning i minspelet framhävde dirigenten med stor förälskelse och finalens suggestiva klangvirvlar stegrade sig över allt förnuft i salig berusning.

— Med flere tal och ändlösa hyllningar slöts denna musikhändelse.

G. G. G.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Työkansan St
Pvm 6 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Kirjallisuus ja taide

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri

Tiistaina oli maassamme harvinaislaatuinen konserttivierailu, Messuhallissa esiintyi eräs maailman parhaimpiin sinfoniaorkestereihin lukeutuva Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri. Konserttiohjelmassaan oli orkesterilla klassillista — Beethovenin "Eroica"-sinfonia, amerikkalaista — Pistonin Sinfonia N:o 6 sekä Ravelin sarja II "Daphnis et Cloë", joka oli näytteenä todellisesta orkesterivirtuositeetista.

Orkesteria, jolla on aina ollut kuuluisat johtajat, kuten esim. Nikisch ja Kousewitsky, johti Charles Munch. Hänen erittäin selväpiirteinen johtamistyylinsä on varmaan myös vaikuttamassa siihen kuviokirkkauteen, joka esiintyi orkesterin kaikissa esityksissä, niin puhaltimissa kuin jousissakin. Charles Munch saa suurena johtajapersoonallisuutena luoduksi orkesterin jäseniin eläytymiskykyä ja intoa, joka takaa korkean tason konsertin kaikissa käänteissä.

Tämäntapaisista esityksistä on erittäin vaikea asettaa mitään yksityiskohtaa toisen edelle, mutta mainittakoon kuitenkin esimerkiksi "Eroica"-sinfonian Scherzon Trioosan käyrätorvipaikka, joka on eräs klassillisen orkesterikirjallisuuden tunnetuimpia "kompastuskiviä". Tässä pidettiin tempo melkoisen nopeana, mutta siitä huolimatta cornojen puhtaus ja selvyys säilyi erinomaisena ja saatiin siihen lisäksi pehmeä sävykin.

Kiitos lankeaa myös orkesterin yksityisten jäsenten osalle, sillä kaikki soolot, joita esiintyi konsertin aikana, olivat sekä teknillisesti että tyylillisesti suurenmoisesti esitettyjä, kuten esim. sellosoolot Pistonin sinfonian kolmannessa osassa. Erinomaisen näytteen taidostaan antoivat myös lyömäsoittimet niin Pistonin-sinfoniassa kuin Ravelin sarjassakin. Molemmissa teoksissa kuultiin mitä monivärisintä lyömäsoittimien käsittelyä.

Pistonin sinfonia sellaisenaan oli miellyttävä yllätys ainakin allekirjoittaneelle. Usein olemme kuulleet täällä toisia saman tyylin edustajia, jotka ovat tuntuneet melko kuivakiskoisilta ja tylsiltä. Piston ei suinkaan ollut sellaista, hänen musiikkinsa on vaan omassa tyylissään varsin nokkelaa ja eteenpäin soljuvaa musiikkia, varsinkin sinfonian toinen osa oli suorastaan hauska ja finaalin pelasti hakkaavasta tyylistä sen suhteellinen lyhyys.

Huolimatta Messuhallin huonosta akustiikasta sai läsnäoleva yleisö nauttia mitä erinomaisimmasta orkesterimusiikista. Nyt kun ovet idän ja lännen väliselle taiteelliselle yhteistyölle ovat jälleen avautuneet, jää Helsinki sellaiseksi kauttakulkukaupungiksi, jolla on mahdollisuudet saada useammin kuin ennen tämänkaltaisia harvinaisia konserttivieraita. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri menee konserttimatkalle Neuvostoliittoon.

O. K.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilris
Lehti: Keski-Uusimaa
Pvm 7 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

niaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka sin gin konsertin.

H
na
Ke
Sibelius-viikolla BBC:n [illegible]ri, ja nyt sattui Helsinki sopivasti The Boston Symphony Orchestran Neuvostoliiton matkan varrelle. Mitäpä niitä spotta vertailemaan, mutta varmaa on, että bostonilaiset eivät vertailusta ainakaan kärsisi. Turhaan ei suuri Koussevitzky neljännesvuosisataa koulinut tätä soittajajoukkoa: tiistai-iltana kuullussa oli — vaikka oltiinkin Messuhallissa! — kamariyhtyeen soiton kirkkaus ja tasapaino yhtyneenä siihen soinnin pyöreyteen ja tukevuuteen, johon vain jättiläisorkesterissa päästään.

Charles Munch ei ole niitä johtajia, joita ylistetään "liioittelemattomuudesta", "viileästä hienostuneisuudesta", siitä, etteivät he pyri "tekemään" mitään. Hän kyllä "tekee", alleviivaa paksulla kynällä, mutta aidosti ja väkevästi. Munchin "Eroican" jokainen fraasi oli ehdoton ja kertakaikkinen, jänneväli Surumarssin raskaasta murheesta finaalin triumfin pilviä hipovaan voitonriemuun oli ennenkokemattoman päätähuimaava.

Illan moderni teos, Walter Pistonin VI sinfonia, varta vasten Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria varten kirjoitettu, oli erinomaisen miellyttävä tuttavuus. Parhaimmin valloittivat kuulijan nokkela ja riemastuttava scherzo sekä hidas osa, jonka surumielinen pääajatus oli kaunis aivan vanhassa hyvässä mielessä.

Konsertin railakkaana loppuna — ja täällä orkesterin kunto lopullisesti ha-vaittiin — oli 2. sarja Ravelin baletista "Daphins ja Choloë".

I. R.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka on saapunut konsertoimaan Helsinkiin on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolme suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisin johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Munch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien johtaa Helsingissäkin.

HEL ANOMAT Sept. 6, 1956

"Sietämätöntä oli soittaa Messuhallissa"

BOSTONILAISET LÄHTIVÄT

aisin eilen aamulla alkoi jo äntyä Kaivotalon edustalle onin sinfoniaorkesterien jäsenmääränpää oli Leningrad. in voi käsittää joukon pirte ja iloisuutta, viikko oli joka lennetty ja annettu konsert Tukholmaan oltiin lähdetty klo ulla perillä oltiin hotelleissa vähän ennen viittä, syötiin sti, annettiin konsertti, oltiin ökutsuilla ja kahdeksalta lla lennettiin Helsinkiin, jossa istui sama aikataulu. "It's all tuumii eräs soittaja "on ikävä kun ei voi tutustua unkeihin ollenkaan. On vain tuntia aikaa. Päivät pitkät itten istua lentokoneessa ja aikaa miten kuten. Tukassa oli aikaa kaksi tuntia, ehkä viisi tuntia. Eihän siimitään ehdi nähdä". Ja sitten kkaasti kysymyksiä haastatte: "Taloudellinen tila, onko kauppaa Neuvostoliiton Arava-talot, arkkitehtuu kaikki tuntui heitä kiinnostatamat olivat ehtineet sau ennen konserttia, muutamat ostaneet lasia ja keramiikkaa, kaikki olivat valokuvanneet matkalla Seutulan kentällä leikkiä ehtymättömän

"Hirviömäinen romu"

Oli termi Messuhallista konserttipaikkana. "Sietämätöntä oli soittaa siellä, kun ei kuulunut toisista mitään, mutta kaikuja kahta kauheammin." Neljä kertaa väitti eräs soittajista kuulleensa Beethovenin sinfonian "eikä tarvinnut soittaa kuin kerran". Ovatko kaikki konserttinne siellä? Soittiko BBC ja Philadelphiakin siellä? Huh.

Neuvostoliittoon bostonilaiset lensivät kahdessa ryhmässä. He ovat matkaallaan tästä lähtien täydellisesti Neuvostoliiton vieraina, kaikki huolto on naapuriemme käsissä. Koska Neuvostoliitto oli varannut vain kolme lentokonetta käyttöön, oli tehtävä kaksi matkaa Leningradiin. Kello yhdeksän starttasi ensimmäinen kone, mukanaan Charles Munch, ja kaksi muuta konetta puolen tunnin väliajoin. Kello yhdeksi koneet ehtivät takaisin Helsinkiin muita noutamaan. Ensimmäisessä koneessa lähti Pierre Monteux, joka oli koko aamun juossut lähetystöissä vielä viisumiaan hankkimassa. Monteux saapui vasta hiukan ennen konserttia maahamme, joten aikaa ei jäänyt haastatteluun, mutta parin minuutin tapaaminenkin jo antoi kuvan suunnattoman eloisesta ja viehättävästä persoonallisuudesta.

Jännittyneenä bostonilaiset tutustuvat tänään vapaapäivänään Leningradin nähtävyyksiin, illalla on jo ensimmäinen amerikkalaisen orkesterin konsertti Neuvostoliitossa.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilvis
Lehti: Salmetar
Pvm 6 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

CHARLES MÜNCH, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja joka johti Helsingin konsertin tiistaina välimatkalla Moskovaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilvis
Lehti: Åbo Underrättelser
Pvm 6 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

MUSIK

Bostons symfoniorkester

Det är ett glädjande tidernas tecken att i alla fall någon gång i året en internationellt ryktbar orkester besöker vårt land. Bostons symfoniorkester, som firar sitt sjuttiofemårsjubileum med en Europa-turné, hör till de ryktbaraste bland de ryktbara. Orkestern har samlat hundratio skickliga konstnärer, en tredjedel av

---

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilvis
Lehti: Työkansan Sanomat
Pvm 6 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Kirjallisuus ja taide

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri

Tiistaina oli maassamme harvinaislaatuinen konserttivierailu, Messuhallissa esiintyi eräs maailman parhaimpiin sinfoniaorkestereihin lukeutuva Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesteri. Konserttiohjelmassaan oli orkesterilla klassillista — Beethovenin "Eroica"-sinfonia, amerikkalaista — Pistonin Sinfonia N:o 6 sekä Ravelin sarja II "Daphnis et Cloë", joka oli näytteenä todellisesta orkesterivirtuositeetista.

Orkesteria, jolla on aina ollut kuuluisat johtajat, kuten esim. Nikisch ja Kousewitsky, johti Charles Munch. Hänen erittäin selväpiirteinen johtamistyylinsä on varmaan myös vaikuttamassa siihen kuviokirkkauteen, joka esiintyi orkesterin kaikissa esityksissä, niin puhaltimissa kuin jousissakin. Charles Munch saa suurena johtajapersoonallisuutena luoduksi orkesterin jäseniin eläytymiskykyä ja intoa, joka takaa korkean tason konsertin kaikissa käänteissä.

Tämäntapaisista esityksistä on erittäin vaikea asettaa mitään yksityiskohtaa toisen edelle, mutta mainittakoon kuitenkin esimerkiksi "Eroica"-sinfonian Scherzon Trio-osan käyrätorvipaikka, joka on eräs klassillisen orkesterikirjallisuuden tunnetuimpia "kompastuskiviä". Tässä pidettiin tempo melkoisen nopeana, mutta siitä huolimatta cornojen puhtaus ja selvyys säilyi erinomaisena ja saatiin siihen lisäksi pehmeä sävykin.

Kiitos lankeaa myös orkesterin siikkinsa on vaan omassa tyylissään varsin nokkelaa ja eteenpäin soljuvaa musiikkia, varsinkin sinfonian toinen osa oli suorastaan hauska ja finaalin pelasti hakkaavasta tyylistä sen suhteellinen lyhyys.

Huolimatta Messuhallin huonosta akustiikasta sai läsnäoleva yleisö nauttia mitä erinomaisimmasta orkesterimusiikista. Nyt kun ovet idän ja lännen väliselle taiteelliselle yhteistyölle ovat jälleen avautuneet, jää Helsinki sellaiseksi kauttakulkukaupungiksi, jolla on mahdollisuudet saada useammin kuin ennen tämänkaltaisia harvinaisia konserttivieraita. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri menee konserttimatkalle Neuvostoliittoon.

O. K.

VAPAA SANA Sept. 7, 1956

Bostonilaiset

Helsinkiläisiä onkin tänä vuonna siunattu ulkomaisilla orkesterivierailuilla. Keväällä kävi Bamberger Symphoniker, Sibelius-viikolla BBC:n sinfoniaorkesteri, ja nyt sattui Helsinki sopivasti The Boston Symphony Orchestran Neuvostoliiton matkan varrelle. Mitäpä niitä ruveta vertailemaan, mutta varmaa on, että bostonilaiset eivät vertailusta ainakaan kärsisi. Turhaan ei suuri Koussevitzky neljännesvuosisataa koulinut tätä soittajajoukkoa: tiistai-iltana kuullussa oli — vaikka oltiinkin Messuhallissa — kamariyhtyeen soiton kirkkaus ja tasapaino yhtyneenä siihen soinnin pyöreyteen ja tukevuuteen, johon vain jättiläisorkesterissa päästään.

Charles Munch ei ole niitä johtajia, joita ylistetään "liioittelemattomuudesta", "viileästä hienostuneisuudesta", siitä, etteivät he pyri "tekemään" mitään. Hän kyllä "tekee", alleviivaa paksulla kynällä, mutta aidosti ja väkevästi. Munchin "Eroican" jokainen fraasi oli ehdoton ja kertakaikkinen, jänneväli Surumarssin raskaasta murheesta finaalin triumfin pilviä hipovaan voitonriemuun oli ennenkokemattoman päätähuimaava.

Illan moderni teos, Walter Pistonin VI sinfonia, varta vasten Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteria varten kirjoitettu, oli erinomaisen miellyttävä tuttavuus. Parhaimmin valloittivat kuulijan nokkela ja

Viikon rad

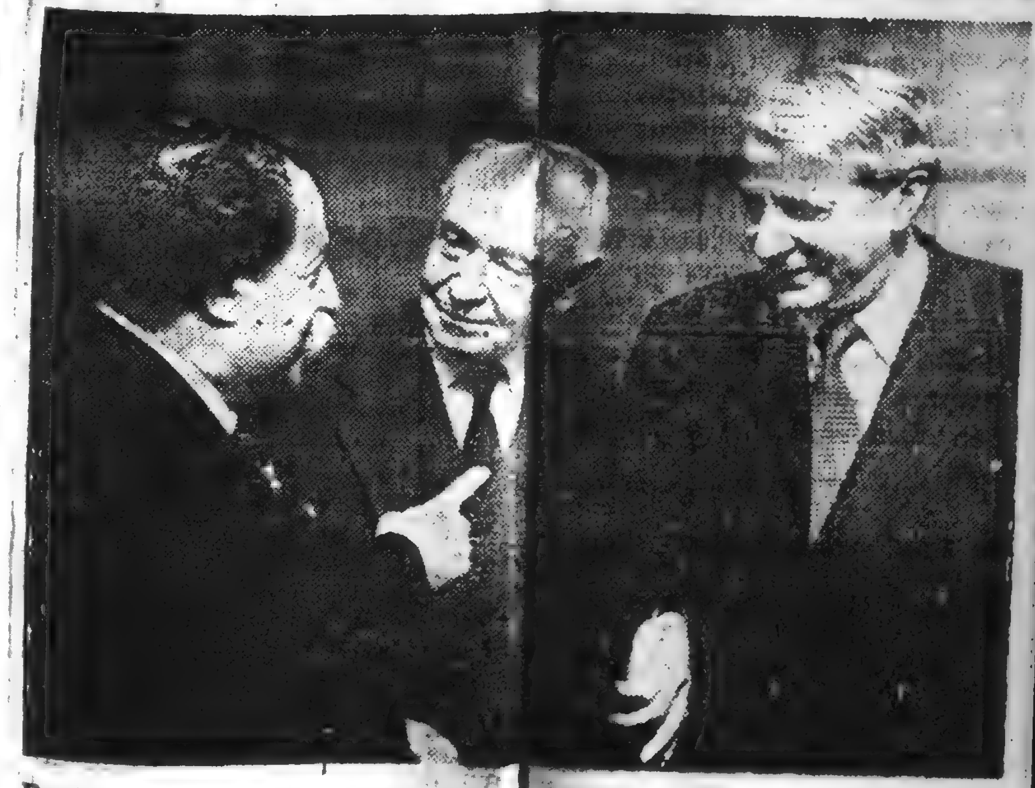
SUNNUNTAINA 9. 9.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ilvis
Lehti: Keski-Uusimaa
Pvm 7 / 9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch, Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin nykyinen johtaja, joka johtaa Helsingin konsertin.

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri saapuu

Bostonin maineikas sinfoniaorkesteri, joka on saapunut konsertoimaan Helsinkiin on Amerikan monista suurista sinfoniaorkestereista ehkä kuuluisin. Tämä 75-vuotista olemassaoloaan Euroopan-kiertueella juhliva orkesteri sekä Suomessakin vuoden 1955 Sibelius-viikolla vieraillut Philadelphian orkesteri ja New Yorkin filharmoonikot ovat »kolme suurta» useitten erinomaisten amerikkalaisten sinfoniaorkestereiden joukossa. Nimenomaan Bostonin orkesterille, jonka konsertti juhlavalla tavalla avaa syksyn konserttikauden Helsingissä, on kautta sen historian ollut luonteenomaista uusien musiikkiteosten esittäminen.



Bostonin sinfoniaorkesterin kolme suuren johtajan tapaaminen. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky, sen kuuluisin johtaja vv. 1924—1949, ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien johtaa Helsingissäkin.

[133]

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ursis
Lehti: Itä-Savo
Pvm 7 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri antoi Helsingissä konsertin kautta kulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon. Kuvassamme orkesterin johtaja Charles Munch saapumassa maahamme.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ursis
Lehti: Länsi-Suomi
Pvm 7 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri antoi tiistai-iltana juhlakonsertin Helsingissä. 110 miehen vahvuinen orkesteri esitti Charles Münchin johdolla Beethovenin III sinfonian, balettimusiikkia y.m. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ursis
Lehti: Ylioppilaslehti
Pvm 7 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Charles Münch

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ursis
Lehti: Kansan Lehti
Pvm 8 / 9 19 56

BOSTONIN

orkesteri aloitti suurenmoisella tavalla tämän syksyn konserttisesongin. Tämän "maailman parhaan" orkesterin johtaja, Charles Münch osoitti vastaavansa mainettaan; suurin (jopa huomiotaherättävän suurin) liikkein hän pystyi loihtimaan verrattomasta sointiaparaatistaan mukaansa imeviä crescendoja, valtaisia fortissimoja, mutta myös vastapainoksi äärimmäisen keveitä pianissimoja, hienostuneita sooloesityksiä ja hämmästyttävää väririkkautta. Riippui kuulijan periaatteista, miten hän suhtautui Eroican tulkintaan. Jos hän on elegantin, kauniskaikuisen ja hiotun jäntevän esitystavan kannattaja, hän saattoi poistua konsertista suurta elämystä rikkaampana. Ensimmäisen osan pääteema lähti liikkeelle ehkä "juoksevammin" ja nopeammin kuin tavallista, ja yllättävän rohkeat ritardandot siellä täällä saattoivat oudoksuttaa. Mutta vastapainoksi Münch valoi surumarssiin tiheän resignaation tunnelman, muotoili monet yksityiskohdat scherzossa erittäin herkullisesti ja hallitsi hyvin klassillisesti finaalin muunnelmasikermät.

Toisena sinfoniana oli amerikkalaisen Pistonin 6. sinfonia. Sen alaotsikoksi tekisi mieli kirjoittaa: "paljon melua tyhjästä." Myönnettäköön, että siitä ilmeni verrattain suuri tekotaito, mitä Herra paratkoon yhden ja toisen sävellyksistä nykyään voi sanoa — valitettavasti vain se, mikä pitää nimenomaan menneitten aikojen sinfonioita pystyssä, nimittäin henkevyys ja viisaus, vain tahtoo puuttua kovin monelta sinfonikolta nykyään. Lisäksi Pistonin ääriosat olivat todistuksena siitä, ettei nykyään enää monikaan pysty kirjoittamaan todella hyvää sinfonia-allegroa. Scherzo oli hauska, vaikka senkin hauskuus oli tyypillisesti brutaalia ja kovaäänistä. Adagio luotaili syvempiä näköaloja, ja onnistuikin osittain. Mutta vaikka finaalin ensimmäinen ajatus pani paljossa odottamaan, niin jatko latteutti.

Ravelin mestariteos Dafnis ja Gloe oli loistavana päätenumerona. Tämän suuren sointufreskon — jota muuten Stravinski sanoo Ranskan musiikin kaikkien aikojen suurenmoisimpiin kuuluvaksi — esityksessä sai Münch tilaisuuden tuoda esiin orkesterin voimavarat koko häikäisevässä laajuudessa. Ravelin "unelmien Kreikan" päivännousu linnunlauluineen, paimenskalmeijan äänineen, Dafnis-paimenen ja hänen rakastamansa neidon, Cloen kohtaaminen, heidän pantomiiminsä, jossa he esittävät vanhan tarun Panin ja Syrinxin rakkaudesta, Panin huilun sävelet, ja grandioosi finaali, bakkanttien johtama Danse générale, tanssin apoteoosi, muotoutuivat unohtumattomaksi elämykseksi. Oli kuin olisi astunut sisään johonkin Feuerbachin tai Böcklinin tauluun ja itse hengittänyt sadun ja paimenromantiikan Kreikan täyteläistä tuoksua. Kautta linjan sai nauttia suurenmoisista sooloista niin puhaltimien kuin jousten puolella; erinomainen I oboe jäi erikoisena elämyksenä mieleen jo Eroicassa. Wienissä kuulemani Concertgebouw soitti tämän teoksen Beinumin johdolla ehkä kimmeltävämmin, mutta Münchin täyteläinen laajakangas imponeerasi. Ja mikä valtava loppucrescendon imu!

✶

Syksyn sinfoniakonserttien ohjelmisto on nyt myös selvä ja listoina edessä. Kaupunginorkesteri antaa paitsi perjantain sinfoniakonsertteja ja koululaiskonsertteja myös sarjan lauantaikonsertteja, joissa osoittain toistetaan edellisen illan ohjelmistoa. Sinfoniakonserttien johtajana on miltei yksinomaan prof. Hannikainen, yhden johtaa Parmet (hyvä!) ja kaksi vielä nimeämätöntä ulkomaista vierailijaa. Ohjelmistosta sietää poimia seuraavat kotimaiset teokset: Linnalan II sinfonia 12. 10., kokonainen Kajanus-konsertti 14. 12. (ainakin mielenkiintoinen), Sonnisen "Alla Lapin taivaan", Sibeliuksen IV, ja lauantaina 27. 10. Sventon "Ahvenanmaasarja". Muita huomattavia teoksia ovat esim.: Schumann-konsertissa I sinfonia, Shostakovitshilta uusi viulukonsertto ja X sinfonia, Mahlerin Kindertoten-lieder, Martinun kaksoispianokonsertto, Nielsenin II sinfonia, Milhaudin sellokonsertto, Pohjoismaiset säveltäjät 14. 9., ja 30. 11. Akateemisen Laulun suurena voimainkoetuksena Verdin Requiem. Lisäksi Mozartia ja Brahmsia ja palojn muuta.

Radio-orkesteri on laajentunut syksyn alusta käsittäen 72 soittajaa. Syksyn ohjelma on suorastaan herkullinen. Suomalaista on Englundin pianokonsertto, Sibeliuksen I ja VII, Madetojan, Klamin, von Törneä, Sonnista ja Paciusta. Todella huomattava tapaus tulee olemaan Frank Martinin suuren kuoroteoksen "In Terra Pax" ensiesitys 11. 12. Äärimmäisen mielenkiintoinen uusi tuttavuus on Alois Haban Elämäntie — valitettavasti siinä ei käytetä neljäsosa-askelia. Epätavallista musiikkia ovat Stravinskin Les Noces (uusinta, huh!), Prokofjevin III pianokonsertto, Martinun kaksoiskonsertto, ja Hatshaturjanin viulukonsertto. Muiden suurten ilonaiheiden joukosta mainittakoon vielä, että Berglund johtaa Brucknerin III (Wagner-) sinfonian 9. 10.

nam —

uhallissa tiistaina. Kuvassamme kuulu amerikkalainen soittajisto, jo-Beethovenin III sinfoniaa.

[133]

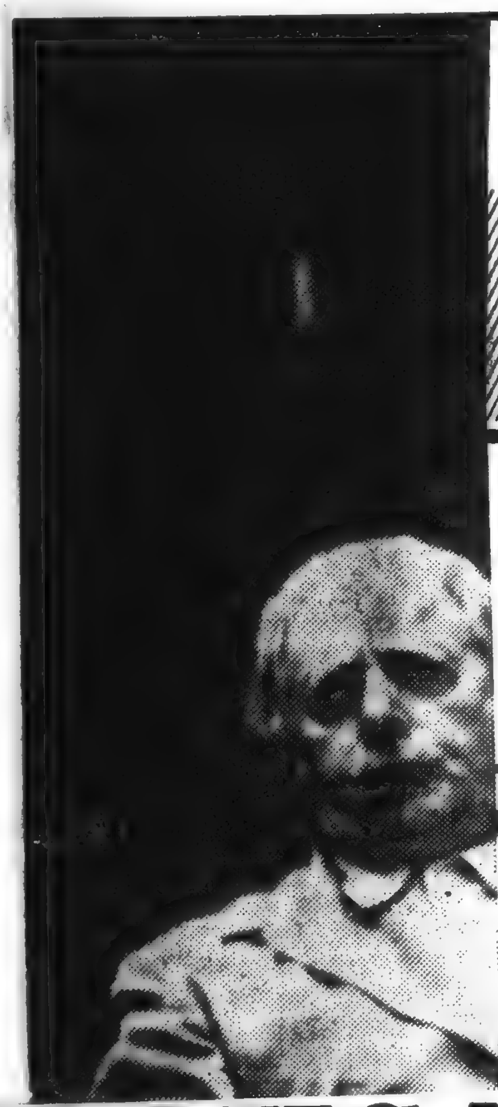
SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulris
Lehti: Itä-Savo
Pvm 7/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

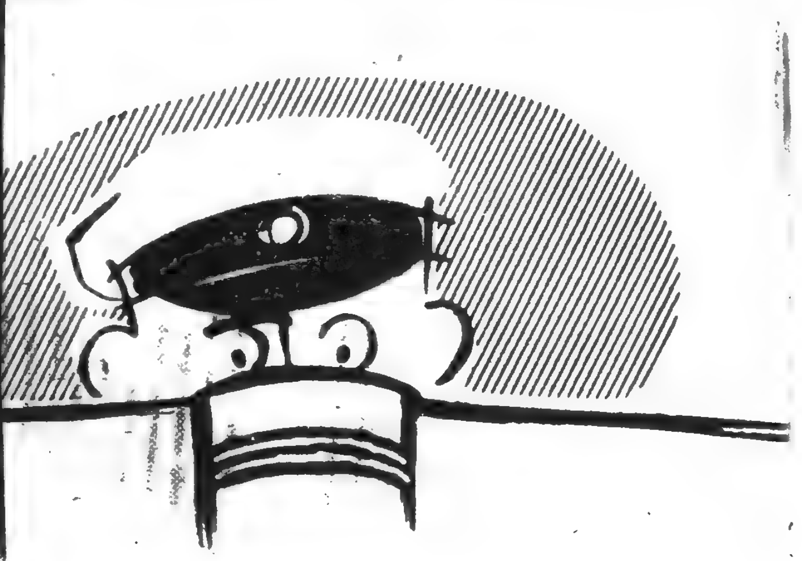
Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri antoi Helsingissä konsertin kautta kulkumatkallaan Neuvostoliittoon. Kuvassamme orkesterin johtaja Charles Munch saapumassa maahamme.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulris
Lehti: Länsi-Suomi
Pvm 7/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri antoi tiistai-iltana juhlakonsertin Helsingissä. 110 miehen vahvuinen orkesteri esitti Charles Münchin johdolla Beethovenin III sinfonian, balettimusiikkia y.m. Tasavallan presidentti ja rouva Kekkonen kunnioittivat tilaisuutta läsnäolollaan.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulris
Lehti: Ylioppilaslehti
Pvm 7/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:





Kurssikirjat
KATEEMISESTA
opintotiliin

SAKSA JA POHJ

"Saksan suurimmat miehet kasvoivat poliittisesti hajanaisessa maassa. Vielä keisarillisena aikana vallitsi hengenviljelylle suotuisa tasapaino: professori oli sotilaan vertainen. Preussilainen valtio olisi varmaankin miellyttänyt Platonia. Se miellytti myös monia saksalaisia, mutta ei kaikkia naapureita.

En mene sanomaan, missä määrin natsit edustivat Saksan kansaa. Joka tapauksessa he [illegible] jyrkän käänteen suhteissa ulkomaihin ja samalla sisäisessä kehityksessä. Heidän työnsä näkyy edelleen monista jäljistä, joista tärkeimmät voidaan koota yhteen sanaan: hengenviljelyn rappio. "Saksan ihme" on toistaiseksi rajoittunut taloudelliselle alalle, jos se lainkaan on ollut ihme.

En pysty arvioimaan Saksassa suoritettua tieteellistä työtä, keväällä kuulin Lundissa saksalaisilta opiskelijoilta, ettei vielä ole toiveita paluusta entiseen johtoasemaan. Yhdysvallat ja Neuvostoliitto houkuttelevat tutkimustyöhön parhaita voimia sekä varustavat ne parhailla välineillä, kun taas Saksassa yhä luotetaan yksityisen tiedemiehen uhrautuvaisuuteen.

Taideteoksista voidaan helpommin vertailla elokuvia. Suomessa nähdyn ohjelmiston

Tiedämme ta emme p ilmiön merk
S[illegible]sta tul konpuhdista Suomeen my sa olennaisi oli lähin su
a[illegible]ttelu hal Pohjolaa, Ni
leriin asti.
va[illegible]inkin S [illegible] poh kirjallisuutt me saksalai
ko[illegible] näist meillä . vara
m[illegible]tavaa seen?

Ei ole un että Pohjol
saanut ääne

Joko tunnette hänet?

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Ulris
Lehti: Kansan Lehti
Pvm 8/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

BOSTONIN SINFONIAORKESTERILLA oli suurmenestys Helsingin A-messuhallissa tiistaina. Kuvassamme kuulu amerikkalainen soittajisto, joka käsittää 110 miestä, soittamassa Beethovenin III sinfoniaa.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Savonmaa
Pvm 8 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Uris

Musiikkitapaus Helsingissä. Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri esiintyi tiistai-iltana A-messuhallissa. 110-miehisen orkesterin konserttia oli seuraamassa mm. presidentti Kekkonen puolisoineen.

ohjelmaan. Aivan erikoisella ilolla on tervehdittävä uutista Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin saapumisesta pääkaupunkiin alkavan syksyn ensimmäisenä musiikkitapahtumana ajankohtana, jolloin kesän jälkeen musiikinnälkä taas on ehkä suurimmillaan.

Boston Symphony Orchestran syntysanojen lausuja oli nuori bostonilainen vannoutunut musiikin ystävä ja muusikko Henry I. Higginson, porvarilliselta ammatiltaan pankkiiri. Musiikkiopintojensa aikana Wienissä v. 1860 hän oivalsi mikä merkitys kaupungin omalla sinfoniaorkesterilla saattaa olla — ja mitä puuttui hänen omasta koti-

Alku oli pakostakin vaatimatonta. Higginson palkkasi parhaat Euroopasta saatavat muusikot ja johtajaksi kiinnitettiin nuori lahjakas Georg Henschel. Bostonin kaupunki, jota tähän asti kirjallisuus oli kiinnostanut enemmän kuin musiikki, antoi nyt sinfoniaorkesteripyrinnöille täyden tukensa. Itävaltalainen kapellimestari Wilhelm Gericke, joka v. 1884 muutti Bostoniin, vaikutti uupumattomalla tarmollaan orkesterin soittotaidon paranemiseen ja hioutumiseen. Hänen seuraajansa Arthur Nikisch kohotti yhä esitysten tulkinnallista puolta huomattavasti, samoin hänen jälkeensä Emil Paur. Gericke palasi jälleen v. 1898 orkesterin johtajaksi, ja soittajiston suorituskyky kehittyi vähitellen kohti yhä suurempaa kypsyyttä. Vuosi 1900 on merkittävä vaihe: tällöin orkesteri pääsi muuttamaan omaan konserttisaliin, uuden uutukaiseen Symphony Hall'iin.

Taipaleella kohti suuria päämääriä oltiin nyt päästy lopullisesti avoveteen, ja tavoitteet asetettiin yhä korkeammalle. Kun uuden kapellimestarin valinta jälleen tuli ajankohtaiseksi Higginson käsitti, että orkesterin taso jo edellytti varsin huomattavaa johtajaa. Pitkän valinnan jälkeen päädyttiin Karl Muckiin, kauttaaltaan hienostuneeseen, ansioituneeseen ja läpimusikaaliseen kapellimestariin, joka sitten paria taukoa lukuunottamatta (vv. 1908 ja 1912 jolloin Max Fiedler oli hänen sijaisenaan) yhtämittaisesti pysyi tehtävässään aina v. 1918 asti. Tällöin hän sotatilan vuoksi oli pakoitettu luopu-kesterisointikin kypsyi ja avartui. Monteux'in jälkeen alkoi orkesterin historiassa aikakausi, joka nykypolvellekin on varsin tuttu: ohjakset otti käsiinsä Serge Koussevitzky. Puuttumatta lähemmin hänen henkilöönsä ja kajoamatta tarkemmin hänen elämäntyöhönsä voidaan sanoa, että hänen toimintansa neljännesvuosisadan ajan orkesterimusiikin kohottamiseksi sinfoniataiteen kaikkein korkeimmille huipuille liitti hänen nimensä kiinteästi Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin suursaavutuksiin.

Charles Munch

Charles Munchin johtajakausi alkoi v. 1949. Hän tuli tähän tehtävään ollessaan kunniansa huipulla, takanaan merkittävä ura Euroopassa. Munch on syntynyt Strassburgissa. Isä oli elsassilainen urkuri, äiti ranskatar, ja suuri sisarusparvi varsin musikaalinen. Nuori viuluniekka Charles oli syntymäkaupunkinsa konservatoriossa ensin oppilaana ja sitten opettajana, soittaen samalla myös orkesterin konserttimestarina. Pariisissa hän sittemmin johti Pariisin Sinfoniaorkesteria, Lamoureux- ja Straram-orkestereita, oli monet vuodet Pariisin Konservatorion orkesterin vakinaisena johtajana, ja perusti vihdoin Pariisin Filharmonikot. Vuonna 1948 hän johti Orchestre National de la Radiodiffusion Francaise'a sen Amerikankiertueella.

Ryhdyttyään Bostonin Sinfonikkojen johtajaksi hän jo ensimmäisten viikkojen aikana vei orkesteria kohti uutta kulta-aikaa. Hänen johtajakautensa onkin muodostunut varsin voimakkaaksi nousuksi orkesterille, joka vuosikymmenien aikana on ollut kenties parhain välikappale tekemään Bostonia tunnetuksi ympäri maailmaa.

Nykyisin orkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu vastaava "valtojen" orkesteri. Toimintavuosi käsittää 46 viikkoa, josta talvikautena 30 viikon aikana annetaan 63 konserttia Bostonissa ja vierailukiertue vie kuusi viikkoa. Vuosittaiset Berkshire-musiikkijuhlat Tanglewoodissa sitovat orkesterin kuuden viikon ajaksi heinä-elokuussa ulkoilmakonsertteja varten. Arthur Fiedlerin johtama "The Boston Pops"-viihdeorkesteri on osa normaalitoimintaa, sen konsertit ovat joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa niinikään ilmaiset kävelykonsertit Charles River'illä. Tämän lisäksi työsaralla on vielä runsaasti radioesiintymisiä ja levytyksiä.

Orkesteri kävi ensivierailulla Euroopassa v. 1952, mutta saapuu nyt ensi kerran Suomeen, todella tervetulleena syyskonserttikauden lähtölaukauksena.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Kainuun St.
Pvm 12 / 9 19 56
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on konsertoinut Helsingissä. Kuvassamme kolme suurta kohtaavat. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky vv. 1924—1949 ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien. Hän johti myöskin Helsingissä pidetyn konsertin.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Savonmaa
Pvm 8/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

kertaa perinteellinen, vaan ihan linen. Vastoin perinteitä oli seki tä kaupunki kustansi kuljetuksen reen vanhalla "Kyrönsalmella".
töjä oli niin paljon, että heidä kuljettaa kolmessa vuorossa, "y kat ensin". Ensimmäinen täp lossillinen lähti satamasta klo 8.
palasi 12.30.

Retki oli luullakseni oikein ha
Yläluokat olivat saaressa luoki ja opettajat joivat heidän kan kahvia aivan kuin tavallisetkin set. Alaluokkalaiset sen sijaan olleet luokittain, vaan pienem ryhmissä.

Retken aikana muutamat huo vat, että sananjaloista saa pu hattuja, ja että valtavat eväskori kevt helpommin mukana, kun n pustaa kiikkumaan riu'usta, kummassakin päässä on tyttö. — keä valmisteltaessa huvitti eril tyyli, jolla opettajat kehoittivat nustautumaan kumisaappaisiin:
lun rehtori vetosi kosteuteen k tuksessaan, eräs toinen huon käärmeistä ja risuista, ja kolma noi: "... ette suinkaan saa h panna kumisaappaita jalkaann Tuota viimeistä kantaa ei kai ku olisi keksinytkään, ellei siitä huomautettu...

Mutta nämä huomiotkin ker vain siitä huolenpidosta ja va näöstä, johon opettajat antau kuljettaessaan tällaisen hälisevän man huviretkelle, ja tyttölyseo antavat täyden kiitoksen opettaj siitä, että nämä yleensä vaivau järjestämään sen.

Tuula-Mar

Hoopolaan rakennots

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Uusi Suomi
Pvm 19/8 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin filharmoninen orkesteri.

Charles Munch
ja Bostonin Sinfonikot saapuvat

Ulkolaisia sinfoniaorkestereitten parhaita on viime vuosina vieraillut maassamme jotakuinkin tasaisin väliajoin, näistä useimpien matkat leveysasteillemme ovat liittyneet Sibeliusviikon runsaaseen ohjelmaan. Aivan erikoisella ilolla on tervehdittävä uutista Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin saapumisesta pääkaupunkiin alkavan syksyn ensimmäisenä musiikkitapahtumana ajankohtana, jolloin kesän jälkeen musiikinnälkä taas on ehkä suurimmillaan.

Boston Symphony Orchestran syntysanojen lausuja oli nuori bostonilainen vannoutunut musiikin ystävä ja muusikko Henry I. Higginson, porvarilliselta ammatiltaan pankkiiri. Musiikkiopintojensa aikana Wienissä v. 1860 hän oivalsi mikä merkitys kaupungin omalla sinfoniaorkesterilla saattaa olla — ja mitä puuttui hänen omasta kotikaupungistaan. V. 1881 hän ryhtyi toteuttamaan aatettaan vakinaisen orkesterin perustamiseksi Bostoniin "toimimaan klassillisten musiikkiteosten, lähinnä sinfonioitten esittämistä varten".

Alku oli pakostakin vaatimatonta. Higginson palkkasi parhaat Euroopasta saatavat muusikot ja johtajaksi kiinnitettiin nuori lahjakas Georg Henschel. Bostonin kaupunki, jota tähän asti kirjallisuus oli kiinnostanut enemmän kuin musiikki, antoi nyt sinfoniaorkesteripyrinnöille täyden tukensa. Itävaltalainen kapellimestari Wilhelm Gericke, joka v. 1884 muutti Bostoniin, vaikutti uupumattomalla tarmollaan orkesterin soittotaidon paranemiseen ja hioutumiseen. Hänen seuraajansa Arthur Nikisch kohotti yhä esitysten tulkinnallista puolta huomattavasti, samoin hänen jälkeensä Emil Paur. Gericke palasi jälleen v. 1898 orkesterin johtajaksi, ja soittajiston suorituskyky kehittyi vähitellen kohti yhä suurempaa kypsyyttä. Vuosi 1900 on merkittävä vaihe: tällöin orkesteri pääsi muuttamaan omaan konserttisaliin, uuden uutukaiseen Symphony Hall'iin.

Taipaleella kohti suuria päämääriä oltiin nyt päästy lopullisesti avoveteen, ja tavoitteet asetettiin yhä korkeammalle. Kun uuden kapellimestarin valinta jälleen tuli ajankohtaiseksi Higginson käsitti, että orkesterin taso jo edellytti varsin huomattavaa johtajaa. Pitkän valinnan jälkeen päädyttiin Karl Muckiin, kauttaaltaan hienostuneeseen, ansioituneeseen ja läpimusikaaliseen kapellimestariin, joka sitten paria taukoa lukuunottamatta (vv. 1908 ja 1912 jolloin Max Fiedler oli hänen sijaisenaan) yhtämittaisesti pysyi tehtävässään aina v. 1918 asti. Tällöin hän sotatilan vuoksi oli pakoitettu luopumaan uuden maailman sen ajan huomattavimman ja erittäin elegantin sinfoniaorkesterin johdosta.

Näihin aikoihin myös Higginson jätti vastuunalaisen tehtävänsä ja orkesterin hallintoa varten perustettiin johtokunta. Kapellimestariksi valittiin pariisilainen Henri Rabaud. Hänen seuraajanaan oli seuraavan viiden vuoden ajan Pierre Monteux, intomielinen ja väsymätön tulisielu, jonka ansiosta ohjelmisto laajentui ja rikastui huomattavasti samalla kun orkesterisointikin kypsyi ja avartui. Monteux'in jälkeen alkoi orkesterin historiassa aikakausi, joka nykypolvellekin on varsin tuttu: ohjakset otti käsiinsä Serge Koussevitzky. Puuttumatta lähemmin häneen henkilöönsä ja kajoamatta tarkemmin hänen elämäntyöhönsä voidaan sanoa, että hänen toimintansa neljännesvuosisadan ajan orkesterimusiikin kohottamiseksi sinfoniataiteen kaikkein korkeimmille huipuille liitti hänen nimensä kiinteästi Bostonin Sinfoniaorkesterin suursaavutuksiin.

Charles Munch

Charles Munchin johtajakausi alkoi v. 1949. Hän tuli tähän tehtävään ollessaan kunniansa huipulla, takanaan merkittävä ura Euroopassa. Munch on syntynyt Strassburgissa. Isä oli elsassilainen urkuri, äiti ranskatar, ja suuri sisarusparvi varsin musikaalinen. Nuori viuluniekka Charles oli syntymäkaupunkinsa konservatoriossa ensin oppilaana ja sitten opettajana, soittaen samalla myös orkesterin konserttimestarina. Pariisissa hän sittemmin johti Pariisin Sinfoniaorkesteria, Lamoureux- ja Straram-orkestereita, oli monet vuodet Pariisin Konservatorion orkesterin vakinaisena johtajana, ja perusti vihdoin Pariisin Filharmonikot. Vuonna 1948 hän johti Orchestre National de la Radiodiffusion Francaise'a sen Amerikankiertueella.

Ryhdyttyään Bostonin Sinfonikkojen johtajaksi hän jo ensimmäisten viikkojen aikana vei orkesteria kohti uutta kulta-aikaa. Hänen johtajakautensa onkin muodostunut varsin voimakkaaksi nousuksi orkesterille, joka vuosikymmenien aikana on ollut kenties parhain välikappale tekemään Bostonia tunnetuksi ympäri maailmaa.

Nykyisin orkesteri konsertoi enemmän kuin mikään muu vastaava "valtojen" orkesteri. Toimintavuosi käsittää 46 viikkoa, josta talvikautena 30 viikon aikana annetaan 63 konserttia Bostonissa ja vierailukiertue vie kuusi viikkoa. Vuosittaiset Berkshire-musiikkijuhlat Tanglewoodissa sitovat orkesterin kuuden viikon ajaksi heinä-elokuussa ulkoilmakonsertteja varten. Arthur Fiedlerin johtama "The Boston Pops"-viihdeorkesteri on osa normaalitoimintaa, sen konsertit ovat joka ilta touko-kesäkuussa. Fiedler johtaa niinikään ilmaiset kävelykonsertit Charles River'illä. Tämän lisäksi työsaralla on vielä runsaasti radioesiintymisiä ja levytyksiä.

Orkesteri kävi ensivierailulla Euroopassa v. 1952, mutta saapuu nyt ensi kerran Suomeen, todella tervetulleena syyskonserttikauden lähtölaukauksena.

SUOMEN KULTTUURIRAHASTO
LEIKELMÄPALVELU
Tilaaja: Uris
Lehti: Kainuun St.
Pvm 12/9 1956
Kirjoittaja:

Bostonin sinfoniaorkesteri on konsertoinut Helsingissä. Kuvassamme kolme suurta kohtaavat. Vas. Pierre Monteux, joka johti orkesteria vv. 1919—1924, kesk. Serge Koussevitzky vv. 1924—1949 ja orkesterin nykyinen johtaja Charles Münch, joka on pitänyt hallussaan orkesterin tahtipuikkoa vuodesta 1949 lähtien. Hän johti myöskin Helsingissä pidetyn konsertin.

BLANK PAGE

ЛЕНИНГРАДСКАЯ ГОСУДАРСТВЕННАЯ
ордена ТРУДОВОГО КРАСНОГО ЗНАМЕНИ
ФИЛАРМОНИЯ
БОЛЬШОЙ ЗАЛ

КОНЦЕРТ
БОСТОНСКОГО СИМФОНИЧЕСКОГО ОРКЕСТРА (США)

Четверг, 6 сентября 1956 г.

СЕЗОН
1956/57 г.

ЛЕНИНГРАДСКАЯ ГОСУДАРСТВЕННАЯ
ордена ТРУДОВОГО КРАСНОГО ЗНАМЕНИ
ФИЛАРМОНИЯ
БОЛЬШОЙ ЗАЛ

КОНЦЕРТ
БОСТОНСКОГО СИМФОНИЧЕСКОГО ОРКЕСТРА (США)

Пятница, 7 сентября 1956 г.

СЕЗОН
1956-57 г.

Четверг, 6 сентября 1956 г.

ДИРИЖЕР

Чарльз МЮНШ

(США)

БОСТОНСКИЙ СИМФОНИЧЕСКИЙ ОРКЕСТР

Бостонский симфонический оркестр—один из старейших (третий по времени создания) оркестров в США—был основан в 1881 г. образованным любителем музыки, банкиром Генри Ли Хиггинсоном. Щедрая финансовая поддержка со стороны Хиггинсона позволяла оркестру совершенствовать свое мастерство, не заботясь о материальной стороне дела. После смерти Хиггинсона (в 1919 г.), забота об оркестре, согласно его распоряжению, была возложена на коллегию из девяти доверенных лиц (совет. попечителей).

Первым художественным руководителем Бостонского оркестра был известный английский музыкальный деятель, композитор, дирижер, певец (баритон) и педагог Айсидор Джордж Хеншель (1881—1884). Его сменил опытный музыкант, уроженец Вены Вильгельм Герике (1884—1889), спустя несколько лет вторично возглавивший оркестр. Между двумя периодами его деятельности Бостонским оркестром руководили всемирно известный дирижер Артур Никиш (1889—1893) и разносторонне одаренный музыкант—дирижер, пианист, скрипач и композитор—Эмиль Паур (1893—1898).

Дважды привлекался к руководству оркестром знаменитый немецкий дирижер Карл Мук (1906—1908 и 1912—1918), которого между 1908—1912 гг. заменял директор Гамбургской Консерватории, дирижер, пианист и композитор Макс Фидлер.

В сезоне 1918—1919 г. главным дирижером Бостонского оркестра был автор оперы «Маруф», известный французский композитор Анри Рабо, впоследствии—дирижер Парижской консерватории. Его преемником стал также французский

ЛЕНИНГРАДСКАЯ ГОСУДАРСТВЕННАЯ
ордена ТРУДОВОГО КРАСНОГО ЗНАМЕНИ
ФИЛАРМОНИЯ
БОЛЬШОЙ ЗАЛ

КОНЦЕРТ
БОСТОНСКОГО СИМФОНИЧЕСКОГО ОРКЕСТРА (США)

Пятница, 7 сентября 1956 г.

СЕЗОН
1956-57 г.

музыкант, один из крупнейших европейских дирижеров—Пьер Монтэ (род. в 1875 г.), работавший в Бостоне с 1919 г. по 1924 г., после чего главным дирижером был приглашен выдающийся русский дирижер Сергей Кусевицкий, на протяжении 25 лет руководивший Бостонским симфоническим оркестром.

В период деятельности С. Кусевицкого широко привлекались в качестве дирижеров-гастролеров наиболее известные современные композиторы для исполнения своих произведений, в том числе А. Глазунов, С. Прокофьев, А. Казелла, О. Респиги, А. Онеггер, М. Равель, Ж. Энеско и мн. др.

С 1949 г., после выхода в отставку С. Кусевицкого, во главе Бостонского оркестра становится один из наиболее выдающихся музыкантов Франции, дирижер и скрипач Шарль (Чарльз) Мюнш (род. в 1894 г.).

Бостонский симфонический оркестр завоевал себе широкую известность не только высокими художественными и техническими достоинствами, но и активной деятельностью по популяризации симфонической музыки: каждый оркестр проводит сезон бесплатных концерто набережной Чарльз-ривер и шестинедельный Б ширский фестиваль в Тенглвуде, в графстве нокс штата Массачузетс, где собирается каждое лето более ста тысяч слушателей.

В этом году Бостонский симфонический оркестр отмечает 75-летие своего существования. Свой юбилейный сезон оркестр ознаменовал большим турне по Европе, включая Советский Союз.

тл-4 УКЛ з. 6650 т. 2500 5/IX-56 г.

ПРОГРАММА

I ОТДЕЛЕНИЕ

БЕТХОВЕН (1770 –1827)

Третья симфония („героическая“) ми бемоль мажор, соч. 54 (1804)

1. Allegro con brio
2. Marcia funebre. Adagio assai
3. Scherzo. Allegro vivace
4. Finale. Allegro molto

II ОТДЕЛЕНИЕ

ПИС Н (род. в 1894 г.)

Шестая симфония (1955)

1. Fluento espressivo
2. Leggerissimo vivace
3. Adagio sereno
4. Allegro energico

РАВЕЛЬ (1875—1937)

„Дафнис и Хлоя“ (вторая сюита из балета, 1910)

1. Утренняя заря
2. Пантомима
3. Общий танец

ЛЕНИНГРАДСКАЯ ГОСУДАРСТВЕННАЯ
ордена ТРУДОВОГО КРАСНОГО ЗНАМЕНИ
ФИЛАРМОНИЯ
БОЛЬШОЙ ЗАЛ

КОНЦЕРТ
БОСТОНСКОГО СИМФОНИЧЕСКОГО ОРКЕСТРА (США)

Пятница, 7 сентября 1956 г.

СЕЗОН
1956-57 г.

Пятница, 7 сентября 1956 г.

ДИРИЖЕР

Пьер МОНТЭ

(США)

БОСТОНСКИЙ СИМФОНИЧЕСКИЙ ОРКЕСТР

Бостонский симфонический оркестр—один из старейших (третий по времени создания) оркестров в США—был основан в 1881 г. образованным любителем музыки, банкиром Генри Ли Хиггинсоном. Щедрая финансовая поддержка со стороны Хиггинсона позволяла оркестру совершенствовать свое мастерство, не заботясь о материальной стороне дела. После смерти Хиггинсона (в 1919 г.), забота об оркестре, согласно его распоряжению, была возложена на коллегию из девяти доверенных лиц (совет попечителей).

Первым художественным руководителем Бостонского оркестра был известный английский музыкальный деятель, композитор, дирижер, певец (баритон) и педагог Айсидор Джордж Хеншель (1881—1884). Его сменил опытный музыкант, уроженец Вены Вильгельм Герике (1884—1889), спустя несколько лет вторично возглавивший оркестр. Между двумя периодами его деятельности Бостонским оркестром руководили всемирно известный дирижер Артур Никиш (1889—1893) и разносторонне одаренный музыкант—дирижер, пианист, скрипач и композитор—Эмиль Паур (1893—1898).

Дважды привлекался к руководству оркестром знаменитый немецкий дирижер Карл Мук (1906—1908 и 1912—1918), которого между 1908—1912 гг. заменял директор Гамбургской Консерватории, дирижер, пианист и композитор Макс Фидлер.

В сезоне 1918—1919 г. главным дирижером Бостонского оркестра был автор оперы «Маруф», известный французский композитор Анри Рабо, впоследствии—дирижер Парижской консерватории. Его преемником стал также французский

Пятница, 7 сентября 1956 г.

ДИРИЖЕР

Пьер МОНТЭ

(США)

ПРОГРАММА

I ОТДЕЛЕНИЕ

ГАЙДН (1732—1809)

Симфония соль мажор („Сюрприз“). 1791 г.

1. Adagio cantabile. Vivace assai
2. Andante
3. Menuetto. Allegro molto
4. Allegro di molto

КРЕСТОН (род. в 1906 г.)

Вторая симфония (1944)

1. Introduction and Song
2. Interlude and Dance

II ОТДЕЛЕНИЕ

ШУБЕРТ (1797—1828)

Седьмая симфония, до мажор (1828)

1. Andante. Allegro ma non troppo
2. Andante con moto
3. Scherzo. Allegro vivace
4. Finale. Allegro vivace

музыкант, один из крупнейших европейских дирижеров—Пьер Монтэ (род. в 1875 г.), работавший в Бостоне с 1919 г. по 1924 г., после чего главным дирижером был приглашен выдающийся русский дирижер Сергей Кусевицкий, на протяжении 25 лет руководивший Бостонским симфоническим оркестром.

В период деятельности С. Кусевицкого широко привлекались в качестве дирижеров-гастролеров наиболее известные современные композиторы для исполнения своих произведений, в том числе А. Глазунов, С. Прокофьев, А. Казелла, О. Респиги, А. Онеггер, М. Равель, Ж. Энеско и мн. др.

С 1949 г., после выхода в отставку С. Кусевицкого, во главе Бостонского оркестра становится один из наиболее выдающихся музыкантов Франции, дирижер и скрипач Шарль (Чарльз) Мюнш (род. в 1894 г.).

Бостонский симфонический оркестр завоевал себе широкую известность не только высокими художественными и техническими достоинствами, но и активной деятельностью по популяризации симфонической музыки: каждый год оркестр проводит сезон бесплатных концертов на набережной Чарльз-ривер и шестинедельный Беркширский фестиваль в Тенглвуде, в графстве Ленокс штата Массачузетс, где собирается каждое лето более ста тысяч слушателей.

В этом году Бостонский симфонический оркестр отмечает 75-летие своего существования. Свой юбилейный сезон оркестр ознаменовал большим турне по Европе, включая Советский Союз.

тл 4 УКЛ з. 6650 т. 2500 5/IX-56 г.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 53,259

SEP 6 1956

Hub Orchestra Enters Russia

Boston's Symphony Abandons Long-Hair Dignity in Leningrad

Leningrad — (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived yesterday for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major Western musical organization, and threw long-hair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg house of culture where they watched the gypsy theater give a performance of "plyasunya" — which means "dancing girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

The first concert here was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business."

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

Because of the demand, Mr. Munch agreed to conduct a special "rehearsal" today for the students of the Leningrad Conservatory.

The symphony group includes four Russian-born violinists. All of them said they hoped to renew acquaintanceship with friends and families.

Most excited was concertmaster Richard Burgin, who studied violin here and was the Leningrad Philharmonia concertmaster a quarter of a century ago. He already has had a reunion with his old teacher and some of the men he used to play with.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SEATTLE, WASH.
Post-Intelligencer
Circ. D. 187,322 - S. 268,927

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony Group In Moscow For Concert

LENINGRAD, Sept. 5.—(AP)—The Boston symphony orchestra arrived today for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major Western musical organization, and threw longhair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg house of culture where they watched the Gypsy theater give a performance of "Plyasunya"—which means "dancing girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dançe floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

Associate conductor Pierre Monteux went to bed after he finally arrived. There had been a technical hitch in Monteux's visa, so he was the last of the company to get here.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay air fares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

SEP 7 1956

Leningraders In Big Welcome For Boston Symphony Players

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R., Sept. 6 (AP)—Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring today to make personal contact with members of the touring Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Proving once again that music knows no national barriers, scores of citizens of this once imperial city visited the players in their hotel rooms, invited them to their homes and engaged them in conversation in streets and theaters.

"We would never have dared to do this two years ago," said a young student of English who went to the room of viola player Robert Karol to ask for modern American paperback navels.

Karol said, "This is the kind of thing that ought to happen," and set out to round up books from the other orchestra members.

"We ought to have a student exchange program between our two countries," Karol said.

Other players of this first major Western musical ensemble ever to tour the Soviet Union had similar experiences. Among them was Polish-born concertmaster Richard Burgin who was concertmaster with the Leningrad Philharmonic 25 years ago.

"Does everyone have a brother in Brooklyn?" asked violinist Harry Ellis Dickson when he returned from a visit to a Jewish synagogue. "Before I left home everyone told me the people would be afraid to talk. But instead everyone is besieging me with questions."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

SEP 6 1956

Hub Symphony Trio's Jam Session Has Russians Rockin' in Leningrad

LENINGRAD, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived today for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major western musical organization, and threw longhair dignity to the winds.

Conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viberg House of Culture, where they watched the gypsy theatre give a performance of "Plyasunya"—which means "dancing girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone;

Continued on Page 9

4 viol. They beat out ch after chorus of "Wh or When" and had Russian customers r ing the dance floor.

The regular hotel chestra sat quietly on sidelines as the symph men took over.

The two concerts sch
uled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

Because of the demand, Munch agreed to conduct a special "rehearsal" tomorrow for the students of the Leningrad Conservatory.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony Stages Jam Session In Leningrad Hotel

LENINGRAD, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived today for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major western musical organization, and threw longhair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg House of Culture where they watched the Gypsy Theater give a performance of "Plyasunya"—which means "dancing girls."

SYMPHONY
Page Fifteen 4

chnical hitch in Monteux's visa, o he was the last of the company get here.

They came in three chartered eroflot planes which made two ights each. The Americans paid ie plane fare. But the Russians ill pay airfares for 130 symphony embers after they perform in loscow and leave for Prague.

The first concert here was de-ayed 24 hours because 16,000 ounds of equipment, including inruments, shipped by train did ot arrive in time. The orchestra as decided to play no Russian usic while here "because we dn't want to look as though we ere trying to come in here and ach them their business."

ld Out for Weeks

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

Because of the demand, Munch agreed to conduct a special "rehearsal" tomorrow for the students of the Leningrad Conservatory.

The symphony group includes four Russian-born violinists. All of them said they hoped to renew acquaintanceship with friends and families.

Most excited was concertmaster Richard Burgin, who studied violin here and was the Leningrad Philharmonia concertmaster a quarter of a century ago. He already has had a reunion with his old teacher and some of the men he used to play with.

The other three Russian-born violinists, all of Boston, are Victor Manusovitch, Vladimir Rasnikoff and Manuel Zung.

Also traveling with the orchestra in an administrative capacity is Mrs. C. D. Jackson, wife of President Eisenhower's former psychological warfare expert.

Walter N. Walmsley Jr., U.S. Charge d'Affaires, was at the airport to greet Munch, along with officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture and members of Leningrad's music organization.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DAYTONA BEACH, FLA.
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 14,587

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony Takes Over Leningrad

LENINGRAD (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived yesterday for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major Western musical organization, and threw longhair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg House of Culture where they watched the gypsy theater give a performance of "Plyasunya"—which means "dancing girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

There were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charle Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

Associate conductor Pierre Monteux went quietly to bed after he finally arrived. There had been a technical hitch in Monteux's visa, so he was the last of the company to get here.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay air fares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

The first concert here was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business."

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

SEP 6 1956

Longhair Dignity Thrown to Winds

Symphony Arrives in Soviet, Players Stage 'Jam Session'

By STANLEY JOHNSON

LENINGRAD, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived today for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major Western musical organization, and threw longhair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg House of Culture where they watched the Gypsy Theater give a perform-

(Continued on Page Three)

viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

Associate Conductor Pierre Monteux went quietly to bed after he finally arrived. There had been a technical hitch in Monteux's visa, so he was the last of the company to get here.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

1ST CONCERT DELAYED

The first concert here was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business."

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

Because of the demand, Munch agreed to conduct a special "rehearsal" tomorrow for the students of the Leningrad Conserva-

---

New England Newsclip Agency
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,259

SEP 6

Leningrad Concert By Boston Sympho Tonight Is Sold Ou

MOSCOW, Sept. 6 (UP) —
Boston Symphony will Leningrad its first concert
Western orchestra tonight.

The 50-man orchestra, h by Charles Munch and Monteux, arrived by trai
terday and received a war come. Representatives of organizations and the Sovi istry of Culture greete American musicians with and handshakes.

Tickets for tonight's p ance in the great hall of t ingrad Conservatory we out. Some were selling black market for more t rubles. Although there is ficial exchange of Rus American currency, 100 roughly equivalent to $

The symphony will pl days of concerts in L and Moscow.

Tonight's performance clude Beethoven's "Hero ter Piston's "Sixth Sy and Schubert's "Seven
phony."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 53,259

SEP 6 1956

Hub Orchestra Enters Russia

Boston's Symphony Abandons Long-Hair Dignity in Leningrad

Leningrad — (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived yesterday for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major Western musical organization, and threw long-hair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg house of culture where they watched the gypsy theater give a performance of "plyasunya" — which means "dancing girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

The first concert here was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

SEP 7 1956

Leningraders In Big Welcome For Boston Symphony Players

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R., Sept. 6 (AP)—Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring today to make personal contact with members of the touring Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Proving once again that music knows no national barriers, scores of citizens of this once imperial city visited the players in their hotel rooms, invited them to their homes and engaged them in conversation in streets and theaters.

"We would never have dared to do this two years ago," said a young student of English who went to the room of viola player Robert Karol to ask for modern American paperback navels.

Karol said, "This is the kind of thing that ought to happen," and set out to round up books from the other orchestra members.

"We ought to have a student exchange program between our two countries," Karol said.

Other players of this first major Western musical ensemble ever to tour the Soviet Union had similar experiences. Among them was Polish-born concertmaster Richard Burgin who was concertmaster with the Leningrad Philharmonic 25 years ago.

"Does everyone have a brother in Brooklyn?" asked violinist Harry Ellis Dickson when he returned from a visit to a Jewish synagogue. "Before I left home everyone told me the people would be afraid to talk. But instead everyone is besieging me with questions."

Hub Trio Rocks Reds

4

Continued from First Page

Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

Because of the demand, Munch agreed to conduct a special "rehearsal" tomorrow for the students of the Leningrad Conservatory.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DAYTONA BEACH, FLA.
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 14,587

SEP 6 1956

SYMPHONY

4

Continued from the First Page

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

Associate Conductor Pierre Monteux went quietly to bed after he finally arrived. There had been a technical hitch in Monteux's visa, so he was the last of the company to get here.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

The first concert here was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business."

Sold Out for Weeks

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

Because of the demand, Munch agreed to conduct a special "rehearsal" tomorrow for the students of the Leningrad Conservatory.

The symphony group includes four Russian-born violinists. All of them said they hoped to renew acquaintanceship with friends and families.

Most excited was concertmaster Richard Burgin, who studied violin here and was the Leningrad Philharmonia concertmaster a quarter of a century ago. He already has had a reunion with his old teacher and some of the men he used to play with.

The other three Russian-born violinists, all of Boston, are Victor Manusovitch, Vladimir Rasnikoff and Manuel Zung.

Also traveling with the orchestra in an administrative capacity is Mrs. C. D. Jackson, wife of President Eisenhower's former psychological warfare expert.

Walter N. Walmsley Jr., U.S. Charge d'Affaires, was at the airport to greet Munch, along with officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture and members of Leningrad's music organization.

Boston Symphony Takes Over Leningrad

LENINGRAD (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived yesterday for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major Western musical organization, and threw longhair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg House of Culture where they watched the gypsy theater give a performance of "Plyasunya"—which means "dancing girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

There were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charle Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

Associate conductor Pierre Monteux went quietly to bed after he finally arrived. There had been a technical hitch in Monteux's visa, so he was the last of the company to get here.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay air fares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

The first concert here was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business."

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SEATTLE, WASH.
Post-Intelligencer
Circ. D. 187,322 - S. 268,927

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony Group In Moscow For Concert

LENINGRAD, Sept. 5.—(AP)—The Boston symphony orchestra arrived today for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major Western musical organization, and threw longhair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg house of culture where they watched the Gypsy theater give a performance of "Plyasunya"—which means "dancing girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

Associate conductor Pierre Monteux went to bed after he finally arrived. There had been a technical hitch in Monteux's visa, so he was the last of the company to get here.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay air fares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

New England Newsclip Agency
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond

In Russia

(Continued from First Page)

ance of "Plyasunya" — which means "Dancing Girls."

STAGE JAM SESSION

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

Associate Conductor Pierre Monteux went quietly to bed after he finally arrived. There had been a technical hitch in Monteux's visa, so he was the last of the company to get here.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

1ST CONCERT DELAYED

The first concert here was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business."

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

Because of the demand, Munch agreed to conduct a special "rehearsal" tomorrow for the students of the Leningrad Conservatory.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,259

SEP 6 1956

Leningrad Concert By Boston Symphony Tonight Is Sold Out

MOSCOW, Sept. 6 (UP) — The Boston Symphony will give Leningrad its first concert by a Western orchestra tonight.

The 50-man orchestra, headed by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, arrived by train yesterday and received a warm welcome. Representatives of music organizations and the Soviet Ministry of Culture greeted the American musicians with flowers and handshakes.

Tickets for tonight's performance in the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory were sold out. Some were selling on the black market for more than 100 rubles. Although there is no official exchange of Russian and American currency, 100 rubles is roughly equivalent to $25.

The symphony will play four days of concerts in Leningrad and Moscow.

Tonight's performance will include Beethoven's "Heroic," Walter Piston's "Sixth Symphony," and Schubert's "Seventh Symphony."

[37]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

SEP 6 1956

Symphony Group Shows Russians What Jam Is

Leningrad—(AP)—Longhair dignity was discarded when the Boston Symphony arrived here yesterday.

The orchestra is starting the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major Western musical organization.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg House of Culture where they watched the Gypsy Theater give a performance of "Plyasunya" — which means "dancing girls."

* * *

ANOTHER GROUP from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol, beating out chorus after chorus of "Where or When." They had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

They came in three chartered aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

* * *

THE FIRST concert was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Item (e)
CLINTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,274

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony To Play in Russia

MOSCOW (UP) — The Boston Symphony will give Leningrad its first concert by a Western orchestra tonight.

The 500 man orchestra, headed by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, arrived by train Wednesday and received a warm welcome. Representatives of music organizations and the Soviet ministry of culture greeted the American musicians with flowers and handshakes.

Tickets for tonight's performance in the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory were sold out. Some were selling on the black market for more than 100 rubles, roughly equivalent to $25

The symphony will play four days of concerts in Leningrad and Moscow.

Tonight's performance will include Bethoven's "Heroica," Walter Piston's "Sixth Symphony," and Schubert's "Seventh Symphony."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 6 1956

Symphony In Leningrad

BOSTON DAILY RECORD, THURSDAY, SEPT. 6, 1956

LENINGRAD (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major Western musical organization, and threw longhair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, Conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg House of Culture where they watched the Gypsy Theater give a performance of "Plyasunya"—which means "Dancing Girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

"WHERE OR WHEN"

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where Or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

Associate Conductor Pierre Monteux went quietly to bed after he finally arrived. There had been a technical hitch in Monteux's visa, so he was the last of the company to get here.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

CONCERT DELAYED

The first concert here was delayed because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business."

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

Because of the demand, Munch agreed to conduct a special "rehearsal" today for the students of the Leningrad Conservatory.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

SEP 6 1956

Hub Symphony Plays Tonight In Leningrad

MOSCOW (UP) — The Boston Symphony will give Leningrad its first concert by a Western orchestra tonight.

The 500-man orchestra, headed by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, arrived by train Wednesday and received a warm welcome. Representatives of music organizations and the Soviet ministry of culture greeted the American musicians with flowers and handshakes.

Tickets for tonight's performance in the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory were sold out. Some were selling on the black market for more than 100 rubles, roughly equivalent to $25.

The symphony will play four days of concerts in Leningrad and Moscow.

Tonight's performance will include Beethoven's "Heroica," Walter Piston's "Sixth Symphony," and Schubert's "Seventh Symphony.'

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

SEP 6 1956

Gay Soviet Tour Begun By Boston Orchestra

By the Associated Press

Leningrad, U.S.S.R.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has arrived here for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major western musical organization, and thrown longhair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 5, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg House of Culture where they watched the Gypsy Theater give a performance of "Plyasunya"—which means "dancing girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums, and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Soviet customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

The Boston musicians came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Soviets will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

The first concert here was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train, did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business."

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

The symphony group includes four Russian-born violinists. All of them said they hoped to renew acquaintanceship with friends and families.

Most excited was concertmaster Richard Burgin, who studied violin here and was the Leningrad Philharmonia concertmaster a quarter of a century ago. He has already had a reunion with his old teacher and some of the men he used to play with.

The other three Russian-born violinists, all of Boston, are Victor Manusovitch, Vladimir Rasnikoff, and Manuel Zung.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony Stages Jam Session In Leningrad Hotel

LENINGRAD, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived today for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major western musical organization, and threw longhair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg House of Culture where they watched the Gypsy Theater give a performance of "Plyasunya"—which means "dancing girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

Associate Conductor Pierre Monteux went quietly to bed after he finally arrived. There had been a technical hitch in Monteux's visa, so he was the last of the company to get here.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

The first concert here was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business."

Sold Out for Weeks

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

Because of the demand, Munch agreed to conduct a special "rehearsal" tomorrow for the students of the Leningrad Conservatory.

The symphony group includes four Russian-born violinists. All of them said they hoped to renew acquaintanceship with friends and families.

Most excited was concertmaster Richard Burgin, who studied violin here and was the Leningrad Philharmonia concertmaster a quarter of a century ago. He already has had a reunion with his old teacher and some of the men he used to play with.

The other three Russian-born violinists, all of Boston, are Victor Manusovitch, Vladimir Rasnikoff and Manuel Zung.

Also traveling with the orchestra in an administrative capacity is Mrs. C. D. Jackson, wife of President Eisenhower's former psychological warfare expert.

Walter N. Walmsley Jr., U.S. Charge d'Affaires, was at the airport to greet Munch, along with officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture and members of Leningrad's music organization.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 897,711 - S. 1,559,216

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony Unit in Leningrad

MOSCOW, Sept. 5 (UP).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived in Leningrad Wednesday for a sell-out series of concerts. It received a warm welcome from Soviet officials and music organizations.

The 105-man orchestra and conductors Charles Munch and Pierre Monteaux arrived from Helsinki by train, the first Western symphony orchestra ever to visit Communist Russia.

Officials piled banks of flowers in Leningrad's railroad station for the orchestra's arrival. Representatives of the Ministry of Culture and musical groups turned out en masse to greet the Americans.

The orchestra will hold a four-day series of concerts in Leningrad and Moscow.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SEATTLE, WASH.
TIMES
Circ. D. 204,260 - S. 237,502

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony In Leningrad

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6.—(Reuters)—The Boston Symphony, the first Western classical orchestra to perform in Russia since the Second World War, arrived here last night aboard three chartered Soviet planes. The orchestra will give several concerts in Leningrad, the first of them tomorrow, and three in Moscow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Citizen
BELMONT, Mass.
Weekly Non-partisan
Circ. 4,129

SEP 14 1956

- The - "CITIZEN" OBSERVES

LARGEST GRANT: An estimated $2,000,000 bequest last week to the Judge Baker Guidance Center of Boston as part of the will of George Holden Tinkham, former congressman and world traveler, is the largest single grant ever given in the field of child psychology, said Dr. George E. Gardner of 29 Louise rd., director of the center. "With this money we will be able to carry out a greatly expanded program of child service, research and the training of field workers," declared Dr. Gardner in voicing the gratitude of his organization.

* * *

VIOLINIST IN RUSSIA: Sharing in the wild applause for the Boston Symphony Orchestra in its triumphal European tour is Melvin Hurd Bryant of 39 Gorham rd., who has been a violinist with the world-renowned musical organization for thirty-eight years. The program of the opening concert in Leningrad of the first western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union included a composition by another Belmontian, Walter Piston of 127 Somerset st., professor of music at Harvard, whose severely modern Sixth Symphony was reported as receiving a mixed reception from a Russian audience for whom it was obviously strange.

* * *

FEELIN' BETTER is popular Joe Kales, town engineer and building inspector, who is recuperating at his home at 42 Oliver rd. from a recent heart upset. He can now have a few vsiitors . . . if they make their visit brief!

Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

SEP 6 1956

BOSTON GROUP IN RUSSIA

Orchestra Will Give Concert in Leningrad Tonight

MOSCOW, Sept. 5 (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived in Leningrad today for a sellout series of concerts.

The 105-man orchestra and Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, conductors, is the first Western symphony orchestra to visit Communist Russia.

Officials piled banks of flowers in Leningrad's railroad station for the orchestra's arrival. Representatives of the Ministry of Culture and musical groups turned out to greet the Americans.

The orchestra will give a four-day series of concerts in Leningrad and Moscow. The first will be in the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory tomorrow night. All tickets have been sold. Some are selling on the black market for as much as 100 rubles ($25).

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

SEP 6 1956

Symphony Group Shows Russians What Jam Is

Leningrad—(AP)—Longhair dignity was discarded when the Boston Symphony arrived here yesterday.

The orchestra is starting the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major Western musical organization.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg House of Culture where they watched the Gypsy Theater give a performance of "Plyasunya" — which means "dancing girls."

* * *

ANOTHER GROUP from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol, beating out chorus after chorus of "Where or When." They had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

They came in three chartered aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

* * *

THE FIRST concert was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Item (e)
CLINTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,274

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony To Play in Russia

MOSCOW (UP) — The Boston Symphony will give Leningrad its first concert by a Western orchestra tonight

The 500-man orchestra, headed by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, arrived by train Wednesday and received a warm welcome. Representatives of music organizations and the Soviet ministry of culture greeted the American musicians with flowers and handshakes.

Tickets for tonight's performance in the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory were sold out. Some were selling on the black market for more than 100 rubles, roughly equivalent to $25

The symphony will play four days of concerts in Leningrad and Moscow.

Tonight's performance will include Beethoven's "Heroica," Walter Piston's "Sixth Symphony," and Schubert's "Seventh Symphony."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 6 1956

DAILY RECORD, THURSDAY, SEPT. 6, 1956

Symphony In Leningrad

LENINGRAD (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major Western musical organization, and threw longhair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, Conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg House of Culture where they watched the Gypsy Theater give a performance of "Plyasunya"—which means "Dancing Girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

"WHERE OR WHEN"

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where Or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

Associate Conductor Pierre Monteux went quietly to bed after he finally arrived. There had been a technical hitch in Monteux's visa, so he was the last of the company to get here.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

CONCERT DELAYED

The first concert here was delayed because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here, "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business."

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

Because of the demand, Munch agreed to conduct a special "rehearsal" today for the students of the Leningrad Conservatory.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

SEP 6 1956

Hub Symphony Plays Tonight In Leningrad

MOSCOW (UP) — The Boston Symphony will give Leningrad its first concert by a Western orchestra tonight.

The 500-man orchestra, headed by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, arrived by train Wednesday and received a warm welcome. Representatives of music organizations and the Soviet ministry of culture greeted the American musicians with flowers and handshakes.

Tickets for tonight's performance in the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory were sold out. Some were selling on the black market for more than 100 rubles, roughly equivalent to $25.

The symphony will play four days of concerts in Leningrad and Moscow.

Tonight's performance will include Beethoven's "Heroica," Walter Piston's "Sixth Symphony," and Schubert's "Seventh Symphony.'

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

SEP 6 1956

Gay Soviet Tour Begun By Boston Orchestra

By the Associated Press

Leningrad, U.S.S.R.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has arrived here for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major western musical organization, and thrown longhair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 5, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg House of Culture where they watched the Gypsy Theater give a performance of "Plyasunya"—which means "dancing girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums, and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Soviet customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

The Boston musicians came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Soviets will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

The first concert here was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train, did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business."

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

The symphony group includes four Russian-born violinists. All of them said they hoped to renew acquaintanceship with friends and families.

Most excited was concertmaster Richard Burgin, who studied violin here and was the Leningrad Philharmonia concertmaster a quarter of a century ago. He has already had a reunion with his old teacher and some of the men he used to play with.

The other three Russian-born violinists, all of Boston, are Victor Manusovitch, Vladimir Rasnikoff, and Manuel Zung.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony Stages Jam Session In Leningrad Hotel

LENINGRAD, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived today for the first concert tour of the Soviet Union ever made by a major western musical organization, and threw longhair dignity to the winds.

A few hours after arriving by plane from Helsinki, Finland, conductor Charles Munch and a group of orchestra members went to the Viborg House of Culture where they watched the Gypsy Theater give a performance of "Plyasunya"—which means "dancing girls."

Another group from the orchestra took over the bandstand in the roof garden of the Hotel Europe to stage a jam session.

They were Harold Farberman, vibraphone; Charles Smith, drums; and Henry Pornoi, bass viol. They beat out chorus after chorus of "Where or When" and had the Russian customers rocking the dance floor.

The regular hotel orchestra sat quietly on the sidelines as the symphony men took over.

Associate Conductor Pierre Monteux went quietly to bed after he finally arrived. There had been a technical hitch in Monteux's visa, so he was the last of the company to get here.

They came in three chartered Aeroflot planes which made two flights each. The Americans paid the plane fare. But the Russians will pay airfares for 130 symphony members after they perform in Moscow and leave for Prague.

The first concert here was delayed 24 hours because 16,000 pounds of equipment, including instruments, shipped by train did not arrive in time. The orchestra has decided to play no Russian music while here "because we didn't want to look as though we were trying to come in here and teach them their business."

Sold Out for Weeks

The two concerts scheduled for Leningrad have been sold out for many weeks.

Because of the demand, Munch agreed to conduct a special "rehearsal" tomorrow for the students of the Leningrad Conservatory.

The symphony group includes four Russian-born violinists. All of them said they hoped to renew acquaintanceship with friends and families.

Most excited was concertmaster Richard Burgin, who studied violin here and was the Leningrad Philharmonia concertmaster a quarter of a century ago. He already has had a reunion with his old teacher and some of the men he used to play with.

The other three Russian-born violinists, all of Boston, are Victor Manusovitch, Vladimir Rasnikoff and Manuel Zung.

Also traveling with the orchestra in an administrative capacity is Mrs. C. D. Jackson, wife of President Eisenhower's former psychological warfare expert.

Walter N. Walmsley Jr., U.S. Charge d'Affaires, was at the airport to greet Munch, along with officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture and members of Leningrad's music organization.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 897,711 - S. 1,559,216

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony Unit in Leningrad

MOSCOW, Sept. 5 (UP).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived in Leningrad Wednesday for a sell-out series of concerts. It received a warm welcome from Soviet officials and music organizations.

The 105-man orchestra and conductors Charles Munch and Pierre Monteaux arrived from Helsinki by train, the first Western symphony orchestra ever to visit Communist Russia.

Officials piled banks of flowers in Leningrad's railroad station for the orchestra's arrival. Representatives of the Ministry of Culture and musical groups turned out en masse to greet the Americans.

The orchestra will hold a four-day series of concerts in Leningrad and Moscow.

[138]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SEATTLE, WASH.
TIMES
Circ. D. 204,260 - S. 237,502

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony In Leningrad

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6.—(Reuters)—The Boston Symphony, the first Western classical orchestra to perform in Russia since the Second World War, arrived here last night aboard three chartered Soviet planes. The orchestra will give several concerts in Leningrad, the first of them tomorrow, and three in Moscow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Citizen
BELMONT, Mass.
Weekly Non-partisan
Circ. 4,129

SEP 14 1956

The "CITIZEN" OBSERVES

LARGEST GRANT: An estimated $2,000,000 bequest last week to the Judge Baker Guidance Center of Boston as part of the will of George Holden Tinkham, former congressman and world traveler, is the largest single grant ever given in the field of child psychology, said Dr. George E. Gardner of 29 Louise rd., director of the center. "With this money we will be able to carry out a greatly expanded program of child service, research and the training of sitters and rides to the polls during the hours of 12 and 4 p.m.

For either or both of these services, please call either Mrs. Gerald W. Brace, IV 4-9450, or Mrs. Murray M. Coran, IV 4-5952.

For any further information concerning the election please ,call Voters Service Chairman, Mrs. Gerald W. Brace.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

SEP 6 1956

BOSTON GROUP IN RUSSIA

Orchestra Will Give Concert in Leningrad Tonight

MOSCOW, Sept. 5 (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra arrived in Leningrad today for a sellout series of concerts.

The 105-man orchestra and Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, conductors, is the first Western symphony orchestra to visit Communist Russia.

Officials piled banks of flowers in Leningrad's railroad station for the orchestra's arrival. Representatives of the Ministry of Culture and musical groups turned out to greet the Americans.

The orchestra will give a four-day series of concerts in Leningrad and Moscow. The first will be in the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory tomorrow night. All tickets have been sold. Some are selling on the black market for as much as 100 rubles ($25).

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MEDFORD, ORE.
MAIL-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 14,656 - S. 14,851

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Gets Thunderous Reception by Reds

Leningrad —(U.P.)— Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Duka's Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Stop Members

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall Conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow Radio said the program was "a great success."

La République de Lyon - 7 SEPT 1956

4767

L'orchestre sympohnique de Boston (U.S.A.) est arrivé à Léningrad

27

L'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston, comprenant 105 musiciens, conduit par ses chefs, Charles Munch et Pierre Monteux, est arrivé à Léningrad.

N° de débit

INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU

LA RÉPUBLIQUE
LYON
7 SEPTEMBRE 1956

4767

L

L'orchestre sympohnique de Boston (U.S.A.) est arrivé à Léningrad

L'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston, comprenant 105 musiciens, conduit par ses chefs, Charles Munch et Pierre Monteux, est arrivé à Léningrad.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON D. C.
STAR

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Given Big Hand in Leningrad

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history last night. An audience of 2,200 applauded and cheered its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first Western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Violonist Isaac Stern, singer Jan Peerce or any other Western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, Conductor Charles Munch broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Streets Are Jammed

Throughout the evening, streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10).

Before the concert, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

Providing once again that music knows no national barriers, scores of citizens of this once imperial city visited the players in their hotel rooms, invited them to their homes and engaged them in conversation in streets and theaters.

"We would never have dared to do this two years ago," said a young student of English who went to the room of viola player Robert Karol to ask for modern American paperback novels.

Rounds Up Books

Mr. Karol said, "this is the kind of thing that ought to happen," and set out to round up books from the other orchestra members.

"We ought to have a student exchange program between our two countries," Mr. Karol said.

Other players of this first major western musical ensemble ever to tour the Soviet Union had similar experiences. Among them was Polish-born concertmaster Richard Burgin who was concertmaster with the Leningrad Philharmonic 25 years ago.

"Does everyone have a brother in Brooklyn?" asked Violinist Harry Ellis Dickson when he returned from a visit to a Jewish synagogue. "Before I left home everyone told me the people would be afraid to talk but instead everyone is besieging me with questions."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302

SEP 7 1956

Reds Hail Symphony

London, Sept. 6 (Reuters).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's first concert in Leningrad today was "a great success," Moscow radio said tonight.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.

...ny ...ved at Leningrad

By FRASER WIGHTON

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6 (Reuters)—More than 200 persons packed Leningrad's Concert Hall tonight and gave a rapturous reception to conductor Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American orchestra ever to perform in the Soviet Union.

SYMPHONY
Page Fourteen

...knowledging the applause which continued after the orchestra had left the stage.

No Russian works were used on tonight's program, nor will any be included in the symphony's second concert here tomorrow night or in Moscow on the week-end. A representative of the symphony management said they didn't want the Russians to think they were trying to show them how to play their own music.

Two other American composers to figure in subsequent concerts are Paul Creston and Aaron Copland.

Spectacular Background

The Leningrad Concert Hall with its great colonnades, red velvet drapings and gold chandeliers provided a spectacular background for the 105-piece symphony. American and Soviet flags signalized the occasion.

A pleasurable [illegible] arose from the crowd at the [illegible] the Soviet national anthem [illegible] it was the delicate grace and pastel colorings of Ravel's suite which won the audience's heart most.

Many Russians went backstage afterwards to congratulate the orchestra.

The audience was dominated by Leningrad's elite. Tickets for the concert sold out days ago.

Before the concert began, the Leningrad Symphony's concertmaster delivered an address of welcome. He said "We hope your tour is successful and we are absolutely sure it will [illegible] countries closer together."

After tomorrow night's concert the orchestra leaves [illegible] for three con[illegible]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

Leesburg, Fla., Commercial, Ledger & Leader
Circ. D. 1,360 - S. 1,469

SEP 7 1956

Russians Applaud Boston Symphony In Leningrad Concert

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethovén's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DES MOINES, IOWA
REGISTER
Circ. D. 224,930 - S. 521,152

SEP 7 1956

Red Triumph by Musicians From Boston

By William J. Jorden
© New York Times News Service

LENINGRAD, RUSSIA — The Boston Symphony Thursday night became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union, and it did so in a great musical triumph.

A capacity audience of 2,200 crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, then applauded and cheered the Americans for a half hour.

Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra an unusual sight which seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring people together.

Streets outside were jammed with persons eager to get into the concert, or even for a glimpse of the musicians. Leningraders have shown eagerness and even daring in efforts to make personal contact with members of the touring orchestra.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica."

This was followed by the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, American composer and professor of music at Harvard. The final selection was Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

Grigoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera Company, called the performance "tremendous" and the symphony "a great organization."

The American orchestra will play here again today then go to Moscow for three concerts. It will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia, next week to continue its European tour.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WINTER HAVEN, FLA.
NEWS CHIEF
Circ. D. [illegible] - S. [illegible]

SEP 7 1956

Russians Laud Boston Orchestra

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DES MOINES, IOWA
REGISTER
Circ. D. 224,930 - S. 521,152

SEP 7 1956

Red Triumph by Musicians From Boston

By William J. Jorden
© New York Times News Service

LENINGRAD, RUSSIA — The Boston Symphony Thursday night became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union, and it did so in a great musical triumph.

A capacity audience of 2,200 crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, then applauded and cheered the Americans for a half hour.

Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra an unusual sight which seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring people together.

Streets outside were jammed with persons eager to get into the concert, or even for a glimpse of the musicians. Leningraders have shown eagerness and even daring in efforts to make personal contact with members of the touring orchestra.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethov will play here again today then go to Moscow for three concerts. It will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia, next week to continue its European tour.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MEDFORD, ORE.
MAIL-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 14,656 - S. 14,851

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Gets Thunderous Reception by Reds

Leningrad —(U.P.)— Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Duka's Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Stop Members

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall Conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow Radio said the program was "a great success."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DES MOINES, IOWA
REGISTER
Circ. D. 224,930 - S. 521,152

SEP 7 1956

Red Triumph by Musicians From Boston

By William J. Jorden
© New York Times News Service

LENINGRAD, RUSSIA — The Boston Symphony Thursday night became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union, and it did so in a great musical triumph.

A capacity audience of 2,200 crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, then applauded and cheered the Americans for a half hour.

Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra an unusual sight which seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring people together.

Streets outside were jammed with persons eager to get into the concert, or even for a glimpse of the musicians. Leningraders have shown eagerness and even daring in efforts to make personal contact with members of the touring orchestra.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica."

This was followed by the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, American composer and/ professor of music at Harvard. The final selection was Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

Grigoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera Company, called the performance "tremendous" and the symphony "a great organization."

The American orchestra will play here again today then go to Moscow for three concerts. It will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia, next week to continue its European tour.

INTERNATIONAL
La République de Lyon - 7 SEPT 1956
4767

L'orchestre sympohnique de Boston (U.S.A.) 27 est arrivé à Léningrad

L'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston. comprenant 105 musiciens, conduit par ses chefs, Charles Munch et Pierre Monteux, est arrivé à Léningrad.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON D. C.
STAR

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Given Big Hand in Leningrad

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history last night. An audience of 2,200 applauded and cheered its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first Western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Violinist Isaac Stern, singer Jan Peerce or any other Western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, Conductor Charles Munch broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Streets Are Jammed

Throughout the evening, streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10).

Before the concert, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

Providing once again that

Absentee Vot Is Seen Lagg

By WILLIAM A. MILLEN

When District Republican eaders visit President Eisenower at his Gettysburg (Pa.) A paperback novels.

Rounds Up Books

Mr. Karol said, "this is the kind of thing that ought to happen," and set out to round up books from the other orchestra members.

"We ought to have a student exchange program between our two countries," Mr. Karol said.

Other players of this first major western musical ensemble ever to tour the Soviet Union had similar experiences. Among them was Polish-born concertmaster Richard Burgin who was

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

Leesburg, Fla., Commercial,
Ledger & Leader
Circ. D. 1,360 - S. 1,469

SEP 7 1956

Russians Applaud Boston Symphony In Leningrad Concert

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

N° de débit
INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU
LA RÉPUBLIQUE
LYON
7 SEPTEMBRE 1956
4767
L

L'orchestre sympohnique de Boston (U.S.A.) est arrivé à Léningrad

L'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston. comprenant 105 musiciens, conduit par ses chefs, Charles Munch et Pierre Monteux, est arrivé à Léningrad.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WINTER HAVEN, FLA.,
NEWS CHIEF
Circ. D. [illegible] - S. [illegible]

SEP 7 [illegible]

Russians Laud Boston Orchestra

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302

SEP 7 1956

Reds Hail Symphony

London, Sept. 6 (Reuters).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's ~~first concert in Leningrad~~ today was "a great success," Moscow radio said tonight.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Warmly Received at Leningrad

By FRASER WIGHTON

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6 (Reuters)—More than 200 persons packed Leningrad's Concert Hall tonight and gave a rapturous reception to conductor Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American orchestra ever to perform in the Soviet Union.

SYMPHONY

Page Fourteen

owledging the applause, which continued after the orchestra had left the stage.

No Russian works were used on tonight's program, nor will any be included in the symphony's second concert here tomorrow night or in Moscow on the week-end. A representative of the symphony management said they didn't want the Russians to think they were trying to show them how to play their own music.

Two other American composers to figure in subsequent concerts are Paul Creston and Aaron Copland.

Spectacular Background

The Leningrad Concert Hall, with its great colonnades, red velvet drapings and gold chandeliers provided a spectacular background for the 105-piece symphony. American and Soviet flags signalized the occasion.

A pleasurable murmur arose from the crowd at the playing of the Soviet national anthem but it was the delicate tracery and pastel colorings of Ravel's suite which won the audience's heart most.

Many Russians went backstage afterwards to congratulate the orchestra.

The audience was dominated by Leningrad's elite. Tickets for the concert sold out days ago.

Before the concert began the Leningrad Symphony's concertmaster delivered an address of welcome. He said: "We hope your tour is successful and we are absolutely sure it will bring [illegible] countries closer together."

After tomorrow night's concert the orchestra leaves for Moscow [illegible] or three concerts there.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DES MOINES, IOWA
REGISTER
Circ. D. 224,930 - S. 521,152

SEP 7 1956

Red Triumph by Musicians From Boston

By William J. Jorden
© New York Times News Service

LENINGRAD, RUSSIA — The Boston Symphony Thursday night became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union, and it did so in a great musical triumph.

A capacity audience of 2,200 crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, then applauded and cheered the Americans for a half hour.

Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra an unusual sight which seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring people together.

Streets outside were jammed with persons eager to get into the concert, or even for a glimpse of the musicians. Leningraders have shown eagerness and even daring in efforts to make personal contact with members of the touring orchestra.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethov will play here again today then go to Moscow for three concerts. It will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia, next week to continue its European tour.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MEDFORD, ORE.
MAIL-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 14,656 - S. 14,851

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Gets Thunderous Reception by Reds

Leningrad —(U.P.)— Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Duka's Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Stop Members

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall Conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow Radio said the program was "a great success."

INTE

La République de Lyon - 7 SEPT 1956

4767

L'orchestre sympohnique de Boston (U.S.A.) est arrivé à Léningrad

27

L'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston, comprenant 105 musiciens, conduit par ses chefs, Charles Munch et Pierre Monteux, est arrivé à Léningrad.

N° de débit

INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU

LA RÉPUBLIQUE
LYON
7 SEPTEMBRE 1956

4767

L

L'orchestre sympohnique de Boston (U.S.A.) est arrivé à Léningrad

L'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston, comprenant 105 musiciens, conduit par ses chefs, Charles Munch et Pierre Monteux, est arrivé à Léningrad.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON D. C.
STAR

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Given Big Hand in Leningrad

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history last night. An audience of 2,200 applauded and cheered its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first Western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Violonist Isaac Stern, singer Jan Peerce or any other Western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, Conductor Charles Munch broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Streets Are Jammed

Throughout the evening, streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10).

Before the concert, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

Providing once again that

Absente Is Seen L

By WILLIAM A. MILLEN

When District Republican leaders visit President Eisenhower at his Gettysburg (Pa.) American paperback novels.

Rounds Up Books

Mr. Karol said, "this is the kind of thing that ought to happen," and set out to round up books from the other orchestra members.

"We ought to have a student exchange program between our two countries," Mr. Karol said.

Other players of this first major western musical ensemble ever to tour the Soviet Union had similar experiences. Among them was Polish-born concertmaster Richard Burgin who was

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302

SEP 7 1956

Reds Hail Symphony

London, Sept. 6 (Reuters).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's first concert in Leningrad today was "a great success," Moscow radio said tonight.

PHONY

Continued from the First Page

At the completion of the program, consisting of Beethoven's third "Eroica" symphony, the sixth symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2, there was prolonged applause.

The warmth of the reception persuaded Munch to give an encore, Dukas' "Sorcerr's Apprentice." This was received with excited cheering and bravoes, with Munch repeatedly acknowledging the applause, which continued after the orchestra had left the stage.

No Russian works were used on tonight's program, nor will any be included in the symphony's second concert here tomorrow night or in Moscow on the week-end. A representative of the symphony management said they didn't want the Russians to think they were trying to show them how to play their own music.

Two other American composers to figure in subsequent concerts are Paul Creston and Aaron Copland.

Spectacular Background

The Leningrad Concert Hall with its great colonnades red velvet drapings and gold chandeliers provided a spectacular background for the 105-piece symphony. American and Soviet flags signalized the occasion.

A pleasurable murmur arose from the crowd at the playing of the Soviet national anthem but it was the delicate tracery and pastel colorings of Ravel's suite which won the audience's heart most.

Many Russians went backstage afterwards to congratulate the orchestra.

The audience was dominated by Leningrad's elite. Tickets for the concert sold out days ago.

Before the concert began, the Leningrad Symphony's concertmaster delivered an address of welcome. He said "We hope your tour is successful and we are absolutely sure it will bring our two countries closer together."

After tomorrow night's concert the orchestra leaves for Moscow for three concerts there.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

Leesburg, Fla., Commercial, Ledger & Leader
Circ. D. 1,360 - S. 1,469

SEP 7 1956

Russians Applaud Boston Symphony In Leningrad Concert

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DES MOINES, IOWA
REGISTER
Circ. D. 224,930 - S. 521,152

SEP 7 1956

Red Triumph by Musicians From Boston

By William J. Jorden
© New York Times News Service

LENINGRAD, RUSSIA — The Boston Symphony Thursday night became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union, and it did so in a great musical triumph.

A capacity audience of 2,200 crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, then applauded and cheered the Americans for a half hour.

Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra an unusual sight which seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring people together.

Streets outside were jammed with persons eager to get into the concert, or even for a glimpse of the musicians. Leningraders have shown eagerness and even daring in efforts to make personal contact with members of the touring orchestra.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica."

This was followed by the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, American composer and professor of music at Harvard. The final selection was Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

Grigoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera Company, called the performance "tremendous" and the symphony "a great organization."

The American orchestra will play here again today then go to Moscow for three concerts. It will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia, next week to continue its European tour.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WINTER HAVEN, FLA.
NEWS CHIEF
Circ. D. 3,845 - S. 4,095

SEP 7 1956

Russians Laud Boston Orchestra

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DES MOINES, IOWA
REGISTER
Circ. D. 224,930 - S. 521,152

SEP 7 1956

Red Triumph by Musicians From Boston

By William J. Jorden
© New York Times News Service

LENINGRAD, RUSSIA — The Boston Symphony Thursday night became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union, and it did so in a great musical triumph.

A capacity audience of 2,200 crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, then applauded and cheered the Americans for a half hour.

Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra an unusual sight which seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring people together.

Streets outside were jammed with persons eager to get into the concert, or even for a glimpse of the musicians. Leningraders have shown eagerness and even daring in efforts to make personal contact with members of the touring orchestra.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethov will play here again today then go to Moscow for three concerts. It will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia, next week to continue its European tour.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MEDFORD, ORE.
MAIL-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 14,656 - S. 14,851

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Gets Thunderous Reception by Reds

Leningrad —(U.P.)— Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Duka's Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Stop Members

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall Conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow Radio said the program was "a great success."

La République de Lyon - 7 SEPT 1956

L'orchestre sympohnique de Boston (U.S.A.) est arrivé à Léningrad

27

L'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston, comprenant 105 musiciens, conduit par ses chefs, Charles Munch et Pierre Monteux, est arrivé à Léningrad.

N° de débit
INTERNATIONAL PRESS
LA RÉPUBLIQUE
LYON
7 SEPTEMBRE 1956
4767

L

L'orchestre sympohnique de Boston (U.S.A.) est arrivé à Léningrad

L'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston, comprenant 105 musiciens, conduit par ses chefs, Charles Munch et Pierre Monteux, est arrivé à Léningrad.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON D. C.
STAR

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Given Big Hand in Leningrad

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history last night. An audience of 2,200 applauded and cheered its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first Western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Violonist Isaac Stern, singer Jan Peerce or any other Western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, Conductor Charles Munch broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Streets Are Jammed

Throughout the evening, streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10).

Before the concert, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

Providing once again that

Absente Is Seen

By WILLIAM A. MILLEN

When District Republican leaders visit President Eisenhower at his Gettysburg (Pa.) American paperback novels.

Rounds Up Books

Mr. Karol said, "this is the kind of thing that ought to happen," and set out to round up books from the other orchestra members.

"We ought to have a student exchange program between our two countries," Mr. Karol said.

Other players of this first major western musical ensemble ever to tour the Soviet Union had similar experiences. Among them was Polish-born concertmaster Richard Burgin who was

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

Leesburg, Fla., Commercial,
Ledger & Leader
Circ. D. 1,360 - S. 1,469

SEP 7 1956

Russians Applaud Boston Symphony In Leningrad Concert

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethovén's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DES MOINES, IOWA
REGISTER
Circ. D. 224,930 - S. 521,152

SEP 7 1956

Red Triumph by Musicians From Boston

By William J. Jorden
© New York Times News Service

LENINGRAD, RUSSIA — The Boston Symphony Thursday night became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union, and it did so in a great musical triumph.

A capacity audience of 2,200 crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, then applauded and cheered the Americans for a half hour.

Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra an unusual sight which seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring people together.

Streets outside were jammed with persons eager to get into the concert, or even for a glimpse of the musicians. Leningraders have shown eagerness and even daring in efforts to make personal contact with members of the touring orchestra.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica."

This was followed by the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, American composer and/ professor of music at Harvard. The final selection was Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

Grigoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera Company, called the performance "tremendous" and the symphony "a great organization."

The American orchestra will play here again today then go to Moscow for three concerts. It will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia, next week to continue its European tour.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WINTER HAVEN, FLA.
NEWS CHIEF
Circ. D. 3,845 - S. 4,[illegible]

SEP 7 1956

Russians Laud Boston Orchestra

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

[139]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302

SEP 7 1956

Reds Hail Symphony

London, Sept. 6 (Reuters).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's first concert in Leningrad today was "a great success," Moscow radio said tonight.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
ning Globe
ON, Mass.
dent
85

Under the Weather

Line Storm

At precisely 9:36 on Saturday night, Sept. 22, the southward moving sun will reach the equator. This is the star of Fall, the Autumnal Equinox. There is a strong superstition associated with this phenomenon. They say with many believers, there will be a storm on or about the time the sun crosses th

---

SYMPHONY

Continued from the First Page

At the completion of the program, consisting of Beethoven's third "Eroica" symphony, the sixth symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2, there was prolonged applause.

The warmth of the reception

[illegible] right up to the side of the new street.

The job took five months. 126 oxen driven by 60 Yankees and 190 Irishmen to shovel the gravel into the carts.

* * *

The new-made Pemberton sq began to fade as a residential area about the time of the Civil War. Late in the last century Boston Police Headquarters was moved from City Hall into a group of the houses at the northeast corner of the square. Doors were cut through party walls, inner partitions removed or additional partitions added.

On the first floor was the superintendent's office which for years contained some of the old furniture acquired with the houses.

In one of the rooms William B. Watts, chief of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, gathered evidence to take with him to Italy where a killer of the early 1890's

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DES MOINES, IOWA
REGISTER
Circ. D. 224,930 - S. 521,152

SEP 7 1956

Red Triumph by Musicians From Boston

By William J. Jorden
© New York Times News Service

LENINGRAD, RUSSIA — The Boston Symphony Thursday night became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union, and it did so in a great musical triumph.

A capacity audience of 2,200 crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, then applauded and cheered the Americans for a half hour.

Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra an unusual sight which seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring people together.

Streets outside were jammed with persons eager to get into the concert, or even for a glimpse of the musicians. Leningraders have shown eagerness and even daring in efforts to make personal contact with members of the touring orchestra.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica."

This was followed by the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, American composer and professor of music at Harvard. The final selection was Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

Grigoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera Company, called the performance "tremendous" and the symphony "a great organization."

The American orchestra will play here again today then go to Moscow for three concerts. It will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia, next week to continue its European tour.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

SEP 7 1956

LENINGRAD HAILS BOSTON SYMPHONY

Russians Shout Approval as Munch Leads Orchestra—2,000 Crowd Concert Hall

By WILLIAM J. JORDEN
Special to The New York Times.

LENINGRAD, U. S. S. R., Sept 6—The famous Boston Symphony tonight became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union.

A capacity audience of about 2,000 persons crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory to hear the Americans perform. The reception given by Leningrad officialdom and music-lovers was warm and enthusiastic. Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra, and this unaccustomed sight seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring peoples together whatever their other differences.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica."

This was followed by the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, American composer and Professor of Music at Harvard. The final selection was Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

No Russian composers were represented on the program, nor will they be in the Boston Symphony's other appearances in the Soviet Union.

"We didn't want the Russians to think we were trying to show them how to play their own music," a member of the symphony's management said.

At least one work by a contemporary American composer will be heard at each concert. The three whose works will be played here are Piston, Paul Creston and Aaron Copland.

The all-white concert hall, with massive colonnades, red velvet portieres and gold and crystal chandeliers provided an impressive setting for this first performance by a Western symphony within the borders of the Soviet Union.

Because of the relatively small size of the hall, there was unusual intimacy betwen the orchestra and the audience. The front row of seats is only six feet from the orchestra and the conductor's podium. The balcony, which was crowded with standees, surrounds the hall except for a small area just behind the center of the orchestra.

The audience was made up largely of the elite of Leningrad. Only by good luck could anyone else get tickets, which had been sold out for days.

Outside the concert hall this afternoon, one Russian, who said he was a pianist, stopped this correspondent thinking he was a member of the orchestra.

"Why don't you play more concerts here?" he asked. "Many of us who love music won't be able to hear you."

At concert time, the same sad-faced musician was stopping everyone who entered the concert hall in the hopes that one would have an extra ticket he could buy. There were many others in the same pursuit.

Before the concert began, the concertmaster of the Leningrad symphony delivered an address of welcome to Mr. Munch and his orchestra.

"We hope your tour here will be successful," the Russian said. "And we are absolutely sure that this will bring our two countries closer together."

Mr. Munch accepted two large bouquets of flowers and replied that everyone connected with the Boston Symphony was "happy and proud to be with you."

The 105-member orchestra surprised its audience by opening the program with the Soviet national anthem. There was a murmur, part amazement and part pleasure, as the audience rose to its feet. It remained standing for the American anthem.

Beethoven's symphony was received warmly, and the audience called the conductor back for four bows. But with the playing of the Ravel, the orchestra won its audience completely. Shouts of approval rang through the concert hall.

Prolonged applause and cheers led Mr. Munch to play an encore, unusual for the Boston Orchestra. It was "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," by Dukas.

The enthralled crowd stood and applauded wildly. Mr. Munch returned time and again to accept the plaudits of the audience. Even after the orchestra had left the stage, rhythmic clapping continued. Shouts of "bravo" could be heard even as the scores were being collected from the music stands.

Many Russians well known in the musical world here went backstage to offer congratulations to Mr. Munch and the musicians from Boston.

Grigoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera Company, called the performance "tremendous" and the symphony "a great organization." He said he especially enjoyed the performance of the Ravel work.

Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said the Boston orchestra had given this city a "wonderful concert."

The American orchestra will play here again tomorrow then go to Moscow for three concerts. It will fly to Prague next week to continue its European tour.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068

L'Etoile
LOWELL, Mass.
Bi-Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 4,783

SEP 7 1956

LENINGRAD, 7 —— La Symphonie de Boston, sous la direction de Charles Munch, a remporte un succès formidable dans son concert de mercredi soir en présence de 2200 personnes, qui ouvrait sa tournée en Russie. Après huit minutes d'applaudissements, Munch fit jouer un encore "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" et les acclamations durèrent la demi-heure. La Symphonie joua un autre concert à Leningrad hier soir, puis elle se rendra à Moscou en fin de semaine.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,811

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Scores Triumph In Leningrad Appearance

LENINGRAD, (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore.

After playing Walter Poston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow radio said the program was "a great success."

The orchestra has one more performance in Leningrad before leaving for other concerts in Moscow and Prague.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

STATEN ISLAND, N. Y.
ADVANCE
Circ. D. 43,537

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony 'Sends' Russians

LENINGRAD — (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marbled columned Great Hall conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

SEP 7 1956

Hub Symphony Gets Ovation In Leningrad

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall Conservatory Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow Radio said the program was '"a great success."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,259

SEP 7 1956

Russians Hail Boston Symphony

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (UP) — Two thousand Russians gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Gives Encore

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' "Sorcerer's Apprentice."

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory, Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Play Soviet Anthem

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow Radio said the program was "a great success."

The orchestra has one more performance in Leningrad before leaving for other concerts in Moscow and Prague.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4206

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
SEP 7 1956

Leningrad Cheers Boston Orchestra

By the Associated Press

Leningrad, U.S.S.R.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has scored a great musical triumph in Leningrad with an audience of 2,200 applauding and cheering its opening concert in the Soviet Union for half an hour.

In return, conductor Charles Munch, Sept. 6, broke a no-encore rule and after the stormy applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

The program opened with Beethoven's No. 3 Symphony ("Eroica"), ecstatically received by the musically, highly literate audience. The galleries surrounding the glittering hall—which is more like a palace ballroom than a theater—were crowded with students and teachers from the Leningrad Conservatory.

Other cultural leaders occupied most of the ground floor seats.

The orchestra then played Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University. The severely modern work was obviously strange for a Russian audience. It had a rather mixed reception and received only scattered applause.

Ravel Finale

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" concluded the program and brought the greatest applause of the evening.

Before the concert itself, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

Scores of citizens of this once imperial city visited the players in their hotel rooms, invited them to their homes and engaged them in conversation in streets and theaters.

"We would never have dared to do this two years ago," said a young student of English who went to the room of viola player Robert Karol to ask for modern American paperback novels.

Mr. Karol said, "This is the kind of thing that ought to happen," and set out to round up books from the other orchestra members.

Brothers in Brooklyn

"Does everyone have a brother in Brooklyn?" asked violinist Harry Ellis Dickson when he returned from a visit to a Jewish synagogue. "Before I left home everyone told me the people would be afraid to talk. But instead everyone is besieging me with questions."

A member of the orchestra reported a conversation in which a leading member of Leningrad's cultural community finally asked him:

"Tell me, what do Americans really think about Bulganin and Khrushchev?"

When the American hesitated, the Leningrader added: "Come, come, I won't betray you."

The startled musician then said that, judging from press reports, Americans thought Premier Nikola A. Bulganin more of a gentleman than Nikita S. Khrushchev, the Communist party boss, who, he said, appeared rather vulgar.

"That's what we think, too," the Leningrader said in a conspiratorial tone.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON D. C.
POST & TIMES HERALD

SEP 7 1956

Greatest Triumph

Russians Hail Boston Orchestra

By Stanley Johnson

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6 (AP) The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history Thursday night. An audience of 2200 applauded its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

Munch

The reception for the first Western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given violinist Isaac Stern, since Jan Peerce or any other Western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

Conductor Charles Munch broke a no-encore rule and der the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

It set off new uproar in the hall of the Leningrad Philharmonic.

Throughout the evening, streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists. Some offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10).

The program opened with Beethoven's Third Symphony, ecstatically received by the musically highly literate audience.

The orchestra then played the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard.

Kurt Sonderling, assistant conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said "it was a wonderful concert. You heard their success. The Boston is one of the greatest and strongest orchestras in the world."

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" concluded the program.

Before the concert itself, scores of Leningraders visited the players in their hotel rooms, invited them to their homes and engaged them in conversation in streets and theaters.

"We would never have dared to do this two years ago," said a student of English who went to the room of viola player Robert Karol to ask for modern American paperback novels.

After violinist Harry Ellis Dickson returned from a visit to a Jewish synagogue, he said, "Before I left home everyone told me the people would be afraid to talk. But instead everyone is besieging me with questions."

Cellist Barnard Parronchi expressed surprise because "no one is following us" (meaning no police).

This is the first time a large group of Westerners have moved so freely among the Soviet people.

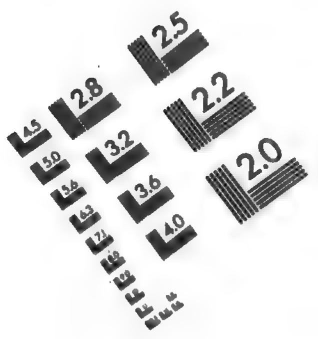
[140]

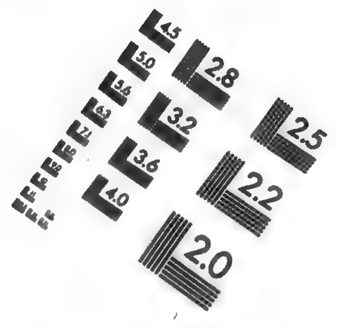
REDUCTION
RATIO
15x

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

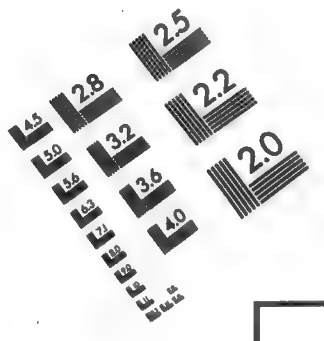
2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

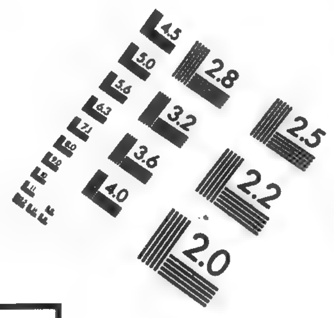
1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

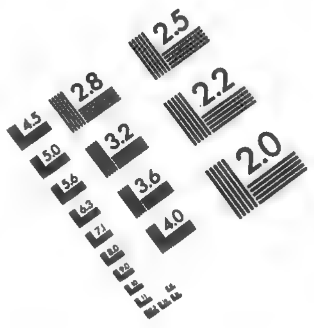


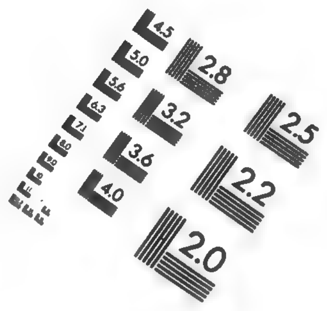


PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC





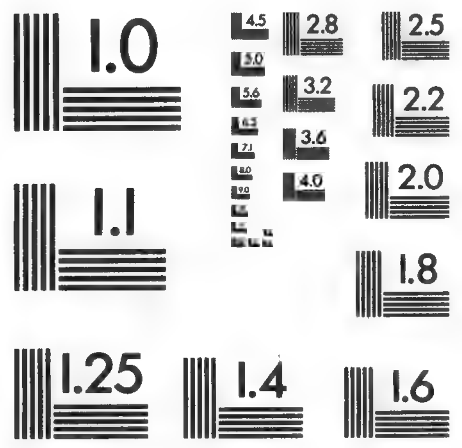




200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

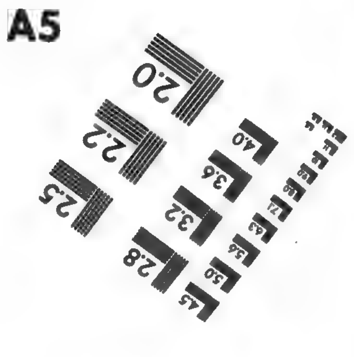
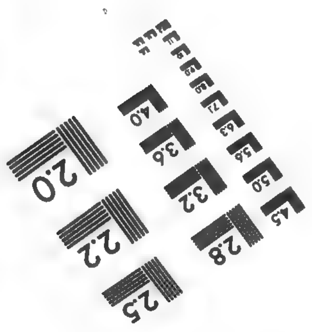
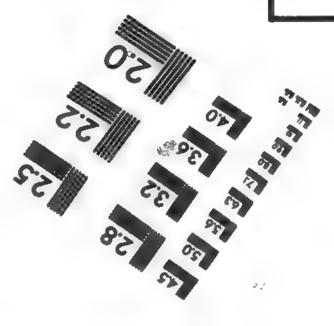
A5

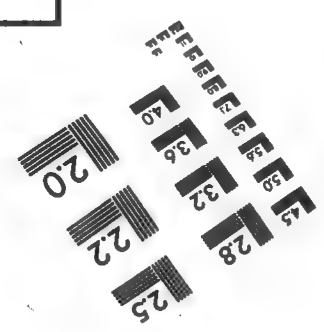




A4

A3





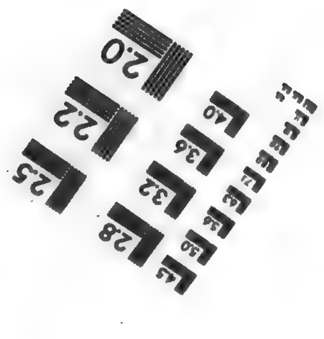
PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

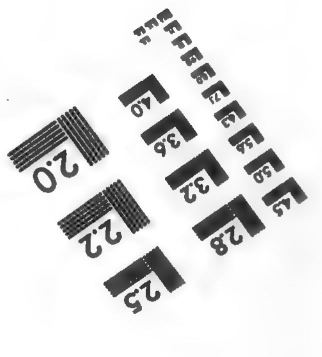
Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890





Burrelle
ESTABLISHED
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New Yo

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 332,581 S. 247,755

SEP 7 1956

WORLD Wide

By THEODORE KAGHAN

Now that the Suez talks are stymied the French are reported getting jittery about carrying out their threat to use force on Egypt.

The French, it seems, were talking tough on the assumption that a war against Egypt by France and Britain would be watched from the sidelines by both the U. S. and Russia, with neither openly interfering. Now Paris isn't so certain the assumption is correct.

Even the cooperation of Britain isn't such a sure thing anymore now that the Labor Party has become so critical of the Eden government's course. The British Cabinet itself is reported split, and there is a growing opinion in Britain that the mess should go to the UN. This makes the French even more unhappy than usual.

As a matter of fact the French seem to be more unified than the British at this point, and that paradox is heightened by the fact that the Socialist leadership of France is for punching Nasser in the nose while the British Socialists are insisting there will be no violence. French socialism thus finds itself, in these days of the decline and fall of empires, allied with British conservatism.

And who's responsible for this mess? Why, the good old U.S.A., says the French press. We've betrayed our Allies. The "togetherness" of the West seems to be somewhat unbuttoned.

* * *

The Premier of Red Poland has announced that foreign correspondents can cover the Poznan trials but that foreign observers from "philanthropic-minded organizations" can go peddle their sympathies somewhere else. He suggested the summary trials in Cyprus or the "concentration camps" in Kenya as possible points of interest.

Premier Cyrankiewicz also announced, during a speech to Parliament, that the Russians had agreed to allow a Polish mission to come in and help repatriate the thousands of missing Poles deported to the Soviet Union by Stalin. Up to now this has been a taboo subject and nobody knows where they are or what they're doing—if they're alive.

* * *

Moscow announces it will republish John Reed's "Ten Days That Shook the World," banned by Stalin because the American-born Communist author, who died two years after the Russian revolution and was buried in the Kremlin, forgot to mention Joe.

* * *

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was a smash hit at its opening performance in Leningrad last night. The audience was delighted when the boys opened with the Soviet national anthem, an unAmerican deviation one of our super-patriotic Congressional committess will undoubtedly look into later.

* * *

Egypt and Russia seem to be involved in some funny oil business. An Egyptian export company has offered both Belgium and Sweden 100,000 tons of Russian light fuel oil for 25 per cent over the going rate, to be paid in dollars or Swiss francs.

Both countries turned the offer down, but the question is, who is behind this "squeeze play"? Does Egypt own the oil, and if so, how did she get it? If not, is she fronting for the Russians trying to make a quick hard buck out of the Suez crisis? Somebody [illegible]

[141]

NEW YORK ~~HERALD TRIBUNE~~ TIMES - September 7, 1956

Leningrad Warmly Welcomes The Touring Boston Symphony

By WILLIAM J. JOE EN

Special to The New York Times.

LENINGRAD, U. S. S. R., Sept 6—The famous Boston Symphony tonight became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union.

A capacity audience of about 2,000 persons crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory to hear the Americans perform. The reception given by Leningrad officialdom and music-lovers was warm and enthusiastic. Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra, and this unaccustomed sight seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring peoples together whatever their other differences.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica."

This was followed by the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, American composer and Professor of Music at Harvard. The final selection was Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

No Russian composers were represented on the program, nor will they be in the Boston Symphony's other appearances in the Soviet Union.

"We didn't want the Russians to think we were trying to show them how to play their own music," a member of the symphony's management said.

At least one work by a contemporary American composer will be heard at each concert. The three whose works will be played here are Piston, Paul Creston and Aaron Copland.

The all-white concert hall, with massive colonnades, red velvet portieres and gold and crystal chandeliers provided an impressive setting for this first performance by a Western symphony within the borders of the Soviet Union.

Because of the relatively small size of the hall, there was unusual intimacy betwen the orchestra and the audience. The front row of seats is only six feet from the orchestra and the conductor's podium. The balcony, which was crowded with standees, surrounds the hall except for a small area just behind the center of the orchestra.

The audience was made up largely of the elite of Leningrad. Only by good luck could anyone else get tickets, which had been sold out for days.

Outside the concert hall this afternoon, one Russian, who said he was a pianist, stopped this correspondent thinking he was a member of the orchestra.

"Why don't you play more concerts here?" he asked. "Many of us who love music won't be able to hear you."

At concert time, the same sad-faced musician was stopping everyone who entered the concert hall in the hopes that one would have an extra ticket he could buy. There were many others in the same pursuit.

Before the concert began, the concertmaster of the Leningrad symphony delivered an address of welcome to Mr. Munch and his orchestra.

"We hope your tour here will be successful," the Russian said. "And we are absolutely sure that this will bring our two countries closer together."

Mr. Munch accepted two large bouquets of flowers and replied that everyone connected with the Boston Symphony was "happy and proud to be with you."

The 105-member orchestra surprised its audience by opening the program with the Soviet national anthem. There was a murmur, part amazement and part pleasure, as the audience rose to its feet. It remained standing for the American anthem.

Beethoven's symphony was received warmly, and the audience called the conductor back for four bows. But with the playing of the Ravel, the orchestra won its audience completely. Shouts of approval rang through the concert hall.

Prolonged applause and cheers led Mr. Munch to play an encore, unusual for the Boston Orchestra. It was "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," by Dukas.

The enthralled crowd stood and applauded wildly. Mr. Munch returned time and again to accept the plaudits of the audience. Even after the orchestra had left the stage, rhythmic clapping continued. Shouts of "bravo" could be heard even as the scores were being collected from the music stands.

Many Russians well known in the musical world here went backstage to offer congratulations to Mr. Munch and the musicians from Boston.

Grigoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera Company, called the performance "tremendous" and the symphony "a great organization." He said he especially enjoyed the performance of the Ravel work.

Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said the Boston orchestra had given this city a "wonderful concert."

The American orchestra will play here again tomorrow then go to Moscow for three concerts. It will fly to Prague next week to continue its European tour.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

SEP 7 1956

Hub Symphony Gets Big Russian Ovation

By STANLEY JOHNSON

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history tonight. An audience of 2200 applauded and cheered for half an hour its opening concert of a Russian tour.

The reception for the first western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given violinist Isaac Stern, singer Jan Peerce or any other western artist who has appeared there lately.

In return, Conductor Charles Munch broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

It set off new uproar in the red, white and gold hall of the Leningrad Philharmonic.

Moscow Wire

Throughout the evening, streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10).

Violinist David Oistrakh sent a telegram to concertmaster

Continued on Page 25

[illegible] floor seats.

The orchestra then played the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard. The severely modern work was obviously strange for a Russian audience. It had a rather mixed reception and received only scattered applause.

Munch got one bow out of it.

Critic Praises It

However, Julian Wincopf, a distinguished Soviet critic, said after the performance "the scherzo was simply wonderful. The adagio has very much poetry in it. There was a great depth of feeling and a lyrically landscaped approach to a wonderful finale which is very appropriate.

"The whole concert was very, very interesting.

"I saw Munch for the first time and must say he was the right man in the right place." Wincopf dropped into English to voice that last phrase.

Kurt Sonderling, assistant conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said "It was a wonderful concert. You heard their success. The Boston is one of the greatest and strongest orchestras in the world."

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" concluded the program and brought the greatest applause of the evening. Grigori Rabinovitch, assistant conductor of Leningrad's Kirov Opera, said he thought this was the finest number on the program.

Before the concert itself, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

Players Visited

Proving once again that music knows no national barriers, scores of citizens of this once imperial city visited the players in their hotel rooms, invited them to their homes and engaged them in conversation in streets and theatres.

"We would never have dared to do this two years ago," said a young student of English who went to the room of viola player Robert Karol to ask for modern American paperback novels.

Karol said, "this is the kind of thing that ought to happen," and set out to round up books

A New York-born cellist, Barnard Parronchi, expressed surprise because "no one is following us" (meaning no police).

This is the first time a large group of Westerners, many of whom speak Russian, have moved so freely among the Soviet people.

A member of the orchestra reported a conversation in which a leading member of Leningrad's cultural community finally asked him, "Tell me, what do Americans really think about Bulganin and Khrushchev?"

When the American hesitated, the Leningrader added, "Come, come, I won't betray you."

Boston Symphony Scores Greatest Russian Triumph

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history tonight. An audience of 2200 applauded and cheered its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Violinist Isaac Stern, Singer Jan Peerce or any other western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, Conductor Charles Munch broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Attlee Sister Dies

SALISBURY, Eng., Sept. 6 (AP) — Miss Mary Attlee, 81, sister of former Prime Minister Clement Attlee, died today.

Los Angeles
Times
Sept 7, 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
GLOUCESTER, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 8,809

SEP 7 1956

World N

By UNITED PRESS

WASHINGTON—Sen. Walter F. George (D-Ga.) will open a special Senate investigation of the foreign aid program before becoming special ambassador to NATO, his office said today.

* * *

LENINGRAD—Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

* * *

CHICAGO—Adlai Stevenson said today he will make the "failure" of the Eisenhower administration to deal with the "school crisis" a major issue of his campaign.

* * *

STURGIS, Ky.—A newly formed white citizens council planned today to petition local officials to ask the Kentucky National Guard and state police "to pack up and get out" of this town which is seething with racial unrest.

ches of rain in some areas within two-hour period.

* * *

PARIS—France reluctantly accepted the possibility today that may stand alone in event of a military action in the Suez Can zone.

* * *

DENVER—The executive secretary of the National Association f the Advancement of Colored Pe ple attacked President Eisenhow Thursday night for taking a "neutral position" in the violence attached to the desegregation Southern schools.

* * *

EAST LOS ANGELES, Calif. Hundreds of persons gathered tod to view an outline alleged to that of the Virgin Mary, which a peared on the paper backing of painting of Our Lady of Guadalup

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 7 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 7 1956

Russ Cheer Symphony

LENINGRAD (AP)—The Bo ton Symphony Orchestra score the greatest musical triumph Leningrad's modern histor Thursday night. An audience 2200 applauded and cheered opening concert of a Russian to for half an hour.

The reception for the fi western symphony orchestra play in the Soviet Union far e ceeded that given Violinist Isa Stern, Singer Jan Peerce or a other Western artist who h appeared lately in the Sovi Union.

In return, Conductor Char Much broke a no-encore rule a after a stormy eight minutes applause led the orchestra "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

STREETS JAMMED

It set off new uproar in red, white and gold hall of t Leningrad Philharmonic.

Throughout the evening, stree outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10.)

Violinist David Oistrakh sent a telegram to Concertmaster Richard Burgin congratulating the orchestra and saying he looked forward to hearing it in Moscow.

STUDENTS CROWD HALL

Oistrakh played with the Boston Symphony last winter on his American tour.

The program opened with Beethoven's Third Symphony, estatically received by the musically highly literate audience. The galleries surrounding the glittering hall—which is more like a palace ballroom than a theater—were crowded with students and teachers from the Leningrad Conservatory.

New England Newsclip Agen
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republic
Circ. 134,866

SEP 7 1956

Greatest Music

Lening About

By STA

LENINGRAD, Sept orchestra scored the gre modern history tonight. cheered its opening conc

The reception for the Western symphony orche play in the Soviet Union f ceeded that given Isaac Jan Peerce or any other ern artist who has appear ly in the Soviet Union.

Encore Played

In return, Charles Mu conductor, broke a no rule and after a storm minutes of applause led chestra in "The Sorcere prentice."

It set off new uproa

(Continued on Page

received by musically highly literate nce. The galleries surr the glittering hall ore like a palace han a theater—were ith students and teache e Leningrad conserva Other cultural leade ed most of the grou ats.

STON SYMPHONY

The orchestra then pla th Symphony of ion, professor of m rvard. The severely was obviously stran Russian audience. It r mixed reception only scattered h got one bow out wever, Julian Wi guished Soviet cri the performance o was simply wo dagio has very mu it. There was of feeling and a l aped approach to ul finale which is ve opriate. The whole as very, very interestin 'I saw Munch for th and must say he man in the right copf dropped into voice that last phras Kurt Sonderling, onductor of the Len ilharmonic, said "It

---

New England Newsclip Agen
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmon

Enterprise & Time
BROCKTON, M
Non-Partisan
Circ. 42,005

SEP 7 19

Boston Symph Warmly Gree At Leningrad

LENINGRAD. — (UP)

Leningrad Capitulates To Hub Symphony Music

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night. The Boston was the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory.

Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

PERFORMANCE WAS TREMENDOUS

Munch opened the program with the Soviet antional anthem. He then told the audience the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company, said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad philharmonic orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow radio said the program was " a great success."

The orchestra has one more performance in Leningrad before leaving for other concerts in Moscow and Prague.

Bank Sets Example For Its Depositors

BALTIMORE — One of the tellers at the Mercantile-Safe Deposit and Trust Co. is named Mr. Thrift.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 18
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New Yo

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 332,58 - S. 247,755

SEP 7 1956

WORLD Wide

By THEODORE KAGHAN

Now that the Suez talks are stymied the French are reported getting jittery about carrying out their threat to use force on Egypt.

The French, it seems, were talking tough on the assumption that a war against Egypt by France and Britain would be watched from the sidelines by both the U. S. and Russia, with neither openly interfering. Now Paris isn't so certain the assumption is correct.

Even the cooperation of Britain isn't such a sure thing anymore now that the Labor Party has become so critical of the Eden government's course. The British Cabinet itself is reported split, and there is a growing opinion in Britain that the mess should go to the UN. This makes the French even more unhappy than usual.

As a matter of fact the French seem to be more unified than the British at this point, and that paradox is heightened by the fact that the Socialist leadership of France is for punching Nasser in the nose while the British Socialists are insisting there will be no violence. French socialism thus finds itself, in these days of the decline and fall of empires, allied with British conservatism.

And who's responsible for this mess? Why, the good old U.S.A., says the French press. We've betrayed our Allies. The "togetherness" of the West seems to be somewhat unbuttoned.

* * *

The Premier of Red Poland has announced that foreign correspondents can cover the Poznan trials but that foreign observers from "philanthropic-minded organizations" can go peddle th sympathies somewhere else suggested the summary t Cyprus or the "con camps" in Kenya points of interest.

Premier Cyran nounced, during liament, that agreed to al to come the thous deported to t Stalin. Up to n a taboo subjec knows where they they're doing—if they.

* * *

Moscow announces it w publish John Reed's "Ten D That Shook the World," banne by Stalin because the American-born Communist author, who died two years after the Russian revolution and was buried in the Kremlin, forgot to mention Joe.

* * *

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was a smash hit at its opening performance in Leningrad last night. The audience was delighted when the boys opened with the Soviet national anthem, an unAmerican deviation one of our super-patriotic Congressional committess will undoubtedly look into later.

* * *

Egypt and Russia seem to be involved in some funny oil business. An Egyptian export company has offered both Belgium and Sweden 100,000 tons of Russian light fuel oil for 25 per cent over the going rate, to be paid in dollars or Swiss francs.

Both countries turned the offer down, but the question is, who is behind this "squeeze play"? Does Egypt own the oil, and if so, how did she get it? If not, is she fronting for the Russians trying to make a quick hard buck out of the Suez crisis? Somebody knows but nobody tells.

NEW YORK ~~HERALD TRIBUNE~~ TIMES - September 7, 1956

Leningrad Warmly Welcomes The Touring Boston Symphony

By WILLIAM J. JOE EN

Special to The New York Times.

LENINGRAD, U. S. S. R., Sept 6—The famous Boston Symphony tonight became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union.

A capacity audience of about 2,000 persons crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory to hear the Americans perform. The reception given by Leningrad officialdom and music-lovers was warm and enthusiastic. Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra, and this unaccustomed sight seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring peoples together whatever their other differences.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica."

This was followed by the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, American composer and Professor of Music at Harvard. The final selection was Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

No Russian composers were represented on the program, nor will they be in the Boston Symphony's other appearances in the Soviet Union.

"We didn't want the Russians to think we were trying to show them how to play their own music," a member of the symphony's management said.

At least one work by a contemporary American composer will be heard at each concert. The three whose works will be played here are Piston, Paul Creston and Aaron Copland.

The all-white concert hall, with massive colonnades, red velvet portieres and gold and crystal chandeliers provided an impressive setting for this first performance by a Western symphony within the borders of the Soviet Union.

Because of the relatively small size of the hall, there was unusual intimacy betwen the orchestra and the audience. The front row of seats is only six feet from the orchestra and the conductor's podium. The balcony, which was crowded with standees, surrounds the hall except for a small area just behind the center of the orchestra.

The audien made up largely of th Leningrad. Only by g anyone else get been sold o this of us who love music won't be able to hear you."

O af

At concert time, the same sad-faced musician was stopping everyone who entered the concert hall in the hopes that one would have an extra ticket he could buy. There were many others in the same pursuit.

Before the concert began, the concertmaster of the Leningrad symphony delivered an address of welcome to Mr. Munch and his orchestra.

"We hope your tour here will be successful," the Russian said. "And we are absolutely sure that this will bring our two countries closer together."

Mr. Munch accepted two large bouquets of flowers and replied that everyone connected with the Boston Symphony was "happy and proud to be with you."

The 105-member orchestra surprised its audience by opening the program with the Soviet national anthem. There was a murmur, part amazement and part pleasure, as the audience rose to its feet. It remained standing for the American anthem.

Beethoven's symphony was received warmly, and the audience called the conductor back for four bows. But with the playing of the Ravel, the orchestra won its audience completely. Shouts of approval rang through the concert hall.

Prolonged applause and cheers led Mr. Munch to play an encore, unusual for the Boston Orchestra. It was "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," by Dukas.

The enthralled crowd stood and applauded wildly. Mr. Munch returned time and again to accept the plaudits of the audience. Even after the orchestra had left the stage, rhythmic clapping continued. Shouts of "bravo" could be heard even as the scores were being collected from the music stands.

Many Russians well known in the musical world here went backstage to offer congratulations to Mr. Munch and the musicians from Boston.

Grigoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera Company, called the performance "tremendous" and the symphony "a great organization." He said he especially enjoyed the performance of the Ravel work.

Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said the Boston orchestra had given this city a "wonderful concert."

The American orchestra will y here again tomorrow then Moscow for three concerts. fly to Prague next week ue its European tour.

WORSTED
ADVERTISED COATS
ONE OF AMERICA
MEN
TH

---

phony Scores Hit

Continued from First Page

Richard Burgin congratulating the orchestra and saying he looked forward to hearing it in Moscow.

Oistrakh played with the Boston Symphony last winter on his American tour.

The program opened with Beethoven's Third Symphony, ecstatically received by the musically highly literate audience. The galleries surrounding the glittering hall—which is more like a palace ballroom than a theatre—were crowded with students and teachers from the Leningrad conservatory.

Other cultural leaders occupied most of the ground floor seats.

The orchestra then played the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard. The severely modern work was obviously strange for a Russian audience. It had a rather mixed reception and received only scattered applause.

Munch got one bow out of it.

Critic Praises It

However, Julian Wincopf, a distinguished Soviet critic, said after the performance "the scherzo was simply wonderful. The adagio has very much poetry in it. There was a great depth of feeling and a lyrically landscaped approach to a wonderful finale which is very appropriate.

"The whole concert was very, very interesting.

"I saw Munch for the first time and must say he was the right man in the right place." Wincopf dropped into English to voice that last phrase.

Kurt Sonderling, assistant conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said "It was a wonderful concert. You heard their success. The Boston is one of the greatest and strongest orchestras in the world."

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" concluded the program and brought the greatest applause of the evening. Grigori Rabinovitch, assistant conductor of Leningrad's Kirov Opera, said he thought this was the finest number on the program.

Before the concert itself, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

Players Visited

Proving once again that music knows no national barriers, scores of citizens of this once imperial city visited the players in their hotel rooms, invited them to their homes and engaged them in conversation in streets and theatres.

"We would never have dared to do this two years ago," said a young student of English who went to the room of viola player Robert Karol to ask for modern American paperback novels.

Karol said, "this is the kind of thing that ought to happen," and set out to round up books from the other orchestra members.

"We ought to have a student exchange program between our two countries," Karol said.

Other players of this first major western musical ensemble ever to tour the Soviet Union had similar experiences. Among them was Polish-born Concertmaster Richard Burgin who was concertmaster with the Leningrad Philharmonic 25 years ago.

Brothers in Brooklyn

"Does everyone have a brother in Brooklyn?" asked violinist Harry Ellis Dickson when he returned from a visit to a Jewish synagogue.

"Before I left home everyone told me the people would be afraid to talk. But instead everyone is besieging me with questions."

A New York-born cellist, Barnard Parronchi, expressed surprise because "no one is following us" (meaning no police).

This is the first time a large group of Westerners, many of whom speak Russian, have moved so freely among the Soviet people.

A member of the orchestra reported a conversation in which a leading member of Leningrad's cultural community finally asked him, "Tell me, what do Americans really think about Bulganin and Khrushchev?"

When the American hesitated, the Leningrader added "Come, come, I won't betray you."

[141]

Boston Symphony Scores Greatest Russian Triumph

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history tonight. An audience of 220 applauded and cheered opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Violinist Isaac Stern, Singer Jan Peerce or any other western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, Conductor Charles Munch broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Attlee Sister Dies

SALISBURY, Eng., Sept. 6 (AP) — Miss Mary Attlee, 81, sister of former Prime Minister Clement Attlee, died today.

Los Angeles
Times
Sept 7, 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
GLOUCESTER, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 8,809

SEP 7 1956

World N

By UNITED PRESS

WASHINGTON—Sen. Walter F. George (D-Ga.) will open a special Senate investigation of the foreign aid program before becoming special ambassador to NATO, his office said today.

* * *

LENINGRAD—Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

* * *

CHICAGO—Adlai Stevenson said today he will make the "failure" of the Eisenhower administration to deal with the "school crisis" a major issue of his campaign.

* * *

STURGIS, Ky.—A newly formed white citizens council planned today to petition local officials to ask the Kentucky National Guard and state police "to pack up and get out" of this town which is seething with racial unrest.

Thursday night left up to ches of rain in some areas within two-hour period.

* * *

PARIS—France reluctantly accepted the possibility today that may stand alone in event of a military action in the Suez Canal zone.

* * *

DENVER—The executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People attacked President Eisenhower Thursday night for taking a "neutral position" in the violence attached to the desegregation Southern schools.

* * *

EAST LOS ANGELES, Calif. Hundreds of persons gathered today to view an outline alleged to that of the Virgin Mary which appeared on the paper backing of painting of Our Lady of Guadalupe

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 7 1956

Russ Cheer Symphony

LENINGRAD (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph Leningrad's modern history Thursday night. An audience 2200 applauded and cheered opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first western symphony orchestra play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Violinist Isaac Stern, Singer Jan Peerce or other Western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, Conductor Charles Much broke a no-encore rule after a stormy eight minutes applause led the orchestra "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

STREETS JAMMED

It set off new uproar in red, white and gold hall of Leningrad Philharmonic.

Throughout the evening streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10.)

Violinist David Oistrakh sent a telegram to Concertmaster Richard Burgin congratulating the orchestra and saying he looked forward to hearing it in Moscow.

STUDENTS CROWD HALL

Oistrakh played with the Boston Symphony last winter on his American tour.

The program opened with Beethoven's Third Symphony, estatically received by the musically highly literate audience. The galleries surrounding the glittering hall—which is more like a palace ballroom than a theater—were crowded with students and teachers from the Leningrad Conservatory.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

SEP 7 1956

Greatest Musica

Leningr About

By STA

LENINGRAD, Sept. orchestra scored the grea modern history tonight. cheered its opening concer The reception for the Western symphony orchestr play in the Soviet Union fa ceeded that given Isaac S Jan Peerce or any other W ern artist who has appeared ly in the Soviet Union.

Encore Played

In return, Charles Munch, conductor, broke a no-en rule and after a stormy minutes of applause led th orchestra in "The Sorcerer's prentice."

It set off new uproar i

(Continued on Page Ni

ecstatically received by musically highly literate a ence. The galleries surround the glittering hall—which more like a palace ballr than a theater—were crow with students and teachers f the Leningrad conservatory. Other cultural leaders oc ed most of the ground f ats.

STON SYMPHONY

The orchestra then played th Symphony of Wal ton, professor of music rvard. The severely mod k was obviously strange ussian audience. It had r mixed reception and d only scattered applau got one bow out of it. wever, Julian Wincopf, guished Soviet critic, s the performance "T o was simply wonderf dagio has very much po it. There was a gre of feeling and a lyrical ped approach to a wo finale which is very a opriate. The whole conce s very, very interesting. "I saw Munch for the fir e and must say he was t man in the right place incopf dropped into Englis voice that last phrase. Kurt Sonderling, assista nductor of the Leningra hilharmonic, said "It was

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420

Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 42,005

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Warmly Greeted At Leningrad

LENINGRAD. — (UP) —

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 7 1956

Leningrad Capitulates To Hub Symphony Music

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night. The Boston was the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory.

Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

PERFORMANCE WAS TREMENDOUS

Munch opened the program with the Soviet antional anthem. He then told the audience the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company, said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad philharmonic orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow radio said the program was " a great success."

The orchestra has one more performance in Leningrad before leaving for other concerts in Moscow and Prague.

Bank Sets Example For Its Depositors

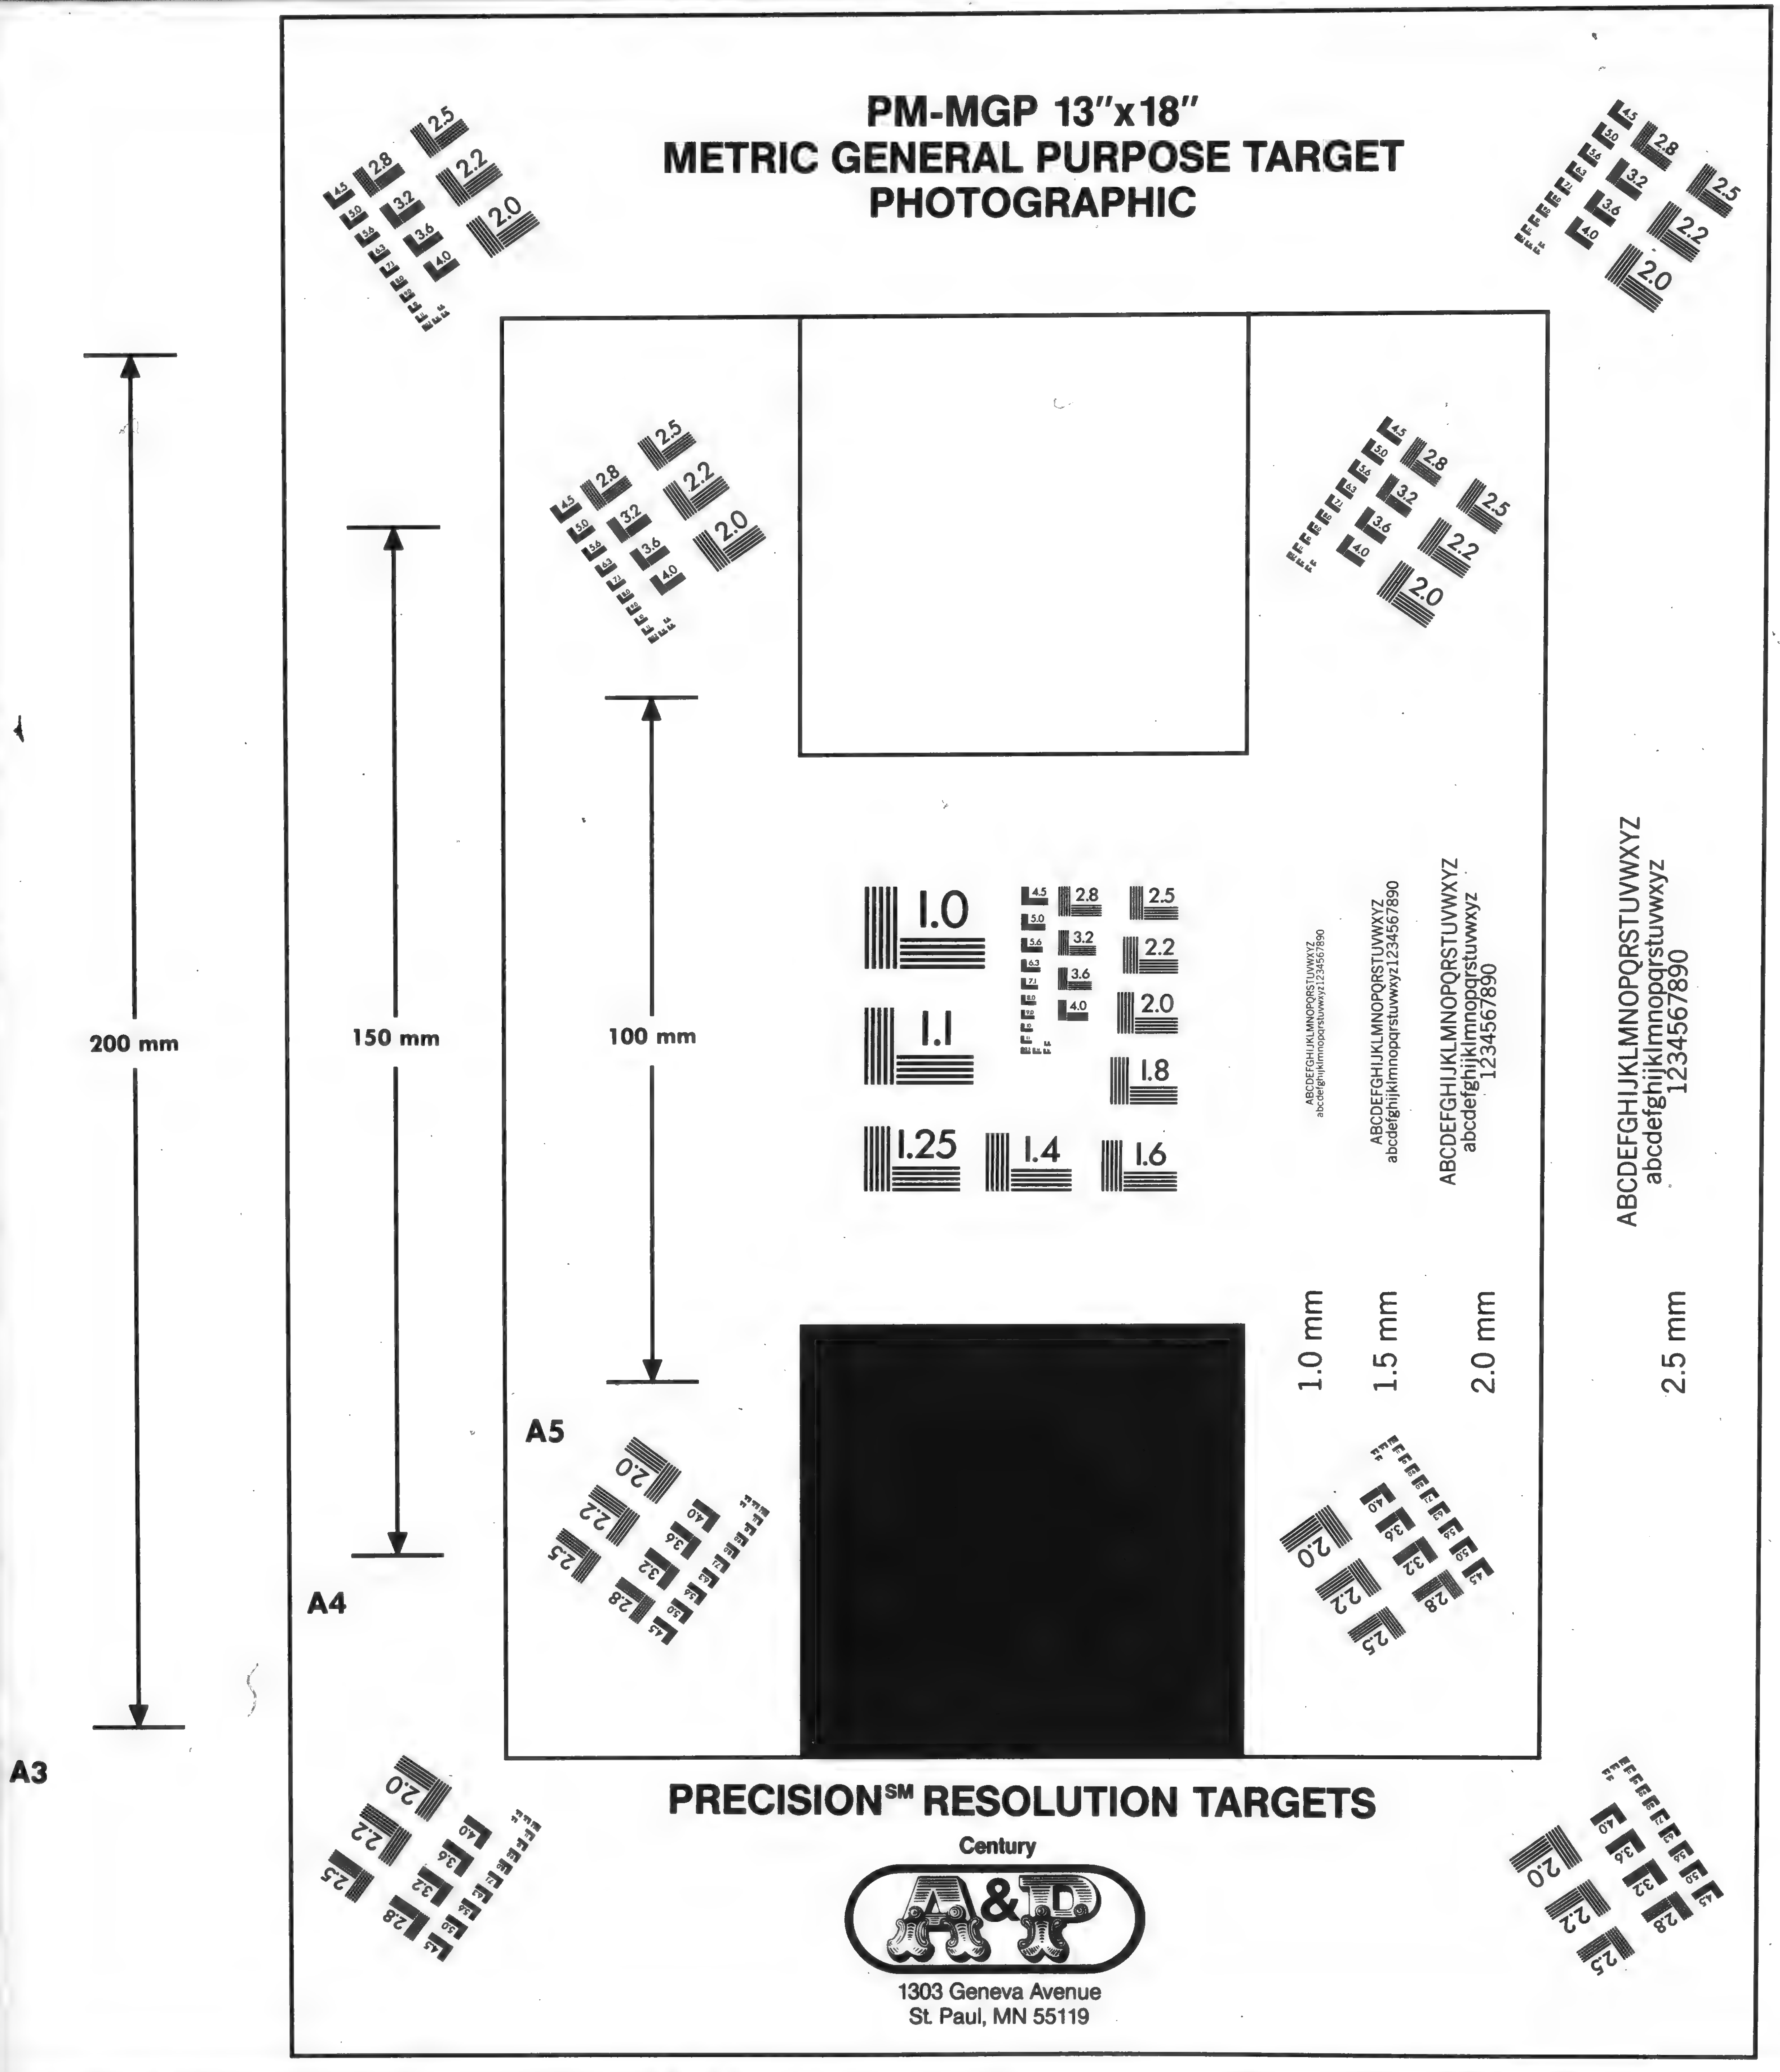
BALTIMORE — One of the tellers at the Mercantile-Safe Deposit and Trust Co. is named Mr. Thrift.

REDUCTION

RATIO

14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A3
A4
A5
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 332,581 - S. 247,755

SEP 7 1956

WORLD Wide

By THEODORE KAGHAN

Now that the Suez talks are stymied the French are reported getting jittery about carrying out their threat to use force on Egypt.

The French, it seems, were talking tough on the assumption that a war against Egypt by France and Britain would be watched from the sidelines by both the U. S. and Russia, with neither openly interfering. Now Paris isn't so certain the assumption is correct.

Even the cooperation of Britain isn't such a sure thing anymore now that the Labor Party has become so critical of the Eden government's course. The British Cabinet itself is reported split, and there is a growing opinion in Britain that the mess should go to the UN. This makes the French even more unhappy than usual.

As a matter of fact the French seem to be more unified than the British at this point, and that paradox is heightened by the fact that the Socialist leadership of France is for punching Nasser in the nose while the British Socialists are insisting there will be no violence. French socialism thus finds itself, in these days of the decline and fall of empires, allied with British conservatism.

And who's responsible for this mess? Why, the good old U.S.A., says the French press. We've betrayed our Allies. The "togetherness" of the West seems to be somewhat unbuttoned.

* * *

The Premier of Red Poland has announced that foreign correspondents can cover the Poznan trials but that foreign observers from "philanthropic-minded organizations" can go peddle th... sympathies somewhere else... suggested the summary ... Cyprus or the "conc... camps" in Kenya ... points of interest.

Premier Cyran... nounced, during ... liament, that ... agreed to al... to come ... the thousa... deported to ... Stalin. Up to n... a taboo subjec... knows where they ... they're doing—if they ...

* * *

Moscow announces it wi... publish John Reed's "Ten D... That Shook the World," banne... by Stalin because the American-born Communist author, who died two years after the Russian revolution and was buried in the Kremlin, forgot to mention Joe.

* * *

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was a smash hit at its opening performance in Leningrad last night. The audience was delighted when the boys opened with the Soviet national anthem, an unAmerican deviation one of our super-patriotic Congressional committess will undoubtedly look into later.

* * *

Egypt and Russia seem to be involved in some funny oil business. An Egyptian export company has offered both Belgium and Sweden 100,000 tons of Russian light fuel oil for 25 per cent over the going rate, to be paid in dollars or Swiss francs.

Both countries turned the offer down, but the question is, who is behind this "squeeze play"? Does Egypt own the oil, and if so, how did she get it? If not, is she fronting for the Russians trying to make a quick hard buck out of the Suez crisis? Somebody knows but nobody tells.

[141]

NEW YORK ~~HERALD TRIBU~~NE TIMES - September 7, 1956

Leningrad Warmly Welcomes The Touring Boston Symphony

By WILLIAM J. JORDEN

Special to The New York Times.

LENINGRAD, U. S. S. R., Sept. 6—The famous Boston Symphony tonight became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union.

A capacity audience of about 2,000 persons crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory to hear the Americans perform. The reception given by Leningrad officialdom and music-lovers was warm and enthusiastic. Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra, and this unaccustomed sight seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring peoples together whatever their other differences.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica."

This was followed by the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, American composer and Professor of Music at Harvard. The final selection was Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

No Russian composers were represented on the program, nor will they be in the Boston Symphony's other appearances in the Soviet Union.

"We didn't want the Russians to think we were trying to show them how to play their own music," a member of the symphony's management said.

At least one work by a contemporary American composer will be heard at each concert. The three whose works will be played here are Piston, Paul Creston and Aaron Copland.

The all-white concert hall, with massive colonnades, red velvet portieres and gold and crystal chandeliers provided an impressive setting for this first performance by a Western symphony within the borders of the Soviet Union.

Because of the relatively small size of the hall, there was unusual intimacy betwen the orchestra and the audience. The front row of seats is only six feet from the orchestra and the conductor's podium. The balcony, which was crowded with standees, surrounds the hall except for a small area just behind the center of the orchestra.

The aud... was made up largely of ... of Leningrad. Only b... could anyone else ... had been sold ... all this ... said this ... of us who love music won't be able to hear you."

At concert time, the same sad-faced musician was stopping everyone who entered the concert hall in the hopes that one would have an extra ticket he could buy. There were many others in the same pursuit.

Before the concert began, the concertmaster of the Leningrad symphony delivered an address of welcome to Mr. Munch and his orchestra.

"We hope your tour here will be successful," the Russian said. "And we are absolutely sure that this will bring our two countries closer together."

Mr. Munch accepted two large bouquets of flowers and replied that everyone connected with the Boston Symphony was "happy and proud to be with you."

The 105-member orchestra surprised its audience by opening the program with the Soviet national anthem. There was a murmur, part amazement and part pleasure, as the audience rose to its feet. It remained standing for the American anthem.

Beethoven's symphony was received warmly, and the audience called the conductor back for four bows. But with the playing of the Ravel, the orchestra won its audience completely. Shouts of approval rang through the concert hall.

Prolonged applause and cheers led Mr. Munch to play an encore, unusual for the Boston Orchestra. It was "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," by Dukas.

The enthralled crowd stood and applauded wildly. Mr. Munch returned time and again to accept the plaudits of the audience. Even after the orchestra had left the stage, rhythmic clapping continued. Shouts of "bravo" could be heard even as the scores were being collected from the music stands.

Many Russians well known in the musical world here went backstage to offer congratulations to Mr. Munch and the musicians from Boston.

Grigoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera Company, called the performance "tremendous" and the symphony "a great organization." He said he especially enjoyed the performance of the Ravel work.

Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said the Boston orchestra had given this city a "wonderful concert."

The American orchestra will play here again tomorrow then go to Moscow for three concerts. ... will fly to Prague next week ... continue its European tour.

ADVERTISED COAS
ONE OF AMER

...phony Scores Hit

Continued from First Page 6

Richard Burgin congratulating the orchestra and saying he looked forward to hearing it in Moscow.

Oistrakh played with the Boston Symphony last winter on his American tour.

The program opened with Beethoven's Third Symphony, ecstatically received by the musically highly literate audience. The galleries surrounding the glittering hall—which is more like a palace ballroom than a theatre—were crowded with students and teachers from the Leningrad conservatory.

Other cultural leaders occupied most of the ground floor seats.

The orchestra then played the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard. The severely modern work was obviously strange for a Russian audience. It had a rather mixed reception and received only scattered applause.

Munch got one bow out of it.

Critic Praises It

However, Julian Wincopf, a distinguished Soviet critic, said after the performance "the scherzo was simply wonderful. The adagio has very much poetry in it. There was a great depth of feeling and a lyrically landscaped approach to a wonderful finale which is very appropriate.

"The whole concert was very, very interesting.

"I saw Munch for the first time and must say he was the right man in the right place." Wincopf dropped into English to voice that last phrase.

Kurt Sonderling, assistant conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said "It was a wonderful concert. You heard their success. The Boston is one of the greatest and strongest orchestras in the world."

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" concluded the program and brought the greatest applause of the evening. Grigori Rabinovitch, assistant conductor of Leningrad's Kirov Opera, said he thought this was the finest number on the program.

Before the concert itself, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

Players Visited

...from the other orchestra members.

"We ought to have a student exchange program between our two countries," Karol said.

Other players of this first major western musical ensemble ever to tour the Soviet Union had similar experiences. Among them was Polish-born Concertmaster Richard Burgin who was concertmaster with the Leningrad Philharmonic 25 years ago.

Brothers in Brooklyn

"Does everyone have a brother in Brooklyn?" asked violinist Harry Ellis Dickson when he returned from a visit to a Jewish synagogue.

"Before I left home everyone told me the people would be afraid to talk. But instead everyone is besieging me with questions."

A New York-born cellist, Barnard Parronchi, expressed surprise because "no one is following us" (meaning no police).

This is the first time a large group of Westerners, many of whom speak Russian, have moved so freely among the Soviet people.

A member of the orchestra reported a conversation in which a leading member of Leningrad's cultural community finally asked him, "Tell me, what do Americans really think about Bulganin and Khrushchev?"

When the American hesitated, the Leningrader added "Come, come, I won't betray you."

Boston Symphony Scores Greatest Russian Triumph

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history tonight. An audience of 2200 applauded and cheered its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Violinist Isaac Stern, Singer Jan Peerce or any other western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, Conductor Charles Munch broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Attlee Sister Dies

SALISBURY, Eng., Sept. 6 (AP) — Miss Mary Attlee, 81, sister of former Prime Minister Clement Attlee, died today.

Los Angeles Times Sept 7, 195

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
GLOUCESTER, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 8,809

SEP 7 1956

World Ne

By UNITED PRESS

WASHINGTON—Sen. Walter F. George (D-Ga.) will open a special Senate investigation of the foreign aid program before becoming special ambassador to NATO, his office said today.

* * *

LENINGRAD—Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

* * *

CHICAGO—Adlai Stevenson said today he will make the "failure" of the Eisenhower administration to deal with the "school crisis" a major issue of his campaign.

* * *

STURGIS, Ky.—A newly formed white citizens council planned today to petition local officials to ask the Kentucky National Guard and state police "to pack up and get out" of this town which is seething with racial unrest.

Thursday night fell up to four inches of rain in some areas within a two-hour period.

* * *

PARIS—France reluctantly accepted the possibility today that it may stand alone in event of any military action in the Suez Canal zone.

* * *

DENVER—The executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People attacked President Eisenhower Thursday night for taking a "neutral position" in the violence attached to the desegregation of Southern schools.

* * *

EAST LOS ANGELES, Calif.—Hundreds of persons gathered today to view an outline, alleged to be that of the Virgin Mary, which appeared on the paper backing of a painting of Our Lady of Guadalupe.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 7 1956

Russ Cheer Symphony

LENINGRAD (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history Thursday night. An audience of 2200 applauded and cheered its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Violinist Isaac Stern, Singer Jan Peerce or any other Western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, Conductor Charles Much broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

STREETS JAMMED

It set off new uproar in the red, white and gold hall of the Leningrad Philharmonic.

Throughout the evening, streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10.)

Violinist David Oistrakh sent a telegram to Concertmaster Richard Burgin congratulating the orchestra and saying he looked forward to hearing it in Moscow.

STUDENTS CROWD HALL

Oistrakh played with the Boston Symphony last winter on his American tour.

The program opened with Beethoven's Third Symphony, estatically received by the musically highly literate audience. The galleries surrounding the glittering hall—which is more like a palace ballroom than a theater—were crowded with students and teachers from the Leningrad Conservatory.

New England Newsclip
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RI
Herald (m)
BOSTON, M
Independent Re
Circ. 134,
SEP 7

Greatest M

Lenin Abo

LENINGRA... orchestra scored ... modern history ... cheered its open...

The reception ... Western symphon... play in the Soviet ... ceeded that give... Jan Peerce or an... ern artist who has ... ly in the Soviet ...

Encore Playe

In return, Cha... conductor, broke ... rule and after ... minutes of appla... chestra in "The ... prentice."

It set off new ...

(Continued o...

...estatically recei... musically highly ... ence. The gallerie... the glittering ... more like a pa... than a theater—... with students and ... the Leningrad co...

Other cultural ... pied most of the ... seats.

PISTON SYMPHO

The orchestra th... Sixth Symphony ... Piston, professo... Harvard. The sev... work was obvious... Russian audien... rather mixed rece... ved only scatte... Munch got one bo... However, Julia... tinguished Sovi... r the perfor... scherzo was sim... adagio has ... in it. There ... h of feeling ... scaped appro... derful finale whi... propriate. The ... was very, very in...

"I saw Munch ... time and must ... right man in the ... Wincopf dropped ... to voice that las... Kurt Sonder... conductor of ... Philharmonic, sa...

New England News
Box 2078, Boston 6
Enterprise &
BROCKTO
Non-Pa
Circ.
SEP

Boston Sy Warmly At Lening

LENINGRAD

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 7 1956

Leningrad Capitulates To Hub Symphony Music

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night. The Boston was the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory.

Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

PERFORMANCE WAS TREMENDOUS

Munch opened the program with the Soviet antional anthem. He then told the audience the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company, said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad philharmonic orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow radio said the program was " a great success."

The orchestra has one more performance in Leningrad before leaving for other concerts in Moscow and Prague.

Bank Sets Example For Its Depositors

BALTIMORE — One of the tellers at the Mercantile-Safe Deposit and Trust Co. is named Mr. Thrift.

BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 - S. 247,755

SEP 1956

WORLD Wide

By THEODORE KAGHAN

Now that the Suez talks are stymied the French are reported getting jittery about carrying out their threat to use force on Egypt.

The French, it seems, were talking tough on the assumption that a war against Egypt by France and Britain would be watched from the sidelines by both the U. S. and Russia, with neither openly interfering. Now Paris isn't so certain the assumption is correct.

Even the cooperation of Britain isn't such a sure thing anymore now that the Labor Party has become so critical of the Eden government's course. The British Cabinet itself is reported split, and there is a growing opinion in Britain that the mess should go to the UN. This makes the French even more unhappy than usual.

As a matter of fact the French seem to be more unified than the British at this point, and that paradox is heightened by the fact that the Socialist leadership of France is for punching Nasser in the nose while the British Socialists are insisting there will be no violence. French socialism thus finds itself, in these days of the decline and fall of empires, allied with British conservatism.

And who's responsible for this mess? Why, the good old U.S.A. says the French press. We've betrayed our Allies. The "togetherness" of the West seems to be somewhat unbuttoned.

* * *

The Premier of Red Poland has announced that foreign correspondents can cover the Poznan trials but that foreign observers from "philanthropic-minded organizations" can go peddle th
sympathies somewhere else suggested the summary t Cyprus or the "conc camps" in Kenya points of interest.

Premier Cyrank
nounced, during liament, that agreed to al to come the thous
deported to Stalin. Up to n a taboo subjec knows where they they're doing—if they

* * *

Moscow announces it w publish John Reed's "Ten D That Shook the World," banne by Stalin because the American-born Communist author, who died two years after the Russian revolution and was buried in the Kremlin, forgot to mention Joe.

* * *

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was a smash hit at its opening performance in Leningrad last night. The audience was delighted when the boys opened with the Soviet national anthem, an unAmerican deviation one of our super-patriotic Congressional committess will undoubtedly look into later.

* * *

Egypt and Russia seem to be involved in some funny oil business. An Egyptian export company has offered both Belgium and Sweden 100,000 tons of Russian light fuel oil for 25 per cent over the going rate, to be paid in dollars or Swiss francs.

Both countries turned the offer down, but the question is, who is behind this "squeeze play"? Does Egypt own the oil, and if so, how did she get it? If not, is she fronting for the Russians trying to make a quick hard buck out of the Suez crisis? Somebody knows but nobody tells.

[141]

Leningrad Warmly Welcomes The Touring Boston Symphony

By WILLIAM J. JOR EN

Special to The New York Times.

LENINGRAD, U. S. S. R., Sept 6—The famous Boston Symphony tonight became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union.

A capacity audience of about 2,000 persons crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory to hear the Americans perform. The reception given by Leningrad officialdom and music-lovers was warm and enthusiastic. Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra, and this unaccustomed sight seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring peoples together whatever their other differences.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica."

This was followed by the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, American composer and Professor of Music at Harvard. The final selection was Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

No Russian composers were represented on the program, nor will they be in the Boston Symphony's other appearances in the Soviet Union.

"We didn't want the Russians to think we were trying to show them how to play their own music," a member of the symphony's management said.

At least one work by a contemporary American composer will be heard at each concert. The three whose works will be played here are Piston, Paul Creston and Aaron Copland.

The all-white concert hall, with massive colonnades, red velvet portieres and gold and crystal chandeliers provided an impressive setting for this first performance by a Western symphony within the borders of the Soviet Union.

Because of the relatively small size of the hall, there was unusual intimacy betwen the orchestra and the audience. The front row of seats is only six feet from the orchestra and the conductor's podium. The balcony, which was crowded with standees, surrounds the hall except for a small area just behind the center of the orchestra.

The audience w made up largely of the eli ningrad.
Only by good nyone else get ticke een sold out for Outside afterno
he w corr
a

of us who love music won't be able to hear you."

At concert time, the same sad-faced musician was stopping everyone who entered the concert hall in the hopes that one would have an extra ticket he could buy. There were many others in the same pursuit.

Before the concert began, the concertmaster of the Leningrad symphony delivered an address of welcome to Mr. Munch and his orchestra.

"We hope your tour here will be successful," the Russian said. "And we are absolutely sure that this will bring our two countries closer together."

Mr. Munch accepted two large bouquets of flowers and replied that everyone connected with the Boston Symphony was "happy and proud to be with you."

The 105-member orchestra surprised its audience by opening the program with the Soviet national anthem. There was a murmur, part amazement and part pleasure, as the audience rose to its feet. It remained standing for the American anthem.

Beethoven's symphony was received warmly, and the audience called the conductor back for four bows. But with the playing of the Ravel, the orchestra won its audience completely. Shouts of approval rang through the concert hall.

Prolonged applause and cheers led Mr. Munch to play an encore, unusual for the Boston Orchestra. It was "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," by Dukas.

The enthralled crowd stood and applauded wildly. Mr. Munch returned time and again to accept the plaudits of the audience. Even after the orchestra had left the stage, rhythmic clapping continued. Shouts of "bravo" could be heard even as the scores were being collected from the music stands.

Many Russians well known in the musical world here went backstage to offer congratulations to Mr. Munch and the musicians from Boston.

Grigoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera Company, called the performance "tremendous" and the symphony "a great organization." He said he especially enjoyed the performance of the Ravel work.

Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said the Boston orchestra had given this city a "wonderful concert."

The American orchestra will here again tomorrow then Moscow for three concerts.
to Prague next week
its European tour.

ADVERTISED COAS
ONE OF AMERI
MEN

---

phony Scores Hit

6

Continued from First Page

Richard Burgin congratulating the orchestra and saying he looked forward to hearing it in Moscow.

Oistrakh played with the Boston Symphony last winter on his American tour.

The program opened with Beethoven's Third Symphony, ecstatically received by the musically highly literate audience. The galleries surrounding the glittering hall—which is more like a palace ballroom than a theatre—were crowded with students and teachers from the Leningrad conservatory.

Other cultural leaders occupied most of the ground floor seats.

The orchestra then played the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard. The severely modern work was obviously strange for a Russian audience. It had a rather mixed reception and received only scattered applause.

Munch got one bow out of it.

Critic Praises It

However, Julian Wincopf, a distinguished Soviet critic, said after the performance "the scherzo was simply wonderful. The adagio has very much poetry in it. There was a great depth of feeling and a lyrically landscaped approach to a wonderful finale which is very appropriate.

"The whole concert was very, very interesting.

"I saw Munch for the first time and must say he was the right man in the right place." Wincopf dropped into English to voice that last phrase.

Kurt Sonderling, assistant conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said "It was a wonderful concert. You heard their success. The Boston is one of the greatest and strongest orchestras in the world."

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" concluded the program and brought the greatest applause of the evening. Grigori Rabinovitch, assistant conductor of Leningrad's Kirov Opera, said he thought this was the finest number on the program.

Before the concert itself, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

Players Visited

Proving once again that music knows no national barriers, scores of citizens of this once imperial city visited the players in their hotel rooms, invited them to their homes and engaged them in conversation in streets and theatres.

"We would never have dared to do this two years ago," said a young student of English who went to the room of viola player Robert Karol to ask for modern American paperback novels.

Karol said, "this is the kind of thing that ought to happen," and set out to round up books from the other orchestra members.

"We ought to have a student exchange program between our two countries," Karol said.

Other players of this first major western musical ensemble ever to tour the Soviet Union had similar experiences. Among them was Polish-born Concertmaster Richard Burgin who was concertmaster with the Leningrad Philharmonic 25 years ago.

Brothers in Brooklyn

"Does everyone have a brother in Brooklyn?" asked violinist Harry Ellis Dickson when he returned from a visit to a Jewish synagogue.

"Before I left home everyone told me the people would be afraid to talk. But instead everyone is besieging me with questions."

A New York-born cellist, Barnard Parronchi, expressed surprise because "no one is following us" (meaning no police).

This is the first time a large group of Westerners, many of whom speak Russian, have moved so freely among the Soviet people.

A member of the orchestra reported a conversation in which a leading member of Leningrad's cultural community finally asked him, "Tell me, what do Americans really think about Bulganin and Khrushchev?"

When the American hesitated, the Leningrader added, "Come, come, I won't betray you."

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history tonight. An audience of 2200 applauded and cheered its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Violinist Isaac Stern, Singer Jan Peerce or any other western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, Conductor Charles Munch broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Attlee Sister Dies

SALISBURY, Eng., Sept. 6 (AP) — Miss Mary Attlee, 81, sister of former Prime Minister Clement Attlee, died today.

Los Angeles Times
Sept 7, 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
GLOUCESTER, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 8,809

SEP 7 1956

World N

By UNITED PRESS

WASHINGTON—Sen. Walter F. George (D-Ga.) will open a special Senate investigation of the foreign aid program before becoming special ambassador to NATO, his office said today.

* * *

LENINGRAD—Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

* * *

CHICAGO—Adlai Stevenson said today he will make the "failure" of the Eisenhower administration to deal with the "school crisis" a major issue of his campaign.

* * *

STURGIS, Ky.—A newly formed white citizens council planned today to petition local officials to ask the Kentucky National Guard and state police "to pack up and get out" of this town which is seething with racial unrest.

Thursday night
ches of rain in some areas within two-hour period.

* * *

PARIS—France reluctantly a cepted the possibility today that may stand alone in event of a military action in the Suez Can zone.

* * *

DENVER—The executive secr tary of the National Association f the Advancement of Colored Pe ple attacked President Eisenhow Thursday night for taking a "ne tral position" in the violence a tached to the desegregation
Southern schools.

* * *

EAST LOS ANGELES, Calif
Hundreds of persons gathered tod to view an outline, alleged to that of the Virgin Mary, which peared on the paper backing of painting of Our Lady of Guadalu

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 7 1956

Leningrad Capitulates To Hub Symphony Music

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night. The Boston was the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

SEP 7 1956

Russ Cheer Symphony

LENINGRAD (AP)—The Bo ton Symphony Orchestra scor
the greatest musical triumph
Leningrad's modern histo
Thursday night. An audience 2200 applauded and cheered opening concert of a Russian to for half an hour.

The reception for the fi western symphony orchestra play in the Soviet Union far e ceeded that given Violinist Isa Stern, Singer Jan Peerce or a other Western artist who h appeared lately in the Sov Union.

In return, Conductor Char Much broke a no-encore rule a after a stormy eight minutes applause led the orchestra
"The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

STREETS JAMMED

It set off new uproar in t red, white and gold hall of t Leningrad Philharmonic.

Throughout the evening, stree outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10.)

Violinist David Oistrakh sent a telegram to Concertmaster Richard Burgin congratulating the orchestra and saying he looked forward to hearing it in Moscow.

STUDENTS CROWD HALL

Oistrakh played with the Boston Symphony last winter on his American tour.

The program opened with Beethoven's Third Symphony, estatically received by the musically highly literate audience. The galleries surrounding the glittering hall—which is more like a palace ballroom than a theater—were crowded with students and teachers from the Leningrad Conservatory.

SEP 7

Greatest Music

Lening About

By ST

LENINGRAD, Se orchestra scored the g modern history tonight cheered its opening co
The reception for th
Western symphony orch play in the Soviet Union ceeded that given Isaac Jan Peerce or any othe ern artist who has appea ly in the Soviet Union.

Encore Played

In return, Charles M conductor, broke a no rule and after a st minutes of applause le chestra in "The Sorce prentice."

It set off new upro

Continued on Page

ecstatically received musically highly litera ence. The galleries su the glittering hall—
more like a palace than a theater—were with students and teach the Leningrad conserv
Other cultural leade pied most of the grou
seats.

PISTON SYMPHONY

The orchestra then pl
Sixth Symphony of Piston, professor of m Harvard. The severely work was obviously str Russian audience. It rather mixed reception received only scattered Munch got one bow out However, Julian Wi distinguished Soviet cri
the performance scherzo was simply wo adagio has very mu in it. There was of feeling and a landscaped approach to wonderful finale which is v appropriate. The whole was very, very interestin
"I saw Munch for t time and must say he right man in the right Wincopf dropped into voice that last phrase Kurt Sonderling, conductor of the Le Philharmonic, said "It

New England Newsclip Age
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmo

Enterprise & Time
BROCKTON, M
Non-Partisan
Circ. 42,005

SEP 7

Boston Symp Warmly Gree At Leningrad

LENINGRAD. — (UP)

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory.

Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

PERFORMANCE WAS TREMENDOUS

Munch opened the program with the Soviet antional anthem. He then told the audience the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company, said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad philharmonic orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow radio said the program was " a great success."

The orchestra has one more performance in Leningrad before leaving for other concerts in Moscow and Prague.

Bank Sets Example For Its Depositors

BALTIMORE — One of the tellers at the Mercantile-Safe Deposit and Trust Co. is named Mr. Thrift.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,581 - S. 247,755

SEP 7 1956

WORLD Wide

By THEODORE KAGHAN

Now that the Suez talks are stymied the French are reported getting jittery about carrying out their threat to use force on Egypt.

The French, it seems, were talking tough on the assumption that a war against Egypt by France and Britain would be watched from the sidelines by both the U. S. and Russia, with neither openly interfering. Now Paris isn't so certain the assumption is correct.

Even the cooperation of Britain isn't such a sure thing anymore now that the Labor Party has become so critical of the Eden government's course. The British Cabinet itself is reported split, and there is a growing opinion in Britain that the mess should go to the UN. This makes the French even more unhappy than usual.

As a matter of fact the French seem to be more unified than the British at this point, and that paradox is heightened by the fact that the Socialist leadership of France is for punching Nasser in the nose while the British Socialists are insisting there will be no violence. French socialism thus finds itself, in these days of the decline and fall of empires, allied with British conservatism.

And who's responsible for this mess? Why, the good old U.S.A., says the French press. We've betrayed our Allies. The "togetherness" of the West seems to be somewhat unbuttoned.

* * *

The Premier of Red Poland has announced that foreign correspondents can cover the Poznan trials but that foreign observers from "philanthropic-minded organizations" can go peddle their sympathies somewhere else. He suggested the summary trials in Cyprus or the "concentration camps" in Kenya as possible points of interest.

Premier Cyrankiewicz also announced, during a speech to Parliament, that the Russians had agreed to allow a Polish mission to come in and help repatriate the thousands of missing Poles deported to the Soviet Union by Stalin. Up to now this has been a taboo subject and nobody knows where they are or what they're doing—if they're alive.

* * *

Moscow announces it will republish John Reed's "Ten Days That Shook the World," banned by Stalin because the American-born Communist author, who died two years after the Russian revolution and was buried in the Kremlin, forgot to mention Joe.

* * *

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was a smash hit at its opening performance in Leningrad last night. The audience was delighted when the boys opened with the Soviet national anthem, an unAmerican deviation one of our super-patriotic Congressional committess will undoubtedly look into later.

* * *

Egypt and Russia seem to be involved in some funny oil business. An Egyptian export company has offered both Belgium and Sweden 100,000 tons of Russian light fuel oil for 25 per cent over the going rate, to be paid in dollars or Swiss francs.

Both countries turned the offer down, but the question is, who is behind this "squeeze play"? Does Egypt own the oil, and if so, how did she get it? If not, is she fronting for the Russians trying to make a quick hard buck out of the Suez crisis? Somebody knows but nobody tells.

[141]

~~TIMES~~
NEW YORK ~~HERALD TRIBUNE~~ TIMES - September 7, 1956

Leningrad Warmly Welcomes The Touring Boston Symphony

By WILLIAM J. JOE EN

Special to The New York Times.

LENINGRAD, U. S. S. R., Sept 6—The famous Boston Symphony tonight became the first American orchestra to play inside the Soviet Union.

A capacity audience of about 2,000 persons crowded into the concert hall of the Leningrad Conservatory to hear the Americans perform. The reception given by Leningrad officialdom and music-lovers was warm and enthusiastic. Soviet and United States flags were grouped together above the orchestra, and this unaccustomed sight seemed to symbolize the power of great music to bring peoples together whatever their other differences.

Charles Munch led his world-famous musical group through a varied program. The first selection was Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica."

This was followed by the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, American composer and Professor of Music at Harvard. The final selection was Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

No Russian composers were represented on the program, nor will they be in the Boston Symphony's other appearances in the Soviet Union.

"We didn't want the Russians to think we were trying to show them how to play their own music," a member of the symphony's management said.

At least one work by a contemporary American composer will be heard at each concert. The three whose works will be played here are Piston, Paul Creston and Aaron Copland.

The all-white concert hall, with massive colonnades, red velvet portieres and gold and crystal chandeliers provided an impressive setting for this first performance by a Western symphony within the borders of the Soviet Union.

Because of the relatively small size of the hall, there was unusual intimacy betwen the orchestra and the audience. The front row of seats is only six feet from the orchestra and the conductor's podium. The balcony, which was crowded with standees, surrounds the hall except for a small area just behind the center of the orchestra.

The audience was made up largely of the elite of Leningrad. Only by good luck could anyone else get tickets, which had been sold out for days.

Outside the concert hall this afternoon, one Russian, who said he was a pianist, stopped this correspondent thinking he was a member of the orchestra.

"Why don't you play more concerts here?" he asked. "Many of us who love music won't be able to hear you."

At concert time, the same sad-faced musician was stopping everyone who entered the concert hall in the hopes that one would have an extra ticket he could buy. There were many others in the same pursuit.

Before the concert began, the concertmaster of the Leningrad symphony delivered an address of welcome to Mr. Munch and his orchestra.

"We hope your tour here will be successful," the Russian said. "And we are absolutely sure that this will bring our two countries closer together."

Mr. Munch accepted two large bouquets of flowers and replied that everyone connected with the Boston Symphony was "happy and proud to be with you."

The 105-member orchestra surprised its audience by opening the program with the Soviet national anthem. There was a murmur, part amazement and part pleasure, as the audience rose to its feet. It remained standing for the American anthem.

Beethoven's symphony was received warmly, and the audience called the conductor back for four bows. But with the playing of the Ravel, the orchestra won its audience completely. Shouts of approval rang through the concert hall.

Prolonged applause and cheers led Mr. Munch to play an encore, unusual for the Boston Orchestra. It was "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," by Dukas.

The enthralled crowd stood and applauded wildly. Mr. Munch returned time and again to accept the plaudits of the audience. Even after the orchestra had left the stage, rhythmic clapping continued. Shouts of "bravo" could be heard even as the scores were being collected from the music stands.

Many Russians well known in the musical world here went backstage to offer congratulations to Mr. Munch and the musicians from Boston.

Grigoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera Company, called the performance "tremendous" and the symphony "a great organization." He said he especially enjoyed the performance of the Ravel work.

Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said the Boston orchestra had given this city a "wonderful concert."

The American orchestra will play here again tomorrow then go to Moscow for three concerts. It will fly to Prague next week to continue its European tour.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

SEP 7 1956

Hub Symphony Gets Big Russian Ovation

By STANLEY JOHNSON

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history tonight. An audience of 2200 applauded and cheered for half an hour its opening concert of a Russian tour.

The reception for the first western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given violinist Isaac Stern, singer Jan Peerce or any other western artist who has appeared there lately.

In return, Conductor Charles Munch broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

It set off new uproar in the red, white and gold hall of the Leningrad Philharmonic.

Moscow Wire

Throughout the evening, streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10).

Violinist David Oistrakh sent a telegram to concertmaster

Continued on Page 25

seats.

The orchestra then played the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard. The severely modern work was obviously strange for a Russian audience. It had a rather mixed reception and received only scattered applause.

Munch got one bow out of it.

Critic Praises It

However, Julian Wincopf, a distinguished Soviet critic, said after the performance "the scherzo was simply wonderful. The adagio has very much poetry in it. There was a great depth of feeling and a lyrically landscaped approach to a wonderful finale which is very appropriate.

"The whole concert was very, very interesting.

"I saw Munch for the first time and must say he was the right man in the right place." Wincopf dropped into English to voice that last phrase.

Kurt Sonderling, assistant conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said "It was a wonderful concert. You heard their success. The Boston is one of the greatest and strongest orchestras in the world."

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" concluded the program and brought the greatest applause of the evening. Grigori Rabinovitch, assistant conductor of Leningrad's Kirov Opera, said he thought this was the finest number on the program.

Before the concert itself, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

A New York-born cellist, Barnard Parronchi, expressed surprise because "no one is following us" (meaning no police).

This is the first time a large group of Westerners, many of whom speak Russian, have moved so freely among the Soviet people.

A member of the orchestra reported a conversation in which a leading member of Leningrad's cultural community finally asked him, "Tell me, what do Americans really think about Bulganin and Khrushchev?"

When the American hesitated, the Leningrader added, "Come, come, I won't betray you."

Boston Symphony Scores Greatest Russian Triumph

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history tonight. An audience of 2200 applauded and cheered its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Violinist Isaac Stern, Singer Jan Peerce or any other western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, Conductor Charles Munch broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Attlee Sister Dies

SALISBURY, Eng., Sept. 6 (AP) — Miss Mary Attlee, 81, sister of former Prime Minister Clement Attlee, died today.

~~Los Angeles~~
Times
Sept 7, 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
GLOUCESTER, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 8,809

SEP 7 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 7 1956

Russ Cheer Symphony

LENINGRAD (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history Thursday night. An audience of 2200 applauded and cheered its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Violinist Isaac Stern, Singer Jan Peerce or any other Western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, Conductor Charles Much broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

STREETS JAMMED

It set off new uproar in the red, white and gold hall of the Leningrad Philharmonic.

Throughout the evening, streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40

BOSTON DAILY RECORD

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

SEP 7 1956

Greatest Musical

Leningr About

By STAN

LENINGRAD, Sept. orchestra scored the greate modern history tonight. A cheered its opening concert

The reception for the Western symphony orchestra play in the Soviet Union far ceeded that given Isaac Ste Jan Peerce or any other We ern artist who has appeared l ly in the Soviet Union.

Encore Played

In return, Charles Munch conductor, broke a no-en rule and after a stormy minutes of applause led the chestra in "The Sorcerer's prentice."

It set off new uproar i

Continued on Page Ni

ecstatically received by musically highly literate a ence. The galleries surround the glittering hall—which more like a palace ballro than a theater—were crow with students and teachers fr the Leningrad conservatory, other cultural leaders oc most of the ground f

TON SYMPHONY

The orchestra then played th Symphony of Wa ton, professor of music rvard. The severely mod rk was obviously strange Russian audience. It had rather mixed reception and ceived only scattered applau Munch got one bow out of it.

However, Julian Wincopf, distinguished Soviet critic, after the performance "T scherzo was simply wonder The adagio has very much p try in it. There was a gr depth of feeling and a lyric landscaped approach to a w derful finale which is very propriate. The whole con was very, very interesting.

"I saw Munch for the f time and must say he was right man in the right plac Wincopf dropped into Eng to voice that last phrase.

Kurt Sonderling, assist conductor of the Lening Philharmonic, said "It wa

---

World News Briefs

By UNITED PRESS

WASHINGTON—Sen. Walter F. George (D-Ga.) will open a special Senate investigation of the foreign aid program before becoming special ambassador to NATO, his office said today.

* * *

LENINGRAD—Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

* * *

CHICAGO—Adlai Stevenson said today he will make the "failure" of the Eisenhower administration to deal with the "school crisis" a major issue of his campaign.

* * *

STURGIS, Ky.—A newly formed white citizens council planned today to petition local officials to ask the Kentucky National Guard and state police "to pack up and get out" of this town which is seething with racial unrest.

BOSTON — A storm that swept through southern New England Thursday night left up to four inches of rain in some areas within a two-hour period.

* * *

PARIS—France reluctantly accepted the possibility today that it may stand alone in event of any military action in the Suez Canal zone.

* * *

DENVER—The executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People attacked President Eisenhower Thursday night for taking a "neutral position" in the violence attached to the desegregation of Southern schools.

* * *

EAST LOS ANGELES, Calif.—Hundreds of persons gathered today to view an outline, alleged to be that of the Virgin Mary, which appeared on the paper backing of a painting of Our Lady of Guadalupe.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 7 1956

Leningrad Capitulates To Hub Symphony Music

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night. The Boston was the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory.

Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

PERFORMANCE WAS TREMENDOUS

Munch opened the program with the Soviet antional anthem. He then told the audience the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company, said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad philharmonic orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow radio said the program was " a great success."

The orchestra has one more performance in Leningrad before leaving for other concerts in Moscow and Prague.

Bank Sets Example For Its Depositors

BALTIMORE — One of the tellers at the Mercantile-Safe Deposit and Trust Co. is named Mr. Thrift.

New England Newsclip Agency,
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-

Enterprise & Times (
BROCKTON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 42,005

SEP 7 195

Boston Sympho Warmly Greete At Leningrad

LENINGRAD — (UP) —

The FBI's thorough methods: The old Charles Mattson (in 1936) has The FBI has interrogated over the G-men are still working on it. tistic explains why law-enforcers rime is committed in the U. S.

sky-blue eyes reflect her sunny attended a ceremony honoring rshall. A speaker heaped tribute a small pyramid of superlatives.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

SEP 7 1956

Greatest Musical Triumph

Leningrad Wild About Symphony

By STANLEY JOHNSON

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Boston Symphony orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history tonight. An audience of 2,200 applauded and cheered its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first Western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given Isaac Stern, Jan Peerce or any other Western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

Encore Played

In return, Charles Munch, the conductor, broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

It set off new uproar in the

(Continued on Page Nine)

... Symphony, ecstatically received by the musically highly literate audience. The galleries surrounding the glittering hall—which is more like a palace ballroom than a theater—were crowded with students and teachers from the Leningrad conservatory.

Other cultural leaders occupied most of the ground floor seats.

PISTON SYMPHONY

The orchestra then played the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard. The severely modern work was obviously strange for a Russian audience. It had a rather mixed reception and received only scattered applause. Munch got one bow out of it.

However, Julian Wincopf, a distinguished Soviet critic, said after the performance "The scherzo was simply wonderful. The adagio has very much power in it. There was a great depth of feeling and a lyrically landscaped approach to a wonderful finale which is very appropriate. The whole concert was very, very interesting.

"I saw Munch for the first time and must say he was the right man in the right place." Wincopf dropped into English to voice that last phrase.

Kurt Sonderling, assistant conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said "It was a ... one of the greatest and strongest orchestras in the world."

GREATEST APPLAUSE

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" concluded the program and brought the greatest applause of the evening. Grigori Rabinovitch, assistant conductor of Leningrad's Kirov Opera, said he thought this was the finest number on the program.

Before the concert itself, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

Proving once again that music knows no national barriers, scores of citizens of this once imperial city visited the players in their hotel rooms, invited them to their homes and engaged them in conversation in streets and theaters.

Paperback Novels

"We would never have dared to do this two years ago," said a young student of English who went to the room of viola player Robert Karol to ask for modern American paperback novels.

Nº de débit ....
INTERNATIONAL PRESS
CUTTING BUREAU

PARIS-NORMANDIE
ROUEN

+767 8 SEPTEMBRE 1956

Dirigé par Charles Münch

l'orchestre symphonique de Boston

obtient un succès triomphal à Léningrad

Le célèbre chef d'orchestre Charles Münch, qui dirigeait, hier soir, l'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston, a obtenu un succès sans précédent. C'était le premier concert joué en U.R.S.S. par un orchestre américain. Deux mille amateurs de musique emplissaient la grande salle du Conservatoire de Leningrad, qui avait été décorée de drapeaux soviétiques et américains. Le programme comprenait la Symphonie Héroïque, de Beethoven ; la Sixième Symphonie, du compositeur américain Walter Piston et la Suite de Daphnis et Chloé, de Ravel. Cette dernière pièce déchaîna un enthousiasme délirant. Münch a alors exécuté hors programme, L'Apprenti Sorcier, de Paul Dukas.

L'Orchestre de Boston est venu en U.R.S.S. dans le cadre des échanges culturels soviéto-américains, avec deux chefs d'orchestre français, Charles Münch et Pierre Monteux, qui alterneront au pupitre. L'Orchestre de Boston donnera un deuxième concert à Leningrad vendredi soir, puis il se rendra à Moscou, où il se fera entendre samedi et dimanche.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON, D. C.
NEWS
Circ. D. 166,814

SEP 7 1956

Leningrad Hails Boston Symphony

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (UP)—Two thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Poston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Duka's Sorcerer's Apprentice.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 27,830

SEP 7 1956

Enthusiastic Russians Cheer Boston Symphony

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston symphony orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Poston's sixth symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall Conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from
South China Morning Post, Hong Kong

Russians Applaud Boston Symphony

Leningrad, Sept. 7.

Some 2,000 enthusiastic music-lovers thundered applause last night for the first concert here of the Boston Symphony—the first foreign orchestra of its kind that has performed here since the revolution.

Hundreds of Russians who had been unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled around outside the conservatory, offering more fortunate music-lovers fantastic prices for their seats.—United Press.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

SEP 8 1956

SOVIET AUDIENCE APPLAUDS BOSTON SYMPHONY MUSIC

Hundreds of Russians Unable to Obtain Tickets — Conductor Takes Four Bows

Leningrad, Sept. 8—Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four ...

Failure to Include
Shrimp in Recipe
Causes Red Faces

aren Return

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 53,259

SEP 7 1956

Leningrad Vigorously Cheers Boston Symphony's Concert

Leningrad — (Reuters) — More than 2,000 persons packed Leningrad's Concert Hall last night and gave a rapturous reception to Conductor Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American orchestra ever to perform in the Soviet Union.

At the completion of the program, consisting of Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite Number two, there was prolonged applause.

The warmth of the reception persuaded Mr. Munch to give an encore, Dukas' "Sorceror's Apprentice." This was received with excited cheering and bravoes. Applause continued after the orchestra had left the stage.

No Russian composers' works were used last night, nor will any be included in the Boston Symphony's second concert here tonight or in Moscow on the weekend.

Two other American composers to figure in subsequent concerts are Paul Creston and Aaron Copland.

The Leningrad Concert Hall, with its great colonnades, red velvet drapings and gold chandeliers, provided a spectacular background for the 105-piece symphony. American and Soviet flags signalized the special occasion.

Many Russians went backstage afterwards to congratulate the orchestra. Gregoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera, said the performance was "tremendous," and the symphony a "great organization."

Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Symphony, said the Boston orchestra had given his city "a wonderful concert."

Before the concert began, the Leningrad Symphony's concertmaster delivered an address of welcome. He said: "We hope your tour is successful and we are absolutely sure it will bring our two countries closer together."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 42,005

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Warmly Greeted At Leningrad

LENINGRAD. — (UP) — Two thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Poston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

The orchestra has one more performance in Leningrad before leaving for other concerts in Moscow and Prague.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
TIMES
Circ. D. 97,994 - S. 94,745

SEP 7 1956

Two-thousand enthusiastic Leningrad music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard in Russia since before the Revolution. Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does. After playing Walter Poston's sixth symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal (e)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 9,091

SEP 7 1956

Russians Give Boston Symphony Great Reception

) — Two-thousand music lovers ... Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall Conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow Radio said the program was "a great success."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

SEP 7 1956

Thousands Cheer Boston Symphony In Leningrad

Leningrad—(UP)—Two thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Poston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Duka's Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

• • •

HUNDREDS OF RUSSIANS unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

• • •

GRIGORY RABINOVICH, conductor of the Korov Opera Company said the performance was "tremendous."

Reds Cheer Boston Symphony As Tour Opens in Leningrad

(Continued from First Page)

red, white and gold hall of the Leningrad Philharmonic.

Throughout the evening, streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10).

David Oistrakh, violinist, sent a telegram to his concertmaster, Richard Burgin, congratulating the orchestra and saying he looked forward to hearing it in Moscow.

Oistrakh played with the Boston Symphony last winter on his American tour.

The program opened with Beethoven's Third Symphony, ecstatically received by the musically highly literate audience. The galleries surrounding the glittering hall—which is more like a palace ballroom than a theater—were crowded with students and teachers from the Leningrad conservatory.

Other cultural leaders occupied most of the ground floor seats.

PISTON SYMPHONY

The orchestra then played the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard. The severely modern work was obviously strange for a Russian audience. It had a rather mixed reception and received only scattered applause. Munch got one bow out of it.

However, Julian Wincopf, a distinguished Soviet critic, said after the performance "The scherzo was simply wonderful. The adagio has very much poetry in it. There was a great depth of feeling and a lyrically landscaped approach to a wonderful finale which is very appropriate. The whole concert was very, very interesting.

"I saw Munch for the first time and must say he was the right man in the right place." Wincopf dropped into English to voice that last phrase.

Kurt Sonderling, assistant conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said "It was a wonderful concert. You heard their success. The Boston is one of the greatest and strongest orchestras in the world."

GREATEST APPLAUSE

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" concluded the program and brought the greatest applause of the evening. Grigori Rabinovitch, assistant conductor of Leningrad's Kirov Opera, said he thought this was the finest number on the program.

Before the concert itself, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

Proving once again that music knows no national barriers, scores of citizens of this once imperial city visited the players in their hotel rooms, invited them to their homes and engaged them in conversation in streets and theaters.

Paperback Novels

"We would never have dared to do this two years ago," said a young student of English who went to the room of viola player Robert Karol to ask for modern American paperback novels.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 42,005

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Warmly Greeted At Leningrad

LENINGRAD. — (UP) — Two thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a ~~thunderous reception~~ last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Poston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

The orchestra has one more performance in Leningrad before leaving for other concerts in Moscow and Prague.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from
South China Morning Post; Hong Kong

Russians Applaud Boston Symphony

Leningrad, Sept. 7.

Some 2,000 enthusiastic music-lovers thundered applause last night for the first concert here of the Boston Symphony—the first foreign orchestra of its kind that has performed here since the revolution.

Hundreds of Russians who had been unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled around outside the conservatory, offering more fortunate music-lovers fantastic prices for their seats.—United Press.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
TIMES
Circ. D. 97,994 - S. 94,745

SEP 7 1956

Two-thousand enthusiastic Leningrad music lovers gave the Boston [illegible]tra [illegible] night [illegible]phony heard in Russia since before the Revolution. Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does. After playing Walter Poston's sixth symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave [illegible] unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

Nº de débit

INTERNATIONAL PRESS
CUTTING BUREAU

PARIS-NORMANDIE
ROUEN

+767 8 SEPTEMBRE 1956

Dirigé par Charles Münch
l'orchestre symphonique de Boston
obtient un succès triomphal à Léningrad

Le célèbre chef d'orchestre Charles Münch, qui dirigeait, hier soir, l'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston, a obtenu un succès sans précédent. C'était le premier concert joué en U.R.S.S. par un orchestre américain. Deux mille amateurs de musique emplissaient la grande salle du Conservatoire de Leningrad, qui avait été décorée de drapeaux soviétiques et américains. Le programme comprenait la Symphonie Héroïque, de Beethoven; la Sixième Symphonie, du compositeur américain Walter Piston et la Suite de Daphnis et Chloé, de Ravel. Cette dernière pièce déchaîna un enthousiasme délirant. Münch a alors exécuté hors programme, L'Apprenti Sorcier, de Paul Dukas.

L'Orchestre de Boston est venu en U.R.S.S. dans le cadre des échanges culturels soviéto-américains, avec deux chefs d'orchestre français, Charles Münch et Pierre Monteux, qui alterneront au pupitre. L'Orchestre de Boston donnera un deuxième concert à Leningrad vendredi soir, puis il se rendra à Moscou, où il se fera entendre samedi et dimanche.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

SEP 8 1956

SOVIET AUDIENCE APPLAUDS BOSTON SYMPHONY MUSIC

Hundreds of Russians Unable to Obtain Tickets — Conductor Takes Four Bows

Leningrad, Sept. 8—Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica 3rd Symphony and was unable to resist demands for an encore, something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall conservatory.

SEP 7 1956

Russians Give Boston Symphony Great Reception

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall Conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow Radio said the program was "a great success."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON, D. C.
NEWS
Circ. D. 166,814

SEP 7 1956

Leningrad Hails Boston Symphony

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (UP)—Two thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Poston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Duka's Sorcerer's Apprentice.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 53,259

SEP 7 1956

Leningrad Vigorously Cheers Boston Symphony's Concert

Leningrad — (Reuters) — More than 2,000 persons packed Leningrad's Concert Hall last night and gave a rapturous reception to Conductor Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American orchestra ever to perform in the Soviet Union.

At the completion of the program, consisting of Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite Number two, there was prolonged applause.

The warmth of the reception persuaded Mr. Munch to give an encore, Dukas' "Sorceror's Apprentice." This was received with excited cheering and bravoes. Applause continued after the orchestra had left the stage.

No Russian composers' works were used last night, nor will any be included in the Boston Symphony's second concert here tonight or in Moscow on the weekend.

Two other American composers to figure in subsequent concerts are Paul Creston and Aaron Copland.

The Leningrad Concert Hall, with its great colonnades, red velvet drapings and gold chandeliers, provided a spectacular background for the 105-piece symphony. American and Soviet flags signalized the special occasion.

Many Russians went backstage afterwards to congratulate the orchestra. Gregoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera, said the performance was "tremendous," and the symphony a "great organization."

Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Symphony, said the Boston orchestra had given his city "a wonderful concert."

Before the concert began, the Leningrad Symphony's concertmaster delivered an address of welcome. He said: "We hope your tour is successful and we are absolutely sure it will bring our two countries closer together."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 27,830

SEP 7 1956

Enthusiastic Russians Cheer Boston Symphony

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston symphony orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Poston's sixth symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall Conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

SEP 7 1956

Thousands Cheer Boston Symphony In Leningrad

Leningrad—(UP)—Two thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra ~~a thunderous reception~~ last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Poston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Duka's Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

* * *

HUNDREDS OF RUSSIANS unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

* * *

GRIGORY RABINOVICH, conductor of the Korov Opera Company said the performance was "tremendous."

Reds Cheer Boston Symphony As Tour Opens in Leningrad

(Continued from First Page)

red. white and gold hall of the Leningrad Philharmonic.

Throughout the evening, streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10).

David Oistrakh, violinist, sent a telegram to his concertmaster, Richard Burgir, congratulating the orchestra and saying he looked forward to hearing it in Moscow.

Oistrakh played with the Boston Symphony last winter on his American tour.

The program opened with Beethoven's Third Symphony, ecstatically received by the musically highly literate audience. The galleries surrounding the glittering hall—which is more like a palace ballroom than a theater—were crowded with students and teachers from the Leningrad conservatory.

Other cultural leaders occupied most of the ground floor seats.

PISTON SYMPHONY

The orchestra then played the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard. The severely modern work was obviously strange for a Russian audience. It had a rather mixed reception and received only scattered applause. Munch got one bow out of it.

However, Julian Wincopf, a distinguished Soviet critic, said after the performance "The scherzo was simply wonderful. The adagio has very much power in it. There was a great depth of feeling and a lyrically landscaped approach to a wonderful finale which is very appropriate. The whole concert was very, very interesting.

"I saw Munch for the first time and must say he was the right man in the right place." Wincopf dropped into English voice that last phrase.

Kurt Sonderling, assistant conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic, said "It was a wonderful concert. You heard their success. The Boston is one of the greatest and strongest orchestras in the world."

GREATEST APPLAUSE

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" concluded the program and brought the greatest applause of the evening. Grigori Rabinovitch, assistant conducter of Leningrad's Kirov Opera, said he thought this was the finest number on the program.

Before the concert itself, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

Proving once again that music knows no national barriers, scores of citizens of this once imperial city visited the players in their hotel rooms, invited them to their homes and engaged them in conversation in streets and theaters.

Paperback Novels

"We would never have dared to do this two years ago," said a young student of English who went to the room of viola player Robert Karol to ask for modern American paperback novels.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 42,005

SEP 7 1956

Boston Symphony Warmly Greeted At Leningrad

LENINGRAD. — (UP) — Two thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Poston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

The orchestra has one more performance in Leningrad before leaving for other concerts in Moscow and Prague.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from
South China Morning Post, Hong Kong

Russians Applaud Boston Symphony

Leningrad, Sept. 7.

Some 2,000 enthusiastic music-lovers thundered applause last night for the first concert here of the Boston Symphony—the first foreign orchestra of its kind that has performed here since the revolution.

Hundreds of Russians who had been unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled around outside the conservatory, offering more fortunate music-lovers fantastic prices for their seats.—United Press.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
TIMES
Circ. D. 97,994 - S. 94,745

SEP 7 1956

Two - thousand enthusiastic Leningrad music lovers gave the Boston [illegible] tra a [illegible] night [illegible] phony heard in Russia since before the Revolution. Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does. After playing Walter Poston's sixth symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

N° de débit..........
INTERNATIONAL PRESS
CUTTING BUREAU
PARIS-NORMANDIE
ROUEN

+767 8 SEPTEMBRE 1956

Dirigé par Charles Münch l'orchestre symphonique de Boston obtient un succès triomphal à Léningrad

Le célèbre chef d'orchestre Charles Münch, qui dirigeait, hier soir, l'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston, a obtenu un succès sans précédent. C'était le premier concert joué en U.R.S.S. par un orchestre américain. Deux mille amateurs de musique emplissaient la grande salle du Conservatoire de Leningrad, qui avait été décorée de drapeaux soviétiques et américains. Le programme comprenait la Symphonie Héroïque, de Beethoven ; la Sixième Symphonie, du compositeur américain Walter Piston et la Suite de Daphnis et Chloé, de Ravel. Cette dernière pièce déchaîna un enthousiasme délirant. Münch a alors exécuté hors programme, L'Apprenti Sorcier, de Paul Dukas.

L'Orchestre de Boston est venu en U.R.S.S. dans le cadre des échanges culturels soviéto-américains, avec deux chefs d'orchestre français, Charles Münch et Pierre Monteux, qui alterneront au pupitre. L'Orchestre de Boston donnera un deuxième concert à Leningrad vendredi soir, puis il se rendra à Moscou, où il se fera entendre samedi et dimanche.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

SEP 8 1956

SOVIET AUDIENCE APPLAUDS BOSTON SYMPHONY MUSIC

Hundreds of Russians Unable to Obtain Tickets — Conductor Takes Four Bows

Leningrad, Sept. 8—Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took

Failure to Include
Shrimp in Recipe
Causes Red Faces

aren Return

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal (e)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 9,091

SEP 7 1956

Russians Give Boston Symphony Great Reception

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall Conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow Radio said the program was "a great success."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON, D. C.
NEWS
Circ. D. 166,814

SEP 7 1956

Leningrad Hails Boston Symphony

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (UP)—Two thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Poston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Duka's Sorcerer's Apprentice.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 53,259

SEP 7 1956

Leningrad Vigorously Cheers Boston Symphony's Concert

Leningrad — (Reuters) — More than 2,000 persons packed Leningrad's Concert Hall last night and gave a rapturous reception to Conductor Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American orchestra ever to perform in the Soviet Union.

At the completion of the program, consisting of Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, the Sixth Symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite Number two, there was prolonged applause.

The warmth of the reception persuaded Mr. Munch to give an encore, Dukas' "Sorceror's Apprentice." This was received with excited cheering and bravoes. Applause continued after the orchestra had left the stage.

No Russian composers' works were used last night, nor will any be included in the Boston Symphony's second concert here tonight or in Moscow on the weekend.

Two other American composers to figure in subsequent concerts are Paul Creston and Aaron Copland.

The Leningrad Concert Hall, with its great colonnades, red velvet drapings and gold chandeliers, provided a spectacular background for the 105-piece symphony. American and Soviet flags signalized the special occasion.

Many Russians went backstage afterwards to congratulate the orchestra. Gregoriev Rabinovich, conductor of the Kirov Opera, said the performance was "tremendous," and the symphony a "great organization."

Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Symphony, said the Boston orchestra had given his city "a wonderful concert."

Before the concert began, the Leningrad Symphony's concertmaster delivered an address of welcome. He said: "We hope your tour is successful and we are absolutely sure it will bring our two countries closer together."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 27,830

SEP 7 1956

Enthusiastic Russians Cheer Boston Symphony

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston symphony orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Poston's sixth symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall Conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

SEP 7 1956

Thousands Cheer Boston Symphony In Leningrad

Leningrad—(UP)—Two thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Poston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Duka's Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

• • •

HUNDREDS OF RUSSIANS unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned great hall conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

• • •

GRIGORY RABINOVICH, conductor of the Korov Opera Company said the performance was "tremendous."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Chronicle (e)
WILLIMANTIC, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 5,700

SEP 7 1956

LENINGRAD UP — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica 3rd Symphony and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
JAMAICA, N. Y.
Long Island Press
Circ. D. 241,168 - S. 286,771

SEP 7 1956

Russians Laud Boston Symphony

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception last night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica and was unable to resist demands for an encore—something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Cloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble columned Great Hall Conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow radio said the program was "a great success."

C.C.P. Paris 5462-57 - Tél. OPE 26.21 à 23
Le Libre Poitou - Poitiers

4767 — 8 SEPT 1956

L'orchestre de Boston, dirigé par Charles Munch obtient un succès triomphal à Leningrad

27

Leningrad. — Le célèbre chef d'orchestre Charles Munch, qui dirigeait hier soir l'orchestre symphonique de Boston, a obtenu un succès sans précédent. C'était le premier concert joué en U.R.S.S. par un orchestre américain. Deux mille amateurs de musique emplissaient la grande salle du conservatoire de Leningrad.

L'orchestre de Boston est venu en U.R.S.S. dans le cadre des échanges culturels soviéto-américains, avec deux chefs d'orchestre français, Charles Munch et Pierre Monteux, qui alterneront au pupitre. L'orchestre de Boston se rendra à Moscou où il se fera entendre samedi et dimanche.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
NEWBURYPORT, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 6,355

SEP 8 1956

Bostonians Stampede Russians

LENINGRAD (UP) — Two-thousand enthusiastic music lovers gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a thunderous reception Thursday night at the first foreign symphony heard here since before the Revolution.

Conductor Charles Munch took four bows after playing Beethoven's Eroica (3rd Symphony) and was unable to resist demands for an encore — something the Boston Symphony rarely does.

After playing Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's Daphne and Chloe, the orchestra gave an unscheduled performance of Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

The audience applauded for several minutes.

Hundreds of Russians unable to obtain tickets for the concert milled in the streets outside the marble-columned Great Hall Conservatory. Many halted orchestra members after the program to ask, "Why don't you stay here longer and give more concerts?"

Munch opened the program with the Soviet national anthem and then told the audience that the program included no Russian compositions because it would be improper to show the Russians how Americans perform Soviet music.

Grigory Rabinovich, conductor of the Korov Opera Company said the performance was "tremendous." Kurt Sanderling, associate conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra called it "a wonderful concert."

Moscow Radio said the program was "a great success."

Die Bostoner in Leningrad

„Wir sind über den Empfang gerührt", sagte Munch

Mit mehreren Flugzeugen sind Donnerstag die Musiker des Bostoner Symphonieorchesters, von Helsinki kommend, in Leningrad eingetroffen. Der Dirigent der Bostoner, Charles Munch, der dem Orchester seit sechs Jahren vorsteht, erklärte bei der Ankunft: „Ich schätze mich glücklich, den Boden der Sowjetunion zu betreten. Wir sind alle über den herrlichen Empfang gerührt, der uns schon in den ersten Minuten bereitet wurde."

Die amerikanischen Gäste wurden auf dem Flugplatz von Vertretern des Kulturministeriums der Sowjetunion und von Leningrader Musikern erwartet. Auch Mitglieder der amerikanischen Botschaft in Moskau hatten sich zum Empfang ihrer Landsleute in Leningrad eingefunden.

Der administrative Leiter des Bostoner Symphonieorchesters erklärte einem Korrespondenten der Nachrichtenagentur TASS: „In diesem Jahr begeht das Orchester das Jubiläum seines 75jährigen Bestehens. Aus diesem Anlaß unternimmt es eine große Tournee durch Europa. Wir haben die Ehre, das erste Orchester der USA zu sein, das die Sowjetunion besucht. Die Sprache der Musik ist international. Ich hoffe, daß wir einander verstehen und daß unsere Konzerte uns zu Freunden machen werden."

Das Bostoner Symphonieorchester wird nach zwei Konzerten in Leningrad nach Moskau weiterreisen. Dann führt die Tournee gleich nach Wien, wo Mittwoch, den 12. September, ein Konzert im großen Konzerthaussaal vorgesehen ist. Das Wiener Programm umfaßt Werke von Brahms, Ravel, Honegger und Hanson.

Gottfried von Einem und der deutsche Komponist Boris Blacher gehören zu jenen fünf Europäern, die kürzlich den Auftrag erhalten haben, Orchesterwerke für das Cleveland-Orchester zu schreiben. Sie sollen in der Saison 1957/58 unter der Leitung von George Szell uraufgeführt werden.

Der Linzer Schauspieler Walter Schmidinger wurde für vier Jahre nach Düsseldorf verpflichtet.

~~Kunst + Kultur~~
Wien
Der Aben

C.G.P. Paris 5462-57 - T[illegible] 21 à 23
La Liberté de [illegible] - Epinal

— 8 SEPT 1956

4767

Succès triomphal de Charles Munch à Léningrad

27

Léningrad. — Le célèbre chef d'orchestre Charles Munch, qui dirigeait l'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston, a obtenu un succès sans précédent. C'était le premier concert joué en U.R.S.S. par un orchestre américain. Deux mille amateurs de musique emplissaient la grande salle du Conservatoire de Léningrad, qui avait été décorée de drapeaux soviétiques et américains. Le programme comprenait la Symphonie Héroïque de Beethoven la Sixième Symphonie du jeune compositeur américain Walter Piston et la Suite de Daphnis et Chloé, de Ravel. Cette dernière pièce déchaîna un enthousiasme délirant. Munch a alors exécuté hors programme « L'Apprenti Sorcier » de Paul Dukas.

L'orchestre de Boston est venu en U.R.S.S. dans le cadre des échanges culturels soviéto-américains, avec deux chefs d'orchestre français, Charles Munch et Pierre Monteux, qui alterneront au pupitre.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4206
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

SEP 9

Associated Press

Conductor Munch in Leningrad

Boston Orchestra Cheered

By the Associated Press

Leningrad, U.S.S.R.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave its second and final Leningrad concert Sept. 7 to a highly appreciative audience. It now goes to Moscow for three programs.

The second concert was conducted by Pierre Monteux, conductor emeritus of the Boston orchestra and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. The regular conductor, Charles Munch, was on the podium in the first concert.

The audience applauded and cheered lustily. The program consisted of Haydn's Surprise Symphony; Symphony No. 2 by the American Paul Creston, organist at St. Malachy's Church in New York; and Schubert's Symphony No. 7.

The audience kept calling for encores, and the orchestra played a special arrangement from Richard Strauss's "Rosenkavalier."

A crowd of several hundred milled about the streets outside the theater and cheered the orchestra as it entered and left.

The entire orchestra of Tallinn, Estonia, came to Leningrad in buses over rough roads to hear the concert.

The Estonian musicians also wanted to see and hear bass player Ludwig Juht, a native Estonian. They were disappointed to learn he was not on the tour.

However, Richard Burgin, the Boston orchestra's concertmaster, had an unexpected reunion with his brother Julian, who flew here from his home in Warsaw.

The brothers spent the day together and were to fly to Moscow together. It was their first reunion in eight years.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sun (m)
LEWISTON-AUBURN, Me.
Independent
Circ. 31,208

SEP 7 1956

LENINGRAD APPROVES BOSTON SYMPHONY

Reception Far Exceeds That Given Other American Artists

By STANLEY JOHNSON

LENINGRAD, Sept. 6 Æ — The Boston Symphony Orchestra scored the greatest musical triumph in Leningrad's modern history tonight. An audience of 2,200 applauded and cheered its opening concert of a Russian tour for half an hour.

The reception for the first Western symphony orchestra to play in the Soviet Union far exceeded that given violinist Isaac Stern, singer Jan Peerce or any other Western artist who has appeared lately in the Soviet Union.

In return, conductor Charles Mauch broke a no-encore rule and after a stormy eight minutes of applause led the orchestra in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

It set off new uproar in the red, white and gold hall of the Leningrad Philharmonic.

Throughout the evening, streets outside were jammed with persons eager for a sight of the artists and trying to get into the concert. They offered hundreds of rubles apiece for tickets which sold legitimately for from 12 to 40 rubles ($3 to $10).

Violinist David Oistrakh sent a telegram to concertmaster Richard Burgin congratulating the orchestra and saying he looked forward to hearing it in Moscow.

Oistrakh played with the Boston Symphony last winter on his American tour.

The program opened with Beethoven's Third Symphony, estatically received by the musically highly literate audience.

Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" brought the greatest applause of the evening.

Before the concert itself, Leningraders showed a touching eagerness and some daring to make personal contact with orchestra members.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

SEP 8 1956

Last Leningrad Concert

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave its second and final Leningrad Concert today to a highly appreciative audience. It goes to Moscow tomorrow for three programs.

[143]

pinal
SEPT 19

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

SEP 8 1956

Boston Symphony In Moscow Today

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (AP)—The Boston Symphony orchestra gave its second and final Leningrad concert today to a highly appreciative audience. It goes to Moscow tomorrow for three programs.

Today's concert was conducted by Pierre Monteux, conductor emeritus of the Boston orchestra and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony orchestra. The regular conductor, Charles Munch, was on the podium yesterday.

The audience applauded and cheered lustily. The program consisted of Haydn's Surprise Symphony; Symphony No. 2 by the American Paul Creston, organist at St. Malachy's church in New York, and Shubert's Symphony No. 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

SEP 8 1956

(AP Wirephoto)

BOSTON SYMPHONY IN LENINGRAD— Charles Muench conducts touring Boston Symphony Orchestra in Leningrad's Philharmonic Hall. After a second performance in the once imperial city of Russia, the orchestra will go to Moscow for a weekend appearance. The accoustics of this chandelier-lighted hall were described as excellent by the members of the orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 8 1956

3 Symphony Moscow Fetes

LENINGRAD (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave its second and final Leningrad concert to a highly appreciative audience. It goes to Moscow today for three programs.

Friday's concert was conducted by Pierre Monteux, conductor emeritus of the Boston orchestra and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. The regular conductor, Charles Munch, was on the podium Thursday.

AUDIENCE CHEERS

The audience applauded and cheered.

The program consisted of Haydn's Surprise Symphony; Symphony No. 2 by the American, Paul Creston, organist at St. Malachy's Church in New York; and Shubert's Symphony No. 7.

The audience kept calling for encores and the orchestra played a special arrangement from Richard Strauss' Rosenkavalier.

The entire orchestra of Talin, Estonia, came to Leningrad in buses over rough roads to hear the concert.

The Estonian musicians also wanted to see and hear bass player Ludwig Juht, a native Estonian. They were disappointed to learn he was not on the tour.

REUNION HELD

However, Richard Burgin, the Boston orchestra's concertmaster, had an unexpected reunion with his brother, Julian, who flew here from his home in Warsaw, Poland.

The brothers spent the day together and fly to Moscow together today. It is their first reunion in eight years.

(See Photo in Center Fold)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 8 1956

In Russia—Ch
cor
Boston Symphony Orchest
grad's Philharmonic Hall.
the first major Western mus ever to tour Soviet Russia. (

Leningrad Again Hails Symphony

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave its second and final Leningrad concert today to a highly appreciative audience. It goes to Moscow tomorrow for three programs.

Today's concert was conducted by Pierre Monteux, conductor emeritus of the Boston orchestra and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. The regular conductor, Charles Munch, was on the podium yesterday.

The audience applauded and cheered lustily. The program consisted of Haydn's Surprise Symphony; Symphony No. 2 by the American Paul Creston, organist at St. Malachy's Church in New York; and Shubert's Symphony No. 7.

The audience kept calling for encores and the orchestra played a special arrangement from Richard Strauss's Rosenkavalier.

A crowd of several hundred milled about the streets outside the theater and cheered the orchestra as it entered and left.

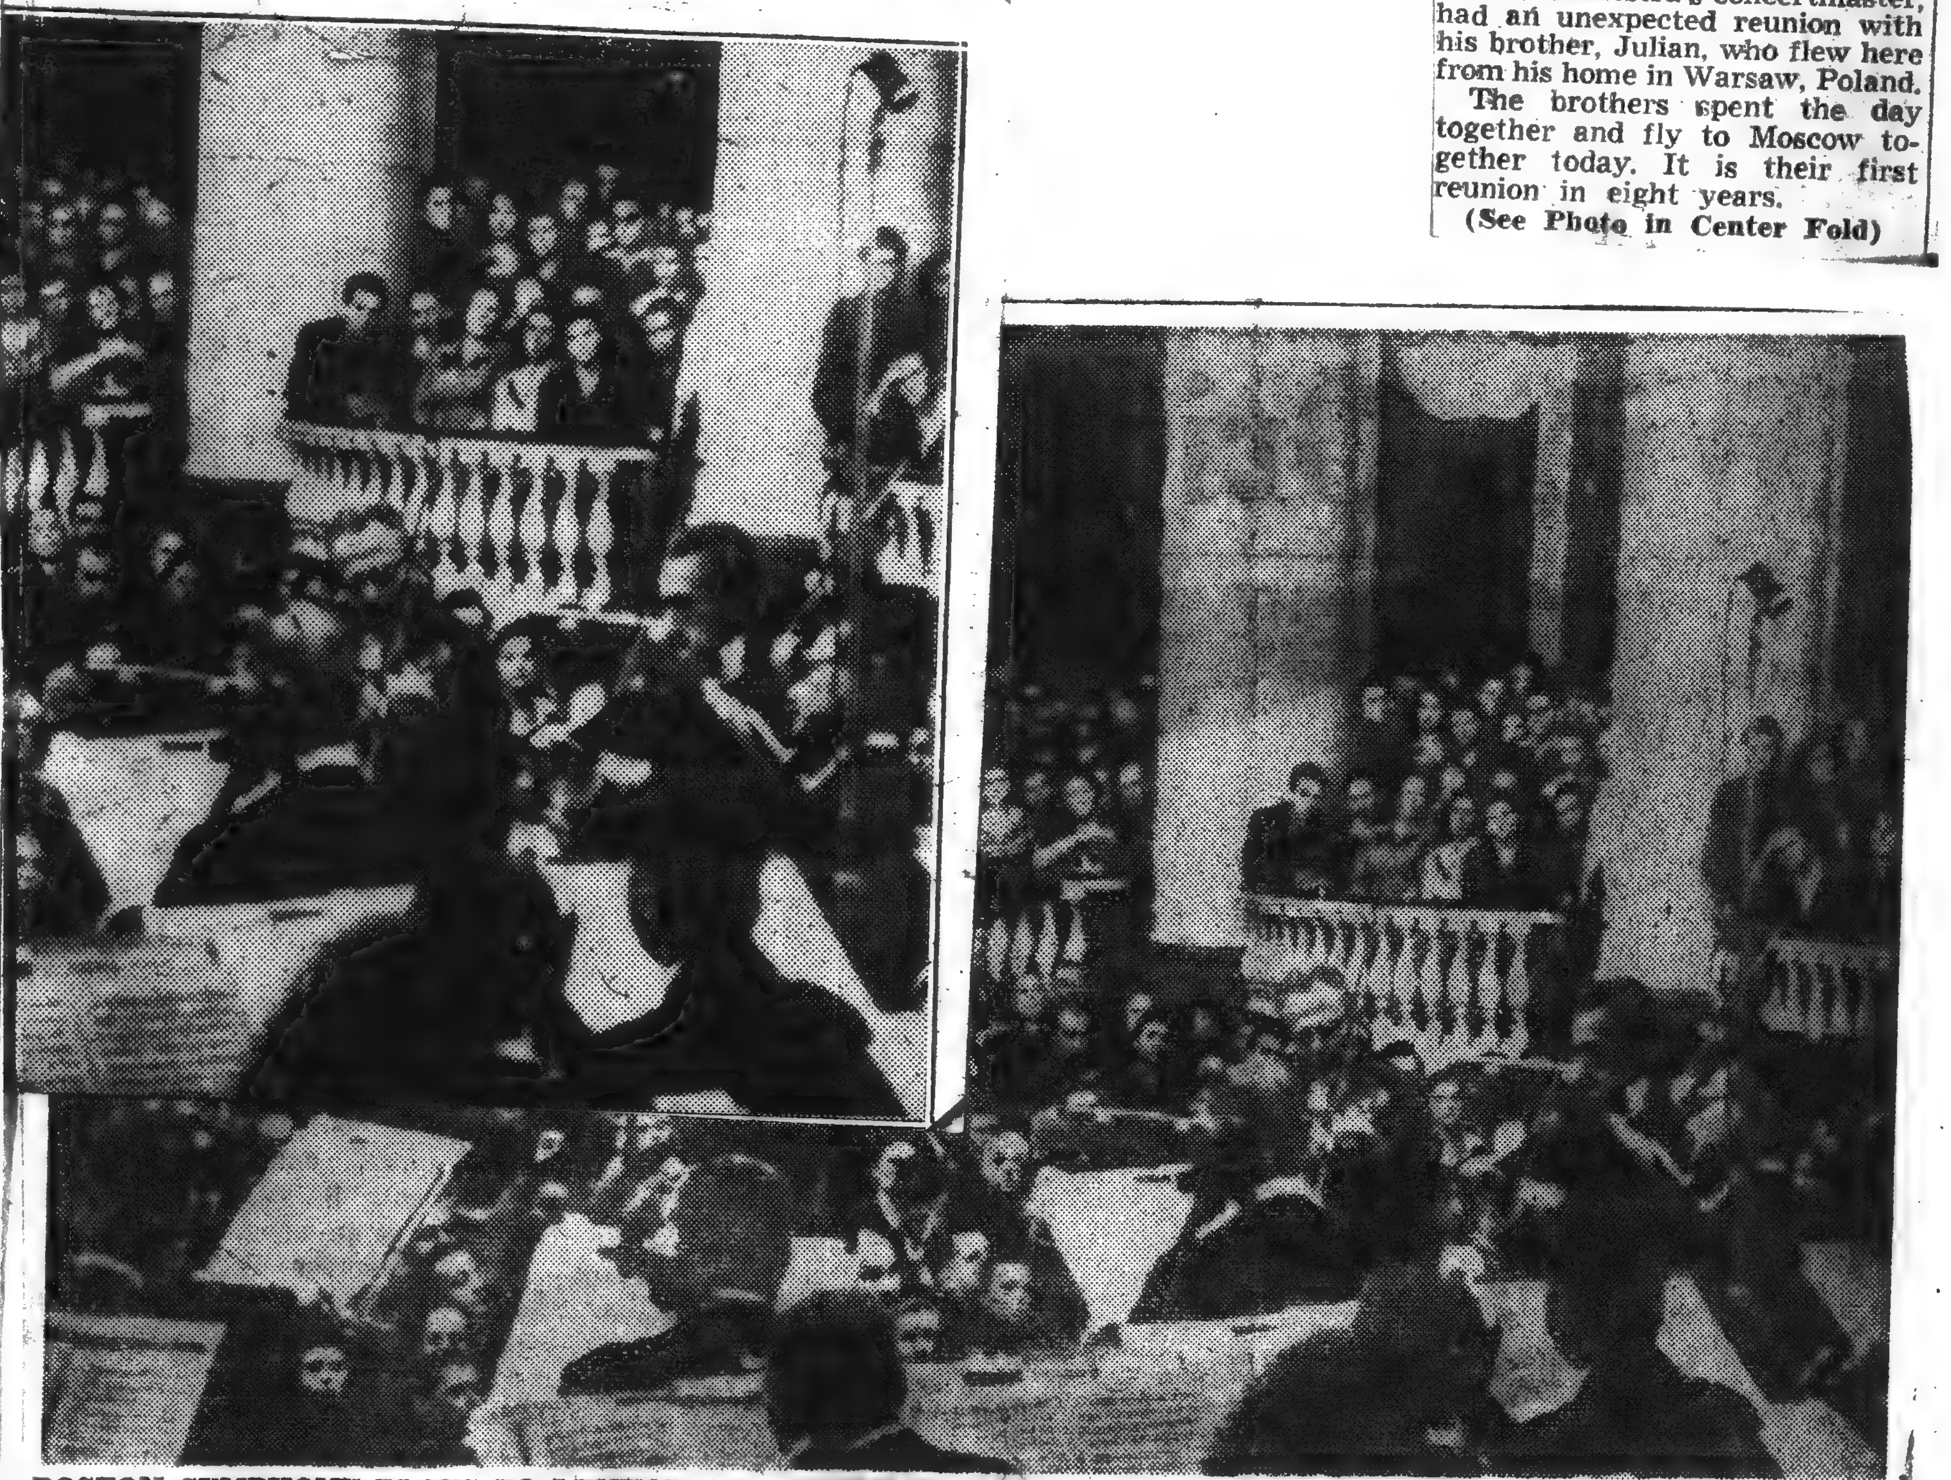
The entire orchestra of Talin, Estonia, came to Leningrad in buses over rough roads to hear the concert.

The Estonian musicians also wanted to see and hear bass player Ludwig Juht, a native Estonian. They were disappointed to learn he was not on the tour.

However, Richard Burgin, the Boston orchestra's concertmaster, had an unexpected reunion with his brother Julian, who flew here from his home in Warsaw, Poland.

The brothers spent the day together and fly to Moscow together tomorrow. It is their first reunion in eight years.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200



BOSTON SYMPHONY PLAYS TO LENINGRAD AUDIENCE—Conductor Charles Munch conducts the touring Boston Symphony Orchestra in Leningrad's Philharmonic Hall. The orchestra is the first major western musical ensemble to tour the Soviet Union in recent years. (AP Wirephoto)

Symphony Again Given Red Ovation

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (AP—The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave its second and final Leningrad concert today to a highly apreciative audience. It goes to Moscow tomorrow for three programs.

Today's concert was conducted by Pierre Monteux, conductor emeritus of the Boston orchestra and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. The regular conductor, Charles Munch, was on the podium yesterday.

The audience applauded and cheered lustily.

The audience kept calling for encores and the orchestra played a special arrangement from Richard Strauss' Rosenkavalier.

A crowd of several hundred milled about the streets outside the theater and cheered the orchestra as it entered and left.

The entire orchestra of Talin, Estonia, came to Leningrad in buses over rough roads to hear the concert.

Burgin in Reunion

The Estonian musicians also wanted to see and hear bass player Ludwig Juht, a native Estonian. They were disappointed to learn he was not on the tour.

However, Richard Burgin, the Boston orchestra's concertmaster, had an unexpected reunion with his brother Julian, who flew here from his home in Warsaw, Poland.

The brothers spent the day together and fly to Moscow together tomorrow. It is their first reunion in eight years.

---

p Agency, Inc.
Richmond 2-4200

(m)
, Conn.
124

1956 pt. 7 (AP)—The y Orchestra final Leninto a highly nce. It goes w for three

Reds Rave

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, on tour of Europe, plays to an enthusiastic capacity audience at Leningrad Philharmonic Hall during first concert in Russia. They later played two concerts in Moscow, "wowing" the Reds with "rock an' roll" tunes. Director Charles Munch (left center) conducts.

AP Photo

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

SEP 8 1956

Boston Symphony In Moscow Today

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (AP)—The Boston Symphony orchestra gave its second and final Leningrad concert today to a highly appreciative audience. It goes to Moscow tomorrow for three programs.

Today's concert was conducted by Pierre Monteux, conductor emeritus of the Boston orchestra and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony orchestra. The regular conductor, Charles Munch, was on the podium yesterday.

The audience applauded and cheered lustily. The program consisted of Haydn's Surprise Symphony; Symphony No. 2 by the American Paul Creston, organist at St. Malachy's church in New York, and Shubert's Symphony No. 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 8 1956

B Symphony Moscow Fetes

LENINGRAD (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave its second and final Leningrad concert to a highly appreciative audience. It goes to Moscow today for three programs.

Friday's concert was conducted by Pierre Monteux, conductor emeritus of the Boston orchestra and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. The regular conductor, Charles Munch, was on the podium Thursday.

AUDIENCE CHEERS

The audience applauded and cheered.

The program consisted of Haydn's Surprise Symphony; Symphony No. 2 by the American, Paul Creston, organist at St. Malachy's Church in New York; and Shubert's Symphony No. 7.

The audience kept calling for encores and the orchestra played a special arrangement from Richard Strauss' Rosenkavalier.

The entire orchestra of Talin, Estonia, came to Leningrad in buses over rough roads to hear the concert.

The Estonian musicians also wanted to see and hear bass player Ludwig Juht, a native Estonian. They were disappointed to lea

REU

Ho
Bosto had a his br from

The togeth gethe reunio
(Se

(AP Wirephoto)

LENINGRAD — Charles
oston Symphony Orchestra
ic Hall. After a second nperial city of Russia, the orchestra will go to Moscow for a weekend appearance. The accoustics of this chandelier-lighted hall were described as excellent by the members of the orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 8 1956

In Russia—Charles Muench conducts touring Boston Symphony Orchestra in Leningrad's Philharmonic Hall. Orchestra is the first major Western musical ensemble ever to tour Soviet Russia. (Story, P. 16)

BOSTON SYMPHONY PLAYS TO LENINGRAD AUDIENCE—Conductor Charles Munch conduct Orchestra in Leningrad's Philharmonic Hall. The orchestra is the first major western musical en in recent years. (AP Wirephoto)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,978

SEP 10 1956

Reds Rave

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, on tour of Europe, plays to an enthusiastic capacity audience at Leningrad Philharmonic Hall during first concert in Russia. They later played two concerts in Moscow, "wowing" the Reds with "rock an' roll" tunes. Director Charles Munch (left center) conducts.

AP Photo

[144]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

SEP 8 1956

Boston Symphony In Moscow Today

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (AP)—The Boston Symphony orchestra gave its second and final Leningrad concert today to a highly appreciative audience. It goes to Moscow tomorrow for three programs.

Today's concert was conducted by Pierre Monteux, conductor emeritus of the Boston orchestra and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony orchestra. The regular conductor, Charles Munch, was on the podium yesterday.

The audience applauded and cheered lustily. The program consisted of Haydn's Surprise Symphony; Symphony No. 2 by the American Paul Creston, organist at St. Malachy's church in New York, and Shubert's Symphony No. 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 8 1956

---

s going Z 4 TV
pe!
sailor m
ly has W

(AP Wirephoto)

LENINGRAD — Charles ...oston Symphony Orchestra ...ic Hall. After a second ...nperial city of Russia, the orchestra will go to Moscow for a weekend appearance. The accoustics of this chandelier-lighted hall were described as excellent by the members of the orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 8 1956

B Symphony Moscow Fetes

LENINGRAD (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave its second and final Leningrad concert to a highly appreciative audience. It goes to Moscow today for three programs.

Friday's concert was conducted by Pierre Monteux, conductor emeritus of the Boston orchestra and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. The regular conductor, Charles Munch, was on the podium Thursday.

AUDIENCE CHEERS

The audience applauded and cheered.

The program consisted of Haydn's Surprise Symphony; Symphony No. 2 by the American, Paul Creston, organist at St. Malachy's Church in New York; and Shubert's Symphony No. 7.

The audience kept calling for encores and the orchestra played a special arrangement from Richard Strauss' Rosenkavalier.

The entire orchestra of Talin, Estonia, came to Leningrad in buses over rough roads to hear the concert.

The Estonian musicians also wanted to see and hear bass player Ludwig Juht, a native Estonian. They were disappointed to learn he was not on the tour.

REUNION HELD

However, Richard Burgin, the Boston orchestra's concertmaster, had an unexpected reunion with his brother, Julian, who flew here from his home in Warsaw, Poland.

The brothers spent the day together and fly to Moscow together today. It is their first reunion in eight years.

(See Photo in Center Fold)

One

...Mayor in 1953, ...litical enemies ... done a good ... an unusually ...York City) ad...s been strictly ...t three years ...me a national

... patient, he ...s carefully be...cisions, saying ...e proposed to ...er—"when in

...NT, it appears ...ments against ...f whom they ...ve to be pri...c: Wagner is ...at, the voters ... realize their ...tween Demo...sm or Eisen...

... winning a ...n is a real job ...can in New ...population of ... of which a

---

PAT HARRINGTON
"Harbor Lights" opens the new legitimate season Sept. 17 at the Wilbur.

HOUSE REHEARSAL

F. Hugh Herbert's comedy "The Best House in Naples," is now rehearsing under Claude Dauphin's direction. The play be...

...in Russia—Charles Muench conducts touring Boston Symphony Orchestra in Leningrad's Philharmonic Hall. Orchestra is the first major Western musical ensemble ever to tour Soviet Russia. (Story, P. 16)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

SEP 8 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY PLAYS TO LENINGRAD AUDIENCE—Conductor Charles Munch conducts the touring Boston Symphony Orchestra in Leningrad's Philharmonic Hall. The orchestra is the first major western musical ensemble to tour the Soviet Union in recent years. (AP Wirephoto)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,978

SEP 10 1956

Reds Rave

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, on tour of Europe, plays to an enthusiastic capacity audience at Leningrad Philharmonic Hall during first concert in Russia. They later played two concerts in Moscow, "wowing" the Reds with "rock an' roll" tunes. Director Charles Munch (left center) conducts.

AP Photo

Symphony Again Given Red Ovation

LENINGRAD, Sept. 7 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave its second and final Leningrad concert toda... to a highly apreciative audience. It goes to Moscow tomorrow fo... three programs.

Today's concert was conducte... by Pierre Monteux, conducto... emeritus of the Boston orchestra and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. The regular conductor, Charles Munch, was on the podium yesterday.

The audience applauded and cheered lustily.

The audience kept calling for encores and the orchestra played a special arrangement from Richard Strauss' Rosenkavalier.

A crowd of several hundred milled about the streets outside the theater and cheered the orchestra as it entered and left.

The entire orchestra of Talin, Estonia, came to Leningrad in buses over rough roads to hear the concert.

Burgin in Reunion

The Estonian musicians also wanted to see and hear bass player Ludwig Juht, a native Estonian. They were disappointed to learn he was not on the tour.

However, Richard Burgin, the Boston orchestra's concertmaster, had an unexpected reunion with his brother Julian, who flew here from his home in Warsaw, Poland.

The brothers spent the day together and fly to Moscow together tomorrow. It is their first reunion in eight years.

[145]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

SEP 8 1956

Associated Press radiophoto

Boston Symphony Orchestra on Russian Tour

Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance at Leningrad's Philharmonic Hall Thursday night. The orchestra is making a tour of the Soviet Union. It will play in Moscow today and tomorrow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

SEP 11 1956

Hub's Symphony Wows Russians

LENINGRAD AUDIENCE packed Philharmonic Hall there for appearance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Photo at right shows Charles Munch conducting concert. At left, sign outside hall printed in Russian reads "Boston Symphony Orchestra (U.S.A.), Pierre Monteux, Charles Munch."

(AP Photos)

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
ndependent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 10 1956

Flowers For The Finest

(UP Telephoto)

R BOSTON SYMPHONY—Charles Munch, (right) conductor ymphony Orchestra, accepts several bouquets of flowers prior to ert at Leningrad in Soviet Union. Holding bouquet at left is (glasses), manager of the orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Journal-Courier (m)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 20,613

SEP 8 1956

A member of the touring Boston Symphony had a conversation with a leading member of the cultural community in Leningrad last night and reported that it went this way:

"Tell me, what do Americans really think about Bulganin and Khrushchev?"

The American said he hesitated on that one, so the Russian pressed on:

"Come, come, I won't betray you."

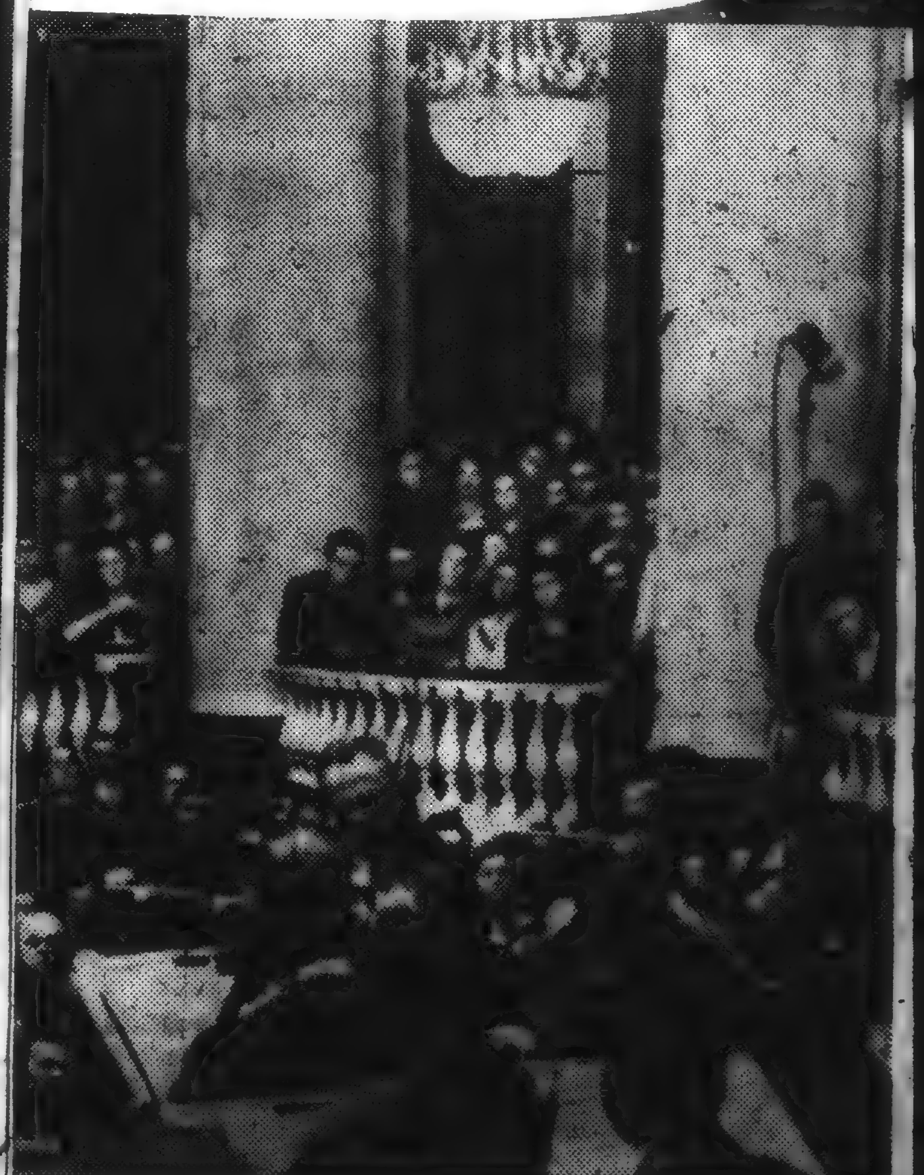
The musician then said that, judging from press reports, Americans thought Bulganin more of a gentleman than Khrushchev, who appeared somewhat vulgar.

"That's what we think, too," the Russian said.

Boston Symphony Gives Concert

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is shown in a performance in Leningrad's Philharmonic Hall Thursday night. The orchestra is the first major western musical organization to tour the Soviet Union and following a second performance in Leningrad will go to Moscow to play over the weekend. The acoustics of the chandelier-lighted hall were described as excellent by the musicians.

(AP Wirephoto via radio from Moscow)



Associated Press Radiophoto

PREMIERE: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra Thursday night in Leningrad in first of several concerts in the Soviet Union. The Boston, acclaimed by the audience, is first U. S. orchestra to play in Soviet Union.

[145]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

SEP 8 1956

Boston Sy

Charles Munch conducting th
Thursday night. The orchestr

MACY'S HERALD SQU

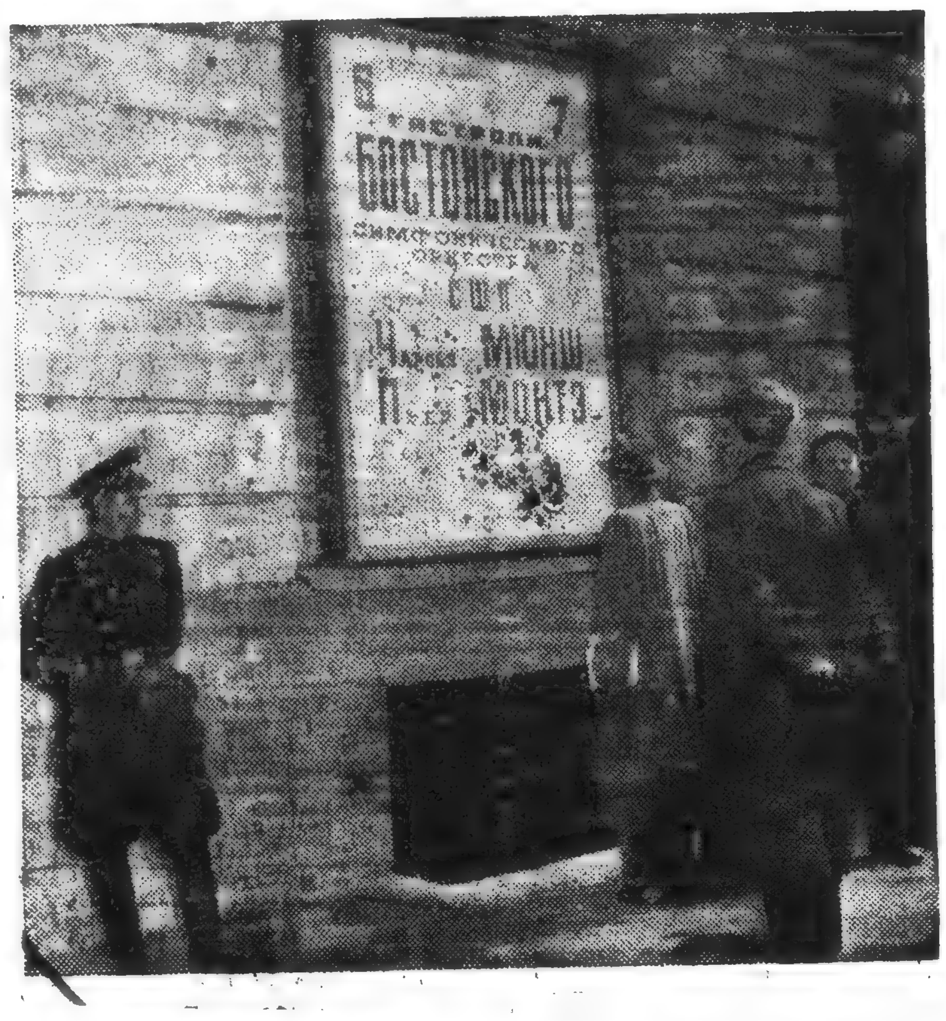
M
1/2
C

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

SEP 11 1956

Hub's Symphony Wows Russians



LENINGRAD AUDIENCE packed Philharmonic Hall there for appearance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Photo at right shows Charles Munch conducting concert. At left, sign outside hall printed in Russian reads "Boston Symphony Orchestra (U.S.A.), Pierre Monteux, Charles Munch."
(AP Photos)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 10 1956

Flowers For The Finest

(UP Telephoto)

R BOSTON SYMPHONY—Charles Munch, (right) conductor ymphony Orchestra, accepts several bouquets of flowers prior to ert at Leningrad in Soviet Union. Holding bouquet at left is (glasses), manager of the orchestra.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - S. 172,502

SEP 7 1956

East and West Meet on Bulganin

A member of the touring Boston Symphony had a conversation with a leading member of the cultural community in Leningrad last night and reported that it went this way:

"Tell me, what do Americans really think about Bulganin and Khrushchev?"

The American said he hesitated on that one, so the Russian pressed on:

"Come, come, I won't betray you."

The musician then said that, judging from press reports, Americans thought Bulganin more of a gentleman than Khrushchev, who appeared somewhat vulgar.

"That's what we think, too," the Russian said.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal-Courier (m)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 20,613

SEP 8 1956

Boston Symphony Gives Concert

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is shown in a performance in Leningrad's Philharmonic Hall Thursday night. The orchestra is the first major western musical organization to tour the Soviet Union and following a second performance in Leningrad will go to Moscow to play over the weekend. The acoustics of the chandelier-lighted hall were described as excellent by the musicians.

(AP Wirephoto via radio from Moscow)

Associated Press Radiophoto

PREMIERE: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra Thursday night in Leningrad in first of several concerts in the Soviet Union. The Boston, acclaimed by the audience, is first U. S. orchestra to play in Soviet Union.

[145]

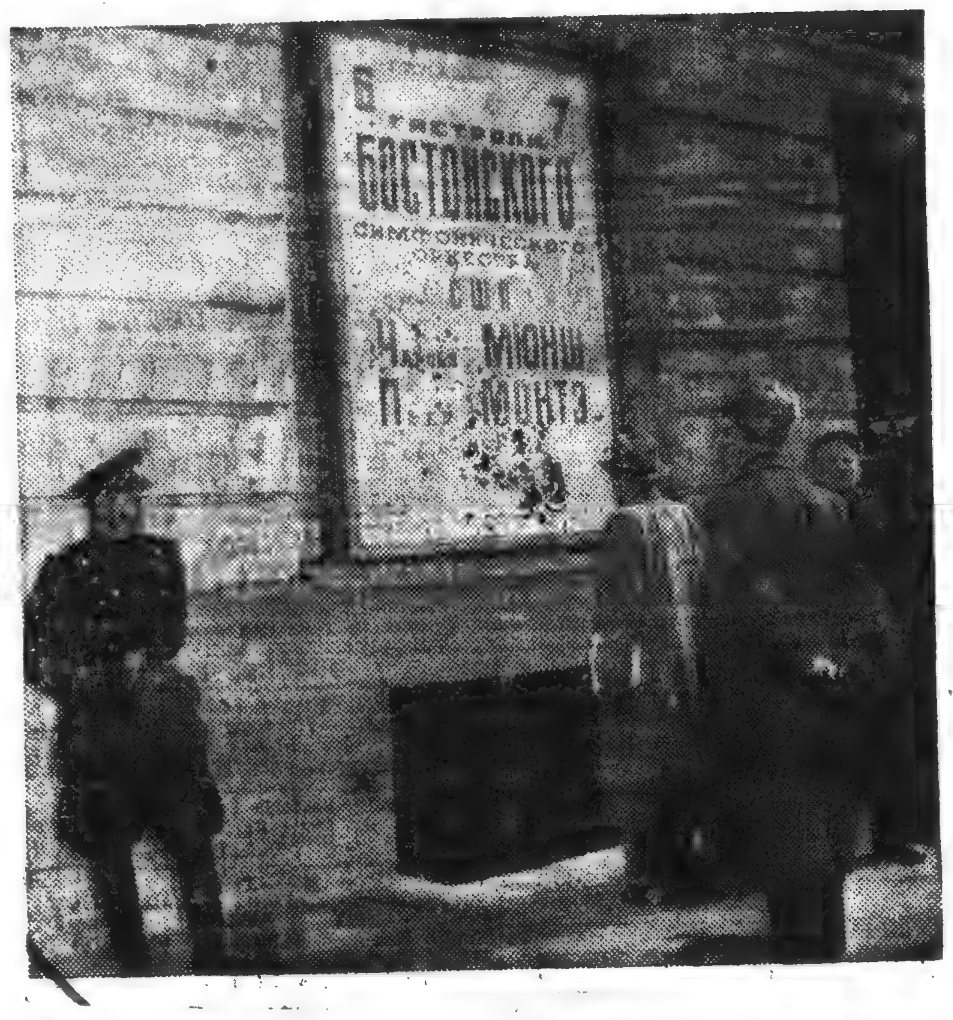
Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
SEP 8 1956

Boston Sy

Charles Munch conducting th
Thursday night. The orchestr

MACY'S HERALD SQU
M
1/2
C

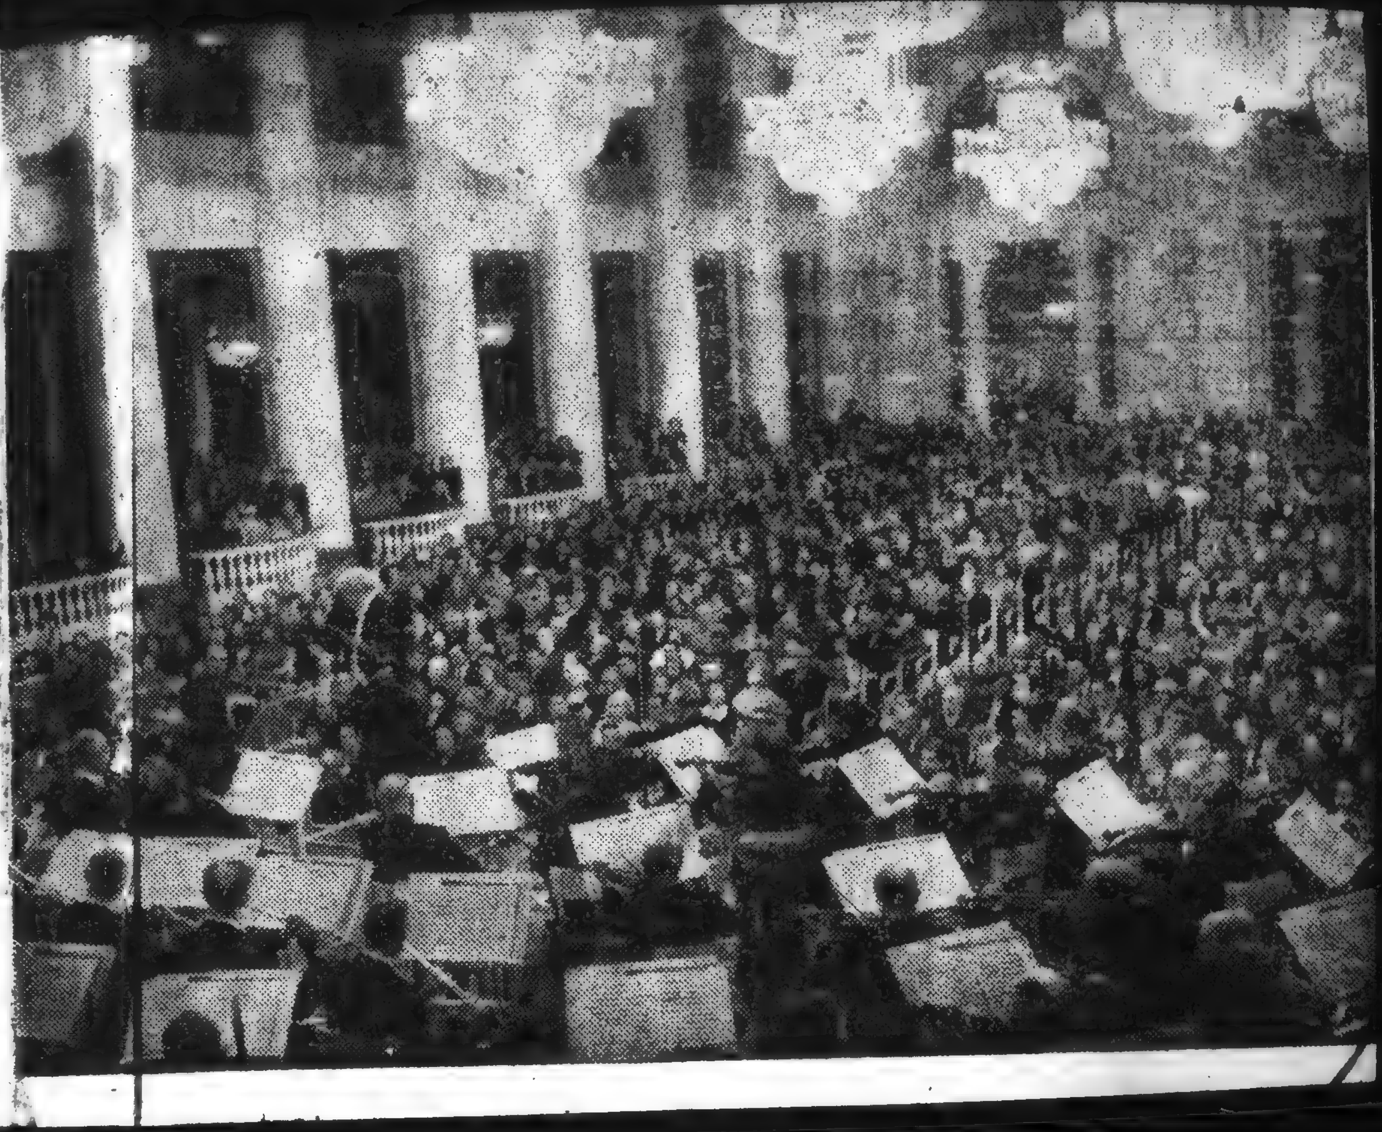
New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300
SEP 11 1956



Hub's Symphony Wows Russians

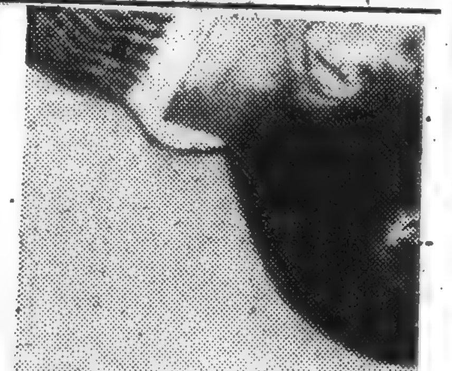
LENINGRAD AUDIENCE packed Philharmonic Hall there for appearance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Photo at right shows Charles Munch conducting concert. At left, sign outside hall printed in Russian reads "Boston Symphony Orchestra (U.S.A.), Pierre Monteux, Charles Munch."

(AP Photos)

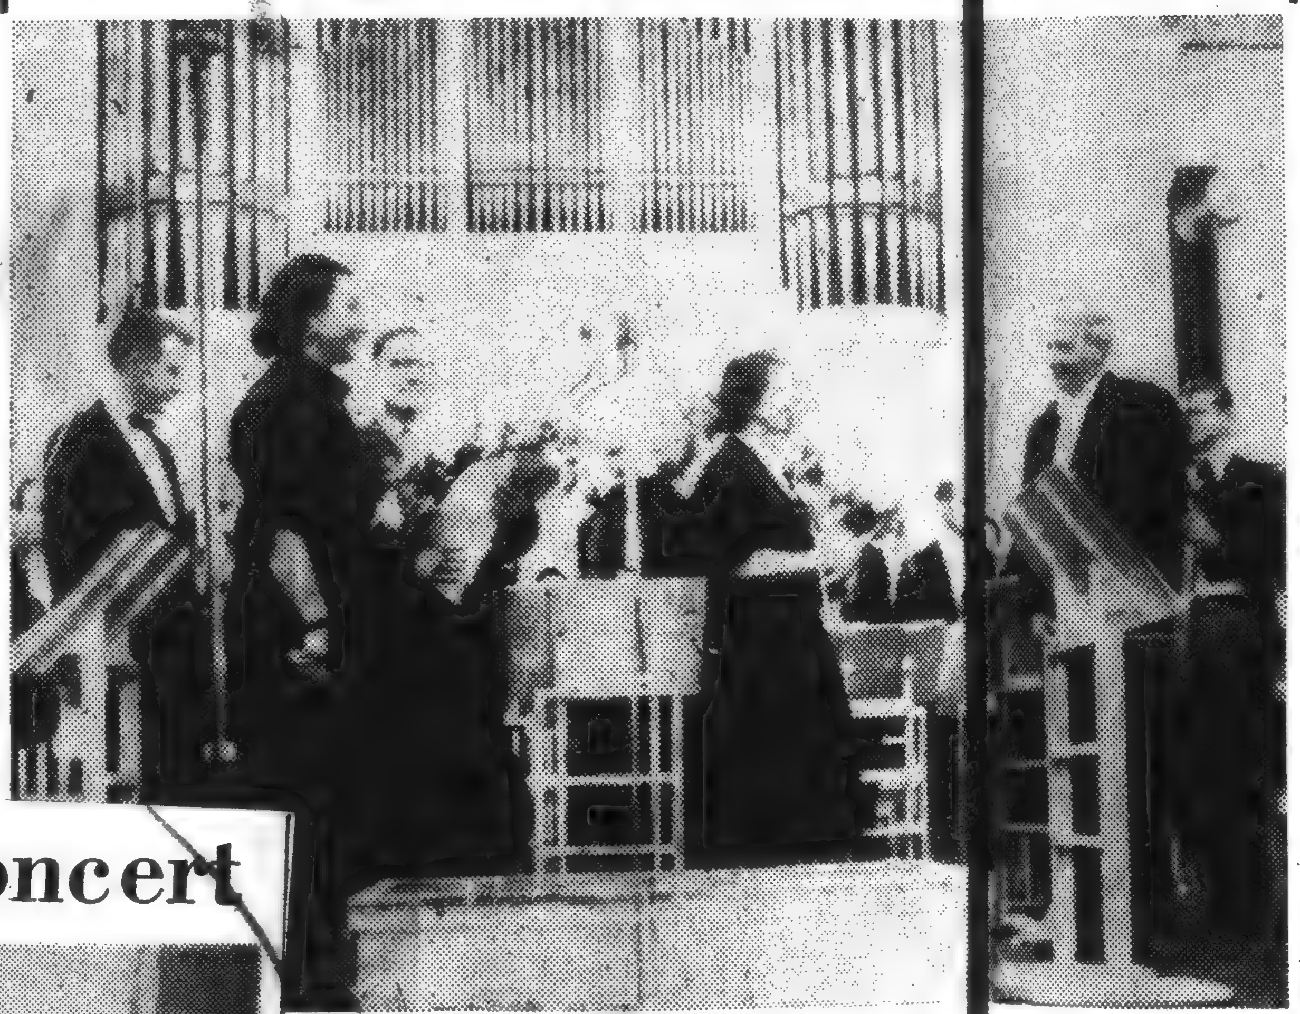


New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749
SEP 1 0 1956

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York



Flowers For The Finest



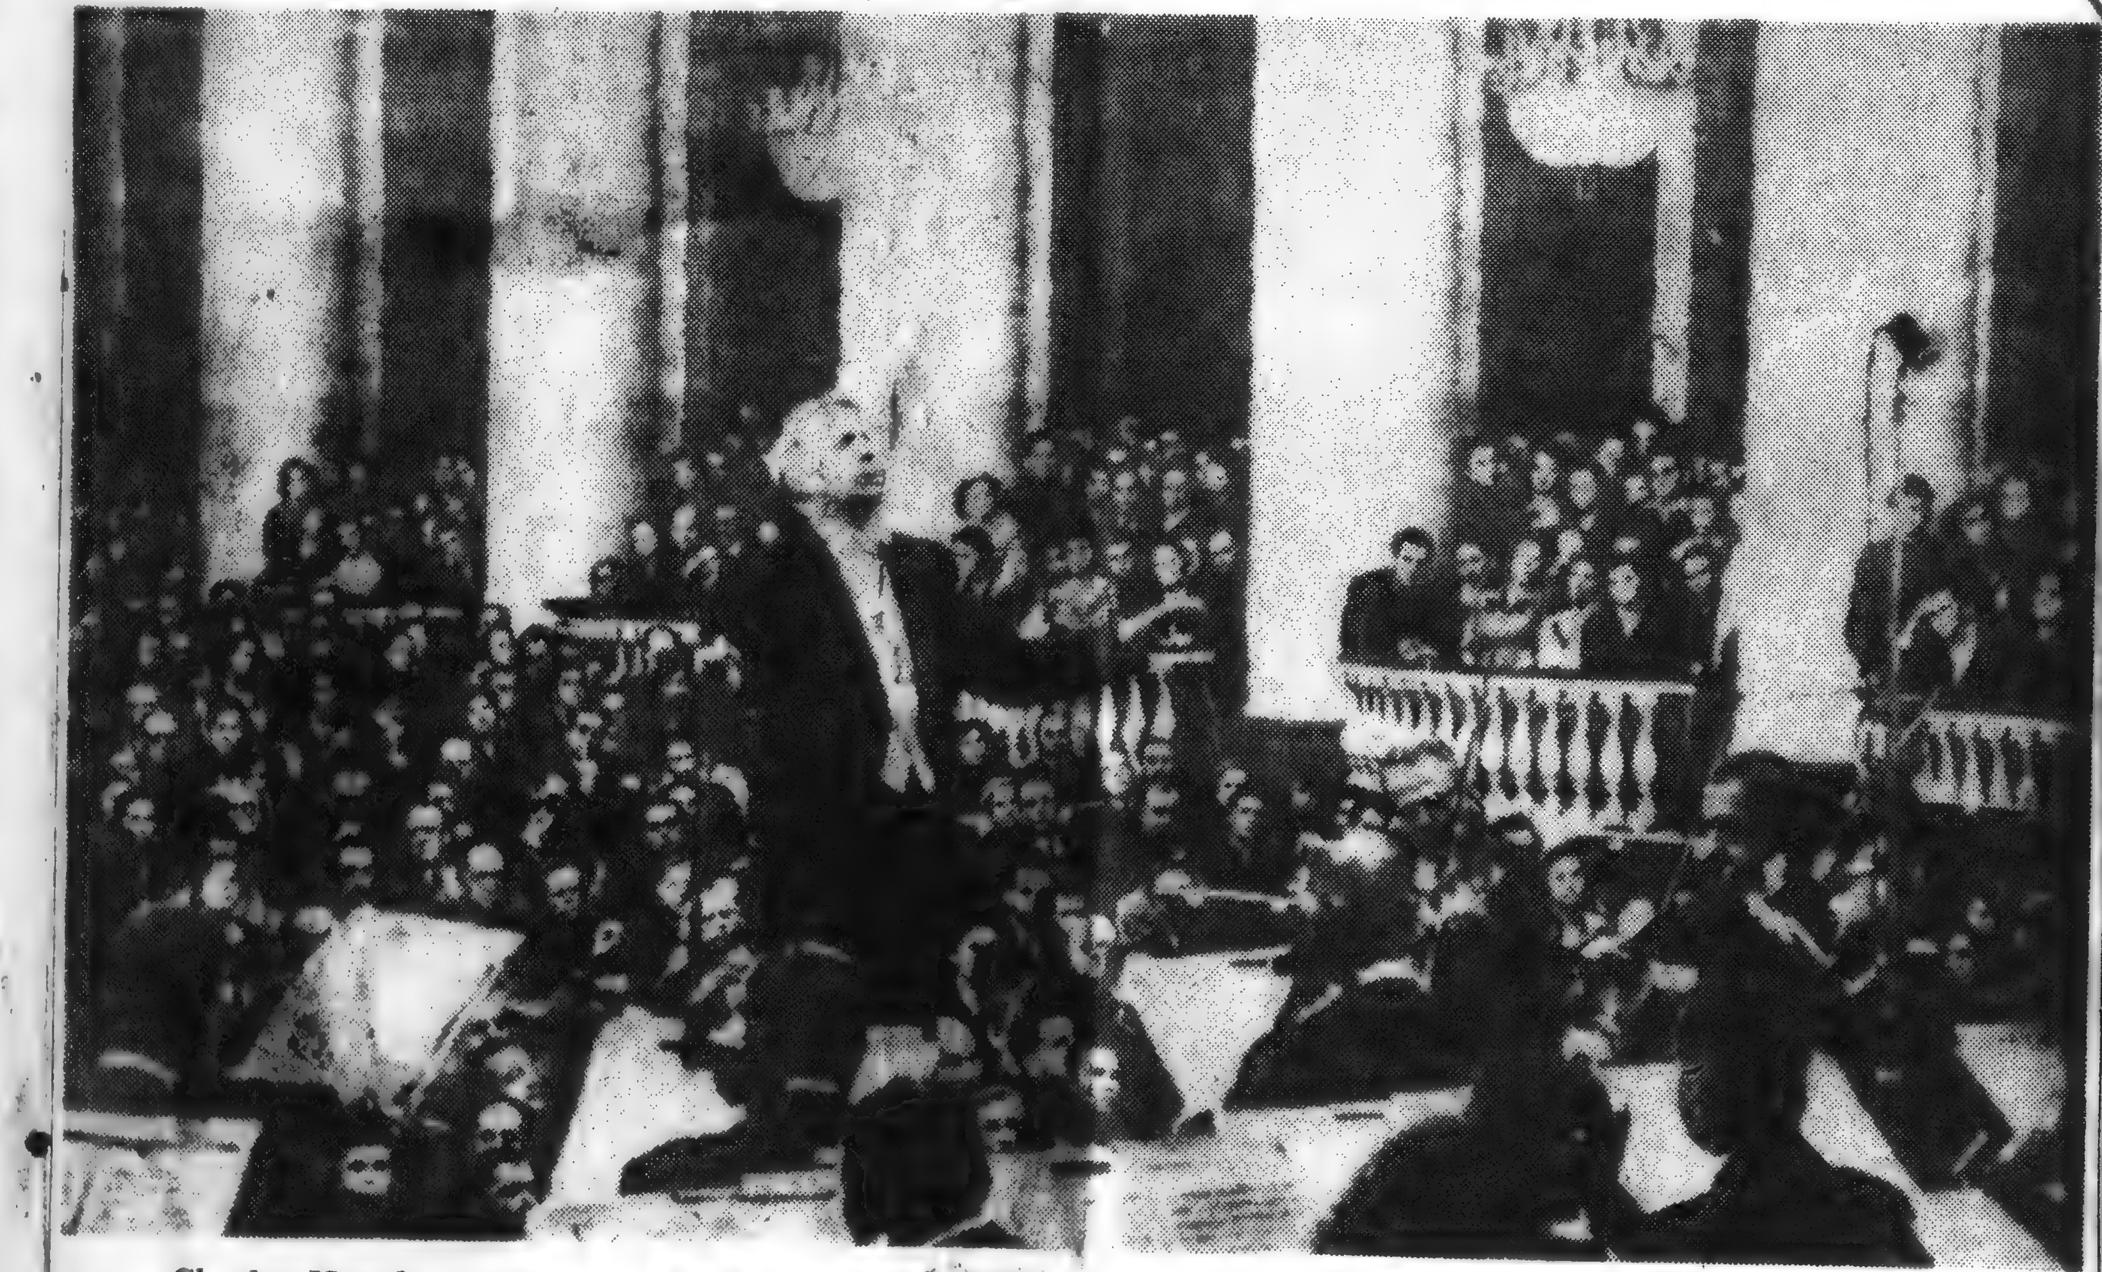
(UP Telephoto)

R BOSTON SYMPHONY—Charles Munch (right) conductor ymphony Orchestra, accepts several bouque of flowers prior to ert at Leningrad in Soviet Union. Holding bouquet at left is (glasses), manager of the orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Journal-Courier (m)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 20,613
SEP 8 1956

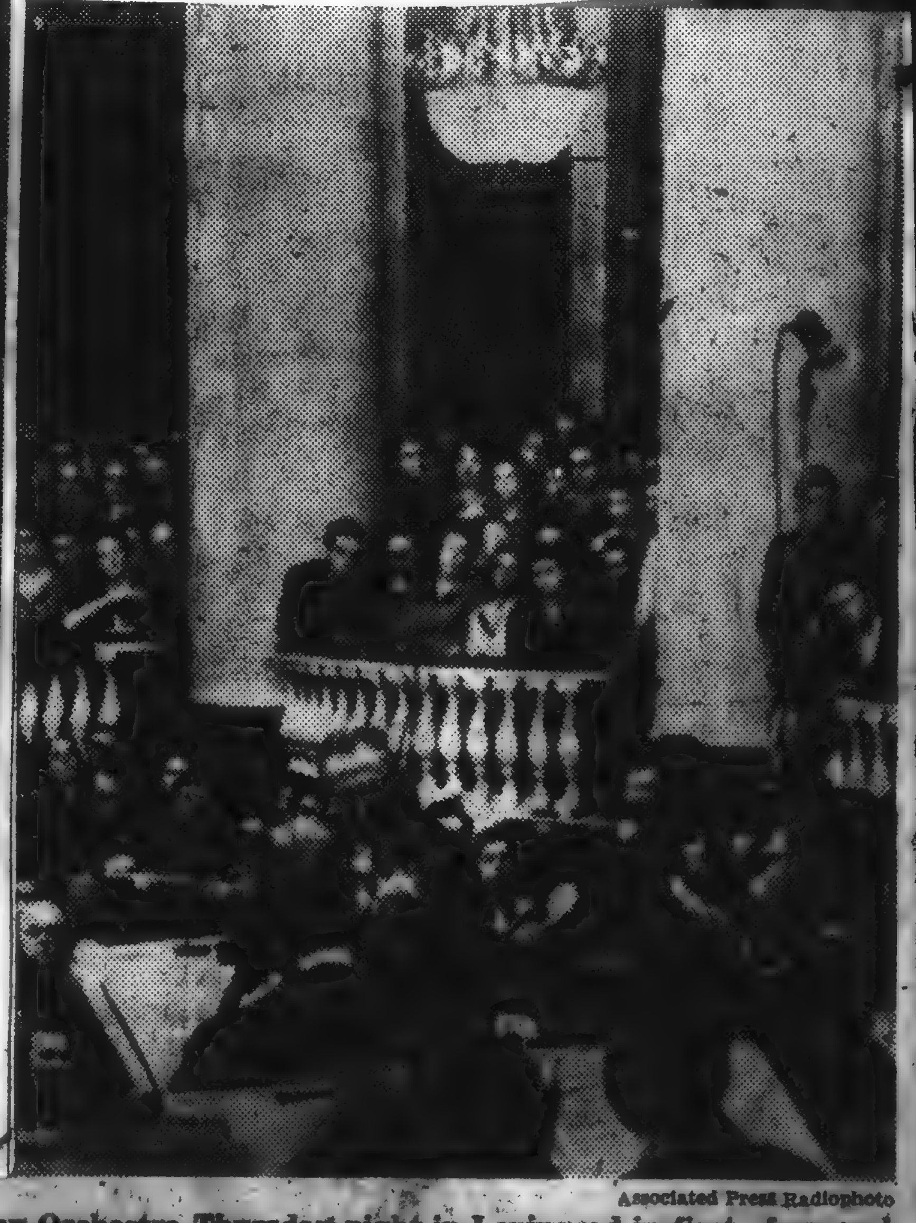
Burrelle's

Boston Symphony Gives Leningrad Concert



Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is shown in a performance in Leningrad's Philharmonic Hall Thursday night. The orchestra is the first major western musical organization to tour the Soviet Union and following a second performance in Leningrad will go to Moscow to play over the weekend. The acoustics of the chandelier-lighted hall were described as excellent by the musicians.

(AP Wirephoto via radio from Moscow)



Associated Press Radiophoto

PREMIERE: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra Thursday night in Leningrad in first of several concerts in the Soviet Union. The Boston, acclaimed by the audience, is first U. S. orchestra to play in Soviet Union.

[145]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

SEP 8 1956

Boston Sy

Charles Munch conducting th
Thursday night. The orchestr

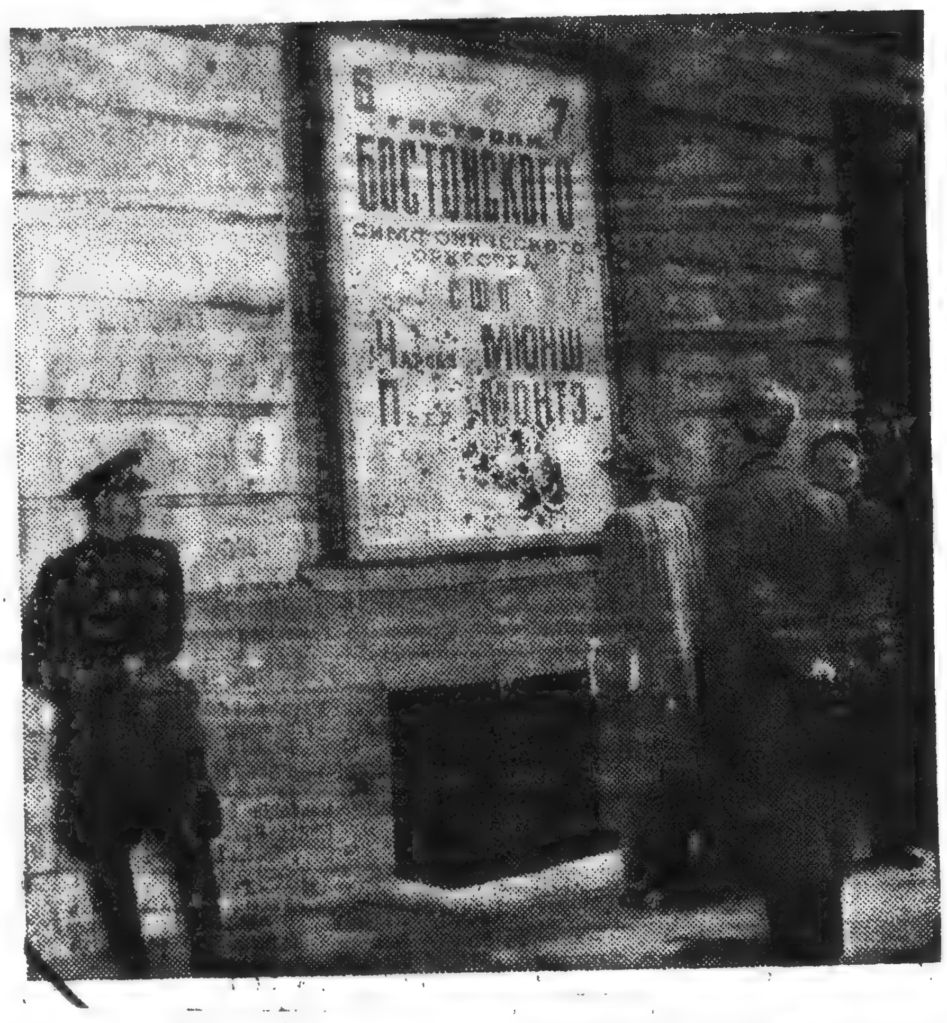
MACY'S HERALD SQU

M
1/2
C

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

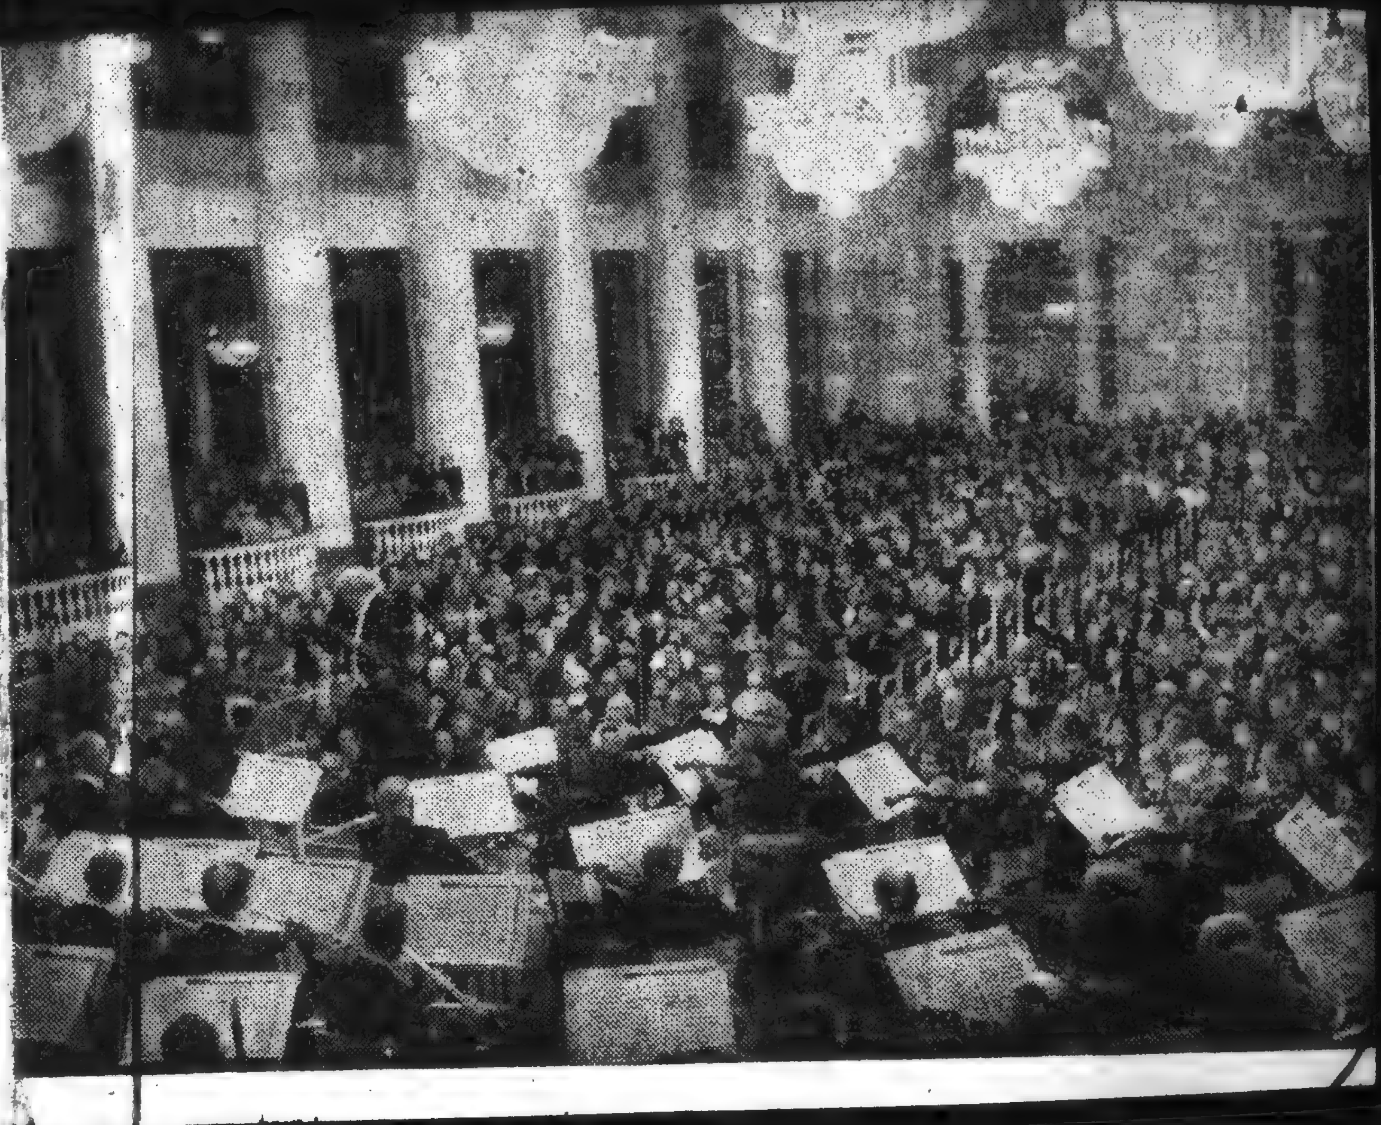
Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

SEP 11 1956



Hub's Symphony Wows Russians

LENINGRAD AUDIENCE packed Philharmonic Hall there for appearance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Photo at right shows Charles Munch conducting concert. At left, sign outside hall printed in Russian reads "Boston Symphony Orchestra (U.S.A.), Pierre Monteux, Charles Munch." (AP Photos)

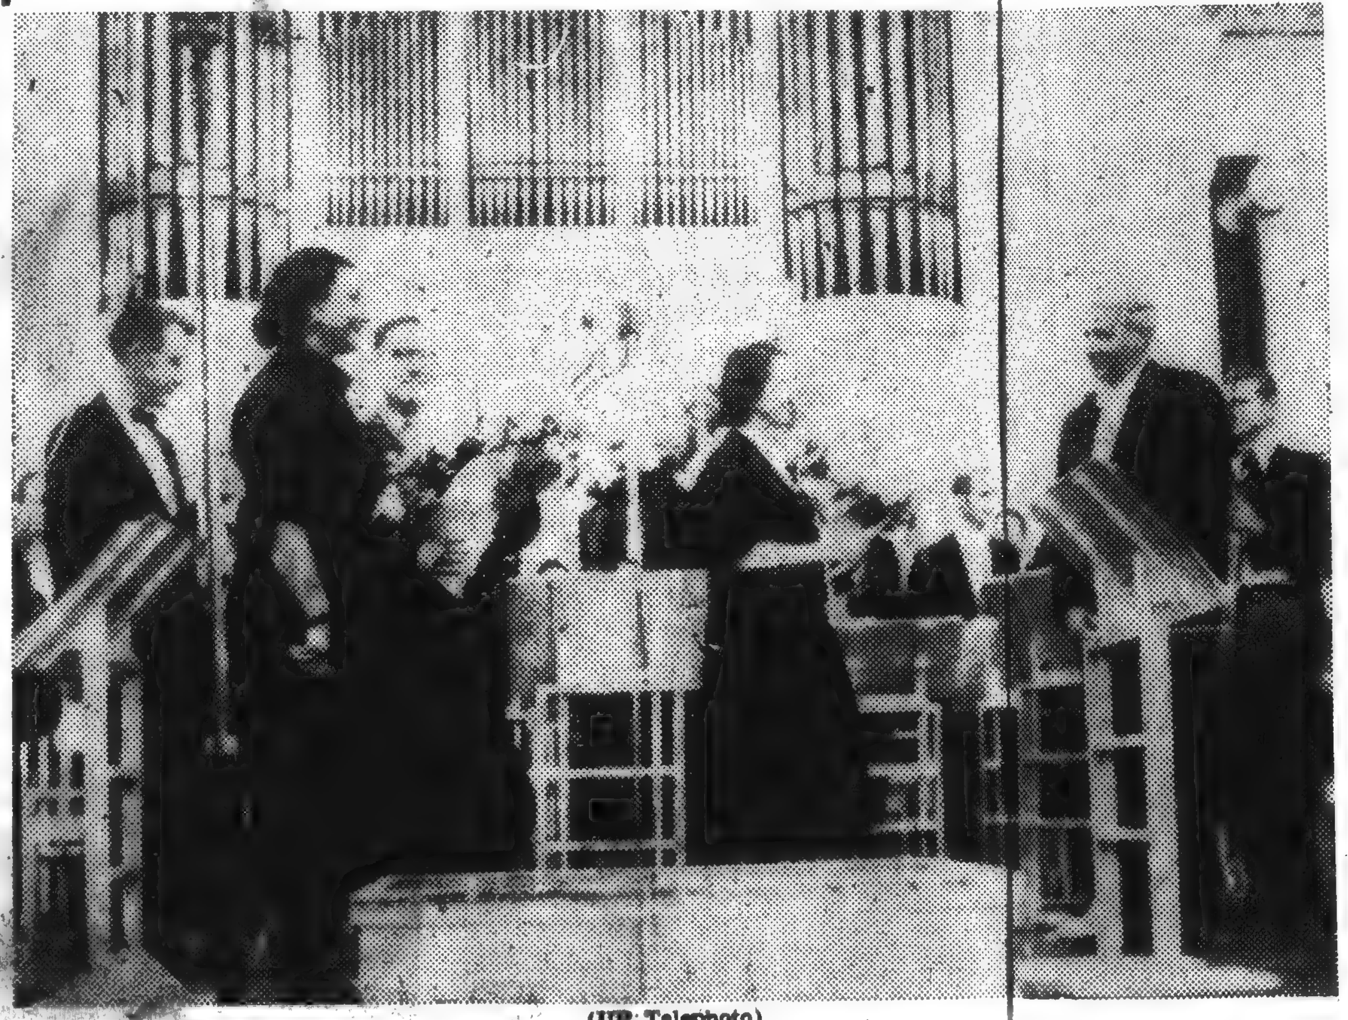


New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 10 1956

Flowers For The Finest



(UP Telephoto)

BOUQUETS FOR BOSTON SYMPHONY—Charles Munch, (right) conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, accepts several bouquets of flowers prior to orchestra's concert at Leningrad in Soviet Union. Holding bouquet at left is Thomas D. Perry (glasses), manager of the orchestra.

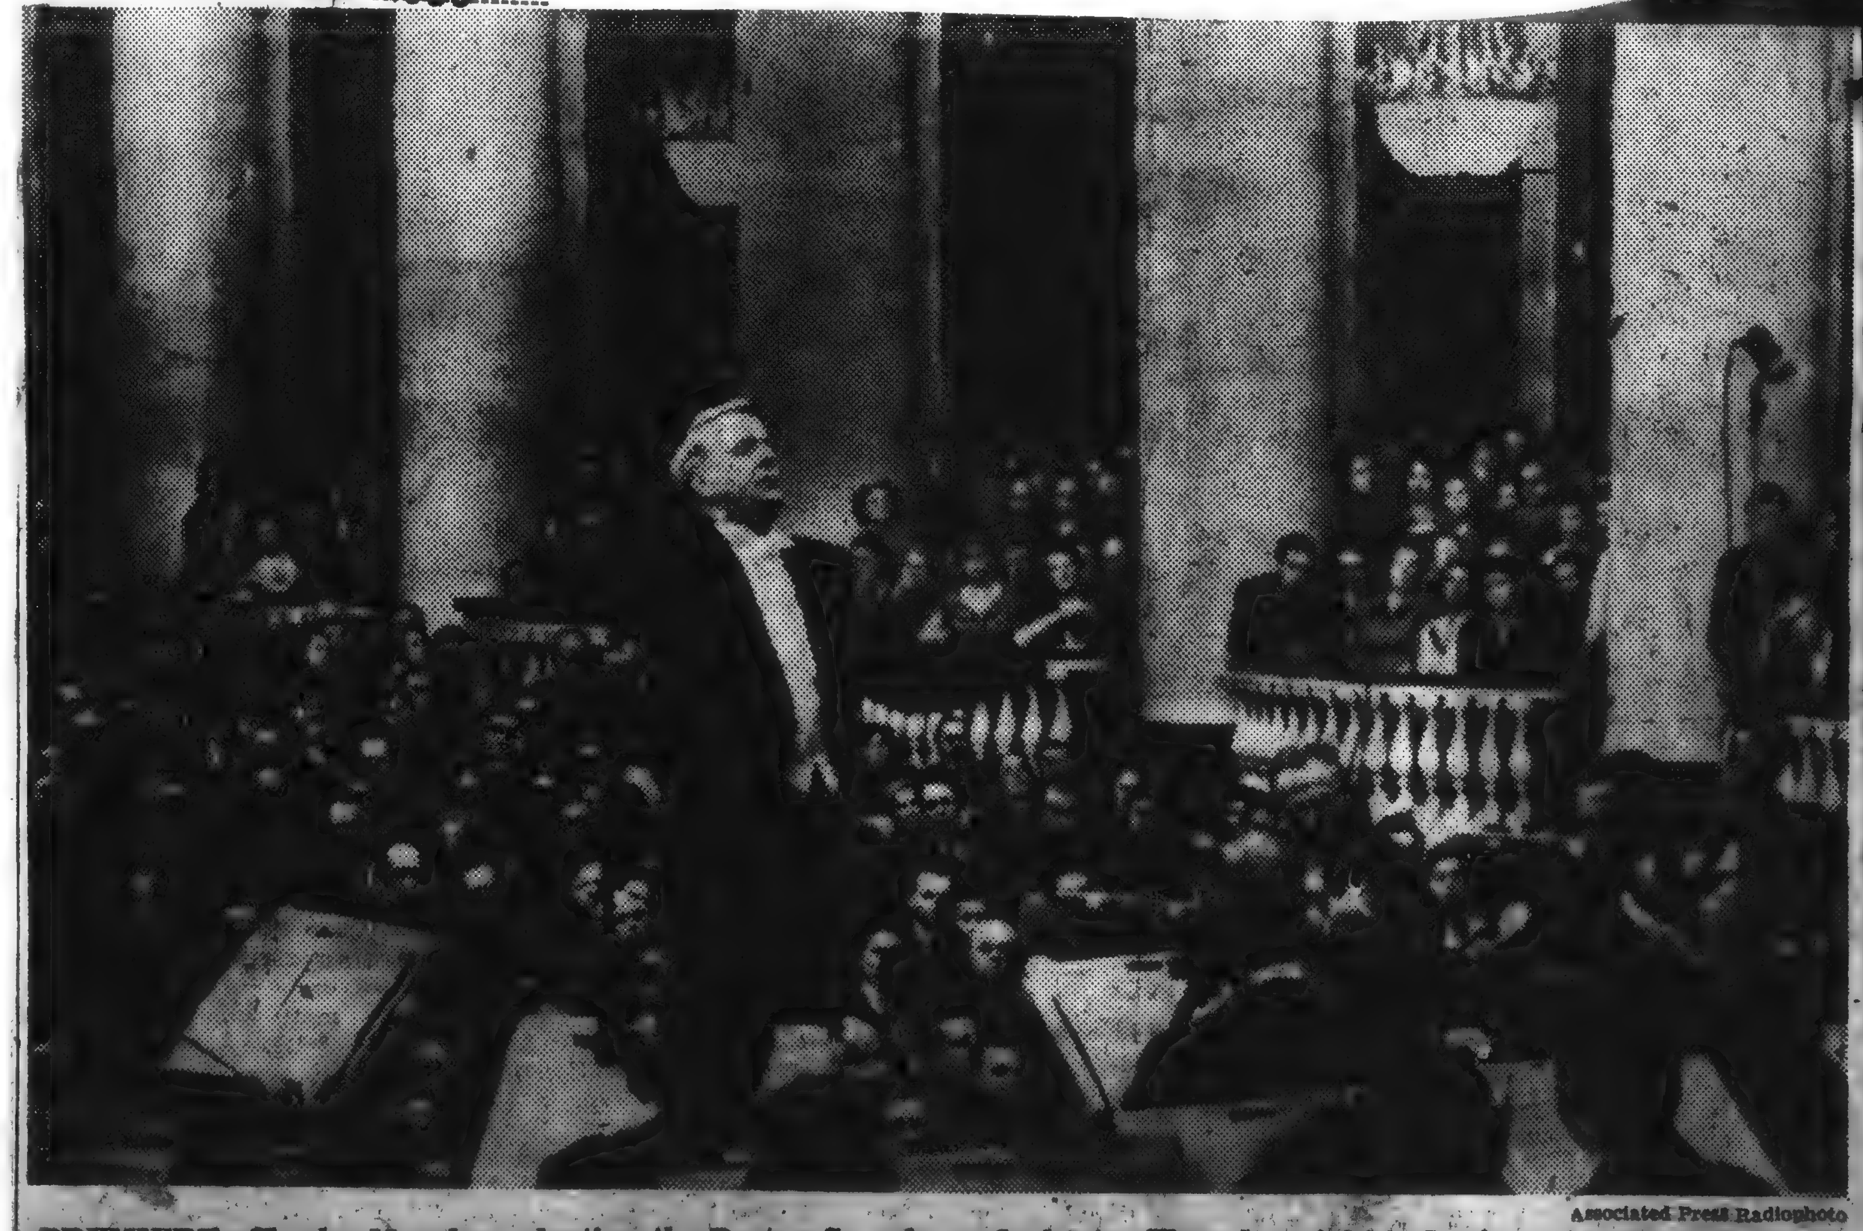
Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

RUDIV

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

SEP 8 1956



Associated Press Radiophoto

PREMIERE: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra Thursday night in Leningrad in first of several concerts in the Soviet Union. The Boston, acclaimed by the audience, is first U. S. orchestra to play in Soviet Union.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal-Courier (m)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 20,613

SEP 8 1956

Today

bor Urged To Face Facts
ight To Work' Fight . . .

AVID LAWRENCE

TON, Sept. 6—When the Secabor—himself a critic of "right aws—says that the Democratic "hypocritical" and that organ-annot get the legislation it wants ny of the Democrats in Con-ever vote for it, this would seem e of news.
Mitchell feels that organized t facing the situation realistic-opyrighted interview in the curof U. S. News & World Report, declares that repeal of the pro-e Taft-Hartley act which pertes to pass "right to work" laws accomplished in the foreseeable says:
that organized labor should be ough to know that with the pres-here or climate of the country, f 'overhaul' (of the Taft-Hartley they would expect cannot come rdless of what administration is Democratic States

mple, with respect to the so-called ork' laws which the Democratic Chicago promised to abolish, las the states which have passed are predominantly Democratic. states which have these laws, 13
cratic: Alabama, Arizona, Arkanda, Georgia, Louisiana, Missis-

NEA Service, Inc.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BRISTOL, VA.
Virginia-Tennessean
Circ. D. 5,949

SEP 1 0 1956

First Since 1917

For the first time since the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917, an American Symphony orchestra played in Russia. The Boston Symphony, currently on tour in Europe, played in Lenningrad in the hall of the Conservatory. Outside the marbled column auditorium there were hundreds who were unable to buy tickets. Many of these stopped the orchestra members as they came from the hall after the concert and asked them why they did not stay longer and give more concerts. The success of the concert was so overwhelming they were forced to play an encore, something American major symphony orchestras never do.

To cap the climax of their triumph, Moscow Radio called the concert "a great success." Such warm praise of American effort is seldom granted us by Radio Moscow.

In America, last winter, Soviet performers such as the legendary David Oistraikh played to capacity audiences in Carnegie Hall and elsewhere. Like many Soviet performers, Oistraikh outsells some Americans in record sales here.

All of this merely proves that much of the quarreling we do with other countries is the fault of the leaders of the country. The ability of the peoples to get along with and to appreciate each other is demonstrated in this manner.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Express (e)
PORTLAND, Me.
Independent Republican
Circ. 30,719

SEP 13 1956

Soviet Orchestra May Visit U. S.

LONDON (AP) — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quoted by Moscow Radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Call (e)
WOONSOCKET, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 25,6

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
BARRE, Vt.
Republican
Circ. 8,248

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420
Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,640

SEP 13 1956

MUNCH PLANS TOUR FOR RUSSIAN ORCHESTRA

LONDON (AP) — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quoted by Moscow radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Gazette (e)
TAUNTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 11,035

SEP 13 1956

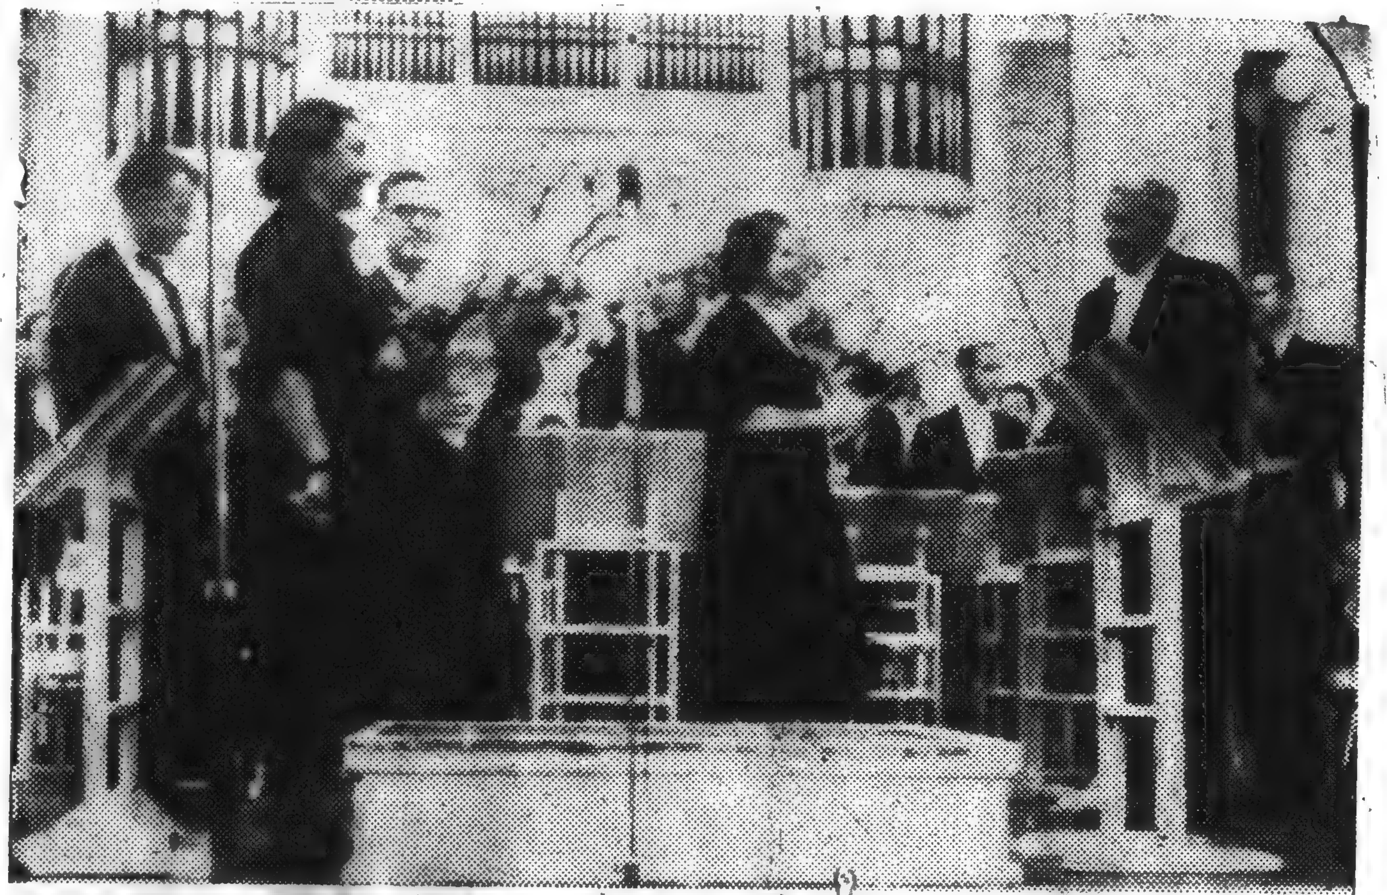
Conductor Plans U.S. Tour For Reds

LONDON (AP) — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quoted by Moscow radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Gazette (e)
HAVERHILL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 19,039

SEP 12 1956



BOUQUETS FOR BOSTON SYMPHONY—Charles Munch (R), conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, receives several bouquets of flowers prior to the orchestra's concert at Leningrad Philoharmonic Hall, Leningrad, Russia. With the women making the presentation is Ilya Schpilberg (just right of the microphone in C), concertmaster of the Leningrad Philharmonic. Holding bouquet at left is Thomas D. Perry (glasses), manager of the Boston Symphony. The orchestra, on a European tour, was in Leningrad last Thursday and Friday. (Unifax R)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420
American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,485

SEP 13 1956

Leningrad Musicians May Make U. S. Tour

London, Sept. 13—(AP)—Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was quoted by Moscow Radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

SEP 8 1956

The BSO in Leningrad

Even if there had been no cold war, the tour of an American symphony orchestra into Russia would have been an event of epochal artistic importance. Taking an American orchestra to the British Isles and the capitals of eastern Europe is a major financial undertaking, calling for the help of capitalistic angels and foundations. Violinist Isaac Stern, for instance, going to Russia for a series of concerts is a miniscule operation in comparison to transporting into Moscovy a 104-man symphony orchestra with its librarians, baggagemasters and managerial staff. Therefore, when these comrades not compromising the political and artistic elite complain that the Boston Symphony Orchestra's stay is far too short and that there should be many more than the five scheduled concerts in the U.S.S.R. so that more of them could hear a U.S. symphony orchestra, there are good capitalistic reasons why it can not be so.

Actually, the triumph of the BSO in Leningrad (and its anticipated tumultuous reception in Moscow) could only come because, firstly, the group was officially invited to make the trip and, secondly, because the Russian government agreed to underwrite all the expenses of the tour while the band was on Russian soil. This is considerable help, indeed. Let it be noted that a U.S. symphony organization, even at its home concert halls, is a deficit proposition and its red ink must be absorbed by the black ink in the checkbooks of its rich well-wishers. Otherwise, tickets would have to be so high that the middle-class public could not afford to attend regularly.

And, of course, there is another, and more compelling, reason why the BSO can not make an extended tour of Russia. It has its own commitments at Symphony Hall in Boston come early October. This is assuming that the Russian government would continue to be willing to pick up the tab for additional concerts at Kiev, Rostov, Odessa, Kharkov, or the cities on the Volga which Serge Koussevitzky as a rising young Russian conductor visited with a symphony orchestra on a steamboat in Czarist days.

However, the very indignation of the comrades at their short artistic shrift is some indication of the supranational hunger and thirst which exists and which transcends political differences. Our curiosity about the Russian Ballet can be no less than theirs about our own Tanglewood orchestra. So let there be more interchange of the performing and visual arts. Here is where foreign aid, on a two-way basis, makes sense, and leaves everyone richer—and just possibly less bellicose. And let us not forget who it was that first parted the curtain.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Windham County
Observer
PUTNAM, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,860

SEP 12 1956

Musicians In Russia—

It is pleasant to learn of the warm reception the Boston Symphony Orchestra has received in Leningrad, where it became the first American orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union. Pleasant, too, is the news that the Boston Symphony's concerts in the Soviet Union will provide a chance to introduce the compositions of contemporary American composers to Soviet audiences. The people who gave the world Tchaikovsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff and Shostakovich have had all too little opportunity these past years to hear American music. It is good that the beginnings of such opportunity are now available, and in the Boston Symphony our musical culture has one of its foremost representatives.

—New York Times

* * * * * * * * * *

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

SEP 11 1956

Leningrad Is Jumpin'

The Boston Symphony Orchestra didn't make its Russian debut exactly as scheduled, but it apparently was quite a hit, nevertheless.

At Leningrad, the first stop on its tour of the Soviet Union, three members of the orchestra took over the bandstand at the Hotel Europe for a few choruses of "Where or When." The combination of bass, vibraphone and drums had the ballroom jumping, from all reports.

This may not have been the type of cutural interchange the orchestra's tour is aimed at bringing about. But cultural or not, it went over big with the audience. And that's what counts.

The next step, logically, would be to send Louis Armstrong and his group to follow up this initial missionary work. Not that we don't have faith in the Boston Symphony. We do. But if jazz is the thing that will do the trick, Louis is the man to solidify any temporary gains the symphonists may have racked up.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BRISTOL, VA.
Virginia-Tennessean
Circ. D. 5,949

SEP 1 0 1956

First Since 1917

For the first time since the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917, an American Symphony orchestra played in Russia. The Boston Symphony, currently on tour in Europe, played in Lenningrad in the hall of the Conservatory. Outside the marbled column auditorium there were hundreds who were unable to buy tickets. Many of these stopped the orchestra members as they came from the hall after the concert and asked them why they did not stay longer and give more concerts. The success of the concert was so overwhelming they were forced to play an encore, something American major symphony orchestras never do.

To cap the climax of their triumph, Moscow Radio called the concert "a great success." Such warm praise of American effort is seldom granted us by Radio Moscow.

In America, last winter, Soviet performers such as the legendary David Oistraikh played to capacity audiences in Carnegie Hall and elsewhere. Like many Soviet performers, Oistraikh outsells some Americans in record sales here.

All of this merely proves that much of the quarreling we do with other countries is the fault of the leaders of the country. The ability of the peoples to get along with and to appreciate each other is demonstrated in this manner.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Express (e)
PORTLAND, Me.
Independent Republican
Circ. 30,719
SEP 13 1956

Soviet Orchestra May Visit U. S.

LONDON (AP) — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quoted by Moscow Radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

Munch Hopes To Bring Red Musicians To U.S.

LONDON (AP) — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quoted by Moscow radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview.

"I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

MUNCH PROPOSES SOVIET U. S. TOUR

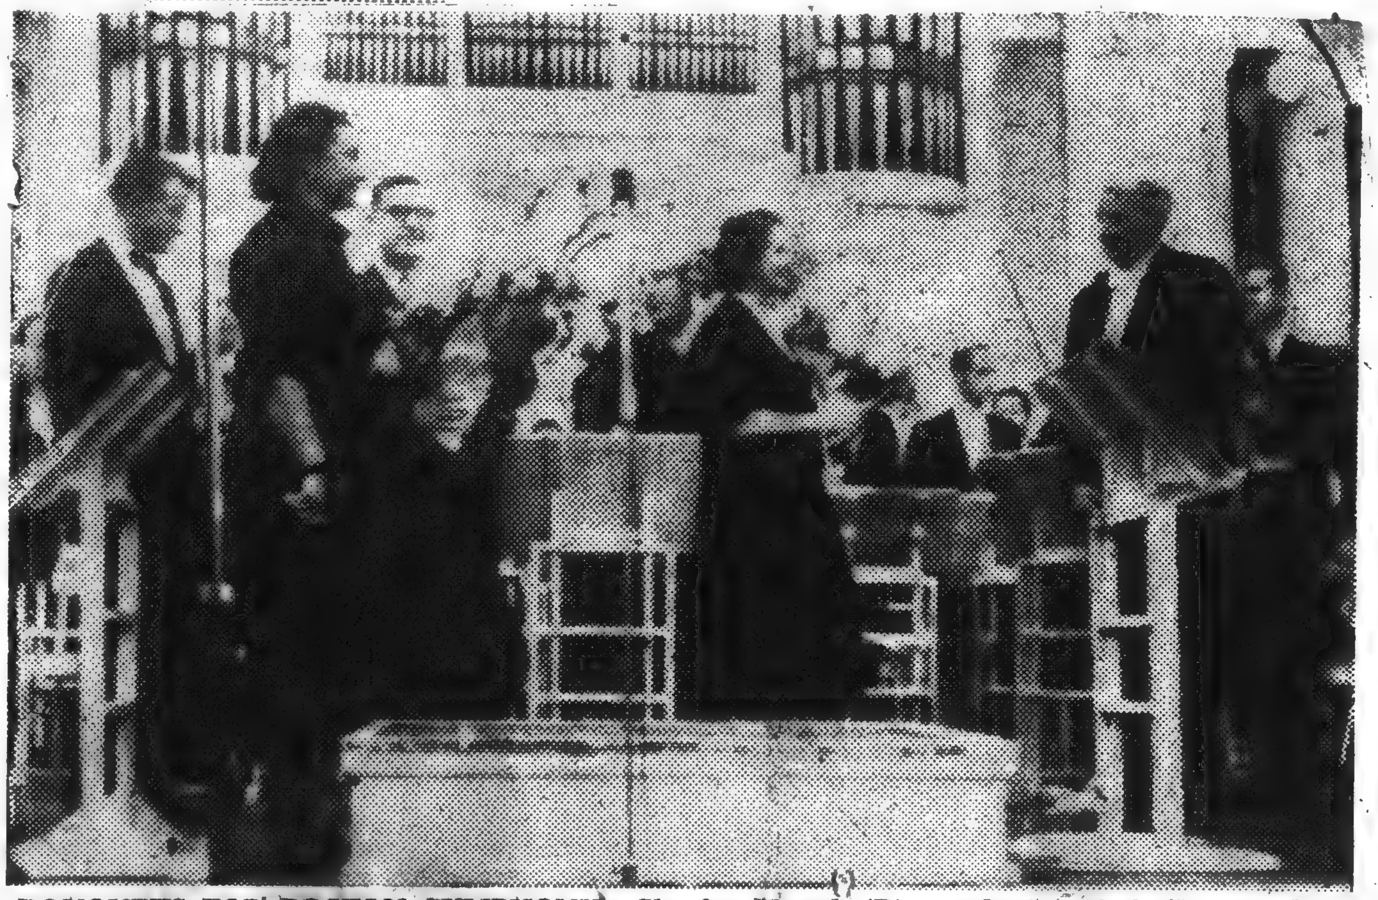
LONDON (AP) — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quoted by Moscow radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
HAVERHILL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 19,039

SEP 12 1956



BOUQUETS FOR BOSTON SYMPHONY—Charles Munch (R), conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, receives several bouquets of flowers prior to the orchestra's concert at Leningrad Philoharmonic Hall, Leningrad, Russia. With the women making the presentation is Ilya Schpilberg (just right of the microphone in C), concertmaster of the Leningrad Philharmonic. Holding bouquet at left is Thomas D. Perry (glasses), manager of the Boston Symphony. The orchestra, on a European tour, was in Leningrad last Thursday and Friday. (Unifax R)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-420

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,485

SEP 13 1956

Leningrad Musicians May Make U. S. Tour

London, Sept. 13—(AP)—Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was quoted by Moscow Radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

---

kshire Eagle (e)
TSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

SEP 8 1956

The BSO in Leningrad

Even if there had been no cold war, the tour of an American symphony orchestra into Russia would have been an event of epochal artistic importance. Taking an American orchestra to the British Isles and the capitals of eastern Europe is a major financial undertaking, calling for the help of capitalistic angels and foundations. Violinist Isaac Stern, for instance, going to Russia for a series of concerts is a miniscule operation in comparison to transporting into Moscovy a 104-man symphony orchestra with its librarians, baggagemasters and managerial staff. Therefore, when these comrades not compromising the political and artistic elite complain that the Boston Symphony Orchestra's stay is far too short and that there should be many more than the five scheduled concerts in the U.S.S.R. so that more of them could hear a U.S. symphony orchestra, there are good capitalistic reasons why it can not be so.

Actually, the triumph of the BSO in Leningrad (and its anticipated tumultuous reception in Moscow) could only come because, firstly, the group was officially invited to make the trip and, secondly, because the Russian government agreed to underwrite all the expenses of the tour while the band was on Russian soil. This is considerable help, indeed. Let it be noted that a U.S. symphony organization, even at its home concert halls, is a deficit proposition and its red ink must be absorbed by the black ink in the checkbooks of its rich well-wishers. Otherwise, tickets would have to be so high that the middle-class public could not afford to attend regularly.

And, of course, there is another, and more compelling, reason why the BSO can not make an extended tour of Russia. It has its own commitments at Symphony Hall in Boston come early October. This is assuming that the Russian government would continue to be willing to pick up the tab for additional concerts at Kiev, Rostov, Odessa, Kharkov, or the cities on the Volga which Serge Koussevitzky as a rising young Russian conductor visited with a symphony orchestra on a steamboat in Czarist days.

However, the very indignation of the comrades at their short artistic shrift is some indication of the supranational hunger and thirst which exists and which transcends political differences. Our curiosity about the Russian Ballet can be no less than theirs about our own Tanglewood orchestra. So let there be more interchange of the performing and visual arts. Here is where foreign aid, on a two-way basis, makes sense, and leaves everyone richer—and just possibly less bellicose. And let us not forget who it was that first parted the curtain.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Windham County
Observer
PUTNAM, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,860

SEP 12 1956

Musicians In Russia—

It is pleasant to learn of the warm reception the Boston Symphony Orchestra has received in Leningrad, where it became the first American orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union. Pleasant, too, is the news that the Boston Symphony's concerts in the Soviet Union will provide a chance to introduce the compositions of contemporary American composers to Soviet audiences. The people who gave the world Tchaikovsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff and Shostakovich have had all too little opportunity these past years to hear American music. It is good that the beginnings of such opportunity are now available, and in the Boston Symphony our musical culture has one of its foremost representatives.

—New York Times

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

SEP 11 1956

Leningrad Is Jumpin'

The Boston Symphony Orchestra didn't make its Russian debut exactly as scheduled, but it apparently was quite a hit, nevertheless.

At Leningrad, the first stop on its tour of the Soviet Union, three members of the orchestra took over the bandstand at the Hotel Europe for a few choruses of "Where or When." The combination of bass, vibraphone and drums had the ballroom jumping, from all reports.

This may not have been the type of cutural interchange the orchestra's tour is aimed at bringing about. But cultural or not, it went over big with the audience. And that's what counts.

The next step, logically, would be to send Louis Armstrong and his group to follow up this initial missionary work. Not that we don't have faith in the Boston Symphony. We do. But if jazz is the thing that will do the trick, Louis is the man to solidify any temporary gains the symphonists may have racked up.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BRISTOL, VA.
Virginia-Tennessean
Circ. D. 5,949

SEP 1 0 1956

First Since 1917

For the first time since the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917, an American Symphony orchestra played in Russia. The Boston Symphony, currently on tour in Europe, played in Lenningrad in the hall of the Conservatory. Outside the marbled column auditorium there were hundreds who were unable to buy tickets. Many of these stopped the orchestra members as they came from the hall after the concert and asked them why they did not stay longer and give more concerts. The success of the concert was so overwhelming they were forced to play an encore, something American major symphony orchestras never do.

To cap the climax of their triumph, Moscow Radio called the concert "a great success." Such warm praise of American effort is seldom granted us by Radio Moscow.

In America, last winter, Soviet performers such as the legendary David Oistraikh played to capacity audiences in Carnegie Hall and elsewhere. Like many Soviet performers, Oistraikh outsells some Americans in record sales here.

All of this merely proves that much of the quarreling we do with other countries is the fault of the leaders of the country. The ability of the peoples to get along with and to appreciate each other is demonstrated in this manner.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Express (e)
PORTLAND, Me.
Independent Republican
Circ. 30,719

SEP 13 1956

Soviet Orchestra May Visit U. S.

LONDON (AP) — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quoted by Moscow Radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

Soviets Say Munch Wants Red Musicians Tour US

LONDON (AP) — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quoted by Moscow radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

MUNCH PROPOSES SOVIET U. S. TOUR

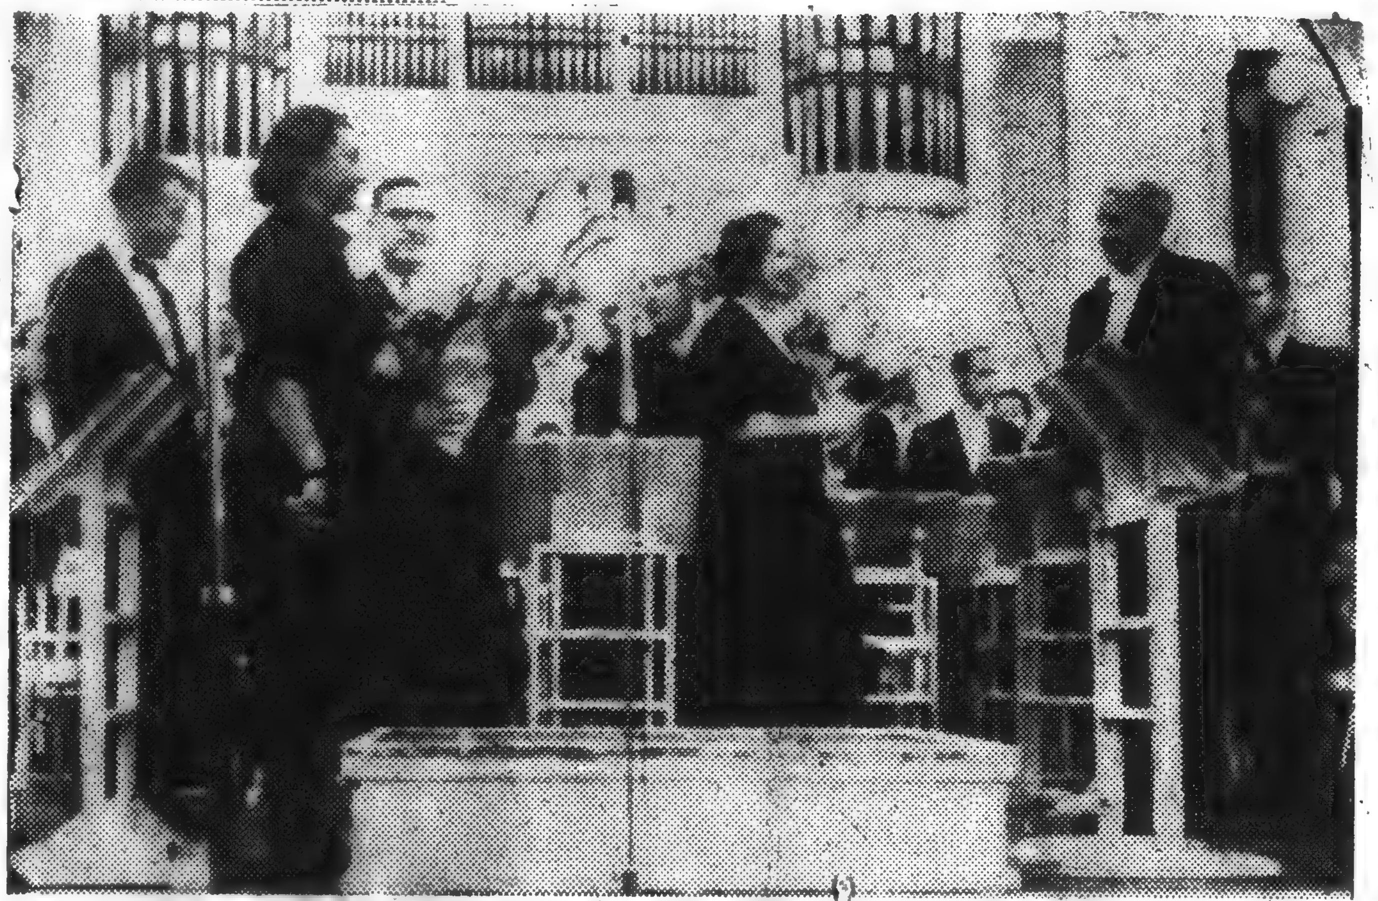
LONDON (AP) — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quoted by Moscow radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
HAVERHILL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 19,039

SEP 12 1956



BOUQUETS FOR BOSTON SYMPHONY—Charles Munch (R), conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, receives several bouquets of flowers prior to the orchestra's concert at Leningrad Philoharmonic Hall, Leningrad, Russia. With the women making the presentation is Ilya Schpilberg (just right of the microphone in C), concertmaster of the Leningrad Philharmonic. Holding bouquet at left is Thomas D. Perry (glasses), manager of the Boston Symphony. The orchestra, on a European tour, was in Leningrad last Thursday and Friday. (Unifax R)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,485

SEP 13 1956

Leningrad Musicians May Make U. S. Tour

London, Sept. 13—(AP)—Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quoted by Moscow Radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

---

shire Eagle (e)
TSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

SEP 8 1956

The BSO in Leningrad

Even if there had been no cold war, the tour of an American symphony orchestra into Russia would have been an event of epochal artistic importance. Taking an American orchestra to the British Isles and the capitals of eastern Europe is a major financial undertaking, calling for the help of capitalistic angels and foundations. Violinist Isaac Stern, for instance, going to Russia for a series of concerts is a miniscule operation in comparison to transporting into Moscovy a 104-man symphony orchestra with its librarians, baggagemasters and managerial staff. Therefore, when these comrades not compromising the political and artistic elite complain that the Boston Symphony Orchestra's stay is far too short and that there should be many more than the five scheduled concerts in the U.S.S.R. so that more of them could hear a U.S. symphony orchestra, there are good capitalistic reasons why it can not be so.

Actually, the triumph of the BSO in Leningrad (and its anticipated tumultuous reception in Moscow) could only come because, firstly, the group was officially invited to make the trip and, secondly, because the Russian government agreed to underwrite all the expenses of the tour while the band was on Russian soil. This is considerable help, indeed. Let it be noted that a U.S. symphony organization, even at its home concert halls, is a deficit proposition and its red ink must be absorbed by the black ink in the checkbooks of its rich well-wishers. Otherwise, tickets would have to be so high that the middle-class public could not afford to attend regularly.

And, of course, there is another, and more compelling, reason why the BSO can not make an extended tour of Russia. It has its own commitments at Symphony Hall in Boston come early October. This is assuming that the Russian government would continue to be willing to pick up the tab for additional concerts at Kiev, Rostov, Odessa, Kharkov, or the cities on the Volga which Serge Koussevitzky as a rising young Russian conductor visited with a symphony orchestra on a steamboat in Czarist days.

However, the very indignation of the comrades at their short artistic shrift is some indication of the supranational hunger and thirst which exists and which transcends political differences. Our curiosity about the Russian Ballet can be no less than theirs about our own Tanglewood orchestra. So let there be more interchange of the performing and visual arts. Here is where foreign aid, on a two-way basis, makes sense, and leaves everyone richer—and just possibly less bellicose. And let us not forget who it was that first parted the curtain.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Windham County
Observer
PUTNAM, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,860

SEP 12 1956

Musicians In Russia—

It is pleasant to learn of the warm reception the Boston Symphony Orchestra has received in Leningrad, where it became the first American orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union. Pleasant, too, is the news that the Boston Symphony's concerts in the Soviet Union will provide a chance to introduce the compositions of contemporary American composers to Soviet audiences. The people who gave the world Tchaikovsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff and Shostakovich have had all too little opportunity these past years to hear American music. It is good that the beginnings of such opportunity are now available, and in the Boston Symphony our musical culture has one of its foremost representatives.

—New York Times

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

SEP 11 1956

Leningrad Is Jumpin'

The Boston Symphony Orchestra didn't make its Russian debut exactly as scheduled, but it apparently was quite a hit, nevertheless.

At Leningrad, the first stop on its tour of the Soviet Union, three members of the orchestra took over the bandstand at the Hotel Europe for a few choruses of "Where or When." The combination of bass, vibraphone and drums had the ballroom jumping, from all reports.

This may not have been the type of cutural interchange the orchestra's tour is aimed at bringing about. But cultural or not, it went over big with the audience. And that's what counts.

The next step, logically, would be to send Louis Armstrong and his group to follow up this initial missionary work. Not that we don't have faith in the Boston Symphony. We do. But if jazz is the thing that will do the trick, Louis is the man to solidify any temporary gains the symphonists may have racked up.

[146]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DENVER, COLO.
POST
Circ. D. 236,366 - S. 353,675

SEP 16 1956

Just Unlucky

THIS has been a great season for the dissemination of American culture to peoples overseas, including the Communists of Russia and Yugoslavia.

The Boston Symphony has been received with ecstatic enthusiasm by audiences in Leningrad and Moscow—so ecstatic, in fact, that it was necessary to abandon the orchestra's long-standing rule against no encores.

Now comes word that the American Ballet Theater is knocking them dead in Zagreb and Belgrade, performing traditional pieces and also such contemporaries as Aaron Copland's "Rodeo."

Rave reviews have filled the papers and critics with cowboy stardust in their eyes have acclaimed "Rodeo" as a notable "folklore ballet."

WE WISH we could report as favorably on the experience of Manchester, England, with American "culture." There an American movie, "Rock Around the Clock," was shown last Sunday and Monday—both times with rather disastrous results.

Teenagers danced in the aisles of the theater, threw light bulbs from the balcony, jumped on the stage, turned a fire hose on the manager who tried to restore order and then stampeded into a downtown street to halt traffic and batter cars and busses with their fists.

Well, America is a country of vast variety—in "culture" as well as everything else. Our sympathy goes out to the people of Manchester who were unfortunate enough to draw rock and roll as their sample rather than the American Ballet or the Boston orchestra.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

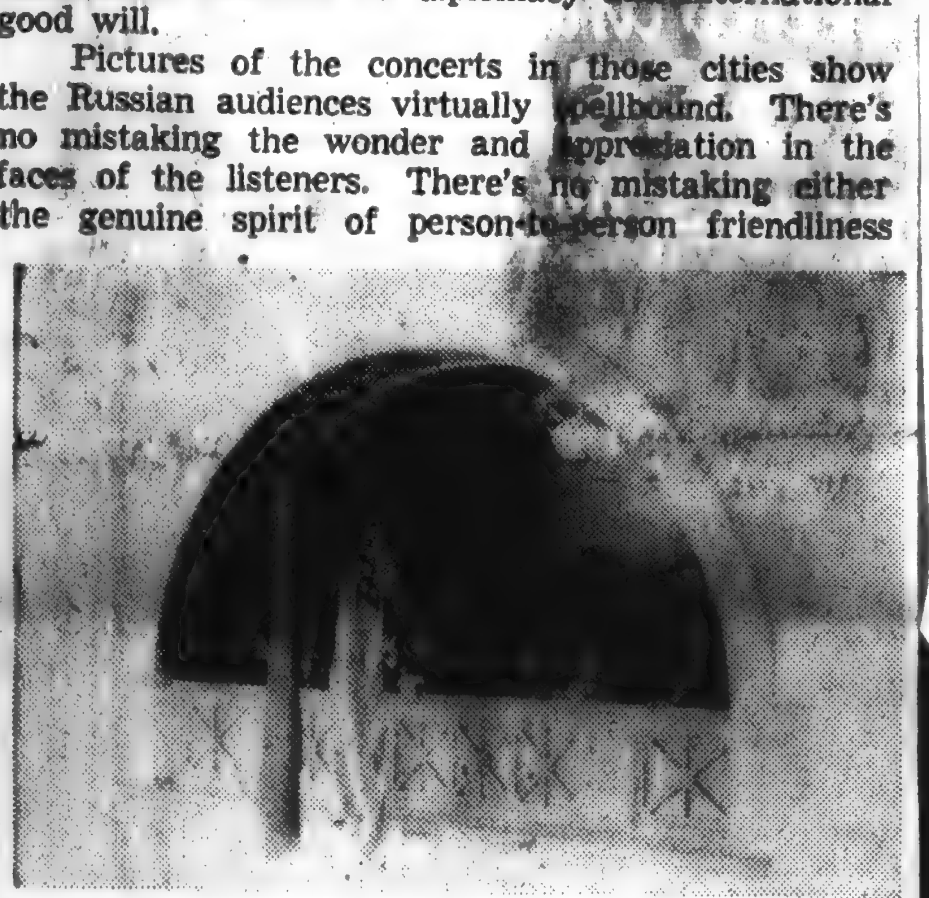
SEP 19 1956

Symphony and Harmony

THE reports that keep coming in from the Boston Symphony's tour of Europe show beyond question that the State Department owes this excellent organization a loud expression of thanks. That's especially true for the impression left by the orchestra on the Russians.

In every appearance, the tour has been a success. But in the Leningrad and Moscow appearances, conductor Charles Munch and his group accomplished wonders for diplomacy and international good will.

Pictures of the concerts in those cities show the Russian audiences virtually spellbound. There's no mistaking the wonder and appreciation in the faces of the listeners. There's no mistaking either the genuine spirit of person-to-person friendliness in the reports of the mingling between the Russians and the Boston musicians.



AS SYMPHONY PLAYED IN LENINGRAD

It's a pleasing relief from the spirit of cold suspicion that has been forced into international relations by the Soviet leaders.

Unquestionably the visit of the Boston group has convinced many a Russian that the friendship of America is worth cultivating.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

The Camera Eye

Boston Photographer Has No Trouble in Russia

HE IRON CURTAIN—A Russian youngster (left) gets a first-hand look can Strobe-light held by Ed Fitzgerald of Jamaica Plain, United Press r. The scene is Red Square, Moscow. Camera is a Rolleiflex. This photo ith delayed action release on another Rollei which was set on the ground et away.

By GIL FRIEDBERG
Globe Camera Editor

erald, manager of the United Press picture bureau in Boston, recently returned from a six-week tour of Europe with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Included was a seven-day visit to Leningrad and Moscow.

Despite warnings of camera censorship from travelers, who had been to these cities before him, Fitzgerald experienced full photographic freedom in both Russia and Russian controlled Czecho-Slovakia.

★ ★ ★

The packaging of the Russian film was very shoddy indeed and the Soviet photographers showed unrestrained joy as they received their neatly packaged American film.

A Polaroid camera, brought along by one of the members of the orchestra, caused a near riot among the Russians on hand to meet the musicians at the Moscow Railroad station. Despite this, one of the interpreters sidled up to Fitzgerald and quickly informed him that "they had cameras just like that in the Soviet Union."

It may be true that cameras of this type have been built in Russia but evidently no one seemed to know about it, least of all the Russians. Strobe light is also used by Russian photographers, although their equipment is bulky and inefficient looking. Red cameramen constantly marveled at the compact Dormitizer DB-1B which Fitzgerald carried with him. They examined it closely and asked all sorts of questions regarding its efficiency.

Basic equipment used on the tour were two Contax II cameras with the 35mm Biogon wide angle lens, a 50mm Sonnar normal focal length lens and a 135mm Sonnar telephoto for long range pictures. These lenses covered nearly all the photographic problems that were encountered on the trip. A pair of Rolleiflex cameras were also brought along to round out the camera equipment.

The new high speed color film proved particularly valuable to Fitzgerald when it came to making color slides showing the Boston Symphony Orchestra inside some of the fabulous concert halls in Leningrad and Moscow. Brief time exposures with the contax mounted on a tripod resulted in excellent transparencies. The film in this case was for artificial light sources. The halls, in most cases, were brilliantly illuminated, and only natural light was used.

The main worry plaguing Fitzgerald while in Russia was whether or not the Russians might demand that all film be processed before he left the country. However, this threat failed to materialize and he landed in free Austria several days later with the undisturbed cache of exposed black and white and color film stacked in his foot locker.

None of the film was sent back to the United States from Russia. Instead Ed waited until he got to Vienna where most of the Russian and Czecho-Slovakian pictures were shipped. A second shipment of the once-in-a-lifetime photos was made from Stuttgart, Ger., in the event of any slip-up on the first batch. All the films arrived safely in Boston, however.

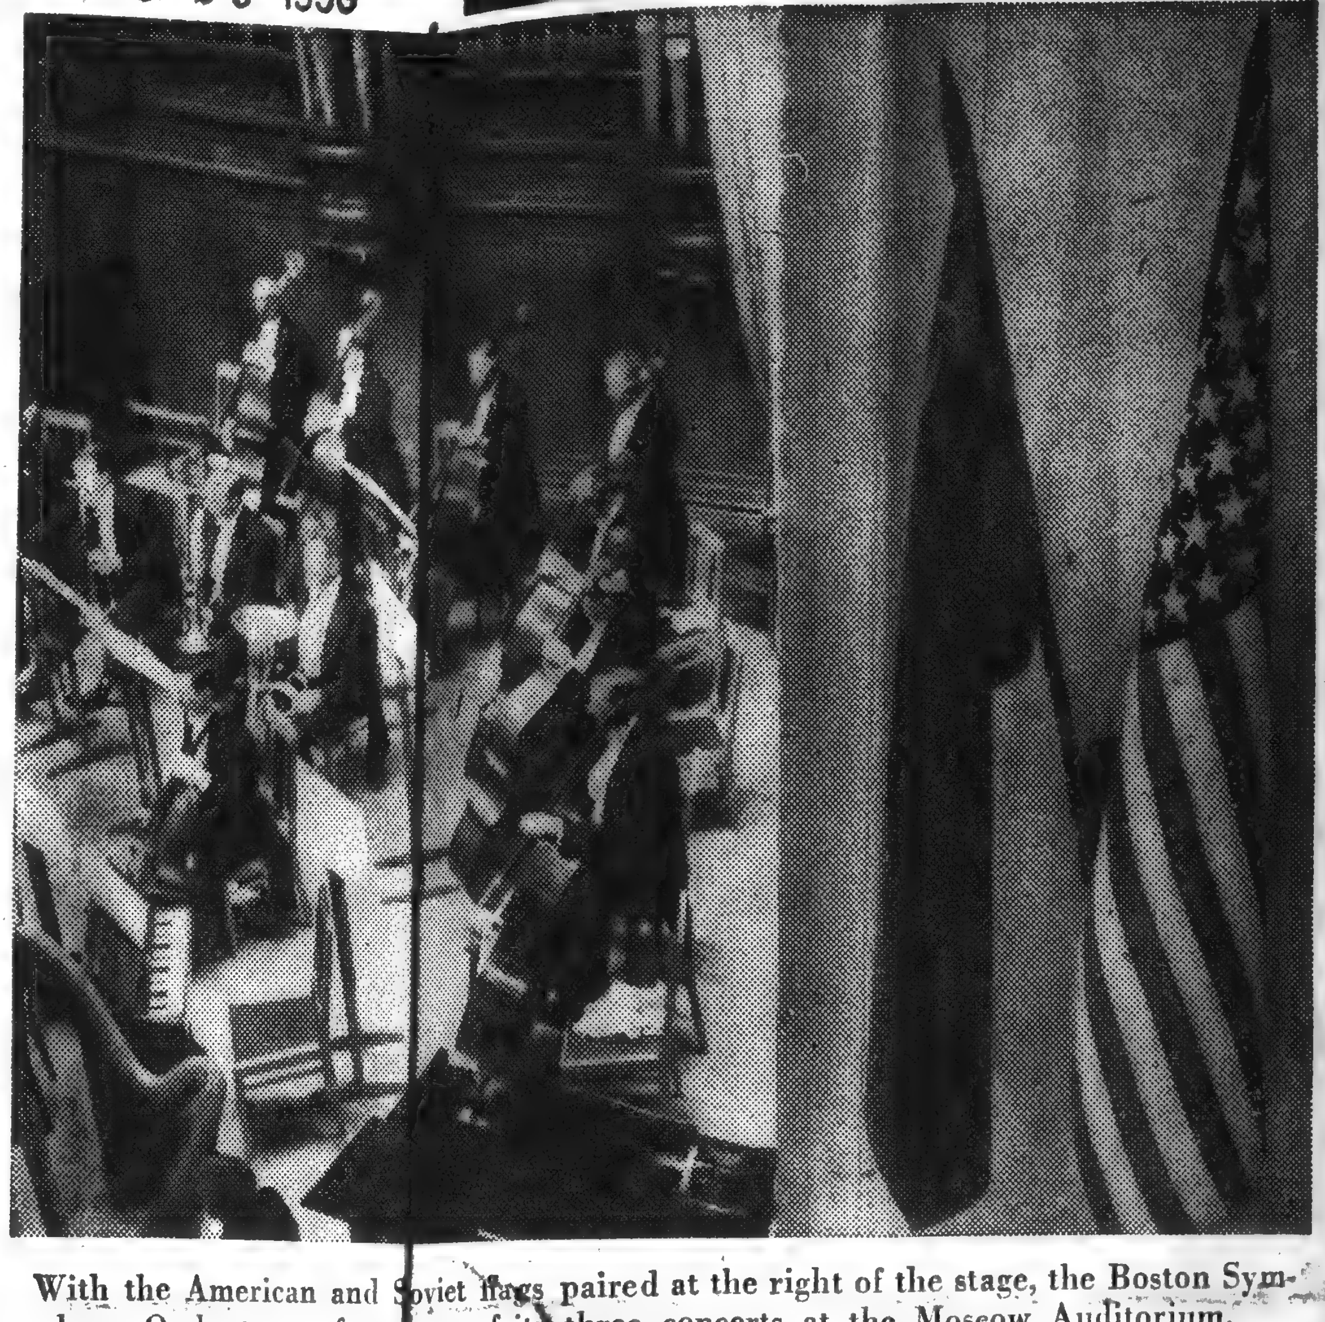
Later, they were distributed to newspapers and wire services. In many cases, the pictures were handled by picture services in Europe who took the responsibility of getting the pictures to America.

To sum up the trip, Ed found that his selection of the smaller cameras for this trip proved to be a wise choice. Constant travel from one country to another and the lack of storage and baggage facilities calls for the lightest possible equipment. Customs problems throughout Europe were practically non-existent. The longest delays were experienced at Glasgow, Scotland, and at Logan Airport after the trip ended. Officials at these ports double-checked the legitimacy of Fitzgerald's horde of camera equipment. The delays were brief in these two cases when the nature of the photographer's job was fully explained.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 S. 5?-253

SEP 23 1956



With the American and Soviet flags paired at the right of the stage, the Boston Symphony Orchestra performs one of its three concerts at the Moscow Auditorium.

Reds Hail Boston Orchestra

Their Rendition of Soviet Anthem Is Praised by Leningrad Audience

By B. J. CUTLER

MOSCOW.

When the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its concert tour of the Soviet Union in Leningrad two weeks ago, it began by playing the Soviet National Anthem as a goodwill gesture. Later musicians and lay members of the gala first night audience told the visiting Americans they had never before heard their anthem played so well.

This small incident was typical of the reception received by the orchestra during its precedent-setting Russian visit.

Standbys

The first American orchestra to play in Russia, the Boston Symphony was obviously a revelation to Soviet music circles. Its tour was a popular and critical success and it made a deep impression through the quality of its musicianship. In its five concerts, two in Leningrad and three here, the orchestra played to some 12,000 persons. These were largely the musical and cultural elite, for tickets were hard to come by. Many additional thousands heard the concerts on radio and television.

Part of each program contained familiar standbys—Beethoven, Haydn, Schubert, Ravel, Strauss—and these well known selections gave the audiences the greatest pleasure. They knew the music, were able to compare the performances with those heard before, and responded with violent applause.

A "Bis" or a Hiss

Also in each program was one selection of modern American music not well known here because of Russia's long cultural isolation from the West. Creston's Second Symphony and Piston's Sixth were politely received but did not evoke the enthusiasm shown older music. Copland's Symphonic Ode completely puzzled the Moscow audience. While some earnestly studied the music, many persons heatedly discussed the piece during the performance and laughed aloud at some of the percussion effects. One member of the orchestra thought "We laid a big egg" with it.

The orchestra found Russian audiences hard to understand at first. In Leningrad loud shouts of "bis" (encore) led the players to think they were being hissed. After the shout was translated for them they played an encore, an unusual response for the Boston Symphony.

Several of the members were stopped by Soviet musicians who expressed admiration for the fine instruments the visitors carried. An idea of how the instruments stood out here was also furnished by a review by Alxander Gauk, a well known conductor, in which he devoted a paragraph to hailing the orchestra's equipment as being, "Latest models of the best quality."

Gauk, writing in the newspaper "Sovietskaya Kultura," the most influential in its field, described Charles Munch as a perfect conductor and said that in each work he felt close contact between each member and the conductor. His review, which was an unqualified rave, again showed how difficult it is for visiting artists to know what to do here. The symphony deliberately played no Russian composers because, as one official put it, "We didn't want the Russians to think we were trying to show them how to play their own music."

"It was a great pity," Gauk wrote, "that there was in the program no single work of Russian classical music. We know the Boston Symphony has in its repertoire Tchaikovsky symphonies. It would be very interesting to hear them in the performance of such an orchestra."

In no review or critical comment made public here was there a comparison of the visiting orchestra with the leading Soviet symphonic groups. One reason may be that in private conversation some musicians and spectators said they had never heard an orchestra of higher quality.

---

land Newsclip A Boston 6 • Richm
hristian Scie Monitor (
OSTON, Ma
Non-partisa
Circ. 161,67
SEP 29 19

usic

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DENVER, COLO.
POST
Circ. D. 236,366 - S. 353,675

SEP 16 1956

r, rode into Buenos Aires at victorious army and succeed
president. Speaking to 100,
s gathered in the plaza bel
roclaimed in his inaugural addr
reed was "neither victors nor v Lonardi was ousted seven we inauguration, and died in a h
four months later, bitter

d happened?
e thunder of revolutionary re
men were dismayed by Lonar
d Lonardi mean, they asked, iistas who had ruled Argen ron fist for a decade could nishment for their sins? W di regime cut off the visible r
and his few top henchmen,
ntouched the roots of Peron

s precisely what some feare
to sense—was the soul of Lo
. They watched the governm
s the same labor leaders
d Peron shattered the revolut moon with a wave of worker
y saw the famed newspaper
seized by Peron in one of pisodes of journalistic hist ish in Peronista hands despite round the world for its immed
the founding Paz family.
s foes rebelled, and overth
palace coup without a shot b are-jawed Gen. Aramburu st tina's bizarre pink "governm
d took over the presidency.
defended their coup with t Lonardi, while a fine man let his government fall under xtreme rightwing, totalitaria
at was willing to woo Pero
r power.

●

URU took a firm grip and bro
out of chaos. He promptly

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 19 1956

Symphony and Harmony

THE reports that keep coming in from the Boston Symphony's ~~tour~~ of Europe show beyond question ~~that~~ the State Department owes this excellent organization a loud expression of thanks. That's especially true for the impression left by the orchestra on the Russians.

In every appearance, the tour has been a success. But in the Leningrad and Moscow appearances, conductor Charles Munch and his group accomplished wonders for diplomacy and international good will.

Pictures of the concerts in those cities show the Russian audiences virtually spellbound. There's no mistaking the wonder and appreciation in the faces of the listeners. There's no mistaking either the genuine spirit of person-to-person friendliness in the reports of the mingling between the Russians and the Boston musicians.

AS SYMPHONY PLAYED IN LENINGRAD

It's a pleasing relief from the spirit of cold suspicion that has been forced into international relations by the Soviet leaders.

Unquestionably the visit of the Boston group has convinced many a Russian that the friendship of America is worth cultivating.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

JAN 13 1957

The Camera Eye

Boston Photographer Has No Trouble in Russia

BEHIND THE IRON CURTAIN—A Russian youngster (left) gets a first-hand look at an American Strobe-light held by Ed Fitzgerald of Jamaica Plain, United Press photographer. The scene is Red Square, Moscow. Camera is a Rolleiflex. This photo was made with delayed action release on another Rollei which was set on the ground about ten feet away.

By GIL FRIEDBERG
Globe Camera Editor

Ed Fitzgerald, manager of the United Press picture bureau in Boston, recently returned from a six-week tour of Europe with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Included was a seven-day visit to Leningrad and Moscow.

Despite warnings of camera censorship from travelers, who had been to these cities before him, Fitzgerald experienced full photographic freedom in both Russia and Russian controlled Czecho-Slovakia.

★ ★ ★

The packaging of the Russian film was very shoddy indeed and the Soviet photographers showed unrestrained joy as they received their neatly packaged American film.

A Polaroid camera, brought along by one of the members of the orchestra, caused a near riot among the Russians on hand to meet the musicians at the Moscow Railroad station. Despite this, one of the interpreters sidled up to Fitzgerald and quickly informed him that "they had cameras just like that in the Soviet Union."

It may be true that cameras of this type have been built in Russia but evidently no one seemed to know about it, least of all the Russians. Strobe light is also used by Russian photographers, although their equipment is bulky and inefficient looking. Red cameramen constantly marveled at the compact Dormitizer DB-1B which Fitzgerald carried with him. They examined it closely and asked all sorts of questions regarding its efficiency.

Basic equipment used on the tour were two Contax II cameras with the 35mm Biogon wide angle lens, a 50mm Sonnar normal focal length lens and a 135mm Sonnar telephoto for long range pictures. These lenses covered nearly all the photographic problems that were encountered on the trip. A pair of Rolleiflex cameras were also brought along to round out the camera equipment.

The new high speed color film proved particularly valuable to Fitzgerald when it came to making color slides showing the Boston Symphony Orchestra inside some of the fabulous concert halls in Leningrad and Moscow. Brief time exposures with the contax mounted on a tripod resulted in excellent transparencies. The film in this case was for artificial light sources. The halls, in most cases, were brilliantly illuminated, and only natural light was used.

The main worry plaguing Fitzgerald while in Russia was whether or not the Russians might demand that all film be processed before he left the country. However, this threat failed to materialize and he landed in free Austria several days later with the undisturbed cache of exposed black and white and color film stacked in his foot locker.

None of the film was sent back to the United States from Russia. Instead Ed waited until he got to Vienna where most of the Russian and Czecho-Slovakian pictures were shipped. A second shipment of the once-in-a-lifetime photos was made from Stuttgart, Ger., in the event of any slip-up on the first batch. All the films arrived safely in Boston, however.

Later, they were distributed to newspapers and wire services. In many cases, the pictures were handled by picture services in Europe who took the responsibility of getting the pictures to America.

To sum up the trip, Ed found that his selection of the smaller cameras for this trip proved to be a wise choice. Constant travel from one country to another and the lack of storage and baggage facilities calls for the lightest possible equipment. Customs problems throughout Europe were practically non-existent. The longest delays were experienced at Glasgow, Scotland, and at Logan Airport after the trip ended. Officials at these ports double-checked the legitimacy of Fitzgerald's horde of camera equipment. The delays were brief in these two cases when the nature of the photographer's job was fully explained.

New Box 2

Mu LO
condu Orche radio ed to the L
"On States organi quoted
"I wou
as ofte like to cians f
try. W which

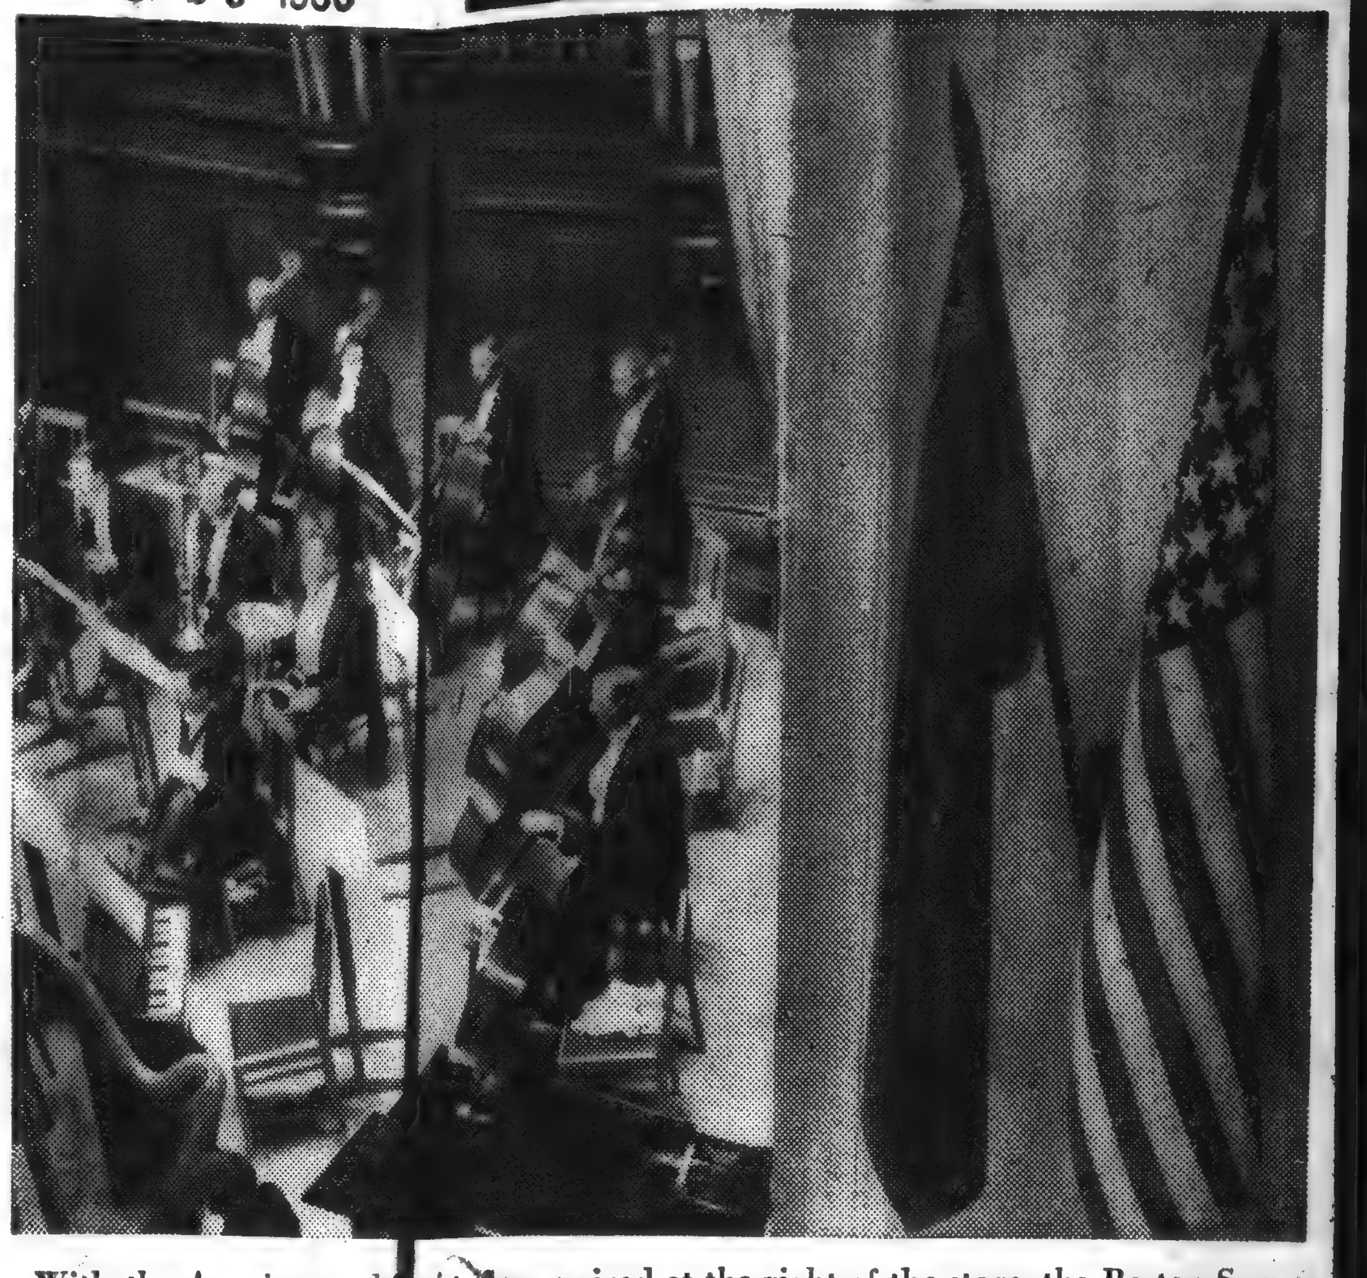
Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 S. 52_,253

SEP 23 1956



With the American and Soviet flags paired at the right of the stage, the Boston Symphony Orchestra perform one of its three concerts at the Moscow Auditorium.

Reds Ha l Boston Orchestra

Their Rendition of Soviet Anthem Is Praised by Leningrad Audience

By B. J. CUTLER

MOSCOW.

When the Boston Sympho Orchestra opened its conc tour of the Soviet Union in ningrad two weeks ago, it beg by playing the Soviet Natio Anthem as a goodwill gestu Later musicians and lay me bers of the gala first night au ence told the visiting Americ they had never before he their anthem played so wel

This small incident was t cal of the reception received the orchestra during its pr dent-setting Russian visit.

Standbys

The first American orche to play in Russia, the Bo Symphony was obviously a elation to Soviet music ci Its tour was a popular and ical success and it made a impression through the qu of its musicianship. In its concerts, two in Leningrad three here, the orchestra pl to some 12,000 persons. were largely the musical cultural elite, for tickets hard to come by. Many tional thousands heard the certs on radio and television.

Part of each program contained familiar standbys—Beethoven, Haydn, Schubert, Ravel, Strauss—and these well known selections gave the audiences the greatest pleasure. They knew the music, were able to compare the performances with those heard before, and responded with violent applause.

A "Bis" or a Hiss

Also in each program was one selection of modern American music not well known here because of Russia's long cultural isolation from the West. Creston's Second Symphony and Piston's Sixth were politely received but did not evoke the enthusiasm shown older music. Copland's Symphonic Ode completely puzzled the Moscow audience. While some earnestly studied the music, many persons heatedly discussed the piece during the performance and laughed aloud at some of the percussion effects. One member of the orchestra thought "We laid a big egg" with it.

The orchestra found Russian audiences hard to understand at first. In Leningrad loud shouts of "bis" (encore) led the players to think they were being hissed. After the shout was translated for them they played an encore, an unusual response for the Boston Symphony.

Several of the members were stopped by Soviet musicians who expressed admiration for the fine instruments the visitors carried. An idea of how the instruments stood out here was also furnished by a review by Alxander Gauk, a well known conductor, in which he devoted a paragraph to hailing the orchestra's equipment as being, "Latest models of the best quality."

Gauk, writing in the newspaper "Sovietskaya Kultura," the most influential in its field, described Charles Munch as a perfect conductor and said that in each work he felt close contact between each member and the conductor. His review, which was an unqualified rave, again showed how difficult it is for visiting artists to know what to do here. The symphony deliberately played no Russian composers because, as one official put it, "We didn't want the Russians to think we were trying to show them how to play their own music."

"It was a great pity," Gauk wrote, "that there was in the program no single work of Russian classical music. We know the Boston Symphony has in its repertoire Tchaikovsky symphonies. It would be very interesting to hear them in the performance of such an orchestra."

In no review or critical comment made public here was there a comparison of the visiting orchestra with the leading Soviet symphonic groups. One reason may be that in private conversation some musicians and spectators said they had never heard an orchestra of higher quality.

England Newsclip
Boston 6 • Richm
hristian Sci Monitor (
OSTON, Ma
Non-partisa
Circ. 161,6
SEP 29 19

usic

---

swinging gang wa
Without
here.
The fig year-old name not
age) cuff
Josie, 15 leaving h
Ferrat ma
The Ca
The Niçoi
The you towns met in a Beau
Each side ments and again at th leading acros
the two town
Their fight

KE
"TIMKEN"

was put across t sicians'
cert hal
main st

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DENVER, COLO.
POST
Circ. D. 236,366 - S. 353,675

SEP 16 1956

r, rode into Buenos Aires at victorious army and succeed
president. Speaking to 100, s gathered in the plaza belo
roclaimed in his inaugural addr
eed was "neither victors nor v Lonardi was ousted seven we inauguration, and died in a h
four months later, bitter

d happened?
e thunder of revolutionary re
men were dismayed by Lonar
d Lonardi mean, they asked,
istas who had ruled Argen
ron fist for a decade could nishment for their sins? We di regime cut off the visible r
and his few top henchmen,
ntouched the roots of Peron

s precisely what some feare
to sense—was the soul of Lo
. They watched the governm
s the same labor leaders
Peron shattered the revolu
moon with a wave of worker
y saw the famed newspaper
seized by Peron in one of pisodes of journalistic hist sh in Peronista hands despite round the world for its immed
the founding Paz family.
s foes rebelled, and overth
palace coup without a shot b
are-jawed Gen. Aramburu st
tina's bizarre pink "govern
d took over the presidency.
defended their coup with
at Lonardi, while a fine man
let his government fall under
xtreme rightwing, totalitaria
at was willing to woo Peron
r power.

URU took a firm grip and bro
out of chaos. He promptly

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

JAN 1 2

The Camera Eye

Boston Photographer Has No Trouble in Russia

BEHIND THE IRON CU
at an American Strobe-light photographer. The scene is was made with delayed acti about ten feet away.

(left) gets a first-hand look maica Plain, United Press is a Rolleiflex. This photo hich was set on the ground

By GIL FI
Globe Cam

Ed Fitzgerald, manager bureau in from a six the Boston
cluded was grad and M
Despit sorship fro to these ci experienced in both Ru

rst batch. All the films arrived safely in Boston, however.

Later, they were distributed to newspapers and wire services. In many cases, the pictures were handled by picture services in Europe who took the responsibility of getting the pictures to America.

To sum up the trip, Ed found that his selection of the smaller cameras for this trip proved to be a wise choice. Constant travel from one country to another and the lack of storage and baggage facilities calls for the lightest possible equipment. Customs problems throughout Europe were practically non-existent. The longest delays were experienced at Glasgow, Scotland, and at Logan Airport after the trip ended. Officials at these ports double-checked the legitimacy of Fitzgerald's horde of camera equipment. The delays were brief in these two cases when the nature of the photographer's job was fully explained.

Protect weather damage
WINDOWS
AT 30% SAVINGS NOW
DOORS
TO YOU
5 YEARS TO PAY
FULL INFORMATION
'S GOOD YEAR-ROUND
LUMINUM CO.
BI 4-6222
GEST TILE CHAIN
EW STORES
ON ST., BOSTON
TS AVE., CAMBRIDGE
STREET, QUINCY
TUES., WED., SAT. 9 to 6
DO IT Yourself
SAVE
FREE

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S.

SEP 23 1956

With the American and Soviet flags paired at the right of the stage, the Boston Symphony Orchestra performs one of its three concerts at the Moscow Auditorium.

Reds Hail Boston Orchestra

Their Rendition of Soviet Anthem Is Praised by Leningrad Audience

By B. J. CUTLER

MOSCOW.

When the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its concert tour of the Soviet Union in Leningrad two weeks ago, it began by playing the Soviet National Anthem as a goodwill gesture. Later musicians and lay members of the gala first night audience told the visiting Americans they had never before heard their anthem played so well.

This small incident was typical of the reception received by the orchestra during its precedent-setting Russian visit.

Standbys

The first American orchestra to play in Russia, the Boston Symphony was obviously a revelation to Soviet music circles. Its tour was a popular and critical success and it made a deep impression through the quality of its musicianship. In its five concerts, two in Leningrad and three here, the orchestra played to some 12,000 persons. These were largely the musical and cultural elite, for tickets were hard to come by. Many additional thousands heard the concerts on radio and television.

Part of each program contained familiar standbys—Beethoven, Haydn, Schubert, Ravel, Strauss—and these well known selections gave the audiences the greatest pleasure. They knew the music, were able to compare the performances with those heard before, and responded with violent applause.

A "Bis" or a Hiss

Also in each program was one selection of modern American music not well known here because of Russia's long cultural isolation from the West. Creston's Second Symphony and Piston's Sixth were politely received but did not evoke the enthusiasm shown older music. Copland's Symphonic Ode completely puzzled the Moscow audience. While some earnestly studied the music, many persons heatedly discussed the piece during the performance and laughed aloud at some of the percussion effects. One member of the orchestra thought "We laid a big egg" with it.

The orchestra found Russian audiences hard to understand at first. In Leningrad loud shouts of "bis" (encore) led the players to think they were being hissed. After the shout was translated for them they played an encore, an unusual response for the Boston Symphony.

Several of the members were stopped by Soviet musicians who expressed admiration for the fine instruments the visitors carried. An idea of how the instruments stood out here was also furnished by a review by Alxander Gauk, a well known conductor, in which he devoted a paragraph to hailing the orchestra's equipment as being, "Latest models of the best quality."

Gauk, writing in the newspaper "Sovietskaya Kultura," the most influential in its field, described Charles Munch as a perfect conductor and said that in each work he felt close contact between each member and the conductor. His review, which was an unqualified rave, again showed how difficult it is for visiting artists to know what to do here. The symphony deliberately played no Russian composers because, as one official put it, "We didn't want the Russians to think we were trying to show them how to play their own music."

"It was a great pity," Gauk wrote, "that there was in the program no single work of Russian classical music. We know the Boston Symphony has in its repertoire Tchaikovsky symphonies. It would be very interesting to hear them in the performance of such an orchestra."

In no review or critical comment made public here was there a comparison of the visiting orchestra with the leading Soviet symphonic groups. One reason may be that in private conversation some musicians and spectators said they had never heard an orchestra of higher quality.

England Newsclip Agency
Boston 6 • Richmond
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
SEP 29 1956

Musicia

selves, bo swinging gang warf
Without a
here.
The fight
year-old Ni
name not
age) cuffed Josie, 15 (la leaving him
Ferrat man.
The Cap F
The Niçois sa
The young towns met in
in a Beaulieu
Each side we
ments and the again at the leading across t
the two towns.
Their fight b

KE
"TIMKEN"

was put across th
sicians'
cert hall
main str was a going

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 19 1956

Symphony and Harmony

THE reports that keep coming in from the Boston Symphony's tour of Europe show beyond question that the State Department owes this excellent organization a loud expression of thanks. That's especially true for the impression left by the orchestra on the Russians.

In every appearance, the tour has been a success. But in the Leningrad and Moscow appearances, conductor Charles Munch and his group accomplished wonders for diplomacy and international good will.

Pictures of the concerts in those cities show the Russian audiences virtually spellbound. There's no mistaking the wonder and appreciation in the faces of the listeners. There's no mistaking either the genuine spirit of person-to-person friendliness in the reports of the mingling between the Russians and the Boston musicians.

AS SYMPHONY PLAYED IN LENINGRAD

It's a pleasing relief from the spirit of cold suspicion that has been forced into international relations by the Soviet leaders.

Unquestionably the visit of the Boston group has convinced many a Russian that the friendship of America is worth cultivating.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
WESTERLY, R. I.
Republican
Circ. 7,730

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sentinel (e)
KEENE, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 6,235

SEP 14 1956

ic ch, ny
ow to

Munch Maps Tour

LONDON (AP) — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quoted by Moscow radio Wednesday as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DENVER, COLO.
POST
Circ. D. 236,366 - S. 353,675

SEP 16 1956

r, rode into Buenos Aires at victorious army and succeed
president. Speaking to 100,
s gathered in the plaza bel
roclaimed in his inaugural addr
reed was "neither victors nor v
Lonardi was ousted seven we inauguration, and died in a h
four months later, bitter

d happened?
e thunder of revolutionary re
men were dismayed by Lonar
d Lonardi mean, they asked,
istas who had ruled Argen
ron fist for a decade could
nishment for their sins? W
di regime cut off the visible r
and his few top henchmen,
untouched the roots of Peron

s precisely what some fear
to sense—was the soul of Lo
. They watched the governm
s the same labor leaders
d Peron shattered the revolu
moon with a wave of worker
y saw the famed newspaper
seized by Peron in one of pisodes of journalistic hist
ish in Peronista hands despite round the world for its immed
the founding Paz family.
s foes rebelled, and overth
palace coup without a shot b
are-jawed Gen. Aramburu st
tina's bizarre pink "govern
d took over the presidency.
defended their coup with
at Lonardi, while a fine man
let his government fall under xtreme rightwing, totalitaria
at was willing to woo Pero
r power.

URU took a firm grip and br out of chaos. He promptl

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

JAN 1 2

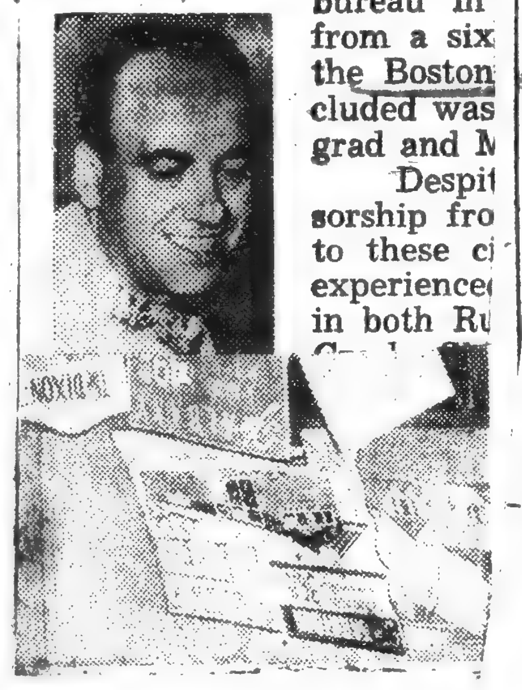
The Camera Eye

Boston Photographer Has No Trouble in Russia

BEHIND THE IRON CU[...] (left) gets a first-hand look at an American Strobe-light [...]naica Plain, United Press photographer. The scene is [...]is a Rolleiflex. This photo was made with delayed acti[...]hich was set on the ground about ten feet away.

By GIL FI
Globe Can

Ed Fitzgerald, manager bureau in from a six the Boston cluded was grad and M



Despit sorship fro to these ci experience in both Ru rst batch. All the films arrived afely in Boston, however.

Later, they were distributed to ewspapers and wire services. In many cases, the pictures were handled by picture services in Europe who took the responsibility f getting the pictures to America.

To sum up the trip, Ed found hat his selection of the smaller ameras for this trip proved to be wise choice. Constant travel rom one country to another and he lack of storage and baggage acilities calls for the lightest possible equipment. Customs problems throughout Europe were practically non-existent. The st delays were experienced at gow, Scotland, and at Logan ort after the trip ended. Offi at these ports double-checked legitimacy of Fitzgerald's e of camera equipment. The ys were brief in these two s when the nature of the photographer's job was fully ex-ned.

Ne
Bo

DO IT Yourself
SAVE
FREE
TUES., WED., SAT. 9 to 6
STREET, QUINCY
TS AVE., CAMBRIDGE
ON ST., BOSTON
EW STORES
GEST TILE CHAIN

BI 4-6222
LUMINUM CO.
T'S GOOD YEAR-ROUND
FULL INFORMATION
—5 YEARS

ROBERTSON MOTOR CO.
We pay cash for USED CARS
100 Marlboro St., Keene
GULF STATION
May be seen at Good trades excepted
53 BUICK special 4 dr. hrdtp. 950
56 BUICK sport hardtop 3400
49 CHEVROLET conv. $400

US
H

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 S. 52-253

SEP 23 1956

With the American and [S]oviet flags paired at the right of the stage, the Boston Symphony Orchestra perform[s] one of its three concerts at the Moscow Auditorium.

Reds Ha[i]l Boston Orchestra

Their Rendition of Soviet Anthem Is Praised by Leningrad Audience

By B. J. CUTLER

MOSCOW.

When the Boston Sympho[n]y Orchestra opened its conc[er]t tour of the Soviet Union in L[e]ningrad two weeks ago, it beg[a]n by playing the Soviet Natio[na]l Anthem as a goodwill gestu[re]. Later musicians and lay me[m]bers of the gala first night au[di]ence told the visiting Americ[an]s they had never before he[a]rd their anthem played so wel[l].

This small incident was ty[p]ical of the reception received [b]y the orchestra during its pre[c]edent-setting Russian visit.

Standbys

The first American orche[st]ra to play in Russia, the Bo[sto]n Symphony was obviously a [re]velation to Soviet music cir[cl]es. Its tour was a popular and [cr]itical success and it made a [d]eep impression through the qu[ali]ty of its musicianship. In its [fi]ve concerts, two in Leningrad [an]d three here, the orchestra pl[ay]ed to some 12,000 persons. T[he]se were largely the musical [an]d cultural elite, for tickets [we]re hard to come by. Many [ad]ditional thousands heard the [co]ncerts on radio and television.

Part of each program contained familiar standbys—Beethoven, Haydn, Schubert, Ravel, Strauss—and these well known selections gave the audiences the greatest pleasure. They knew the music, were able to compare the performances with those heard before, and responded with violent applause.

A "Bis" or a Hiss

Also in each program was one selection of modern American music not well known here because of Russia's long cultural isolation from the West. Creston's Second Symphony and Piston's Sixth were politely received but did not evoke the enthusiasm shown older music. Copland's Symphonic Ode completely puzzled the Moscow audience. While some earnestly studied the music, many persons heatedly discussed the piece during the performance and laughed aloud at some of the percussion effects. One member of the orchestra thought "We laid a big egg" with it.

The orchestra found Russian audiences hard to understand at first. In Leningrad loud shouts of "bis" (encore) led the players to think they were being hissed. After the shout was translated for them they played an encore, an unusual response for the Boston Symphony.

Several of the members were stopped by Soviet musicians who expressed admiration for the fine instruments the visitors carried. An idea of how the instruments stood out here was also furnished by a review by Alxander Gauk, a well known conductor, in which he devoted a paragraph to hailing the orchestra's equipment as being, "Latest models of the best quality."

Gauk, writing in the newspaper "Sovietskaya Kultura," the most influential in its field, described Charles Munch as a perfect conductor and said that in each work he felt close contact between each member and the conductor. His review, which was an unqualified rave, again showed how difficult it is for visiting artists to know what to do here. The symphony deliberately played no Russian composers because, as one official put it, "We didn't want the Russians to think we were trying to show them how to play their own music."

"It was a great pity," Gauk wrote, "that there was in the program no single work of Russian classical music. We know the Boston Symphony has in its repertoire Tchaikovsky symphonies. It would be very interesting to hear them in the performance of such an orchestra."

In no review or critical comment made public here was there a comparison of the visiting orchestra with the leading Soviet symphonic groups. One reason may be that in private conversation some musicians and spectators said they had never heard an orchestra of higher quality.

---

land Newsclip Agen
Boston 6 • Richmond
ristian Science
Monitor (e)
OSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

SEP 29 1956

usicia

swinging gang warf
Without a here.

The fight
year-old Ni
name not
age) cuffed Josie, 15 (la
leaving him
Ferrat man.

The Cap F
The Niçois sa

The young
towns met in
in a Beaulieu

Each side we
ments and the
again at the
leading across t
the two towns.

Their fight b

KE
"TIMKEN"

was put across th
sicians'
cert hall.
main stre
was a going

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 19 1956

Symphony and Harmony

THE reports that keep coming in from the Boston Symphony's tour of Europe show beyond question that the State Department owes this excellent organization a loud expression of thanks. That's especially true for the impression left by the orchestra on the Russians.

In every appearance, the tour has been a success. But in the Leningrad and Moscow appearances, conductor Charles Munch and his group accomplished wonders for diplomacy and international good will.

Pictures of the concerts in those cities show the Russian audiences virtually spellbound. There's no mistaking the wonder and appreciation in the faces of the listeners. There's no mistaking either the genuine spirit of person-to-person friendliness in the reports of the mingling between the Russians and the Boston musicians.

AS SYMPHONY PLAYED IN LENINGRAD

It's a pleasing relief from the spirit of cold suspicion that has been forced into international relations by the Soviet leaders.

Unquestionably the visit of the Boston group has convinced many a Russian that the friendship of America is worth cultivating.

Hopes For US Tour of Leningrad Philharmonic

LONDON (AP) — Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quoted by Moscow radio today as saying he hoped to organize an American tour for the Leningrad Philharmonic.

"On my return to the United States I will devote every effort to organizing the tour," he was quoted as saying in an interview. "I would like to come to Russia as often as possible and I should like to have your splendid musicians frequent guests in our country. World peace is the goal for which we must strive."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

P 29 1956

Musicians Quizzed Eagerly by Soviets

By Frederick H. Guidry
Staff Writer of The Christian Science Monitor

Intense curiosity about American life is one of the things Boston Symphony Orchestra members recall most vividly about the Moscow and Leningrad portions of their triumphal European tour.

"They were curious to find out anything they could about America," Everett Firth, tympanist, said as he waited at Logan International Airport for customs officials to check his baggage.

"They wanted to hear about what kind of a car I drove, how much money I made, what my home life was like. One even asked if I was a millionaire," he added.

He was holding a balalaika and mandolin, strange souvenirs for a percussionist. But he added, "With a few lessons I might be able to play them."

Bring Back Rare Finds

Mr. Firth was one of 67 BSO members who arrived yesterday by plane from London following a concert tour that included 28 performances in 19 European cities.

He was not the only one who saw to it that the orchestra came back to America with more instruments than it took abroad.

Noah Bielski, violinist, picked up an African guitar in Paris. Asked if he thought he could play it, Mr. Bielski said, "I think I've got to keep it hanging on the wall."

William Gibson, trombonist, brought back two horns from Czechoslovakia for his two youngsters. He described the instruments as "signal horns like referees in this country use."

Mr. Bielski said orchestra members were free to go where they pleased in the Soviet cities. He brought back two rolls of pictures he took in Moscow, as well as a recollection that Soviet citizens expressed "a general desire for peace, which I hope is sincere."

Hungry for Good Music

Mr. Gibson, sporting a green, yellow, and red cap he picked up in Scotland, said of Soviet audiences and good music, "They're hungry for it. They need it."

He said some Soviet musicians admired the large American trombones. "We are able to put more air through the large bore," he explained, adding that it affected the tone. Trumpeters, too, liked the American instrument as being "more flexible."

Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor, said European audiences "really love music" and "show it more with applause." He added, "You can't expect that here, where people hear you play day in and day out. There we were guests. You have to take that into consideration."

In Leningrad Mr. Burgin met old classmates, and the orchestra generally was swarmed over by Soviet musicians during intermissions and after the performances.

Cultural Interest

"They wanted to know what kinds of music we play, about living conditions, rehearsals, not so much about how much money we make," he reported.

Mrs. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, said Soviet flute players she talked to wanted to know mostly about the American musical world but also about such things as schools.

"I talked for two hours. Anyone from America could stand on a street corner in Moscow and answer questions all day," she said. Mr. Dwyer thought that the fact that questions flowed so freely showed not so much a desire to check up on the accuracy of Soviet Government reports of American life as a yearning for more facts to fill a void.

Picture Page 1

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 534,376 - S. 1,149,467

SEP 23 1956

[148]

IN RUSSIA WITH THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Under its regular conductor, Charles Munch, above, the orchestra was the first American ensemble to play in the Soviet. Upper right, a study in concentration at Leningrad concert. Below, a Russian violinist, on a backstage visit in Moscow, is surrounded by the Boston players as he tries out one of their instruments.

NYHT 13/9/56

After Boston Symphony Trip

Monteux Calls Applause In Russia 'Phenomenal'

By Alain de Lyrot

Pierre Monteux, the 81-year-old conductor, who has been guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its current European tour, said in an interview Tuesday in Paris that the enthusiasm of Russian crowds for the orchestra's recent concerts in Moscow and Leningrad was "phenomenal."

M. Monteux, who flew to Paris from Moscow Tuesday, said that seldom in his many years as a conductor had he seen such eager musical crowds.

He conducted the Boston orchestra on Aug. 7 at Leningrad and on Aug. 9 at Moscow, and said that these concerts and those conducted by Charles Munch, the orchestra's regular conductor, had been booked solidly many months in advance.

Obliged to Give Encores

In Moscow's Music Conservatory, M. Monteux said it was almost impossible to bring the concert to a close, as crowds of more than 3,000 shouted and stamped for encores after encores.

He said that he and the orchestra's musicians had been so moved by the audience's reaction that they had to comply.

He added that when he walked out he was greeted by some 300 Russian music-lovers who followed him to his hotel to congratulate him.

M. Monteux, who shows incredible activity for his age, described how he has been hopping all over Europe, mostly by plane, following a tight schedule of concerts. He said he will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Zurich (Aug. 16), in Bern (Aug. 17), in Paris (Aug. 20) and in London (Aug. 25). He will also conduct the French Orchestre National Friday, as part of the Besançon Music Festival.

In his two concerts in Russia, M. Monteux led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Haydn, Schubert and American composer Paul Creston's Second Symphony.

He recalled that he had already conducted concerts in both Moscow and Leningrad in 1928 after the French government first recognized the Soviet government and cultural exchanges ensued.

M. Monteux, born in Paris in 1875, became one of the world's leading conductors as early as 1911 when he conducted such historical premières as Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" and "Le Sacre du Printemps" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" suite. He later conducted at the Metropolitan Opera in New York, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and joined the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra as it regular conductor in 1936. He retired from the post in 1952.

Pierre Monteux

M. Monteux now lives in Hancock, Me., where he runs a school for aspirant conductors. He said that he annually has from 40 to 60 students, all professional musicians, who form an orchestra of their own.

Prior to his return to the United States, M. Monteux will conduct various orchestras in Paris, Florence, Milan and Venice.

Doctor Fou

f Flutist Asked ndly Questions

About America

TER
that ngry that of wyer

Beth Len-
the estra arlier sband rated wyer, aphne
ed in other iestra.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer

The impression of a friendly eagerness on the part of the Soviet citizens to learn more about us was gained as result of the questions put to him by strangers on the streets of the two Russian cities, and by their general attitude, explains Dr. Dwyer.

Close Observation

Dr. Dwyer went to Russia at the same time as did the orchestra, but he did not, literally, go with it. While the orchestra went as a group, under sponsorship of the U. S. State Department, he went as a private citizen and with his own travel arrangements. But he managed to be at the various cities at the same time as the orchestra and to observe the reception afforded the musicians from Boston.

His conclusions regarding the impression made by the Boston Symphony Orchestra upon the Russian man-in-the-street are those of a private citizen. But they have special weight because of his standing as a foremost psychiatrist.

"In Leningrad the orchestra was put up at a hotel directly across the street from the musicians' entrance to the concert hall. The hall was on the main street, and the side street was a busy one, with people going back and forth all the time, and quite a number hanging around.

"Naturally there was a constant traffic of musicians back and forth between the hotel and the concert hall. My wife likes to test a hall for resonance. As we started across the street for the hall a man spoke to me in English.

Curious Crowd

"He spoke English very well, and with not much of an accent, and he wanted to know: 'Why aren't you playing any Russian music?'

"I explained that I was not a member of the orchestra. I told him that the orchestra had played it at other cities on the tour, and that my impression had been that the audiences liked it.

"But why not here?" he wanted to know.

"'I don't know,' I told him. I explained that it had been decided in Boston before the orchestra left. I am sure that he was disappointed that no Russian music was played by the Boston Symphony in Russia. Incidently he was a surgeon, he told me.

"By this time a small crowd had gathered, listening to the convers tween 1 and sev lish in a whom I was talking. These other English-speaking Russians explained the questions to the group. They were quiet and interested, and you could see how kind the Russians there were to each other.

"The surgeon wanted to know about other symphony orchestras in the United States, and I described the New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and San Francisco orchestras. Some of the other English-speaking Russians joined in the conversation.

"'What about ballet?' they wanted to know. I told them that the New York City Ballet company was outstanding, and growing steadily.

"'What about ballet in Boston?'

"I made a face and said we didn't have a company. They laughed at my grimace, and asked about opera.

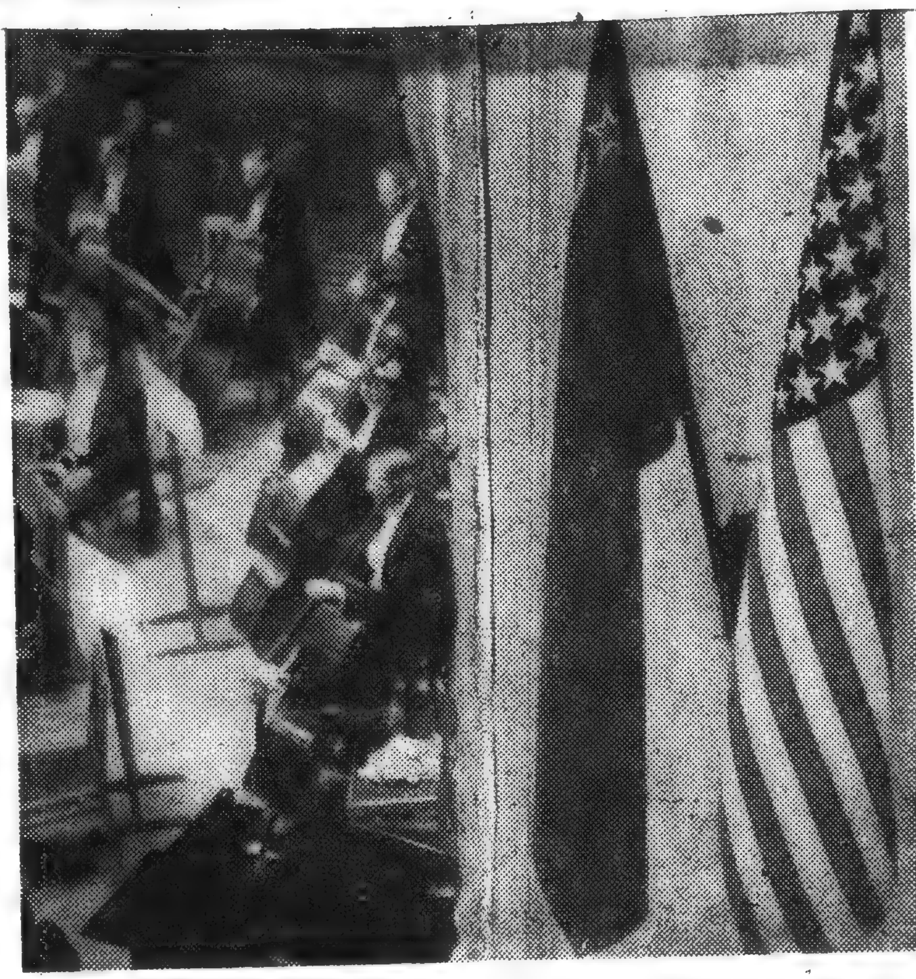
Hard to Grasp

"The questions were perceptive. They wanted to know about American culture, and it was a search for information, not an attempt to belittle or to embarrass or to find support for political propaganda. They were friendly and courteous to me, and to each other.

"This sort of thing happened every time I went across the street, which was three times a day during the two days in Leningrad. I learned that many of the musicians had the same experience.

"The questions ranged far. They wanted to know about our economic life 'Is it true that American cars have up to 400 horse power?' I was asked. When I told them it was true they wanted to know how much such a car cost. They asked about such cars as Fords, Plymouths, Chevrolets.

"In these questions which they addressed to me in these street interviews, they revealed much to me. They were better informed than I had expected. I thought that I would encounter a sort of attitude and knowledge comparative to that of the Middle Ages, but this was not so among those with whom I talked."



The Stars and Stripes and the Soviet flag side by side in the Moscow concert hall when the Boston orchestra gave the first performance by a Western symphony in the U. S. S. R.

But even though they were better informed that he had anticipated, the Russians still had difficulty in understanding certain aspects of our social and economic life.

"They wanted to know how much skilled workers received in the United States. I told them that it was $2 to $3 an hour, that unskilled workers received from $40 a week and up. This was hard for them to comprehend. I try to explain that it depended on the degree of skill, or lack of it, but also on other factors, that in some areas wages were different from others."

This was puzzling to the Russians. They were accustomed to standard rates of pay, set by the government, and uniform throughout the Soviet Union, and the idea that a man might receive more—or less—pay doing work in one area than another, or for different employers, was a novel one.

Cost of Living

The cost of living was a thing of deep interest to them. They sought to relate wages to the cost of living, and to other expenses, such as housing, for instance. But they did not stop there, they kept asking questions in the impromptu sidewalk sessions.

"Education was of special interest to them," says Dr. Dwyer. "They asked, 'How much do your students specialize?' I explained that that depended upon the individual, and again I could see that the reply excited interest, perhaps even puzzlement. I said that some students put on blinders—I illustrated with my hands and that drew a laugh—and looked neither to left nor subject as they wished, according to their interest or plans for the future and their desire to acquire intellectual width as well as depth.

"This was a new idea to them. I have the impression that students in their schools have few if any free choices, that they are told what they are to study fairly early, and that the particular courses are then decided without consulting the students."

Amazed at Our TV

They asked the American about our television and here he was not so sure of himself because he has no set in his Memorial dr. apartment. He guessed that the average set was about 21 inches, but found on his return home that 24 inches is nearer the average. He told them that color TV was coming in strong and that he believed that in another couple of years every U. S. home would have a color set.

"They were amazed at this, and later I found out the reason why. While walking around Moscow I saw television sets for sale in department stores. They had screens that were very small, about the size of the page in an average sized book."

The sidewalk interviews which were a feature of the two days in Leningrad also occurred in Moscow, and the questions and the attitudes of the questions were pretty much the same, the Bostonian says.

"I had the impression that they were friendly and had a curiosity about America—especially about our technological progress. The people who gathered about me and about members of the symphony orchestra were always men, polite and apparently intelligent. Although there were many uniformed men in the two cities, none was in the groups that asked me questions, and neither were there any women.

"While it would have been possible for the government to stage these gatherings for propaganda purposes, I am convinced they were not so arranged. Obviously these people did not believe everything they heard on the government-controlled radio.

The Russian audience claps in cadence, two claps, a pause then two claps, etc. Many of them were amazed at our elective educational system and our freedom to choose work.

Shoddy Clothes

"They did not ask political questions. Nor did they ask questions of a leading nature in an attempt to get an argument started. They simply were seeking information."

The American noted that many of the people showed little expression on their faces, and this, in time, deeply impressed him. For that reason the occasional lifting of the mask, as when throngs gathered around the musicians entrance to cheer them at the end of concerts, was the more remarkable.

"I noted that the people were dressed in dark colors for the most part. The clothes were, not only drab, but shoddy and frequently shabby. The clothes which I wore were what you would see any day on the streets of Boston. I am not what you would call a particularly fine dresser, certainly not by our standards, and yet there I stood out in contrast to the Russians.

The reception of the Russians to the Boston musicians was fabulous, he recalls. "At both Leningrad and Moscow the audiences remained until every musician had left the stage. At both places people gathered outside to cheer the musicians as they left. At Moscow, for instance, when Doriot (his wife) and I made our way through the throng after her solo performance in "Daphne and Cloe" they cheered and clapped. In Russia they clap differently than we do—in a cadence of two claps.

"Thank You"

"We got into the taxi to drive back to the hotel and the crowd pushed against the cab, holding it up for a few minutes. They cried out to hear 'Thank you, thank you,' in broken English."

It was these emotional moments, as well as the perceptive questions put to him by his sidewalk interrogaters, that convinced Dr. Dwyer that behind the Iron Curtain, behind the Red government's barrier of propaganda, behind the discreet masks worn on the faces of the individual Russians, there is a real feeling of friendship admiration for America and Americans.

… Quizzed by Soviets

…ck H. Guidry
…hristian Science Monitor hear you play day in and day out. There we were guests. You have to take that into consideration."

In Leningrad Mr. Burgin met old classmates, and the orchestra generally was swarmed over by Soviet musicians during intermissions and after the performances.

Cultural Interest

"They wanted to know what kinds of music we play about

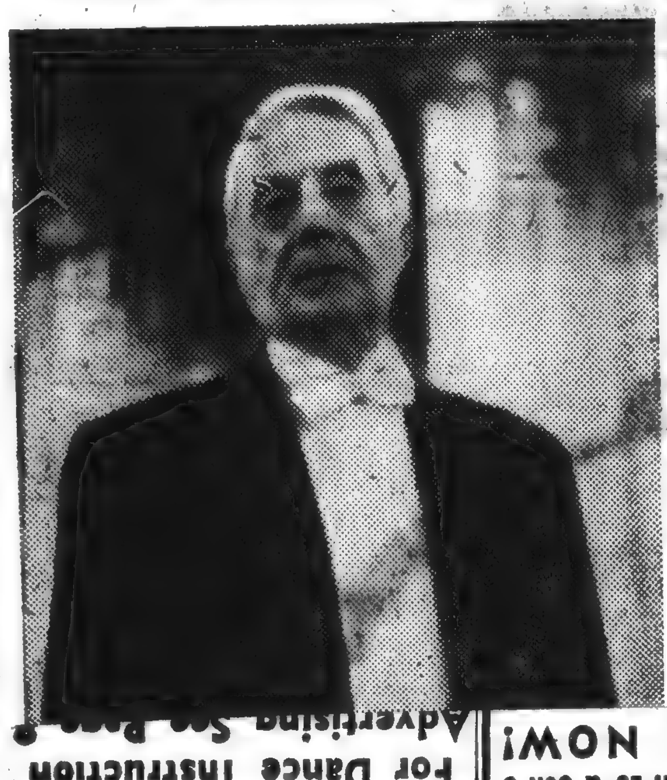
Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

[148]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 534,376 - S. 1,149,467

SEP 23 1956

IN RUSSIA WITH THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA



NYHT 13/9/56

After Boston Symphony Trip

Monteux Calls Applause In Russia 'Phenomenal'

By Alain de Lyrot

Pierre Monteux, the 81-year-old conductor, who has been guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its current European tour, said in an interview Tuesday in Paris that the enthusiasm of Russian crowds for the orchestra's recent concerts in Moscow and Leningrad was "phenomenal."

M. Monteux, who flew to Paris from Moscow Tuesday, said that seldom in his many years as a conductor had he seen such eager musical crowds.

He conducted the Boston orchestra on Aug. 7 at Leningrad and on Aug. 9 at Moscow, and said that these concerts and those conducted by Charles Munch, the orchestra's regular conductor, had been booked solidly many months in advance.

Obliged to Give Encores

In Moscow's Music Conservatory, M. Monteux said it was almost impossible to bring the concert to a close, as crowds of more than 3,000 shouted and stamped for encores after encores.

He said that he and the orchestra's musicians had been so moved by the audience's reaction that they had to comply.

He added that when he walked out he was greeted by some 300 Russian music-lovers who followed him to his hotel to congratulate him.

M. Monteux, who shows incredible activity for his age, described how he has been hopping all over Europe, mostly by plane, following a tight schedule of concerts. He said he will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Zurich (Aug. 16), in Bern (Aug. 17), in Paris (Aug. 20) and in London (Aug. 25). He will also conduct the French Orchestre National Friday, as part of the Besançon Music Festival.

In his two concerts in Russia, M. Monteux led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Haydn, Schubert and American composer Paul Creston's Second Symphony.

He recalled that he had already conducted concerts in both Moscow and Leningrad in 1928 after the French government first recognized the Soviet government and cultural exchanges ensued.

M. Monteux, born in Paris in 1875, became one of the world's leading conductors as early as 1911 when he conducted such historical premières as Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" and "Le Sacre du Printemps" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" suite. He later conducted at the Metropolitan Opera in New York, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and joined the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra as its regular conductor in 1936. He retired from the post in 1952.

Pierre Monteux

M. Monteux now lives in Hancock, Me., where he runs a school for aspirant conductors. He said that he annually has from 40 to 60 students, all professional musicians, who form an orchestra of their own.

Prior to his return to the United States, M. Monteux will conduct various orchestras in Paris, Florence, Milan and Venice.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

SEP 23 1956

Boston Doctor Found Russian People Eager to Learn About America

Husband of Flutist Asked Many Friendly Questions

By JOHN MASON POTTER

Doriot Anthony Dwyer

"I had the impression that the Russian people are hungry for contact with us and that they have a real feeling of friendship for America."

So says Dr. Thomas F. Dwyer of the psychiatry staff of Beth Israel Hospital, who was in Leningrad and Moscow when the Boston Symphony Orchestra made its historic visit earlier this month. He is the husband of the orchestra's celebrated flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, whose solo work in "Daphne and Cloe" was acclaimed in both cities, as well as in other cities visited by the orchestra.

The impression of a friendly eagerness on the part of the Soviet citizens to learn more about us was gained as result of the questions put to him by strangers on the streets of the two Russian cities, and by their general attitude, explains Dr. Dwyer.

Close Observation

Dr. Dwyer went to Russia at the same time as did the orchestra, but he did not, literally, go with it. While the orchestra went as a group, under sponsorship of the U. S. State Department, he went as a private citizen and with his own travel arrangements. But he managed to be at the various cities at the same time as the orchestra and to observe the reception afforded the musicians from Boston.

His conclusions regarding the impression made by the Boston Symphony Orchestra upon the Russian man-in-the-street are those of a private citizen. But they have special weight because of his standing as a foremost psychiatrist.

"In Leningrad the orchestra was put up at a hotel directly across the street from the musicians' entrance to the concert hall. The hall was on the main street, and the side street was a busy one, with people going back and forth all the time, and quite a number hanging around.

"Naturally there was a constant traffic of musicians back and forth between the hotel and the concert hall. My wife likes to test a hall for resonance. As we started across the street for the hall a man spoke to me in English.

Curious Crowd

"He spoke English very well, and with not much of an accent, and he wanted to know: 'Why aren't you playing any Russian music?'

"I explained that I was not a member of the orchestra. I told him that the orchestra had played it at other cities on the tour, and that my impression had been that the audiences liked it.

"But why not here?" he wanted to know.

"'I don't know,' I told him. I explained that it had been decided in Boston before the orchestra left. I am sure that he was disappointed that no Russian music was played by the Boston Symphony in Russia. Incidently he was a surgeon, he told me.

"By this time a small crowd had gathered, listening to the conversation. There were between 15 and 20, I would judge, and several of them knew English in addition to the man with whom I was talking. These other English-speaking Russians explained the questions to the group. They were quiet and interested, and you could see how kind the Russians there were to each other.

"The surgeon wanted to know about other symphony orchestras in the United States, and I described the New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and San Francisco orchestras. Some of the other English-speaking Russians joined in the conversation.

"'What about ballet?' they wanted to know. I told them that the New York City Ballet company was outstanding, and growing steadily.

"'What about ballet in Boston?'

"I made a face and said we didn't have a company. They laughed at my grimace, and asked about opera.

Hard to Grasp

"The questions were perceptive. They wanted to know about American culture, and it was a search for information, not an attempt to belittle or to embarrass or to find support for political propaganda. They were friendly and courteous to me, and to each other.

"This sort of thing happened every time I went across the street, which was three times a day during the two days in Leningrad. I learned that many of the musicians had the same experience.

"The questions ranged far. They wanted to know about our economic life 'Is it true that American cars have up to 400 horse power?' I was asked. When I told them it was true they wanted to know how much such a car cost. They asked about such cars as Fords, Plymouths, Chevrolets.

"In these questions which they addressed to me in these street interviews, they revealed much to me. They were better informed than I had expected. I thought that I would encounter a sort of attitude and knowledge comparative to that of the Middle Ages, but this was not so among those with whom I talked."

The Stars and Stripes and the Soviet flag side by side in the Moscow concert hall when the Boston orchestra gave the first performance by a Western symphony in the U. S. S. R.

But even though they were better informed that he had anticipated, the Russians still had difficulty in understanding certain aspects of our social and economic life.

"They wanted to know how much skilled workers received in the United States. I told them that it was $2 to $3 an hour, that unskilled workers received from $40 a week and up. This was hard for them to comprehend. I try to explain that it depended on the degree of skill, or lack of it, but also on other factors, that in some areas wages were different from others."

This was puzzling to the Russians. They were accustomed to standard rates of pay, set by the government, and uniform throughout the Soviet Union, and the idea that a man might receive more—or less—pay doing work in one area than another, or for different employers, was a novel one.

Cost of Living

The cost of living was a thing of deep interest to them. They sought to relate wages to the cost of living, and to other expenses, such as housing, for instance. But they did not stop there, they kept asking questions in the impromptu sidewalk sessions.

"Education was of special interest to them," says Dr. Dwyer. "They asked, 'How much do your students specialize?' I explained that that depended upon the individual, and again I could see that the reply excited interest, perhaps even puzzlement. I said that some students put on blinders—I illustrated with my hands and that drew a laugh—and looked neither to left nor right, but plowed straight ahead in their studies. But I said that many others jumped around in their studies, taking this or that subject as they wished, according to their interest or plans for the future and their desire to acquire intellectual width as well as depth.

"This was a new idea to them. I have the impression that students in their schools have few if any free choices, that they are told what they are to study fairly early, and that the particular courses are then decided without consulting the students."

Amazed at Our TV

They asked the American about our television and here he was not so sure of himself because he has no set in his Memorial dr. apartment. He guessed that the average set was about 21 inches, but found on his return home that 24 inches is nearer the average. He told them that color TV was coming in strong and that he believed that in another couple of years every U. S. home would have a color set.

"They were amazed at this, and later I found out the reason why. While walking around Moscow I saw television sets for sale in department stores. They had screens that were very small, about the size of the page in an average sized book."

The sidewalk interviews which were a feature of the two days in Leningrad also occurred in Moscow, and the questions and the attitudes of the questions were pretty much the same, the Bostonian says.

"I had the impression that they were friendly and had a curiosity about America—especially about our technological progress. The people who gathered about me and about members of the symphony orchestra were always men, polite and apparently intelligent. Although there were many uniformed men in the two cities, none was in the groups that asked me questions, and neither were there any women.

"While it would have been possible for the government to stage these gatherings for propaganda purposes, I am convinced they were not so arranged. Obviously these people did not believe everything they heard on the government-controlled radio.

The Russian audience claps in cadence, two claps, a pause then two claps, etc. Many of them were amazed at our elective educational system and our freedom to choose work.

Shoddy Clothes

"They did not ask political questions. Nor did they ask questions of a leading nature in an attempt to get an argument started. They simply were seeking information."

The American noted that many of the people showed little expression on their faces, and this, in time, deeply impressed him. For that reason the occasional lifting of the mask, as when throngs gathered around the musicians entrance to cheer them at the end of concerts, was the more remarkable.

"I noted that the people were dressed in dark colors for the most part. The clothes were not only drab, but shoddy and frequently shabby. The clothes which I wore were what you would see any day on the streets of Boston. I am not what you would call a particularly fine dresser, certainly not by our standards, and yet there I stood out in contrast to the Russians.

The reception of the Russians to the Boston musicians was fabulous, he recalls. "At both Leningrad and Moscow the audiences remained until every musician had left the stage. At both places people gathered outside to cheer the musicians as they left. At Moscow, for instance, when Doriot (his wife) and I made our way through the throng after her solo performance in "Daphne and Cloe" they cheered and clapped. In Russia they clap differently than we do—in a cadence of two claps.

"Thank You"

"We got into the taxi to drive back to the hotel and the crowd pushed against the cab, holding it up for a few minutes. They cried out to hear 'Thank you, thank you,' in broken English."

It was these emotional moments, as well as the perceptive questions put to him by his sidewalk interrogaters, that convinced Dr. Dwyer that behind the Iron Curtain, behind the Red government's barrier of propaganda, behind the discreet masks worn on the faces of the individual Russians, there is a real feeling of friendship admiration for America and Americans.

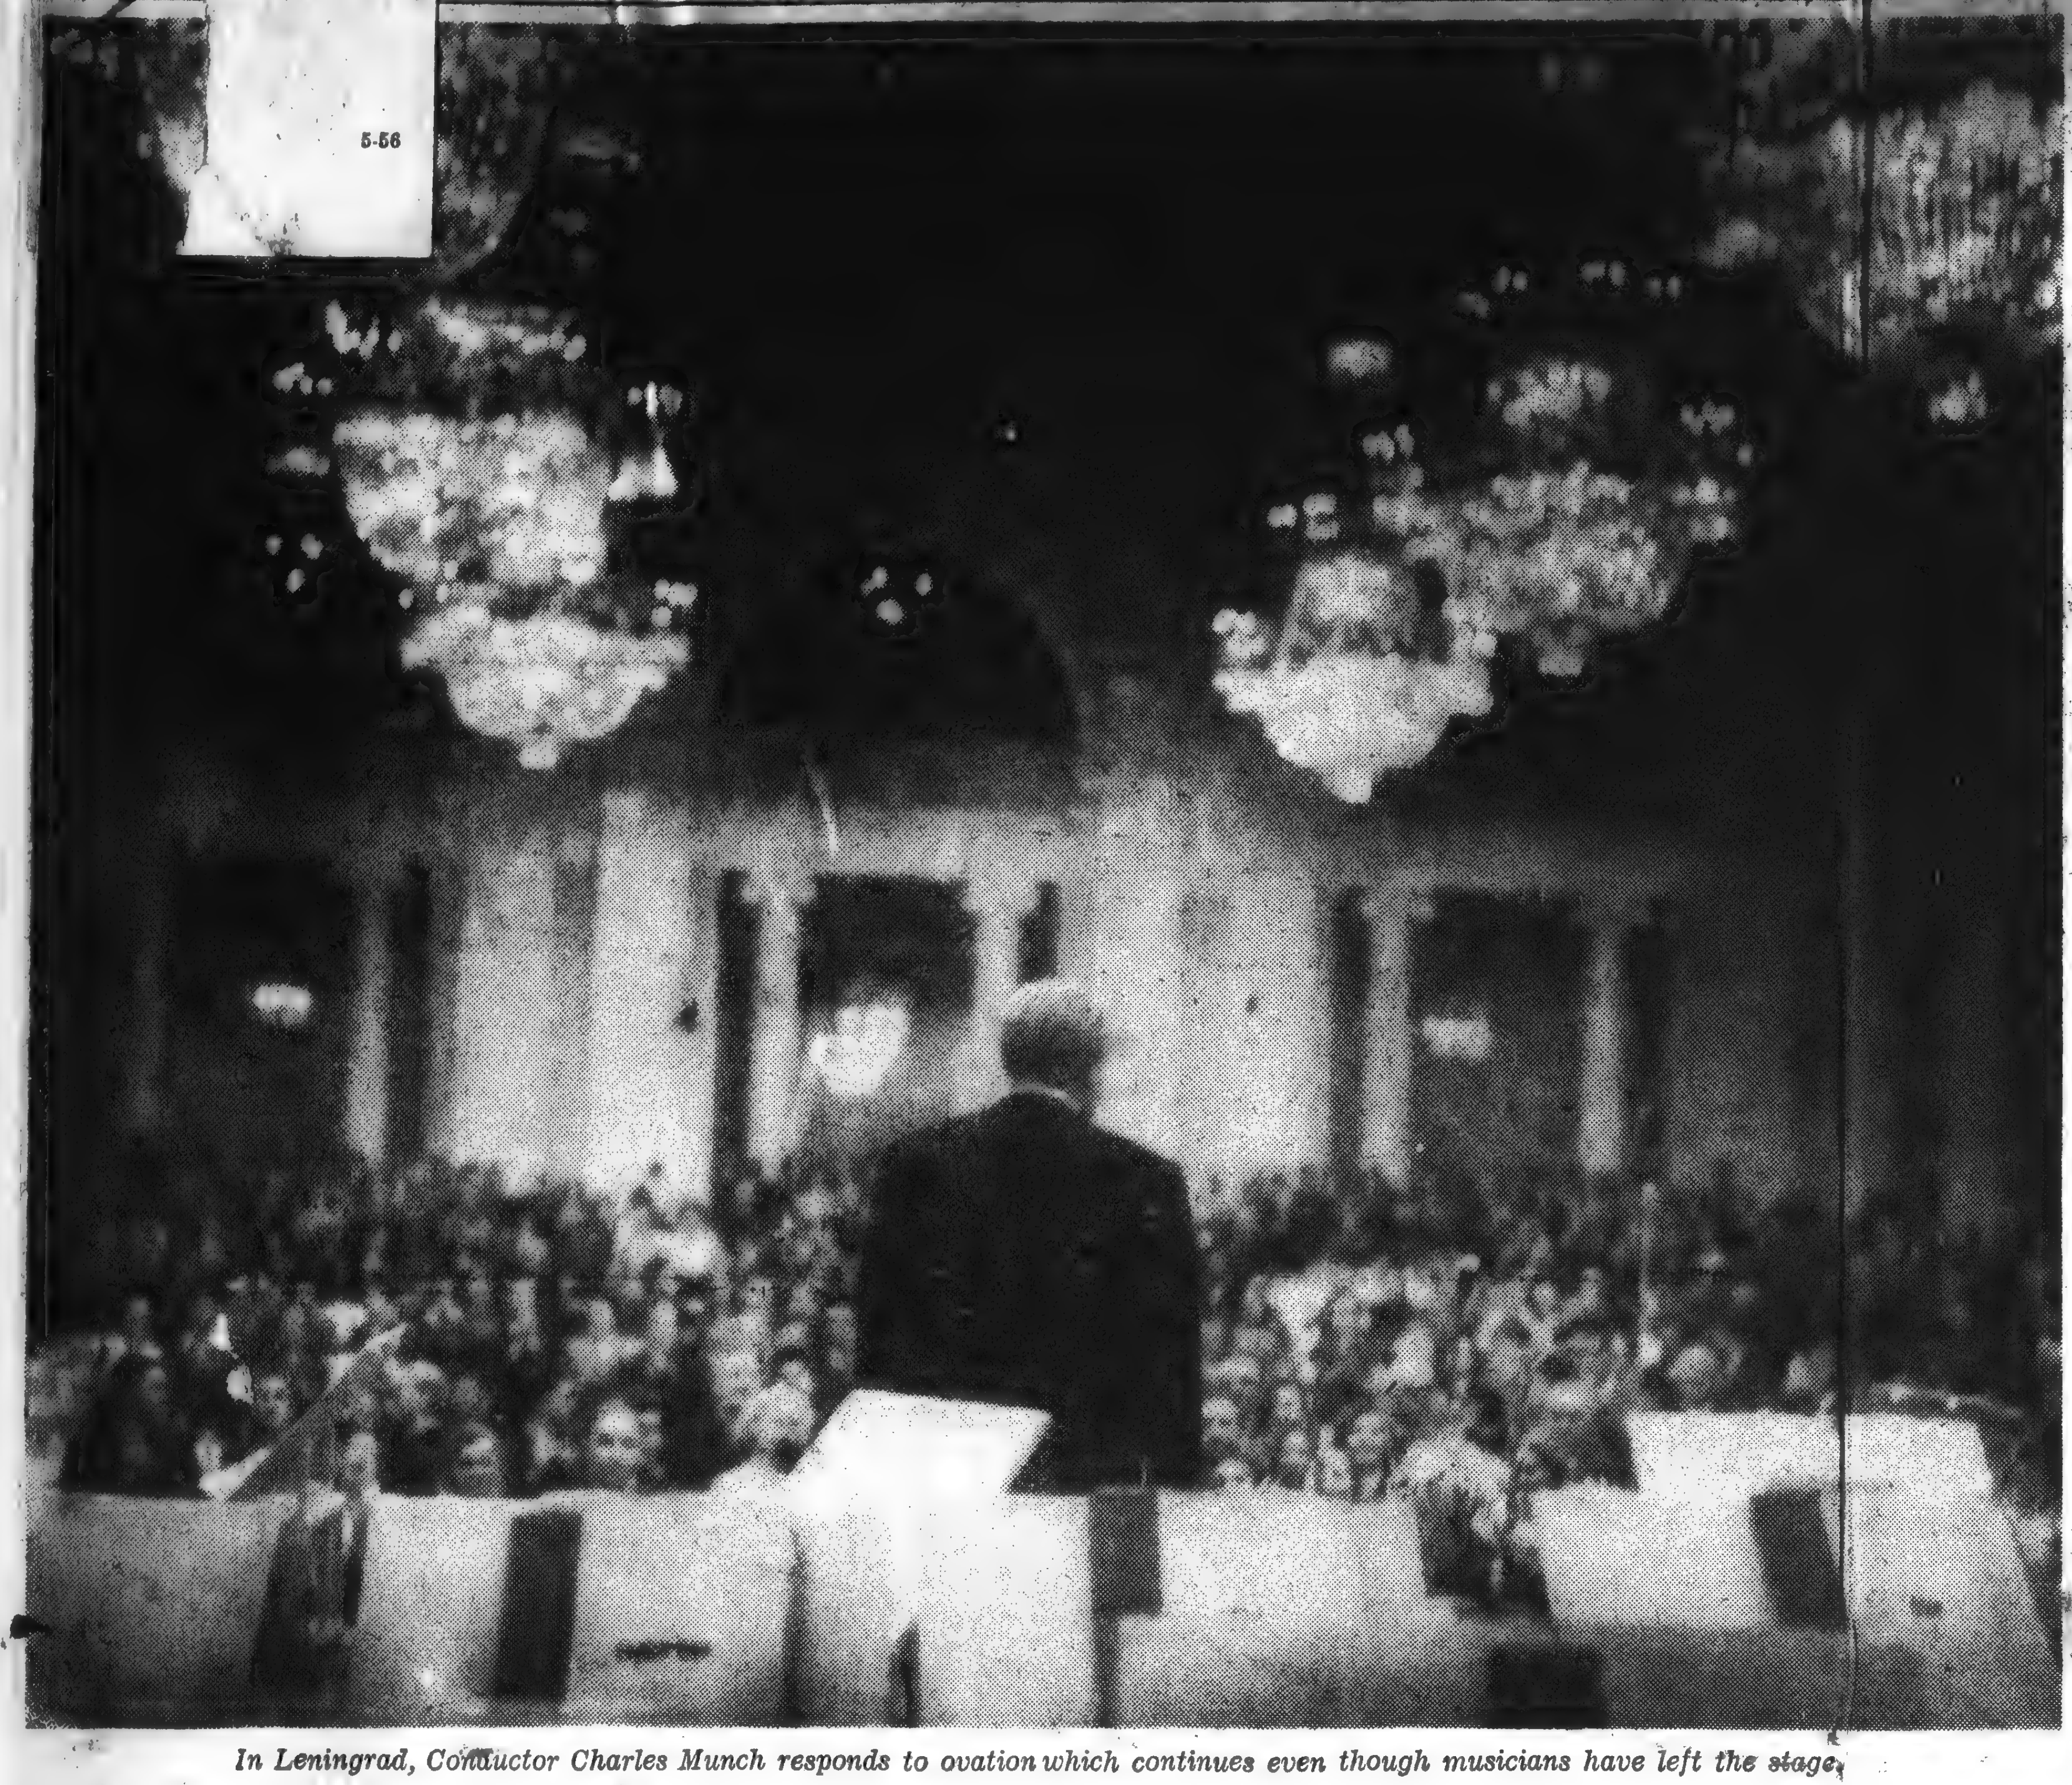
New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
OCT 23 1956

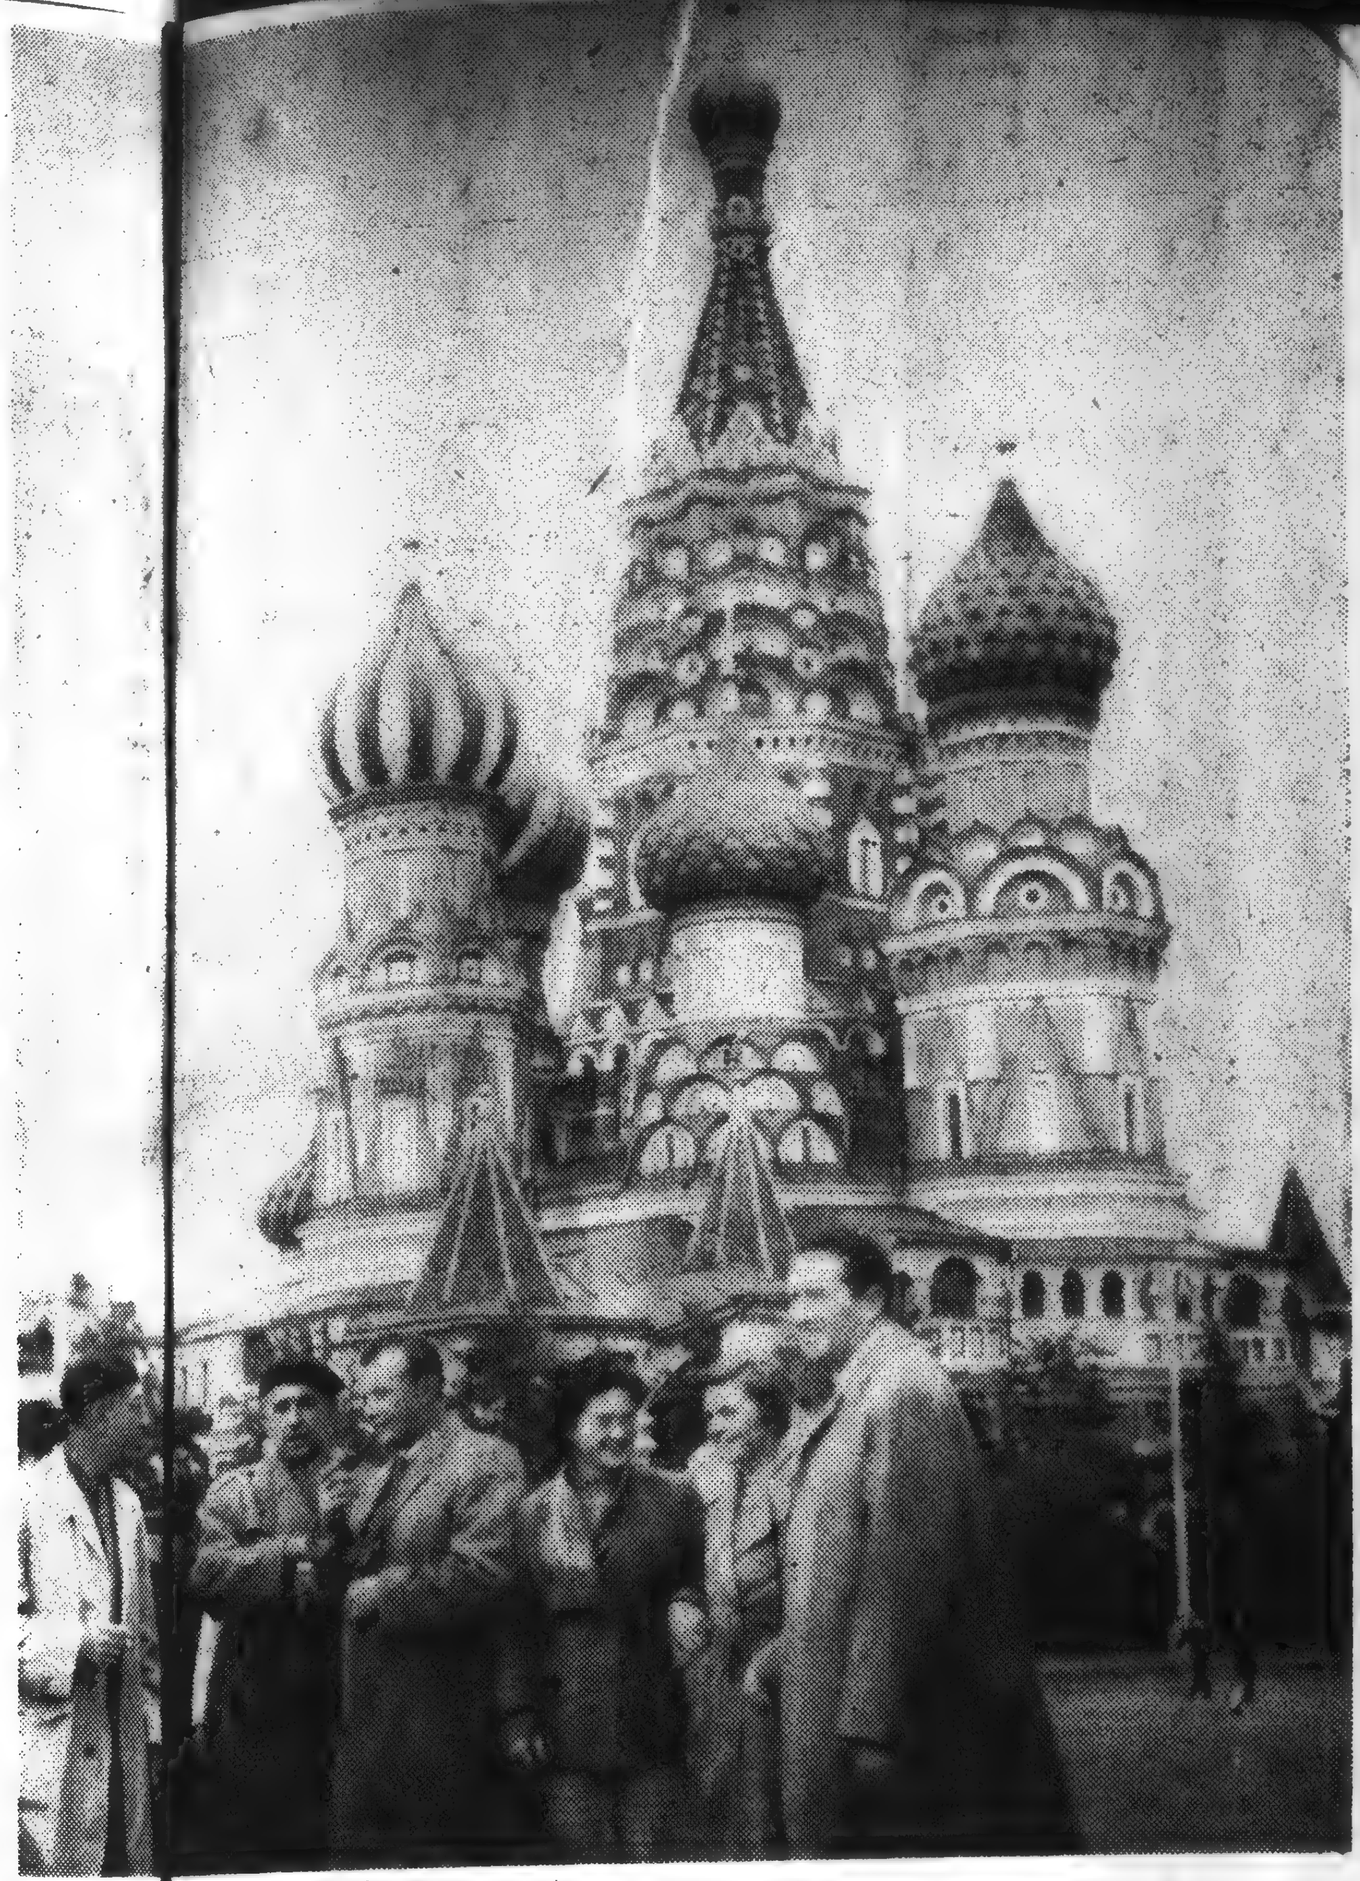
5-56

—See also vol. II

[149]



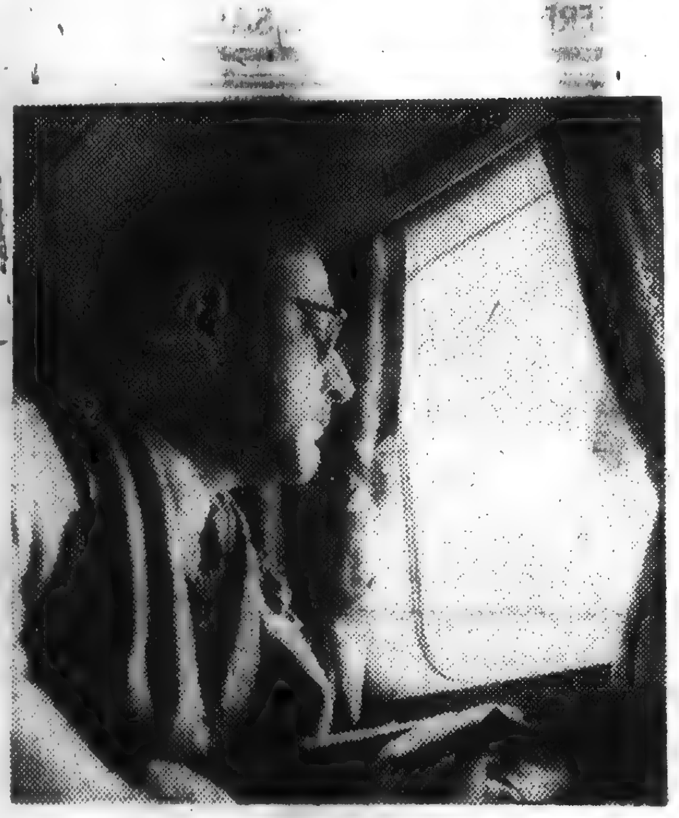
In Leningrad, Conductor Charles Munch responds to ovation which continues even though musicians have left the stage.



Sightseeing members of the orchestra were photographed by Voisin in Moscow outside famous St. Basil's Cathedral in Red Square.

The BSO in Russia

A Picture Report



Clarinetist Pasquale A. Cardillo, a native of North Adams, peers down from plane over Atlantic.

AFTER LEAVING Tanglewood this summer, the Boston Symphony Orchestra made history by becoming the first American orchestra ever to visit Russia. Invited by the Soviet government, which paid expenses, the orchestra gave two concerts in Leningrad and three in Moscow to wildly enthusiastic audiences. Sandwiched in between stops in 11 European countries, the Russian visit was a sensational success. The BSO was credited with scoring an important gain toward improving our cultural relations with the Soviets. The Eagle is indebted to Roger Voisin, an observant member of the orchestra, for this camera record of a musical milestone.

Commuter-style card game occupies Concertmaster Richard Burgin, right, on train.

Conductor Pierre Monteux, left, and secretary combat monotony of long plane flight by reading.

Photos by Roger Voisin

Amateur photographer Voisin proposes toast in Oslo, Norway. He performs well with a Rolleiflex when not playing first trumpet in the BSO.

← Undistracted by flattery, trumpeter Voisin snapped picture of music students loudly applauding BSO brass section during concert in Moscow. He carried camera almost all the time.

Two grinning members of a Red Army band, one holding French horn, pose for camera in Leningrad. →

Московская Государственная Филармония

БОЛЬШОЙ ЗАЛ КОНСЕРВАТОРИИ

БОСТОНСКИЙ
СИМФОНИЧЕСКИЙ ОРКЕСТР
(США)

Дирижеры

Чарльз МЮНШ

Пьер МОНТЭ

Сезон
1956—1957 гг.

Суббота, 8 сентября — начало в 8 часов вечера

Дирижер — Чарльз МЮНШ

I отделение

БЕТХОВЕН — Симфония № 3 («Героическая») ми-бемоль мажор, соч. 55
- Allegro con brio
- Похоронный марш
- Скерцо. Allegro vivace
- Финал. Allegro molto

II отделение

ПИСТОН — Симфония № 6
- Fluento espressivo
- Leggerissimo vivace
- Adagio sereno
- Allegro energico

РАВЕЛЬ — «Дафнис и Хлоя» — 2-я сюита
- Наступление дня
- Пантомима
- Общий танец

Исполняется без перерыва

Воскресенье, 9 сентября — начало в 12 часов дня

Дирижер — Пьер МОНТЭ

I отделение

ГАЙДН — Симфония «Сюрприз», соль мажор
- Adagio cantabile. Vivace assai
- Andante
- Менуэт. Allegro molto
- Финал. Allegro molto

КРЕСТОН — Симфония № 2
- Introduction and Song
- Interlude and Dance

БОСТОНСКИЙ СИМФОНИЧЕСКИЙ ОРКЕСТР

В этом году Бостонский симфонический оркестр отмечает 75-ю годовщину своего существования. Юбилейный сезон оркестр завершает большим турне по Европе, включая и первое посещение Советского Союза.

Оркестр начал свою деятельность несколько необычным образом. Его основателем является Генри Ли Хиггинсон. Сын купца из Новой Англии, он нарушил семейную традицию и отказался поступить на службу в фирму по окончании колледжа. Вместо этого двадцатидвухлетний Хиггинсон уехал в 1856 году в Вену, где начал учиться игре на фортепиано, изучает гармонию и контрапункт, зарабатывая себе на жизнь уроками английского языка.

В 1857 году отец Хиггинсона, образованный банкир, прислал ему из Бостона письмо, в котором писал о том, что есть возможность «сделать твердый капитал на просвещении». Сын развил эту мысль: он решил создать «твердый капитал» на музыке. Поврежденная рука сделала для него карьеру пианиста невозможной. Он последовал семейной традиции банковского дела и, скопив известный капитал, создал с его помощью сокровище, которого никогда не знала его страна — симфонический оркестр на уровне лучших оркестров Европы того времени.

В 1881 году Хиггинсон собрал лучших музыкантов, которых он мог заполучить в Германии и Австрии, пригласил молодого дирижера, немца по рождению, Георга Хеншеля и объявил о концертах в пригороде Бостона. Бостонский симфонический оркестр не был музыкальным «обществом», периодически собиравшимся для групповых концертов; это была постоянно действующая организация профессиональных музыкантов, для которых работа в оркестре являлась первоочередным долгом. Хиггинсон создавал оркестр в течение многих лет. Приглашая дирижера, Хиггинсон всегда руководствовался его талантом и представлял ему полную свободу действий.

Уроженец Вены, Вильгельм Герике (1884—1889; 1898—1906) вытренировал оркестр, превратил его в безупречный ансамбль и продемонстрировал американским слушателям, как может и должна звучать музыка Бетховена и Шуберта.

Артур Никиш (1889—1893) был скорее поэтом звуков, нежели мастером-педагогом, и ему следовал Эмиль Пор (1893—1898). После второго периода дирижирования Герике во главе оркестра встал Карл Мук (1906), чья мастерская рука, властная и скупая в жестах, придала оркестру блеск и изящество исполнения. На американском континенте нельзя было услышать ранее ничего подобного. Мук дирижировал ор-

Московская Государственная Филармония
БОЛЬШОЙ ЗАЛ КОНСЕРВАТОРИИ

БОСТОНСКИЙ
СИМФОНИЧЕСКИЙ ОРКЕСТР
(США)

Дирижеры

Чарльз МЮНШ

Пьер МОНТЭ

Сезон
1956—1957 гг.

Суббота, 8 сентября — начало в 8 часов вечера

Дирижер — Чарльз МЮНШ

I отделение

БЕТХОВЕН — Симфония № 3 («Героическая») ми-бемоль мажор, соч. 55

Allegro con brio
Похоронный марш
Скерцо. Allegro vivace
Финал. Allegro molto

II отделение

ПИСТОН — Симфония № 6

Fluento espressivo
Leggerissimo vivace
Adagio sereno
Allegro energico

РАВЕЛЬ — «Дафнис и Хлоя» — 2-я сюита

Наступление дня
Пантомима
Общий танец

Исполняется без перерыва

Воскресенье, 9 сентября — начало в 12 часов дня

Дирижер — Пьер МОНТЭ

I отделение

ГАЙДН — Симфония «Сюрприз», соль мажор

Adagio cantabile. Vivace assai
Andante
Менуэт. Allegro molto
Финал. Allegro molto

КРЕСТОН — Симфония № 2

Introduction and Song
Interlude and Dance

БОСТОНСКИЙ СИМФОНИЧЕСКИЙ ОРКЕСТР

В этом году Бостонский симфонический оркестр отмечает 75-ю годовщину своего существования. Юбилейный сезон оркестр завершает большим турне по Европе, включая и первое посещение Советского Союза.

Оркестр начал свою деятельность несколько необычным образом. Его основателем является Генри Ли Хиггинсон. Сын купца из Новой Англии, он нарушил семейную традицию и отказался поступить на службу в фирму по окончании колледжа. Вместо этого двадцатидвухлетний Хиггинсон уехал в 1856 году в Вену, где начал учиться игре на фортепиано, изучает гармонию и контрапункт, зарабатывая себе на жизнь уроками английского языка.

В 1857 году отец Хиггинсона, образованный банкир, прислал ему из Бостона письмо, в котором писал о том, что есть возможность «сделать твердый капитал на просвещении». Сын развил эту мысль: он решил создать «твердый капитал» на музыке. Поврежденная рука сделала для него карьеру пианиста невозможной. Он последовал семейной традиции банковского дела и, скопив известный капитал, создал с его помощью сокровище, которого никогда не знала его страна—симфонический оркестр на уровне лучших оркестров Европы того времени.

В 1881 году Хиггинсон собрал лучших музыкантов, которых он мог заполучить в Германии и Австрии, пригласил молодого дирижера, немца по рождению, Георга Хеншеля и объявил о концертах в пригороде Бостона. Бостонский симфонический оркестр не был музыкальным «обществом», периодически собиравшимся для групповых концертов; это была постоянно действующая организация профессиональных музыкантов, для которых работа в оркестре являлась первоочередным долгом. Хиггинсон создавал оркестр в течение многих лет. Приглашая дирижера, Хиггинсон всегда руководствовался его талантом и представлял ему полную свободу действий.

Уроженец Вены, Вильгельм Герике (1884—1889; 1898—1906) вытренировал оркестр, превратил его в безупречный ансамбль и продемонстрировал американским слушателям, как может и должна звучать музыка Бетховена и Шуберта.

Артур Никиш (1889—1893) был скорее поэтом звуков, нежели мастером-педагогом, и ему следовал Эмиль Пор (1893—1898). После второго периода дирижирования Герике во главе оркестра встал Карл Мук (1906), чья мастерская рука, властная и скупая в жестах, придала оркестру блеск и изящество исполнения. На американском континенте нельзя было услышать ранее ничего подобного. Мук дирижировал оркестром до весны 1918 года за исключением четырех сезонов (1908–1912), когда его место занимал Макс Фидлер.

В течение 38 лет, с 1881 по 1919 гг. Хиггинсон лично восполнял ежегодный дефицит оркестра. С его кончиной оркестр становится общественной собственностью.

Вновь образованный Совет попечителей пригласил из Парижа Анри Рабо и в следующем сезоне — Пьера Монтэ. Обстоятельства потребовали значительных перемен среди артистов оркестра и изменения репертуара. Монтэ создал поистине новый оркестр и расширил его известность.

В 1924 году Сергей Кусевицкий, выдающийся музыкант Европы, стал дирижером оркестра на 25 лет — самый долгий срок единоличного руководства оркестром. Это был период бурного развития симфонического дела в Соединенных Штатах. Оркестры, незадолго до того еще редкость, создавались в каждом центре, где находились ценители музыки. Появились отечественные композиторы, писавшие в своем оригинальном стиле, в отличие от традиционного европейского. Кусевицкий, чутко следивший за происходившими изменениями, как и его предшественники, всячески поощрял это развитие. Под его руководством выступления Бостонского симфонического оркестра вновь получили широкое признание. Дело было уже не в одной знаменитой личности — сам оркестр стал образцовым симфоническим коллективом. Имена оркестра и его дирижера были неотделимы, когда в 1948 г. Кусевицкий решил уйти в отставку.

Чарльз Мюнш, пришедший в оркестр осенью 1949 года, был одним из выдающихся музыкантов Франции и дирижером четырех оркестров в Париже. Он руководит Бостонским симфоническим оркестром в течение шести лет. За это время американская публика узнала и полюбила его как человека, глубоко преданного искусству, чуждого внешним эффектам, целиком поглощенного музыкой, способного проникать в ее существо и внутреннюю гармонию. В недавно опубликованной книге «Я дирижер» Мюнш пытается поделиться с музыкантами некоторыми сокровенными мыслями, родившимися на основе его собственного опыта. Он называет свою профессию «священным зовом, подчас — служением культу». Нет более требовательной профессии. «Пятнадцать лет учебы и труда не сделают дирижера из человека, если он не охвачен внутренним восторгом, всепоглощающим пламенем, силой магнетизма, овладевающей и оркестрантами, и слушателями». Это не похвальба. Мюнш менее всего занят описанием собственных успехов. Он по природе своей скромный человек. Он рисует идеал для всех дирижеров, в том числе и для себя.

Когда Хиггинсон предпринимал первые шаги, чтобы сделать симфонические концерты доступными максимальному кругу лиц, он не мог и мечтать о том, что сможет дать наука с помощью пластинок и радио. В его время было просто невозможно, чтобы в Гарварде образовался хор, который совместно с его оркестром исполнял бы музыку Баха и Бетховена. В те годы дирижеры оркестра смело выступали первыми приверженцами «новой» музыки Брамса и Вагнера, или таких американских композиторов, как Чедвик или Лёфлер. Естественным следствием тех лет является тот факт, что оркестр под управлением Кусевицкого включил в программу своего юбилейного пятидесятого сезона музыку, которая приобрела с тех пор всеобщее признание; в программах текущего сезона, посвященных музыкальной ассоциации имени Кусевицкого, оркестр продолжает новаторскую традицию пропаганды новой музыки. Концертный сезон Бостонского симфонического оркестра продолжается теперь ежегодно от октября до середины августа. Каждый год оркестр под управлением Артура Фидлера проводит в мае и июне весенний сезон; в июле и августе — сезон бесплатных концертов на набережной Чарльз-ривер; шестинедельный Беркширский фестиваль в Тенглвуде в графстве Ленокс штата Массачузетс, где каждое лето собирается более ста тысяч слушателей. Оркестр располагает тенглвудской школой по подготовке к выступлениям, Беркширским музыкальным центром. Благодаря всему этому оркестр вносит большой вклад в музыкальную жизнь Соединенных Штатов.

(Печатается по материалам администрации Бостонского симфонического оркестра).

ЧАРЛЬЗ МЮНШ

Чарльз МЮНШ родился в Страсбурге 26 сентября 1891 года. Его отец Эрнст был видным музыкантом, органистом, руководителем хора Св. Гильома в Страсбургском соборе, профессором Страсбургской консерватории и первым учителем (по скрипке) Чарльза, или, как его называли, «Черри». Все четыре брата и две сестры Чарльза последовали семейной традиции и стали музыкантами.

В 21 год Чарльз Мюнш решил стать врачом и уехал учиться в Париж. Но вскоре он уже отдавал все свое время скрипке, занимаясь под руководством Люсьена Капе.

Когда летом 1914 года началась война, Чарльз Мюнш, самый «французский» член своей семьи, живший постоянно в Париже, к несчастью оказался на каникулах в Страсбурге. Он был призван, ибо вместе со своими братьями, в силу пограничных условий, он подлежал прохождению службы в немецкой армии. Под Верденом его ранило и, по заключении перемирия, в возрасте двадцати шести лет он демобилизовался.

В 1920 году Чарльз Мюнш возобновил свою музыкальную деятельность в качестве концертмейстера Страсбургского оркестра, занимаясь в это лето в Берлине с Карлом Фишем. Он преподавал в Страсбургской консерватории, пока не переехал в Лейпциг и не вступил в оркестр Гевандхауза, где играл под управлением Фуртвенглера и Вальтера, и, возможно, перенял кое-что от обоих мастеров.

В 1929 году Мюнш встал перед альтернативой: принять немецкое гражданство или отказаться от своего места. Он переехал в Париж. В сезоне 1932 года он работал с Парижским симфоническим оркестром, дирижировал концертами Ламуре и начал в последующие сезоны цикл гастрольных ангажементов; эти гастроли принесли ему известность. В 1937 году он сменил Филиппа Гобера на должности дирижера оркестра Парижской консерватории и остался на этой должности в течение всей войны. В годы оккупации Франции фашистской Германией Мюнш не принимал «указаний» нацистов и помогал движению Сопротивления.

В 1939 году Мюнш предпринял поездку в Соединенные Штаты, чтобы дирижировать там оркестром Св. Людовика. Трудности, связанные с путешествиями в то время, не дали ему возможности проехать дальше Азорских островов. В 1946 году он вновь поехал в США, дирижировал Бостонским симфоническим оркестром 27 декабря в качестве приглашенного дирижера, а через месяц впервые выступил с оркестром Нью-Йоркской филармонии, которым дирижировал впоследствии много раз.

Весной 1948 года он согласился сменить Сергея Кусевицкого в качестве постоянного дирижера Бостонского симфонического оркестра, начиная с сезона 1949—1950 гг. Осенью 1948 года он еще раз пересек Атлантический океан с Национальным оркестром французского радиовещания. С разрешения своего правительства, которое наградило Ч. Мюнша орденом Почетного Легиона, он дирижировал всеми концертами оркестра в турне по Соединенным Штатам.

Чарльз Мюнш пришел, таким образом, в Бостонский симфонический оркестр, будучи дирижером международного класса, музыкантом глубокой культуры, связанным с центрами возникновения и развития европейской музыки. Мюнш продолжает дирижировать, насколько ему позволяет время, во Франции, Австрии, Италии, Бельгии, Голландии, с которыми его соединяют давние и прочные связи. В мае 1952 года он вывез Бостонский симфонический оркестр в первое турне по Европе, открывшееся в Париже и включившее помимо других городов его родной Страсбург. Этот момент был глубоко волнующим в жизни прославленного дирижера.

Когда Чарльз Мюнш стал музыкальным директором Бостонского симфонического оркестра, многие выражали опасение относительно удельного веса французской музыки в программах оркестра. Действительно, музыка таких композиторов, как Берлиоз, Дебюсси, или Равель, занимает в них видное место, равно как итальянский или русский дирижер пожелал бы предоставить привилегии своим отечественным композиторам, чтобы дирижировать их музыкой, используя свое особое национальное чувство и понимание.

Но Чарльз Мюнш сумел проявить поразительную разносторонность. Между первым и вторым сезонами оркестр значительно обновил свои программы. Важное место среди новых произведений принадлежит американским композиторам, что свидетельствует о глубоком интересе Мюнша к музыкальному творчеству США. Из классики Мюнш возродил целый ряд незаслуженно забытых произведений. Он проявил особое внимание к хоровым произведениям, которые сумел исполнить с большой красотой и силой. Среди них можно назвать такие, как две «Страсти» и Рождественская оратория Баха; Реквием, «Ромео и Джульетта» и «Осуждение Фауста» Берлиоза; месса Шуберта соль-мажор; «Жанна д'Арк в Буше» Онеггера; «Муки Св. Себастьяна» Дебюсси.

ПЬЕР МОНТЭ

Пьер Монтэ прошел большой и почетный путь одного из крупнейших дирижеров мира. С 1919 по 1924 год он дирижировал Бостонским симфоническим оркестром, сумел развить в коллективе новые ценные качества и значительно расширил его репертуар. В Сан-Франциско он дирижировал оркестром в течение семнадцати лет, и этот оркестр стал одним из лучших в стране. Вернувшись в Бостонский оркестр, он поочередно с Чарльзом Мюншем дирижировал концертами оркестра во время европейского турне 1952 года и турне по Соединенным Штатам в 1953 году и внес значительный вклад в триумфальный успех этих гастролей. Монтэ отказался в настоящее время от единоличного управления оркестром, выступая в качестве приглашенного дирижера и посвятив себя своему заветному делу — руководству летней школой дирижеров в Хенкоке, штат Мэн. Это не отставка. Своим летним и зимним ангажементам в Америке и Европе Монтэ отдает много творческих сил.

Пьер Монтэ родился 4 апреля 1874 года, окончил с отличием Парижскую консерваторию по классу скрипки. Он играл в Парижском оркестре в качестве и первой скрипки, и первого альта. В 1911 году он стал главным дирижером Русского балета Дягилева и дирижировал премьерами таких спектаклей как «Дафнис и Хлоя» — Равеля, «Весна священная», «Жар-птица» и «Петрушка» Стравинского. После службы в армии в первую мировую войну он вышел в отставку и совершил турне в Америку вместе с Русским балетом. Монтэ был постоянным дирижером французского репертуара в «Метрополитен-опере» в сезоне 1917—1918 гг. и дирижером Бостонского симфонического оркестра в 1919—1924 гг. В течение ряда сезонов он дирижировал также в качестве второго дирижера в Концертном зале в Амстердаме.

Итак, Пьер Монтэ, отметивший свое 81-летие 4 апреля 1956 года, прошел более чем шестидесятилетний путь музыкальной деятельности, считая с 1894 года, когда он впервые выступил в качестве скрипача. В 1952 году, когда он отказался от должности дирижера оркестра в Сан-Франциско, освободившись, таким образом, от регулярного и связывающего ангажемента, он решил воспользоваться привилегией дирижировать тогда, когда он желает, и столь часто, как он желает. Было бы глубокой ошибкой считать, что это означало снижение его активности. Монтэ возвращается туда, где до сих пор сохранились приятные воспоминания, связанные с первыми годами его деятельности. Ему аплодировал Париж, где старики еще помнят «концерты Монтэ». Концертный зал в Амстердаме, где он дирижировал много лет, стремится пригласить его каждый год, и, обычно, им это удается. «Метрополитен-опера» в Нью-Йорке приглашает его для дирижирования каждый сезон, когда возобновляются или видоизменяются постановки опер. Бостонский симфонический оркестр каждый сезон приглашает Монтэ в Бостон и в турне.

Именно с этим оркестром Монтэ дирижировал в Париже в 1942 году балетом Стравинского «Весна священная» в театре на Елисейских полях, где он выступал с премьерой этого произведения 29 мая 1913 г.

(Печатается по материалам администрации Бостонского симфонического оркестра).

II отделение

ШУБЕРТ — Симфония № 7 до мажор
Andante. Allegro ma non troppo
Andante con moto
Скерцо. Allegro vivace
Финал. Allegro vivace

Воскресенье, 9 сентября — начало в 7 часов вечера

Дирижер — Чарльз МЮНШ

I отделение

ГАЙДН Симфония № 102 си-бемоль мажор
Largo. Allegro vivace
Adagio
Менуэт. Allegro
Финал. Presto
ХАНСОН — Элегия.
КОПЛЕНД — Симфония-ода

II отделение

Р. ШТРАУС — «Дон Жуан» — симфоническая поэма
ДЮКА — «Ученик чародея» — скерцо на тему баллады Гёте

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,213 - S. 1,146,860

MAY 14 1956

SOVIET VISAS PROMISED

Embassy Aide Says Many U. S. Citizens Will Get Permits

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13—The Soviet Embassy has notified about 200 Americans this month of its readiness to issue tourist visas to them, Konstantin G. Fedoseev, counselor of the Embassy, said last night.

The Soviet diplomat was interviewed on the subject of cultural exchanges on a Washington television program. He said later he was the first member of the Soviet Embassy to have been interviewed on television in the United States.

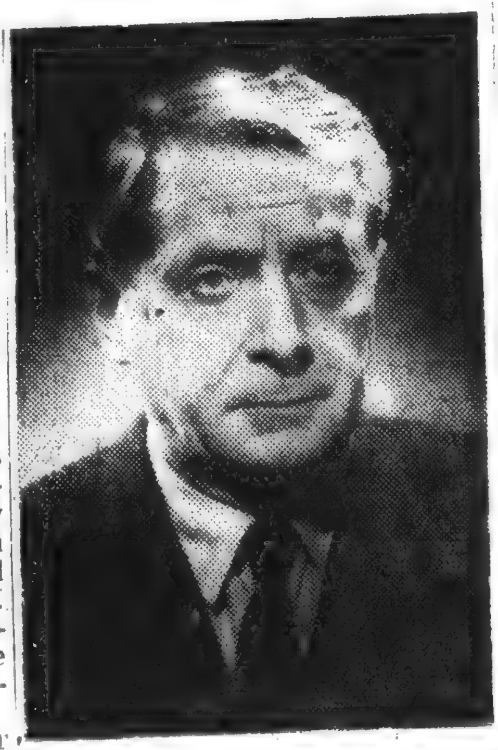
Mr. Fedoseev said he hoped the Boston Symphony Orchestra soon would accept an invitation to visit the Soviet Union and that Soviet composers and soloists, as well as ballet dancers and singers from the Bolshoi Theatre, would have an opportunity to tour the United States.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Will Play In Moscow and Leningrad



CHARLES MUNCH

Boston, June 7 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight accepted a Soviet invitation to tour Russia this autumn, giving concerts in Moscow and Leningrad.

It will be the first American symphony ever to perform in Russia.

The State Department approved the inclusion of a six-day visit to the Soviet Union on the orchestra's visit to Europe starting in August, Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., said.

The invitation to the 104-piece orchestra directed by Charles Munch was extended by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow through the Soviet embassy in Washington, Perry said. He said Orchestra President Henry B. Cabot "made known its willingness" to include Russia on the tour during the Geneva conference last August.

Details of the Russian tour

Continued On Page 7 2

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
TAUNTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 11,035

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Orchestra Announces Acceptance of Invite to Play in Russia

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to become the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The orchestra announced acceptance last night of a Russian invitation to appear in the U.S.S.R. during its European tour next August and September.

Symphony officials said it is "understood" the Russians will pay the transportation costs for 104 musicians and conductor Charles Munch during the six-day visit.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

JUN 9 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Invitation to Play in Russia

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced acceptance of a Soviet invitation to play in Russia this summer on its European tour.

The world famed orchestra will be the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The Boston Symphony has scheduled a European tour during August and September. The formal Russian invitation from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow called for the orchestra to spend six days in Russia during the tour.

Although details are not completed, concerts are planned for Leningrad and Moscow. Boston Symphony officials said "it is understood" that the Russians will assume the transportation expenses of the 104 players and conductor Charles Munch during the six-day trip.

The Soviets also "will pay a stipend for the concerts given within Soviet territory," they added.

The symphony acceptance followed overtures made last August by Henry C. Cabot, president of the board trustees, who made known the orchestra would be willing to include a visit to Russia this year on its European tour.

Soviet violinist David Oistrakh was guest soloist at a Boston Symphony pension fund concert last December.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUN 8 - 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Invitation To Play in Russia

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to become the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The orchestra announced acceptance last night of a Russian invitation to appear in the U.S.S.R. during its European tour in August and September.

It will leave shortly after the close of its Berkshire Music festival season at Tanglewood, Lenox, which runs from July 4 to Aug. 12.

Symphony officials said it is "understood" the Russians will pay the transportation costs for 104 musicians and conductor Charles Munch during the six-day visit.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 58,894

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony To Play in Russia

BOSTON, June 8 (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced last night it will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad, becoming the first American symphony orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union.

The Ministry of Culture in Moscow invited the 104-piece orchestra through the Soviet Embassy in Washington. The State Department approved the inclusion of the Soviet Union in the orchestra's visit to Europe, which starts next August.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUN 8 1956

Soviet Visit For Boston Symphony

Adds 6-Day Stay To Europe Tour

Special to the Herald Tribune

BOSTON, June 7.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will spend a week in Russia during its European tour this summer, it was announced today at Symphony Hall. Thomas D. Perry, the orchestra's manager, is now in Washington completing official arrangements. It will be the first American organization of its kind to play in the Soviet Union.

The orchestra will leave the United States a week after the close of its Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., on Aug. 12, and will be heard in Ireland, Scotland, England and the Scandinavian countries before playing in Helsinki Sept. 4.

Six Days Scheduled

It will then tour the Soviet Union for six days, and also play in Prague on Sept. 11 before continuing its travels in Central and Western Europe. Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux will share the conductorship during the tour, which is sponsored by the State Department.

The idea of playing in Russia has been under consideration since last July, when Henry B. Cabot, the Boston Symphony's president, said that the orchestra would be ready and eager to play there in accord with President Eisenhower's suggestions of helping to lift the Iron Curtain by cultural and intellectual exchange with the Soviet Union.

Philadelphia Declined

Last April, after the Philadelphia Orchestra had declined a Soviet invitation to come to Russia in August, State Department officials looked to the Boston Symphony to take its place, especially since adding Russia to the tour would cost the government nothing extra.

The Boston Symphony will also have the probable distinction of being the first major orchestra from outside the Soviet orbit to go to Russia. For a while, it seemed that the London Philharmonic would win this honor, but its tour will follow the Bostonians' visit by two weeks.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

JUN 8 - 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Moscow, Leningrad Tour

BOSTON (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight accepted a Soviet invitation to tour Russia this autumn, giving concerts in Moscow and Leningrad.

It will be the first American symphony ever to perform in Russia.

The State Department approved the inclusion of a six-day visit to the Soviet Union on the orchestra's visit to Europe starting in August, Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr., said.

The invitation to the 104-piece orchestra directed by Charles Munch was extended by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow through the Soviet embassy in Washington, Perry said. He said Orchestra President Henry B. Cabot "made known its willingness" to include Russia on the tour during the Geneva conference last August.

Details of the Russian tour have not been worked out yet. But Perry said it was "understood" Russia would assume transportation expenses and "pay a stipend" for the concerts as it did when the Gershwin folk opera "Porgy and Bess" performed there in January.

After Prague Concert

The Russian tour will follow a concert in Prague Sept. 11, Perry said. He said Russia would pay transportation costs also from Helsinki, Finland, where there is a concert scheduled Sept. 4, to Czechoslovakia.

Other costs of the trip abroad, which starts Aug. 22, are being defrayed by private contributions and the international exchange program of the American National Theater and Academy, a professional agency acting in behalf of the State Department.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,625

JUN 8 1956

Hub Symphony Going to Russia

BOSTON, June 8 (UP) — The Boston Symphony orchestra announced last night it will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad, becoming the first American Symphony orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union.

The ministry of culture in Moscow invited the 104-piece orchestra through the Soviet embassy in Washington. The state department approved the inclusion of the Soviet Union in the orchestra's visit to Europe which starts next August.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony To Play In Russia

BOSTON (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced Thursday night it will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad, becoming the first American symphony orchestra to perfor min the Soviet Union.

The Ministry of Culture in Moscow invited the 104-piece orchestra through the Soviet Embassy in Washington. The State Department approved the inclusion of the Soviet Union in the orchestra's visit to Europe which starts next August.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Bid To Play In Russia

BOSTON, June 7 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight announced acceptance of a Soviet invitation to play in Russia this summer on its European tour.

The world famed orchestra will be the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The Boston Symphony has scheduled a European tour during August and September. The formal Russian invitation from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow called for the orchestra to spend six days in Russia during the autumn tour.

Although details are not completed, concerts are planned for Leningrad and Moscow. Boston Symphony officials said "it is understood" that the Russians will assume the transportation expenses of the 104 players and Conductor Charles Munch during the six-day trip.

The Soviets also "will pay a stipend for the concerts given within Soviet territory," they added.

The symphony acceptance followed overtures made last August by Henry C. Cabot, president of the board trustees, who made known the orchestra would be willing to include a visit to Russia this year on its European tour.

Cabot and orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. expressed "gratification for the cooperation of both governments in making this important cultural visit possible."

Soviet violinist David Oistrakh was guest soloist at a Boston symphony pension fund concert last December.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068

L'Etoile
LOWELL, Mass.
Bi-Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 4,783

JUN 8 1956

BOSTON, 8 —— L'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston comprendra une visite de six jours en Russie, avec concerts à Leningrad, Moscou et ailleurs, dans son tour d'Europe pendant août et septembre prochains, vient-on d'annoncer.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

MAY 14 1956

SOVIET VISAS PROMISED

Embassy Aide Says Many U. S. Citizens Will Get Permits

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13—The Soviet Embassy has notified about 200 Americans this month of its readiness to issue tourist visas to them, Konstantin G. Fedoseev, counselor of the Embassy, said last night.

The Soviet diplomat was interviewed on the subject of cultural exchanges on a Washington television program. He said later he was the first member of the Soviet Embassy to have been interviewed on television in the United States.

Mr. Fedoseev said he hoped the Boston Symphony Orchestra soon would accept an invitation to visit the Soviet Union and that Soviet composers and soloists, as well as ballet dancers and singers from the Bolshoi Theatre, would have an opportunity to tour the United States.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Will Play In Moscow and Leningrad

Boston, June 7 (UP) The Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight accepted a Soviet invitation to tour Russia this autumn, giving concerts in Moscow and Leningrad.

It will be the first American symphony ever to perform in Russia.

The State Department approved the inclusion of a six-day visit to the Soviet Union on the orchestra's visit to Europe starting in August, Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., said.

The invitation to the 104-piece orchestra directed by Charles Munch was extended by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow through the Soviet embassy in Washington, Perry said. He said Orchestra President Henry B. Cabot "made known its willingness" to include Russia on the tour during the Geneva conference last August.

Details of the Russian tour

Continued On Page 7

7

CHARLES MUNCH

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
TAUNTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 11,035

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Orchestra Announces Acceptance of Invite to Play in Russia

BOSTON (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to become the first American symphony to play in Russia.

chestra announced acceptance last night of a Russian invitation to appear in the U.S.S.R. during its European tour next August and September.

Symphony officials said it is "understood" the Russians will pay the transportation costs for 104 musicians and conductor Charles Munch during the six-day visit.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

JUN 9 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Invitation to Play in Russia

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced acceptance of a Soviet invitation to play in Russia this summer on its European tour.

The world famed orchestra will be the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The Boston Symphony has scheduled a European tour during August and September. The formal Russian invitation from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow called for the orchestra to spend six days in Russia during the tour.

Although details are not completed, concerts are planned for Leningrad and Moscow. Boston Symphony officials said "it is understood" that the Russians will assume the transportation expenses of the 104 players and conductor Charles Munch during the six-day trip.

The Soviets also "will pay a stipend for the concerts given within Soviet territory," they added.

The symphony acceptance followed overtures made last August by Henry C. Cabot, president of the board trustees, who made known the orchestra would be willing to include a visit to Russia this year on its European tour.

Soviet violinist David Oistrakh was guest soloist at a Boston Symphony pension fund concert last December.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUN 8 - 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Invitation To Play in Russia

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to become the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The orchestra announced acceptance last night of a Russian invitation to appear in the U.S.S.R. during its European tour in August and September.

It will leave shortly after the close of its Berkshire Music festival season at Tanglewood, Lenox, which runs from July 4 to Aug. 12.

Symphony officials said it is "understood" the Russians will pay the transportation costs for 104 musicians and conductor Charles Munch during the six-day visit.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 58,894

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony To Play in Russia

BOSTON, June 8 (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced last night it will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad, becoming the first American symphony orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union.

The Ministry of Culture in Moscow invited the 104-piece orchestra through the Soviet Embassy in Washington. The State Department approved the inclusion of the Soviet Union in the orchestra's visit to Europe, which starts next August.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUN 8 1956

Soviet Visit For Boston Symphony

Adds 6-Day Stay To Europe Tour

Special to the Herald Tribune

BOSTON, June 7.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will spend a week in Russia during its European tour this summer, it was announced today at Symphony Hall. Thomas D. Perry, the orchestra's manager, is now in Washington completing official arrangements. It will be the first American organization of its kind to play in the Soviet Union.

The orchestra will leave the United States a week after the close of its Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., on Aug. 12, and will be heard in Ireland, Scotland, England and the Scandinavian countries before playing in Helsinki Sept. 4.

Six Days Scheduled

It will then tour the Soviet Union for six days, and also play in Prague on Sept. 11 before continuing its travels in Central and Western Europe. Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux will share the conductorship during the tour, which is sponsored by the State Department.

The idea of playing in Russia has been under consideration since last July, when Henry B. Cabot, the Boston Symphony's president, said that the orchestra would be ready and eager to play there in accord with President Eisenhower's suggestions of helping to lift the Iron Curtain by cultural and intellectual exchange with the Soviet Union.

Philadelphia Declined

Last April, after the Philadelphia Orchestra had declined a Soviet invitation to come to Russia in August, State Department officials looked to the Boston Symphony to take its place, especially since adding Russia to the tour would cost the government nothing extra.

The Boston Symphony will also have the probable distinction of being the first major orchestra from outside the Soviet orbit to go to Russia. For a while, it seemed that the London Philharmonic would win this honor, but its tour will follow the Bostonians' visit by two weeks.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

JUN 8 - 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Moscow, Leningrad Tour

BOSTON (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight accepted a Soviet invitation to tour Russia this autumn, giving concerts in Moscow and Leningrad.

It will be the first American symphony ever to perform in Russia.

The State Department approved the inclusion of a six-day visit to the Soviet Union on the orchestra's visit to Europe starting in August, Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr., said.

The invitation to the 104-piece orchestra directed by Charles Munch was extended by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow through the Soviet embassy in Washington, Perry said. He said Orchestra President Henry B. Cabot "made known its willingness" to include Russia on the tour during the Geneva conference last August.

Details of the Russian tour have not been worked out yet. But Perry said it was "understood" Russia would assume transportation expenses and "pay a stipend" for the concerts as it did when the Gershwin folk opera "Porgy and Bess" performed there in January.

After Prague Concert

The Russian tour will follow a concert in Prague Sept. 11, Perry said. He said Russia would pay transportation costs also from Helsinki, Finland, where there is a concert scheduled Sept. 4, to Czechoslovakia.

Other costs of the trip abroad, which starts Aug. 22, are being defrayed by private contributions and the international exchange program of the American National Theater and Academy, a professional agency acting in behalf of the State Department.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,625

JUN 8 1956

Hub Symphony Going to Russia

BOSTON, June 8 (UP) — The Boston Symphony orchestra announced last night it will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad, becoming the first American Symphony orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union.

The ministry of culture in Moscow invited the 104-piece orchestra through the Soviet embassy in Washington. The state department approved the inclusion of the Soviet Union in the orchestra's visit to Europe which starts next August.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony To Play In Russia

BOSTON (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced Thursday night it will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad, becoming the first American symphony orchestra to perfor min the Soviet Union.

The Ministry of Culture in Moscow invited the 104-piece orchestra through the Soviet Embassy in Washington. The State Department approved the inclusion of the Soviet Union in the orchestra's visit to Europe which starts next August.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Bid To Play In Russia

BOSTON, June 7 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight announced acceptance of a Soviet invitation to play in Russia this summer on its European tour.

The world famed orchestra will be the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The Boston Symphony has scheduled a European tour during August and September. The formal Russian invitation from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow called for the orchestra to spend six days in Russia during the autumn tour.

Although details are not completed, concerts are planned for Leningrad and Moscow. Boston Symphony officials said "it is understood" that the Russians will assume the transportation expenses of the 104 players and Conductor Charles Munch during the six-day trip.

The Soviets also "will pay a stipend for the concerts given within Soviet territory," they added.

The symphony acceptance followed overtures made last August by Henry C. Cabot, president of the board trustees, who made known the orchestra would be willing to include a visit to Russia this year on its European tour.

Cabot and orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. expressed "gratification for the cooperation of both governments in making this important cultural visit possible."

Soviet violinist David Oistrakh was guest soloist at a Boston symphony pension fund concert last December.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068

L'Etoile
LOWELL, Mass.
Bi-Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 4,783

JUN 8 1956

BOSTON, 8 —— L'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston comprendra une visite de six jours en Russie, avec concerts à Leningrad, Moscou et ailleurs, dans son tour d'Europe pendant août et septembre prochains, vient-on d'annoncer.

8-54

[151]

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 285,839

JUN 8 1956

Symphony to Play For Muscovites

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted the invitation of the Russian government to give concerts at Moscow and Leningrad late this summer, it was announced last night by the orchestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry, Jr.

The orchestra already has scheduled a European tour for August and September at the end of the Tanglewood Festival in the Berkshires. The invitation calls for the orchestra to spend six days in Russia.

Symphony officials said the Russian government, "it is understood," will assume all transportation costs for the 104 musicians and their conductor, Charles Munch, during the six-day stay. In addition, the orchestra is expected to receive a stipend.

---

y Accep
ad Tou

te Department approve ion of a six-day visit to Union on the orchestra's
Europe starting in August
Thomas D. Perry Jr.

nvitation to the 104-piece
directed by Charles as extended by the Minulture in Moscow through embassy in Washington,
He said Orchestra
Henry B. Cabot "made ts willingness" to include n the tour during the Geference last August.

of the Russian tour have worked out yet. But Per it was "understood" Rus assume transportation ex nd "pay a stipend" for th as it did when the Gersh opera "Porgy and Bess" nd there in January.

Prague Concert

Russian tour will follow
in Prague Sept. 11, Perr le said Russia would pa rtation costs also from He Finland, where there is scheduled Sept. 4, lovakia.

costs of the trip abroa tarts Aug. 22, are being d by private contributio international exchang
of the American Nation
and Academy, a profe
gency acting in behalf e Department.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

JUN 8 1956

ymphony to Visit Russia

Boston Symphony Orchestra
st night accepted an invitation om the Soviet government to ay in Russia for six days during his summer when the group is naking a European tour.

Henry D. Cabot, president of oard of trustees, said there are till details to be ironed out but hat the 104 players and conductor
Charles Munch would play conerts at Leningrad and Moscow during its tour of Europe in Au-ust and September.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 42,005

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony to Perform in Russia

BOSTON. — (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced last night it will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad, becoming the first American symphony orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union.

The ministry of culture in Moscow invited the 104-piece orchestra through the soviet embassy in Washington. The state department approved the inclusion of the Soviet Union in the orchestra's visit to Europe which starts next August.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Soviet Bid

The World's Day
Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

Boston: Symphony Orchestra to Tour U.S.S.R.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted a formal invitation to visit the Soviet Union for six days during its European tour in September. [Page 5.]

Washington: Eisenhower Engagements Canceled

President Eisenhower's engagements for today were canceled by an indisposition which his physician described as an "upset stomach and headache" which had nothing to do with his heart. The White House announcement had an immediate effect on the stock market which opened slightly lower. Brokers advised customers to accept the statements on the President's indisposition at their face value and not to become alarmed.

Spending for military defense over the 15-year period from 1951 to 1965 may total more than half a trillion dollars, it is estimated—even with the nation at peace.

Secretary of Welfare Folsom has promised to seek more money for services to the elderly.

Europe: Queen Elizabeth Arrives in Stockholm

Queen Elizabeth II and the Duke of Edinburgh arrived in Stockholm today for the first British royal visit to Sweden in almost half a century. They were greeted by cannon salutes, an escort of 300 jet fighters, and thousands of persons jammed onto the dock where they landed.

Asia: Heavy Water Shipment Reaches Bombay

Seven tons of heavy water arrived in Bombay from New York for use in India's atomic research program. The Indian Government is buying some 21 tons of it from the United States for peaceful nuclear uses.

Art, Theater, Music: Page 5. Radio. TV. FM: Page 7

Weather Predictions: C

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sentinel (e)
FITCHBURG, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 15,703

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Bound For Russia

BOSTON, June 8 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to become the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The orchestra announced acceptance last night of a Russian invitation to appear in the USSR during its European tour next August and September.

Symphony officials said it is "understood" the Russians will pay the transportation costs for 104 musicians and conductor Charles Munch during the six-day visit.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,640

JUN 8 1956

ston Symphony Will
e Tour Of Russia

STON — The Boston Sym-
y Orchestra has accepted a
l invitation from the U.S.S.R.
clude Soviet Russia in its
f Europe during August and mber. The invitation from inistry of Culture in Moscow ansmitted by Yuri Gouk, cul-
attache of the Soviet Em-
in Washington, to the orches-
manager, Thomas D. Perry,

Boston Symphony under din of Charles Munch will be first American symphony
stra to perform in Russia
August during the Geneva rence the orchestra, through president of its board of trus-
Henry B. Cabot, made known willingness to include a visit
the Soviet Republic during its ojected tour of Europe in the umn of 1956.

The Russian invitation to the oston Symphony Orchestra is to end six days of its autumn tour thin the Soviet border, and although details are not yet worked t, concerts are planned in Leningrad and Moscow. It is understood that the U.S.S.R., as it did in the case of "Porgy and Bess" when the Gershwin folk opera performed in Russia last January, will assume expenses of transportation of the 104 members of the orchestra,
Music Director Charles Munch and Orchestra's staff and equipment from Helsinki, where a concert is planned on Sept. 4; and to its next date, in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia, on Sept. 11.
The U.S.S.R. will also pay a stipend for the concerts given within the Soviet territory.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Eagle (m)
WRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

JUN 8 1956

ston Sympho epts Bid To y In Russia

STON, June 7 (AP)—The Symphony Orchestra to unced acceptance of a S ation to play in Russia ner on its European tou
e world famed orchestr
the first American sym
play in Russia.

Boston Symphony
duled a European tour d ust and September. Th Russian invitation fro
istry of Culture in M
ed for the orchestra to days in Russia durin
mn tour.

lthough details are not ed, concerts are planne
ingrad and Moscow.
phony officials said "it stood" that the Russian ume the transportatio ses of the 104 players an tor Charles Munch duri
day trip.

The Soviets also "will end for the concerts
hin Soviet territory,"
ed.

The symphony acceptan
ed overtures made last
by Henry C. Cabot, pr
the board trustees, who wn the orchestra wo
ing to include a visit to s year on its European Cabot and orchestra m
omas D. Perry Jr. ex
atification for the coop
both governments in s important cultural vi le."

Soviet violinist David s guest soloist at a phony pension fund
December.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,564

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Invitation To Play in Russia

BOSTON, June 8 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to become the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The orchestra announced acceptance last night of a Russian invitation to appear in the U. S. S. R. during its European tour next August and September.

Boston Symphony officials said it is "understood" the Russians will pay the transportation costs for 104 musicians and Conductor Charles Munch during the six-day visit.

Henry C. Cabot, president of the orchestra board of trustees, and Orchestra Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. expressed "gratification for the cooperation of both (the U. S. and Russian) governments in making this important cultural visit possible."

Details of the concert tour are not complete but at least two concerts are planned for Moscow and Leningrad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 122,000

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Invitation to Tour U. S. S. R.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra received and accepted yesterday a formal invitation from the U. S. S. R. to include Soviet Russia in its tour of Europe during August and September. The invitation from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow was transmitted by Yuri Gouk, cultural attache of the Soviet Embassy in Washington, to the orcnestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry Jr.

SYMPHONY

Page Two

U. S. S. R., as it did in the case of "Porgy and Bess" when the Gershwin folk opera performed in Russia last January, will assume the expenses of transportation from Helsinki, where a concert is planned Sept. 4, and to its next date in Prague, capital of Czecho-Slovakia, Sept. 11. The U. S. S. R. will also pay a stipend for the concerts in Soviet territory.

Part of Exchange Program

The orchestra's tour of Europe is to be made in cooperation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theatre and Academy, professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad, to help cover the cost of trans-Atlantic transportation by air and to help defray deficits from concerts abroad. Private contributions have also been secured toward costs of the tour.

Both Cabot and Perry expressed gratification when the Soviet invitation was announced, for the cooperation of both governments in making this important cultural visit possible.

Monteux to Share Podium

In December, Soviet violinist David Oistrakh was guest soloist at a Boston Symphony pension fund concert. He made a recording with the orchestra for R. C. A. Victor and is known to have taken back to Russia high praise to share the concerts abroad.

The European tour will be under the direction of Charles Munch at the conclusion of the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 12. Munch has invited Pierre Monteux, once conductor of the Boston Symphony, to share the concerts aboard

Two planes, chartered from K. L. M. Royal Dutch Airlines will transport most of the symphony's personnel to Europe Aug. 22 Part of the orchestra and the instruments will sail on the Nieuw Amsterdam Aug. 14.

Five concerts will be played Aug. 26-30, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, and the orchestra will then tour four weeks, offering concerts in Scandinavia, Northern and Western Europe and the British Isles. The tour is planned to include about 25 cities, covering more than 4000 miles.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUN 8 1956

Symphony to Visit Russia

Formal Invitation Accepted For Six Days in September

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has received a formal invitation to visit the Soviet Union this summer on its European tour.

Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager, announced last night that the invitation had been presented by Yuri Gouk, cultural attaché of the Soviet Embassy in Washington. The orchestra and its conductor, Charles Munch, will spend six days in Russia after a Helsinki concert on Sept. 4.

It is understood that the Soviet government will assume the expenses of the orchestra and its staff from the time it leaves Helsinki until it arrives in Prague for a concert there on Sept. 11. Although final dates for concerts within Russia have not been penciled in, programs are planned for Leningrad and Moscow.

Both Henry C. Cabot, president of the Board of Trustees, and Mr. Perry expressed their gratification for the cooperation of the United States and the Soviet governments "in making this important cultural visit possible."

The orchestra's tour will commence after the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood which ends on Aug. 12. Two chartered KLM Royal Dutch Airlines planes will carry most of the personnel to Europe on Aug. 22. Other members, plus the instruments, will sail on the Nieuw Amsterdam on Aug. 14.

The European tour will be made through the cooperation of the International Exchange Program of the American National Theater and Academy. Private contributions have also been secured to help defray expenses. About 25 cities will be included in the itinerary.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,811

JUN 8 1956

TO PLAY IN RUSSIA

BOSTON, (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will visit Russia this September, giving concerts in Moscow and Leningrad. Acceptance of a Soviet invitation to spend six days in Russia was announced last night by orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1956

Sports

[152]

TIGHT BINDING

…y Accepts …rad Tour

…tate Department approved
…usion of a six-day visit to
…et Union on the orchestra's
…Europe starting in August
…r Thomas D. Perry Jr.

…nvitation to the 104-piece
…a directed by Charles
…was extended by the Min-
…Culture in Moscow through
…et embassy in Washington,
…said. He said Orchestra
…t Henry B. Cabot "made
…its willingness" to include
…on the tour during the Ge-
…nference last August.
…s of the Russian tour have
…n worked out yet. But Per-
… it was "understood" Rus-
…d assume transportation ex-
…and "pay a stipend" for the
…s as it did when the Gersh-
…s opera "Porgy and Bess"
…ned there in January.

…Prague Concert

…Russian tour will follow
… in Prague Sept. 11, Perry
…He said Russia would pay
…rtation costs also from Hel…
…Finland, where there is
… scheduled Sept. 4,
…slovakia.
…r costs of the trip abroad
…starts Aug. 22, are being de…
… by private contribution…
…he international exchang…
…of the American Nationa…
…r and Academy, a profe…
… agency acting in behalf o…
…ate Department.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 285,839

JUN 1956

Symphony to Play For Muscovites

The Boston Symphony Orchestra [illegible] ted the invitation [illegible] government to give concerts at Moscow and Leningrad late this summer was announced last night by the orchestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry, Jr.

The orchestra already has scheduled a European tour for August and September at the end of the Tanglewood Festival in the Berkshires. The invitation calls for the orchestra to spend six days in Russia.

Symphony officials said the Russian government, "it is understood," will assume all transportation costs for the 104 musicians and their conductor, Charles Munch, during the six-day stay. In addition, the orchestra is expected to receive a stipend.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 105,628

JUN 8 1956

…ymphony to Visit Russia

Boston Symphony Orchestra … night [illegible] an invitation … the Soviet government to … in Russia for six days during … summer [illegible] the group is making a European tour.

Henry B. Cabot, president of … board of trustees, said there are still details to be ironed out but that the 104 players and conductor Charles Munch would play concerts at Leningrad and Moscow during its tour of Europe in August and September.

…England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
…x 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Recorder-Gazette (e)
…REENFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,640

JUN 1956

…ton Symphony Will …e Tour Of Russia

…STON — The Boston Sym-
…y Orchestra has accepted a
…l invitation from the U.S.S.R.
…clude Soviet Russia in its
…of Europe during August and
…mber. The invitation from
…Ministry of Culture in Moscow
…ransmitted by Yuri Gouk, cul-
… attache of the Soviet Em-
… in Washington, to the orches-
… manager, Thomas D. Perry,

…e Boston Symphony under di-
…on of Charles Munch will be
… first American symphony
…estra to perform in Russia
… August during the Geneva
…erence the orchestra, through
… president of its board of trus-
…, Henry B. Cabot, made known
… willingness to include a visit
… the Soviet Republic during its
…jected tour of Europe in the
…umn of 1956.

The Russian invitation to the Boston Symphony Orchestra is to spend six days of its autumn tour within the Soviet border, and although details are not yet worked out, concerts are planned in Leningrad and Moscow. It is understood that the U.S.S.R., as it did in the case of "Porgy and Bess" when the Gershwin folk opera performed in Russia last January, will assume expenses of transportation of the 104 members of the orchestra, Music Director Charles Munch and the Orchestra's staff and equipment from Helsinki, where a concert is planned on Sept. 4; and to its next date, in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia, on Sept. 11. The U.S.S.R. will also pay a stipend for the concerts given within the Soviet territory.

…ngland Newsclip Agency, Inc.
…78, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Eagle (m)
…WRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

JUN 8 1956

…oston Sympho… …ccepts Bid To… …ay In Russia

…OSTON, June 7 (AP)—The
… Symphony Orchestra to…
…unced acceptance of a S…
…tation to play in Russia
…mer on its European tou…
…e world famed orchestra
… the first American symp…
…play in Russia.
…he Boston Symphony
…eduled a European tour d…
…ust and September. The … Russian invitation from
…istry of Culture in M…
…ed for the orchestra to
… days in Russia during
…mn tour.
…lthough details are not
…ed, concerts are planne…
…ingrad and Moscow. B…
…phony officials said "it
…stood" that the Russian…
…me the transportation
…ses of the 104 players and
…tor Charles Munch durin…
…day trip.
…he Soviets also "will
…end for the concerts
…hin Soviet territory,"
…ed.
…he symphony acceptance
…ed overtures made last
… by Henry C. Cabot, pr…
…the board trustees, who…
…wn the orchestra wou…
…ing to include a visit to
…s year on its European
…Cabot and orchestra m…
…omas D. Perry Jr. ex…
…atification for the coop…
… both governments in
…s important cultural vi…
…le."
…Soviet violinist David O…
…s guest soloist at a
…phony pension fund
… December.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,811

JUN 8 1956

TO PLAY IN RUSSIA

BOSTON, (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will visit Russia this September, giving concerts in Moscow and Leningrad. Acceptance of a Soviet invitation to spend six days in Russia was announced last night by orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
…ox 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

…nterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 42,005

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony to Perform in Russia

BOSTON. — (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced last night it will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad, becoming the first American symphony orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union.

The ministry of culture in Moscow invited the 104-piece orchestra through the soviet embassy in Washington. The state department approved the inclusion of the Soviet Union in the orchestra's visit to Europe which starts next August.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420…

Sentinel (e)
FITCHBURG, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 15,703

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Bound For Russia

BOSTON, June 8 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to become the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The orchestra announced acceptance last night of a Russian invitation to appear in the USSR during its European tour next August and September.

Symphony officials said it is "understood" the Russians will pay the transportation costs for 104 musicians and conductor Charles Munch during the six-day visit.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,564

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Invitation To Play in Russia

BOSTON, June 8 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to become the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The orchestra announced acceptance last night of a Russian invitation to appear in the U. S. S. R. during its European tour next August and September.

Boston Symphony officials said it is "understood" the Russians will pay the transportation costs for 104 musicians and Conductor Charles Munch during the six-day visit.

Henry C. Cabot, president of the orchestra board of trustees, and Orchestra Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. expressed "gratification for the cooperation of both (the U. S. and Russian) governments in making this important cultural visit possible."

Details of the concert tour are not complete but at least two concerts are planned for Moscow and Leningrad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUN 8

Symphony to Visit Russia

Formal Invitation Accepted For Six Days in September

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has received a formal invitation to visit the Soviet Union this summer on its European tour.

Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager, announced last night that the invitation had been presented by Yuri Gouk, cultural attaché of the Soviet Embassy in Washington. The orchestra and its conductor, Charles Munch, will spend six days in Russia after a Helsinki concert on Sept. 4.

It is understood that the Soviet government will assume the expenses of the orchestra and its staff from the time it leaves Helsinki until it arrives in Prague for a concert there on Sept. 11. Although final dates for concerts within Russia have not been penciled in, programs are planned for Leningrad and Moscow.

Both Henry C. Cabot, president of the Board of Trustees, and Mr. Perry expressed their gratification for the cooperation of the United States and the Soviet governments "in making this important cultural visit possible."

The orchestra's tour will commence after the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood which ends on Aug. 12. Two chartered KLM Royal Dutch Airlines planes will carry most of the personnel to Europe on Aug. 22. Other members, plus the instruments, will sail on the Nieuw Amsterdam on Aug. 14.

The European tour will be made through the cooperation of the International Exchange Program of the American National Theater and Academy. Private contributions have also been secured to help defray expenses. About 25 cities will be included in the itinerary.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUN 8

Boston Symphony Accepts Soviet Bid

The World's Day
Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

Boston: Symphony Orchestra to Tour U.S.S.R.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted a formal invitation to visit the Soviet Union for six days during its European tour in September. [Page 5.]

Washington: Eisenhower Engagements Canceled

President Eisenhower's engagements for today were canceled by an indisposition which his physician described as an "upset stomach and headache" which had nothing to do with his heart. The White House announcement had an immediate effect on the stock market which opened slightly lower. Brokers advised customers to accept the statements on the President's indisposition at their face value and not to become alarmed.

Spending for military defense over the 15-year period from 1951 to 1965 may total more than half a trillion dollars, it is estimated—even with the nation at peace.

Secretary of Welfare Folsom has promised to seek more money for services to the elderly.

Europe: Queen Elizabeth Arrives in Stockholm

Queen Elizabeth II and the Duke of Edinburgh arrived in Stockholm today for the first British royal visit to Sweden in almost half a century. They were greeted by cannon salutes, an escort of 300 jet fighters, and thousands of persons jammed onto the dock where they landed.

Asia: Heavy Water Shipment Reaches Bombay

Seven tons of heavy water arrived in Bombay from New York for use in India's atomic research program. The Indian Government is buying some 21 tons of it from the United States for peaceful nuclear uses.

Art, Theater, Music: Page 5. Radio. TV. FM: Page 7

Weather Predictions: C…

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 122,000

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Invitation to Tour U. S. S. R.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra received and accepted yesterday a formal invitation from the U. S. S. R. to include Soviet Russia in its tour of Europe during August and September. The invitation from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow was transmitted by Yuri Gouk, cultural attache of the Soviet Embassy in Washington, to the orchestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry Jr,

SYMPHONY

Page Two

U. S. S. R., as it did in the case of "Porgy and Bess" when the Gershwin folk opera performed in Russia last January, will assume the expenses of transportation from Helsinki, where a concert is planned Sept. 4, and to its next date in Prague, capital of Czecho-Slovakia, Sept. 11. The U. S. S. R. will also pay a stipend for the concerts in Soviet territory.

Part of Exchange Program

The orchestra's tour of Europe is to be made in cooperation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theatre and Academy, professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad, to help cover the cost of trans-Atlantic transportation by air and to help defray deficits from concerts abroad. Private contributions have also been secured toward costs of the tour.

Both Cabot and Perry expressed gratification when the Soviet invitation was announced, for the cooperation of both governments in making this important cultural visit possible.

Monteux to Share Podium

In December, Soviet violinist David Oistrakh was guest soloist at a Boston Symphony pension fund concert. He made a recording with the orchestra for R. C. A. Victor and is known to have taken back to Russia high praise to share the concerts [illegible]

The European tour will [illegible] the direction of Charles Munch at the conclusion of [illegible] Berkshire Festival at Ta[illegible] Lenox, Aug. 12. Munch [illegible] vited Pierre Monteux, [illegible] ductor of the Boston S[illegible] to share the concerts ab[illegible]

Two planes, chartere[illegible] K. L. M Royal Dutch Airli[illegible] transport most of the sym[illegible] personnel to Europe Aug 2[illegible] of the orchestra and the [illegible] ments will sail on the [illegible] Amsterdam Aug. 14

Five concerts will be play[illegible] Aug. 26-30, as part of the Edin burgh Festival, and the orchestra will then tour four weeks, offer ing concerts in Scandinavia, Northern and Western Europe and the British Isles. The tour is planned to include about 25 citi[illegible] covering more than 4000 miles.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR. BOSTON. FRIDAY. SEPTEMBER 28. 1956

Sports

TIGHT BINDING

y Accep
ad Tou

ate Department approved
sion of a six-day visit to Union on the orchestra's
Europe starting in August
Thomas D. Perry Jr.

nvitation to the 104-piece
directed by Charles
was extended by the Min-culture in Moscow through embassy in Washington,
He said Orchestra
t Henry B. Cabot "made its willingness" to include
on the tour during the Ge-
nference last August.
s of the Russian tour have worked out yet. But Per-was "understood" Rusld assume transportation ex
and "pay a stipend" for the
s as it did when the Gersh-c opera "Porgy and Bess" ed there in January.

Prague Concert

Russian tour will follow
in Prague Sept. 11, Perry
He said Russia would pay rtation costs also from Hel
Finland, where there is scheduled Sept. 4,
slovakia.
costs of the trip abroad starts Aug. 22, are being d
by private contribution
the international exchang
of the American Nation
and Academy, a profe agency acting in behalf State Department.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Eagle (m)
AWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

JUN 8 1956

oston Sympho ccepts Bid To lay In Russia

BOSTON, June 7 (AP)—The Symphony Orchestra to ounced acceptance of a tation to play in Russi mer on its European to
The world famed orchestr
the first American sym
play in Russia.
The Boston Symphony
eduled a European tour gust and September. Th
l Russian invitation fro nistry of Culture in M lled for the orchestra to days in Russia durin
tumn tour.
Although details are no eted, concerts are plann ningrad and Moscow.
mphony officials said "it rstood" that the Russia sume the transportatio nses of the 104 players ar ctor Charles Munch dur
-day trip.
The Soviets also "will pend for the concerts thin Soviet territory," ded.
The symphony acceptan
wed overtures made las by Henry C. Cabot, p the board trustees, wh own the orchestra w illing to include a visit t his year on its European Cabot and orchestra m
Thomas D. Perry Jr. e gratification for the coo f both governments in is important cultural v ible."
Soviet violinist David as guest soloist at a mphony pension fund
st December.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 285,839

JUN 8 1956

Symphony to Play For Muscovites

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted the invitation of the Russian government to give concerts at Moscow and Leningrad late this summer, it was announced last night by the orchestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry, Jr.

The orchestra already has scheduled a European tour for August and September at the end of the Tanglewood Festival in the Berkshires. The invitation calls for the orchestra to spend six days in Russia.

Symphony officials said the Russian government, "it is understood," will assume all transportation costs for the 104 musicians and their conductor, Charles Munch, during the six-day stay. In addition, the orchestra is expected to receive a stipend.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

JUN 8 1956

ymphony to Visit Russia

Boston Symphony Orchestra
night accepted an invitation
om the Soviet government to
ay in Russia for six days during is summer when the group is aking a European tour.
Henry D. Cabot, president of oard of trustees, said there are ill details to be ironed out but at the 104 players and conductor
Charles Munch would play conrts at Leningrad and Moscow uring its tour of Europe in Au-
ust and September.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Recorder-Gazette (e)
REENFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,640

JUN 8 1956

ton Symphony Will Tour Of Russia

STON — The Boston Sym-
Orchestra has accepted a l invitation from the U.S.S.R.
clude Soviet Russia in its
f Europe during August and ber. The invitation from nistry of Culture in Moscow
ansmitted by Yuri Gouk, cul-
attache of the Soviet Em-
in Washington, to the orches-
manager, Thomas D. Perry,

Boston Symphony under di-
n of Charles Munch will be st American symphony tra to perform in Russia
August during the Geneva
ence the orchestra, through resident of its board of trus-
Henry B. Cabot, made known illingness to include a visit e Soviet Republic during its ted tour of Europe in the n of 1956.
e Russian invitation to the n Symphony Orchestra is to d six days of its autumn tour n the Soviet border, and al-details are not yet worked concerts are planned in Leninand Moscow. It is understood the U.S.S.R., as it did in the of "Porgy and Bess" when Gershwin folk opera performed Russia last January, will assume nses of transportation of the members of the orchestra,
ic Director Charles Munch and Orchestra's staff and equip-from Helsinki, where a con-is planned on Sept. 4; and to next date, in Prague, capital Czechoslovakia, on Sept. 11.
U.S.S.R. will also pay a stipfor the concerts given within Soviet territory.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,811

JUN 8 1956

TO PLAY IN RUSSIA

BOSTON, (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will visit Russia this September, giving concerts in Moscow and Leningrad. Acceptance of a Soviet invitation to spend six days in Russia was announced last night by orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 42,005

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony to Perform in Russia

BOSTON. — (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced last night it will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad, becoming the first American symphony orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union.

The ministry of culture in Moscow invited the 104-piece orchestra through the soviet embassy in Washington. The state department approved the inclusion of the Soviet Union in the orchestra's visit to Europe which starts next August.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sentinel (e)
FITCHBURG, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 15,703

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Bound For Russia

BOSTON, June 8 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to become the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The orchestra announced acceptance last night of a Russian invitation to appear in the USSR during its European tour next August and September.

Symphony officials said it is "understood" the Russians will pay the transportation costs for 104 musicians and conductor Charles Munch during the six-day visit.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,564

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Invitation To Play in Russia

BOSTON, June 8 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to become the first American symphony to play in Russia.

The orchestra announced acceptance last night of a Russian invitation to appear in the U. S. S. R. during its European tour next August and September.

Boston Symphony officials said it is "understood" the Russians will pay the transportation costs for 104 musicians and Conductor Charles Munch during the six-day visit.

Henry
the b gov port Del are no two co
Moscow

---

rregu in colors, plaids, nove
NED & RE
ING VAL
CKET

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUN 8 1956

Symphony to Visit Russia

Formal Invitation Accepted For Six Days in September

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has received a formal invitation to visit the Soviet Union this summer on its European tour.

Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager, announced last night that the invitation had been presented by Yuri Gouk, cultural attaché of the Soviet Embassy in Washington. The orchestra and its conductor, Charles Munch, will spend six days in Russia after a Helsinki concert on Sept. 4.

It is understood that the Soviet government will assume the expenses of the orchestra and its staff from the time it leaves Helsinki until it arrives in Prague for a concert there on Sept. 11. Although final dates for concerts within Russia have not been penciled in, programs are planned for Leningrad and Moscow.

Both Henry C. Cabot, president of the Board of Trustees, and Mr. Perry expressed their gratification for the cooperation of the United States and the Soviet governments "in making this important cultural visit possible."

The orchestra's tour will commence after the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood which ends on Aug. 12. Two chartered KLM Royal Dutch Airlines planes will carry most of the personnel to Europe on Aug. 22. Other members, plus the instruments, will sail on the Nieuw Amsterdam on Aug. 14.

The European tour will be made through the cooperation of the International Exchange Program of the American National Theater and Academy. Private contributions have also been secured to help defray expenses. About 25 cities will be included in the itinerary.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony Accepts Soviet Bid

The World's Day

Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

Boston: Symphony Orchestra to Tour U.S.S.R.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted a formal invitation to visit the Soviet Union for six days during its European tour in September. [Page 5.]

Washington: Eisenhower Engagements Canceled

President Eisenhower's engagements for today were canceled by an indisposition which his physician described as an "upset stomach and headache" which had nothing to do with his heart. The White House announcement had an immediate effect on the stock market which opened slightly lower. Brokers advised customers to accept the statements on the President's indisposition at their face value and not to become alarmed.

Spending for military defense over the 15-year period from 1951 to 1965 may total more than half a trillion dollars, it is estimated—even with the nation at peace.

Secretary of Welfare Folsom has promised to seek more money for services to the elderly.

Europe: Queen Elizabeth Arrives in Stockholm

Queen Elizabeth II and the Duke of Edinburgh arrived in Stockholm today for the first British royal visit to Sweden in almost half a century. They were greeted by cannon salutes, an escort of 300 jet fighters, and thousands of persons jammed onto the dock where they landed.

Asia: Heavy Water Shipment Reaches Bombay

Seven tons of heavy water arrived in Bombay from New York for use in India's atomic research program. The Indian Government is buying some 21 tons of it from the United States for peaceful nuclear uses.

Art, Theater, Music: Page 5. Radio, TV, FM: Page 7

Weather Predictions: Cloudy Tonight (Page 2)

JUN 8 1956

YMPHONY

Continued from the First Page

The Boston Symphony, under the direction of Charles Munch, will be the first American symphony orchestra to perform in Russia. Last August during the Geneva Conference the orchestra, through the president of its trustees, Henry B. Cabot, made known its willingness to include a visit to the Soviet Republic during its projected tour of Europe in the Autumn of 1956.

The Russian invitation is to spend six days within the Soviet border. Concerts are planned in Leningrad and Moscow. It is understood that the U. S. S. R., as it did in the case of "Porgy and Bess" when the Gershwin folk opera performed in Russia last January, will assume the expenses of transportation from Helsinki, where a concert is planned Sept. 4, and to its next date in Prague, capital of Czecho-Slovakia, Sept. 11. The U. S. S. R. will also pay a stipend for the concerts in Soviet territory.

Part of Exchange Program

The orchestra's tour of Europe is to be made in cooperation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theatre and Academy, professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad, to help cover the cost of trans-Atlantic transportation by air and to help defray deficits from concerts abroad. Private contributions have also been secured toward costs of the tour.

Both Cabot and Perry expressed gratification when the Soviet invitation was announced, for the cooperation of both governments in making this important cultural visit possible.

Monteux to Share Podium

In December, Soviet violinist David Oistrakh was guest soloist at a Boston Symphony pension fund concert. He made a recording with the orchestra for R. C. A. Victor and is known to have taken back to Russia high praise to share the concerts abroad.

The European tour will be under the direction of Charles Munch at the conclusion of the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 12. Munch has invited Pierre Monteux, once conductor of the Boston Symphony, to share the concerts aboard.

Two planes, chartered from K. L. M. Royal Dutch Airlines will transport most of the symphony's personnel to Europe Aug. 22. Part of the orchestra and the instruments will sail on the Nieuw Amsterdam Aug. 14.

Five concerts will be played Aug. 26-30, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, and the orchestra will then tour four weeks, offering concerts in Scandinavia, Northern and Western Europe and the British Isles. The tour is planned to include about 25 cities, covering more than 4000 miles.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1956

Sports

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
HUDSON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 2,085

JUN 8 1956

Boston (UP)—The Bost
nounced Thursday night it and Leningrad, becoming the chestra to perform in the Sov

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973

AUG 27 1956

Hub Symphony First From U. S. in Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will become the first American orchestra ever to perform in Russia, indeed the first symphony from the Western world to perform in the U.S.S.R. when, during the course of its Aug-Sept. tour of 13 countries in Europe, it plays two concerts in Leningrad and two in Moscow during the three days, Sept. 6-8.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

AUG 27 1956

HUB SYMPHONY FIRST IN USSR

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will become the first American orchestra ever to perform in Russia, indeed the first symphony from the Western world to perform in the U.S.S.R. when, during the course of its Aug-Sept. tour of 13 countries in Europe, it plays two concerts in Leningrad and two in Moscow during the three days, Sept. 6-8.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 1 4,866

AUG 30 1956

SYMPHONY TO PLAY 5th SOVIET CONCERT

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play five concerts instead of the expected four in Russia and the 125 musicians will be given extra time and opportunity for sightseeing.

This was announced yesterday at Symphony Hall by Norman Shirk, assistant manager. He said word had been received that the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture has broadened the plan for the Russian visit of the orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour. Rudolph Elie, Jr., The Herald's music critic, is traveling with the orchestra.

WILL USE PLANES

A change of transportation facilities from train to plane by the Soviet ministry has made possible the additional concert and sightseeing.

Under the new schedule, three Russian planes will pick up the Boston party next Wednesday morning at Helsinki, Finland, where the orchestra will have played the previous night. The musicians will be taken on a 90-minute flight to Leningrad.

Since the eight tons of orchestra baggage will not arrive until much later by train, there will be ample time for sightseeing. The musicians will not go on duty until 6:30 p. m. Thursday, for a rehearsal in the Great Hall of the Leningrad Conservatory.

There Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra at 8 that night in the first concert ever given by an American symphony orchestra in the Soviet Union. In the same hall the following night the orchestra will be led by its former regular conductor Pierre Monteux.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,978

JUN 8 1956

Symphony Russia Bound

The Boston Symphony Orchestra accepted an invitation for a six-day visit to Russia, with concerts in Moscow, Leningrad and other cities.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 398,982 - S. 274,577

JUN 10 1956

Bostonians to Visit Soviet

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to visit Russia this fall for five days, beginning Sept. 5. Under the aegis of Charles Munch, the ensemble will play concerts in Moscow and Leningrad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony To Tour Russia In Six-Day Visit

The Boston Symphony will be the first American orchestra to give a series of performances in Russia.

The orchestra has accepted an invitation from the Russian Ministry of Culture to make a six-day visit to Moscow, Leningrad and possibly other cities.

The Boston Symphony is leaving Aug. 22 for a European tour. The Russian phase will follow a concert in Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 4.

Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the orchestra, said the Soviet government will play the symphony's expenses in Russia and also provide a fee for the concerts.

Henry B. Cabot, chairman of the symphony's board of trustees, joined Perry in expressing pleasure at the invitation.

Conductor Charles Munch will direct the orchestra on its European tour.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 398,982 - S. 274,577

1956

U. S. Concert Orchestra to Tour Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be the first major orchestra from the West to play in Soviet Russia. It has accepted an invitation to appear there in September.

Arrangements were made yesterday by Thomas D. Perry Jr., the orchestra's manager, and Yuri Gouk, cultural attache at the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

The Boston Symphony will play in Leningrad and Moscow ahead of the London Philharmonic, whose tour of Russia was announced in February.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

AUG 30 1956

Soviets Ask For Another Performance

According to word received at Symphony Hall, the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture has broadened the plans for the visit to Russia of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which tonight concludes its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival, and continues its tour in Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Finland.

The Boston musicians will now play three concerts instead of two in Moscow, besides the two originally scheduled in Leningrad. In addition, the orchestra's group of 125, including its official party, will be given a considerable extension of the original prospects for sight seeing in the two cities. These improvements have been made possible by the Russians' change of transportation facilities from train to plane.

* * *

Three Russian planes will pick up the Boston Symphony party on Wednesday morning, Sept. 5, at Helsinki, where the orchestra will have played the previous night, and take it on an hour-and-a-half flight to Lenigrad. The eight tons of orchestra baggage arriving much later by train, the Bostonians will have ample time for sight seeing in Leningrad.

In fact, the musicians will not go on duty until Charles Munch calls them for an acoustic rehearsal on Thursday evening at 6:30 in the Great Hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, where he will conduct them in concert at 8—the first concert ever to be given by an American symphony orchestra in the Soviet Union. In the same hall on the following night, the orchestra will be led by its former regular conductor, Pierre Monteux.

* * *

After the second Leningrad performance the orchestra will take a sleeper train trip to Moscow. In the Great Hall of the Moscow Conservatory Dr. Munch will hold an acoustic rehearsal from Saturday noon until 2:30 for the concert that evening. On Sunday at 2, Mr. Monteux will conduct the orchestra in the same hall, where Dr. Munch will take over that evening. The orchestra will have time off all day Monday in Moscow, then fly to Prague in the evening.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUN 8 1956

Six-Day Russian Tour in September

Boston Symphony Accepts Bid to Visit Soviet

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will include a six-day visit to Russia, with concerts in Leningrad, Moscow and possibly other cities, in its European tour during August and September, it was announced last night.

The orchestra yesterday received and immediately accepted a formal invitation to visit Russia from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow, transmitted by Yuri Gouk, cultural attache of the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

In announcing the orchestra's acceptance, Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager, said it was understood the Soviet government would assume the expenses of transporting the orchestra and its assisting staff from the time it leaves Helsinki, after a concert Sept. 4, until it reaches Prague for a concert on Sept. 11. The Soviets will also pay a fee for the concerts given on Russian territory.

Both Henry B. Cabot, chairman of the symphony's board of trustees, and Perry last night expressed their pleasure at the invitation and for the co-operation of the Soviet and United States governments in making the visit possible.

Perry pointed out that the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, would be the first American orchestra to perform in Russia.

The orchestra will leave for Europe in August. Most of the personnel will leave Aug. 22 on two chartered KLM Royal Dutch Airlines planes. Other members of the orchestra and the instruments will sail on the Nieuw Amsterdam Aug. 14.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,509 - S. 982,681

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony:

Russian Tour By Orchestra

BOSTON, June 8 (INS).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra last night announced it will include Soviet Russia in its tour of Europe during August and September.

A spokesman for the orchestra said the State Department has cleared the 104 members of the group, headed by director Charles Munch, to accept the invitation from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow.

Russia will pay all expenses of the organization from the time it leaves Helsinki following a concert there Sept. 4, to its next date, in Prague, Sept. 11.

The Russians also will pay a stipend for the concerts given within the Soviet territory.

Details of the Russian tour have not been completed, but concerts are planned in Leningrad and Moscow.

The group will be the first American symphony orchestra ever to perform in Russia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,259

JUN 8 1956

Quincy Patriot

Boston Symp

BOSTON, June 8 (UP)
Boston Symphony Orches nounced last night it w concerts in Moscow and grad, becoming the first can symphony orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union.

The ministry of culture in Moscow invited the 104-piece orchestra through the Soviet Embassy in Washington. The State Department approved the inclusion of

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
HUDSON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 2,085

JUN 8 1956

Boston (UP)—The Bost nounced Thursday night it and Leningrad, becoming the chestra to perform in the Sov

* * *

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973

AUG 27 1956

Hub Symphony First From U. S. in Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will become the first American orchestra ever to perform in Russia, indeed the first symphony from the Western world to perform in the U.S.S.R. when, during the course of its Aug-Sept. tour of 13 countries in Europe, it plays two concerts in Leningrad and two in Moscow during the three days, Sept. 6-8.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

AUG 27 1956

HUB SYMPHONY FIRST IN USSR

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will become the first American orchestra ever to perform in Russia, indeed the first symphony from the Western world to perform in the U.S.S.R. when, during the course of its Aug-Sept. tour of 13 countries in Europe, it plays two concerts in Leningrad and two in Moscow during the three days, Sept. 6-8.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 184,866

AUG 30 1956

SYMPHONY TO PLAY 5th SOVIET CONCERT

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play five concert instead of the expected four in Russia and the 125 musicians will be given extra time and opportunity for sightseeing.

This was announced yesterday at Symphony Hall by Norman Shirk, assistant manager. He said word had been received that the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture has broadened the plan for the Russian visit of the orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour. Rudolph Elie, Jr., The Herald's music critic, is traveling with the orchestra.

WILL USE PLANES

A change of transportation facilities from train to plane by the Soviet ministry has made possible the additional concert and sightseeing.

Under the new schedule, three Russian planes will pick up the Boston party next Wednesday morning at Helsinki, Finland, where the orchestra will have played the previous night. The musicians will be taken on a 90-minute flight to Leningrad.

Since the eight tons of orchestra baggage will not arrive until much later by train, there will be ample time for sightseeing. The musicians will not go on duty until 6:30 p. m. Thursday, for a rehearsal in the Great Hall of the Leningrad Conservatory.

There Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra at 8 that night in the first concert ever given by an American symphony orchestra in the Soviet Union. In the same hall the following night the orchestra will be led by its former regular conductor Pierre Monteux.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973

JUN 8 1956

Symphony Russia Bound

The Boston Symphony Orchestra accepted an invitation for a six-day visit to Russia, with concerts in Moscow, Leningrad and other cities.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 398,982 - S. 274,577

JUN 10 1956

Bostonians to Visit Soviet

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to visit Russia this fall for five days, beginning Sept. 5. Under the aegis of Charles Munch, the ensemble will play concerts in Moscow and Leningrad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

AUG 30 1956

Soviets Ask For Another Performance

According to word received at Symphony Hall, the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture has broadened the plans for the visit to Russia of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which tonight concludes its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival, and continues its tour in Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Finland.

The Boston musicians will now play three concerts instead of two in Moscow, besides the two originally scheduled in Leningrad. In addition, the orchestra's group of 125, including its official party, will be given a considerable extension of the original prospects for sight seeing in the two cities. These improvements have been made possible by the Russians' change of transportation facilities from train to plane.

* * *

Three Russian planes will pick up the Boston Symphony party on Wednesday morning, Sept. 5, at Helsinki, where the orchestra will have played the previous night, and take it on an hour-and-a-half flight to Lenigrad. The eight tons of orchestra baggage arriving much later by train, the Bostonians will have ample time for sight seeing in Leningrad.

In fact, the musicians will not go on duty until Charles Munch calls them for an acoustic rehearsal on Thursday evening at 6:30 in the Great Hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, where he will conduct them in concert at 8—the first concert ever to be given by an American symphony orchestra in the Soviet Union. In the same hall on the following night, the orchestra will be led by its former regular conductor, Pierre Monteux.

* * *

After the second Leningrad performance the orchestra will take a sleeper train trip to Moscow. In the Great Hall of the Moscow Conservatory Dr. Munch will hold an acoustic rehearsal from Saturday noon until 2:30 for the concert that evening. On Sunday at 2, Mr. Monteux will conduct the orchestra in the same hall, where Dr. Munch will take over that evening. The orchestra will have time off all day Monday in Moscow, then fly to Prague in the evening.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony To Tour Russia In Six-Day Visit

The Boston Symphony will be the first American orchestra to give a series of performances in Russia.

The orchestra has accepted an invitation from the Russian Ministry of Culture to make a six-day visit to Moscow, Leningrad and possibly other cities.

The Boston Symphony is leaving Aug. 22 for a European tour. The Russian phase will follow a concert in Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 4.

Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the orchestra, said the Soviet government will play the symphony's expenses in Russia and also provide a fee for the concerts.

Henry B. Cabot, chairman of the symphony's board of trustees, joined Perry in expressing pleasure at the invitation.

Conductor Charles Munch will direct the orchestra on its European tour.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 398,982 - S. 274,577

JUN 8 1956

U. S. Concert Orchestra to Tour Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be the first major orchestra from the West to play in Soviet Russia. It has accepted an invitation to appear there in September.

Arrangements were made yesterday by Thomas D. Perry Jr., the orchestra's manager, and Yuri Gouk, cultural attache at the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

The Boston Symphony will play in Leningrad and Moscow ahead of the London Philharmonic, whose tour of Russia was announced in February.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,509 - S. 982,681

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony:

Russian Tour By Orchestra

BOSTON, June 8 (INS).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra last night announced it will include Soviet Russia in its tour of Europe during August and September.

A spokesman for the orchestra said the State Department has cleared the 104 members of the group, headed by director Charles Munch, to accept the invitation from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow.

Russia will pay all expenses of the organization from the time it leaves Helsinki following a concert there Sept. 4, to its next date, in Prague, Sept. 11.

The Russians also will pay a stipend for the concerts given within the Soviet territory.

Details of the Russian tour have not been completed, but concerts are planned in Leningrad and Moscow.

The group will be the first American symphony orchestra ever to perform in Russia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUN 8 1956

Six-Day Russian Tour in September

Boston Symphony Accepts Bid to Visit Soviet

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will include a six-day visit to Russia, with concerts in Leningrad, Moscow and possibly other cities, in its European tour during August and September, it was announced last night.

The orchestra yesterday received and immediately accepted a formal invitation to visit Russia from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow, transmitted by Yuri Gouk, cultural attache of the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

In announcing the orchestra's acceptance, Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager, said it was understood the Soviet government would assume the expenses of transporting the orchestra and its assisting staff from the time it leaves Helsinki, after a concert Sept. 4, until it reaches Prague for a concert on Sept. 11. The Soviets will also pay a fee for the concerts given on Russian territory.

Both Henry B. Cabot, chairman of the symphony's board of trustees, and Perry last night expressed their pleasure at the invitation and for the co-operation of the Soviet and United States governments in making the visit possible.

Perry pointed out that the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, would be the first American orchestra to perform in Russia.

The orchestra will leave for Europe in August. Most of the personnel will leave Aug. 22 on two chartered KLM Royal Dutch Airlines planes. Other members of the orchestra and the instruments will sail on the Nieuw Amsterdam Aug. 14.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,259

JUN 8 1956

Quincy Patriot

Boston Symp

BOSTON, June 8 (UP) Boston Symphony Orches nounced last night it w concerts in Moscow and grad, becoming the first can symphony orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union.

The ministry of culture in Moscow invited the 104-piece orchestra through the Soviet Embassy in Washington. The State Department approved the inclusion of

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
HUDSON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 2,085

JUN 8 1956

* * * * *

Boston (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced Thursday night it will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad, becoming the first American symphony orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union.

* * * * *

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973

JUN 8 1956

Symphony Russia Bound

The Boston Symphony Orchestra accepted an invitation for a six-day visit to Russia, with concerts in Moscow, Leningrad and other cities.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony To Tour Russia In Six-Day Visit

The Boston Symphony will be the first American orchestra to give a series of performances in Russia.

The orchestra has accepted an invitation from the Russian Ministry of Culture to make a six-day visit to Moscow, Leningrad and possibly other cities.

The Boston Symphony is leaving Aug. 22 for a European tour. The Russian phase will follow a concert in Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 4.

Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the orchestra, said the Soviet government will play the symphony's expenses in Russia and also provide a fee for the concerts.

Henry B. Cabot, chairman of the symphony's board of trustees, joined Perry in expressing pleasure at the invitation.

Conductor Charles Munch will direct the orchestra on its European tour.

Buffelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 398,982 - S. 274,577

JUN 10 1956

Bostonians to Visit Soviet

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted an invitation to visit Russia this fall for five days, beginning Sept. 5. Under the aegis of Charles Munch, the ensemble will play concerts in Moscow and Leningrad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

AUG 30 1956

SYMPHONY TO PLAY 5th SOVIET CONCERT

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play five concert instead of the expected four in Russia and the 125 musicians wil be given extra time and opportunity for sightseeing.

This was announced yesterday at Symphony Hall by Norman Shirk, assistant manager. He said word had been received that the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture has broadened the plan for the Russian visit of the orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour. Rudolph Elie, Jr., The Herald's music critic, is traveling with the orchestra.

WILL USE PLANES

A change of transportation facilities from train to plane by the Soviet ministry has made possible the additional concert and sightseeing.

Under the new schedule, three Russian planes will pick up the Boston party next Wednesday morning at Helsinski, Finland, where the orchestra will have played the previous night. The musicians will be taken on a 90-minute flight to Leningrad.

Since the eight tons of orchestra baggage will not arrive until much later by train, there will be ample time for sight seeing. The musicians will no go on duty until 6:30 p. m. Thursday, for a rehearsal in th Great Hall of the Leningrad Cor servatory.

There Dr. Charles Munch wi conduct the orchestra at 8 tha night in the first concert eve given by an American symphon orchestra in the Soviet Union

In the night

by its

Pierre

LUX

Buffelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 398,982 - S. 274,577

JUN 8 1956

U. S. Concert Orchestra to Tour Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be the first major orchestra from the West to play in Soviet Russia. It has accepted an invitation to appear there in September.

Arrangements were made yesterday by Thomas D. Perry Jr., the orchestra's manager, and Yuri Gouk, cultural attache at the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

The Boston Symphony will play in Leningrad and Moscow ahead of the London Philharmonic, whose tour of Russia was announced in February.

Buffelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,509 - S. 982,681

JUN 8 1956

Boston Symphony:

Russian Tour By Orchestra

BOSTON, June 8 (INS).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra last night announced it will include Soviet Russia in its tour of Europe during August and September.

A spokesman for the orchestra said the State Department has cleared the 104 members of the group, headed by director Charles Munch, to accept the invitation from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow.

Russia will pay all expenses of the organization from the time it leaves Helsinki following a concert there Sept. 4, to its next date, in Prague, Sept. 11.

The Russians also will pay a stipend for the concerts given within the Soviet territory.

Details of the Russian tour have not been completed, but concerts are planned in Leningrad and Moscow.

The group will be the first American symphony orchestra ever to perform in Russia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUN 8 1956

Six-Day Russian Tour in September

Boston Symphony Accepts Bid to Visit Soviet

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will include a six-day visit to Russia, with concerts in Leningrad, Moscow and possibly other cities, in its European tour during August and September, it was announced last night.

The orchestra yesterday received and immediately accepted a formal invitation to visit Russia from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow, transmitted by Yuri Gouk, cultural attache of the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

In announcing the orchestra's acceptance, Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager, said it was understood the Soviet government would assume the expenses of transporting the orchestra and its assisting staff from the time it leaves Helsinki, after a concert Sept. 4, until it reaches Prague for a concert on Sept. 11. The Soviets will also pay a fee for the concerts given on Russian territory.

Both Henry B. Cabot, chairman of the symphony's board of trustees, and Perry last night expressed their pleasure at the invitation and for the co-operation of the Soviet and United States governments in making the visit possible.

Perry pointed out that the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, would be the first American orchestra to perform in Russia.

The orchestra will leave for Europe in August. Most of the personnel will leave Aug. 22 on two chartered KLM Royal Dutch Airlines planes. Other members of the orchestra and the instruments will sail on the Nieuw Amsterdam Aug. 14.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • HAncock 6-9297

Variety
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Weekly Amusements

JUN 13 1956

Boston to Russia

Boston, June 12.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has accepted the invite of the Russian Government to give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad late this summer. Russians assume all transportation costs for the 104 members and their conductor, Charles Munch, during a six-day stay. In addition, the orchestra is expected to receive a stipend.

A skedded tour of Europe has already been set for August and September at the end of the Tanglewood Festival in the Berkshires.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,259

JUN 8 1956

Quincy Patriot Ledger, Friday, June

Boston Symphony To Play In Moscow

BOSTON, June 8 (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced last night it will give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad, becoming the first American symphony orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union.

The ministry of culture in Moscow invited the 104-piece orchestra through the Soviet Embassy in Washington. The State Department approved the inclusion of the Soviet Union in the orchestra's visit to Europe which starts next August.

[153]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

A[illegible] 1956

Symphony Members May See More as Russia Widens Tour

If the Soviet Union's present plans for entertaining the Boston Symphony Orchestra prevail, the musicians may get to see more of Russia than most Westerners since the Communists took over.

According to word received at Symphony Hall, the Ministry of Culture has broadened the plans for the orchestra's visit to Russia to include three concerts in Moscow instead of two, and much greater liberty in the capital and Leningrad than was first expected.

Three Russian planes will pick up the musicians Wednesday morning at Helsinki, Finland, where the orchestra will have played the previous night, and take it on an hour and a half flight to Leningrad, where two concerts are scheduled.

The eight tons of orchestra baggage will have to follow by train, thus giving the orchestra ample time for sightseeing. They will not be called into acoustical rehearsal by Dr. Munch until 6:30 p.m., in the Great Hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, where he will conduct them in concert at 8—the first concert ever to be given by an American symphony in the Soviet Union.

Monteux on Podium

In the same hall the following night, the orchestra will be led by its former conductor, Pierre Monteux.

After Leningrad, the men will take a sleeper train to Moscow, where their concerts will be presented in the Great Hall of the Conservatory there. Following the concerts, they will take off by plane for Prague.

The orchestra's European tour of countries, in which it is presenting 28 concerts, is being made in cooperation with the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the U.S. State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 30 1956

Boston Symphony Will Have Chance To See Leningrad

BOSTON (UP) — Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will do more sightseeing in Russia thanks to a change in transportation arrangements by the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture.

The 125 members of the orchestra staff now will fly from Helsinki, Finland, to Leningrad, USSR instead of taking a train, it was learned here Wednesday. The orchestra personnel will have time for sightseeing in Leningrad before their instruments arrive by train.

The Boston orchestra, first American group of its kind to appear in Russia, will give two concerts in Leningrad and three in Moscow.

The orchestra will travel from Leningrad to Moscow by sleeper train and from Moscow to Prague, Czechoslovakia, by plane.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

AUG 30 1956

Boston Symphony Granted Broader Russian Schedule

BOSTON, Aug. 29 (AP) — The 125-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour, has been granted a broader concert and sightseeing schedule in Russia, Assistant Manager Norman Shirk said today.

The U.S.S.R. Ministry of Culture has changed transportation facilities for the orchestra and its 20-member official party from train to plane, allowing extra time in the two Russian cities where the group will perform. The ministry has also scheduled an additional concert in Moscow, making a total of three, Shirk said. The group will perform twice in Leningrad.

Tomorrow the orchestra concludes its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival and continues its tour, with concerts scheduled in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland before the Russian visit.

Three Russian planes will take the orchestra from Helsinki, Finland, to Leningrad on Sept. 5. Eight tons of instruments, scores and baggage will follow by train. The group will have a full day free for sightseeing before they gather at the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory for a rehearsal and a concert — the first ever presented by an American orchestra in the U.S.S.R. — Thursday night.

After a second concert Friday night the orchestra will travel to Moscow by train for three concerts and day of sightseeing. Then, Monday night, the group will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia to continue its tour.

The tour is being made in cooperation with the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the U.S. State Department to assist American groups performing abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 53,259

AUG 30 1956

Reds Ease Curbs on Orchestra

Boston—(AP)—The 125-member Boston Symphony Orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour, has been granted a broader concert and sightseeing schedule in Russia, assistant manager Norman Shirk said yesterday.

The U.S.S.R. Ministry of Culture has changed transportation facilities for the orchestra and its 20-member official party from train to plane, allowing extra time in the two Russian cities where the group will perform. The ministry has also scheduled an additional concert in Moscow, making a total of three, Mr. Shirk said. The group will perform twice in Leningrad.

Today the orchestra concludes its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival and continues its tour, with concerts scheduled in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland before the Russian visit.

Three Russian planes will take the orchestra from Helsinki, Finland, to Leningrad on Sept. 5. Eight tons of instruments, scores and baggage will follow by train. The group will be the first ever presented by an American orchestra in the U.S.S.R.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Kennebec Journal (m)
AUGUSTA, Me.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 12,986

AUG 30 1956

Boston Symphony Schedule Changed

BOSTON, Aug. 29 (AP)—The 125-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour, has been granted a broader concert and sightseeing schedule in Russia, Assistant Manager Norman Shirk said today.

The U. S. S. R. Ministry of Culture has changed transportation facilities for the orchestra and its 20-member official party from train to plane, allowing extra time in the two Russian cities where the group will perform. The ministry has also scheduled an additional concert in Moscow, making a total of three, Shirk said. The group will perform twice in Leningrad.

Tomorrow the orchestra concludes its series of five concerts at the Edinburg International Festival and continues its tour, with concerts scheduled in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland before the Russian visit.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Press-Herald (m)
PORTLAND, Me.
Independent Republican
Circ. 49,758

AUG 30 1956

BostonSymphony Given More Time To Play In Russia

BOSTON, Aug. 29 (AP)—The 125-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour, has been granted a broader concert and sightseeing schedule in Russia, Assistant Manager Norman Shirk said today.

The USSR Ministry of Culture has changed transportation facilities for the orchestra and its 20-member official party from train to plane, allowing extra time in the two Russian cities where the group will perform. The ministry has also scheduled an additional concert in Moscow, making a total of three, Shirk said. The group will perform twice in Leningrad.

Tomorrow the orchestra concludes its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival and continues its tour, with concerts scheduled in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland before the Russian visit.

Three Russian planes will take the orchestra from Helsinki, Finland, to Leningrad on Sept. 5. Eight tons of instruments, scores and baggage will follow by train. The group will have a full day free for sightseeing before they gather at the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory for a rehearsal and a concert — the first ever presented by an American orchestra in the USSR — Thursday night.

After a second concert Friday night the orchestra will travel to Moscow by train for three concerts and day of sightseeing. Then, Monday night, the group will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia to continue its tour.

The tour is being made in cooperation with the American National Theater and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the U. S. State Department to assist American groups performing abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News-Tribune (e)
WALTHAM, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 13,684

AUG 30 1956

Boston Symphony To See More in Visit to Russia

047

BOSTON (U.P.)—Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will do more sightseeing in Russia, thanks to a change in transportation arrangements by the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture.

The 125 members of the orchestra staff now will fly from Helsinki, Finland to Leningrad, instead of taking a train, it was learned here Wednesday. The orchestra personnel will have time for sightseeing in Leningrad before their instruments arrive by train.

The Boston orchestra, first American group of its kind to appear in Russia, will give two concerts in Leningrad and three in Moscow.

The orchestra will travel from Leningrad to Moscow by sleeper train, and from Moscow to Prague, Czechoslovakia by plane.

Coast. Boston Post Aug 30/56

Symphony to See Russia by Plane

A change from train to plane transportation when the 125-man Boston Symphony Orchestra travels through Russia next week will give the musicians more time for sightseeing in Moscow and Leningrad, it was learned last night.

Norman Shirk, assistant manager who remained behind in Boston said the Russians rescheduled the trip.

The orchestra and its 20-member official party will go from Helsinki, Finland, to Leningrad Sept. 5 in three Red planes. The orchestra's eight tons of instruments and other baggage will follow by train.

[154]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free

AUG 30 1956

Boston Symphony To Give Four Concerts In Russia: Munch, Monteux to Conduct

The Boston Symphony will become the first American orchestra ever to perform in Russia, indeed the first symphony from the Western world to perform in the U.S.S.R. when, during the course of its August-September tour of thirteen countries in Europe, it plays two concerts in Leningrad and two in Moscow during the three days, September 6-8.

The formal invitation to perform in Soviet territory was transmitted in early June from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow by Yuri Gouk, Cultural Attache of the Soviet Embassy in Washington, to the orchestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry, Jr. In August, 1955, during the Geneva Conference, the orchestra, through the President of its Board of Trustees, Henry B. Cabot, made known its willingness to include a visit to the Soviet Republic during its planned tour of Europe.

The Boston Symphony thus becomes the first ensemble of American instrumental artists to visit the Soviet Union. Last January the American folk opera "Porgy and Bess" was performed in Leningrad and Moscow by an American troupe. In May violinist Isaac Stern, a frequent soloist with the Boston Symphony (he performed the Beethoven Violin Concerto at its Edinburg Festival concert of August 28) made an extensive tour of Russia. In June the American Metropolitan tenor Jan Peerce sang in concert and opera performances in the Soviet Union. An English orchestra, the London Philharmonic, is scheduled to visit Russia in October.

Much as it did in the case of the tour of "Porgy and Bess," the Russian government will make arrangements for bringing the orchestra, its staff and equipment into its territory from Finland, where the orchestra performs on Tuesday, September 4; will provide accommodations and meals during six days, Sept. 5-10, spent in the U.S.S.R., and will again move the orchestra from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia, on Tuesday, Sept. 11. It will also pay the orchestra a fee for each concert, and sell tickets at a price it will itself set.

Although many details, involving method of transportation, exact dates and hours of the four scheduled concerts, and what functions are planned remain unsettled. Present plans call for the orchestra party to journey from Helsinki to Leningrad by train. There in the Great Hall of the Conservatory, on Tuesday evening, Sept. 6, Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director for the past seven years, will conduct the first of two concerts. In the same hall on the following evening, Pierre Monteux, regular conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919-1924 and a frequent guest conductor during the past five years, will be on the podium.

As now planned, an overnight train journey will bring the Boston Symphony into Moscow on Saturday morning, Sept. 8, where the orchestra looks for a busy day. An early afternoon rehearsal in Great Hall of the Conservatory will be followed by a matinee concert, led by Dr. Munch and an evening one under Mr. Monteux' leadership. A diplomatic reception is scheduled before the orchestra and its personnel embarks on its 1200 mile journey across Russia and Poland into Prague.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra of 105 pieces includes in its personnel two women players, first flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer and second harpist Olivia Luetcke. A staff of ten will be with the orchestra. Although some 35 wives of members of the orchestra will accompany it on most of the tour, they will not join their consorts for the Russian part of the orchestra's engagements abroad. The official party will, however, include three newspaper critics, two from Boston and one from the orchestra's summer home, Pittsfield, Mass., and an official photographer. Three Russian-born violinists will be revisiting their land of birth: Victor Manusevitch (born in Alexandrovsk), Vladimir Resnikoff (born in Novgorod and Manuel Zung (born in Grodno).

The European tour of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in cooperation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the U.S. State Department to assist American performing artists abroad. Additional funds were allocated to make an extension of the tour into Russia possible.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON, FRI

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

AUG 30 1956

Boston Symphony Granted Bigger Schedule in Russia

BOSTON (AP)—The 125-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour, has been granted a broader concert and sightseeing scheduled in Russia, the orchestra's assistant manager, Norman Shirk, said yesterday.

The U. S. S. R. Ministry of Culture has changed transportation facilities for the orchestra and its 20-member official party from train to plane, allowing extra time in the two Russian cities where the group will perform.

The ministry has also scheduled an additional concert in Moscow, making a total of three, Mr. Shirk said. The group will perform twice in Leningrad.

Today the orchestra concludes its series of five concerts at the Edinburg International Festival and continues its tour, with concerts scheduled in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland before the Russian visit.

Three Russians planes will take the Orchestra from Helsinki, Finland, to Leningrad on Sept. 5. Eight tons of instruments, scores and baggage will follow by train. The group will have a full day free for sightseeing before they gather at the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory for a rehearsal and a concert — the first ever presented by an American orchestra in the U. S. S. R.—tonight.

After a second concert Friday night the orchestra will travel to Moscow by train for three concerts and day of sightseeing. Then Monday night, the group will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia to continue its tour.

The tour is being made in cooperation with the American National Theater and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the U. S. State Department to assist American groups performing abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Enterprise (e)
MARLBORO, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 5,435

AUG 30 1956

Boston (UP)—Boston Symphony Orchestra musician will do more sightseeing in Russia thanks to a change i transportation arrangements by the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture. The 125 members of the orchestra staff nov will fly from Helsinki, Finland to Leningrad, USSR instea of taking a train, it was learned here Wednesday. The orchestra personnel will have time for sightseeing in Leningrad before their instruments arrive by train.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
HUDSON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 2,085

AUG 30 1956

* * * * *

Boston (UP)—Boston Symphony Orchestra musician will do more sightseeing in Russia thanks to a change in transportation arrangements by the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture. The 125 members of the orchestra staff now will fly from Helsinki, Finland to Leningrad, USSR instead of taking a train, it was learned here Wednesday. The orchestra personnel will have time for sightseeing in Leningrad before their instruments arrive by train.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 30 1956

Hub Orchestra's Tour In Russia Broadened

Boston, Aug. 29 (AP)—The 125-man Symphony Orchestra now on a 13-nation European tour, has been granted a broader concert and sightseeing schedule in Russia, its assistant manager, Norman Shirk, said today.

The USSR Ministry of Culture has changed transportation facilities for the orchestra and its 20-member official party from train to plane, allowing extra time in the two Russian cities where the group will perform. The ministry also has scheduled an additional concert in Moscow, making a total of three, Shirk said. The group will perform twice in Leningrad.

Tomorrow the orchestra concludes its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival and continues its tour, with concerts scheduled in Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Finland before the Russian visit.

Three Russian planes wil take the orchestra from Helsinki, Finland, to Leningrad on Sept. 5. Eight tons of instruments, scores and baggage will follow by train. The group will have a full day free for sightseeing before they gather at the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory for a rehearsal and a concert—the first ever presented by an American orchestra in the USSR—Thursday night.

After a second concert Friday night the orchestra will travel to Moscow by train for three concerts and day of sightseeing. Then, Monday night, the group will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia, to continue its tour.

The tour is being made in cooperation with the American National Theater and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the United States State Department to assist American groups performing abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

AUG 31 1956

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

Red Carpet Unrolls For Boston Symphony

Boston—(AP)—The 125-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour, has been granted a broader concert and sigh-seeing schedule in Russia, assistant manager Norman Shirk reports.

The USSR Ministry of Culture has changed transportation facilities for the orchestra and its 20-member official party from train to plane, allowing extra time in the two Russian cities where the group will perform. The ministry has also scheduled an additional concert in Moscow, making a total of three, Shirk said. The group will perform twice in Leningrad.

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA has concluded its five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival. It has concerts scheduled in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland before the Russian visit.

Three Russian planes will take the orchestra from Helsinki, Finland, to Leningrad on Sept. 5. Eight tons of instruments, scores and baggage will follow by train. The group will have a full day free for sightseeing before they gather at the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory for a rehearsal and a concert—the first ever presented by an American orchestra in the USSR—Thursday night.

After a second concert Friday night the orchestra will travel to Moscow by train for three concerts and day of sightseeing. Then, Monday night, the group will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia, to continue its tour.

* * *

THE TOUR is being made in cooperation with the American National Theatre and Academy the professional agency appointed by the U. S. State Department to assist American groups performing abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 13,468

AUG 30 1956

CONCERT TOUR WIDENED

BOSTON, Aug. 29 — (AP) The 125-man Boston Symphony orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour, has been granted a broader concert and sightseeing schedule in Russia, assistant manager Norman Shirk said today. The U. S. S. R. Ministry of Culture has changed transportation facilities for the orchestra and its 20-member official party from train to plane, allowing extra time in the two Russian cities where the group will perform. The ministry has also scheduled an additional concert in Moscow, making a total of three, Shirk said. The group will perform twice in Leningrad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200

AUG 31 1956

• • • •

Framingham patrons of the Boston Symphony orchestra are interested to learn that the tour of Europe is a great success. The orchestra concluded its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival, yesterday, and is performing in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland, enroute to Russia. It is reported that the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture has broadened the plans for the visit to Russia with three concerts instead of two in Moscow, besides the originally two scheduled in Leningrad. In addition, the orchestra's group of 125, including its official party, will be given a considerable extension of the original prospects for sightseeing in the two cities. These improvements have been made possible by the Russians' change of transportation facilities from train to plane. The orchestra will give a concert in Czechoslovakia for the first time on Tuesday, Sept. 11. The following day it makes it bow in Vienna.

• • • •

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News-Tribune (e)
WALTHAM, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 13,684

AUG 31 1956

Soviet Broadens Plans for Tour of Boston Symphony

According to word received at Symphony Hall, the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture has broadened the plans for the visit to Russia of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which on Aug. 30 concluded its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival. En route to Russia the orchestra will perform in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland.

By the Russian officials' action, the Boston musicians will play three concerts instead of two in Moscow, besides the originally scheduled two in Leningrad. In addition, the orchestra's group of 125, including its official party, will be given a considerable extension of the original prospects for sightseeing in the two cities. These improvements have been made possible by the Russians' change of transportation facilities from train to plane.

Three Russian planes will pick up the Boston Symphony party next Wednesday morning at Helsinki, where the orchestra will have played the previous night, and take it on an hour-and-a-half flight to Leningrad. Since the eight tons of orchestra baggage will arrive much later by train, the Bostonians will have ample time for sightseeing in Leningrad.

The orchestra's European tour of 13 countries, in which it is presenting 28 concerts, is being made in co-operation with the American National Theater and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the U. S. State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372

SEP 2 1956

MOSCOW TO HEAR THREE CONCERTS INSTEAD OF TWO

Boston Symphony Also in Leningrad Twice This Week

Boston, Sept. 1—According to word received at Symphony Hall, the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture [illegible] broadened the plans for the visit to Russia of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which has just concluded its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival, en route to Russia is performing in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland. By the Russian officials' action, the Boston musicians will play three concerts instead of two in Moscow besides the originally schedule two in Leningrad.

In addition, the orchestra's group of 125, including its official party, will be given a considerable extension of the original prospects for sightseeing in the two cities. These improvements have been made possible by the Russians' change of transportation facilities from train to plane.

Flight to Russia

Three Russian planes will pick up the Boston Symphony party on Wednesday morning at Helsinki, where the orchestra will have played the previous night, and take it on an hour and a half flight to Leningrad. The eight tons of orchestra baggage arriving much later by train, the Bostonians will have ample time for sightseeing in Leningrad.

In fact, the musicians will not go on duty until Dr. Munch calls them for an acoustical rehearsal on Thursday at 6:30 p. m. in the Great Hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, where he will conduct them in concert at 8, the first concert ever to be given by an American symphony orchestra in the U.S.S.R. In the same hall on the following night the orchestra will be led by its former regular conductor, Pierre Monteux.

After the second Leningrad performance, the orchestra will take a sleeper train trip to Moscow. In the great hall of the Conservatory of that capital, where the group will arrive about 10 a. m. on Saturday, Dr. Munch will hold an acoustic rehearsal from noon until 2:30 p. m. for the concert that evening. On Sunday, Sept. 9, at 2, Mr. Monteux will conduct the orchestra in the same hall, where Dr. Munch will take over that evening. The orchestra will have time off all day Monday in Moscow, then fly to Prague in the evening.

The orchestra's European tour of 13 countries, in which it is presenting 28 concerts, is being made in co-operation with the American National Theater and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the U. S. State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 4 1956

HUB SYMPHONY TO USSR

Three Russian planes are scheduled to pick up the Boston Symphony party Wednesday morning at Helsinki, where the orchestra will have played the previous night, and take it on an hour and a half flight to Leningrad.

The eight tons of orchestra baggage arriving much later by train, the Bostonians will have ample time for sightseeing in Leningrad. In fact, the musicians will not go on duty until Dr. Munch calls them for an acoustical rehearsal late Thursday afternoon in the Great Hall of the Leningrad Conservatory. It is here that he will conduct them in concert at 8 p. m., the first concert ever to be given by an American symphony orchestra in the U. S. S. R. In the same hall on the following night, the orchestra will be led by its former regular conductor, Pierre Monteux.

According to word received at Symphony Hall, the Soviet Union's ministry of culture has broadened the plans for the orchestra's visit to Russia. By the Russian officials' action, the Boston musicians will play three concerts instead of two in Moscow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

AUG 30 1956

Boston Symphony Granted Bigger Schedule in Russia

BOSTON (AP)—The 125-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour, has been granted a broader concert and sightseeing scheduled in Russia, the orchestra's assistant manager, Norman Shirk, said yesterday.

The U. S. S. R. Ministry of Culture has changed transportation facilities for the orchestra and its 20-member official party from train to plane, allowing extra time in the two Russian cities where the group will perform.

The ministry has also scheduled an additional concert in Moscow, making a total of three, Mr. Shirk said. The group will perform twice in Leningrad.

Today the orchestra concludes its series of five concerts at the Edinburg International Festival and continues its tour, with concerts scheduled in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland before the Russian visit.

Three Russians planes will take the Orchestra from Helsinki, Finland, to Leningrad on Sept. 5. Eight tons of instruments, scores and baggage will follow by train. The group will have a full day free for sightseeing before they gather at the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory for a rehearsal and a concert — the first ever presented by an American orchestra in the U. S. S. R.—tonight.

After a second concert Friday night the orchestra will travel to Moscow by train for three concerts and day of sightseeing. Then Monday night, the group will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia to continue its tour.

The tour is being made in cooperation with the American National Theater and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the U. S. State Department to assist American groups performing abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Enterprise (e)
MARLBORO, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 5,435

AUG 30 1956

Boston (UP)—Boston Symphony Orchestra musician will do more sightseeing in Russia thanks to a change i transportation arrangements by the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture. The 125 members of the orchestra staff now will fly from Helsinki, Finland to Leningrad, USSR instead of taking a train, it was learned here Wednesday. The orchestra personnel will have time for sightseeing in Leningrad before their instruments arrive by train.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
HUDSON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 2,085

AUG 30 1956

* * * * *

Boston (UP)—Boston Symphony Orchestra musician will do more sightseeing in Russia thanks to a change in transportation arrangements by the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture. The 125 members of the orchestra staff now will fly from Helsinki, Finland to Leningrad, USSR instead of taking a train, it was learned here Wednesday. The orchestra personnel will have time for sightseeing in Leningrad before their instruments arrive by train.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 30 1956

Hub Orchestra's Tour In Russia Broadened

Boston, Aug. 29 (AP)—The 125-man Symphony Orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour, has been granted a broader concert and sightseeing schedule in Russia, its assistant manager, Norman Shirk, said today.

The USSR Ministry of Culture has changed transportation facilities for the orchestra and its 20-member official party from train to plane, allowing extra time in the two Russian cities where the group will perform. The ministry also has scheduled an additional concert in Moscow, making a total of three, Shirk said. The group will perform twice in Leningrad.

Tomorrow the orchestra concludes its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival and continues its tour, with concerts scheduled in Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Finland before the Russian visit.

Three Russian planes wil take the orchestra from Helsinki, Finland, to Leningrad on Sept. 5. Eight tons of instruments, scores and baggage will follow by train. The group will have a full day free for sightseeing before they gather at the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory for a rehearsal and a concert—the first ever presented by an American orchestra in the USSR—Thursday night.

After a second concert Friday night the orchestra will travel to Moscow by train for three concerts and day of sightseeing. Then, Monday night, the group will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia, to continue its tour.

The tour is being made in cooperation with the American National Theater and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the United States State Department to assist American groups performing abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

AUG 31 1956

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

Red Carpet Unrolls For Boston Symphony

Boston—(AP)—The 125-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour, has been granted a broader concert and sigh-seeing schedule in Russia, assistant manager Norman Shirk reports.

The USSR Ministry of Culture has changed transportation facilities for the orchestra and its 20-member official party from train to plane, allowing extra time in the two Russian cities where the group will perform. The ministry has also scheduled an additional concert in Moscow, making a total of three, Shirk said. The group will perform twice in Leningrad.

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA has concluded its five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival. It has concerts scheduled in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland before the Russian visit.

Three Russian planes will take the orchestra from Helsinki, Finland, to Leningrad on Sept. 5. Eight tons of instruments, scores and baggage will follow by train. The group will have a full day free for sightseeing before they gather at the great hall of the Leningrad Conservatory for a rehearsal and a concert—the first ever presented by an American orchestra in the USSR—Thursday night.

After a second concert Friday night the orchestra will travel to Moscow by train for three concerts and day of sightseeing. Then, Monday night, the group will fly to Prague, Czechoslovakia, to continue its tour.

* * *

THE TOUR is being made in cooperation with the American National Theatre and Academy the professional agency appointed by the U. S. State Department to assist American groups performing abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 13,468

AUG 30 1956

CONCERT TOUR WIDENED

BOSTON, Aug. 29 — (AP) The 125-man Boston Symphony orchestra, now on a 13-nation European tour, has been granted a broader concert and sightseeing schedule in Russia, assistant manager Norman Shirk said today. The U. S. S. R. Ministry of Culture has changed transportation facilities for the orchestra and its 20-member official party from train to plane, allowing extra time in the two Russian cities where the group will perform. The ministry has also scheduled an additional concert in Moscow, making a total of three, Shirk said. The group will perform twice in Leningrad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200

AUG 31 1956

• • • •

Framingham patrons of the Boston Symphony orchestra are interested to learn that the tour of Europe is a great success. The orchestra concluded its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival, yesterday, and is performing in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland, enroute to Russia. It is reported that the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture has broadened the plans for the visit to Russia with three concerts instead of two in Moscow, besides the originally two scheduled in Leningrad. In addition, the orchestra's group of 125, including its official party, will be given a considerable extension of the original prospects for sightseeing in the two cities. These improvements have been made possible by the Russians' change of transportation facilities from train to plane. The orchestra will give a concert in Czechoslovakia for the first time on Tuesday, Sept. 11. The following day it makes it bow in Vienna.

• • • •

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News-Tribune (e)
WALTHAM, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 13,684

AUG 31 1956

Soviet Broadens Plans for Tour of Boston Symphony

According to word received at Symphony Hall, the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture has broadened the plans for the visit to Russia of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which on Aug. 30 concluded its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival. En route to Russia the orchestra will perform in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland.

By the Russian officials' action, the Boston musicians will play three concerts instead of two in Moscow, besides the orginally scheduled two in Leningrad. In addition, the orchestra's group of 125, including its official party, will be given a considerable extension of the original prospects for sightseeing in the two cities. These improvements have been made possible by the Russians' change of transportation facilities from train to plane.

Three Russian planes will pick up the Boston Symphony party next Wednesday morning at Helsinki, where the orchestra will have played the previous night, and take it on an hour-and-a-half flight to Leningrad. Since the eight tons of orchestra baggage will arrive much later by train, the Bostonians will have ample time for sightseeing in Leningrad.

The orchestra's European tour of 13 countries, in which it is presenting 28 concerts, is being made in co-operation with the American National Theater and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the U. S. State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,572

SEP 2 1956

MOSCOW TO HEAR THREE CONCERTS INSTEAD OF TWO

Boston Symphony Also in Leningrad Twice This Week

Boston, Sept. 1 According to word received at Symphony Hall, the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture has broadened the plans for the visit to Russia of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which has just concluded its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival, en route to Russia is performing in Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland. By the Russian officials' action, the Boston musicians will play three concerts instead of two in Moscow besides the originally scheduled two in Leningrad.

In addition, the orchestra's group of 125, including its official party, will be given a considerable extension of the original prospects for sightseeing in the two cities. These improvements have been made possible by the Russians' change of transportation facilities from train to plane.

Flight to Russia

Three Russian planes will pick up the Boston Symphony party on Wednesday morning at Helsinki, where the orchestra will have played the previous night, and take it on an hour and a half flight to Leningrad. The eight tons of orchestra baggage arriving much later by train, the Bostonians will have ample time for sightseeing in Leningrad.

In fact, the musicians will not go on duty until Dr. Munch calls them for an acoustical rehearsal on Thursday at 6:30 p. m. in the Great Hall of the Leningrad Conservatory, where he will conduct them in concert at 8, the first concert ever to be given by an American symphony orchestra in the U.S.S.R. In the same hall on the following night the orchestra will be led by its former regular conductor, Pierre Monteux.

After the second Leningrad performance, the orchestra will take a sleeper train trip to Moscow. In the great hall of the Conservatory of that capital, where the group will arrive about 10 a. m. on Saturday, Dr. Munch will hold an acoustic rehearsal from noon until 2:30 p. m. for the concert that evening. On Sunday, Sept. 9, at 2, Mr. Monteux will conduct the orchestra in the same hall, where Dr. Munch will take over that evening. The orchestra will have time off all day Monday in Moscow, then fly to Prague in the evening.

The orchestra's European tour of 13 countries, in which it is presenting 28 concerts, is being made in co-operation with the American National Theater and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the U. S. State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 4 1956

HUB SYMPHONY TO USSR

Three Russian planes are scheduled to pick up the Boston Symphony party Wednesday morning at Helsinki, where the orchestra will have played the previous night, and take it on an hour and a half flight to Leningrad.

The eight tons of orchestra baggage arriving much later by train, the Bostonians will have ample time for sightseeing in Leningrad. In fact, the musicians will not go on duty until Dr. Munch calls them for an acoustical rehearsal late Thursday afternoon in the Great Hall of the Leningrad Conservatory. It is here that he will conduct them in concert at 8 p. m., the first concert ever to be given by an American symphony orchestra in the U. S. S. R. In the same hall on the following night, the orchestra will be led by its former regular conductor, Pierre Monteux.

According to word received at Symphony Hall, the Soviet Union's ministry of culture has broadened the plans for the orchestra's visit to Russia. By the Russian officials' action, the Boston musicians will play three concerts instead of two in Moscow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 8 1956

Symphony In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Boston's touring symphony orchestra, fresh from two sell-out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p.m.—quite early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p.m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p.m. and midnight.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973

SEP 8 1956

Moscow Greets Hub's Symphony

MOSCOW (AP) — Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sellout performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cutural leaders.

Among those at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p. m.—early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p. m. concert opening.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Journal (e)
LEWISTON-AUBURN,
Maine
Republican
Circ. 15,490

SEP 8 1956

Moscow Welcomes Boston Symphony

MOSCOW (AP)— Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sell out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p.m.—quite early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p.m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p.m., and midnight.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SOUTH BEND, IND.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 108,781 - S. 111,558

SEP 9 1956

SYMPHONY IN MOSCOW.

MOSCOW (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was a resounding hit in Leningrad, arrived here Saturday for three concerts at the Moscow Conservatory.

Its next stop is Prague, Czechoslovakia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony

Continued from Page One

provements have been made possible by the Russians change of transportation facilities from train to plane.

Three Russian planes picked up the Boston Symphony party yesterday morning at Helsinki, where the orchestra played Tuesday night and took it on an hour and a half flight to Leningrad. The eight tons of orchestra baggage will arrive much later by train so the Bostonians will have ample time for sightseeing in Leningrad. In fact, the musicians will not go on duty until Dr. Munch calls them for an acoustical rehearsal tonight at 6:30 p.m. in the Great Hall of Leningrad Con-

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

SEP 9 1956

Moscow Hails U.S. Orchestra

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP). — Boston's touring symphony orchestra, fresh from two sell-out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders. Among them was David Oistrakh, noted violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last Winter.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302

SEP 6 1956

Capital Circus

By GWEN GIBSON

Washington, Sept. 3.—America is going high brow, if you please, in the field of international arts.

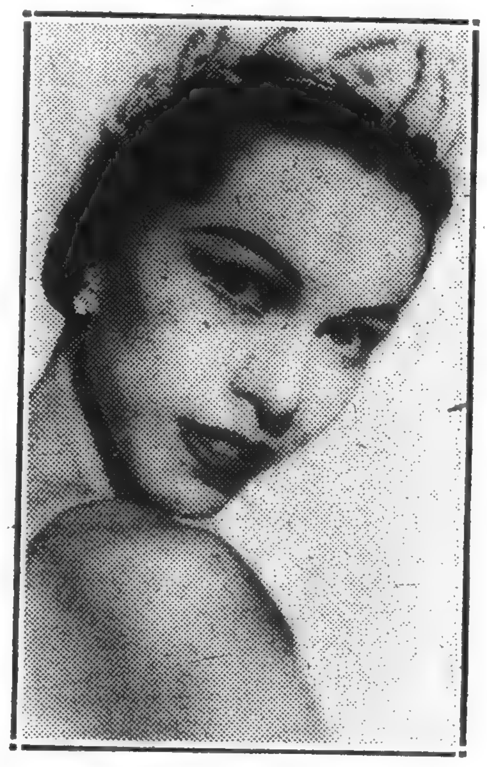
Only top-notch, long-haired type American entertainers are scheduled to go abroad for the rest of this fiscal year under government-sponsored programs.

No native jazz kings like Dizzy Gillespie or Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong, both of whom wowed foreign audiences on their recent tours, are on the new international road show agenda now being worked up by the State Department.

What's more, no light musicals or comedy shows, for which the U. S. is famous, are on the new schedule.

Instead, as examples of our flourishing indigenous culture, State has decided to ship out only attractions like concert cellists, violinists, pianists, symphony orchestras and ballets.

Department brass coordinating foreign entertainment programs — which bureaucrats in Washington refer to as our international cultural services—are apparently running scared because of recent jibes from Congress and some bad review notices from South America where the U. S. recently presented as a "good will" gesture a badly cast version of "Teahouse of the August Moon."



Maria Tallchief
Ballet, yes . . . jazz, no

The Congressional criticism came from some members of the House Appropriations Committee who were incensed because State was spending taxpayer dollars to send "lightweight" artists overseas.

They set up some long and loud howls in private hearings before okaying the $2½ million that State finally got to run the service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957.

Gripes Aimed at Gillespie, 'Porgy'

Most of their gripes (many of which won't show in the printed hearings) were aimed at Gillespie, who just completed his highly successful tour of Europe, the Near East and South America, and at our overseas production of "Porgy and Bess," which also got rave notices when it toured Europe and the Near East last year. Although certainly one of the foremost folk operas ever produced in America, some of our high-minded Congressmen shuddered at the setting—a tenement slum area in Charleston, S. C.

About this time the South American press was complaining that the Spanish-speaking Americans sent down to star in "Teahouse" were mutilating the native language. The show, scheduled to run for 15 weeks was closed in June after only nine.

State won't admit it was a turkey.

State Decides It's Too Expensive

"It was decided that sending so many people out of the country, along with the necessary scenery for such shows was too expensive," a spokesman said. He said that shows of the "Teahouse" and Gershwin opera type have not been totally ruled out "but that a great deal more selection has to be applied in the future."

Despite this explanation, State now has part of its $2½ million appropriation riding on the 100-member Boston Symphony Orchestra which is on a European tour that winds up in Moscow Saturday.

The government also is underwriting the Ballet Theatre, a company of 63, on its 21-week tour of Europe and the Far East, along with the 65-person New York City Ballet on its 14-week European tour.

Hardly Typical of U. S. Show Business

These are stellar attractions, granted, and the artists are to be commended because they take lower than usual salaries when working for Uncle Sam. But it's hard to consider such shows, alone, as typical of American show business.

Other performers on the road now as true examples of homegrown American art include Gregor Piatigorsky, American cellist who started an extensive Far Eastern tour in Hong Kong on Aug. 26, and Eugene List and wife, concert violinist and pianist team, now on a Far and Near Eastern tour.

Acts lined up for the international circuit, but unannounced as yet, include the San Francisco Ballet, a 30-member company tentatively slated to take off on a long Far Eastern tour next January and the 50-member Westminister Choir, booked for 55 performances on a Far and Near Eastern tour that will stretch from Japan to Yugoslavia beginning in October.

Met Stars to Make Tours

Soprano Eleanor Steber of the Metropolitan Opera has agreed to a Far and Near Eastern tour beginning next February and Met mezzo-soprano Blanche Thebom is set to take over for the government in South America with a 16-concert tour, replacing the Jubilee Singers, a group of Negro singers.

State may hit pay dirt with two other acts that smack somewhat more of Americanism.

Marion Anderson will sing for Uncle Sam, when she finishes her commercial tour of Europe, at the University of Oslo Oct. 16-19 and later in West Berlin at the Berlin fall festival.

And Maria Tallchief, beautiful Indian ballerina, will perform with a group of six other New York City Ballet stars on a three-week engagement in New Delhi, India, beginning Nov. 13.

But any foreigners who want to hear some old-fashioned American jazz, rock and roll or hillbilly music in the next 10 months will apparently have to look to commercial outlets or make a personal call.

---

ranged for 5 p. m. — quite early for Moscow — to permit them to prepare for the 8 p. m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p. m. and midnight.

---

is good that the beginnings of such opportunity are now available, and in the Boston Symphony our musical culture has one of its foremost representatives.

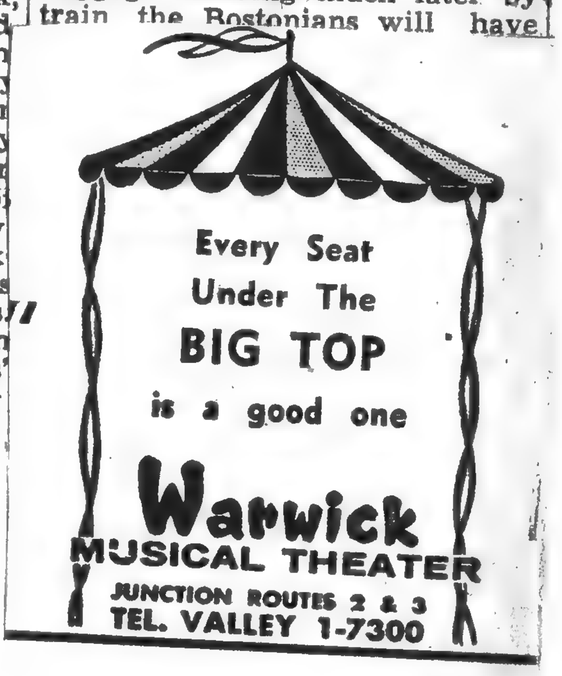
New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Pawtuxet Valley
Times (e)
W. WARWICK, R. I.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 7,469

SEP 4 1956

ves Its
s for Visit
ston Symphony

change of transportation facilities from train to plane.

Three Russian planes will pick up the Boston Symphony party on Wednesday morning, September 5 at Helsinki, where the orchestra will have played the previous night, and take it on an hour and a half flight to Leningrad. The eight tons of orchestra baggage arriving much later by train the Bostonians will have



Every Seat
Under The BIG TOP
is a good one Warwick
MUSICAL THEATER
JUNCTION ROUTES 2 & 3
TEL. VALLEY 1-7300

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1956

Sports

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
ATHOL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,541

SEP 8 1956

Boston Orchestra Gets Warm Welcome

MOSCOW (AP)— Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sell out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p.m.—quite early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p.m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p.m., and midnight.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

SEP 9 1956

Symphony in Moscow, Prague Is Next Stop

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was a resounding hit in Leningrad, arrived here today for three concerts at the Moscow Conservatory.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 8 1956

Symphony In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Boston's touring symphony orchestra, fresh from two sell-out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p.m.—quite early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p.m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p.m. and midnight.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973

SEP 8 1956

Moscow Greets Hub's Symphony

MOSCOW (A.P.) — Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sellout performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cutural leaders.

Among those at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p. m.—early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p. m. concert opening.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Journal (e)
LEWISTON-AUBURN, Maine
Republican
Circ. 15,490

SEP 8 1956

Moscow Welcomes Boston Symphony

MOSCOW (AP) — Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sell out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p.m.—quite early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p.m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between, 10 p.m., and midnight.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SOUTH BEND, IND.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 108,781 - S. 111,558

SEP 9 1956

SYMPHONY IN MOSCOW.

MOSCOW (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was a resounding hit in Leningrad, arrived here Saturday for three concerts at the Moscow Conservatory.

Its next stop is Prague, Czechoslovakia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Back Bay Ledger & Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free

SEP 6 1956

Boston Symphony

Continued from Page One

provements have been made possible by the Russians change of transportation facilities from train to plane.

Three Russian planes picked up the Boston Symphony party yesterday morning at Helsinki, where the orchestra played Tuesday night and took it on an hour and a half flight to Leningrad. The eight tons of orchestra baggage will arrive much later by train so the Bostonians will have ample time for sightseeing in Leningrad. In fact, the musicians will not go on duty until Dr. Munch calls them for an acoustical rehearsal tonight at 6:30 p.m. in the Great Hall of Leningrad Conservatory, where he will conduct them in concert at 8 o'clock, the first concert ever to be given by an American symphony orchestra in the U.S.S.R. In the same hall, tomorrow night, the orchestra will be led by its former regular conductor, Pierre Monteux.

After the second Leningrad performance, the orchestra will take a sleeper train trip to Moscow. In the Great Hall of the Conservatory of that Capital, where the group will arrive about 10 a.m. on Saturday, Dr. Munch will hold an acoustic rehearsal from noon until 2:30 for the concert that evening. On Sunday at 2, Mr. Monteux will conduct the orchestra in the same hall, where Dr. Munch will take over that evening. The orchestra will have time off all day Monday in Moscow, then fly to Prague in the evening.

The orchestra's European tour of 13 countries, in which it is presenting 28 concerts, is being made in cooperation with the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the U.S. State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

SEP 9 1956

Moscow Hails U.S. Orchestra

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP). — Boston's touring symphony orchestra, fresh from two sell-out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders. Among them was David Oistrakh, noted violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last Winter.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

SEP 8 1956

Russians Welcome Boston Symphony Players to Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sell out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p.m.—quite early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p.m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p.m., and midnight.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
PAWTUCKET-CENTRAL FALLS, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 39,259

SEP 8 1956

Moscow Welcomes Boston Orchestra

MOSCOW (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sell out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's New Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p. m. — quite early for Moscow — to permit them to prepare for the 8 p. m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p. m. and midnight.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Pawtuxet Valley Times (e)
W. WARWICK, R. I.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 7,469

SEP 4 1956

USSR Improves Its Facilities for Visit By Boston Symphony

According to word received at Symphony Hall, the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture has broadened the plans for the visit to Russia of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which on August 30 concluded its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival, en route to Russia is performing in Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Finland. By the Russian officials' action the Boston musicians will play three concerts instead of two in Moscow, besides the originally scheduled two in Leningrad. In addition, the orchestra's group of 125, including its official party, will be given a considerable extension of the original prospects for sightseeing in the two cities. These improvements have been made possible by the Russians' change of transportation facilities from train to plane.

Three Russian planes will pick up the Boston Symphony party on Wednesday morning, September 5 at Helsinki, where the orchestra will have played the previous night, and take it on an hour and a half flight to Leningrad. The eight tons of orchestra baggage arriving much later by train, the Bostonians will have

Every Seat
Under The BIG TOP
is a good one
Warwick
MUSICAL THEATER
JUNCTION ROUTES 2 & 3
TEL. VALLEY 1-7300

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

LOUISVILLE, KY.
COURIER JOURNAL
Circ. D. 202,911 - S. 300,325

SEP 9 1956

Orchestra Arrives In Moscow

Moscow, Sept. 8 (U.P.)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was a resounding hit in Leningrad, arrived here today for three concerts at the Moscow Conservatory.

New York Times, September 8.

Musicians in Russia

It is pleasant to learn of the warm reception the Boston Symphony Orchestra has received in Leningrad, where it became the first American orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union. Pleasant, too, is the news that the Boston Symphony's concerts in the Soviet Union will provide a chance to introduce the compositions of contemporary American composers to Soviet audiences. The people who gave the world Tchaikovsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff and Shostakovich have had all too little opportunity these past years to hear American music. It is good that the beginnings of such opportunity are now available, and in the Boston Symphony our musical culture has one of its foremost representatives.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

News (e)
ATHOL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,541

SEP 8 1956

Boston Orchestra Gets Warm Welcome

MOSCOW (AP)— Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sell out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p.m.—quite early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p.m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p.m., and midnight.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

SEP 9 1956

Symphony in Moscow, Prague Is Next Stop

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was a resounding hit in Leningrad, arrived here today for three concerts at the Moscow Conservatory.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1956

Sports

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 8 1956

Symphony In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) —Boston's touring symphony orchestra, fresh from two sell-out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p.m.—quite early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p.m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p.m. and midnight.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973

SEP 8 1956

Moscow Greets Hub's Symphony

MOSCOW (AP) — Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sellout performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p. m. early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p. m. concert opening.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal (e)
LEWISTON-AUBURN, Maine
Republican
Circ. 15,490

SEP 8 1956

Moscow Welcomes Boston Symphony

MOSCOW (AP)— Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sell out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p.m.—quite early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p.m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between, 10 p.m., and midnight.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SOUTH BEND, IND.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 108,781 - S. 111,558

SEP 9 1956

SYMPHONY IN MOSCOW.

MOSCOW (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was a resounding hit in Leningrad, arrived here Saturday for three concerts at the Moscow Conservatory.

Its next stop is Prague, Czechoslovakia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free

SEP 6 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

SEP 8 1956

Russians Welcome Boston Symphony Players to Moscow

MOSCOW (AP)— Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sell out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p.m.—quite early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p.m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p.m., and midnight.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Pawtuxet Valley
Times (e)
W. WARWICK, R. I.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 7,469

SEP 4 1956

USSR Improves Its Facilities for Visit By Boston Symphony

According to word received at Symphony Hall, the Soviet Union's Ministry of Culture has broadened the plans for the visit to Russia of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which on August 30 concluded its series of five concerts at the Edinburgh International Festival, en route to Russia is performing in Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Finland. By the Russian officials' action the Boston musicians will play three concerts instead of two in Moscow, besides the originally scheduled two in Leningrad. In addition, the orchestra's group of 125, including its official party, will be given a considerable extension of the original prospects for sightseeing in the two cities. These improvements have been made possible by the Russians' change of transportation facilities from train to plane.

Three Russian planes will pick up the Boston Symphony party on Wednesday morning, September 5 at Helsinki, where the orchestra will have played the previous night, and take it on an hour and a half flight to Leningrad. The eight tons of orchestra baggage arriving much later by train the Bostonians will have

Every Seat
Under The BIG TOP
is a good one
Warwick
MUSICAL THEATER
JUNCTION ROUTES 2 & 3
TEL. VALLEY 1-7300

Boston Symphony

Continued from Page One

provements have been made possible by the Russians change of transportation facilities from train to plane.

Three Russian planes picked up the Boston Symphony party yesterday morning at Helsinki, where the orchestra played Tuesday night and took it on an hour and a half flight to Leningrad. The eight tons of orchestra baggage will arrive much later by train so the Bostonians will have ample time for sightseeing in Leningrad. In fact, the musicians will not go on duty until Dr. Munch calls them for an acoustical rehearsal tonight at 6:30 p.m. in the Great Hall of Leningrad Conservatory, where he will conduct them in concert at 8 o'clock, the first concert ever to be given by an American symphony orchestra in the U.S.S.R. In the same hall tomorrow night, the orchestra will be led by its former regular conductor, Pierre Monteux.

After the second Leningrad performance, the orchestra will take a sleeper train trip to Moscow. In the Great Hall of the Conservatory of that Capital, where the group will arrive about 10 a.m. on Saturday, Dr. Munch will hold an acoustic rehearsal from noon until 2:30 for the concert that evening. On Sunday at 2, Mr. Monteux will conduct the orchestra in the same hall, where Dr. Munch will take over that evening. The orchestra will have time off all day Monday in Moscow, then fly to Prague in the evening.

The orchestra's European tour of 13 countries, in which it is presenting 28 concerts, is being made in cooperation with the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the U.S. State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
ATHOL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,541

SEP 8 1956

Boston Orchestra Gets Warm Welcome

MOSCOW (AP)— Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sell out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p.m.—quite early for Moscow—to permit them to prepare for the 8 p.m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p.m., and midnight.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

LOUISVILLE, KY.
COURIER JOURNAL
Circ. D. 202,911 - S. 300,325

SEP 9 1956

Orchestra Arrives In Moscow

Moscow, Sept. 8 (U.P.)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was a resounding hit in Leningrad, arrived here today for three concerts at the Moscow Conservatory.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
PAWTUCKET-CENTRAL FALLS, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 39,259

SEP 8 1956

Moscow Welcomes Boston Orchestra

MOSCOW (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, fresh from two sell out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's New Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p. m. — quite early for Moscow — to permit them to prepare for the 8 p. m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p. m. and midnight.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

SEP 9 1956

Moscow Hails U.S. Orchestra

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP). — Boston's touring symphony orchestra, fresh from two sell-out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders. Among them was David Oistrakh, noted violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last Winter.

New York Times, September 8.

Musicians in Russia

It is pleasant to learn of the warm reception the Boston Symphony Orchestra has received in Leningrad, where it became the first American orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union. Pleasant, too, is the news that the Boston Symphony's concerts in the Soviet Union will provide a chance to introduce the compositions of contemporary American composers to Soviet audiences. The people who gave the world Tchaikovsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff and Shostakovich have had all too little opportunity these past years to hear American music. It is good that the beginnings of such opportunity are now available, and in the Boston Symphony our musical culture has one of its foremost representatives.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

SEP 9 1956

Symphony in Moscow, Prague Is Next Stop

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was a resounding hit in Leningrad, arrived here today for three concerts at the Moscow Conservatory.

156

REDUCTION

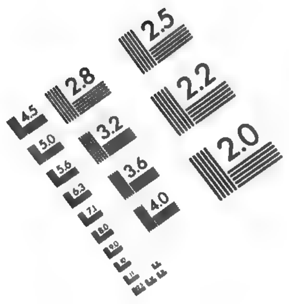
RATIO

16x

2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

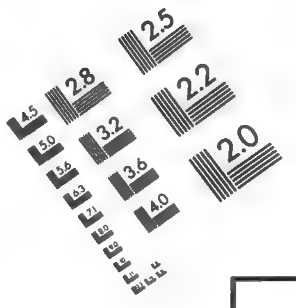
1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890



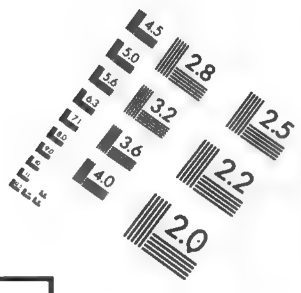
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

4.5
2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

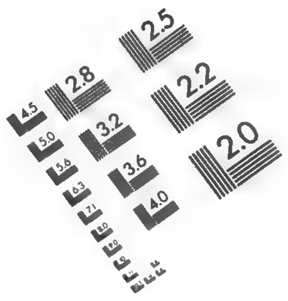
PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



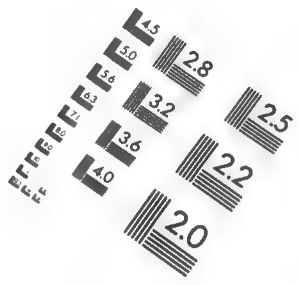
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0



4.5
2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

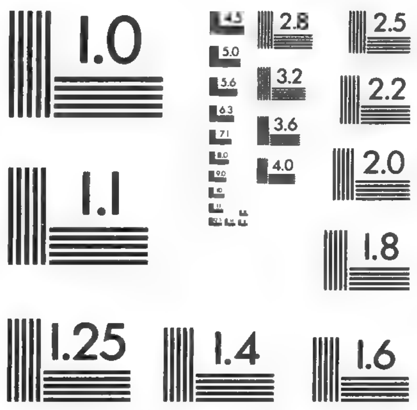


4.5
2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

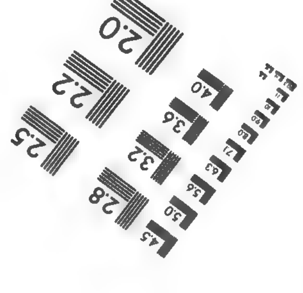
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.5 mm

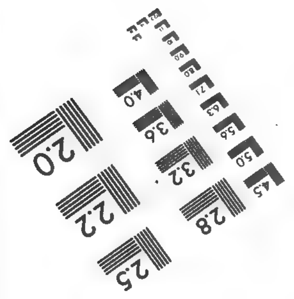
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.5 mm

A5



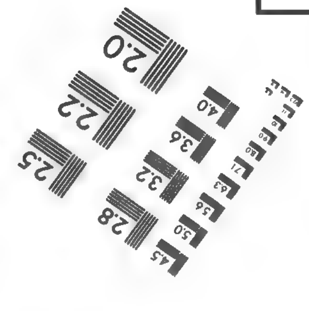
2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8



4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

A4

A3

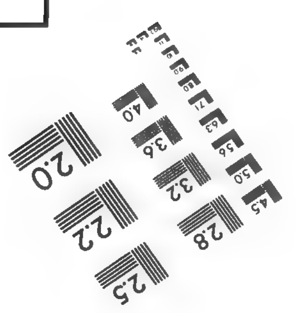


2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8

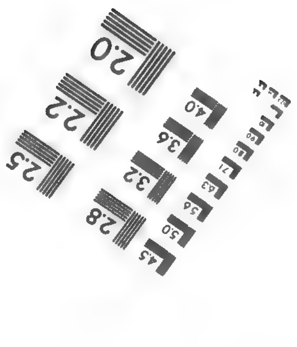
PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8

4.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

4.0
3.6
2.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

3.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Sun
LOWELL, Mass
Independent
Circ. 28,774

SEP 9 1956

Moscow Raves Over Boston Symphonians

First of Three Concerts Proves Outstanding Success

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Boston symphony orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of depu-

Continued on Page Eleven

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Telegram-News
LYNN, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 23,104

SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Hailed By Soviet Musical Elite

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—(UP)—A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Betthoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "bravo" and "bis" ("encore").

Eisenhower critizes

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

SEP 9 1956

Triumph Continues

Moscow Audience Shouts Ovation to Hub Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad.

At the end, the audience shouted repeatedly for more.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751

SEP 9 1956

Munch, Boston Symphony, Big Hit in Moscow

Moscow, Sept. 8 (CTPS).—Beneath the Stars and Stripes and the hammer and sickle the Boston Symphony Orchestra played tonight before a cheering crowd that filled the great Moscow Conservatory.

Conductor Charles Munch responded with two encores when the audience screamed in English for "more."

Munch was brought back four and five times after each number and then the crowd applauded in rhythmic beats as ball fans do when they call for a home run.

New Piston Work Played

The new American work, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, was exceptionally well received. Piston wrote it especially for the orchestra's 75th anniversary this year.

After the concert Munch received congratulations from composer Dimitri Shostakovitch, pianist Aren Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh.

The orchestra will give its final Moscow concert tomorrow.

New England Newsclip
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIc
Sunday He
BOSTON,
Independent R
Circ. 253

SEP 9

Symph Triump In Mos

By WELL
[Boston Herald-N

MOSCOW, S
viet Union's m
the Boston S
tra a tumultu
night culmina
ute standing orchestra ha
cores.

Observers
ton orchestr
Leningrad sa
ous outburs cow's packe passed any had ever e

Stirring

The usu
the Sovie
over the
with Char
Boston m rendition phony No

Excite
the orch
"Sixth sy ton, Ha professo
cally ur develop his tro
cu ificen

(Con

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 538,979

SEP 9 1956

Hub Symphony Thrills Moscow

MOSCOW (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more last night.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

AUDIENCE SHOUTS

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C Major Symphony and the last movement from Haydn's B Flat Symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

WOMAN APPLAUDED

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,155

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Wins Moscow Praise

Boston Orchestra Is Lauded by Critics

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP) — A first-night audience which in-

New Bedford's Finest Store
yd's and most female — self-and flatters your figure, etail in its satin and braid
"Kittens Ear" from Belgium ts fur content. Black, Brown

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,243

SEP 9 1956

Music

Central Staging in Operettas Sept. 14-15

By E. V. W.

Two operettas will be presented by the Syracuse Operetta Company in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts next Friday and Saturday nights. They are Mozart's pastoral comedy, "Bastien and Bastienna," chosen in deference to general observation of the Mozart Bicentennial Year, and Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley."

This will mark the Operetta Company's first attempt at use of both the Stage and part of the main floor staging of the Museum Auditorium as areas of action. Mrs. Phyllis Divers is piano accompanist. Dramatic director is James Carrington, musical director is Donald White. Among those in principal roles in the operettas are Nellie Maynard, Richard Thomason, Patricia Bury, Pat Cupoli, Walter Kavaney, Ed Mayer and Don Hoople.

LEADING OPERETTA ROLES. Patricia Bury, left, is cast as Bastienna in Mozart's "Bastien and Bastienna" and Pat Cupoli will sing Brack Weaver in Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" in the Syracuse Operetta productions in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts Friday and Saturday nights.

This date in music: 1846, Richard Wagner begins to bring "Lohengrin" music; 1891, American premiere of Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" in Philadelphia.

Finger Lakes Lyric Circus, a theater-in-the-round in The Tent near Skaneateles, will close its fifth season tonight with a performance of "Plain and Fancy", a pleasing musical presentation featuring Jen Nelson, as an artful comedienne, rather than as a singing star, and David Davis. Other principals: Alfred Medinets, Marlene Cameron, Rita Noble Ray Hyser, Gordon Shearer, Richard Taber, Merle Marcus and Allan Hale. Thomas Phillip Martin is musical director. Show time is 7:30.

The season, although a success in selection and in presentation of shows, has been a trying time to the management—the Davis Family, Walter, Virginia and David—due to the unseasonable weather. Twice it has been necessary to cancel performances due to severe rain storms. Once, the show was stopped due to high winds. Of the seven attractions, all with good music, "The King and I" "Kismet" and "Plain and Fancy" especially won favor. "Naughty Marietta" and "Carousel," favorites of other seasons, were repeated and "Girl Crazy" also had audience appeal. "On the Town" was the show we liked less in the array of music and dance.

Not only women's coiffures but men's beards have been high fashion in The Tent this summer. First, Walter Davis raised a beard for the role of the kindly Captain in "The King and I." Then along came handsome Wilton Clary (soon to leave show business for real estate in the south), to play the bearded Hajj in "Kismet" and finally Alfred Medinets, who raised a jet black beard for "Plain and Fancy". Medinets leaves Skaneatles for New Jersey for an eight weeks engagement continuing the role of Papa Yoder in the Paper Mill Playhouse. The titian-haired Miss Nelson, who has come to The Lyric in all five seasons, returns tomorrow to New York City to begin rehearsals for a coast-to-coast tour with the Cadillac Show. In the Northwest she will visit her family.

Meantime the "Plain and Fancy" songs: "Young and Foolish," "Follow Your Heart" and "Plain We Live" and the comedy lines, plus the Barn Raising scene, are high spots in the final attraction of '56.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, musical director and conductor, having played five concerts in Russia, in a broadened plan, will have time off in Moscow tomorrow, then will fly to Prague for concerts Tuesday and Wednesday, in Smetana Hall. The six-day visit in Russia included programs in Leningrad and in Moscow. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct both concerts in the Czechoslovakian capital.

During the portion of the tour that brought the Orchestra from Boston to Central Europe for the first time, two cellists, Louis Berger, native of Prague, and Josef Zimbler, born in Pilsen, will revisit their homeland for the first time in many years. Bass player Irving Frankel is Austrian-born (in Lemberg) and Bassoonist Ernst Pammenka is a native of Vienna.

At every concert the Boston symphony plays in Europe, during the current tour of 13 countries, a work by a contemporary American composer is featured. Recently the Boston concluded five concerts in the Edinburgh Festival; en route to Russia performed in Denmark, Norway and Sweden. In certain programs, Pierre Monteux conducts. Following the Orchestra's return to the States, at the Syracuse concert Oct. 20, Dr. Munch will conduct. This event is in Famous Artists Series.

[157]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Given Great Ovation By Soviet Elite

By B. J. CUTLER

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, making its debut in this capital of communism tonight, scored a tremendous success before a cheering and appreciative audience of Soviet music lovers.

The first American symphony orchestra to appear in Russia, the Boston Symphony, came from a triumph in Leningrad to the Great Hall of the Moscow Conservatory where it played before an alternately rapt and tumultous crowd of some 2000 of Moscow's musical and social elite.

SYMPHONY
Page Eighteen

14

Symphony No. 6, was unfamiliar to the Russians and was not as well received. It had been deliberately placed in the orchestra's repertaire as a taste of modern music from abroad.

The final scheduled number, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2, again a traditional work, brought down the house. As encores, the orchestra played the last movement from Haydn's Symphony No. 102 and part of Schuman's Symphony in C Major Adagio.

Before the performance, David Oistrakh, the Soviet violinist who had appeared with the Boston Symphony last year during his tour of the United States, presented bouquets of flowers to Munch on the stage.

In the audience listening intently and applauding enthusiastically were such greats of the Soviet music world as the pianist Emil Gilels and the composers Dmitri Shostekovich, Aram Khachaturian and Dmitri Kabalevsky. Most of them, with the exception of Shostekovich who was described as too shy, went backstage to congratulate the players.

The orchestra, which opened its Soviet tour in Leningrad Thursday and played there again last night, will complete its stand here tomorrow with two concerts. Pierre Monteux will conduct in the afternoon and Munch in the evening. As the 105-man orchestra reached the midpoint of its visit, made possible in part by subsidy from the United States government, reviews began to appear in the Soviet press testifying to the impact its music had on the critics.

Describing the performance of the Eroica in Leningrad, the local newspaper declared "the conductor, Mr. Munch, made it a magnificent number from his list, etched into the audience's consciousness like a sculptured monument."

The newspaper Sovietskaya Kultura, supreme journalistic authority in things cultural here, said "the conductor and audience were united in a unique artistic upsurge. We were deeply satisfied with this performance."

It was noted by observers, who are more political than musical, that a fine reception for the orchestra fits into the current party line to promote cultural exchanges with capitalist nations. They said the symphony could have been flat as a flounder, which it was not, and still would get rave reviews.

(Boston Globe–N.Y. Herald Tribune)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Sun
LOWELL, Mass
Independent
Circ. 28,774

SEP 9 1956

Moscow Raves Over Boston Symphonians

First of Three Concerts Proves Outstanding Success

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Boston symphony orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of depu-

Continued on Page Eleven

Before leading the from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Telegram-News
LYNN, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 23,104

SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Hailed By Soviet Musical Elite

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—(UP)—A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Betthoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "bravo" and "bis" ("encore").

Eisenhower critizes

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

SEP 9 1956

Triumph Continues

Moscow Audience Shouts Ovation to Hub Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad.

At the end, the audience shouted repeatedly for more.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751

SEP 9 1956

Munch, Boston Symphony, Big Hit in Moscow

Moscow, Sept. 8 (CTPS).—Beneath the Stars and Stripes and the hammer and sickle the Boston Symphony Orchestra played tonight before a cheering crowd that filled the great Moscow Conservatory.

Conductor Charles Munch responded with two encores when the audience screamed in English for "more."

Munch was brought back four and five times after each number and then the crowd applauded in rhythmic beats as ball fans do when they call for a home run.

New Piston Work Played

The new American work, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, was exceptionally well received. Piston wrote it especially for the orchestra's 75th anniversary this year.

After the concert Munch received congratulations from composer Dimitri Shostakovitch, pianist Aren Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh.

The orchestra will give its final Moscow concert tomorrow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 538,979

SEP 9 1956

Hub Symphony Thrills Moscow

MOSCOW (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more last night.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

AUDIENCE SHOUTS

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C Major Symphony and the last movement from Haydn's B Flat Symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

WOMAN APPLAUDED

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,155

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Wins Moscow Praise

Boston Orchestra Is Lauded by Critics

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP) — A first-night audience which in-

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,243

SEP 9 1956

Music

Central Staging in Operettas Sept. 14-15

By E. V. W.

Two operettas will be presented by the Syracuse Operetta Company in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts next Friday and Saturday nights. They are Mozart's pastoral comedy, "Bastien and Bastienna," chosen in deference to general observation of the Mozart Bicentennial Year, and Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley."

This will mark the Operetta Company's first attempt at use of both the Stage and part of the main floor staging of the Museum Auditorium as areas of action. Mrs. Phyllis Divers is piano accompanist. Dramatic director is James Carrington, musical director is Donald White. Among those in principal roles in the operettas are Nellie Maynard, Richard Thomason, Patricia Bury, Pat Cupoli, Walter Kavaney, Ed Mayer and Don Hoople.

LEADING OPERETTA ROLES. Patricia Bury, left, is cast as Bastienna in Mozart's "Bastien and Bastienna" and Pat Cupoli will sing Brack Weaver in Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" in the Syracuse Operetta productions in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts Friday and Saturday nights.

This date in music: 1846, Richard Wagner begins to bring "Lohengrin" music; 1891, American premiere of Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" in Philadelphia.

Finger Lakes Lyric Circus, a theater-in-the-round in The Tent near Skaneateles, will close its fifth season tonight with a performance of "Plain and Fancy", a pleasing musical presentation featuring Jen Nelson, as an artful comedienne, rather than as a singing star, and David Davis. Other principals: Alfred Medinets, Marlene Cameron, Rita Noble Ray Hyson, Gordon Shearer, Richard Taber, Merle Marcus and Allan Hale. Thomas Phillip Martin is musical director. Show time is 7:30.

The season, although a success in selection and in presentation of shows, has been a trying time to the management—the Davis Family, Walter, Virginia and David—due to the unseasonable weather. Twice it has been necessary to cancel performances due to severe rain storms. Once, the show was stopped due to high winds. Of the seven attractions, all with good music, "The King and I" "Kismet" and "Plain and Fancy" especially won favor. "Naughty Marietta" and "Carousel," favorites of other seasons, were repeated and "Girl Crazy" also had audience appeal. "On the Town" was the show we liked less in the array of music and dance.

[15 +]

Not only women's coiffures but men's beards have been high fashion in The Tent this summer. First, Walter Davis raised a beard for the role of the kindly Captain in "The King and I." Then along came handsome Wilton Clary (soon to leave show business for real estate in the south), to play the bearded Hajj in "Kismet" and finally Alfred Medinets, who raised a jet black beard for "Plain and Fancy". Medinets leaves Skaneatles for New Jersey for an eight weeks engagement continuing the role of Papa Yoder in the Paper Mill Playhouse. The titian-haired Miss Nelson, who has come to The Lyric in all five seasons, returns tomorrow to New York City to begin rehearsals for a coast-to-coast tour with the Cadillac Show. In the Northwest she will visit her family.

Meantime the "Plain and Fancy" songs: "Young and Foolish," "Follow Your Heart" and "Plain We Live" and the comedy lines, plus the Barn Raising scene, are high spots in the final attraction of '56.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, musical director and conductor, having played five concerts in Russia, in a broadened plan, will have time off in Moscow tomorrow, then will fly to Prague for concerts Tuesday and Wednesday, in Smetana Hall. The six-day visit in Russia included programs in Leningrad and in Moscow. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct both concerts in the Czechoslovakian capital.

During the portion of the tour that brought the Orchestra from Boston to Central Europe for the first time, two cellists, Louis Berger, native of Prague, and Josef Zimbler, born in Pilsen, will revisit their homeland for the first time in many years. Bass player Irving Frankel is Austrian-born (in Lemberg) and Bassoonist Ernst Pammenka is a native of Vienna.

At every concert the Boston symphony plays in Europe, during the current tour of 13 countries, a work by a contemporary American composer is featured. Recently the Boston concluded five concerts in the Edinburgh Festival; en route to Russia performed in Denmark, Norway and Sweden. In certain programs, Pierre Monteux conducts. Following the Orchestra's return to the States, at the Syracuse concert Oct. 20, Dr. Munch will conduct. This event is in Famous Artists Series.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Given Great Ovation By Soviet Elite

By B. J. CUTLER

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, making its debut in this capital of communism tonight, scored a tremendous success before a cheering and appreciative audience of Soviet music lovers.

The first American symphony orchestra to appear in Russia, the Boston Symphony, came from a triumph in Leningrad to the Great Hall of the Moscow Conservatory where it played before an alternately rapt and tumultous crowd of some 2000 of Moscow's musical and social elite.

SYMPHONY
Page Eighteen

14

Symphony No. 6, was unfamiliar to the Russians and was not as well received. It had been deliberately placed in the orchestra's repertaire as a taste of modern music from abroad.

The final scheduled number, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2, again a traditional work, brought down the house. As encores, the orchestra played the last movement from Haydn's Symphony No. 102 and part of Schuman's Symphony in C Major Adagio.

Before the performance, David Oistrakh, the Soviet violinist who had appeared with the Boston Symphony last year during his tour of the United States, presented bouquets of flowers to Munch on the stage.

In the audience listening intently and applauding enthusiastically were such greats of the Soviet music world as the pianist Emil Gilels and the composers Dmitri Shostekovich, Aram Khachaturian and Dmitri Kabalevsky. Most of them, with the exception of Shostekovich who was described as too shy, went backstage to congratulate the players.

The orchestra, which opened its Soviet tour in Leningrad Thursday and played there again last night, will complete its stand here tomorrow with two concerts. Pierre Monteux will conduct in the afternoon and Munch in the evening. As the 105-man orchestra reached the midpoint of its visit, made possible in part by subsidy from the United States government, reviews began to appear in the Soviet press testifying to the impact its music had on the critics.

Describing the performance of the Eroica in Leningrad, the local newspaper declared "the conductor, Mr. Munch, made it a magnificent number from his list, etched into the audience's consciousness like a sculptured monument."

The newspaper Sovietskaya Kultura, supreme journalistic authority in things cultural here, said "the conductor and audience were united in a unique artistic upsurge. We were deeply satisfied with this performance."

It was noted by observers, who are more political than musical, that a fine reception for the orchestra fits into the current party line to promote cultural exchanges with capitalist nations. They said the symphony could have been flat as a flounder, which it was not, and still would get rave reviews.

(Boston Globe–N.Y. Herald Tribune)

New England Newsclip
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIch
Sunday He
BOSTON,
Independent Re
Circ. 253

SEP 9

Sympho Triump In Mos

By WELLE
[Boston Herald-N

MOSCOW, S
viet Union's m
the Boston S
tra a tumultu
night culmina
ute standing orchestra ha
cores.

Observers
ton orchestr
Leningrad sa
ous outburst cow's packe passed any had ever e

Stirring

The usu
the Sovie
over the
with Char
Boston m rendition
phony No

Excite
the orch
Sixth sy ton, Ha
professo
cally un develop his tro
ficien

(Con

Over Orchestra

Continued from Front Page

ty ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard university, and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe Suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the Adagio Movement from Schumann's C Major Symphony and the Last Movement from Haydn's B Flat Symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram-News
LYNN, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 23,104

SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Hailed By Soviet Musical Elite

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 — (UP) — A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Betthoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "bravo" and "bis" ("encore").

Eisenhower critizes

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

SEP 9 1956

Triumph Continues

Moscow Audience Shouts Ovation to Hub Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White - haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad.

At the end, the audience shouted repeatedly for more.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 538,979

SEP 9 1956

Hub Symphony Thrills Moscow

MOSCOW (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more last night.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

AUDIENCE SHOUTS

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C Major Symphony and the last movement from Haydn's B Flat Symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

WOMAN APPLAUDED

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the Americans and presented

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751

SEP 9 1956

Munch, Boston Symphony, Big Hit in Moscow

Moscow, Sept. 8 (CTPS),—Beneath the Stars and Stripes and the hammer and sickle the Boston Symphony Orchestra played tonight before a cheering crowd that filled the great Moscow Conservatory.

Conductor Charles Munch responded with two encores when the audience screamed in English for "more."

Munch was brought back four and five times after each number and then the crowd applauded in rhythmic beats as ball fans do when they call for a home run.

New Piston Work Played

The new American work, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, was exceptionally well received. Piston wrote it especially for the orchestra's 75th anniversary this year.

After the concert Munch received congratulations from composer Dimitri Shostakovitch, pianist Aren Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh.

The orchestra will give its final Moscow concert tomorrow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,155

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Wins Moscow Praise

Boston Orchestra Is Lauded by Critics

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP) — A first-night audience which in-

New Bedford's Finest Store

—and most female — self. and flatters your figure, detail in its satin and braid "Kittens Ear" from Belgium ts fur content. Black, Brown

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,243

SEP 9 1956

Music

Central Staging in Operettas Sept. 14-15

By E. V. W.

Two operettas will be presented by the Syracuse Operetta Company in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts next Friday and Saturday nights. They are Mozart's pastoral comedy, "Bastien and Bastienna," chosen in deference to general observation of the Mozart Bicentennial Year, and Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley."

This will mark the Operetta Company's first attempt at use of both the Stage and part of the main floor staging of the Museum Auditorium as areas of action. Mrs. Phyllis Divers is piano accompanist. Dramatic director is James Carrington, musical director is Donald White. Among those in principal roles in the operettas are Nellie Maynard, Richard Thomason, Patricia Bury, Pat Cupoli, Walter Kavaney, Ed Mayer and Don Hoople.

LEADING OPERETTA ROLES. Patricia Bury, left, is cast as Bastienna in Mozart's "Bastien and Bastienna" and Pat Cupoli will sing Brack Weaver in Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" in the Syracuse Operetta productions in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts Friday and Saturday nights.

This date in music: 1846, Richard Wagner begins to bring "Lohengrin" music; 1891, American premiere of Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" in Philadelphia.

Finger Lakes Lyric Circus, a theater-in-the-round in The Tent near Skaneateles, will close its fifth season tonight with a performance of "Plain and Fancy", a pleasing musical presentation featuring Jen Nelson, as an artful comedienne, rather than as a singing star, and David Davis. Other principals: Alfred Medinets, Marlene Cameron, Rita Noble Ray Hyson, Gordon Shearer, Richard Taber, Merle Marcus and Allan Hale. Thomas Phillip Martin is musical director. Show time is 7:30.

The season, although a success in selection and in presentation of shows, has been a trying time to the management—the Davis Family, Walter, Virginia and David —due to the unseasonable weather. Twice it has been necessary to cancel performances due to severe rain storms. Once, the show was stopped due to high winds. Of the seven attractions, all with good music, "The King and I" "Kismet" and "Plain and Fancy" especially won favor. "Naughty Marietta" and "Carousel," favorites of other seasons, were repeated and "Girl Crazy" also had audience appeal. "On the Town" was the show we liked less in the array of music and dance.

[157]

Not only women's coiffures but men's beards have been high fashion in The Tent this summer. First, Walter Davis raised a beard for the role of the kindly Captain in "The King and I." Then along came handsome Wilton Clary (soon to leave show business for real estate in the south), to play the bearded Hajj in "Kismet" and finally Alfred Medinets, who raised a jet black beard for "Plain and Fancy". Medinets leaves Skaneatles for New Jersey for an eight weeks engagement continuing the role of Papa Yoder in the Paper Mill Playhouse. The titian-haired Miss Nelson, who has come to The Lyric in all five seasons, returns tomorrow to New York City to begin rehearsals for a coast-to-coast tour with the Cadillac Show. In the Northwest she will visit her family.

Meantime the "Plain and Fancy" songs: "Young and Foolish," "Follow Your Heart" and "Plain We Live" and the comedy lines, plus the Barn Raising scene, are high spots in the final attraction of '56.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, musical director and conductor, having played five concerts in Russia, in a broadened plan, will have time off in Moscow tomorrow, then will fly to Prague for concerts Tuesday and Wednesday, in Smetana Hall. The six-day visit in Russia included programs in Leningrad and in Moscow. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct both concerts in the Czechoslovakian capital.

During the portion of the tour that brought the Orchestra from Boston to Central Europe for the first time, two cellists, Louis Berger, native of Prague, and Josef Zimbler, born in Pilsen, will revisit their homeland for the first time in many years. Bass player Irving Frankel is Austrian-born (in Lemberg) and Bassoonist Ernst Pammenka is a native of Vienna.

At every concert the Boston symphony plays in Europe, during the current tour of 13 countries, a work by a contemporary American composer is featured. Recently the Boston concluded five concerts in the Edinburgh Festival; en route to Russia performed in Denmark, Norway and Sweden. In certain programs, Pierre Monteux conducts. Following the Orchestra's return to the States, at the Syracuse concert Oct. 20, Dr. Munch will conduct. This event is in Famous Artists Series.

FABULOUS
for connoisseur
another sensational
FROM A WORLD

For 48 years we've been hitting world headlines with famous store stocks—now

---

tradition rarely plays, met the applause of its Russian audience with an unprecedented two additional numbers. In his dressing room after the concert, Munch attributed the departure from custom to the stirring reception.

Munch said both he and the orchestra had been willing to carry on further but were stopped by fatigue from their rigorous schedule here and the fact tha ttwo additional concerts are scheduled tomorrow.

The audience, which earlier this week had stood in line for up to 12 hours to pay up to 40 rubles ($10 at the official rate of exchange) gave a tremendous reception to the orchestra's playing of Beethoven's Symphony Number Three, the Eroica.

Introduction to Piston

The second part of the program, the American Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, was unfamiliar to the Russians and was not as well received. It had been deliberately placed in the orchestra's repertaire as a taste of modern music from abroad.

The final scheduled number, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2, again a traditional work, brought down the house. As encores, the orchestra played the last movement from Haydn's Symphony No. 102 and part of Schuman's Symphony in C Major Adagio.

Before the performance, David Oistrakh, the Soviet violinist who had appeared with the Boston Symphony last year during his tour of the United States, presented bouquets of flowers to Munch on the stage.

In the audience listening intently and appluading enthusiastically were such greats of the Soviet music world as the pianist Emil Gilels and the composers Dmitri Shostekovich, Aram Khachaturian and Dmitri Kabalevsky. Most of them, with the exception of Shostekovich who was described as too shy, went backstage to congratulate the players.

The orchestra, which opened its Soviet tour in Leningrad Thursday and played there again last night, will complete its stand here tomorrow with two concerts. Pierre Monteux will conduct in the afternoon and Munch in the evening. As the 105-man orchestra reached the midpoint of its visit, made possible in part by subsidy from the United States government, reviews began to appear in the Soviet press testifying to the impact its music had on the critics.

Describing the performance of the Eroica in Leningrad, the local newspaper declared "the conductor, Mr. Munch, made it a magnificent number from his list, etched into the audience's consciousness like a sculptured monument."

The newspaper Sovietskaya Kultura, supreme journalistic authority in things cultural here, said "the conductor and audience were united in a unique artistic upsurge. We were deeply satisfied with this performance."

It was noted by observers, who are more political than musical, that a fine reception for the orchestra fits into the current party line to promote cultural exchanges with capitalist nations. They said the symphony could have been flat as a flounder, which it was not, and still would get rave reviews.

(Boston Globe–N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Over Orchestra

Continued from Front Page

ty ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard university, and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe Suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the Adagio Movement from Schumann's C Major Symphony and the Last Movement from Haydn's B Flat Symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,155

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Wins Moscow Praise

Boston Orchestra Is Lauded by Critics

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP) — A first-night audience which included some of Russias' foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soivet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

Applause is Thunderous

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "Bravo" and "Bis" ("encore").

The orchestra responded by playing two encores—Adagio in C major of the Schuman Symphony and the last movement of the Haydn B-flat Symphony.

Oistrakh, who was a guest soloist for the Boston Symphony last year, said, "It was a magnificent performance."

"I wish we had more like it," he said.

The orchestra will play two more concerts here tomorrow. All tickets for the concerts were sold out weeks ago. There were reports that some music-lovers were offering as much as 10 times the box-office price for tickets.

Americans Attend

American Charge D'Affaires Newbold Walmsley Jr. and virtually the entire American diplomatic corps and colony attended tonight's performance in the great hall of the Moscow Conservatory.

The stage was decorated with the flags of the United States and the Soviet Union and the concert was opened by the symphony's playing the national anthems of both nations.

Members of the orchestra, which has been on tour of the European capitals this Summer, said they had never received such an enthusiastic reception before. They opened their tour of Soviet Russia Thursday at Leningrad and won sustained applause. The next stop for the symphony is Prague, Czechvolsovakia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram-News
LYNN, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 23,104

SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Hailed By Soviet Musical Elite

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 — (UP) — A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Betthoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "bravo" and "bis" ("encore").

Eisenhower critizes

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,243

SEP 9 1956

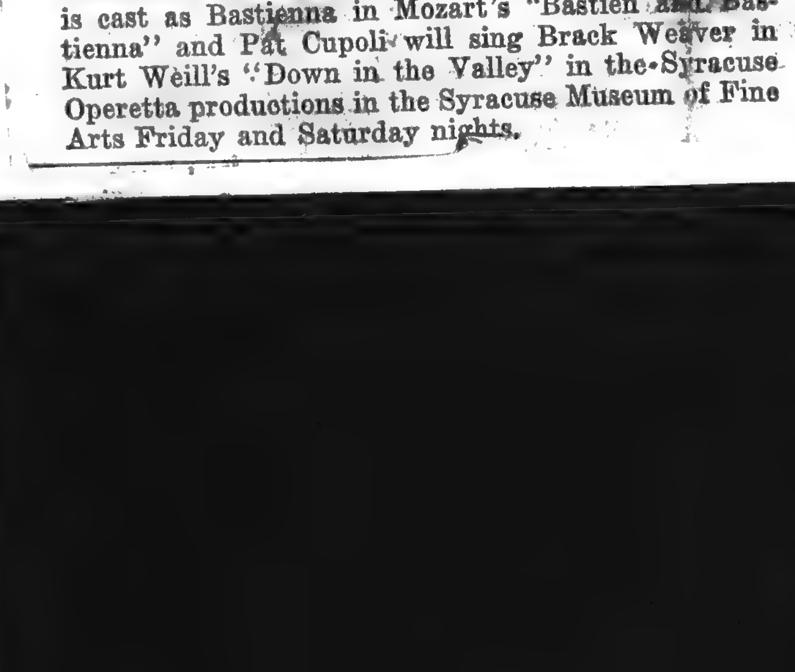
Music

Central Staging in Operettas Sept. 14-15

By E. V. W.

Two operettas will be presented by the Syracuse Operetta Company in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts next Friday and Saturday nights. They are Mozart's pastoral comedy, "Bastien and Bastienna," chosen in deference to general observation of the Mozart Bicentennial Year, and Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley."

This will mark the Operetta Company's first attempt at use of both the Stage and part of the main floor staging of the Museum Auditorium as areas of action. Mrs. Phyllis Divers is piano accompanist. Dramatic director is James Carrington, musical director is Donald White. Among those in principal roles in the operettas are Nellie Maynard, Richard Thomason, Patricia Bury, Pat Cupoli, Walter Kavaney, Ed Mayer and Don Hoople.



LEADING OPERETTA ROLES. Patricia Bury, left, is cast as Bastienna in Mozart's "Bastien and Bastienna" and Pat Cupoli will sing Brack Weaver in Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" in the Syracuse Operetta productions in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts Friday and Saturday nights.

This date in music: 1846, Richard Wagner begins to bring "Lohengrin" music; 1891, American premiere of Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" in Philadelphia.

Finger Lakes Lyric Circus, a theater-in-the-round in The Tent near Skaneateles, will close its fifth season tonight with a performance of "Plain and Fancy", a pleasing musical presentation featuring Jen Nelson, as an artful comedienne, rather than as a singing star, and David Davis. Other principals: Alfred Medinets, Marlene Cameron, Rita Noble Ray Hyson, Gordon Shearer, Richard Taber, Merle Marcus and Allan Hale. Thomas Phillip Martin is musical director. Show time is 7:30.

The season, although a success in selection and in presentation of shows, has been a trying time to the management—the Davis Family, Walter, Virginia and David—due to the unseasonable weather. Twice it has been necessary to cancel performances due to severe rain storms. Once, the show was stopped due to high winds. Of the seven attractions, all with good music, "The King and I" "Kismet" and "Plain and Fancy" especially won favor. "Naughty Marietta" and "Carousel," favorites of other seasons, were repeated and "Girl Crazy" also had audience appeal. "On the Town" was the show we liked less in the array of music and dance.

Not only women's coiffures but men's beards have been high fashion in The Tent this summer. First, Walter Davis raised a beard for the role of the kindly Captain in "The King and I." Then along came handsome Wilton Clary (soon to leave show business for real estate in the south), to play the bearded Hajj in "Kismet" and finally Alfred Medinets, who raised a jet black beard for "Plain and Fancy". Medinets leaves Skaneatles for New Jersey for an eight weeks engagement continuing the role of Papa Yoder in the Paper Mill Playhouse. The titian-haired Miss Nelson, who has come to The Lyric in all five seasons, returns tomorrow to New York City to begin rehearsals for a coast-to-coast tour with the Cadillac Show. In the Northwest she will visit her family.

Meantime the "Plain and Fancy" songs: "Young and Foolish," "Follow Your Heart" and "Plain We Live" and the comedy lines, plus the Barn Raising scene, are high spots in the final attraction of '56.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, musical director and conductor, having played five concerts in Russia, in a broadened plan, will have time off in Moscow tomorrow, then will fly to Prague for concerts Tuesday and Wednesday, in Smetana Hall. The six-day visit in Russia included programs in Leningrad and in Moscow. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct both concerts in the Czechoslovakian capital.

During the portion of the tour that brought the Orchestra from Boston to Central Europe for the first time, two cellists, Louis Bergèr, native of Prague, and Josef Zimbler, born in Pilsen, will revisit their homeland for the first time in many years. Bass player Irving Frankel is Austrian-born (in Lemberg) and Bassoonist Ernst Pammenka is a native of Vienna.

At every concert the Boston symphony plays in Europe, during the current tour of 13 countries, a work by a contemporary American composer is featured. Recently the Boston concluded five concerts in the Edinburgh Festival; en route to Russia performed in Denmark, Norway and Sweden. In certain programs, Pierre Monteux conducts. Following the Orchestra's return to the States, at the Syracuse concert Oct. 20, Dr. Munch will conduct. This event is in Famous Artists Series.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

SEP 9 1956

Triumph Continues

Moscow Audience Shouts Ovation to Hub Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad.

At the end, the audience shouted repeatedly for more.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 538,979

SEP 9 1956

Hub Symphony Thrills Moscow

MOSCOW (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more last night.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

AUDIENCE SHOUTS

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica symphony. the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University. and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C Major Symphony and the last movement from Haydn's B Flat Symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

WOMAN APPLAUDED

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last yea[illegible] An[illegible] ed

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1838
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751

SEP 9 1956

Munch, Boston Symphony, Big Hit in Moscow

Moscow, Sept. 8 (CTPS),—Beneath the Stars and Stripes and the hammer and sickle the Boston Symphony Orchestra played tonight before a cheering crowd that filled the great Moscow Conservatory.

Conductor Charles Munch responded with two encores when the audience screamed in English for "more."

Munch was brought back four and five times after each number and then the crowd applauded in rhythmic beats as ball fans do when they call for a home run.

New Piston Work Played

The new American work, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, was exceptionally well received. Piston wrote it especially for the orchestra's 75th anniversary this year.

After the concert Munch received congratulations from composer Dimitri Shostakovitch, pianist Aren Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh.

The orchestra will give its final Moscow concert tomorrow.

FROM \ WORLD
another sensational
for connoisseur
FABULOUS
For 48 years we've been hitting world headlines with famous store stocks—now

tradition rarely plays [illegible] met the applause of its Russian audience with an unprecedented two additional numbers. In his dressing room after the concert, Munch attributed the departure from custom to the stirring reception.

Munch said both he and the orchestra had been willing to carry on further but were stopped by fatigue from their rigorous schedule here and the fact tha ttwo additional concerts are scheduled tomorrow.

The audience, which earlier this week had stood in line for up to 12 hours to pay up to 40 rubles ($10 at the official rate of exchange) gave a tremendous reception to the orchestra's playing of Beethoven's Symphony Number Three, the Eroica.

Introduction to [illegible]

The second part of the program, the American Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, was unfamiliar to the Russians and was not as well received. It had been deliberately placed in the orchestra's repertaire as a taste of modern music from abroad.

The final scheduled number, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2, again a traditional work, brought down the house. As encores, the orchestra played the last movement from Haydn's Symphony No. 102 and part of Schuman's Symphony in C Major Adagio.

Before the performance, David Oistrakh, the Soviet violinist who had appeared with the Boston Symphony last year during his tour of the United States, presented bouquets of flowers to Munch on the stage.

In the audience listening intently and appluading enthusiastically were such greats of the Soviet music world as the pianist Emil Gilels and the composers Dmitri Shostekovich, Aram Khachaturian and Dmitri Kabalevsky. Most of them, with the exception of Shostekovich who was described as too shy, went backstage to congratulate the players.

The orchestra, which opened its Soviet tour in Leningrad Thursday and played there again last night, will complete its stand here tomorrow with two concerts. Pierre Monteux will conduct in the afternoon and Munch in the evening. As the 105-man orchestra reached the midpoint of its visit, made possible in part by subsidy from the United States government, reviews began to appear in the Soviet press testifying to the impact its music had on the critics.

Describing the performance of the Eroica in Leningrad, the local newspaper declared "the conductor, Mr. Munch, made it a magnificent number from his list, etched into the audience's consciousness like a sculptured monument."

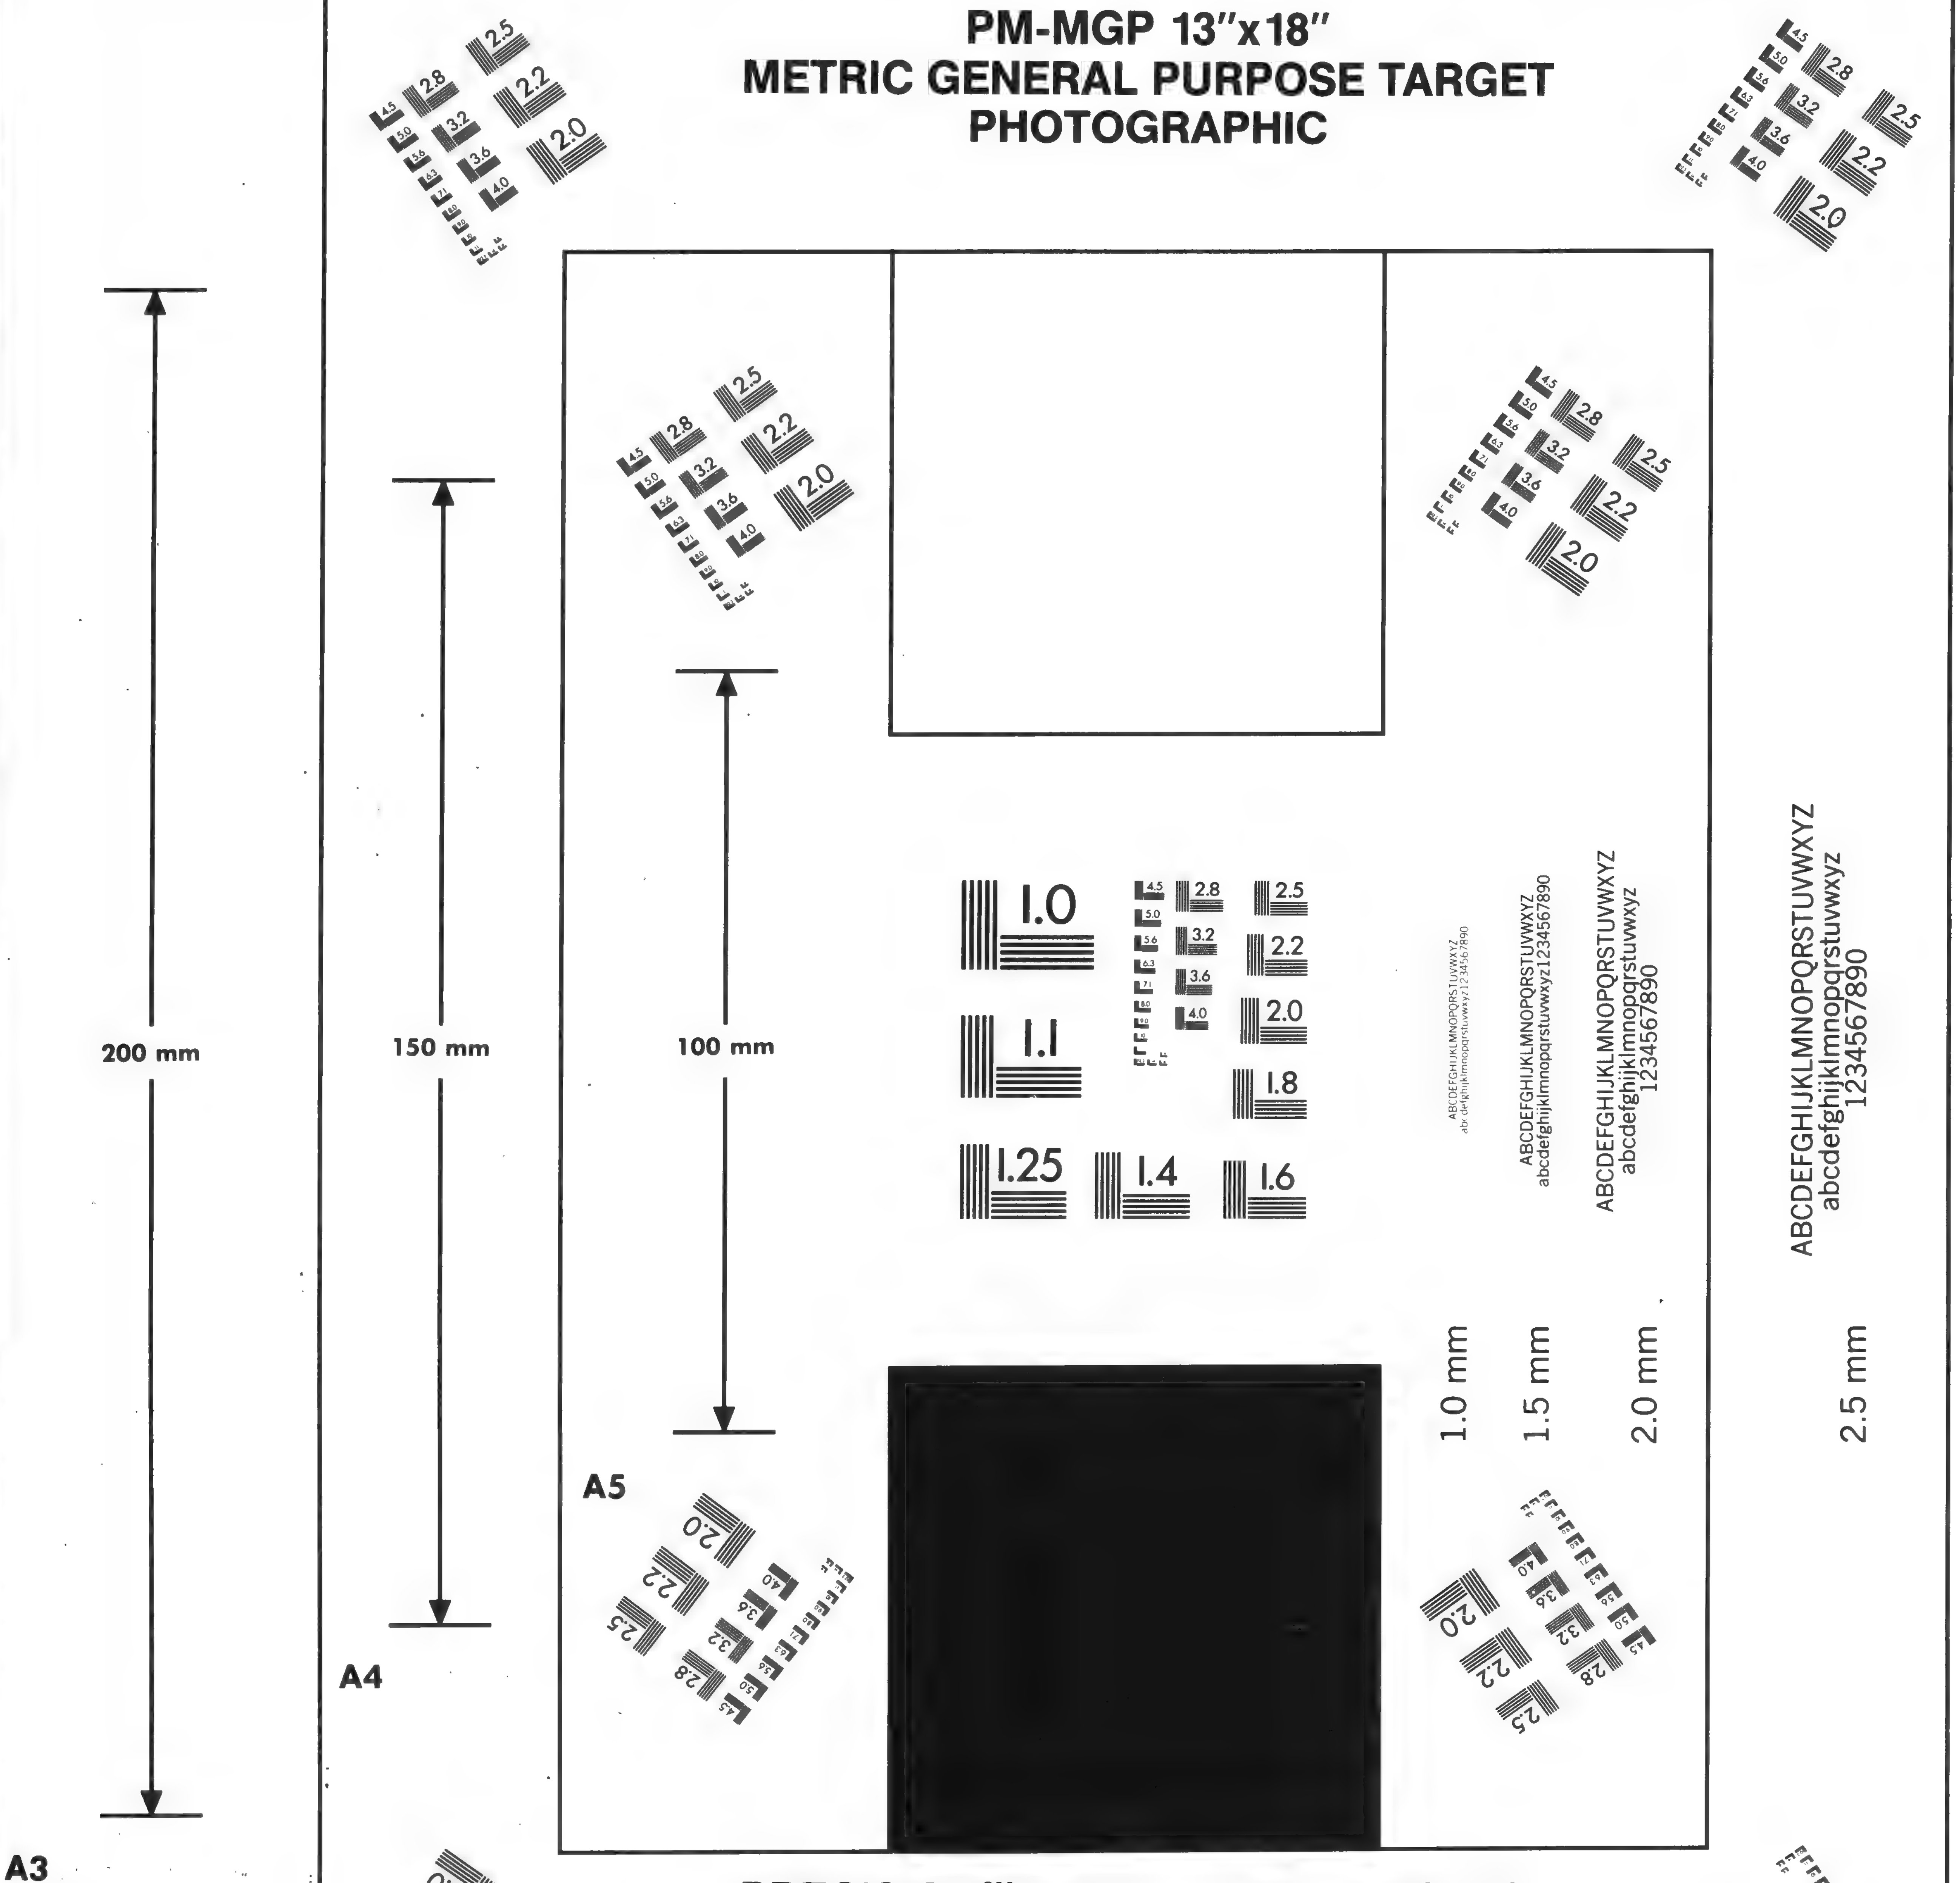
The newspaper Sovietskaya Kultura, supreme journalistic authority in things cultural here, said "the conductor and audience were united in a unique artistic upsurge. We were deeply satisfied with this performance."

It was noted by observers, who are more political than musical, that a fine reception for the orchestra fits into the current party line to promote cultural exchanges with capitalist nations. They said the symphony could have been flat as a flounder, which it was not, and still would get rave reviews.

(Boston Globe–N.Y. Herald Tribune)

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
5.0
5.6
3.2
3.6
4.0
2.0
200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
A5
A4
A3
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ

New England Newsclip Agenc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond
Sunday Sun
LOWELL, Mass
Independent
Circ. 28,774

SEP 9 1956

Moscow Raves Over Boston Symphonians

First of Three Concerts Proves Outstanding Success

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Boston symphony orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of depu-

Continued on Page Eleven

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,155

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Wins Moscow Praise

Boston Orchestra Is Lauded by Critics

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP) — A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical élite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soivet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

Applause is Thunderous

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "Bravo" and "Bis" ("encore").

The orchestra responded by playing two encores—Adagio in C major of the Schuman Symphony and the last movement of the Haydn B-flat Symphony.

Oistrakh, who was a guest soloist for the Boston Symphony last year, said, "It was a magnificent performance."

"I wish we had more like it," he said.

The orchestra will play two more concerts here tomorrow. All tickets for the concerts were sold out weeks ago. There were reports that some music-lovers were offering as much as 10 times the box-office price for tickets.

Americans Attend

American Charge D'Affaires Newbold Walmsley Jr. and virtually the entire American diplomatic corps and colony attended tonight's performance in the great hall of the Moscow Conservatory.

The stage was decorated with the flags of the United States and the Soviet Union and the concert was opened by the symphony's playing the national anthems of both nations.

Members of the orchestra, which has been on tour of the European capitals this Summer, said they had never received such an enthusiastic reception before. They opened their tour of Soviet Russia Thursday at Leningrad and won sustained applause. The next stop for the symphony is Prague, Czechvolsovakia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Telegram-News
LYNN, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 23,104

SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Hailed By Soviet Musical Elite

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 — (UP) — A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Betthoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "bravo" and "bis" ("encore").

Eisenhower critizes.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

SEP 9 1956

Triumph Continues

Moscow Audience Shouts Ovation to Hub Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White - haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad.

At the end, the audience shouted repeatedly for more.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751

SEP 9 1956

Munch, Boston Symphony, Big Hit in Moscow

Moscow, Sept. 8 (CTPS). — Beneath the Stars and Stripes and the hammer and sickle the Boston Symphony Orchestra played tonight before a cheering crowd that filled the great Moscow Conservatory.

Conductor Charles Munch responded with two encores when the audience screamed in English for "more."

Munch was brought back four and five times after each number and then the crowd applauded in rhythmic beats as ball fans do when they call for a home run.

New Piston Work Played

The new American work, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, was exceptionally well received. Piston wrote it especially for the orchestra's 75th anniversary this year.

After the concert Munch received congratulations from composer Dimitri Shostakovitch, pianist Aren Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh.

The orchestra will give its final Moscow concert tomorrow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 538,979

SEP 9 1956

Hub Symphony Thrills Moscow

MOSCOW (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more last night.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

AUDIENCE SHOUTS

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C Major Symphony and the last movement from Haydn's B Flat Symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

WOMAN APPLAUDED

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,243

SEP 9 1956

Music

Central Staging in Operettas Sept. 14-15

By E. V. W.

Two operettas will be presented by the Syracuse Operetta Company in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts next Friday and Saturday nights. They are Mozart's pastoral comedy, "Bastien and Bastienna," chosen in deference to general observation of the Mozart Bicentennial Year, and Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley."

This will mark the Operetta Company's first attempt at use of both the Stage and part of the main floor staging of the Museum Auditorium as areas of action. Mrs. Phyllis Divers is piano accompanist. Dramatic director is James Carrington, musical director is Donald White. Among those in principal roles in the operettas are Nellie Maynard, Richard Thomason, Patricia Bury, Pat Cupoli, Walter Kavaney, Ed Mayer and Don Hoople.

LEADING OPERETTA ROLES. Patricia Bury, left, is cast as Bastienna in Mozart's "Bastien and Bastienna" and Pat Cupoli will sing Brack Weaver in Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" in the Syracuse Operetta productions in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts Friday and Saturday nights.

This date in music: 1846, Richard Wagner begins to bring "Lohengrin" music; 1891, American premiere of Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" in Philadelphia.

Finger Lakes Lyric Circus, a theater-in-the-round in The Tent near Skaneateles, will close its fifth season tonight with a performance of "Plain and Fancy", a pleasing musical presentation featuring Jen Nelson, as an artful comedienne, rather than as a singing star, and David Davis. Other principals: Alfred Medinets, Marlene Cameron, Rita Noble Ray Hyson, Gordon Shearer, Richard Taber, Merle Marcus and Allan Hale. Thomas Phillip Martin is musical director. Show time is 7:30.

The season, although a success in selection and in presentation of shows, has been a trying time to the management—the Davis Family, Walter, Virginia and David—due to the unseasonable weather. Twice it has been necessary to cancel performances due to severe rain storms. Once, the show was stopped due to high winds. Of the seven attractions, all with good music, "The King and I" "Kismet" and "Plain and Fancy" especially won favor. "Naughty Marietta" and "Carousel," favorites of other seasons, were repeated and "Girl Crazy" also had audience appeal. "On the Town" was the show we liked less in the array of music and dance.

Not only women's coiffures but men's beards have been high fashion in The Tent this summer. First, Walter Davis raised a beard for the role of the kindly Captain in "The King and I." Then along came handsome Wilton Clary (soon to leave show business for real estate in the south), to play the bearded Hajj in "Kismet" and finally Alfred Medinets, who raised a jet black beard for "Plain and Fancy". Medinets leaves Skaneatles for New Jersey for an eight weeks engagement continuing the role of Papa Yoder in the Paper Mill Playhouse. The titian-haired Miss Nelson, who has come to The Lyric in all five seasons, returns tomorrow to New York City to begin rehearsals for a coast-to-coast tour with the Cadillac Show. In the Northwest she will visit her family.

Meantime the "Plain and Fancy" songs: "Young and Foolish," "Follow Your Heart" and "Plain We Live" and the comedy lines, plus the Barn Raising scene, are high spots in the final attraction of '56.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, musical director and conductor, having played five concerts in Russia, in a broadened plan, will have time off in Moscow tomorrow, then will fly to Prague for concerts Tuesday and Wednesday, in Smetana Hall. The six-day visit in Russia included programs in Leningrad and in Moscow. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct both concerts in the Czechoslovakian capital.

During the portion of the tour

[157]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Given Great Ovation By Soviet Elite

By B. J. CUTLER

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, making its debut in this capital of communism tonight, scored a tremendous success before a cheering and appreciative audience of Soviet music lovers.

The first American symphony orchestra to appear in Russia, the Boston Symphony, came from a triumph in Leningrad to the Great Hall of the Moscow Conservatory where it played before an alternately rapt and tumultous crowd of some 2000 of Moscow's musical and social elite.

SYMPHONY
Page Eighteen

14

Symphony No. 6, was unfamiliar to the Russians and was not as well received. It had been deliberately placed in the orchestra's repertaire as a taste of modern music from abroad.

The final scheduled number, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2, again a traditional work, brought down the house. As encores, the orchestra played the last movement from Haydn's Symphony No. 102 and part of Schuman's Symphony in C Major Adagio.

Before the performance, David Oistrakh, the Soviet violinist who had appeared with the Boston Symphony last year during his tour of the United States, presented bouquets of flowers to Munch on the stage.

In the audience listening intently and appluading enthusiastically were such greats of the Soviet music world as the pianist Emil Gilels and the composers Dmitri Shostekovich, Aram Khachaturian and Dmitri Kabalevsky. Most of them, with the exception of Shostekovich who was described as too shy, went backstage to congratulate the players.

The orchestra, which opened its Soviet tour in Leningrad Thursday and played there again last night, will complete its stand here tomorrow with two concerts. Pierre Monteux will conduct in the afternoon and Munch in the evening. As the 105-man orchestra reached the midpoint of its visit, made possible in part by subsidy from the United States government, reviews began to appear in the Soviet press testifying to the impact its music had on the critics.

Describing the performance of the Eroica in Leningrad, the local newspaper declared "the conductor, Mr. Munch, made it a magnificent number from his list, etched into the audience's consciousness like a sculptured monument."

The newspaper Sovietskaya Kultura, supreme journalistic authority in things cultural here, said "the conductor and audience were united in a unique artistic upsurge. We were deeply satisfied with this performance."

It was noted by observers, who are more political than musical, that a fine reception for the orchestra fits into the current party line to promote cultural exchanges with capitalist nations.

ıcy, Inc. New England Newsclip Agenc
d 2-4200 Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond

Sunday Sun
LOWELL, Mass
Independent
Circ. 28,774

SEP 9 1956

Moscow Raves Over Boston Symphonians

First of Three Concerts Proves Outstanding Success

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Boston symphony orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of depu-

Continued on Page Eleven

Before leading the

from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram-News
LYNN, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 23,104

SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Hailed By Soviet Musical Elite

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 — (UP) — A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Betthoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "bravo" and "bis" ("encore").

Eisenhower critizes

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

SEP 9 1956

Triumph Continues

Moscow Audience Shouts Ovation to Hub Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White - haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad.

At the end, the audience shouted repeatedly for more.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1838
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751

SEP 9 1956

Munch, Boston Symphony, Big Hit in Moscow

Moscow, Sept. 8 (CTPS).—Beneath the Stars and Stripes and the hammer and sickle the Boston Symphony Orchestra played tonight before a cheering crowd that filled the great Moscow Conservatory.

Conductor Charles Munch responded with two encores when the audience screamed in English for "more."

Munch was brought back four and five times after each number and then the crowd applauded in rhythmic beats as ball fans do when they call for a home run.

New Piston Work Played

The new American work, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, was exceptionally well received. Piston wrote it especially for the orchestra's 75th anniversary this year.

After the concert Munch received congratulations from composer Dimitri Shostakovitch, pianist Aren Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh.

The orchestra will give its final Moscow concert tomorrow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 538,979

SEP 9 1956

Hub Symphony Thrills Moscow

MOSCOW (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more last night.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

AUDIENCE SHOUTS

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C Major Symphony and the last movement from Haydn's B Flat Symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

WOMAN APPLAUDED

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,155

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Wins Moscow Praise

Boston Orchestra Is Lauded by Critics

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP) — A first-night audience which included some of Russias' foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soivet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

Applause is Thunderous

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "Bravo" and "Bis" ("encore").

The orchestra responded by playing two encores—Adagio in C major of the Schuman Symphony and the last movement of the Haydn B-flat Symphony.

Oistrakh, who was a guest soloist for the Boston Symphony last year, said, "It was a magnificent performance."

"I wish we had more like it," he said.

The orchestra will play two more concerts here tomorrow. All tickets for the concerts were sold out weeks ago. There were reports that some music-lovers were offering as much as 10 times the box-office price for tickets.

Americans Attend

American Charge D'Affaires Newbold Walmsley Jr. and virtually the entire American diplomatic corps and colony attended tonight's performance in the great hall of the Moscow Conservatory.

The stage was decorated with the flags of the United States and the Soviet Union and the concert was opened by the symphony's playing the national anthems of both nations.

Members of the orchestra, which has been on tour of the European capitals this Summer, said they had never received such an enthusiastic reception before. They opened their tour of Soviet Russia Thursday at Leningrad and won sustained applause. The next stop for the symphony is Prague, Czechvolsovakia.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,243

SEP 9 1956

Music

Central Staging in Operettas Sept. 14-15

By E. V. W.

Two operettas will be presented by the Syracuse Operetta Company in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts next Friday and Saturday nights. They are Mozart's pastoral comedy, "Bastien and Bastienna," chosen in deference to general observation of the Mozart Bicentennial Year, and Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley."

This will mark the Operetta Company's first attempt at use of both the Stage and part of the main floor staging of the Museum Auditorium as areas of action. Mrs. Phyllis Divers is piano accompanist. Dramatic director is James Carrington, musical director is Donald White. Among those in principal roles in the operettas are Nellie Maynard, Richard Thomason, Patricia Bury, Pat Cupoli, Walter Kavaney, Ed Mayer and Don Hoople.

LEADING OPERETTA ROLES. Patricia Bury, left, is cast as Bastienna in Mozart's "Bastien and Bastienna" and Pat Cupoli will sing Brack Weaver in Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" in the Syracuse Operetta productions in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts Friday and Saturday nights.

This date in music: 1846, Richard Wagner begins to bring "Lohengrin" music; 1891, American premiere of Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" in Philadelphia.

Finger Lakes Lyric Circus, a theater-in-the-round in The Tent near Skaneateles, will close its fifth season tonight with a performance of "Plain and Fancy", a pleasing musical presentation featuring Jen Nelson, as an artful comedienne, rather than as a singing star, and David Davis. Other principals: Alfred Medinets, Marlene Cameron, Rita Noble Ray Hyson, Gordon Shearer, Richard Taber, Merle Marcus and Allan Hale. Thomas Phillip Martin is musical director. Show time is 7:30.

The season, although a success in selection and in presentation of shows, has been a trying time to the management—the Davis Family, Walter, Virginia and David—due to the unseasonable weather. Twice it has been necessary to cancel performances due to severe rain storms. Once, the show was stopped due to high winds. Of the seven attractions, all with good music, "The King and I" "Kismet" and "Plain and Fancy" especially won favor. "Naughty Marietta" and "Carousel," favorites of other seasons, were repeated and "Girl Crazy" also had audience appeal. "On the Town" was the show we liked less in the array of music and dance.

[15 +]

Not only women's coiffures but men's beards have been high fashion in The Tent this summer. First, Walter Davis raised a beard for the role of the kindly Captain in "The King and I." Then along came handsome Wilton Clary (soon to leave show business for real estate in the south), to play the bearded Hajj in "Kismet" and finally Alfred Medinets, who raised a jet black beard for "Plain and Fancy". Medinets leaves Skaneatles for New Jersey for an eight weeks engagement continuing the role of Papa Yoder in the Paper Mill Playhouse. The titian-haired Miss Nelson, who has come to The Lyric in all five seasons, returns tomorrow to New York City to begin rehearsals for a coast-to-coast tour with the Cadillac Show. In the Northwest she will visit her family.

Meantime the "Plain and Fancy" songs: "Young and Foolish," "Follow Your Heart" and "Plain We Live" and the comedy lines, plus the Barn Raising scene, are high spots in the final attraction of '56.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, musical director and conductor, having played five concerts in Russia, in a broadened plan, will have time off in Moscow tomorrow, then will fly to Prague for concerts Tuesday and Wednesday, in Smetana Hall. The six-day visit in Russia included programs in Leningrad and in Moscow. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct both concerts in the Czechoslovakian capital.

During the portion of the tour

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Given Great Ovation By Soviet Elite

By B. J. CUTLER

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, making its debut in this capital of communism tonight, scored a tremendous success before a cheering and appreciative audience of Soviet music lovers.

The first American symphony orchestra to appear in Russia, the Boston Symphony, came from a triumph in Leningrad to the Great Hall of the Moscow Conservatory where it played before an alternately rapt and tumultous crowd of some 2000 of Moscow's musical and social elite.

SYMPHONY
Page Eighteen

14

Symphony No. 6, was unfamiliar to the Russians and was not as well received. It had been deliberately placed in the orchestra's repertaire as a taste of modern music from abroad.

The final scheduled number, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2, again a traditional work, brought down the house. As encores, the orchestra played the last movement from Haydn's Symphony No. 102 and part of Schuman's Symphony in C Major Adagio.

Before the performance, David Oistrakh, the Soviet violinist who had appeared with the Boston Symphony last year during his tour of the United States, presented bouquets of flowers to Munch on the stage.

In the audience listening intently and appluading enthusiastically were such greats of the Soviet music world as the pianist Emil Gilels and the composers Dmitri Shostekovich, Aram Khachaturian and Dmitri Kabalevsky. Most of them, with the exception of Shostekovich who was described as too shy, went backstage to congratulate the players.

The orchestra, which opened its Soviet tour in Leningrad Thursday and played there again last night, will complete its stand here tomorrow with two concerts. Pierre Monteux will conduct in the afternoon and Munch in the evening. As the 105-man orchestra reached the midpoint of its visit, made possible in part by subsidy from the United States government, reviews began to appear in the Soviet press testifying to the impact its music had on the critics.

Describing the performance of the Eroica in Leningrad, the local newspaper declared "the conductor, Mr. Munch, made it a magnificent number from his list, etched into the audience's consciousness like a sculptured monument."

The newspaper Sovietskaya Kultura, supreme journalistic authority in things cultural here, said "the conductor and audience were united in a unique artistic upsurge. We were deeply satisfied with this performance."

It was noted by observers, who are more political than musical, that a fine reception for the orchestra fits into the current party line to promote cultural exchanges with capitalist nations.

Over Orchestra

Continued from Front Page

ty ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard university, and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe Suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the Adagio Movement from Schumann's C Major Symphony and the Last Movement from Haydn's B Flat Symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,155

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Wins Moscow Praise

Boston Orchestra Is Lauded by Critics

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP) — A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soivet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

Applause is Thunderous

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "Bravo" and "Bis" ("encore").

The orchestra responded by playing two encores—Adagio in C major of the Schuman Symphony and the last movement of the Haydn B-flat Symphony.

Oistrakh, who was a guest soloist for the Boston Symphony last year, said, "It was a magnificent performance."

"I wish we had more like it," he said.

The orchestra will play two more concerts here tomorrow. All tickets for the concerts were sold out weeks ago. There were reports that some music-lovers were offering as much as 10 times the box-office price for tickets.

Americans Attend

American Charge D'Affaires Newbold Walmsley Jr. and virtually the entire American diplomatic corps and colony attended tonight's performance in the great hall of the Moscow Conservatory.

The stage was decorated with the flags of the United States and the Soviet Union and the concert was opened by the symphony's playing the national anthems of both nations.

Members of the orchestra, which has been on tour of the European capitals this Summer, said they had never received such an enthusiastic reception before. They opened their tour of Soviet Russia Thursday at Leningrad and won sustained applause. The next stop for the symphony is Prague, Czechvolsovakia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram-News
LYNN, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 23,104

SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Hailed By Soviet Musical Elite

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 — (UP) — A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Betthoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "bravo" and "bis" ("encore").

Eisenhower critizes

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

SEP 9 1956

Triumph Continues

Moscow Audience Shouts Ovation to Hub Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad.

At the end, the audience shouted repeatedly for more.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 538,979

SEP 9 1956

Hub Symphony Thrills Moscow

MOSCOW (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more last night.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

AUDIENCE SHOUTS

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C Major Symphony and the last movement from Haydn's B Flat Symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

WOMAN APPLAUDED

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last yea[illegible] An[illegible] ed [illegible]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751

SEP 9 1956

Munch, Boston Symphony, Big Hit in Moscow

Moscow, Sept. 8 (CTPS). — Beneath the Stars and Stripes and the hammer and sickle the Boston Symphony Orchestra played tonight before a cheering crowd that filled the great Moscow Conservatory.

Conductor Charles Munch responded with two encores when the audience screamed in English for "more."

Munch was brought back four and five times after each number and then the crowd applauded in rhythmic beats as ball fans do when they call for a home run.

New Piston Work Played

The new American work, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, was exceptionally well received. Piston wrote it especially for the orchestra's 75th anniversary this year.

After the concert Munch received congratulations from composer Dimitri Shostakovitch, pianist Aren Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh.

The orchestra will give its final Moscow concert tomorrow.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,243

SEP 9 1956

Music

Central Staging in Operettas Sept. 14-15

By E. V. W.

Two operettas will be presented by the Syracuse Operetta Company in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts next Friday and Saturday nights. They are Mozart's pastoral comedy, "Bastien and Bastienna," chosen in deference to general observation of the Mozart Bicentennial Year, and Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley."

This will mark the Operetta Company's first attempt at use of both the Stage and part of the main floor staging of the Museum Auditorium as areas of action. Mrs. Phyllis Divers is piano accompanist. Dramatic director is James Carrington, musical director is Donald White. Among those in principal roles in the operettas are Nellie Maynard, Richard Thomason, Patricia Bury, Pat Cupoli, Walter Kavaney, Ed Mayer and Don Hoople.

LEADING OPERETTA ROLES, Patricia Bury, left, is cast as Bastienna in Mozart's "Bastien and Bastienna" and Pat Cupoli will sing Brack Weaver in Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" in the Syracuse Operetta productions in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts Friday and Saturday nights.

This date in music: 1846, Richard Wagner begins to bring "Lohengrin" music; 1891, American premiere of Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" in Philadelphia.

Finger Lakes Lyric Circus, a theater-in-the-round in The Tent near Skaneateles, will close its fifth season tonight with a performance of "Plain and Fancy", a pleasing musical presentation featuring Jen Nelson, as an artful comedienne, rather than as a singing star, and David Davis. Other principals: Alfred Medinets, Marlene Cameron, Rita Noble Ray Hyson, Gordon Shearer, Richard Taber, Merle Marcus and Allan Hale. Thomas Phillip Martin is musical director. Show time is 7:30.

The season, although a success in selection and in presentation of shows, has been a trying time to the management—the Davis Family, Walter, Virginia and David—due to the unseasonable weather. Twice it has been necessary to cancel performances due to severe rain storms. Once, the show was stopped due to high winds. Of the seven attractions, all with good music, "The King and I" "Kismet" and "Plain and Fancy" especially won favor. "Naughty Marietta" and "Carousel," favorites of other seasons, were repeated and "Girl Crazy" also had audience appeal. "On the Town" was the show we liked less in the array of music and dance.

Not only women's coiffures but men's beards have been high fashion in The Tent this summer. First, Walter Davis raised a beard for the role of the kindly Captain in "The King and I." Then along came handsome Wilton Clary (soon to leave show business for real estate in the south), to play the bearded Hajj in "Kismet" and finally Alfred Medinets, who raised a jet black beard for "Plain and Fancy". Medinets leaves Skaneatles for New Jersey for an eight weeks engagement continuing the role of Papa Yoder in the Paper Mill Playhouse. The titian-haired Miss Nelson, who has come to The Lyric in all five seasons, returns tomorrow to New York City to begin rehearsals for a coast-to-coast tour with the Cadillac Show. In the Northwest she will visit her family.

Meantime the "Plain and Fancy" songs: "Young and Foolish," "Follow Your Heart" and "Plain We Live" and the comedy lines, plus the Barn Raising scene, are high spots in the final attraction of '56.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, musical director and conductor, having played five concerts in Russia, in a broadened plan, will have time off in Moscow tomorrow, then will fly to Prague for concerts Tuesday and Wednesday, in Smetana Hall. The six-day visit in Russia included programs in Leningrad and in Moscow. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct both concerts in the Czechoslovakian capital.

During the portion of the tour

[157]

---

tradition rarely plays [illegible] met the applause of its Russian audience with an unprecedented two additional numbers. In his dressing room after the concert, Munch attributed the departure from custom to the stirring reception.

Munch said both he and the orchestra had been willing to carry on further but were stopped by fatigue from their rigorous schedule here and the fact tha ttwo additional concerts are scheduled tomorrow.

The audience, which earlier this week had stood in line for up to 12 hours to pay up to 40 rubles ($10 at the official rate of exchange) gave a tremendous reception to the orchestra's playing of Beethoven's Symphony Number Three, the Eroica.

Introduction to [illegible]

The second part [illegible] the American Walter [illegible] Symphony No. 6, was unfamiliar to the Russians and was not as well received. It had been deliberately placed in the orchestra's repertaire as a taste of modern music from abroad.

The final scheduled number, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2, again a traditional work, brought down the house. As encores, the orchestra played the last movement from Haydn's Symphony No. 102 and part of Schuman's Symphony in C Major Adagio.

Before the performance, David Oistrakh, the Soviet violinist who had appeared with the Boston Symphony last year during his tour of the United States, presented bouquets of flowers to Munch on the stage.

In the audience listening intently and appluading enthusiastically were such greats of the Soviet music world as the pianist Emil Gilels and the composers Dmitri Shostekovich, Aram Khachaturian and Dmitri Kabalevsky. Most of them, with the exception of Shostekovich who was described as too shy, went backstage to congratulate the players.

The orchestra, which opened its Soviet tour in Leningrad Thursday and played there again last night, will complete its stand here tomorrow with two concerts. Pierre Monteux will conduct in the afternoon and Munch in the evening. As the 105-man orchestra reached the midpoint of its visit, made possible in part by subsidy from the United States government, reviews began to appear in the Soviet press testifying to the impact its music had on the critics.

Describing the performance of the Eroica in Leningrad, the local newspaper declared "the conductor, Mr. Munch, made it a magnificent number from his list, etched into the audience's consciousness like a sculptured monument."

The newspaper Sovietskaya Kultura, supreme journalistic authority in things cultural here, said "the conductor and audience were united in a unique artistic upsurge. We were deeply satisfied with this performance."

It was noted by observers, who are more political than musical, that a fine reception for the orchestra fits into the current party line to promote cultural exchanges with capitalist nations. They said

SEP 9 1956

Czechoslovakian capital.
During the portion of the tour

to promote cultural exchanges with capitalist nations. They said

Continued from Front Page

ty ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard university, and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe Suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the Adagio Movement from Schumann's C Major Symphony and the Last Movement from Haydn's B Flat Symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,155

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Wins Moscow Praise

Boston Orchestra Is Lauded by Critics

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP) — A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soivet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

Applause is Thunderous

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "Bravo" and "Bis" ("encore").

The orchestra responded by playing two encores—Adagio in C major of the Schuman Symphony and the last movement of the Haydn B-flat Symphony.

Oistrakh, who was a guest soloist for the Boston Symphony last year, said, "It was a magnificent performance."

"I wish we had more like it," he said.

The orchestra will play two more concerts here tomorrow. All tickets for the concerts were sold out weeks ago. There were reports that some music-lovers were offering as much as 10 times the box-office price for tickets.

Americans Attend

American Charge D'Affaires Newbold Walmsley Jr. and virtually the entire American diplomatic corps and colony attended tonight's performance in the great hall of the Moscow Conservatory.

The stage was decorated with the flags of the United States and the Soviet Union and the concert was opened by the symphony's playing the national anthems of both nations.

Members of the orchestra, which has been on tour of the European capitals this Summer, said they had never received such an enthusiastic reception before. They opened their tour of Soviet Russia Thursday at Leningrad and won sustained applause. The next stop for the symphony is Prague, Czechvolsovakia.

Boston Symphony Hailed By Soviet Musical Elite

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 — (UP) — A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Betthoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "bravo" and "bis" ("encore").

Eisenhower critizes

Ovation to Hub Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad.

At the end, the audience shouted repeatedly for more.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 538,979

SEP 9 1956

SEP 9 1956

Munch, Boston Symphony, Big Hit in Moscow

Moscow, Sept. 8 (CTPS), — Beneath the Stars and Stripes and the hammer and sickle the Boston Symphony Orchestra played tonight before a cheering crowd that filled the great Moscow Conservatory.

Conductor Charles Munch responded with two encores when the audience screamed in English for "more."

Munch was brought back four and five times after each number and then the crowd applauded in rhythmic beats as ball fans do when they call for a home run.

New Piston Work Played

The new American work, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, was exceptionally well received. Piston wrote it especially for the orchestra's 75th anniversary this year.

After the concert Munch received congratulations from composer Dimitri Shostakovitch, pianist Aren Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh.

The orchestra will give its final Moscow concert tomorrow.

Hub Symphony Thrills Moscow

MOSCOW (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more last night.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

AUDIENCE SHOUTS

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C Major Symphony and the last movement from Haydn's B Flat Symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

WOMAN APPLAUDED

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Russian violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra last yea[illegible] welcomed the An[illegible] ed

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,243

SEP 9 1956

Music

Central Staging in Operettas Sept. 14-15

By E. V. W.

Two operettas will be presented by the Syracuse Operetta Company in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts next Friday and Saturday nights. They are Mozart's pastoral comedy, "Bastien and Bastienna," chosen in deference to general observation of the Mozart Bicentennial Year, and Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley."

This will mark the Operetta Company's first attempt at use of both the Stage and part of the main floor staging of the Museum Auditorium as areas of action. Mrs. Phyllis Divers is piano accompanist. Dramatic director is James Carrington, musical director is Donald White. Among those in principal roles in the operettas are Nellie Maynard, Richard Thomason, Patricia Bury, Pat Cupoli, Walter Kavaney, Ed Mayer and Don Hoople.

LEADING OPERETTA ROLES. Patricia Bury, left, is cast as Bastienna in Mozart's "Bastien and Bastienna" and Pat Cupoli will sing Brack Weaver in Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" in the Syracuse Operetta productions in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts Friday and Saturday nights.

This date in music: 1846, Richard Wagner begins to bring "Lohengrin" music; 1891, American premiere of Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" in Philadelphia.

Finger Lakes Lyric Circus, a theater-in-the-round in The Tent near Skaneateles, will close its fifth season tonight with a performance of "Plain and Fancy", a pleasing musical presentation featuring Jen Nelson, as an artful comedienne, rather than as a singing star, and David Davis. Other principals: Alfred Medinets, Marlene Cameron, Rita Noble Ray Hyson, Gordon Shearer, Richard Taber, Merle Marcus and Allan Hale. Thomas Phillip Martin is musical director. Show time is 7:30.

The season, although a success in selection and in presentation of shows, has been a trying time to the management—the Davis Family, Walter, Virginia and David—due to the unseasonable weather. Twice it has been necessary to cancel performances due to severe rain storms. Once, the show was stopped due to high winds. Of the seven attractions, all with good music, "The King and I" "Kismet" and "Plain and Fancy" especially won favor. "Naughty Marietta" and "Carousel," favorites of other seasons, were repeated and "Girl Crazy" also had audience appeal. "On the Town" was the show we liked less in the array of music and dance.

Not only women's coiffures but men's beards have been high fashion in The Tent this summer. First, Walter Davis raised a beard for the role of the kindly Captain in "The King and I." Then along came handsome Wilton Clary (soon to leave show business for real estate in the south), to play the bearded Hajj in "Kismet" and finally Alfred Medinets, who raised a jet black beard for "Plain and Fancy". Medinets leaves Skaneatles for New Jersey for an eight weeks engagement continuing the role of Papa Yoder in the Paper Mill Playhouse. The titian-haired Miss Nelson, who has come to The Lyric in all five seasons, returns tomorrow to New York City to begin rehearsals for a coast-to-coast tour with the Cadillac Show. In the Northwest she will visit her family.

Meantime the "Plain and Fancy" songs: "Young and Foolish," "Follow Your Heart" and "Plain We Live" and the comedy lines, plus the Barn Raising scene, are high spots in the final attraction of '56.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, musical director and conductor, having played five concerts in Russia, in a broadened plan, will have time off in Moscow tomorrow, then will fly to Prague for concerts Tuesday and Wednesday, in Smetana Hall. The six-day visit in Russia included programs in Leningrad and in Moscow. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct both concerts in the Czechoslovakian capital.

During the portion of the tour that brought the Orchestra from Boston to Central Europe for the first time, two cellists, Louis Berger, native of Prague, and Josef Zimbler, born in Pilsen, will revisit their homeland for the first time in many years. Bass player Irving Frankel is Austrian-born (in Lemberg) and Bassoonist Ernst Pammenka is a native of Vienna.

At every concert the Boston symphony plays in Europe, during the current tour of 13 countries, a work by a contemporary American composer is featured. Recently the Boston concluded five concerts in the Edinburgh Festival; en route to Russia performed in Denmark, Norway and Sweden. In certain programs, Pierre Monteux conducts. Following the Orchestra's return to the States, at the Syracuse concert Oct. 20, Dr. Munch will conduct. This event is in Famous Artists Series.

FROM A WORLD
another sensational
for connoisseur
FABULOUS
For 48 years we've been hitting world headlines with famous store stocks—now

tradition rarely plays [illegible] met the applause of its Russian audience with an unprecedented two additional numbers. In his dressing room after the concert, Munch attributed the departure from custom to the stirring reception.

Munch said both he and the orchestra had been willing to carry on further but were stopped by fatigue from their rigorous schedule here and the fact tha ttwo additional concerts are scheduled tomorrow.

The audience, which earlier this week had stood in line for up to 12 hours to pay up to 40 rubles ($10 at the official rate of exchange) gave a tremendous reception to the orchestra's playing of Beethoven's Symphony Number Three, the Eroica.

Introduction to [illegible]

The second part [illegible] the American Walter [illegible] Symphony No. 6, was unfamiliar to the Russians and was not as well received. It had been deliberately placed in the orchestra's repertaire as a taste of modern music from abroad.

The final scheduled number, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2, again a traditional work, brought down the house. As encores, the orchestra played the last movement from Haydn's Symphony No. 102 and part of Schuman's Symphony in C Major Adagio.

Before the performance, David Oistrakh, the Soviet violinist who had appeared with the Boston Symphony last year during his tour of the United States, presented bouquets of flowers to Munch on the stage.

In the audience listening intently and appluading enthusiastically were such greats of the Soviet music world as the pianist Emil Gilels and the composers Dmitri Shostekovich, Aram Khachaturian and Dmitri Kabalevsky. Most of them, with the exception of Shostekovich who was described as too shy, went backstage to congratulate the players.

The orchestra, which opened its Soviet tour in Leningrad Thursday and played there again last night, will complete its stand here tomorrow with two concerts. Pierre Monteux will conduct in the afternoon and Munch in the evening. As the 105-man orchestra reached the midpoint of its visit, made possible in part by subsidy from the United States government, reviews began to appear in the Soviet press testifying to the impact its music had on the critics.

Describing the performance of the Eroica in Leningrad, the local newspaper declared "the conductor, Mr. Munch, made it a magnificent number from his list, etched into the audience's consciousness like a sculptured monument."

The newspaper Sovietskaya Kultura, supreme journalistic authority in things cultural here, said "the conductor and audience were united in a unique artistic upsurge. We were deeply satisfied with this performance."

It was noted by observers, who are more political than musical, that a fine reception for the orchestra fits into the current party line to promote cultural exchanges with capitalist nations. They said the symphony could have been flat as a flounder, which it was not, and still would get rave reviews.

(Boston Globe–N.Y. Herald Tribune)

INFORMATION OBSCURED

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 253,604

SEP 9 1956

Symphony Triumphant In Moscow

By WELLES HANGEN
[Boston Herald-N. Y. Times Dispatch]

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Soviet Union's musical elite gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a tumultuous reception tonight culminating in a 10-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played two encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said tonight's clamorous outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surpassed anything the orchestra had ever experienced.

Stirring Rendition

The usually decorus elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the Boston musicians in a stirring rendition of Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 (Eroica).

Excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth symphony by Walter Piston, Harvard University music professor whose work is practically unknown here. Real frenzy developed after Munch had led his troupe through three magnificently executed, continuous lations of the musical great of this country. Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of Soviet Composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United states, crowded into the small room with his son Igor, who also plays the violin.

(Continued on Page Sixty-two)

ED COMPOSER

Aram Khachatourian, famed Soviet Armenian composer, exclaimed "Marvelous, marvelous" repeatedly when asked what he thought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fantastic," "unbelieveable" and "sublime."

Dmitri Shostakovich was in the hall, but did not come backstage because of what one colleague called his "painful modesty." As musicians, composers and Soviet officials, including S. V. Koftanov, deputy minister of culture, swarmed around him, the perspiration-soaked dMunch could only keep murmuring "unforgettable—inpliable."

Tonight's audience included most of Mosccow's diplomatic colony, who had received special invitations from Walter N. Walmsley, Jr., U. S. charge d'affaires.

The Boston orchestra, which arrived here this morning by train from Leningrad, will give two concerts here tomorrow under the direction of Pierre Monteux. They will leave Monday for performances in Prague.

Herald columnist Rudolph ... Dr. Paul Dudley White and ...ers of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were interviewed over Radio Moscow last ... in a broadcast monitored ... Herald radio room.

Dr. White, visiting the Soviet Union with a group of American cardiologists at the invitation of the Soviet Minister of Public Health, said he had invited four Russian doctors to this country. He said they have been asked to visit medical facilities in Boston, Minneapolis and New York. Dr. White also said he believed the prospects of developing better exchanges between Russian and American cardiologists are excellent.

The Soviet interviewer asked Elie if he had talked to anyone other than musicians in Russia during his tour with the Boston orchestra and Elie said he had. The Herald's "Roving Eye" said quite a few Russians he interviewed talked excellent English and he managed to talk with others by using German and French.

"What did you talk about?" he was asked.

"How much does this cost? How much does that cost? Things like that," said Elie.

The interviewer asked Elie: "How did the Russians you met on the street receive you, as an American?"

"Well, they seemed delighted to see me, just as I was delighted to meet them. They were very friendly."

Elie described Moscow as "one of the most beautiful cities I have ever seen" and added that he found the Russian capital "interesting and stimulating."

Elie praised the audience that heard the orchestra's Leningrad performance as "very musically inclined," but refrained from replying to the interviewer's request for comparisons with audiences which heard the orchestra in Western Europe.

The broadcast was shortwaved in English direct from studios in Moscow and followed the orchestra's appearance in the Russian capital city.

A leading Soviet musician said during the program that it wasn't necessary to ask what he thought of the orchestra. "Everyone knows they're superb," he said.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 897,714 - S. 1,559,216

SEP 9 1956

Moscow Hails U.S. Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP).—A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics Saturday night hailed the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

SOME 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "bravo" and "bis" ("encore").

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA responded by playing two encores—Adagio in C Major of the Schuman Symphony and the last movement of the Haydn B Flat Symphony.

Oistrakh, who was a guest soloist for the Boston Symphony last year, said "it was a magnificent performance."

"I wish we had more like it," he said.

The orchestra will play two more concerts here Sunday.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

SEP 9 1956

A Score for Culture

Boston Symphony a Hit in Moscow

By B. J. Cutler

From the Herald Tribune Bureau
© 1956, N. Y. Herald Tribune Inc.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, making its debut in this capital of communism tonight, scored a tremendous success before a cheering and appreciative audience of Soviet music lovers.

The first American symphony orchestra to appear in Russia, the Boston Symphony came from a triumph in Leningrad to the Great Hall of the Moscow Conservatory, where it played before an alternately rapt and tumultuous assemblage of 2,000.

Additional Numbers

Under the direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra, which by tradition rarely plays encores, met the applause of its Russian audience with an unprecedented two additional numbers.

In his dressing room after the concert, Mr. Munch attributed the departure from custom to the stirring reception. He said both he and the orchestra had been willing to carry on further, but were stopped by fatigue from their rigorous schedule here and the fact that two additional concerts are scheduled tomorrow.

The audience, which earlier had stood in line for as long as twelve hours to pay up to forty rubles ($10 at the official rate of exchange), gave a rousing reception to the orchestra's playing of Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica."

Piston's Music Played

American composer Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony was unfamiliar to the Russians and was not so well received. It had been deliberately placed in the orchestra's repertory as a taste of modern music from abroad.

The final scheduled number, Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2, again a traditional work, brought down the house.

As encores the orchestra played the last movement of Haydn's 102d Symphony in B Flat Major and the adagio part of Schumann's C Major Symphony.

Two Concerts Tomorrow

Before the performance, David Oistrakh, the Soviet violinist, who had appeared with the Boston Symphony last year during his American tour, presented bouquets of flowers to Mr. Munch on the stage.

Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

In the audience, listening intently and applauding enthusiastically, were such greats of the Soviet music world as composers Dmitri Shostakovich, Aram Khachaturian and Dmitri Kabalevsky and pianist Emile Gilels. Most of them, with the exception of Mr. Shostakovich, who was described as too shy, went backstage to congratulate the orchestra members.

The orchestra, which opened its Soviet tour in Leningrad Thursday, and played there again last night, will complete its appearance here tomorrow with two concerts.

Pierre Monteux will conduct in the afternoon and Mr. Munch in the evening.

As the 105-man orchestra reached the mid-point of its visit, made possible in part by a subsidy from the United States government, reviews began to appear in the Soviet press testifying to the impact its music had on the critics.

"United in Unique Upsurge"

Describing the performance of "Eroica" in Leningrad, the local newspaper declared, "The conductor (Mr. Munch) made it a magnificent number from his list, etched into the audience's consciousness like a sculptured monument."

The newspaper "Sovietskaya Kultura," supreme journalistic authority in things cultural here, said, "The conductor and audience were united in a unique upsurge. We were deeply satisfied with this performance."

It was noted by observers who are more political than musical that a fine reception for the orchestra fits into the current party line to promote cultural exchanges with capitalist nations. They said the symphony could have been as flat as a flounder, which it was not, and still would get rave reviews.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BALTIMORE, MD.
SUN
Circ. S. 30

SEP 9

MOSCOW CHEERS

windows for as long as ... to get their seats. Bethoven's Third Symphony—the opening number—drew six minutes of wild applause, and brought Munch out of the wings to take four bows.

A modern American symphony—the Sixth by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard—got only two minutes of polite approval.

But Ravels's "Daphnis and Chloe," the final piece on the program, brought the house down.

Crowd Rises And Cheers

The crowds rose and cheered and shouted "More," and "Bravo" for a full five minutes while Munch wore a path from the wings to the podium and reporters lost count of bows.

Finally he raised his hands for silence and announced the orchestra would play a part of the first movement of Schumann's Symphony in C Major.

But even after that the audience refused to budge and the clamor for more went on and on, to the accompaniment of rythmic clapping and stamping of feet.

Conductor Gives In Again

His hair disheveled and collar wilted, the grinning German conductor gave in once again.

The orchestra played the first movement of Haydns Symphony 102.

And again the clamor and the shouting started. But Munch was firm. Rolling his eyes in mock horror and holding up two fin-
...ad, bowed
...e stage.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

CHICAGO, ILL.
TRIBUNE
S. 892,058 - S. 1,392,384

SEP 9 1956

S. SYMPHONY TS MOSCOW'S ST 'HOO HOO

BY WILLIAM MOORE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OSCOW, Sept. 8—Beneath Stars and Stripes and the mer and sickle the Boston phony orchestra played ght before a cheering d that filled the great cow conservatory.

arles Muench, conductor, has played only one pre- encore on the orchestra's pean trip, responded with onight. The audience still med in English, "More." other encore was last in Leningrad, where the cians received a big ova-

It Is Tremendous

e applause tonight was ndous even for Moscow. ch was applauded back and five times after each er, and then the crowd applaud in rhythmic as the fans do when are calling for a home This stopped the show l times.

the end would come the "hoo hoo," the Russians' highest accolade.

The audience was the cream of Moscow's cultural life. There were frequent calls of "speech, speech."

Bouquets are Tributes

Huge bouquets of purple and white chrysanthemums and flame gladioli were presented as tributes.

The new American work, Walter Piston's symphony No. 6, was exceptionally well received. Piston, a music profes- Harvard, wrote the symfor the orchestra's 75th sary, which it is celethis year.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506

SEP 9 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY IN SOVIET CAPITAL

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP) — Boston's touring symphony orchestra, fresh from two sell out performances in Leningrad, was welcomed to Moscow today by more than 100 Russian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were given a private dining room in the hotel, where dinner was arranged for 5 p.m. — quite early for Moscow — to permit them to prepare for the 8 p.m. concert opening. Normally Moscow hotels serve dinner between 10 p.m. and midnight.

[158]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Acclaimed in Moscow

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP)—A firrst-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "Bravo" and "Bis" ("encore").

---

s Standing Ovation oscow Conservatory

HANGEN
York Times.

tonight minute orchcores. Boston in Lenburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surprassed anything the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. Real frenzy developed after Mr. Munch had led the musicicians through Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the conductor's podium.

The white-haired conductor who will be 65 years old on Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

Backstage, Mr. Munch, with a towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country.

Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of Soviet composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United States, crowded into the small room with his n Igor, also a violinist. Dmitri nostakovich was in the hall but d not come backstage because of what one colleague called his "painful modesty."

Aram Katchaturian, famed Soviet Armenian Compcser, exclaimed "marvelous, marvelous!" repeatedly when asked what he thought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fantastic," "unbelievable" and "sublime."

Tonight's audience included most of Moscow's diplomatic colony, who had received special invitations from Walter N. Walmsley, junior United States chargé d'affaires.

The orchestra, which arrived here this morning by train from Leningrad, will give two concerts here tomorrow under the direction of Pierre Monteux. They will leave Monday for Prague.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

TIGHT BINDING

Muscovites Hail Symphony

(Continued from First Page)

movements of Ravel's Second "Daphnis and Chloe" suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among the 2,000 enthralled spectators when the last movement of Ravel's work had been completed. Two enormous flower bouquets were placed on the conductor's podium and Munch retired for the fourth time from the huge concert stage.

ENCORES PLAYED

The white-haired conductor, who will be 65 years old Sept. 26, finally returned for the fifth time after the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores—Schumann's Symphony in C Major (the Adagio) and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102 in B Flat.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of the orchestra.

Back-stage Munch, with towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country. Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of

...ates, crowded into the small room with his son Igor, who also ...ys the violin.

...ED COMPOSER

Aram Khachatourian, famed Soviet Armenian composer, exclaimed "Marvelous, marvelous" repeatedly when asked what he ...ought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fan...tic," "unbelieveable" and ...blime."

Dmitri Shostakovich was in ... hall, but did not come ...ckstage because of what one ...league called his "painful ...odesty." As musicians, com...sers and Soviet officials, in...ding S. V. Koftanov, deputy ...nister of culture, swarmed ...ound him, the perspiration-...ake dMunch could only keep ...rmuring "unforgettable—in...iable."

Tonight's audience included m...st of Mosccow's diplomatic c...ony, who had received special in...itations from Walter N. W...lmsley, Jr., U. S. charge d'...faires.

The Boston orchestra, which ar...ived here this morning by tr...n from Leningrad, will give ... concerts here tomorrow ...r the direction of Pierre ...teux. They will leave Mon... for performances in Prague. ...erald columnist Rudolph ... Dr. Paul Dudley White and ...bers of the Boston Sym... Orchestra were inter...d over Radio Moscow last ... in a broadcast monitor... ...e Herald radio room.

White, visiting the Soviet U...n with a group of American ca...ologists at the invitation of th... Soviet Minister of Public He...h, said he had invited four Ru...an doctors to this country. ... said they have been asked to ...t medical facilities in Boston, Minneapolis and New York. Dr. White also said he believed the prospects of developing better exchanges between Russian and American cardiologists are excellent.

The Soviet interviewer asked Elie ... he had talked to anyone other than musicians in Russia during his tour with the Boston orchestra and Elie said he had ... The Herald's "Roving Eye" said quite a few Russians he interviewed talked excellent English and he managed to talk with others by using German and French.

"What did you talk about?" he was asked.

"How much does this cost? How much does that cost? Things like that," said Elie.

The interviewer asked Elie: "How did the Russians you met on the street receive you, as an American?"

"Well, they seemed delighted to see me, just as I was delighted to meet them. They were very friendly."

Elie described Moscow as "one of the most beautiful cities I have ever seen" and added that he found the Russian capital "interesting and stimulating."

Elie praised the audience that heard the orchestra's Leningrad performance as "very musically inclined," but refrained from replying to the interviewer's request for comparisons with audiences which heard the orchestra in Western Europe.

The broadcast was shortwaved in English direct from studios in Moscow and followed the orchestra's appearance in the Russian capital city.

A leading Soviet musician said during the program that it wasn't necessary to ask what he thought of the orchestra. "Everyone knows they're superb," he said.

Soviet Composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 897,711 - S. 1,550,216
SEP 9 1956

Moscow Hails U.S. Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP).—A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics Saturday night hailed the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

SOME 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "bravo" and "bis" ("encore").

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA responded by playing two encores—Adagio in C Major of the Schuman Symphony and the last movement of the Haydn B Flat Symphony.

Oistrakh, who was a guest soloist for the Boston Symphony last year, said "it was a magnificent performance."

"I wish we had more like it," he said.

The orchestra will play two more concerts here Sunday.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
SEP 9 1956

Ne dites p
pas le troi

GASTON: "Eh, Alp pussycats

ALPHONSE: "So what so unhap

GASTON: "But for you 'ave What 'as ALPHONSE: "I cannot cannot for he A cannot to hees mou friend, we seem to f

Sale! "K
IN 3 STY

Piston's Music Played

American composer Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony was unfamiliar to the Russians and was not so well received. It had been deliberately placed in the orchestra's repertory as a taste of modern music from abroad.

The final scheduled number, Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2, again a traditional work, brought down the house.

As encores the orchestra played the last movement of Haydn's 102d Symphony in B Flat Major and the adagio part of Schumann's C Major Symphony.

Two Concerts Tomorrow

Before the performance, David Oistrakh, the Soviet violinist, who had appeared with the Boston Symphony last year during his American tour, presented

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
BALTIMORE SUN
Circ. S. 30

MOSCOW CHEERS BOSTON SYMPHONY

Munch Leaves Tradition And Plays Two Encores

By HOWARD NORTON
[Moscow Bureau of The Sun]

Moscow, Sept. 8—A cheering, applauding, near-hysterical audienee of Muscovites tonight inspired the Boston Symphony Orchestra to break one of its oldest traditions.

Opening a three-concert series at Moscow's Conservatory, the orchestra's conductor, Charles Munch, for the first time in his long career surrendered to audience enthusiasm and played not only one, but two, encores.

"I have never done this before," the perspiring 65-year-old musician told a circle of eminent Soviet composers and artists who came to his dressing room to congratulate him.

No Encore Tradition

He explained that in Boston there is a tradition that the orchestra does not play any encores at all.

[EDITOR'S NOTE—The orchestra first broke its no-encore rule on Thursday in Leningrad where its concert was also received with a tumultuous ovation.]

Nearly 3,000 Russians and a sprinkling of foreign diplomats were jammed into the great hall of the Moscow Conservatory to hear the first American symphonic group to visit the Communist capital. The normal capacity of the hall is about 2,000.

Some In Line Three Days

Many Moscow music lovers had stood in line in front of ticket windows for as long as three days to get their seats. Bethoven's Third Symphony—the opening number—drew six minutes of wild applause, and brought Munch out of the wings to take four bows.

A modern American symphony—the Sixth by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard—got only two minutes of polite approval.

But Ravels's "Daphnis and Chloe," the final piece on the program, brought the house down.

Crowd Rises And Cheers

The crowds rose and cheered and shouted "More," and "Bravo" for a full five minutes while Munch wore a path from the wings to the podium and reporters lost count of bows.

Finally he raised his hands for silence and announced the orchestra would play a part of the first movement of Schumann's Symphony in C Major.

But even after that the audience refused to budge and the clamor for more went on and on, to the accompaniment of rythmic clapping and stamping of feet.

Conductor Gives In Again

His hair disheveled and collar wilted, the grinning German conductor gave in once again.

The orchestra played the first movement of Haydns Symphony 102.

And again the clamor and the shouting started. But Munch was firm. Rolling his eyes in mock horror, and holding up two fingers, he shook his head, bowed once more and left the stage.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
CHICAGO, ILL.
TRIBUNE
S. 892,058 - S. 1,392,384
SEP 9 1956

U. S. SYMPHONY GETS MOSCOW'S BEST 'HOO HOO

BY WILLIAM MOORE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—Beneath the Stars and Stripes and the hammer and sickle the Boston Symphony orchestra played tonight before a cheering crowd that filled the great Moscow conservatory.

Charles Muench, conductor, who has played only one previous encore on the orchestra's European trip, responded with two tonight. The audience still screamed in English, "More." The other encore was last night in Leningrad, where the musicians received a big ovation.

It Is Tremendous

The applause tonight was tremendous even for Moscow. Muench was applauded back four and five times after each number, and then the crowd would applaud in rhythmic beats as the fans do when they are calling for a home run. This stopped the show several times.

At the end would come the "hoo hoo," the Russians' highest accolade.

The audience was the cream of Moscow's cultural life. There were frequent calls of "speech, speech."

Bouquets are Tributes

Huge bouquets of purple and white chrysanthemums and flame gladioli were presented as tributes.

The new American work, Walter Piston's symphony No. 6, was exceptionally well received. Piston, a music profes... Harvard, wrote the sym... for the orchestra's 75th ...sary, which it is cele... this year.

...s Standing Ovation ...oscow Conservatory

...HANGEN
...York Times.

...Boston Symphony Orchestra ... tumultuous reception tonight culminating in a ten-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played tow encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said tonight's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surprassed anything the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. Real frenzy developed after Mr. Munch had led the musicians through Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the conductor's podium.

The white-haired conductor who will be 65 years old on Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

Backstage, Mr. Munch, with a towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country.

Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of Soviet composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United States, crowded into the small room with his ...n Igor, also a violinist. Dmitri ...ostakovich was in the hall but ...d not come backstage because of what one colleague called his "painful modesty."

Aram Katchaturian, famed Soviet Armenian Compcser, exclaimed "marvelous, marvelous!" repeatedly when asked what he thought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fantastic," "unbelievable" and "sublime."

Tonight's audience included most of Moscow's diplomatic colony, who had received special invitations from Walter N. Walmsley, junior United States chargé d'affaires.

The orchestra, which arrived here this morning by train from Leningrad, will give two concerts here tomorrow under the direction of Pierre Monteux. They will leave Monday for Prague.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124
SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Acclaimed in Moscow

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP)—A firrst-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "Bravo" and "Bis" ("encore").

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506
SEP 9 1956

BOSTON S... IN SOVIET

MOSCOW, Sept... touring symphony... from two sell out... Leningrad, was w... cow today by ... sian musicians and cultural leaders.

...dining room in the ...nner was arranged ...uite early for Mos...it them to prepare ... concert opening. ...cow hotels serve ... 10 p.m. and mid-

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were giv-

[158]

INFORMATION OBSCURED

TIGHT BINDING

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
D. 2,109,601 - S.
SEP 9 1956

nch, Boston mphony, Big in Moscow

y, Sept. 8 (CTPS). — the Stars and Stripes hammer and sickle the Symphony Orchestra tonight before a cheering that filled the great Mos- servatory.

ctor Charles Munch re- with two encores when ience screamed in English ore."

h was brought back four e times after each number en the crowd applauded in mic beats as ball fans do they call for a home run.

Piston Work Played

new American work, Wal- ston's Symphony No. 6, was ionally well received. Piston it especially for the orches- 75th anniversary this year. r the concert Munch re- congratulations from com- Dimitri Shostakovitch, pian ren Khachaturian and vio David Oistrakh.

e orchestra will give it Moscow concert tomorrow.

s Moscow

efore leading the musicia n the stage, he presented estra's woman first flu er, Doriot A. Dwyer, who w lauded for her important p the program.

OMAN APPLAUDED

Munch led the orchestra in iet national anthem and " r Spangled Banner" bef inning the regular progr e Russians said it was t time they had heard an national anthem.

Muscovites Hail Symphony

(Continued from First Page)

movements of Ravel's Second "Daphnis and Chloe" suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among the 2,000 enthralled spectators when the last movement of Ravel's work had been completed. Two enormous flower bouquets were placed on the conductor's podium and Munch retired for the fourth time from the huge concert stage.

ENCORES PLAYED

The white-haired conductor, who will be 65 years old Sept. 26, finally returned for the fifth time after the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores—Schuman's Symphony in C Major (the Adagio) and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102 in B Flat.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of the orchestra.

Back-stage Munch, with towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country. Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of ates, crowded into the small oom with his son Igor, who also ays the violin.

ED COMPOSER

Aram Khachatourian, famed Soviet Armenian composer, exclaimed "Marvelous, marvelous" repeatedly when asked what he thought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fantastic," "unbelieveable" and "sublime."

Dmitri Shostakovich was in hall, but did not come backstage because of what one colleague called his "painful modesty." As musicians, com- sers and Soviet officials, in- ding S. V. Koftanov, deputy nister of culture, swarmed ound him, the perspiration- ke dMunch could only keep rmuring "unforgettable—in- pliable."

Tonight's audience included st of Mosccow's diplomatic ony, who had received special itations from Walter N. lmsley, Jr., U. S. charge ffaires.

The Boston orchestra, which ved here this morning by n from Leningrad, will give concerts here tomorrow r the direction of Pierre eux. They will leave Mon- for performances in Prague.

rald columnist Rudolph Dr. Paul Dudley White and bers of the Boston Sym- Orchestra were inter- d over Radio Moscow last in a broadcast monitored e Herald radio room.

White, visiting the Soviet with a group of American ologists at the invitation of Soviet Minister of Public h, said he had invited four an doctors to this country said they have been asked t medical facilities in Bos- Minneapolis and New York. Dr. White also said he believed the prospects of developing bet- ter exchanges between Russian and American cardiologists are excellent.

The Soviet interviewer asked Elie if he had talked to anyone other than musicians in Russia during his tour with the Boston Orchestra and Elie said he had. The Herald's "Roving Eye" said quite a few Russians he interviewed talked excellent English and he managed to talk with others by using German and French.

"What did you talk about?" he was asked.

"How much does this cost? How much does that cost? Things like that," said Elie.

The interviewer asked Elie: "How did the Russians you met on the street receive you, as an American?"

"Well, they seemed delighted to see me, just as I was delighted to meet them. They were very friendly."

Elie described Moscow as "one of the most beautiful cities I have ever seen" and added that he found the Russian capital "interesting and stimulating."

Elie praised the audience that heard the orchestra's Leningrad performance as "very musically inclined," but refrained from replying to the interviewer's request for comparisons with audiences which heard the orchestra in Western Europe.

The broadcast was shortwaved in English direct from studios in Moscow and followed the orchestra's appearance in the Russian capital city.

A leading Soviet musician said during the program that it wasn't necessary to ask what he thought of the orchestra. "Everyone knows they're superb," he said.

Composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United S

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 897,714 - S. 1,559,216
SEP 9 1956

Moscow Hails U.S. Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP).—A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics Saturday night hailed the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

SOME 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "bravo" and "bis" ("encore").

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA responded by playing two encores—Adagio in C Major of the Schuman Symphony and the last movement of the Haydn B Flat Symphony.

Oistrakh, who was a guest soloist for the Boston Symphony last year, said "it was a magnificent performance."

"I wish we had more like it," he said.

The orchestra will play two more concerts here Sunday.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
SEP 9 1956

Ne dites p
pas le troi

GASTON: "Eh, Alp pussycats

ALPHONSE: "So what so unhap

GASTON: "But for you 'ave What 'as

ALPHONSE: "I cannot cannot t for he A cannot to hees mou friend, w seem to f

Sale! "K
IN 3 STY

Piston's Music Played

American composer Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony was unfamiliar to the Russians and was not so well received. It had been deliberately placed in the orchestra's repertory as a taste of modern music from abroad.

The final scheduled number, Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2, again a traditional work, brought down the house. As encores the orchestra played the last movement of Haydn's 102d Symphony in B Flat Major and the adagio part of Schumann's C Major Symphony.

Two Concerts Tomorrow

Before the performance, David Oistrakh, the Soviet violinist, who had appeared with the Boston Symphony last year during his American tour, presented

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
BALTIMORE, MD.
SUN
Circ. S. 300
SEP 9

MOSCOW CHEERS BOSTON SYMPHONY

Munch Leaves Tradition And Plays Two Encores

By ~~HOWARD NORTON~~
[Moscow Bureau of The Sun]

Moscow, Sept. 8—A cheering, applauding, near-hysterical audience of Muscovites tonight inspired the Boston Symphony Orchestra to break one of its oldest traditions.

Opening a three-concert series at Moscow's Conservatory, the or- chestr Munc long ence only "I the cian viet cam grat

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
CHICAGO, ILL.
TRIBUNE
S. 892,058 - S. 1,392,384
SEP 9 1956

U. S. SYMPHONY GETS MOSCOW'S BEST 'HOO HOO

BY WILLIAM MOORE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—Beneath the Stars and Stripes and the hammer and sickle the Boston Symphony orchestra played tonight before a cheering crowd that filled the great Moscow conservatory.

Charles Muench, conductor, who has played only one previous encore on the orchestra's European trip, responded with two tonight. The audience still screamed in English, "More." The other encore was last night in Leningrad, where the musicians received a big ovation.

It Is Tremendous

The applause tonight was tremendous even for Moscow. Muench was applauded back four and five times after each number, and then the crowd would applaud in rhythmic beats as the fans do when they are calling for a home run. This stopped the show several times.

At the end would come the "hoo hoo," the Russians' highest accolade.

The audience was the cream of Moscow's cultural life. There were frequent calls of "speech, speech."

Bouquets are Tributes

Huge bouquets of purple and white chrysanthemums and flame gladioli were presented as tributes.

The new American work, Walter Piston's symphony No. 6, was exceptionally well received. Piston, a music profes- Harvard, wrote the sym- for the orchestra's 75th sary, which it is celebrating this year.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Courant (m).
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124
SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Acclaimed in Moscow

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP)—A firrst-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "Bravo" and "Bis" ("encore").

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506
SEP 9 1956

BOSTON S IN SOVIET

MOSCOW, Sept touring symphony from two sell out Leningrad, was w cow today by mo sian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were giv- dining room in the nner was arranged uite early for Mos- it them to prepare concert opening. cow hotels serve 10 p.m. and mid-

[158]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Gets Standing Ovation At First Concert in Moscow Conservatory

By WELLES HANGEN
Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Soviet Union's musiical elite gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a tumultuous reception tonight culminating in a ten-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played tow encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said tonight's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surpassed anything the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. Real frenzy developed after Mr. Munch had led the musicicians through Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the conductor's podium.

The white-haired conductor who will be 65 years old on Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

Backstage, Mr. Munch, with a towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country.

Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of Soviet composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United States, crowded into the small room with his son Igor, also a violinist. Dmitri Shostakovich was in the hall but did not come backstage because of what one colleague called his "painful modesty."

Aram Katchaturian, famed Soviet Armenian Compcser, exclaimed "marvelous, marvelous!" repeatedly when asked what he thought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fantastic," "unbelievable" and "sublime."

Tonight's audience included most of Moscow's diplomatic colony, who had received special invitations from Walter N. Walmsley, junior United States chargé d'affaires.

The orchestra, which arrived here this morning by train from Leningrad, will give two concerts here tomorrow under the direction of Pierre Monteux. They will leave Monday for Prague.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

TIGHT BINDING

Burrelle's
ESTABL
BArclay
CLIPPING
rch Street
NEW YORK,
DAILY NE
D. 2,109,601 - S
SEP 9 1956

nch, Boston nphony, Big in Moscow

w, Sept. 8 (CTPS).—
n the Stars and Stripes hammer and sickle the Symphony Orchestra tonight before a cheering at filled the great Mos-servatory.
ector Charles Munch re-with two encores when dience screamed in English ore."
ch was brought back four e times after each number en the crowd applauded in ic beats as ball fans do hey call for a home run.
y Piston Work Played new American work, Walton's Symphony No. 6, was onally well received. Piston it especially for the orches-5th anniversary this year.
er the concert Munch re congratulations from com Dmitri Shostakovitch, pian ren Khachaturian and vio
David Oistrakh.
orchestra will give it
Moscow concert tomorrow.

s Moscow

efore leading the musicia n the stage, he presented t hestra's woman first flu ver, Doriot A. Dwyer, who w plauded for her important p
the program.
OMAN APPLAUDED
Munch led the orchestra in viet national anthem and " r Spangled Banner" bef inning the regular progr
ne Russians said it was t time they had heard can national anthem.

Muscovites Hail Symphony

(Continued from First Page)

movements of Ravel's Second "Daphnis and Chloe" suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among the 2,000 enthralled spectators when the last movement of Ravel's work had been completed. Two enormous flower bouquets were placed on the conductor's podium and Munch retired for the fourth time from the huge concert stage.

ENCORES PLAYED

The white-haired conductor, who will be 65 years old Sept. 26, finally returned for the fifth time after the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores—Schuman's Symphony in C Major (the Adagio) and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102 in B Flat.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of the orchestra.

Back-stage Munch, with towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country. Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of

Soviet Composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United ates, crowded into the small oom with his son Igor, who also ays the violin.

ED COMPOSER
Aram Khachatourian, famed Soviet Armenian composer, exlaimed "Marvelous, marvelous" peatedly when asked what he ught of the performance.
her adjectives heard frequent-were "incomparable," "fan-tic," "unbelieveable" and blime."
Dmitri Shostakovich was in hall, but did not come kstage because of what one Prague called his "painful desty." As musicians, coms and Soviet officials, ining S. V. Koftanov, deputy nister of culture, swarmed und him, the perspiration-ke dMunch could only keep rmuring "unforgettable—in-liable."
Tonight's audience included st of Moscow's diplomatic ony, who had received special itations from Walter N. lmsley, Jr., U. S. charge ffaires.
he Boston orchestra, which ved here this morning by n from Leningrad, will give concerts here tomorrow r the direction of Pierre
eux. They will leave Mon-for performances in Prague.
rald columnist Rudolph Dr. Paul Dudley White and ers of the Boston Sym-Orchestra were interd over Radio Moscow last in a broadcast monitored
Herald radio room.
White, visiting the Soviet with a group of American logists at the invitation of Soviet Minister of Public
, said he had invited four an doctors to this country said they have been asked t medical facilities in Bos-inneapolis and New York.
hite also said he believed ospects of developing bet-changes between Russian merican cardiologists are ent.
Soviet interviewer asked he had talked to anyone than musicians in Russia his tour with the Boston hestra and Elie said he had Herald's "Roving Eye"

said quite a few Russians he interviewed talked excellent English and he managed to talk with others by using German and French.

"What did you talk about?" he was asked.

"How much does this cost? How much does that cost? Things like that," said Elie.

The interviewer asked Elie: "How did the Russians you met on the street receive you, as an American?"

"Well, they seemed delighted to see me, just as I was delighted to meet them. They were very friendly."

Elie described Moscow as "one of the most beautiful cities I have ever seen" and added that he found the Russian capital "interesting and stimulating."

Elie praised the audience that heard the orchestra's Leningrad performance as "very musically inclined," but refrained from replying to the interviewer's request for comparisons with audiences which heard the orchestra in Western Europe.

The broadcast was shortwaved in English direct from studios in Moscow and followed the orchestra's appearance in the Russian capital city.

A leading Soviet musician said during the program that it wasn't necessary to ask what he thought of the orchestra. "Everyone knows they're superb," he said.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 897,714 - S. 1,559,216
SEP 9 1956

Moscow Hails U.S. Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP).—A first-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics Saturday night hailed the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

SOME 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "bravo" and "bis" ("encore").

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA responded by playing two encores—Adagio in C Major of the Schuman Symphony and the last movement of the Haydn B Flat Symphony.

Oistrakh, who was a guest soloist for the Boston Symphony last year, said "it was a magnificent performance."

"I wish we had more like it," he said.

The orchestra will play two more concerts here Sunday.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
SEP 9 1956

Ne dites p
pas le trou
GASTON: "Eh, Alp
pussycats ALPHONSE: "So what so unhap
GASTON: "But for you 'ave
What 'as ALPHONSE: "I cannot cannot t for he A cannot to hees mou friend, w seem to f
Sale! "K
IN 3 STY

Piston's Music Played

American composer Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony was unfamiliar to the Russians and was not so well received. It had been deliberately placed in the orchestra's repertory as a taste of modern music from abroad.

The final scheduled number, Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2, again a traditional work, brought down the house.

As encores the orchestra played the last movement of Haydn's 102d Symphony in B Flat Major and the adagio part of Schumann's C Major Symphony.

Two Concerts Tomorrow

Before the performance, David Oistrakh, the Soviet violinist, who had appeared with the Boston Symphony last year during his American tour, presented

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
BALTIMORE, MD.
SUN
Circ. S.
SEP 9

MOSCOW CHEERS BOSTON SYMPHONY

Munch Leaves Tradition And Plays Two Encores

By HOWARD NORTON

[Moscow Bureau of The Sun]

Moscow, Sept. 8—A cheering, applauding, near-hysterical audience of Muscovites tonight inspired the Boston Symphony Orchestra to break one of its oldest traditions.

Opening a three-concert series at Moscow's Conservatory, the or-chestr
Munc long ence only
"I
the cian viet cam grat

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
CHICAGO, ILL.
TRIBUNE
S. 892,058 - S. 1,392,384
SEP 9 1956

U. S. SYMPHONY GETS MOSCOW'S BEST 'HOO HOO

BY WILLIAM MOORE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—Beneath the Stars and Stripes and the hammer and sickle the Boston Symphony orchestra played tonight before a cheering crowd that filled the great Moscow conservatory.

Charles Muench, conductor, who has played only one previous encore on the orchestra's European trip, responded with two tonight. The audience still screamed in English, "More." The other encore was last night in Leningrad, where the musicians received a big ovation.

It Is Tremendous

The applause tonight was tremendous even for Moscow. Muench was applauded back four and five times after each number, and then the crowd would applaud in rhythmic beats as the fans do when they are calling for a home run. This stopped the show several times.

At the end would come the "hoo hoo," the Russians' highest accolade.

The audience was the cream of Moscow's cultural life. There were frequent calls of "speech, speech."

Bouquets are Tributes

Huge bouquets of purple and white chrysanthemums and flame gladioli were presented as tributes.

The new American work, Walter Piston's symphony No. 6, was exceptionally well received. Piston, a music profes-Harvard, wrote the symfor the orchestra's 75th sary, which it is cele-this year.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Gets Standing Ovation At First Concert in Moscow Conservatory

By WELLES HANGEN

Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Soviet Union's musiical elite gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a tumultuous reception tonight culminating in a ten-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played tow encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said tonight's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surpassed anything the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. Real frenzy developed after Mr. Munch had led the musicians through Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the conductor's podium.

The white-haired conductor who will be 65 years old on Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

Backstage, Mr. Munch, with a towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country.

Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of Soviet composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United States, crowded into the small room with his son Igor, also a violinist. Dmitri Shostakovich was in the hall but did not come backstage because of what one colleague called his "painful modesty."

Aram Katchaturian, famed Soviet Armenian Compcser, exclaimed "marvelous, marvelous!" repeatedly when asked what he thought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fantastic," "unbelievable" and "sublime."

Tonight's audience included most of Moscow's diplomatic colony, who had received special invitations from Walter N. Walmsley, junior United States chargé d'affaires.

The orchestra, which arrived here this morning by train from Leningrad, will give two concerts here tomorrow under the direction of Pierre Monteux. They will leave Monday for Prague.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124
SEP 9 1956

Boston Symphony Acclaimed in Moscow

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UP)—A firrst-night audience which included some of Russia's foremost composers and music critics tonight hailed the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some 2,000 representatives of Moscow's musical elite were on hand for the first of the three concerts the orchestra will play here. The audience included composers Dmitry Shostakovich and Aram Khachaturian, violinist David Oistrakh, top officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture as well as music critics and enthusiasts.

Conductor Charles Munch took five bows after the orchestra's performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" and another five bows at the conclusion of the concert.

The thunderous applause for the performance of the 105-man orchestra lasted more than five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "Bravo" and "Bis" ("encore").

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506
SEP 9 1956

BOSTON S IN SOVIET

MOSCOW, Sept
touring symphony from two sell out Leningrad, was w cow today by mo
sian musicians and cultural leaders.

Among those who met the orchestra at the railroad station was David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who played with the Boston group when he toured the United States last winter.

The orchestra's 105 members were housed in Moscow's new Pekin Hotel. The Soviet hosts arranged a quick sight-seeing tour of the Kremlin in advance of tonight's concert.

The visiting musicians were giv-

dining room in the nner was arranged
uite early for Mos-it them to prepare concert opening.
cow hotels serve 10 p.m. and mid-

[158]

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 9,

Boston Symphony Gets Standing Ovation At First Concert in Moscow Conservatory

By WELLES HANGEN

Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Soviet Union's musical elite gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a tumultuous reception tonight culminating in a ten-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played two encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said tonight's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surpassed anything the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth ... Piston unkno... velope... led ... Ravel' Chloe'

Rhy... among... tors w... compl... quets ...

The ... who w... 26, to... clusio... gram, ... to lea... then ... Adagi... phony ... moven... No. 10...

For ... hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

Backstage, Mr. Munch, with a towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country.

Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of Soviet composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United States, crowded into the small room with his son Igor, also a violinist. Dmitri Shostakovich was in the hall but did not come backstage because ... one colleague called his ...modesty."

...Katchaturian, famed ...rmenian composer, ex... marvelous, marvelous!" ...y when asked what he ... of the performance. ...ectives heard frequent... "incomparable," "fan... ...nbelievable" and "sub...

...'s audience included ...oscow's diplomatic col... had received special in... from Walter N. Walms... ...r United States chargé

...chestra, which arrived ... morning by train from ..., will give two con... ...e tomorrow under the ... of Pierre Monteux. ...l leave Monday for

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
SEP 1 0 1956

MOSCOW'S MOOD IS FOUND CHILLY

Visitor, Expecting a 'Thaw' in Russians' Demeanor, Meets Wintry Attitude

By WILLIAM J. JORDAN

Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—If this is the thaw, it must have been a bitterly cold winter. That was the first and dominant impression of this correspondent, who arrived recently in the Soviet Union.

The amicable spirit that followed the Geneva conference of the heads of Government of Britain, France, the Soviet Union and the United States and a "new era of friendliness" were supposed to be fresh keynotes in Soviet policy. It seemed a fair assumption that if those attitudes were genuine they would have filtered down from the highest Government levels to the man in the street. However, the friendlier attitudes seem to have been diverted or cut off somewhere along the line.

Without experiencing it first-hand, it is difficult for the average American to conceive of the suspicion, distrust or even fear that is encountered here every day. An attitude of mind has been instilled that evidently cannot be altered over night.

Nor can there be much expectation that a change will come in the near future. In the newspapers, which are controlled by the Communist party or the Soviet Government, the Soviet reader still is told daily that "powerful groups" in the United States want war, that United States bases threaten Soviet security, that Americans support colonialism and the oppression of minorities, and so forth.

Effect of Barrage Unclear

It is impossible to judge, at least in so short a time, how much of this daily fare of criticism of the United States and other Western powers is believed by the average Russian. It has certainly convinced him of the wisdom of avoiding any unnecessary contact with or friendliness toward foreigners.

It would be unfair to say that the feeling is universal. A taxi driver one night said he had relatives in New York and Detroit. He added that he liked Americans and even that he would like to go to the United States. A musician in Leningrad was most friendly and lavish in his praise of United States music in general and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which is touring the Soviet Union, in particular.

There might even be encouragement in the fact that the Soviet Government finds it necessary to criticize the United States so much and so often and to jam United States broadcasts. It must be in doubt about how successful its campaign has really been with its own people. It is true there has been some lowering of bars against contact with Westerners, but only a little.

The Soviet leaders now and then submit to questioning by foreign correspondents at diplomatic receptions, but then only to say what they want the world to hear. They know, of course, that undesirable parts will be deleted by a censor from the dispatches foreign newsmen write.

Censorship Is Noted

The fact that the Soviet Union still retains censorship over dispatches to the outside world, a practice that has largely disappeared elsewhere, is itself indicative of the state of mind here. Reporters rarely have a chance to obtain news direct to the source. They must get permission for every visit outside Moscow and for every interview with a Soviet official.

If one wishes to ask a question or visit a factory or even have six pork chops delivered by the Gastronom (grocery chain store), a letter must be written. There may not be an answer and it may or may not be "yes." That is, except for the pork chops, which are delivered the following day.

One correspondent asked months ago to visit one of the new Soviet boarding schools that are scheduled to become the basis of Soviet education. He is still waiting. Another wanted permission to go home to the United States through Vladivostok, in the Soviet Far East. He was turned down.

This official attitude toward foreigners has had a powerful influence over the common people, a people noted in fiction and memory for their warmth and friendliness. It is an unhappy task to report that they seem so no longer, except on rare occasions.

If this is the thaw, spring still seems a long way off.

...PRAGUE

...AN...

...)—The Boston Symphony ... stand in the Soviet Union ...r Prague, Czechoslovakia,

...r members of the orches... ...id the ovations they re... during two days in Len... and the last two days ...scow were the warmest ...ad ever experienced.

... reaction of critics has ...nanimously favorable.

... Soviet Union's musical ...eaded by composer Aram ...aturian and violinist ... Oistrakh, turned out for ...rewell banquet.

...chaturian said he looked ...d to further musical ex...es between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

...The ... pean t... wester... viet U...

The ... played ... Sunday ... guest c... who w... encore ... wild c... two.

Char... tra's c... ment "... viet U... words ... ings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

...ion and p... of viewing.

Sept 9

Russians Cheer U.S. Orchestra, Call for More

Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired Conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of Deputy Ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

Great Ovation

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star-Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1956.

Boston Symphony Gets Standing Ovation At First Concert in Moscow Conservatory

By WELLES HANGEN

Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Soviet Union's musiical elite gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a tumultuous reception tonight culminating in a ten-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played tow encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said tonight's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surprassed anything the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. Real frenzy developed after Mr. Munch had led the musicicians through Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the conductor's podium.

The white-haired conductor, who will be 65 years old on Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

Backstage, Mr. Munch, with a towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country.

Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of Soviet composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United States, crowded into the small room with his son Igor, also a violinist. Dmitri Shostakovich was in the hall but did not come backstage because of what one colleague called his "painful modesty."

Aram Katchaturian, famed Soviet Armenian Composer, exclaimed "marvelous, marvelous!" repeatedly when asked what he thought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fantastic," "unbelievable" and "sublime."

Tonight's audience included most of Moscow's diplomatic colony, who had received special invitations from Walter N. Walmsley, junior United States chargé d'affaires.

The orchestra, which arrived here this morning by train from Leningrad, will give two concerts here tomorrow under the direction of Pierre Monteux. They will leave Monday for Prague.

STRI...

Two W... Skirm...

Spec...

CHES...

Chester ... its Satu... its repor... office wo...

The w... gan at 6 ... hour bar... managen... of the ... Greater ... to reach ... contract, ... Sept. 1.

Anothe... was set f... paper do... day.

Two v... treated a... bruises a... picket lin...

About ... newspape... members ... unions ... stereotype... drivers ... picket lin...

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SEATTLE, WASH.
TIMES
Circ. D. 204,260 - S. 237,502
SEP 9 1956

Boston Music Charms 3,000 Muscovites

MOSCOW, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3,000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired conductor ...unch led the 105 mu... ...a program that visit... ... critics said set a ... for the 75-year-old ...n. There were two ...hereas Munch often ...ne.

...n Russia's musical ... a scattering of de... ...ers and other So... ...rs and other Soviet ...ended the concert.

...estra repeated the ... the first of two ...gave in Leningrad: ... Eroica Symphony, ...mphony by Walter ...essor of music at ...iversity, and Ra... Daphnis and Chloe

...d the orchestra in ...atioanl anthem and ... Spangled Banner" ...nning the regular ...ome Rusians said ...irst time they had ...American National

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 1 0 1956

5 Stage Calls For Guest Conductor

Moscow Hails Boston Symphony, Monteaux

By WILLIAM MOORE

(Boston Traveler-Chicago Tribune Dispatch)

MOSCOW—A tired but happy man of 81 made his way five times today from the podium of the Moscow Conservatory to the wings at the end of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's second Moscow concert.

And five times he was called back by a cheering audience for an ovation that still was shaking the rafters when the orchestra left the stage.

FOR 2 SEASONS WAS WITH MET

The hero of the occasion was Pierre Monteaux, Paris born guest director of the orchestra, who was conductor of the San Francisco symphony orchestra for 15 years. For the past two seasons he has been with the Metropolitan Opera in New York.

His triumph was a s great as that achieved earlier by the orchestra's regular conductor, Charles Munch, at the opening Moscow concert.

Munch scored another notable sucess at the final concert where Aaron Copeland's "Symphonic Ode" was exceptionally well received.

All the programs here opened with the playing of the Star Spangled Banner and the Russian Anthem.

The orchestra which played to packed houses both here and in Leningrad is touring Europe as part of its 75th anniversary celebration.

PIERRE MONTEUX

...n, professor ... University, ... Daphnis and

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C-Major Symphony and the last movement from Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

Candidate's Son For Opponent

AUBURN, Me:—It's just as well that Jotham Trafton, 9, isn't old enough to vote.

Jotham is the son of Willis A. Trafton, Jr., Republican candidate for governor.

"I'm for Muskie," said Jotham when he appeared on a television program with his father.

The boy is supporting Democrat Gov. Edmund S. Muskie because a Trafton victory would mean moving to Augusta.

Jotham wants to remain with his friends in Auburn.

New England Newsc...
Box 2078, Boston 6 • R...

Post (m)
BOSTON, ...
Independent D...
Circ. 264,...
SEP 1 0 1...

Symphony ... Biggest Ova...

MOSCOW, Monda... (AP)—The Boston ... Orchestra ended a ... four-day stand in ... Union Sunday night a... early today for Pragu... ...lovakia, in six specia...

The 105-piece ... played two concert... Sunday. The first ... guest conductor, ...eux, who was calle... one encore and set ... to wild cheering by ... two.

Members of th... said the ovations ... during two days in L... and the last two days ... ...cow were the warmest ... ever experienced.

New England Newsclip A...
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richm...

Berkshire E...
PITTSFIEL...
Independ...
Circ. 27,...
SEP 1...

SEVERAL BO... ...phony Orchestra, ...pilberg, concertma... ...ager of BSO, standi...

New England Newsclip Age...
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmon...

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Co...
Republican
Circ. 94,124

...Newsclip Agency, Inc.
...n 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628
SEP 1 0 1956

HUB'S SYMPHONY HOPS FOR PRAGUE

MOSCOW, Monday (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia, in six special planes. The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

[15

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 9,

Boston Symphony Gets Standing Ovation At First Concert in Moscow Conservatory

By WELLES HANGEN

Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Soviet Union's musical elite gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a tumultuous reception tonight culminating in a ten-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played two encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said tonight's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surpassed anything the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. Real frenzy developed after Mr. Munch had led the musicians through Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the podium.

The white-haired conductor, who will be 65 years old on Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

Backstage, Mr. Munch, with a towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country.

Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of Soviet composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United States, crowded into the small room with his son Igor, also a violinist. Dmitri Shostakovich was in the hall but did not come backstage because of what one colleague called his "painful modesty."

Aram Katchaturian, famed Soviet Armenian composer, exclaimed "marvelous, marvelous!" repeatedly when asked what he thought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fantastic," "unbelievable" and "sublime."

Tonight's audience included most of Moscow's diplomatic colony, who had received special invitations from Walter N. Walmsley, junior United States chargé d'affaires.

The orchestra, which arrived here this morning by train from Leningrad, will give two concerts here tomorrow under the direction of Pierre Monteux. They will leave Monday for Prague.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

SEP 1 0 1956

Boston Symphony Departs With Soviets Crying Encore

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia, in six special planes.

It will be the first time in 25 years that an American orchestra will have given a concert in Czechoslovakia.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major Western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105 - piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said "Our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

SEP 1 0 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY HEADS FOR PRAGUE

By ROY ESSOYAN

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia, in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux, who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

---

ion and p

of viewing.

Sept 9

Russians Cheer U.S. Orchestra, Call for More

Los Ang. Times

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired Conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of Deputy Ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

Great Ovation

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Munch returned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star-Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Russians said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 1 0 1956

y 9:15 A.M. to 8:30 P.M.

HITE'S

sale!

LIMITED TIME
ONLY

$3 size now only $1.50

ars

ure Cream

Aaron Copeland's Symphonic Ode" was exceptionally well received.

All the programs here opened with the playing of the Star Spangled Banner and the Russian Anthem.

The orchestra which played to packed houses both here and in Leningrad is touring Europe as part of its 75th anniversary celebration.

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1956.

Boston Symphony Gets Standing Ovation At First Concert in Moscow Conservatory

By WELLES HANGEN

Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Soviet Union's musiical elite gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a tumultuous reception tonight culminating in a ten-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played tow encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said tonight's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surprassed anything the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. Real frenzy developed after Mr. Munch had led the musicicians through Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the conductor's podium.

The white-haired conductor, who will be 65 years old on Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

Backstage, Mr. Munch, with a towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country.

Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of Soviet composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United States, crowded into the small room with his son Igor, also a violinist. Dmitri Shostakovich was in the hall but did not come backstage because of what one colleague called his "painful modesty."

Aram Katchaturian, famed Soviet Armenian Composer, exclaimed "marvelous, marvelous!" repeatedly when asked what he thought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fantastic," "unbelievable" and "sublime."

Tonight's audience included most of Moscow's diplomatic colony, who had received special invitations from Walter N. Walmsley, junior United States chargé d'affaires.

The orchestra, which arrived here this morning by train from Leningrad, will give two concerts here tomorrow under the direction of Pierre Monteux. They will leave Monday for Prague.

STRI

Two W Skirm

Spe

CHES

Chester its Satu its repor office wo

The w gan at 6 hour bar managen of the Greater to reach contract,
Sept. 1.

Anoth was s paper de day.

Two treated a bruises a picket lin

About newspape members unions stereotype drivers picket lin

STARS & STRIPES

Sept 10, 1956

Soviet Capital Hails Boston Symphony

MOSCOW, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3,000 shouting for more Saturday night.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, the sixth symphony of Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's "Second Daphnis and Chloe Suite."

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C-Major Symphony and the last movement from Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SEATTLE, WASH.
TIMES
Circ. D. 204,260 · S. 237,502

SEP 9 1956

Boston Music Charms 3,000 Muscovites

MOSCOW, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital, left an audience of nearly 3,000 shouting for more tonight.

White-haired conductor Charles Munch led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Munch often permits none.

Leaders in Russia's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's second Daphnis and Chloe suite.

Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet natioanl anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Rusians said it was the first time they had heard the American National anthem.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. [illegible],628

SEP [illegible] 56

HUB'S SYMPHONY HOPS FOR PRAGUE

MOSCOW, Monday (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia, in six special planes. The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

New England Newscli
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Ri

Post (m
BOSTON,
Independent D
Circ. 264,

SEP 1 0 1

Symphony Biggest Ova

MOSCOW, Monday (AP)—The Boston Orchestra ended a four-day stand in Union Sunday night a early today for Pragu slovakia, in six specia

The 105-piece played two concert Sunday. The first guest conductor, Pi teux who was calle one encore and set to wild cheering by two.

Members of the said the ovations during two days in L and the last two days cow were the warmest ever experienced.

New England Newsclip Ag
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmo

Berkshire Eag
PITTSFIELD,
Independe
Circ. 27,

SEP 1

SEVERAL BO
phony Orchestra,
pilberg, concertm
ager of BSO, stand

---

ew England Newsclip Ag
x 2078, Boston 6 • Richmo

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Co
Republican
Circ. 94,124

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

SEP 1 0 1956

Symphony Given Biggest Ovations

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia, in six special planes.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

SEP 1 0 1956

United Press

SEVERAL BOUQUETS are presented Charles Munch, right, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, prior to the orchestra's concert in Leningrad, U.S.S.R., early this week. Ilya Schpilberg, concertmaster of the Leningrad Symphony, makes the presentation. Thomas D. Perry, manager of BSO, stands at extreme left. Orchestra flew to Prague today for a concert tomorrow night.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

SEP 1 0 1956

Boston Symphony Ends Soviet Tour

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteaux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist Davis Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sun (m)
LEWISTON-AUBURN, Me.
Independent
Circ. 31,208

SEP 1 0 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY ENDS RUSSIAN TOUR

Conductor Monteux Causes Wild Cheering With 2 Encores

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 AP—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

SEP 1 0 1956

Moscow Gives Ovation To Boston Orchestra

By the Associated Press

Moscow

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital Sept. 8, continued its triumphal tour of Soviet cities.

The white-haired conductor, Charles Munch, led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Mr. Munch rarely permits any.

Leaders in the Soviet Union's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's Second "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C major symphony and the last movement from Haydn's B flat symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Mr. Munch reurned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Mr. Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star-Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Soviet citizens said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra least year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

Independent
Circ. 154,300
SEP 1 0 1956

LONDON, Sept. 10 (Reuters)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which gave five concerts in Leningrad and Moscow, left for Prague today, Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported.

C.C.P. Paris 5462-57 - Tél. OPE. 26.21 à 23

La République de Lyon

10 SEPT 1956

En présence des plus grands musiciens soviétiques

L'orchestre symphonique de Boston a donné son premier concert à Moscou

Moscou (de notre correspondant permanent Pierre Hentges). — Le concert donné samedi soir à Moscou dans la grande salle du conservatoire par l'orchestre symphonique de Boston représente sans aucun doute la plus importante manifestation de collaboration culturelle entre l'Union Soviétique et les Etats-Unis à laquelle on ait jamais assisté ici.

La scène était ornée des drapeaux américains et soviétiques. Après les hymnes nationaux, Charles Munch (notre compatriote) a dirigé successivement la Symphonie Héroïque de Beethoven, la Symphonie Numéro six de l'Américain Piston, mais il connut son plus grand succès par son interprétation de Daphnis et Chloé de Ravel, dont il a surmonté avec aisance les difficultés extraordinaires.

Les plus grands représentants de la musique soviétique assistaient au concert : Chostakovitch, qui ne dissimulait pas son émotion, m'a dit : « Cet orchestre me plait énormément. Munch est excellent »: Khatchatourian s'est écrié : « C'est grandiose, la sonorité des bois est remarquable ». Oistrakh a rappelé qu'il avait eu le plaisir de jouer avec cet ensemble aux Etats-Unis. Il attendait avec impatience: « C'est un des meilleurs orchestres du monde a-t-il déclaré. J'aime sur-

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

SEP 1 0 1956

Symphony Ends Tour Of Russia

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105 - piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Experience 'Unique'

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

Triumphant Moscow Concerts Complete BSO Soviet Tour

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra flew into Prague today in six special planes after completing a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow yesterday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux, who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Unique Experience

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Minister of Culture.

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Khachturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

Standing Ovation

The Soviet Union's musical elite gave the orchestra a tumultous reception Saturday night culminating in a 10-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played two encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said Saturday's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surpassed any thing the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. Real frenzy developed after Munch had led the musicians through Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic Clapping

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the podium.

The white-haired conductor, who will be 65 years old Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For 10 minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

After the concert in Prague tomorrow night, the orchestra leaves for Vienna.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON D. C.
STAR

SEP 1 0 1956

Boston Symphony Hailed As Russian Visit Ends

MOSCOW, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Boston Symphony orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union last night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia, in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux, who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement: "Our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feeling." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of culture.

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Mr. Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Mr. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

[160]

THE

10¢

Sports

MONITOR, BOSTON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1956

Sports

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

SEP 1 0 1956

Symphony Given Biggest Ovations

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia, in six special planes.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

SEP 1 0 1956

Boston Symphony Ends Soviet Tour

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteaux (who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist Davis Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sun (m)
LEWISTON-AUBURN, Me.
Independent
Circ. 31,208

SEP 1 0 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY ENDS RUSSIAN TOUR

Conductor Monteux Causes Wild Cheering With 2 Encores

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 AP—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

SEP 1 0 1956

Moscow Gives Ovation To Boston Orchestra

By the Associated Press

Moscow

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital Sept. 8, continued its triumphal tour of Soviet cities.

The white-haired conductor, Charles Munch, led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Mr. Munch rarely permits any.

Leaders in the Soviet Union's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's Second "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite.

At the conclusion the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C major symphony and the last movement from Haydn's B flat symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience gave the musicians a standing ovation. Mr. Munch reurned repeatedly from the wings of the auditorium in the Tschaikovsky Conservatory. He held up two fingers to show he had already given his encores.

Before leading the musicians from the stage, he presented the orchestra's woman first flute player, Doriot A. Dwyer, who was applauded for her important part on the program.

Mr. Munch led the orchestra in the Soviet national anthem and "The Star-Spangled Banner" before beginning the regular program. Some Soviet citizens said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra least year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

SEP 1 0 1956

United Press

SEVERAL BOUQUETS are presented Charles Munch, right, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, prior to the orchestra's concert in Leningrad, U.S.S.R., early this week. Ilya Schpilberg, concertmaster of the Leningrad Symphony, makes the presentation. Thomas D. Perry, manager of BSO, stands at extreme left. Orchestra flew to Prague today for a concert tomorrow night.

Independent
Circ. 154,300

SEP 1 0 1956

LONDON, Sept. 10 (Reuters)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which gave five concerts in Leningrad and Moscow, left for Prague today, Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported.

C.C.P. Paris 5462-57 - Tél. OPE. 26.21 à 23

La République de Lyon

10 SEPT 1956

En présence des plus grands musiciens soviétiques

L'orchestre symphonique de Boston a donné son premier concert à Moscou

Moscou (de notre correspondant permanent Pierre Hentges). — Le concert donné samedi soir à Moscou dans la grande salle du conservatoire par l'orchestre symphonique de Boston représente sans aucun doute la plus importante manifestation de collaboration culturelle entre l'Union Soviétique et les Etats-Unis à laquelle on ait jamais assisté ici.

La scène était ornée des drapeaux américains et soviétiques. Après les hymnes nationaux, Charles Munch (notre compatriote) a dirigé successivement la Symphonie Héroïque de Beethoven, la Symphonie Numéro six de l'Américain Piston, mais il connut son plus grand succès par son interprétation de Daphnis et Chloé de Ravel, dont il a surmonté avec aisance les difficultés extraordinaires.

Les plus grands représentants de la musique soviétique assistaient au concert. Chostakovitch, qui ne dissimulait pas son émotion, m'a dit : « Cet orchestre me plait énormément. Munch est excellent »: Khatchatourian s'est écrié : « C'est grandiose, la sonorité des bois est remarquable ». Oistrakh a rappelé qu'il avait eu le plaisir de jouer avec cet ensemble aux Etats-Unis. Il attendait avec impatience: « C'est un des meilleurs orchestres du monde, a-t-il déclaré. J'aime sur-

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

SEP 1 0 1956

Symphony Ends Tour Of Russia

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal fourday stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Experience 'Unique'

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

Triumphant Moscow Concerts Complete BSO Soviet Tour

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra flew into Prague today in six special planes after completing a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow yesterday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux, who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Unique Experience

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Minister of Culture.

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Khachturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

Standing Ovation

The Soviet Union's musical elite gave the orchestra a tumultous reception Saturday night culminating in a 10-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played two encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said Saturday's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surpassed any thing the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. Real frenzy developed after Munch had led the musicians through Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic Clapping

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the podium.

The white-haired conductor, who will be 65 years old Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For 10 minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

After the concert in Prague tomorrow night, the orchestra leaves for Vienna.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON D. C.
STAR

SEP 1 0 1956

Boston Symphony Hailed As Russian Visit Ends

MOSCOW, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Boston Symphony orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union last night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia, in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux, who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement: "Our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feeling." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of culture.

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Mr. Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Mr. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

[165]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

SEP 1 0 1956

Symphony Given Biggest Ovations

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia, in six special planes.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor, Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,048

SEP 1 0 1956

Boston Symphony Ends Soviet Tour

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteaux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist Davis Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sun (m)
LEWISTON-AUBURN, Me.
Independent
Circ. 31,208

SEP 1 0 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY ENDS RUSSIAN TOUR

Conductor Monteux Causes Wild Cheering With 2 Encores

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

SEP 1 0 1956

Moscow Gives Ovation To Boston Orchestra

By the Associated Press

Moscow

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, presenting the first of three concerts in the Soviet capital Sept. 8, continued its triumphal tour of Soviet cities.

The white-haired conductor, Charles Munch, led the 105 musicians in a program that visiting Boston critics said set a new mark for the 75-year-old organization. There were two encores, whereas Mr. Munch rarely permits any.

Leaders in the Soviet Union's musical world, plus a scattering of deputy ministers and other Soviet officials, attended the concert.

The orchestra repeated the program of the first of two concerts it gave in Leningrad: Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, professor of music at Harvard University, and Ravel's Second "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite.

At the conclusion, the audience shouted repeatedly for more. The two encores were the adagio movement from Schumann's C major symphony and the last movement from Haydn's B flat symphony No. 102.

After the encores the audience ... standing ... ular program. Some Soviet citizens said it was the first time they had heard the American national anthem.

David Oistrakh, noted Soviet violinist who was a guest soloist with the Boston orchestra least year in America, welcomed the American musicians and presented flowers to them.

You May Buy on Extended Payments... 1/3 in Oct., 1/3 in Nov., 1/3 in Dec.

C.C.P. Paris

La Répub

1 an : 6

SOCIET

AGEN

13, av. de l'

En présence des musiciens so

L'orchestre sy de Boston a donné son premier concert à Moscou

Moscou (de notre correspondant permanent Pierre Hentges). — Le concert donné samedi soir à Moscou dans la grande salle du conservatoire par l'orchestre symphonique de Boston représente sans aucun doute la plus importante manifestation de collaboration culturelle entre l'Union Soviétique et les Etats-Unis à laquelle on ait jamais assisté ici.

La scène était ornée des drapeaux américains et soviétiques. Après les hymnes nationaux, Charles Munch (notre compatriote) a dirigé successivement la Symphonie Héroïque de Beethoven, la Symphonie Numéro six de l'Américain Piston, mais il connut son plus grand succès par son interprétation de Daphnis et Chloé de Ravel, dont il a surmonté avec aisance les difficultés extraordinaires.

Les plus grands représentants de la musique soviétique assistaient au concert : Chostakovitch, qui ne dissimulait pas son émotion, m'a dit : « Cet orchestre me plait énormément. Munch est excellent » : Khatchatourian s'est écrié : « C'est grandiose, la sonorité des bois est remarquable ». Oistrakh a rappelé qu'il avait eu le plaisir de jouer avec cet ensemble aux Etats-Unis. Il attendait avec impatience : « C'est un des meilleurs orchestres du monde a-t-il déclaré. J'aime sur-

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

SEP 1 0 1956

LONDON, Sept. 10 (Reuters)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which gave five concerts in Leningrad and Moscow, left for Prague today, Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WASHINGTON D. C.
STAR

SEP 1 0 1956

Boston Symphony Hailed As Russian Visit Ends

MOSCOW, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Boston Symphony orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union last night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia, in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux, who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement: "Our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feeling." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of culture.

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Mr. Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Mr. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

[160]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

SEP 1 0 1956

United Press

SEVERAL BOUQUETS are presented Charles Munch, right, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, prior to the orchestra's concert in Leningrad, U.S.S.R., early this week. Ilya Schpilberg, concertmaster of the Leningrad Symphony, makes the presentation. Thomas D. Perry, manager of BSO, stands at extreme left. Orchestra flew to Prague today for a concert tomorrow night.

Triumphant Moscow Concerts Complete BSO Soviet Tour

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra flew into Prague today in six special planes after completing a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow yesterday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux, who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Unique Experience

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Minister of Culture.

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Khachturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

Standing Ovation

The Soviet Union's musical elite gave the orchestra a tumultous reception Saturday night culminating in a 10-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played two encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said Saturday's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surpassed any thing the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. Real frenzy developed after Munch had led the musicians through Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic Clapping

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the podium.

The white-haired conductor, who will be 65 years old Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For 10 minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

After the concert in Prague tomorrow night, the orchestra leaves for Vienna.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

SEP 1 0 1956

~~Symphony~~ Ends Tour Of Russia

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Experience 'Unique'

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS
N° de débit
CUTTING BUREAU
Les Allobroges
GRENOBLE
10 SEPTEMBRE 1956

En présence des plus grands
musiciens soviétiques

4767

L'orchestre symphonique de Boston a donné son premier concert à Moscou

Moscou (de notre correspondant permanent Pierre Hentges). — Le concert donné samedi soir à Moscou dans la grande salle du conservatoire par l'orchestre symphonique de Boston représente sans aucun doute la plus importante manifestation de collaboration culturelle entre l'Union Soviétique et les Etats-Unis à laquelle on ait jamais assisté ici.

La scène était ornée des drapeaux américains et soviétiques. Après les hymnes nationaux, Charles Munch (notre compatriote) a dirigé successivement la Symphonie Héroïque de Beethoven, la Symphonie Numéro six de l'Américain Piston, mais il connut son plus grand succès par son interprétation de Daphins et Chloé de Ravel, dont il a surmonté avec aisance les difficultés extraordinaires.

Les plus grands représentants de la musique soviétique assistaient au concirt. Chostakovitch, qui ne dissimulait pas son émotion, m'a dit : « Cet orchestre me plaît énormément. Munch est excellent ». Khatchatourian s'est écrié : « C'est grandiose, la sonorité des bois est remarquable ». Oistrakh a rappelé qu'il avait eu le plaisir de jouer avec cet ensemble aux Etats-Unis. Il attendait avec impatience: « C'est un des meilleurs orchestres du monde, a-t-il déclaré. J'aime surtout Munch, j'admire sa manière, son style, sa noblesse, son dépouillement ».

Hier, l'orchestre philharmonique de Boston, a donné à Moscou deux nouveaux concerts qui ont été dirigés par Charles Munch et le doyen des chefs d'orchestre français Pierre Monteux.

(Riks. 23 89 40)
CUTTING BUREAU
Ny Dag
Stockholm
Kommunistisk
10 SEP 1956

4767
Eng

Bostonorkestern gjorde konsertsuccé i Moskva

MOSKVA ([illegible]) Ett historiskt datum inristades i Moskvas musikaliska historia då Bostons symfoniorkester på 123 man med stor framgång öppnade höstsäsongen med två och en halv timmas konsert i Konservatoriets stora sal. Konserten började med Sovjetunionens och Amerikas nationalhymner under ledning av den åttiotvååriga dirigenten Pierre Monteux. Bland publiken som hade ett stor inslag av unga studenter märktes spetsarna inom Sovjetunionens musikvärld. Konserten avtackades med ovationsartade applåder. Sjostakovitj föreföll märkbart rörd och uttalade efteråt sin varma beundran över Pierre Monteux som han betecknade som en storartad dirigent. Ett mycket högt betyg åt konserten gav likaledes den kände komponisten Chatjaturjan. Bland publiken märktes även den kände violinvirtuosen Oistrach som nyligen konserterat i USA. Under min turné i USA hade jag nöjet att spela med i Bostons symfoniorkester och kan nu här konstatera att den helt motsvarat förväntningarna, framhöll Oistrach.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973
SEP 1 0 1956

Hub Symphony Flies to Prague

MOSCOW (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed today for Prague, Czechoslovakia, in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said:

"Our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings."

He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
NEWS
SEP 1 0 1956

People

Pierre Monteux, for 15 years conductor of the San Francisco Symphony orchestra, got an ovation after conducting the Boston Symphony in its second Moscow concert.

Dr. Carlos Cama of Brazil was installed as president of the International College of Surgeons. Dr. Curtice Rossier of Dallas, Texas, was installed as head of the American section of the group in its meeting in Chicago.

Deaths

Daniel W. Sullivan, 67, co-owner of the Nevada Club in downtown Reno, yesterday in Reno.

John Frances Xavier Finn, 55, who resigned nine days ago as dean of the Fordham University Law School, Saturday, in Albany, N. Y.

Mrs. Chikako Kuni, 76, mother of the Empress of Japan, last night in Japan Red Cross Hospital.

Mario Ponzo, 46, who spent his lifetime as a scientist fighting cancer with radium, Saturday in Turin, Italy, of the effects of radiation.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
SEP 1 1 1956

RUSSIANS ACCLAIM BOSTON SYMPHONY

Moscow, Leningrad Critics Unanimous in Praise of Orchestra's 5 Concerts

Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 10—The first reviews are now in and Soviet critics have proclaimed the Boston Symphony an unqualified success in its concerts here.

The orchestra, the first American [illegible] ensemble to appear [illegible] Soviet Union, concl[illegible] five-concert tour here [illegible]. The 105-man organi[illegible] this morning for Pr[illegible] the remainder of its [illegible] visit to Europe's major [illegible].

Music[illegible] in Leningrad, wh[illegible] first played in [illegible] Moscow have des[illegible] musicians [illegible] latives. interest [illegible] the orche[illegible] percussion and brass sections were separated, unlike Soviet orchestras. This practice, said a Soviet writer, "cannot but attract our attention for its acoustic virtues."

Both Leningrad and Moscow critics said there could be some difference of opinion so far as conductor Charles Munch's interpretation of Beethoven was concerned in that the beauty of certain portions prevailed over "dramatic trends." They noted that "heroic, pathetic interpretation" was closer to Russian mood than the more dramatic French rendition of Mr. Munch.

Soviet critics found works by contemporary American composers Walter Piston, Paul Creston and Aaron Copland interesting but strange. They said that these works were almost unknown here.

"By and large it is good music," said a critic [illegible] Moscow [illegible] symphony were described as "wonderful," and a Moscow critic said there was "much beautiful music" in Creston's Second Symphony. The critics found Copland less satisfying, at least on first hearing, because of what they called his "superficial orchestral effects."

Mr. Munch and guest director Pierre Monteux were treated with high regard by Soviet critics. Mr. Munch especially was praised for his "clearness and heartiness."

SEP 1 0 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY HAILED IN MOSCOW

Receives Standing Ovation and Plays 2 Encores After First Concert in Capital

By WELLES HANGEN
Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Soviet Union's musical elite gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a tumultuous reception Saturday night culminating in a ten-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played two encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said Satrday's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surpassed anything the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. [illegible] Mr. Munch had led [illegible] through Ravel's [illegible] "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the podium.

The white-haired conductor, who will be 65 years old on Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

Backstage, Mr. Munch, with a towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country.

Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of Soviet composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United States, crowded into the small room with his son Igor, also a violinist. Dmitri Shostakovich was in the hall but did not come backstage because of what one colleague called his "painful modesty."

Aram Katchaturian, famed Soviet Armenian composer, exclaimed "marvelous, marvelous!" repeatedly when asked what he thought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fantastic," "unbelievable" and "sublime."

Saturday's audience included most of Moscow's diplomatic colony, who had received special invitations from Walter N. Walmsley, junior United States chargé d'affaires.

The orchestra, which arrived here Saturday morning by train from Leningrad, will give two concerts here Sunday under the direction of Pierre Monteux. They will leave Monday for Prague.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
[illegible] G BUREAU
[illegible] - New York
[illegible] RG, FLA.
70,006
1956

VARIETY

[illegible] led with Russian composers and [illegible] oston Symphony Orchestra a [illegible] turday night for its first per[illegible] Conductor Charles Munch took [illegible] received two standing ovations.
[illegible] were composers
[illegible] Khachaturian,
[illegible] Oleg Oistrakh, [illegible] ister of Culture

OISTRAKH

[illegible] re than 400 men
[illegible] terday to control
[illegible] n Gabriel moun[illegible] troyed some 600

acres of woodland in the Angeles National Forest.

A helicopter took a sick man from a Coast Guard cutter 75 miles at sea yesterday and brought him safely to a Boston hospital after he was stricken with what appeared to be a diabetic coma aboard the 84-foot fishing vessel "Jane B."

SHOSTAKOVICH

West Germany's new soldiers may be stylish, but not too stylish. A recent order permits them to wear their own shoes, shirts and socks with their blue - gray uniform — but no bright stripes on the socks, and no green shirts.

The Hungarian government plans to ask private farmers to produce more famed tokay wine. Output of the wine has fallen off since the Communists took over Hungary, but now the state will encourage farmers to re-plant ruined vineyards.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
SEP 1 0 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY ENDS SOVIET VISIT

Orchestra Leaves Moscow for Prague After Concert Led by Pierre Monteux

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union last night and headed early today for Prague in six special planes.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow today. The first was led by Pierre Monteux, who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's regular conductor, said in a statement: "Our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced. The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by Aram Khatchaturian and David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Mr. Khatchaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Mr. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEWPORT NEWS, VA.
PRESS
Circ. D. 27,410 - S. 43,920
SEP 1 0 1956

Boston Symphony Winds Up 4-Day Stand In Russia

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105 - piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set [illegible] ild cheering by [illegible]

[illegible] the orchestra's [illegible] statement "our [illegible] oviet Union has [illegible] ords exist to ex-
[illegible] ' He spoke at a [illegible] ponsored in the [illegible] by the Soviet [illegible] ritics has been [illegible] able.

[illegible] 's musical elite
[illegible] er Aram Khac-
[illegible] nist Davis Ois-
[illegible] or the farewell

[illegible] he looked for[illegible] sical exchanges [illegible] Union and the [illegible] rakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS
N° de débit
CUTTING BUREAU
Les Allobroges
GRENOBLE

10 SEPTEMBRE 1956

En présence des plus grands
L musiciens soviétiques

4767

L'orchestre symphonique de Boston a donné son premier concert à Moscou

Moscou (de notre correspondant permanent Pierre Hentges). — Le concert donné samedi soir à Moscou dans la grande salle du conservatoire par l'orchestre symphonique de Boston représente sans aucun doute la plus importante manifestation de collaboration culturelle entre l'Union Soviétique et les Etats-Unis à laquelle on ait jamais assisté ici.

La scène était ornée des drapeaux américains et soviétiques. Après les hymnes nationaux, Charles Munch (notre compatriote) a dirigé successivement la Symphonie Héroïque de Beethoven, la Symphonie Numéro six de l'Américain Piston, mais il connut son plus grand succès par son interprétation de Daphins et Chloé de Ravel, dont il a surmonté avec aisance les difficultés extraordinaires.

Les plus grands représentants de la musique soviétique assistaient au conclrt. Chostakovitch, qui ne dissimulait pas son émotion, m'a dit : « Cet orchestre me plait énormément. Munch est excellent ». Khatchatourian s'est écrié : « C'est grandiose, la sonorité des bois est remarquable ». Oistrakh a rappelé qu'il avait eu le plaisir de jouer avec cet ensemble aux Etats-Unis. Il attendait avec impatience: « C'est un des meilleurs orchestres du monde, a-t-il déclaré. J'aime surtout Munch, j'admire sa manière, son style, sa noblesse, son dépouillement ».

Hier, l'orchestre philharmonique de Boston, a donné à Moscou deux nouveaux concerts qui ont été dirigés par Charles Munch et le doyen des chefs d'orchestre français Pierre Monteux.

(Rikss. 23 89 40)
CUTTING BUREAU
Ny Dag
Stockholm
4767 Kommunistisk
10 SEP 1956

Bostonorkestern gjorde konsertsuccé i Moskva

MOSKVA (ND) Ett historiskt datum inristades i Moskvas musikaliska historia då Bostons symfoniorkester på 123 man med stor framgång öppnade höstsäsongen med två och en halv timmas konsert i Konservatoriets stora sal. Konserten började med Sovjetunionens och Amerikas nationalhymner under ledning av den åttiotvååriga dirigenten Pierre Monteux. Bland publiken som hade ett stor inslag av unga studenter märktes spetsarna inom Sovjetunionens musikvärld. Konserten avtackades med ovationsartade applåder. Sjostakovitj föreföll märkbart rörd och uttalade efteråt sin varma beundran över Pierre Monteux som han betecknade som en storartad dirigent. Ett mycket högt betyg åt konserten gav likaledes den kände komponisten Chatjaturjan. Bland publiken märktes även den kände violinvirtuosen Oistrach som nyligen konserterat i USA. Under min turné i USA hade jag nöjet att spela med i Bostons symfoniorkester och kan nu här konstatera att den helt motsvarat förväntningarna, framhöll Oistrach.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973

SEP 1 0 1956

Hub Symph

MOSCOW (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a tri-

---

e Marriage

g Americans still had to be on e job as usual on the Labor ay holiday—so the other 9 uld play.

That one of the most common idemic diseases of civilization one you probably never heard med before—plutomania, the orbid craving for wealth. (It ually hits me about two days fore payday.)

That Mayor Edmund Orgill Memphis wires music into his iting room. He is reported to the first burgomeister in the tion to employ this method to the angry taxpayers.

That it was O. Henry who said. "If men knew how women ss the time when they are one, they'd never marry."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
NEWS

SEP 1 0 1956

People

Pierre Monteux, for 15 years conductor of the San Francisco Symphony orchestra, got an ovation after conducting the Boston Symphony in its second Moscow concert.

Dr. Carlos Cama of Brazil was installed as president of the International College of the [illegible] Sur of as of Char

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (m)
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 534,376

SEP 1 0 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY HAILED IN MOSCOW

Receives Standing Ovation and Plays 2 Encores After First Concert in Capital

By WELLES HANGEN
Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Soviet Union's musical elite gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a tumultuous reception Saturday night culminating in a ten-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played two encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said Satrday's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surpassed anything the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. [illegible] developed after Mr. Munch had led the musicians through Ravel's second "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the podium.

The white-haired conductor, who will be 65 years old on Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

Backstage, Mr. Munch, with a towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country.

Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of Soviet composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United States, crowded into the small room with his son Igor, also a violinist. Dmitri Shostakovich was in the hall but did not come backstage because of what one colleague called his "painful modesty."

Aram Katchaturian, famed Soviet Armenian composer, exclaimed "marvelous, marvelous!" repeatedly when asked what he thought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fantastic," "unbelievable" and "sublime."

Saturday's audience included most of Moscow's diplomatic colony, who had received special invitations from Walter N. Walmsley, junior United States chargé d'affaires.

The orchestra, which arrived here Saturday morning by train from Leningrad, will give two concerts here Sunday under the direction of Pierre Monteux. They will leave Monday for Prague.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

SEP 11 1956

RUSSIANS ACCLAIM BOSTON SYMPHONY

Moscow, Leningrad Critics Unanimous in Praise of Orchestra's 5 Concerts

Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 10—The first reviews are now in and Soviet critics have proclaimed the Boston Symphony an unqualified success in its concerts here.

The orchestra, the first American symphonic ensemble to appear [illegible] the Soviet Union, concluded [illegible] five-concert tour here [illegible]. The 105-man organization left this morning for Prague and the remainder of its whirlwind visit to Europe's major [illegible].

Music [illegible] in Leningrad, where [illegible] first played in [illegible] Moscow have des musicians latives. interest the orche percussion and brass sections were separated, unlike Soviet orchestras. This practice, said a Soviet writer, "cannot but attract our attention for its acoustic virtues."

Both Leningrad and Moscow critics said there could be some difference of opinion so far as conductor Charles Munch's interpretation of Beethoven was concerned in that the beauty of certain portions prevailed over "dramatic trends." They noted that "heroic, pathetic interpretation" was closer to Russian mood than the more dramatic French rendition of Mr. Munch.

Soviet critics found works by contemporary American composers Walter Piston, Paul Creston and Aaron Copland interesting but strange. They said that these works were almost unknown here.

"By and large it is good music," said a critic [illegible] Moscow

[illegible] Symphony were described as "wonderful," and a Moscow critic said there was "much beautiful music" in Creston's Second Symphony. The critics found Copland less satisfying, at least on first hearing, because of what they called his "superficial orchestral effects."

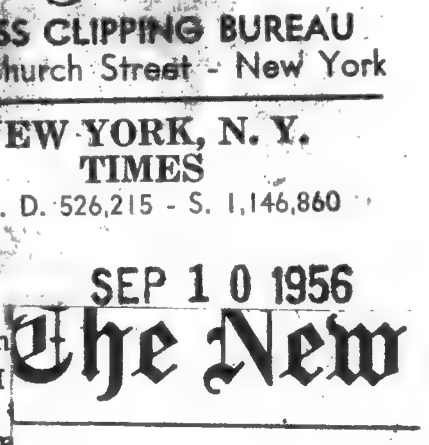
Mr. Munch and guest director Pierre Monteux were treated with high regard by Soviet critics. Mr. Munch especially was praised for his "clearness and heartiness."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

SEP 1 0 1956

The New

n Set Out to Sea



NO

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 66,426 - S. 70,006

SEP 1 0 1956

VARIETY

An audience filled with Russian composers and artists gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a standing ovation Saturday night for its first performance in Moscow. Conductor Charles Munch took five curtain calls and received two standing ovations. In the audience were composers Shostakovich and Khachaturian, violinists David and Oleg Oistrakh, and Soviet Vice-Minister of Culture M. Kaftanov.

OISTRAKH

In California, more than 400 men manned fire lines yesterday to control a brush fire in the San Gabriel mountains, which had destroyed some 600 acres of woodland in the Angeles National Forest.

SHOSTAKOVICH

A helicopter took a sick man from a Coast Guard cutter 75 miles at sea yesterday and brought him safely to a Boston hospital after he was stricken with what appeared to be a diabetic coma aboard the 84-foot fishing vessel "Jane B."

West Germany's new soldiers may be stylish, but not too stylish. A recent order permits them to wear their own shoes, shirts and socks with their blue - gray uniform — but no bright stripes on the socks, and no green shirts.

The Hungarian government plans to ask private farmers to produce more famed tokay wine. Output of the wine has fallen off since the Communists took over Hungary, but now the state will encourage farmers to re-plant ruined vineyards.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEWPORT NEWS, VA.
PRESS
Circ. D. 27,410 - S. 43,920

SEP 1 0 1956

Boston Symphony Winds Up 4-Day Stand In Russia

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105 - piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist Davis Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

Nº de débit PRESS BUREAU

Les Allobroges
GRENOBLE

10 SEPTEMBRE 1956

4767

En présence des plus grands musiciens soviétiques

L'orchestre symphonique de Boston a donné son premier concert à Moscou

Moscou (de notre correspondant permanent Pierre Hentges). — Le concert donné samedi soir à Moscou dans la grande salle du conservatoire par l'orchestre symphonique de Boston représente sans aucun doute la plus importante manifestation de collaboration culturelle entre l'Union Soviétique et les Etats-Unis à laquelle on ait jamais assisté ici.

La scène était ornée des drapeaux américains et soviétiques. Après les hymnes nationaux, Charles Munch (notre compatriote) a dirigé successivement la Symphonie Héroïque de Beethoven, la Symphonie Numéro six de l'Américain Piston, mais il connut son plus grand succès par son interprétation de Daphins et Chloé de Ravel, dont il a surmonté avec aisance les difficultés extraordinaires.

Les plus grands représentants de la musique soviétique assistaient au concirt. Chostakovitch, qui ne dissimulait pas son émotion, m'a dit : « Cet orchestre me plait énormément. Munch est excellent ». Khatchatourian s'est écrié : « C'est grandiose, la sonorité des bois est remarquable ». Oistrakh a rappelé qu'il avait eu le plaisir de jouer avec cet ensemble aux Etats-Unis. Il attendait avec impatience: « C'est un des meilleurs orchestres du monde, a-t-il déclaré. J'aime surtout Munch, j'admire sa manière, son style, sa noblesse, son dépouillement ».

Hier, l'orchestre philharmonique de Boston, a donné à Moscou deux nouveaux concerts qui ont été dirigés par Charles Munch et le doyen des chefs d'orchestre français Pierre Monteux.

(Rikss. 23 89 40)

Ny Dag
Stockholm
Kommunistisk
10 SEP 1956

4767

Bostonorkestern gjorde konsertsuccé i Moskva

MOSKVA (ND). Ett historiskt datum inristades i Moskvas musikaliska historia då Bostons symfoniorkester på 123 man med stor framgång öppnade höstsäsongen med två och en halv timmas konsert i Konservatoriets stora sal. Konserten började med Sovjetunionens och Amerikas nationalhymner under ledning av den åttiotvååriga dirigenten Pierre Monteux. Bland publiken som hade ett stor inslag av unga studenter märktes spetsarna inom Sovjetunionens musikvärld. Konserten avtackades med ovationsartade applåder. Sjostakovitj föreföll märkbart rörd och uttalade efteråt sin varma beundran över Pierre Monteux som han betecknade som en storartad dirigent. Ett mycket högt betyg åt konserten gav likaledes den kände komponisten Chatjaturjan. Bland publiken märktes även den kände violinvirtuosen Oistrach som nyligen konserterat i USA. Under min turné i USA hade jag nöjet att spela med i Bostons symfoniorkester och kan nu här konstatera att den helt motsvarat förväntningarna, framhöll Oistrach.

[161]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973

SEP 1 0 1956

Hub Symphe Marriage

MOSCOW (AP)--The Boston
ymphony Orchestra ended a tri-

Americans still had to be on e job as usual on the Labor ay holiday—so the other 9 uld play.

That one of the most common idemic diseases of civilization one you probably never heard med before—plutomania, the orbid craving for wealth. (It ually hits me about two days fore payday.)

That Mayor Edmund Orgill
Memphis wires music into his iting room. He is reported to the first burgomeister in the tion to employ this method to the angry taxpayers.

That it was O. Henry who said.
"If men knew how women ss the time when they are one, they'd never marry."

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
NEWS

SEP 1 0 1956

People

Pierre Monteux, for 15 years conductor of the San Francisco Symphony orchestra, got an ovation after conducting the Boston Symphony in its second Moscow concert.

Dr. Carlos Cama of Brazil was installed as president of the International College of Sur ent, expansion. McCarty placement of old buildings.

he said, noting that the displ behind a wide moat and ve low fence gave the animals natural setting.
Supervisor Harold S. Dob chairman of the board's finan committee, was sympathetic of the zoo's plight, too.
But he added a cautious, re
istic note:

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

SEP 11 1956

RUSSIANS ACCLAIM BOSTON SYMPHONY

Moscow, Leningrad Critics Unanimous in Praise of Orchestra's 5 Concerts

Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 10—The first reviews are now in and Soviet critics have proclaimed the Boston Symphony an unqualified success in its concerts here.

The orchestra, the first American symphonic ensemble to appear in the Soviet Union, concluded a five-concert tour here last night. The 105-man organization left this morning for Prague and the remainder of its whirlwind visit to Europe's major capitals.

Music critics in Leningrad, where [illegible] first played in [illegible] and Moscow have described the American musicians' performance in superlatives. They expressed great interest in the organization of the orchestra and noted that the percussion and brass sections were separated, unlike Soviet orchestras. This practice, said a Soviet writer, "cannot but attract our attention for its acoustic virtues."

Both Leningrad and Moscow critics said there could be some difference of opinion so far as conductor Charles Munch's interpretation of Beethoven was concerned in that the beauty of certain portions prevailed over "dramatic trends." They noted that "heroic, pathetic interpretation" was closer to Russian mood than the more dramatic French rendition of Mr. Munch.

Soviet critics found works by contemporary American composers Walter Piston, Paul Creston and Aaron Copland interesting but strange. They said that these works were almost unknown here.

"By and large it is good music," said a critic of a Moscow newspaper, "testifying to considerable orchestral culture of American composers."

The Scherzo and Adagio from Piston's Sixth Symphony were described as "wonderful," and a Moscow critic said there was "much beautiful music" in Creston's Second Symphony. The critics found Copland less satisfying, at least on first hearing, because of what they called his "superficial orchestral effects."

Mr. Munch and guest director Pierre Monteux were treated with high regard by Soviet critics. Mr. Munch especially was praised for his "clearness and heartiness."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (m)
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 534,376

SEP 1 0 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY HAILED IN MOSCOW

Receives Standing Ovation and Plays 2 Encores After First Concert in Capital

By WELLES HANGEN
Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8—The Soviet Union's musical elite gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a tumultuous reception Saturday night culminating in a ten-minute standing ovation after the orchestra had played two encores.

Observers who saw the Boston orchestra open Thursday in Leningrad said Satrday's outburst of acclaim in Moscow's packed Conservatory surpassed anything the orchestra had ever experienced.

The usually decorous elite of the Soviet capital went wild over the program, which began with Charles Munch leading the musicians in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica."

The excitement rose visibly as the orchestra moved into the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston, whose work is practically unknown here. [illegible] Mr. Munch had led the musicians through Ravel's Second "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite.

Rhythmic clapping broke out among 2,000 enthralled spectators when the Ravel work was completed. Two enormous bouquets were placed on the podium.

The white-haired conductor, who will be 65 years old on Sept. 26, took five bows at the conclusion of the scheduled program, but the audience refused to leave the hall. The orchestra then played two encores: the Adagio of Schumann's Symphony in C major and the last movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

For ten minutes thereafter the hall was filled with shouts of "Bravo" and frantic cries of approval. In the balcony young music students stamped their feet and pounded their hands together, and their enthusiasm was quickly transmitted to occupants of orchestra seats.

Backstage, Mr. Munch, with a towel draped over his shoulders, received embraces and congratulations of the musical great of this country.

Dmitri Boris Kabalevsky, head of the Union of Soviet composers, greeted him warmly. David Oistrakh, Soviet violinist who toured the United States, crowded into the small room with his son Igor, also a violinist. Dmitri Shostakovich was in the hall but did not come backstage because of what one colleague called his "painful modesty."

Aram Katchaturian, famed Soviet Armenian composer, exclaimed "marvelous, marvelous!" repeatedly when asked what he thought of the performance. Other adjectives heard frequently were "incomparable," "fantastic," "unbelievable" and "sublime."

Saturday's audience included most of Moscow's diplomatic colony, who had received special invitations from Walter N. Walmsley, junior United States chargé d'affaires.

The orchestra, which arrived here Saturday morning by train from Leningrad, will give two concerts here Sunday under the direction ~~of~~ Pierre Monteux. They will leave Monday for Prague.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

SEP 1 0 1956

The New

n Set Out to Se

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 66,426 - S. 70,006

SEP 1 0 1956

VARIETY

An audience filled with Russian composers and artists gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra a standing ovation Saturday night for its first performance in Moscow. Conductor Charles Munch took five curtain calls and received two standing ovations.

OISTRAKH

In the audience were composers Shostakovich and Khachaturian, violinists David and Oleg Oistrakh, and Soviet Vice-Minister of Culture M. Kaftanov.

In California, more than 400 men manned fire lines yesterday to control a brush fire in the San Gabriel mountains, which had destroyed some 600 acres of woodland in the Angeles National Forest.

A helicopter took a sick man from a Coast Guard cutter 75 miles at sea yesterday and brought him safely to a Boston hospital after he was stricken with what appeared to be a diabetic

Your Super Shell with TCP will also give yo power with anti-knock protection over your en from low throttle to full throttle.
Frankly, if your car performs well on a regular do not need Super Shell. You will get excellent

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street New York

NEWPORT NEWS, VA.
PRESS
Circ. D. 27,410

SEP 1 0 1956

Boston Symphony Winds Up 4-Day Stand In Russia

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (P)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended a triumphal four-day stand in the Soviet Union Sunday night and headed early today for Prague, Czechoslovakia in six special planes.

The orchestra is on a European tour. It is the first major western group to play in the Soviet Union.

The 105-piece organization played two concerts in Moscow Sunday. The first was led by guest conductor Pierre Monteux who was called back for one encore and set the audience to wild [illegible] by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's conductor, said in a statement "our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

The reaction of critics has been unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet.

Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

VOLUME 48 NO. 244

CS. Moni

Soviet C

oscow A

Moscow

h a warm sense of fulfill-the members of the Bos-ymphony Orchestra have ed fleet Soviet Aeroflot
s for the six-hour haul to
e. Both they and the Mos-music world will long re-er their weekend in this h of the three concerts rchestra played here—one pt. 8 and two on Sept. 9—

he sort of triumph musidream about but seldom ience.

roughout the performance
ers sat entranced, strain-and concentrating every y so as not to miss a sin-rand in this richly woven t of sound.

nt Attention

ring brief pauses in the silence in the hall was
and complete. But every er was followed by rafter-g applause.

ovation reached its cli-
Sunday night, at the end
e program. A medley of clapping, foot stamping, of "bravo" and "bis"
when applauding music
here employ Italian
would have made an college football crowd when conductor Charles
after several trips back
e podium from the wings,

SHELBY, N. C.

SEP 13 1956

A cultural exchange
this nation and Russia, under way, promises to even than trading hot dog

When President Eise spoke of widening "eve in the Iron Curtain," his an endorsement of, than this policy.

When "Porgy and Be
Russia this year, the cu both literally and figurati Symphony Orchestra, thr Moscow appearance, has up.

The reception given th
would make McArthur's

TIGHT BINDING

Y

ian composers and ony Orchestra a its first per-harles Munch took standing ovations.
osers
rian,
akh,
lture
men ontrol noun-600 s Na-
from t sea to a icken abetic

OISTRAKH

fying to con-
al culture of ers."
Adagio from mphony were derful," and a id there was nusic" in Cresmphony. The
and less satis-
first hearing,
hey called his stral effects."
guest director
were treated
d by Soviet ch especially this "clearness

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
ESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Church Street - New York

WPORT NEWS, VA.
PRESS
Circ. D. 27,410 - S. 43,920

SEP 10 1956

ton Symphony ds Up 4-Day nd In Russia

COW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—
oston Symphony Orchestra
a triumphal four-day stand
Soviet Union Sunday night
aded early today for Prague, oslovakia in six special orchestra is on a European t is the first major western to play in the Soviet Union.

105 - piece organization play-
o concerts in Moscow Sun-
The first was led by guest ctor Pierre Monteux who was back for one encore and set dience to wild cheering by them two.
les Munch, the orchestra's ctor, said in a statement "our ence in the Soviet Union has unique. No words exist to ex-my feelings." He spoke at a ell banquet sponsored in the stra's honor by the Soviet try of Culture.
reaction of critics has been mously favorable.
Soviet Union's musical elite
d by composer Aram Khac-ian and violinist Davis Oisturned out for the farewell
uet.
achaturian said he looked forto further musical exchanges een the Soviet Union and the d States. Oistrakh offered a to lasting friendship between two countries.

Times (e)

ME 48 NO. 244 COPYRIGHT 1956 BY THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE PUBLISHING SOCIETY BOSTON, TUESDAY,

C.S. Monitor Sept 11-

Press

Soviet Citizens Listen Intently to Boston Symphony Orchestra

oscow Acclaims Boston Symphony

Moscow

By Edmund Stevens
Special Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

a warm sense of fulfill-
the members of the Bos-Symphony Orchestra have fleet Soviet Aeroflot for the six-hour haul to Both they and the Mos-
music world will long re-their weekend in this

of the three concerts orchestra played here—one 8 and two on Sept. 9—sort of triumph musidream about but seldom
ence.

oughout the performance
sat entranced, strain-
and concentrating every so as not to miss a sin-and in this richly woven of sound.

nt Attention

ing brief pauses in the silence in the hall was
and complete. But every was followed by rafter-applause.

ovation reached its cli-
Sunday night, at the end program. A medley of apping, foot stamping,
of "bravo" and "bis"
when applauding music
here employ Italian
would have made an can college football crowd lukewarm.

when conductor Charles
after several trips back
podium from the wings, raised his baton for an encore, the racket ceased instantaneously.

"Fabulous" was the word orchestra members most frequently used to describe this audience reaction.

Muscovites, for their part, were lavish in their praise of the orchestra, using the Russian language's rich stock of superlatives. Most of the country's leading composers, music critics, and musicians were present and all seemed enthusiastic.

After the concert they came to a farewell reception for the orchestra where toasts and speeches were exchanged.

Famed violinist David Oistrakh, who played with the Boston Symphony during his American tour voiced "deep warmth and gratitude for such supreme musical artistry." Noted composer Aram Khatchaturian declared the quality of playing was beyond verbal description, that every individual musician in the orchestra was a great virtuoso, and singled out one of the orchestra's two women, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, who plays first flute, for special mention.

Press notices were in similar terms. One rave reviewer in a Leningrad paper after concerts in that city previous to the Moscow stand likened the orchestra's performance to a "sculptured monument graven into the listener's consciousness."

While both in private and public there was only highest praise for the orchestra and its conductors, this writer did hear the program criticized.

Omission Noticed

One person asked, "Why so much Haydn? Twice in one day." Nor did the audience seem to care much for Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode."

Several listeners voiced disappointment that, save for the Soviet anthem which the orchestra rendered with spine-tingling effect along with "The Star-Spangled Banner" at the opening of each performance, there were no works by Russian composers.

Orchestra spokesman explained it was decided it would be presumptuous for foreigners to render Tchaikovsky or Moussorgsky on their home ground.

From the moment they landed at Leningrad Airport until they took off for Prague, the entire company — 120 strong — were guests of the Soviet Ministry of Culture, with all expenses paid plus a generous fee in rubles so that each member found himself liberally supplied with pocket money.

They were likewise provided with efficient interpreters and guides. And in between concerts and rehearsals an intensive sight-seeing program was laid on. At the same time those who wished to wander off on their own were free to do so.

The emotional cup was well filled for everyone involved in the visit. But it overflowed abundantly in the case of three Russian-born members of the Symphony. Violinist Vladimir Reznikoff was greeted in Leningrad by a sister he had not seen for 30 years. Concertmaster Richard Burgin had a surprise reunion with a brother who lives in Warsaw and who rushed to Leningrad when he heard of the tour. It was their first meeting since 1948.

All three concerts here were sell-outs long ahead, even though tickets—by local standards—were expensive, with parterre seats costing forty rubles ($10.00 at the official rate). At the same time, many tickets were distributed to conservatory students who crammed the upper rows of the balcony and easily comprised its most enthusiastic segment.

The only disappointment voiced by visitors, apart from a complaint that the visit was all too brief, was they had no opportunity to play before top members of the Soviet Government.

---

after concerts. He added that 300 Russ, ns followed him to his hotel to congratulate him.

The spry octogenarian told of his hopping around Europe, mostly by plane. He will con-

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 12 1956

Reports from agreed that the dropped some k
the midst of th
and it was no dud

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post (m)
ON, Mass.
nt Democrat
264,020

11 1956

adors
of The Post:
's touring Symstra has thrilled
. I knew they orchestra is one of he world. To read ng such a fine suc-
e is most pleasing.
ne their work as very well. L. H.

New England Ne
Box 2078, Boston

Christian
Monit
BOSTO
Non-p
Circ.

SEP 1

Triu four

Mos claims Bos phony

Special Science Monitor

With a wa ment the m ton Sympho boarded fle planes for t Prague. Both cow music member the capital.

Each of the orchestr on Sept. 8 a was the sort cians dream experience.

Throughou listeners sat
ing and c
faculty so as not to miss a single strand in this richly woven carpet of sound.

Instant Attention

During brief pauses in the score, silence in the hall was utter and complete. But every number was followed by rafter-shaking applause.

The ovation reached its climax Sunday night, at the end of the program. A medley of handclapping, foot stamping, shouts of "bravo" and "bis"
even when applauding music

re employ Italian uld have made an ollege football crowd varm.
n conductor Charles er several trips back ium from the wings,
baton for an encore,
ceased instantane-

s" was the word ormbers most frequent-describe this audience

Praised

es, for their part,
in their praise of the sing the Russian lan-h stock of superlatives. Most of the country's leading composers, music critics, and musicians were present and all seemed enthusiastic.

After the concert they came to a farewell reception for the orchestra where toasts and speeches were exchanged.

Famed violinist David Oistrakh, who played with the Boston Symphony during his American tour voiced "deep warmth and gratitude for such supreme musical artistry." Noted composer Aram Khachaturian declared the quality of playing was beyond verbal description, that every individual musician in the orchestra was a great virtuoso, and singled out one of the orchestra's two women, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, who plays first flute, for special mention.

Press notices were in similar terms. One rave reviewer in a Leningrad paper after concerts in that city previous to the Moscow stand likened the orchestra's performance to a "sculptured monument graven into the listener's consciousness."

While both in private and public there was only highest praise for the orchestra and its conductors, this writer did hear the program criticized.

One person asked, "Why so much Haydn? Twice in one day." Nor did the audience seem to care much for Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode."

Omission Noticed

Several listeners voiced disappointment that, save for the Soviet anthem which the orchestra rendered with spine-tingling effect along with the "Star Spangled Banner" at the opening of each performance, there were no works by Russian composers.

Orchestra spokesman explained it was decided it would be presumptuous for foreigners to render Chaikovsky or Mussorgsky on their home, ground.

From the moment they landed at Leningrad Airport until they took off for Prague, the entire company — 120 strong — were guests of the Soviet Ministry of Culture, with all expenses paid plus a generous fee in rubles so that each member found himself liberally supplied with pocket money.

They were likewise provided with efficient interpreters and guides. And in between concerts and rehersals an intensive sightseeing program was laid on. At the same time those who wished to wander off on their own were free to do so.

The only disappointment voiced by visitors, apart from a complaint that the visit was all too brief, was they had no opportunity to play before top members of the Soviet Government.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

ST. LOUIS, MO.
POST DISPATCH

SEP 12 1956

MONTEUX AMAZED BY ORCHESTRA'S SUCCESS IN RUSSIA

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

PARIS, Sept. 12 — Pierre Monteux, guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its current European tour said in an interview yesterday that the enthusiasm of Russian crowds for the orchestra's recent concerts in Moscow and Leningrad had been "phenomenal."

Monteux, who is 81 years old, flew to Paris from Moscow. He said that seldom in his many years as a conductor had he seen such eager musical crowds. He conducted the Boston orchestra at Leningrad and Moscow. He said these concerts and those conducted by Charles Munch, the orchestra's regular conductor, had been booked solidly many months in advance.

In Moscow's music conservatory, Monteux said he had almost been unable to bring the concert to a close as a crowd of more than 3000 shouted and stamped for encore after encore. The musicians had been so moved by the audience's reaction that they had to comply, he said.

---

ople's Level of the Russian government to mystify the rest of the world e not always successful. Some ken place lately which go to n make a people hate another way, the brotherhood of the the surface.

A few days ago more than 2,000 Russian music lovers gave an ecstatic reception to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was flown in two great planes from another European country to Moscow. The conductor, Karl Munch, made no effort to try and interpret the Russian composers, but with rare diplomacy went far afield in his choice of program.

Not many days prior to that event, the London balletomanes went overboard for the Russian Bolshoi Theatre ballet performance at Covent Garden. Some actually car-gs and took up their position in the street t three days before the doors opened. Again ic reception.

a little further, American farmers from st, who were taken on a tour of Russian mediately "made over" by their Russian the same time Russian farmers were in nd the Kansas and Minnesota farmers took nto their homes and in some way overcame lties, which always happens where people each other congenial.

are four bright examples of the Russian lay Russians,—in close contact with every her lands.

are taught to look upon Russians as un-ut that is largely because of the strong rnment which does not encourage mutual eas, culture or thinking. They remain herd-ery effort is made by the Russians to pref America reaching the common people to truths and distortions which the governtes through its propaganda agencies at home.

SHELBY, N. C. - STAR

SEP 13 1956

Hands Across The Curtain

A cultural exchange program between this nation and Russia, only now getting under way, promises to be more effective even than trading hot dogs for hardtack.

When President Eisenhower this week spoke of widening "every possible chink in the Iron Curtain," his words were more an endorsement of, than a suggestion for, this policy.

When "Porgy and Bess" appeared in Russia this year, the curtain was raised both literally and figuratively. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, through a recent Moscow appearance, has kept the curtain up.

The reception given these productions would make McArthur's return from Korea seem tame by comparison. As one critic said of the symphony's performance: "It was like a sculptured monument graven into the listener's consciousness."

Even though ticket prices were extravagantly set at the ruble-equivalent of $10, all three symphony presentations were sold out far in advance. Leading Russian composers, music critics, and musicians were present, and their enthusiasm was as obvious as that of any peasant.

Were our diplomats ever to receive such praise as have these entertaining good-will programs, we would probably have on our hands a warm peace rather than a cold war.

---

10 Sports THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1956 Sports

Dodgers Need St. Louis' Help as Braves Swoon Would Claim NL Flag

TIGHT BINDING

OISTRAKH

sian composers and hony Orchestra a for its first per-harles Munch took
standing ovations.
osers
rian,
akh,
ture

men ntrol oun-
600
Na-

from t sea
to a icken abetic

o not need Super Frankly, if you
from low throttle power with anti-super sne

ying to con-al culture of rs."
Adagio from mphony were derful," and a id there was usic" in Cresmphony. The
and less satis-
first hearing,
hey called his stral effects."
guest director
were treated
d by Soviet
nch especially his "clearness

ESTABLIS
BArclay
ESS CLIPPING
Church Street

WPORT NEWS
PRESS
Circ. D. 27,410 - S. 4

SEP 10 1

ston Symph
nds Up 4-Day
nd In Russia

COW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—
Boston Symphony Orchestra
a triumphal four-day stand
Soviet Union Sunday night
eaded early today for Prague,
oslovakia in six special
s.

orchestra is on a European
It is the first major western
to play in the Soviet Union.
105-piece organization play-
o concerts in Moscow Sa-
The first was led by guest
ctor Pierre Monteux who was back for one encore and dience to wild cheering
them two.
rles Munch, the orchestra's ctor, said in a statement "our ed in the Soviet Union tonic. No words exist to my feelings." He spoke ell banquet sponsored in estra's honor by the So
try of Culture.
reaction of critics has b ly favorable.
Soviet Union's musical ed by composer Aram K
rian and violinist Davis turned out for the fare
uet.
achaturian said he looked to further musical exchan een the Soviet Union and ed States. Oistrakh offer lasting friendship between two countries.

Set

ed Press

Washington

on will embark Sept. 18 on ited States political history"
publican National Committee will cover more than 15,000

stop in each state—during nnounced will carry him to n of the country.

by his wife, a staff of apporters, the committee said.
committee said, "has been to be visited to enable the ion of United States senti-ers, farmers, workers, busig weeks of the Eisenhower

erary

ansas City, Kan.
Sept. 27 — London, Ky.; pringfield, Ill.
Sept. 28—Nashville, Tenn.; incinnati; Martinsburg, W.Va.
Sept. 29—Hagerstown, Md.; St. Petersburg, Fla.
Sept. 30—St. Petersburg.
Oct. 1 — Grand Rapids, Mich.; Milwaukee.
Oct. 2 — Hartford, Conn.; Manchester, N.H.; Syracuse, N.Y.
Oct. 3 — Elizabeth, N.J.; Boston; Philadelphia.

---

in U.S. d by ABA

Eubanks
Christian Science Monitor

ch in response to varying social and political climate. Increasingly, however, stress is being placed upon training and experience and the short elective periods common to the majority of states have become subject to criticism and reappraisal."

Four principal methods are used in naming judges to state courts:

1. Popular election either on a partisan or nonpartisan basis is used in 36 states to choose members of the highest appellate courts, and in 38 states for picking judges of trial courts of general jurisdiction.

2. Five states, Connecticut, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Vermont, and Virginia, elect judges through the legislature.

3. In five states, Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and New Jersey, judges are appointed by the governor, usually with the consent of the senate or council.

4. A composite system is used in California and Missouri. By this method, judges of the court of last resort are appointed by the chief executive, subject to ratification by a commission on qualifications, for a term of six years, at the end of which, the jurist runs unopposed. If a simple majority of voters approve his candidacy, he is elected; if he fails to get a majority, he is removed from office and may not be appointed again to fill a vacancy on the highest court.

Prior Experienced Favored

"On the basis of our present knowledge, it does not appear to be possible to say that any one method of selection is the best method," the survey reports. "We know that good judges are selected under each method. The ability to attract able men to the judiciary depends upon a number of factors in addition to the method of selection. These factors include the level of compensation, the adequacy of retirement and pension provisions,

---

By Stafford Derby
Chief of the New York News Bureau of The Christian Science Monitor

Albany, N.Y.

A Stevenson-Kefauver assault on the Eisenhower administration and the President himself was staged here as the top of the Democratic ticket started their 1956 band wagon rolling in hopes to snare the 45 electoral votes of this Empire State.

Adlai E. Stevenson pinned the tag "false front" on the GOP administration while Senator Estes Kefauver termed Dwight D. Eisenhower, Republican choice to succeed himself, an "aggressive fighter for the special interests."

This upstate capital city was in rare form to act as stage for the opening events of the national election campaign with both Democratic and Republican state committees holding conventions, and each faced with critical senatorial choices.

Oratory Weighed

Neither Mr. Stevenson nor Senator Kefauver had personally campaigned for preconvention support in New York. This state's party organization had chosen Gov. Averell Harriman as the man they wanted t back for the 1956 presidentia honors.

Thus, when the Stevensonian smile and the Kefauver handshake stepped off the specia Democratic plane from a regional meeting in Hartford to b seen and experienced, the surface oratory, applause, and official courtesies were watche carefully to see if the precon vention rift between "moderate Mr. Stevenson and "fighting Governor Harriman had bee closed.

There was considerable em phasis placed by both of th Democrats in singling out th common enemy, sounding th battle-cry, praising their allies and rushing to the offense wit outward confidence that th ranks of the Democrats' woul close behind them.

Tribute to Al Smith

With the greeting by the Gov ernor at the airport, a parad through the streets of this cit for Albanians to see the two i close comradeship, a dinner together at the mansion, an finally an appearance at th crowded Palace Theater wher the state Democratic conventio was under way, it was apparen that the urgencies of the cam paign had drawn these leader and their forces together.

Mr. Stevenson left no doubt o his loyalties to the New Yor Democratic tradition — "peop are what count"—when he pa tribute to Al Smith, Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt and th retiring Senator Herbert H. Leh man.

In fact one of the loude bursts of applause from the dele gates, alternates, and friends the large audience was note when he recalled how Govern Smith had served "this cause social justice" adding:

"And, I want to declare her with you, the importance I a tach to the clear signs that th religious prejudices which ma have robbed Al Smith's fulle

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO
An International Daily Newspaper
FOUNDED 1908 BY MARY BAKER EDD
Second-class mail privileges authoriz
at Boston, Massachusetts.
SUBSCRIPTION PRICE
Payable in advance, postpaid to a
countries: One year $16.00, six mont
$8.00, three months $4.00, single copi
5 cents.
The Christian Science Monitor is o
sale in Christian Science Reading Roon throughout the world, and is obtainab
at newsstands.
Cost of Remailing Monitors

Times (e)
PAWTUCKET-
CENTRAL FALLS, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 39,259

SEP 13 1956

Boston Symphony Good Will Ambassador

FOR A long time, Americans in general, and New Englanders in particular, have been proud of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Within the week, this great orchestra gave us reason to throw out our chests even more, while raising its own stature to new heights, when it played three triumphal concerts in Moscow.

The undreamed-of acclaim Russian audiences accorded the Boston Symphony said more than any American ever could say about the quality of our music and the artistry of our musicians. It spoke of opened eyes, ears and minds in a people conditioned to think of the capitalist United States as culturally, as well as otherwise, inferior.

Here in New England, it gave us a new appreciation of the region's leading orchestra. Its concerts are always a treat, but never a musical sensation. In its own way, the Boston Symphony is as familiar to New Englanders as the Red Sox or baked beans, and as easily received in town as an old friend.

The reports of Muscovites and others behind the Iron Curtain thunderously cheering and applauding a Boston Symphony concert, and being rewarded with rare encores, should remind us how fortunate we are to have a musical treasure house in our backyard.

Conductor Charles Munch and every member of the orchestra — including Earl Hedberg of Pawtucket, viola player, and Sheldon Rotenberg, violinist, formerly of Attleboro — merit the highest of praise for their triumph.

The language they spoke with their baton and instruments is universal. It is the language of the soul and the emotions. Whether their speech is Bostonian or Russian, men understand it and can communicate their feelings with it.

Every such opportunity to speak to the Soviets in a language we all comprehend strengthens our ties as humans, and weakens our mutual distrust.

The Boston Symphony's success in this regard was an inestimable contribution to world understanding, capping a long and admirable contribution to cultural activity on home soil.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

SEP 11 1956

od Ambassadors

the Editor of The Post:

Sir—Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra has thrilled Russians. I knew they uld. Our orchestra is one of finest in the world. To read y are having such a fine suc- s in Europe is most pleasing. ey have done their work as bassadors very well. L. H. Wellesley.

Dodgers Need St. Louis' Help as Braves Sweep Would Claim NL Flag

---

iet Tour
cclaims
Boston Symphony

By Edmund Stevens
Special Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Moscow

With a warm sense of fulfillment the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have boarded fleet Soviet Aeroflot planes for the six-hour haul to Prague. Both they and the Moscow music world will long remember their weekend in this capital.

Each of the three concerts the orchestra played here—one on Sept. 8 and two on Sept. 9—was the sort of triumph musicians dream about but seldom experience.

Throughout the performance listeners sat entranced, straining and concentrating every faculty so as not to miss a single strand in this richly woven carpet of sound.

Instant Attention

During brief pauses in the score, silence in the hall was utter and complete. But every number was followed by rafter-shaking applause.

The ovation reached its climax Sunday night, at the end of the program. A medley of handclapping, foot stamping, shouts of "bravo" and "bis" (even when applauding music lovers here employ Italian terms) would have made an American college football crowd seem lukewarm.

But when conductor Charles Munch, after several trips back to the podium from the wings, raised his baton for an encore, the racket ceased instantaneously.

"Fabulous" was the word orchestra members most frequently used to describe this audience reaction.

'Artistry' Praised

Muscovites, for their part, were lavish in their praise of the orchestra, using the Russian language's rich stock of superlatives. Most of the country's leading composers, music critics, and musicians were present and all seemed enthusiastic.

After the concert they came to a farewell reception for the orchestra where toasts and speeches were exchanged.

Famed violinist David Oistrakh, who played with the Boston Symphony during his American tour voiced "deep warmth and gratitude for such supreme musical artistry." Noted composer Aram Khachaturian declared the quality of playing was beyond verbal description, that every individual musician in the orchestra was a great virtuoso, and singled out one of the orchestra's two women, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, who plays first flute, for special mention.

Press notices were in similar terms. One rave reviewer in a Leningrad paper after concerts in that city previous to the Moscow stand likened the orchestra's performance to a "sculptured monument graven into the listener's consciousness."

While both in private and public there was only highest praise for the orchestra and its conductors, this writer did hear the program criticized.

One person asked, "Why so much Haydn? Twice in one day." Nor did the audience seem to care much for Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode."

Omission Noticed

Several listeners voiced disappointment that, save for the Soviet anthem which the orchestra rendered with spine-tingling effect along with the "Star Spangled Banner" at the opening of each performance, there were no works by Russian composers. Orchestra spokesman explained it was decided it would be presumptuous for foreigners to render Chaikovsky or Mussorgsky on their home ground.

From the moment they landed at Leningrad Airport until they took off for Prague, the entire company — 120 strong — were guests of the Soviet Ministry of Culture, with all expenses paid plus a generous fee in rubles so that each member found himself liberally supplied with pocket money.

They were likewise provided with efficient interpreters and guides. And in between concerts and rehersals an intensive sightseeing program was laid on. At the same time those who wished to wander off on their own were free to do so.

The only disappointment voiced by visitors, apart from a complaint that the visit was all too brief, was they had no opportunity to play before top members of the Soviet Government.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

SEP 12 1956

Boston Symphony's Tour

Monteux Calls Red Fervor At Concerts 'Phenomenal'

By Alain de Lyrot
From the Herald Tribune Bureau
© 1956, N. Y. Herald Tribune Inc.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—Pierre Monteux, the eighty-one-year-old guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its current European tour, today called the enthusiasm of Russian crowds at the orchestra's recent concerts in Moscow and Leningrad "phenomenal."

Mr. Monteux, who flew here from Moscow today, said in an interview that seldom in his many years as a conductor had he seen such eager audiences. He said the concerts conducted by himself and Charles Munch, the orchestra's regular leader, had been booked solidly many months in advance.

Mr. Monteux said he had been almost unable to end the concert at Moscow's music conservatory as a crowd of 3,000 shouted and stamped for encore after encore. He added that 300 Russians followed him to his hotel to congratulate him.

The spry octogenarian told of his hopping around Europe, mostly by plane. He will conduct the Bostonians in Zurich, Bern, Paris and London, and will lead the French Orchestre National Friday at the Besancon Music Festival before ending his tour.

DANVILLE, VA.
BEE
Circ. D. 14,361

SEP 12 1956

At The People's Level

The consistent efforts of the Russian government to isolate that country and to mystify the rest of the world as to its real character, are not always successful. Some significant things have taken place lately which go to show that no government can make a people hate another people, and that, in a broad way, the brotherhood of the same kind of people rises to the surface.

A few days ago more than 2,000 Russian music lovers gave an ecstatic reception to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was flown in two great planes from another European country to Moscow. The conductor, Karl Munch, made no effort to try and interpret the Russian composers, but with rare diplomacy went far afield in his choice of program.

Not many days prior to that event, the London balletomanes went overboard for the Russian Bolshoi Theatre ballet performance at Covent Garden. Some actually car- ags and took up their position in the street t three days before the doors opened. Again tic reception.

a little further, American farmers from st, who were taken on a tour of Russian mediately "made over" by their Russian the same time Russian farmers were in nd the Kansas and Minnesota farmers took nto their homes and in some way overcame lties, which always happens where people each other congenial.

are four bright examples of the Russian lay Russians,—in close contact with every her lands.

are taught to look upon Russians as un- ut that is largely because of the strong rnment which does not encourage mutual as, culture or thinking. They remain herd- ry effort is made by the Russians to pre- f America reaching the common people to truths and distortions which the govern- tes through its propaganda agencies at home.

SHELBY, N. C. - STAR

SEP 13 1956

Hands Across The Curtain

A cultural exchange program between this nation and Russia, only now getting under way, promises to be more effective even than trading hot dogs for hardtack.

When President Eisenhower this week spoke of widening "every possible chink in the Iron Curtain," his words were more an endorsement of, than a suggestion for, this policy.

When "Porgy and Bess" appeared in Russia this year, the curtain was raised both literally and figuratively. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, through a recent Moscow appearance, has kept the curtain up.

The reception given these productions would make McArthur's return from Korea seem tame by comparison. As one critic said of the symphony's performance: "It was like a sculptured monument graven into the listener's consciousness."

Even though ticket prices were extravagantly set at the ruble-equivalent of $10, all three symphony presentations were sold out far in advance. Leading Russian composers, music critics, and musicians were present, and their enthusiasm was as obvious as that of any peasant.

Were our diplomats ever to receive such praise as have these entertaining good-will programs, we would probably have on our hands a warm peace rather than a cold war.

TIGHT BINDING

Y

sian composers and hony Orchestra a t for its first per-Charles Munch took standing ovations.

osers
rian,
rakh,
lture

men ntrol noun-e 600
s Na-

OISTRAKH

from at sea y to a ricken abetic

do not need Super Frankly, if you
from low throttle
power with anti-

fying to con-
ral culture of ers."
d Adagio from ymphony were nderful," and a aid there was music" in Cresmphony. The
and less satis-
first hearing,
they called his estral effects."
guest director
were treated
d by Soviet
nch especially his "clearness

Burrell
ESTABLIS
BArclay
ESS CLIPPING B
Church Street

EWPORT NEWS
PRESS
Circ. D. 27,410 - S. 4

SEP 1 0 19

ston Symph
nds Up 4-Day
and In Russia

SCOW, Monday, Sept. 10 (AP)—
Boston Symphony Orchestra
a triumphal four-day stand
e Soviet Union Sunday night
eaded early today for Prague, hoslovakia in six special es.

e orchestra is on a Europe
It is the first major western
to play in the Soviet Union.
e 105 - piece organization play-wo concerts in Moscow Su
The first was led by guest uctor Pierre Monteux who w l back for one encore and udience to wild cheering
g them two.

arles Munch, the orchestra's uctor, said in a statement " rience in the Soviet Union unique. No words exist to s my feelings." He spoke a well banquet sponsored in estra's honor by the So stry of Culture.

e reaction of critics has b nimously favorable.
e Soviet Union's musical ded by composer Aram K
rian and violinist Davis
h, turned out for the fare quet.

hachaturian said he looked d to further musical excha ween the Soviet Union and ted States. Oistrakh offere st to lasting friendship between two countries.

---

our Set

ed Press

Washington

on will embark Sept. 18 on ited States political history"
publican National Committee

will cover more than 15,000
stop in each state—during nnounced will carry him to n of the country.

by his wife, a staff of apporters, the committee said.
committee said, "has been e to be visited to enable the ion of United States senti-
ers, farmers, workers, busi-
g weeks of the Eisenhower

erary

ansas City, Kan.
Sept. 27 — London, Ky.;
pringfield, Ill.
Sept. 28—Nashville, Tenn.;
incinnati; Martinsburg,
W.Va.
Sept. 29—Hagerstown, Md.;
St. Petersburg, Fla.
Sept. 30—St. Petersburg.
Oct. 1 — Grand Rapids,
Mich.; Milwaukee.
Oct. 2 — Hartford, Conn.;
Manchester, N.H.; Syracuse,
N.Y.
Oct. 3 — Elizabeth, N.J.;
Boston; Philadelphia.

---

in U.S. d by ABA

Eubanks
Christian Science Monitor

each in response to varying social and political climate. Increasingly, however, stress is being placed upon training and experience and the short elective periods common to the majority of states have become subject to criticism and reappraisal."

Four principal methods are used in naming judges to state courts:

1. Popular election either on a partisan or nonpartisan basis is used in 36 states to choose members of the highest appellate courts, and in 38 states for picking judges of trial courts of general jurisdiction.

2. Five states, Connecticut, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Vermont, and Virginia, elect judges through the legislature.

3. In five states, Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and New Jersey, judges are appointed by the governor, usually with the consent of the senate or council.

4. A composite system is used in California and Missouri. By this method, judges of the court of last resort are appointed by the chief executive, subject to ratification by a commission on qualifications, for a term of six years, at the end of which, the jurist runs unopposed. If a simple majority of voters approve his candidacy, he is elected; if he fails to get a majority, he is removed from office and may not be appointed again to fill a vacancy on the highest court.

Prior Experienced Favored

"On the basis of our present knowledge, it does not appear to be possible to say that any one method of selection is the best method," the survey reports. "We know that good judges are selected under each method. The ability to attract able men to the judiciary depends upon a number of factors in addition to the method of selection. These factors include the level of compensation, the adequacy of retirement and pension provisions,

---

By Stafford Derby
Chief of the New York News Bureau of The Christian Science Monitor

Albany, N.Y.

A Stevenson-Kefauver assault on the Eisenhower administration and the President himself was staged here as the top of the Democratic ticket started their 1956 band wagon rolling in hopes to snare the 45 electoral votes of this Empire State.

Adlai E. Stevenson pinned the tag "false front" on the GOP administration while Senator Este Kefauver termed Dwight D. Eisenhower, Republican choice to succeed himself, an "aggressive fighter for the special interests."

This upstate capital city was in rare form to act as stage for the opening events of the national election campaign with both Democratic and Republican state committees holding conventions, and each faced with critical senatorial choices.

Oratory Weighed

Neither Mr. Stevenson nor Senator Kefauver had personally campaigned for preconvention support in New York. This state's party organization had chosen Gov. Averell Harriman as the man they wanted to back for the 1956 presidential honors.

Thus, when the Stevensonian smile and the Kefauver handshake stepped off the special Democratic plane from a regional meeting in Hartford to be seen and experienced, the surface oratory, applause, and official courtesies were watched carefully to see if the preconvention rift between "moderate" Mr. Stevenson and "fighting" Governor Harriman had been closed.

There was considerable emphasis placed by both of the Democrats in singling out the common enemy, sounding the battle-cry, praising their allies and rushing to the offense with outward confidence that the ranks of the Democrats would close behind them.

Tribute to Al Smith

With the greeting by the Governor at the airport, a parade through the streets of this city for Albanians to see the two in close comradeship, a dinner together at the mansion, and finally an appearance at the crowded Palace Theater where the state Democratic convention was under way, it was apparent that the urgencies of the campaign had drawn these leaders and their forces together.

Mr. Stevenson left no doubt of his loyalties to the New York Democratic tradition — "people are what count"—when he paid tribute to Al Smith, Franklin D. and Eleanor Roosevelt and the retiring Senator Herbert H. Lehman.

In fact one of the loudest bursts of applause from the delegates, alternates, and friends in the large audience was noted when he recalled how Governor Smith had served "this cause of social justice" adding:

"And, I want to declare here with you, the importance I attach to the clear signs that the religious prejudices which may have robbed Al Smith's fulle

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO
An International Daily Newspaper
FOUNDED 1908 BY MARY BAKER EDD
Second-class mail privileges authoriz
at Boston, Massachusetts.
SUBSCRIPTION PRICE
Payable in advance, postpaid to a
countries: One year $16.00, six mont
$8.00, three months $4.00, single copi
5 cents.
The Christian Science Monitor is o
sale in Christian Science Reading Room throughout the world, and is obtainab
at newsstands.
Cost of Remailing Monitors

Times (e)
PAWTUCKET-
CENTRAL FALLS, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 39,259

SEP 13 1956

2½ TO 3 LBS LB 39c
ROAD-BREASTED
6 TO 18 LBS LB 49c
SUPER-RIGHT
LB 39c 2 LBS 77c
SMOKED LB 35c
Freshness and Variety!
Crop at low prices!
4 LBS 39c
LARGE HEAD 19c
'ER 23c
Chick
Super Thick
Sliced
Skinle
Fresh
Fresh
Fried Bartl
Canta
Green
Tokay
Crisp

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

SEP 12 1956

Boston Symphony's Tour

Monteux Calls Red Fervor At Concerts 'Phenomenal'

By Alain de Lyrot
From the Herald Tribune Bureau
© 1956, N. Y. Herald Tribune Inc.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—Pierre Monteux, the eighty-one-year-old guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its current European tour, today called the enthusiasm of Russian crowds at the orchestra's recent concerts in Moscow and Leningrad "phenomenal."

Mr. Monteux, who flew here from Moscow today, said in an interview that seldom in his many years as a conductor had he seen such eager audiences. He said the concerts conducted by himself and Charles Munch, the orchestra's regular leader, had been booked solidly many months in advance.

Mr. Monteux said he had been almost unable to end the concert at Moscow's music conservatory as a crowd of 3,000 shouted and stamped for encore after encore. He added that 300 Russians followed him to his hotel to congratulate him.

The spry octogenarian told of his hopping around Europe, mostly by plane. He will conduct the Bostonians in Zurich, Bern, Paris and London, and will lead the French Orchestre National Friday at the Besancon Music Festival before ending his tour.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 12 1956

Reports from Moscow seem agreed that the Boston Symphony dropped some kind of ~~a bomb~~ in the midst of the Soviet capital and it was no dud.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

SEP 11 1956

Good Ambassadors

To the Editor of The Post:

Sir—Boston's touring Symphony Orchestra has thrilled the Russians. I knew they would. Our orchestra is one of the finest in the world. To read they are having such a fine success in Europe is most pleasing. They have done their work as ambassadors very well. L. H.
Wellesley.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

SEP 10 1956

Triumphal Soviet Tour

Moscow Acclaims Boston Symphony

By Edmund Stevens
Special Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Moscow

With a warm sense of fulfillment the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have boarded fleet Soviet Aeroflot planes for the six-hour haul to Prague. Both they and the Moscow music world will long remember their weekend in this capital.

Each of the three concerts the orchestra played here—one on Sept. 8 and two on Sept. 9—was the sort of triumph musicians dream about but seldom experience.

Throughout the performance listeners sat entranced, straining and concentrating every faculty so as not to miss a single strand in this richly woven carpet of sound.

Instant Attention

During brief pauses in the score, silence in the hall was utter and complete. But every number was followed by rafter-shaking applause.

The ovation reached its climax Sunday night, at the end of the program. A medley of handclapping, foot stamping, shouts of "bravo" and "bis" even when applauding music lovers here employ Italian terms) would have made an American college football crowd seem lukewarm.

But when conductor Charles Munch, after several trips back to the podium from the wings, raised his baton for an encore, the racket ceased instantaneously.

"Fabulous" was the word orchestra members most frequently used to describe this audience reaction.

'Artistry' Praised

Muscovites, for their part, were lavish in their praise of the orchestra, using the Russian language's rich stock of superlatives. Most of the countrys leading composers, music critics, and musicians were present and all seemed enthusiastic.

After the concert they came to a farewell reception for the orchestra where toasts and speeches were exchanged.

Famed violinist David Oistrakh, who played with the Boston Symphony during his American tour voiced "deep warmth and gratitude for such supreme musical artistry." Noted composer Aram Khachaturian declared the quality of playing was beyond verbal description, that every individual musician in the orchestra was a great virtuoso, and singled out one of the orchestra's two women, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, who plays first flute, for special mention.

Press notices were in similar terms. One rave reviewer in a Leningrad paper after concerts in that city previous to the Moscow stand likened the orchestra's performance to a "sculptured monument graven into the listener's consciousness."

While both in private and public there was only highest praise for the orchestra and its conductors, this writer did hear the program criticized.

One person asked, "Why so much Haydn? Twice in one day." Nor did the audience seem to care much for Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode."

Omission Noticed

Several listeners voiced disappointment that, save for the Soviet anthem which the orchestra rendered with spine-tingling effect along with the "Star Spangled Banner" at the opening of each performance, there were no works by Russian composers.

Orchestra spokesman explained it was decided it would be presumptuous for foreigners to render Chaikovsky or Mussorgsky on their home ground.

From the moment they landed at Leningrad Airport until they took off for Prague, the entire company — 120 strong — were guests of the Soviet Ministry of Culture, with all expenses paid plus a generous fee in rubles so that each member found himself liberally supplied with pocket money.

They were likewise provided with efficient interpreters and guides. And in between concerts and rehersals an intensive sightseeing program was laid on. At the same time those who wished to wander off on their own were free to do so.

The only disappointment voiced by visitors, apart from a complaint that the visit was all too brief, was they had no opportunity to play before top members of the Soviet Government.

DANVILLE, VA.
BEE
Circ. D. 14,361

SEP 12 1956

At The People's Level

The consistent efforts of the Russian government to isolate that country and to mystify the rest of the world as to its real character, are not always successful. Some significant things have taken place lately which go to show that no government can make a people hate another people, and that, in a broad way, the brotherhood of the same kind of people rises to the surface.

A few days ago more than 2,000 Russian music lovers gave an ecstatic reception to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was flown in two great planes from another European country to Moscow. The conductor, Karl Munch, made no effort to try and interpret the Russian composers, but with rare diplomacy went far afield in his choice of program.

Not many days prior to that event, the London balletomanes went overboard for the Russian Bolshoi Theatre ballet performance at Covent Garden. Some actually carried sleeping bags and took up their position in the street for a cheap seat three days before the doors opened. Again it was an ecstatic reception.

Going back a little further, American farmers from the Middle West, who were taken on a tour of Russian farms, were immediately "made over" by their Russian counterparts. At the same time Russian farmers were in our grain belt and the Kansas and Minnesota farmers took these Russians into their homes and in some way overcame linguistic difficulties, which always happens where people of a kind find each other congenial.

Here, then, are four bright examples of the Russian people,—every day Russians,—in close contact with every day people of other lands.

And yet we are taught to look upon Russians as unwashed ogres but that is largely because of the strong Communist government which does not encourage mutual cultivation of ideas, culture or thinking. They remain herded away, and every effort is made by the Russians to prevent the Voice of America reaching the common people to dissipate the untruths and distortions which the government disseminates through its propaganda agencies at home.

SHELBY, N. C. - STAR

SEP 13 1956

Hands

A cultural exchange program this nation and Russia, only now under way, promises to be more even than trading hot dogs for han

When President Eisenhower t spoke of widening "every possib in the Iron Curtain," his words we an endorsement of, than a sugges this policy.

When "Porgy and Bess" app Russia this year, the curtain wa both literally and figuratively. Th Symphony Orchestra through a Moscow appearance, has kept th up.

The reception given these pro would make McArthur's return

YARD C AND CO
SHOE V
Scho

Dodgers Need St. Louis' Help as Braves Seen Would Claim NL Flag

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Kuryer Codzienny (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,102

SEP 12 1956

Bostońska Orkiestra Zbiera Laury

MOSKWA, Rosja — Bostońska orkiestra symfoniczna ~~triumfalnie zakończyła~~ 4dniowy pobyt w Związku Sowieckim i wyruszyła w drogę do Pragi w Czechosłowacji w sześciu specjalnych samolotach.

Zespół składający się ze 105 instrumentów w niedzielę w Moskwie odegrał dwa koncerty.

Członkowie orkiestry mówią że owacje jakich doznali pod czas dwóch dni pobytu w Leningradzie i ostatnich dwóch dni pobytu w Moskwie, były najgorętrze ze wszystkich dóznanych kiedykolwiek przez nich owacji.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.
TIMES
Circ. D. 57,924 - S. 86,764

SEP 13 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY'S HIT

The Boston Symphony's concert series in Russia has been declared an unqualified success. In at least one instance, the enthusiasm of the audience persuaded Conductor Munch to forget his "no encore" rule, and the orchestra played on.

But why should it not be so?

The Boston is one of the world's truly great orchestras; the Russians are a people in whom the love of music is deep and abiding.

The answer, of course, is that we find the reception newsworthy because the Boston is the first American symphonic ensemble ever to play in the Soviet Union. The Communist masters, too fearful of their security to risk even the importation of pleasure, have held the gates tight against cultural organizations as well as political ones.

Perhaps they have really changed. No one knows for sure. But certain it is that at least one American group has played its way into the hearts of its listeners.

It would be too much to expect that the singing notes of a Beethoven symphony would crumble the Iron Curtain as did the walls of Jericho before Joshua's trumpet. Modern barriers, especially ideological ones, are of stickier stuff.

Nevertheless, this may prove to have been a step toward more nearly normal relations between this country and Russia. When persons can come and go between the two countries with normal freedom in travel, the chances for mutual understanding will have increased. And understanding is a forerunner of peace.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 14 1956

Reds Laud Symphony

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda praised the Boston Symphony Orchestra to the skies today.

The Communist Party organ described the orchestra's recent visit to the Soviet Union as an "outstanding success." It expressed the gratitude of the Soviet people for the "genuine pleasure" it gave them

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

SEP 15 1956

Pravda Doffs Hat

Boston Symphony Wins Red Critic's Nod

Moscow, Sept. 14 (AP)—Pravda praised the Boston Symphony Orchestra to the skies today.

The Communist Party organ described the orchestra's recent visit to the Soviet Union as an "outstanding success" and expressed the gratitude of the Soviet people for the "genuine pleasure" it gave them.

These unstinting accolades, the first official expressions concerning the symphony's performances here and in Leningrad last week, echoed the informal but enthusiastic acclaim of Soviet music critics.

The Pravda article was written by Dmitri Kabalevsky, Soviet composer and critic.

"Our Boston guests have done a good thing to show us so much modern music," he wrote. "We should thank them for it because it has to be admitted new American music is inadequately known to broad circles of our music lovers."

He described the orchestra's visit as "among the most interesting events of our concert life in recent years"; called members of the orchestra "first-class musicians who are artists and

Continued On Page 12

expressive as in the most delicate

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SPRINGFIELD, O.
NEWS-SUN
Circ. S. 30,896
SEP 16 1956

Coming Of Age

One need never had tooted a flute or tossed off a pas de seul, or even much fancied serious music or the ballet, to feel a thrill of pride that the Boston Symphony was a smash hit in Moscow and that Ballet Theater has been gathering bouquets in Belgrade.

Triumphs of money, might and muscle are old stuff to twentieth-century Americans, and they long thought they preferred it that way. Did Europe have a corner on culture? Europe could, if it pleased. This was a strong, bold, bustling, blue-jeaned nation, home of tough-minded doers and east-bound passports for dillettantes.

The pose was artificial, as untruthful as European claims to cultural superiority. Art was at home here from the beginning, the art of Benjamin West and Copley, Peale and Allston, Trumbull and Morse and Stuart, for all some thought they had to go to Europe to be "understood." Letters, too, throve early.

Now the theater comes into its own and reaches deep into the provinces. Light opera has lost at last its malty flavor and been gloriously re-defined, a la Americaine. It has been but a generation's jump for music, opera and ballet, aided by mass media and modern ease of transportation, from imported artists and vehicles to surpassing indigenous talent and art forms.

At the Yugoslav Nation Theater, then, there is wild applause for the Dresden-perfect ballerina Nora Kaye in a familiar piece and for the "folklore" choreography of Agnes de Mille's "Rodeo." In Leningrad and Moscow, Conductors Charles Munch and Pierre Montreaux, and works of modern American composers Walter Piston and Paul Creston, had critics as well as audiences cheering in superlatives. This is cultural interchange, yes, and people-to-people understanding. But it has a feed-back. It is education for Americans in the extent and the richness of their own artistic adulthood. A nation begins to come of age when its art is internationally at home.

New England Newscli
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RI
Transcript-Tele
HOLYOKE,
Independent Re
Circ. 26,

SEP 19 19

Could H

The visit of t

phony orchestra to Moscow was the absolute pinnacle of success. The Russians know and love the music; their critics are tough. They went overboard for the Boston Symphony. This was very gratifying to us — just as our enthusiastic reception to the Russian violinist Oistrack was to the Soviets.

William J. Jorden, writing from Moscow for the New York Times, reminds us that there was more than artistic value to the Boston Symphony's appearance there: "By inviting a famous American orchestra to perform here and by sending Soviet artists abroad — indeed, with the whole steadily accelerating cul n - the Soviet Union's leaders are improving their standing in the eyes of their own people. Over a period of time the people can be expected to feel they no longer are being isolated from contact with the best of other countries".

There must be an official "line" to go along with this cultural relaxation, of course, for it will no longer be believed that the West is decadent, uncultured, and all that when Russians have for themselves heard things like the Boston Symphony. The campaign of at least surface friendship has its effect inside as well as outside Russia, and it may have some interesting and unpredictable long-range effects.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 15 1956

ress Exalts ymphony Skill

'ravda praised the Boston Symphony Orches-munist party organ described the orchestra's Union as an "outstanding success" and exssed the gratitude of the Soviet people for the "genuine isure" it gave them.

These unstinting accolades, the first official expressions concernin gthe Symphony's performances here and in Leningrad last week, echoed the informal but enthusiastic acclaim of Soviet music critics.

The Pravada article was written by Dmitri Kabalevsky, Soviet composer and critic.

"BEST IN YEARS"

"Our Boston guests have done a good thing to show us so much modern music," he wrote. "We should thank them for it because it has to be admitted new American music is inadequately known to broad circle of our music lovers."

He described the orchestra's visit as "among the most interesting events of our concert life in recent years;" called members of the orchestra "first class musicians who are artists and virtuosos in the full sense of the term" and said the orchestra as a whole was "a rarely harmonious ensemble."

PRAISES MUNCH

"It is a genuinely artistic body whcih has achieved such a high degree of skill that any technical difficulties cease to exist for it and all attention is directed at solution of artistic tasks; when in the most powerful and strong passages the music sounds just as expressive as in the most delicate ones bordering on a barely audible whisper; when the hues of performance are refined to a point usually encountered only in chamber ensembles."

He called Conductor Charles Munch an "artist and a man full of profound and sincere feeling, possessing a powerful intellect and an amazing young soul."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

SEP 15 1956

Hub Symphony Orchestra Gains Praise of Pravda

MOSCOW, Sept. 14 (AP)—Pravda praised the ~~Boston~~ Symphony Orchestra to the skies today.

The Communist party organ described the orchestra's visit as an "outstanding success" and expressed the gratitude of the Soviet people for the "genuine pleasure" it gave them.

These accolades, first official expressions concerning the symphony's performances here and in Leningrad, echoed the informal but enthusiastic acclaim of music critics.

The Pravda article was written by Dmitri Kabalevsky, Soviet composer and critic.

"Our Boston guests have done a good thing to show us so much modern music," he wrote. "We should thank them for it because it has to be admitted new American music is inadequately known to broad circles of our music lovers."

"First Class Musicians"

He called members of the orchestra "first class musicians who are artists and virtuosos in the full sense of the term" and said the orchestra as a whole was "a rarely harmonious ensemble."

"It is a genuinely artistic body which has achieved such a high degree of skill that any technical difficulties cease to exist for it and all attention is directed at solution of artistic tasks; when in the most powerful and strong passages the music sounds just as expressive as in the most delicate ones bordering on a barely audible whisper; when the hues of performance are refined to a point usually encountered only in chamber ensembles."

He called Conductor Charles Munch an "artist and a man full of profound and sincere feeling, possessing a powerful intellect and an amazing young soul."

GREENVILLE, S. C.
PIEDMONT

SEP 14 1956

'Music Hath Charms To . .'

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra, one of the top musical organizations of the United States, has just completed a triumphal invasion of Moscow and concluded a two-day stand of three concerts with rafter-shaking applause greeting its efforts.

The audiences gave ovations in the auditorium, the individual Russians, who had forked up $10 for tickets, went into personal ecstasies and the Soviet press was lavish in praise as Conductor Charles Munch led this distinguished orchestra through the programs.

Members of the orchestra, amazed and quite naturally pleased, termed the reception "fabulous."

But, sad to say in some respects, the Boston Symphony did not happen to play before top members of the Soviet government. Dispatches do not explain their absence. It might have done something to them to see the rank and file of Russia so aroused by such a splendid performance on the part of foreigners.

Regardless, we are moved to say again, to emphasize the fact, that music is a universal language, understood and appreciated by those who know it, regardless of race or country.

Perhaps the base from which music must still operate remains too small for it to become a potent factor in international understanding and for it to contribute to the kind of friendship that will replace the tensions of the times and underwrite peace.

But the fact that an orchestra from capitalistic America can go behind the Iron Curtain, captivate the little people of that land at $10 a throw and draw unanimous praise from every source constitutes progress and is surely refreshing.

The Boston Symphony has done something that others have failed to do and it should neither be discounted nor forgotten.

ISLAND — Fair and cooler today. Clear and ol tonight. Sunday incloudiness and cong cool.
E, NEW HAMPSHIRE
ERMONT — Fair and cooler today. Clear and night with some frost n the valleys. Sunday n the cloudiness and
ing cool.
ed cool.
NECTICUT—Much cool-y, with variable cloudy, sunshine. Sunday, and tonight. Clear hilly sunshine with increasgh clouds and not as gell, in their suits of S Lloyd Christenson of operator of a car that st girl in Lee Nov. 15, 195

drea Nuciforo was counse
the plaintiffs and Arin Giustina represented the defe ant.

A jury verdict of $1066 was returned for Chief Petty Officer
Ralph T. Greaney of Southwick who had sued Joseph R. Durkin of Westfield, operator of Dur kin Motor Sales Co., charging the defendant had misrepresented an automobile sold the plaintiff.
Henry A. Moran, Jr., appeared for the plaintiff and Charles F

Bo
Zbi

MO tońska o ~~triumfaln~~ wy pobyt Sowiec-kim i wyr yła w drogę do Pragi w Czechosłowacji w sześciu specjalnych samolotach.

Zespół składający się ze 105 instrumentów w niedzielę w Moskwie odegrał dwa koncerty.

Członkowie orkiestry mówią że owacje jakich doznali podczas dwóch dni pobytu w Leningradzie i ostatnich dwóch dni pobytu w Moskwie, były najgorętrze ze wszystkich dóznanych kiedykolwiek przez nich owacji.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
NGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

1 5 1956

Boston Symphony

Continued From Page 1 7

virtuosos in the full sense of the term" and said the orchestra as a whole was "a rarely harmonious ensemble."

"It is a genuinely artistic body which has achieved such a high degree of skill that any technical difficulties cease to exist for it and all attention is directed at solution of artistic tasks; when in the most powerful and strong passes the music sounds just as expressive as in the most delicate ones bordering on a barely audible whisper; when the hues of performance are refined to a point usually encountered only in chamber ensembles."

He called conductor Charles Munch an "artist and a man full of profound and sincere feeling, possessing a powerful intellect and an amazing young soul."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 15 1956

Soviet Press Exalts Hub Symphony Skill

MOSCOW (AP)—Pravda praised the Boston Symphony Orches-to the skies. The Communist party organ described the orchestra's ent visit to the Soviet Union as an "outstanding success" and expressed the gratitude of the Soviet people for the "genuine pleasure" it gave them.

These unstinting accolades, the first official expressions concernin gthe Symphony's performances here and in Leningrad last week, echoed the informal but enthusiastic acclaim of Soviet music critics.

The Pravada article was written by Dmitri Kabalevsky, Soviet composer and critic.

"BEST IN YEARS"

"Our Boston guests have done a good thing to show us so much modern music," he wrote. "We should thank them for it because it has to be admitted new American music is inadequately known to broad circle of our music lovers."

He described the orchestra's visit as "among the most interesting events of our concert life in recent years;" called members of the orchestra "first class musicians who are artists and virtuosos in the full sense of the term" and said the orchestra as a whole was "a rarely harmonious ensemble."

PRAISES MUNCH

"It is a genuinely artistic body whcih has achieved such a high degree of skill that any technical difficulties cease to exist for it and all attention is directed at solution of artistic tasks; when in the most powerful and strong passages the music sounds just as expressive as in the most delicate ones bordering on a barely audible whisper; when the hues of performance are refined to a point usually encountered only in chamber ensembles."

He called Conductor Charles Munch an "artist and a man full of profound and sincere feeling, possessing a powerful intellect and an amazing young soul."

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.
TIMES
Circ. D. 57,924 - S. 86,764

SEP 13 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY'S HIT

The Boston Symphony's concert series in Russia has been declared an unqualified success. In at least one instance, the enthusiasm of the audience persuaded Conductor Munch to forget his "no encore" rule, and the orchestra played on.

But why should it not be so?

The Boston is one of the world's truly great orchestras; the Russians are a people in whom the love of music is deep and abiding.

The answer, of course, is that we find the reception newsworthy because the Boston is the first American symphonic ensemble ever to play in the Soviet Union. The Communist masters, too fearful of their security to risk even the importation of pleasure, have held the gates tight against cultural organizations as well as political ones.

Perhaps they have really changed. No one knows for sure. But certain it is that at least one American group has played its way into the hearts of its listeners.

It would be too much to expect that the singing notes of a Beethoven symphony would crumble the Iron Curtain as did the walls of Jericho before Joshua's trumpet. Modern barriers, especially ideological ones, are of stickier stuff.

Nevertheless, this may prove to have been a step toward more nearly normal relations between this country and Russia. When persons can come and go between the two countries with normal freedom in travel, the chances for mutual understanding will have increased. And understanding is a forerunner of peace.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SPRINGFIELD, O.
NEWS-SUN
Circ. S. 30,896
SEP 16 1956

Coming Of Age

One need never had tooted a flute or tossed off a pas de seul, or even much fancied serious music or the ballet, to feel a thrill of pride that the Boston Symphony was a smash hit in Moscow and that Ballet Theater has been gathering bouquets in Belgrade.

Triumphs of money, might and muscle are old stuff to twentieth-century Americans, and they long thought they preferred it that way. Did Europe have a corner on culture? Europe could, if it pleased. This was a strong, bold, bustling, blue-jeaned nation, home of tough-minded doers and east-bound passports for dilletantes.

The pose was artificial, as untruthful as European claims to cultural superiority. Art was at home here from the beginning, the art of Benjamin West and

Instructions
RING SHRUBS
Bloom
IEMUMS In Bloom
ROWN Evergreens

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

SEP 15 1956

Hub Symphony Orchestra Gains Praise of Pravda

MOSCOW, Sept. 14 (AP)—Pravda praised the ~~Boston Sym~~phony Orchestra to the skies today.

The Communist party organ described the orchestra's visit as an "outstanding success" and expressed the gratitude of the Soviet people for the "genuine pleasure" it gave them.

These accolades, first official expressions concerning the symphony's performances here and in Leningrad, echoed the informal but enthusiastic acclaim of music critics.

The Pravda article was written by Dmitri Kabalevsky, Soviet composer and critic.

"Our Boston guests have done a good thing to show us so much modern music," he wrote. "We should thank them for it because it has to be admitted new American music is inadequately known to broad circles of our music lovers."

"First Class Musicians"

He called members of the orchestra "first class musicians who are artists and virtuosos in the full sense of the term" and said the orchestra as a whole was "a rarely harmonious ensemble."

"It is a genuinely artistic body which has achieved such a high degree of skill that any technical difficulties cease to exist for it and all attention is directed at solution of artistic tasks; when in the most powerful and strong passages the music sounds just as expressive as in the most delicate ones bordering on a barely audible whisper; when the hues of performance are refined to a point usually encountered only in chamber ensembles."

He called Conductor Charles Munch an "artist and a man full of profound and sincere feeling, possessing a powerful intellect and an amazing young soul.'

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 14 1956

Reds Laud Symphony

MOSCOW (AP)—Pravda praised the Boston Symphony Orchestra to the skies today.

The Communist Party organ described the orchestra's recent visit to the Soviet Union as an "outstanding success." It expressed the gratitude of the Soviet people for the "genuine pleasure" it gave them

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

SEP 19 1956

Could Have Lasting Results

The visit of the Boston Symphony orchestra to Moscow was the absolute pinnacle of success. The Russians know and love the music; their critics are tough. They went overboard for the Boston Symphony. This was very gratifying to us — just as our enthusiastic reception to the Russian violinist Oistrack was to the Soviets.

William J. Jorden, writing from Moscow for the New York Times, reminds us that there was more than artistic value to the Boston Symphony's appearance there: "By inviting a famous American orchestra to perform here and by sending Soviet artists abroad — indeed, with the whole steadily accelerating cultural exchange program - the Soviet Union's leaders are improving their standing in the eyes of their own people. Over a period of time the people can be expected to feel they no longer are being isolated from contact with the best of other countries".

There must be an official "line" to go along with this cultural relaxation, of course, for it will no longer be believed that the West is decadent, uncultured, and all that when Russians have for themselves heard things like the Boston Symphony. The campaign of at least surface friendship has its effect inside as well as outside Russia, and this may have some interesting and unpredictable long-range effects.

GREENVILLE, S. C.
PIEDMONT

SEP 14 1956

'Music Hath Charms To..'

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra, one of the top musical organizations of the United States, has just completed a triumphal invasion of Moscow and concluded a two-day stand of three concerts with rafter-shaking applause greeting its efforts.

The audiences gave ovations in the auditorium, the individual Russians, who had forked up $10 for tickets, went into personal ecstasies and the Soviet press was lavish in praise as Conductor Charles Munch led this distinguished orchestra through the programs.

Members of the orchestra, amazed and quite naturally pleased, termed the reception "fabulous."

But, sad to say in some respects, the Boston Symphony did not happen to play before top members of the Soviet government. Dispatches do not explain their absence. It might have done something to them to see the rank and file of Russia so aroused by such a splendid performance on the part of foreigners.

Regardless, we are moved to say again, to emphasize the fact, that music is a universal language, understood and appreciated by those who know it, regardless of race or country.

Perhaps the base from which music must still operate remains too small for it to become a potent factor in international understanding and for it to contribute to the kind of friendship that will replace the tensions of the times and underwrite peace.

But the fact that an orchestra from capitalistic America can go behind the Iron Curtain, captivate the little people of that land at $10 a throw and draw unanimous praise from every source constitutes progress and is surely refreshing.

The Boston Symphony has done something that others have failed to do and it should neither be discounted nor forgotten.

ISLAND — Fair and cooler today. Clear and cool tonight. Sunday increasing cloudiness and cool.

…E, NEW HAMPSHIRE, VERMONT — Fair and cooler today. Clear and cooler tonight with some frost in the valleys. Sunday increasing cloudiness and …ed cool.

…ECTICUT—Much cooler …y, with variable cloudiness and sunshine. Clear and … tonight. Sunday, …hilly sunshine with increasing clouds and not as

…and her father, we… …gell, in their suits … Lloyd Christenson of S… operator of a car that s… girl in Lee Nov. 15, 19… drea Nuciforo was couns… the plaintiffs and Arin… Giustina represented the defe… ant.

A jury verdict of $1066 was re… turned for Chief Petty Office… Ralph T. Greaney of Southwick… who had sued Joseph R. Durkin… of Westfield, operator of Dur… kin Motor Sales Co., charging th… defendant had misrepresented an… automobile sold the plaintiff. Henry A. Moran, Jr., appeared for the plaintiff and Charles

---

Bo… Zbi…

MO… tońska … triumfalm… wy pobyt … kim i wyru… drogę do Pragi w Czechosłowacji w sześciu specjalnych samolotach.

Zespół składający się ze 1… instrumentów w niedzielę … Moskwie odegrał dwa konc… ty.

Członkowie orkiestry mó… że owacje jakich doznali … zas dwóch dni pobytu w … ningradzie i ostatnich dw… dni pobytu w Moskwie, b… najgorętrze ze wszystkich … nanych kiedykolwiek pr… nich owacji.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
…NGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

…P 15 1956

…oston Symphony

Continued From Page 17

virtuosos in the full sense of the term" and said the orchestra as a whole was "a rarely harmonious ensemble."

"It is a genuinely artistic body which has achieved such a high degree of skill that any technical difficulties cease to exist for it and all attention is directed at solution of artistic tasks; when in the most powerful and strong passes the music sounds just as expressive as in the most delicate today as salable head.

Buyers paid $… butchers scaling 1… $15.75 to $16.10 … pounders. A few 1… 67 head reached … sold at $13.50 to …

There was little … the cattle sectio… receipts consisting … feeders. A few uti… moved at $14 to … low choice heifers … $22.

Cows held stead…

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.
TIMES
Circ. D. 57,924 - S. 86,764

SEP 13 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY'S HIT

The Boston Symphony's concert series in Russia has been declared an unqualified success. In at least one instance, the enthusiasm of the audience persuaded Conductor Munch to forget his "no encore" rule, and the orchestra played on.

But why should it not be so?

The Boston is one of the world's truly great orchestras; the Russians are a people in whom the love of music is deep and abiding.

The answer, of course, is that we find the reception newsworthy because the Boston is the first American symphonic ensemble ever to play in the Soviet Union. The Communist masters, too fearful of their security to risk even the importation of pleasure, have held the gates tight against cultural organizations as well as political ones.

Perhaps they have really changed. No one knows for sure. But certain it is that at least one American group has played its way into the hearts of its listeners.

It would be too much to expect that the singing notes of a Beethoven symphony would crumble the Iron Curtain as did the walls of Jericho before Joshua's trumpet. Modern barriers, especially ideological ones, are of stickier stuff.

Nevertheless, this may prove to have been a step toward more nearly normal relations between this country and Russia. When persons can come and go between the two countries with normal freedom in travel, the chances for mutual understanding will have increased. And understanding is a forerunner of peace.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 14 1956

Reds Laud Symphony

MOSCOW (AP)—Pravda praised the Boston Symphony Orchestra to the skies today.

The Communist Party organ described the orchestra's recent visit to the Soviet Union as an "outstanding success." It expressed the gratitude of the Soviet people for the "genuine pleasure" it gave them

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

SPRINGFIELD, O.
NEWS-SUN
Circ. S. 30,896

SEP 16 1956

Coming Of Age

One need never had tooted a flute or tossed off a pas de seul, or even much fancied serious music or the ballet, to feel a thrill of pride that the Boston Symphony was a smash hit in Moscow and that Ballet Theater has been gathering bouquets in Belgrade.

Triumphs of money, might and muscle are old stuff to twentieth-century Americans, and they long thought they preferred it that way. Did Europe have a corner on culture? Europe could, if it pleased. This was a strong, bold, bustling, blue-jeaned nation, home of tough-minded doers and east-bound passports for dilletantes.

The pose was artificial, as untruthful as European claims to cultural superiority. Art was at home here from the beginning, the art of Benjamin West and

…Instructions
…RING SHRUBS
Bloom
…EMUMS In Bloom
…ROWN Evergreens

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

SEP 19 1956

Could Have Lasting Results

The visit of the Boston Symphony orchestra to Moscow was the absolute pinnacle of success. The Russians know and love the music; their critics are tough. They went overboard for the Boston Symphony. This was very gratifying to us — just as our enthusiastic reception to the Russian violinist Oistrack was to the Soviets.

William J. Jorden, writing from Moscow for the New York Times, reminds us that there was more than artistic value to the Boston Symphony's appearance there: "By inviting a famous American orchestra to perform here and by sending Soviet artists abroad — indeed, with the whole steadily accelerating cultural exchange program - the Soviet Union's leaders are improving their standing in the eyes of their own people. Over a period of time the people can be expected to feel they no longer are being isolated from contact with the best of other countries".

There must be an official "line" to go along with this cultural relaxation, of course, for it will no longer be believed that the West is decadent, uncultured, and all that when Russians have for themselves heard things like the Boston Symphony. The campaign of at least surface friendship has its effect inside as well as outside Russia, and this may have some interesting and unpredictable long-range effects.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

SEP 15 1956

Soviet Press Exalts Hub Symphony Skill

MOSCOW (AP)—Pravda praised the Boston Symphony Orchestra to the skies. The Communist party organ described the orchestra's recent visit to the Soviet Union as an "outstanding success" and expressed the gratitude of the Soviet people for the "genuine pleasure" it gave them.

These unstinting accolades, the first official expressions concernin gthe Symphony's performances here and in Leningrad last week, echoed the informal but enthusiastic acclaim of Soviet music critics.

The Pravada article was written by Dmitri Kabalevsky, Soviet composer and critic.

"BEST IN YEARS"

"Our Boston guests have done a good thing to show us so much modern music," he wrote. "We should thank them for it because it has to be admitted new American music is inadequately known to broad circle of our music lovers."

He described the orchestra's visit as "among the most interesting events of our concert life in recent years;" called members of the orchestra "first class musicians who are artists and virtuosos in the full sense of the term" and said the orchestra as a whole was "a rarely harmonious ensemble."

PRAISES MUNCH

"It is a genuinely artistic body whcih has achieved such a high degree of skill that any technical difficulties cease to exist for it and all attention is directed at solution of artistic tasks; when in the most powerful and strong passages the music sounds just as expressive as in the most delicate ones bordering on a barely audible whisper; when the hues of performance are refined to a point usually encountered only in chamber ensembles."

He called Conductor Charles Munch an "artist and a man full of profound and sincere feeling, possessing a powerful intellect and an amazing young soul."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

SEP 15 1956

Hub Symphony Orchestra Gains Praise of Pravda

MOSCOW, Sept. 14 (AP)—Pravda praised the Boston Symphony Orchestra to the skies today.

The Communist party organ described the orchestra's visit as an "outstanding success" and expressed the gratitude of the Soviet people for the "genuine pleasure" it gave them.

These accolades, first official expressions concerning the symphony's performances here and in Leningrad, echoed the informal but enthusiastic acclaim of music critics.

The Pravda article was written by Dmitri Kabalevsky, Soviet composer and critic.

"Our Boston guests have done a good thing to show us so much modern music," he wrote. "We should thank them for it because it has to be admitted new American music is inadequately known to broad circles of our music lovers."

"First Class Musicians"

He called members of the orchestra "first class musicians who are artists and virtuosos in the full sense of the term" and said the orchestra as a whole was "a rarely harmonious ensemble."

"It is a genuinely artistic body which has achieved such a high degree of skill that any technical difficulties cease to exist for it and all attention is directed at solution of artistic tasks; when in the most powerful and strong passages the music sounds just as expressive as in the most delicate ones bordering on a barely audible whisper; when the hues of performance are refined to a point usually encountered only in chamber ensembles."

He called Conductor Charles Munch an "artist and a man full of profound and sincere feeling, possessing a powerful intellect and an amazing young soul."

GREENVILLE, S. C.
PIEDMONT

SEP 14 1956

'Music Hath Charms To . .'

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra, one of the top musical organizations of the United States, has just completed a triumphal invasion of Moscow and concluded a two-day stand of three concerts with rafter-shaking applause greeting its efforts.

The audiences gave ovations in the auditorium, the individual Russians, who had forked up $10 for tickets, went into personal ecstasies and the Soviet press was lavish in praise as Conductor Charles Munch led this distinguished orchestra through the programs.

Members of the orchestra, amazed and quite naturally pleased, termed the reception "fabulous."

But, sad to say in some respects, the Boston Symphony did not happen to play before top members of the Soviet government. Dispatches do not explain their absence. It might have done something to them to see the rank and file of Russia so aroused by such a splendid performance on the part of foreigners.

Regardless, we are moved to say again, to emphasize the fact, that music is a universal language, understood and appreciated by those who know it, regardless of race or country.

Perhaps the base from which music must still operate remains too small for it to become a potent factor in international understanding and for it to contribute to the kind of friendship that will replace the tensions of the times and underwrite peace.

But the fact that an orchestra from capitalistic America can go behind the Iron Curtain, captivate the little people of that land at $10 a throw and draw unanimous praise from every source constitutes progress and is surely refreshing.

The Boston Symphony has done something that others have failed to do and it should neither be discounted nor forgotten.

ern Negro voters.

Times-Union, Albany N.Y. 9/14/56

usical Diplomats

Two Communist countries, Russia and Yugoslavia, were soothed ith American music last week. The Yugos and Russians were be- uiled and propagandized — artistically, at least — by the American allet Theatre in Belgrade and the Boston Symphony in Moscow. Both groups put emphasis on American works.

The Ballet Theatre's "Rodeo" was well received in Belgrade de- pite its typically American cow-range setting. Russian critics were nanimous in their praise of the symphony's performance of American orks by Aaron Copland, Walter Piston and Paul Creston.

This is one way to get to the people of Communist countries, who re pretty much like people anywhere else and are not to be confused ith their Red bosses.

It is in line with President Eisenhower's belief that "every pos- ible chink in the Iron Curtain" must be widened so as to foster peo- le-to-people understanding as the "truest path" to peace. This is

We hope to see more of it.

LEXINGTON, KY.
LEADER

SEP 17 1956

Boston Symphony A Good Will Ambassador To Russian People

The recent visit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to the Soviet Union is one of the most significant good will gestures yet undertaken to establish a firm relationship with the Russians.

The Boston orchestra was the first major Western group to perform behind the Iron Curtain and from all accounts it was a triumph in every respect. It is reasonable to assume that the musicians won more good will in a few days than diplomats have been able to accomplish in months. A Moscow audience cheered and applauded for minutes at the two concerts performed in that city and at Leningrad audience reaction was much the same. The first concert in Moscow was led by Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. He was called back for encores and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's regular conductor, said in a statement, "Our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express feelings." He spoke at a farewell chestra's of Cul-

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of Russian critics was unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet given for the men of the orchestra.

Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

Last spring an American theatrical company gave performances of "Porgy and Bess" in Moscow, Leningrad and other cities. The all-Negro cast was not only cordially received, but was cheered and wildly applauded for excellent performances of this typically American folk opera.

It is certain the Boston Orchestra brought to Russians a new image of the American people and America's culture. The visit of the musicians could not but have a stimulating effect for mutual good relations.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WORLD WEEK
NEW YORK, N. Y.

SEP 27 1956

Stories in a Sentence

The White House in Washington, D.C., was closed to visitors last week so that painters could give the Executive Mansion its first new coat of paint in six years—white, of course!

The Boston Symphony Orchestra won Russian critics' praise as "the greatest orchestra in the world" after four concerts in Moscow and Leningrad—marking the first time a U.S. orchestra ever played in the Soviet Union.

More than 8,000,000 Soviet workers will benefit from establishment of the first minimum wage law in Russia—with the minimum set at 270 rubles (or about $50) a month. (The U.S. has had a minimum wage law since 1933; the minimum for most workers is now set at $1 an hour.)

September 26 has been declared "Johnny Appleseed Day" in Ohio, honoring the 182nd anniversary of the birth of John ("Appleseed") Chapman, the man who, legend says, planted apple trees throughout the Ohio Valley.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

SEP 16 1956

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By PAUL HENRY LANG

A Welcome Yankee Imperialism

This column would normally start the new musical year with an article dealing with some aspect of the forthcoming season. However, on this occasion one piece of news demands prior notice: Congress has delivered a verdict on music and has found for the defendant. It is precisely because music did appear as a defendant before the lawmakers of the land that I feel that the public should be apprised of the case.

As is well known, after much prodding the government has tentatively begun to lend a hand to some of our distinguished artists and groups of artists in order that they may appear in foreign countries and demonstrate the exceptional musical achievements of the United States. A very modest budget was set aside, and the American National Theater and Academy, with its several (unpaid) panels of experts, was appointed as the advisory and accrediting agency for the State Department. The success of the venture was instantaneous and entirely out of proportion to the expenditures.

Music or Sports?

However, the un-traditional and hence dangerous, even un-American practice of consorting with and supporting "idle strollers," as musicians and such dubious gentry used to be called in the Massachusetts Bay Colony (today they are dubbed "long-hairs") rankled in the minds of some of our elected leaders, who felt this whole business to represent an irresponsible squandering of the taxpayer's hard-earned money. A short while ago the Senate Appropriations Committee lopped off almost half of the very small amount earmarked for the International Exchange Program. The committee was of the opinion that if government subsidies are at all in order they should be diverted to sports rather than to music and the dance.

Fortunately, as these lines are written, the enlightened element in Congress has prevailed, the original amount has been restored by the conferees, and, most gratifying, the whole exchange program, which is entirely free of chicanery, politics and nepotism, has been placed on a permanent basis.

It is hoped that some of the members of Congress who missed the glowing reports on the past successes of these traveling American artists have seen the recent news stories describing the profound impression made by the Boston Symphony in Moscow and Leningrad. This was the first glimpse the Russians ever had of an American orchestra and they were bowled over. Though Mr. Rooney and Senator Ellender, chairmen of their respective Appropriation Committees may not know it, this is exactly what the friends of the United States abroad, now sadly dwindling in numbers, want to see.

Curiously enough, there are many people who judge our much-vaunted "American way of life" in such simple terms as music, art, and literature. When the Boston Symphony plays a work by an American composer (and to their credit they do play one in every concert) they undo many a faux pas our legislators or our State Department now and then make.

The colloquy recorded in the Congressional Record when Congressman Richards was valiantly fighting for his bill "to provide for the promotion and strengthening of international relations through cultural exchanges," patiently parrying irrevelant and asinine objections, came to mind when I read the speech by the representative of the Polish "People's Democracy" delivered at the Paris Radio Congress.

'Offals for Masses'

The prevailing concept abroad is that we have two or three orchestras, all composed of foreigners lured away from Europe and maintained in the metropolises by millionaires for their own amusement. The rest of the country lives on Westerns, comics and juke boxes. The delegate from Poland, addressing himself to our kind of democracy, had this to say: "Our success with good music refutes the assertions that real works of art can be created only in selected circles divided from the passive and ignorant masses who are fed by the offals of real music." Well, let us send them one or the other of our "provincial" orchestras; they are all good, and superior to most orchestras encountered in those countries bulging with people's democratic culture.

Even our own neighbors south of the border, who ought to know better, readily join the pack and howl with the wolves. The benighted representative from Mexico told the Radio Congress that the Yankees ("they have no right to call themselves Americans") have absolutely no culture and whatever music they use is only for business purposes. Make no mistake, such ludicrous statements are taken seriously, and no amount of military or economic assistance can erase the contemptuous epithet, "cultural barbarians." Yet, paradoxical as it may seem, a lone artist from the Dakota Badlands, the wild Ozark hills, or the stockyards of Chicago, traveling to Warsaw with a government subsidy of a couple of thousand dollars can make friends and redeem our reputation.

Mr. Dulles' Helpers

Now that the onslaught has been repulsed, perhaps a few hardy souls in Congress—and there are not a few—can help to enlarge the exchange program. Mr. Dulles undoubtedly realizes that our orchestras and individual artists are among his best and most powerful helpers, that wherever they go they evoke admiration and praise for the United States. Their message cannot be belittled, sidetracked, or garbled, and the most fanatical detractors of America fall silent—or perhaps even applaud—when confronted with this extraordinary product of our "plutocratic and materialistic civilization."

Yes, this ought to be our "Yankee imperialism," and we should exploit it to the hilt. Read the newspapers, gentlemen of the Appropriations Committees, read the notices about the Boston Symphony in Moscow, the New York City Ballet in Salzburg, the Symphony of the Air in Japan, or the New Orleans Philharmonic in Mexico, then dig down in your pockets a little deeper, for you will be honoring the nation and yourselves.

DETROIT, MICH.
TIMES
Circ. D. 408,705 - S. 521,878

SEP 17 1956

usical Diplomats

TWO Communist countries, Russia and Yugoslavia, were soothed with American music the other week. The Yugos and Russians were beguiled and propagandized—artistically, at least—by the American Ballet Theater in Belgrade and the Boston Symphony in Moscow.

Both groups put emphasis on American works.

The ballet theater's "Rodeo" was well received in Belgrade despite its typically American cow-range setting. Russian critics were unanimous in their praise of the symphony's performance of American works by Aaron Copland Walter Piston and Paul Creston.

This is one way to get to the people of Communist countries, who are pretty much like people anywhere else and are not to be confused with their Red bosses.

It is in line with President Eisenhower's belief that "every possible chink in the iron curtain" must be widened so as to foster people-to-people understanding as the "truest path" to peace. This is powerful diplomacy.

We hope to see more of it.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

SEP 18 1956

A Starter

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has made as great an impression on the Russians as the Russian violinist, David Oistrakh, made on American audiences last year. Who can say that there are no values which the U.S.S.R. and the United States can exchange?

If only this mutual enthusiasm could be transferred to other fields. If only Russian diplomats could yell "Bravo" to our diplomatic proposals. If only Russian diplomatic moves were such that American diplomats could shout "Hooray" to their proposals.

It is expecting too much to expect music to shape our policies. Unfortunately agreement will have to be found outside as well as inside the concert hall before the world can breathe easier.

But perhaps Oistrakh and the Boston Symphony are a starter.

10¢

Sports

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1956

Dodgers Need St. Louis' Help as Braves Sweep Would Claim NL Flag

Sports

[164]

hern Negro voters.

Times-Union, Albany N.Y. 9/14/56

Musical Diplomats

Two Communist countries, Russia and Yugoslavia, were soothed with American music last week. The Yugos and Russians were beguiled and propagandized — artistically, at least — by the American Ballet Theatre in Belgrade and the Boston Symphony in Moscow. Both groups put emphasis on American works.

The Ballet Theatre's "Rodeo" was well received in Belgrade despite its typically American cow-range setting. Russian critics were unanimous in their praise of the symphony's performance of American works by Aaron Copland, Walter Piston and Paul Creston.

This is one way to get to the people of Communist countries, who are pretty much like people anywhere else and are not to be confused with their Red bosses.

It is in line with President Eisenhower's belief that "every possible chink in the Iron Curtain" must be widened so as to foster people-to-people understanding as the "truest path" to peace. This is

We hope to see more of it.

LEXINGTON, KY.
LEADER

SEP 17 1956

Boston Symphony A Good Will Ambassador To Russian People

The recent visit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to the Soviet Union is one of the most significant good will gestures yet undertaken to establish a firm relationship with the Russians.

The Boston orchestra was the first major Western group to perform behind the Iron Curtain and from all accounts it was a triumph in every respect. It is reasonable to assume that the musicians won more good will in a few days than diplomats have been able to accomplish in months. A Moscow audience cheered and applauded for minutes at the two concerts performed in that city and at Leningrad audience reaction was much the same. The first concert in Moscow was led by Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. He was called back for encores and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's regular conductor, said in a statement, "Our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell

chestra's

of Cul-

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of Russian critics was unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet given for the men of the orchestra.

Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

Last spring an American theatrical company gave performances of "Porgy and Bess" in Moscow, Leningrad and other cities. The all-Negro cast was not only cordially received, but was cheered and wildly applauded for excellent performances of this typically American folk opera.

It is certain the Boston Orchestra brought to Russians a new image of the American people and America's culture. The visit of the musicians could not but have a stimulating effect for mutual good relations.

DETROIT, MICH.
TIMES
Circ. D. 408,705 - S. 521,878

SEP 17 1956

Musical Diplomats

TWO Communist countries, Russia and Yugoslavia, were soothed with American music the other week. The Yugos and Russians were beguiled and propagandized—artistically, at least—by the American Ballet Theater in Belgrade and the Boston Symphony in Moscow.

Both groups put emphasis on American works.

The ballet theater's "Rodeo" was well received in Belgrade despite its typically American cow-range setting. Russian critics were unanimous in their praise of the symphony's performance of American works by Aaron Copland, Walter Piston and Paul Creston.

This is one way to get to the people of Communist countries, who are pretty much like people anywhere else and are not to be confused with their Red bosses.

It is in line with President Eisenhower's belief that "every possible chink in the iron curtain" must be widened so as to foster people-to-people understanding as the "truest path" to peace. This is powerful diplomacy.

We hope to see more of it.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

SEP 18 1956

A Starter

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has made as great an impression on the Russians as the Russian violinist, David Oistrakh, made on American audiences last year. Who can say that there are no values which the U.S.S.R. and the United States can exchange?

If only this mutual enthusiasm could be transferred to other fields. If only Russian diplomats could yell "Bravo" to our diplomatic proposals. If only Russian diplomatic moves were such that American diplomats could shout "Hooray" to their proposals.

It is expecting too much to expect music to shape our policies. Unfortunately agreement will have to be found outside as well as inside the concert hall before the world can breathe easier.

But perhaps Oistrakh and the Boston Symphony are a starter.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WORLD WEEK
NEW YORK, N. Y.

SEP 27 1956

Stories in a Sentence

The White House in Washington, D.C., was closed to visitors last week so that painters could give the Executive Mansion its first new coat of paint in six years—white, of course!

The Boston Symphony Orchestra won Russian critics' praise as "the greatest orchestra in the world" after four concerts in Moscow and Leningrad—marking the first time a U.S. orchestra ever played in the Soviet Union.

More than 8,000,000 Soviet workers will benefit from establishment of the first minimum wage law in Russia—with the minimum set at 270 rubles (or about $50) a month. (The U.S. has had a minimum wage law since 1933; the minimum for most workers is now set at $1 an hour.)

September 26 has been declared "Johnny Appleseed Day" in Ohio, honoring the 182nd anniversary of the birth of John ("Appleseed") Chapman, the man who, legend says, planted apple trees throughout the Ohio Valley.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

SEP 16 1956

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By PAUL HENRY LANG

A Welcome Yankee Imperialism

This column would normally start the new musical year with an article dealing with some aspect of the forthcoming season. However, on this occasion one piece of news demands prior notice: Congress has delivered a verdict on music and has found for the defendant. It is precisely because music did appear as a defendant before the lawmakers of the land that I feel that the public should be apprised of the case.

As is well known, after much prodding the government has tentatively begun to lend a hand to some of our distinguished artists and groups of artists in order that they may appear in foreign countries and demonstrate the exceptional musical achievements of the United States. A very modest budget was set aside, and the American National Theater and Academy, with its several (unpaid) panels of experts, was appointed as the advisory and accrediting agency for the State Department. The success of the venture was instantaneous and entirely out of proportion to the expenditures.

Music or Sports?

However, the un-traditional and hence dangerous, even un-American practice of consorting with and supporting "idle strollers," as musicians and such dubious gentry used to be called in the Massachusetts Bay Colony (today they are dubbed "long-hairs") rankled in the minds of some of our elected leaders, who felt this whole business to represent an irresponsible squandering of the taxpayer's hard-earned money. A short while ago the Senate Appropriations Committee lopped off almost half of the very small amount earmarked for the International Exchange Program. The committee was of the opinion that if government subsidies are at all in order they should be diverted to sports rather than to music and the dance.

Fortunately, as these lines are written, the enlightened element in Congress has prevailed, the original amount has been restored by the conferees, and, most gratifying, the whole exchange program, which is entirely free of chicanery, politics and nepotism, has been placed on a permanent basis.

It is hoped that some of the members of Congress who missed the glowing reports on the past successes of these traveling American artists have seen the recent news stories describing the profound impression made by the Boston Symphony in Moscow and Leningrad. This was the first glimpse the Russians ever had of an American orchestra and they were bowled over. Though Mr. Rooney and Senator Ellender, chairmen of their respective Appropriation Committees may not know it, this is exactly what the friends of the United States abroad, now sadly dwindling in numbers, want to see.

Curiously enough, there are many people who judge our much-vaunted "American way of life" in such simple terms as music, art, and literature. When the Boston Symphony plays a work by an American composer (and to their credit they do play one in every concert) they undo many a faux pas our legislators or our State Department now and then make.

The colloquy recorded in the Congressional Record when Congressman Richards was valiantly fighting for his bill "to provide for the promotion and strengthening of international relations through cultural exchanges," patiently parrying irrevelant and asinine objections, came to mind when I read the speech by the representative of the Polish "People's Democracy" delivered at the Paris Radio Congress.

'Offals for Masses'

The prevailing concept abroad is that we have two or three orchestras, all composed of foreigners lured away from Europe and maintained in the metropolises by millionaires for their own amusement. The rest of the country lives on Westerns, comics and juke boxes. The delegate from Poland, addressing himself to our kind of democracy, had this to say: "Our success with good music refutes the assertions that real works of art can be created only in selected circles divided from the passive and ignorant masses who are fed by the offals of real music." Well, let us send them one or the other of our "provincial" orchestras; they are all good, and superior to most orchestras encountered in those countries bulging with people's democratic culture.

Even our own neighbors south of the border, who ought to know better, readily join the pack and howl with the wolves. The benighted representative from Mexico told the Radio Congress that the Yankees ("they have no right to call themselves Americans") have absolutely no culture and whatever music they use is only for business purposes. Make no mistake, such ludicrous statements are taken seriously, and no amount of military or economic assistance can erase the contemptuous epithet, "cultural barbarians." Yet, paradoxical as it may seem, a lone artist from the Dakota Badlands, the wild Ozark hills, or the stockyards of Chicago, traveling to Warsaw with a government subsidy of a couple of thousand dollars can make friends and redeem our reputation.

Mr. Dulles' Helpers

Now that the onslaught has been repulsed, perhaps a few hardy souls in Congress—and there are not a few—can help to enlarge the exchange program. Mr. Dulles undoubtedly realizes that our orchestras and individual artists are among his best and most powerful helpers, that wherever they go they evoke admiration and praise for the United States. Their message cannot be belittled, sidetracked, or garbled, and the most fanatical detractors of America fall silent—or perhaps even applaud—when confronted with this extraordinary product of our "plutocratic and materialistic civilization."

Yes, this ought to be our "Yankee imperialism," and we should exploit it to the hilt. Read the newspapers, gentlemen of the Appropriations Committees, read the notices about the Boston Symphony in Moscow, the New York City Ballet in Salzburg, the Symphony of the Air in Japan, or the New Orleans Philharmonic in Mexico, then dig down in your pockets a little deeper, for you will be honoring the nation and yourselves.

10¢ Sports THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1956 Sports

Dodgers Need St. Louis' Help as Braves Sweep Would Claim NL Flag

[164]

thern Negro voters.

Times-Union, Albany N.Y. 9/14/56

Musical Diplomats

Two Communist countries, Russia and Yugoslavia, were soothed with American music last week. The Yugos and Russians were beguiled and propagandized — artistically, at least — by the American Ballet Theatre in Belgrade and the Boston Symphony in Moscow.

Both groups put emphasis on American works.

The Ballet Theatre's "Rodeo" was well received in Belgrade despite its typically American cow-range setting. Russian critics were unanimous in their praise of the symphony's performance of American works by Aaron Copland, Walter Piston and Paul Creston.

This is one way to get to the people of Communist countries, who are pretty much like people anywhere else and are not to be confused with their Red bosses.

It is in line with President Eisenhower's belief that "every possible chink in the Iron Curtain" must be widened so as to foster people-to-people understanding as the "truest path" to peace. This is powerful diplomacy. We hope to see more of it.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

WORLD WEEK
NEW YORK, N. Y.

SEP 27 1956

Stories in a Sentence

The White House in Washington, D.C., was closed to visitors last week so that painters could give the Executive Mansion its first new coat of paint in six years—white, of course!

The Boston Symphony Orchestra won Russian critics praise as "the greatest orchestra in the world" after four concerts in Moscow and Leningrad—marking the first time a U.S. orchestra ever played in the Soviet Union.

More than 8,000,000 Soviet workers will benefit from establishment of the first minimum wage law in Russia—with the minimum set at 270 rubles (or about $50) a month. (The U.S. has had a minimum wage law since 1933; the minimum for most workers is now set at $1 an hour.)

September 26 has been declared "Johnny Appleseed Day" in Ohio, honoring the 182nd anniversary of the birth of John ("Appleseed") Chapman, the man who, legend says, planted apple trees throughout the Ohio Valley.

---

phony A Good Will Ambassador To Russian People

The recent visit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to the Soviet Union is one of the most significant good will gestures yet undertaken to establish a firm relationship with the Russians.

The Boston orchestra was the first major Western group to perform behind the Iron Curtain and from all accounts it was a triumph in every respect. It is reasonable to assume that the musicians won more good will in a few days than diplomats have been able to accomplish in months. A Moscow audience cheered and applauded for minutes at the two concerts performed in that city and at Leningrad audience reaction was much the same. The first concert in Moscow was led by Pierre Monteux as guest conductor. He was called back for encores and set the audience to wild cheering by giving them two.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's regular conductor, said in a statement, "Our experience in the Soviet Union has been unique. No words exist to express my feelings." He spoke at a farewell banquet sponsored in the orchestra's honor by the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

Other members of the orchestra said the ovations they received during two days in Leningrad and the last two days in Moscow were the warmest they had ever experienced.

The reaction of Russian critics was unanimously favorable.

The Soviet Union's musical elite, headed by composer Aram Khachaturian and violinist David Oistrakh, turned out for the farewell banquet given for the men of the orchestra.

Khachaturian said he looked forward to further musical exchanges between the Soviet Union and the United States. Oistrakh offered a toast to lasting friendship between the two countries.

Last spring an American theatrical company gave performances of "Porgy and Bess" in Moscow, Leningrad and other cities. The all-Negro cast was not only cordially received, but was cheered and wildly applauded for excellent performances of this typically American folk opera.

It is certain the Boston Orchestra brought to Russians a new image of the American people and America's culture. The visit of the musicians could not but have a stimulating effect for mutual good relations.

---

mats

es, Rus- and Yugoslavia, were thed with American music the er week. The Yugos and Russians were beguiled and propagandized—artistically, at least—by American Ballet Theater in Belgrade and the Boston Symphony in Moscow.

Both groups put emphasis on American works.

The ballet theater's "Rodeo" was well received in Belgrade despite its typically American cow-range setting. Russian critics were unanimous in their praise of the symphony's performance of American works by Aaron Copland, Walter Piston and Paul Creston.

This is one way to get to the people of Communist countries, who are pretty much like people anywhere else and are not to be confused with their Red bosses.

It is in line with President Eisenhower's belief that "every possible chink in the iron curtain" must be widened so as to foster people-to-people understanding as the "truest path" to peace. This is powerful diplomacy.

We hope to see more of it.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

SEP 18 1956

A Starter

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has made as great an impression on the Russians as the Russian violinist, David Oistrakh, made on American audiences last year. Who can say that there are no values which the U.S.S.R. and the United States can exchange?

If only this mutual enthusiasm could be transferred to other fields. If only Russian diplomats could yell "Bravo" to our diplomatic proposals. If only Russian diplomatic moves were such that American diplomats could shout "Hooray" to their proposals.

It is expecting too much to expect music to shape our policies. Unfortunately agreement will have to be found outside as well as inside the concert hall before the world can breathe easier.

But perhaps Oistrakh and the Boston Symphony are a starter.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

SEP 16 1956

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By PAUL HENRY LANG

A Welcome Yankee Imperialism

This column would normally start the new musical year with an article dealing with some aspect of the forthcoming season. However, on this occasion one piece of news demands prior notice: Congress has delivered a verdict on music and has found for the defendant. It is precisely because music did appear as a defendant before the lawmakers of the land that I feel that the public should be apprised of the case.

As is well known, after much prodding the government has tentatively begun to lend a hand to some of our distinguished artists and groups of artists in order that they may appear in foreign countries and demonstrate the exceptional musical achievements of the United States. A very modest budget was set aside, and the American National Theater and Academy, with its several (unpaid) panels of experts, was appointed as the advisory and accrediting agency for the State Department. The success of the venture was instantaneous and entirely out of proportion to the expenditures.

Music or Sports?

However, the un-traditional and hence dangerous, even un-American practice of consorting with and supporting "idle strollers," as musicians and such dubious gentry used to be called in the Massachusetts Bay Colony (today they are dubbed "long-hairs") rankled in the minds of some of our elected leaders, who felt this whole business to represent an irresponsible squandering of the taxpayer's hard-earned money. A short while ago the Senate Appropriations Committee lopped off almost half of the very small amount earmarked for the International Exchange Program. The committee was of the opinion that if government subsidies are at all in order they should be diverted to sports rather than to music and the dance.

Fortunately, as these lines are written, the enlightened element in Congress has prevailed, the original amount has been restored by the conferees, and, most gratifying, the whole exchange program, which is entirely free of chicanery, politics and nepotism, has been placed on a permanent basis.

It is hoped that some of the members of Congress who missed the glowing reports on the past successes of these traveling American artists have seen the recent news stories describing the profound impression made by the Boston Symphony in Moscow and Leningrad. This was the first glimpse the Russians ever had of an American orchestra and they were bowled over. Though Mr. Rooney and Senator Ellender, chairmen of their respective Appropriation Committees may not know it, this is exactly what the friends of the United States abroad, now sadly dwindling in numbers, want to see.

Curiously enough, there are many people who judge our much-vaunted "American way of life" in such simple terms as music, art, and literature. When the Boston Symphony plays a work by an American composer (and to their credit they do play one in every concert) they undo many a faux pas our legislators or our State Department now and then make.

The colloquy recorded in the Congressional Record when Congressman Richards was valiantly fighting for his bill "to provide for the promotion and strengthening of international relations through cultural exchanges," patiently parrying irrevelant and asinine objections, came to mind when I read the speech by the representative of the Polish "People's Democracy" delivered at the Paris Radio Congress.

'Offals for Masses'

The prevailing concept abroad is that we have two or three orchestras, all composed of foreigners lured away from Europe and maintained in the metropolises by millionaires for their own amusement. The rest of the country lives on Westerns, comics and juke boxes. The delegate from Poland, addressing himself to our kind of democracy, had this to say: "Our success with good music refutes the assertions that real works of art can be created only in selected circles divided from the passive and ignorant masses who are fed by the offals of real music." Well, let us send them one or the other of our "provincial" orchestras; they are all good, and superior to most orchestras encountered in those countries bulging with people's democratic culture.

Even our own neighbors south of the border, who ought to know better, readily join the pack and howl with the wolves. The benighted representative from Mexico told the Radio Congress that the Yankees ("they have no right to call themselves Americans") have absolutely no culture and whatever music they use is only for business purposes. Make no mistake, such ludicrous statements are taken seriously, and no amount of military or economic assistance can erase the contemptuous epithet, "cultural barbarians." Yet, paradoxical as it may seem, a lone artist from the Dakota Badlands, the wild Ozark hills, or the stockyards of Chicago, traveling to Warsaw with a government subsidy of a couple of thousand dollars can make friends and redeem our reputation.

Mr. Dulles' Helpers

Now that the onslaught has been repulsed, perhaps a few hardy souls in Congress—and there are not a few—can help to enlarge the exchange program. Mr. Dulles undoubtedly realizes that our orchestras and individual artists are among his best and most powerful helpers, that wherever they go they evoke admiration and praise for the United States. Their message cannot be belittled, sidetracked, or garbled, and the most fanatical detractors of America fall silent—or perhaps even applaud—when confronted with this extraordinary product of our "plutocratic and materialistic civilization."

Yes, this ought to be our "Yankee imperialism," and we should exploit it to the hilt. Read the newspapers, gentlemen of the Appropriations Committees, read the notices about the Boston Symphony in Moscow, the New York City Ballet in Salzburg, the Symphony of the Air in Japan, or the New Orleans Philharmonic in Mexico, then dig down in your pockets a little deeper, for you will be honoring the nation and yourselves.

10¢ Sports THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1956 Sports

Dodgers Need St. Louis' Help as Braves Sweep Would Claim NL Flag

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,564

SEP 11 1956

(AP Wirephoto)

MUSIC LOVERS THE SAME . . . ALL OVER WORLD

MOSCOW—Russian spectators listen attentively as the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents a concert in the Leningrad Philharmonic Hall. The American orchestra, on a European tour, played in Leningrad last week, then followed with two concerts in Moscow.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

SEP 20 1956

Rhapsodic Reds

The Boston lady who could not see why she should travel since she "was already here" might now conclude that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has put Moscow on the musical map.

The reception given the orchestra, its conductors and players, collectively and individually, led one on-the-spot observer to declare the Iron Curtain had been "smashed wide open." Certainly the adjectives which auditors threw like roses at every performance—"incomparable," "marvelous," "sublime"—seemed more expressive of the "Russian soul" than the "party line." And what the Russian violinist David Oistrakh has been doing for Soviet artistic prestige on the Western side of the Iron Curtain the BSO appears to have done for American prestige east of that now resonant barrier.

Both in Russia and in Europe as a whole this could prove more important politically than many Americans might suppose. It should help to correct one subtle imbalance in American-European relations.

Americans are often unaware that although they are allied militarily to Western Europe, many Europeans regard the United States as outside the European cultural mosaic, as they also regard Russia—that is, as another "frontier" country. And indeed in this context the Soviet Union has an advantage in that it at least shares some of the cultural memories of a "golden age" in Europe which ended with World War I.

When David Oistrakh played Brahms in London and Paris he could evoke a European nostalgia on Moscow's behalf. He was thus a sort of cold war "secret weapon," but is now, of course, an apostle of the "new look." The BSO has shown that America also has its secret weapons for winning friends.

These weapons are sometimes underestimated in a highly technological and businessmen's society. But they are adapted to piercing not only political curtains between two ways of life but cultural curtains that sometimes tend to divide allies.

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 66,426 - S. 70,006

SEP 20 1956

Our Musical Ambassadors

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, one of the world's finest recently completed a tour of Russia to a chorus of Russian cheers. And from such established musical greats as David Oistrakh, the Soviet's premier violinist, from composers Dmitri Shostakovich, Dmitri Kabalevsky and Aram Khachaturian.

The visit was flavored with irony. For 32 years ago the Soviet Union unwillingly contributed to Boston the man who was to lead the orchestra to its present stature. He was Serge Koussevitzky. He had been conductor of the State Orchestra of the Soviet Union and he was a self-exile from Bolshevism.

Yet this 50-year-old European, in his 25 years with the Boston Symphony, was to become a champion of modern American music. "Music," wrote Longfellow (himself a Bostonian), "is the universal language of mankind."

Koussevitzky's career proved it. And now the magnificent orchestra he helped build has added new depth to Longfellow's observation. Just as Oistrakh and the Russian pianist Emil Gilels did last year in their tours of this country. Just as the Symphony of the Air (Toscanini's old NBC Symphony) did in its tour of the Far East a year ago. Just as Louis Armstrong did so recently.

Music can be a powerful force in this nervous world of ours. Yet in March the U.S. State Department abruptly cancelled a planned 1956 tour of India and the Near East by the Symphoney of the Air. In current Mid-East confusion, it would have been nice to have had a reservoir of good-feeling toward American culture.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

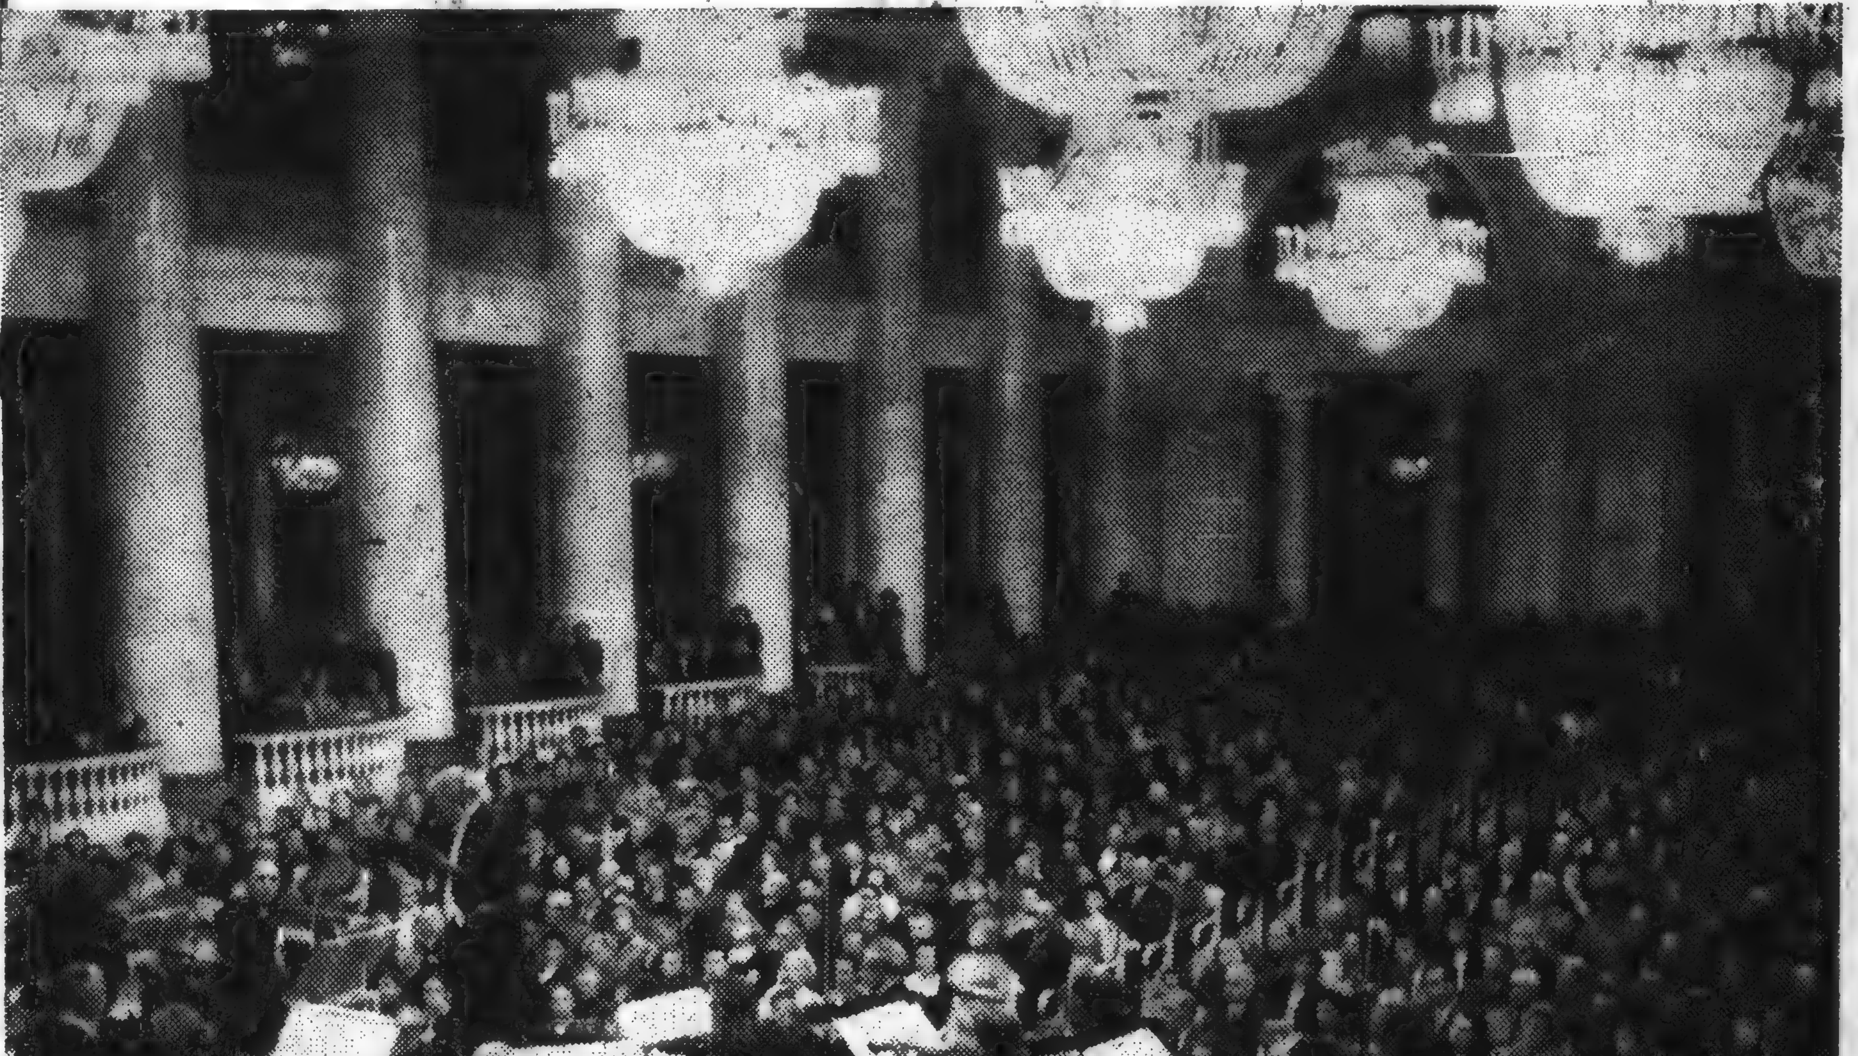
Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 10 1956

(AP Photo)

LISTENING ATTENTIVELY as the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents a concert in Leningrad, Russia, are these Soviet spectators. The 105-piece Boston orchestra is in Europe on tour. This photo was taken in the Leningrad Philharmonica Hall.

Famed Hub Orchestra In Russia



ON TOUR in Russia, the Boston Symphony Orchestra scored a big hit in the Leningrad Philharmonica Hall. Conducting world-famous Hub orchestra is Charles Munch (center). The orchestra played two concerts in Moscow after the Leningrad appearance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,564

SEP 11 1956

(AP Wirephoto)

MUSIC LOVERS THE SAME . . . ALL OVER WORLD

MOSCOW—Russian spectators listen attentively as the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents a concert in the Leningrad Philharmonic Hall. The American orchestra, on a European tour, played in Leningrad last week, then followed with two concerts in Moscow.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

SEP 20 1956

Rhapsodic Reds

The Boston lady who could not see why she should travel since she "was already here" might now conclude that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has put Moscow on the musical map.

The reception given the orchestra, its conductors and players, collectively and individually, led one on-the-spot observer to declare the Iron Curtain had been "smashed wide open." Certainly the adjectives which auditors threw like roses at every performance—"incomparable," "marvelous," "sublime"—seemed more expressive of the "Russian soul" than the "party line." And what the Russian violinist David Oistrakh has been doing for Soviet artistic prestige on the Western side of the Iron Curtain the BSO appears to have done for American prestige east of that now resonant barrier.

Both in Russia and in Europe as a whole this could prove more important politically than many Americans might suppose. It should help to correct one subtle imbalance in American-European relations.

Americans are often unaware that although they are allied militarily to Western Europe, many Europeans regard the United States as outside the European cultural mosaic, as they also regard Russia—that is, as another "frontier" country. And indeed in this context the Soviet Union has an advantage in that it at least shares some of the cultural memories of a "golden age" in Europe which ended with World War I.

When David Oistrakh played Brahms in London and Paris he could evoke a European nostalgia on Moscow's behalf. He was thus a sort of cold war "secret weapon," but is now, of course, an apostle of the "new look." The BSO has shown that America also has its secret weapons for winning friends.

These weapons are sometimes underestimated in a highly technological and businessmen's society. But they are adapted to piercing not only political curtains between two ways of life but cultural curtains that sometimes tend to divide allies.

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 66,426 - S. 70,006

SEP 20 1956

Our Musical Ambassadors

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, one of the world's finest recently completed a tour of Russia to a chorus of Russian cheers. And from such established musical greats as David Oistrakh, the Soviet's premier violinist, from composers Dmitri Shostakovich, Dmitri Kabalevsky and Aram Khachaturian.

The visit was flavored with irony. For 32 years ago the Soviet Union unwillingly contributed to Boston the man who was to lead the orchestra to its present stature. He was Serge Koussevitzky. He had been conductor of the State Orchestra of the Soviet Union and he was a self-exile from Bolshevism.

Yet this 50-year-old European, in his 25 years with the Boston Symphony, was to become a champion of modern American music. "Music," wrote Longfellow (himself a Bostonian), "is the universal language of mankind."

Koussevitzky's career proved it. And now the magnificent orchestra he helped build has added new depth to Longfellow's observation. Just as Oistrakh and the Russian pianist Emil Gilels did last year in their tours of this country. Just as the Symphony of the Air (Toscanini's old NBC Symphony) did in its tour of the Far East a year ago. Just as Louis Armstrong did so recently.

Music can be a powerful force in this nervous world of ours. Yet in March the U.S. State Department abruptly cancelled a planned 1956 tour of India and the Near East by the Symphoney of the Air. In current Mid-East confusion, it would have been nice to have had a reservoir of good-feeling toward American culture.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

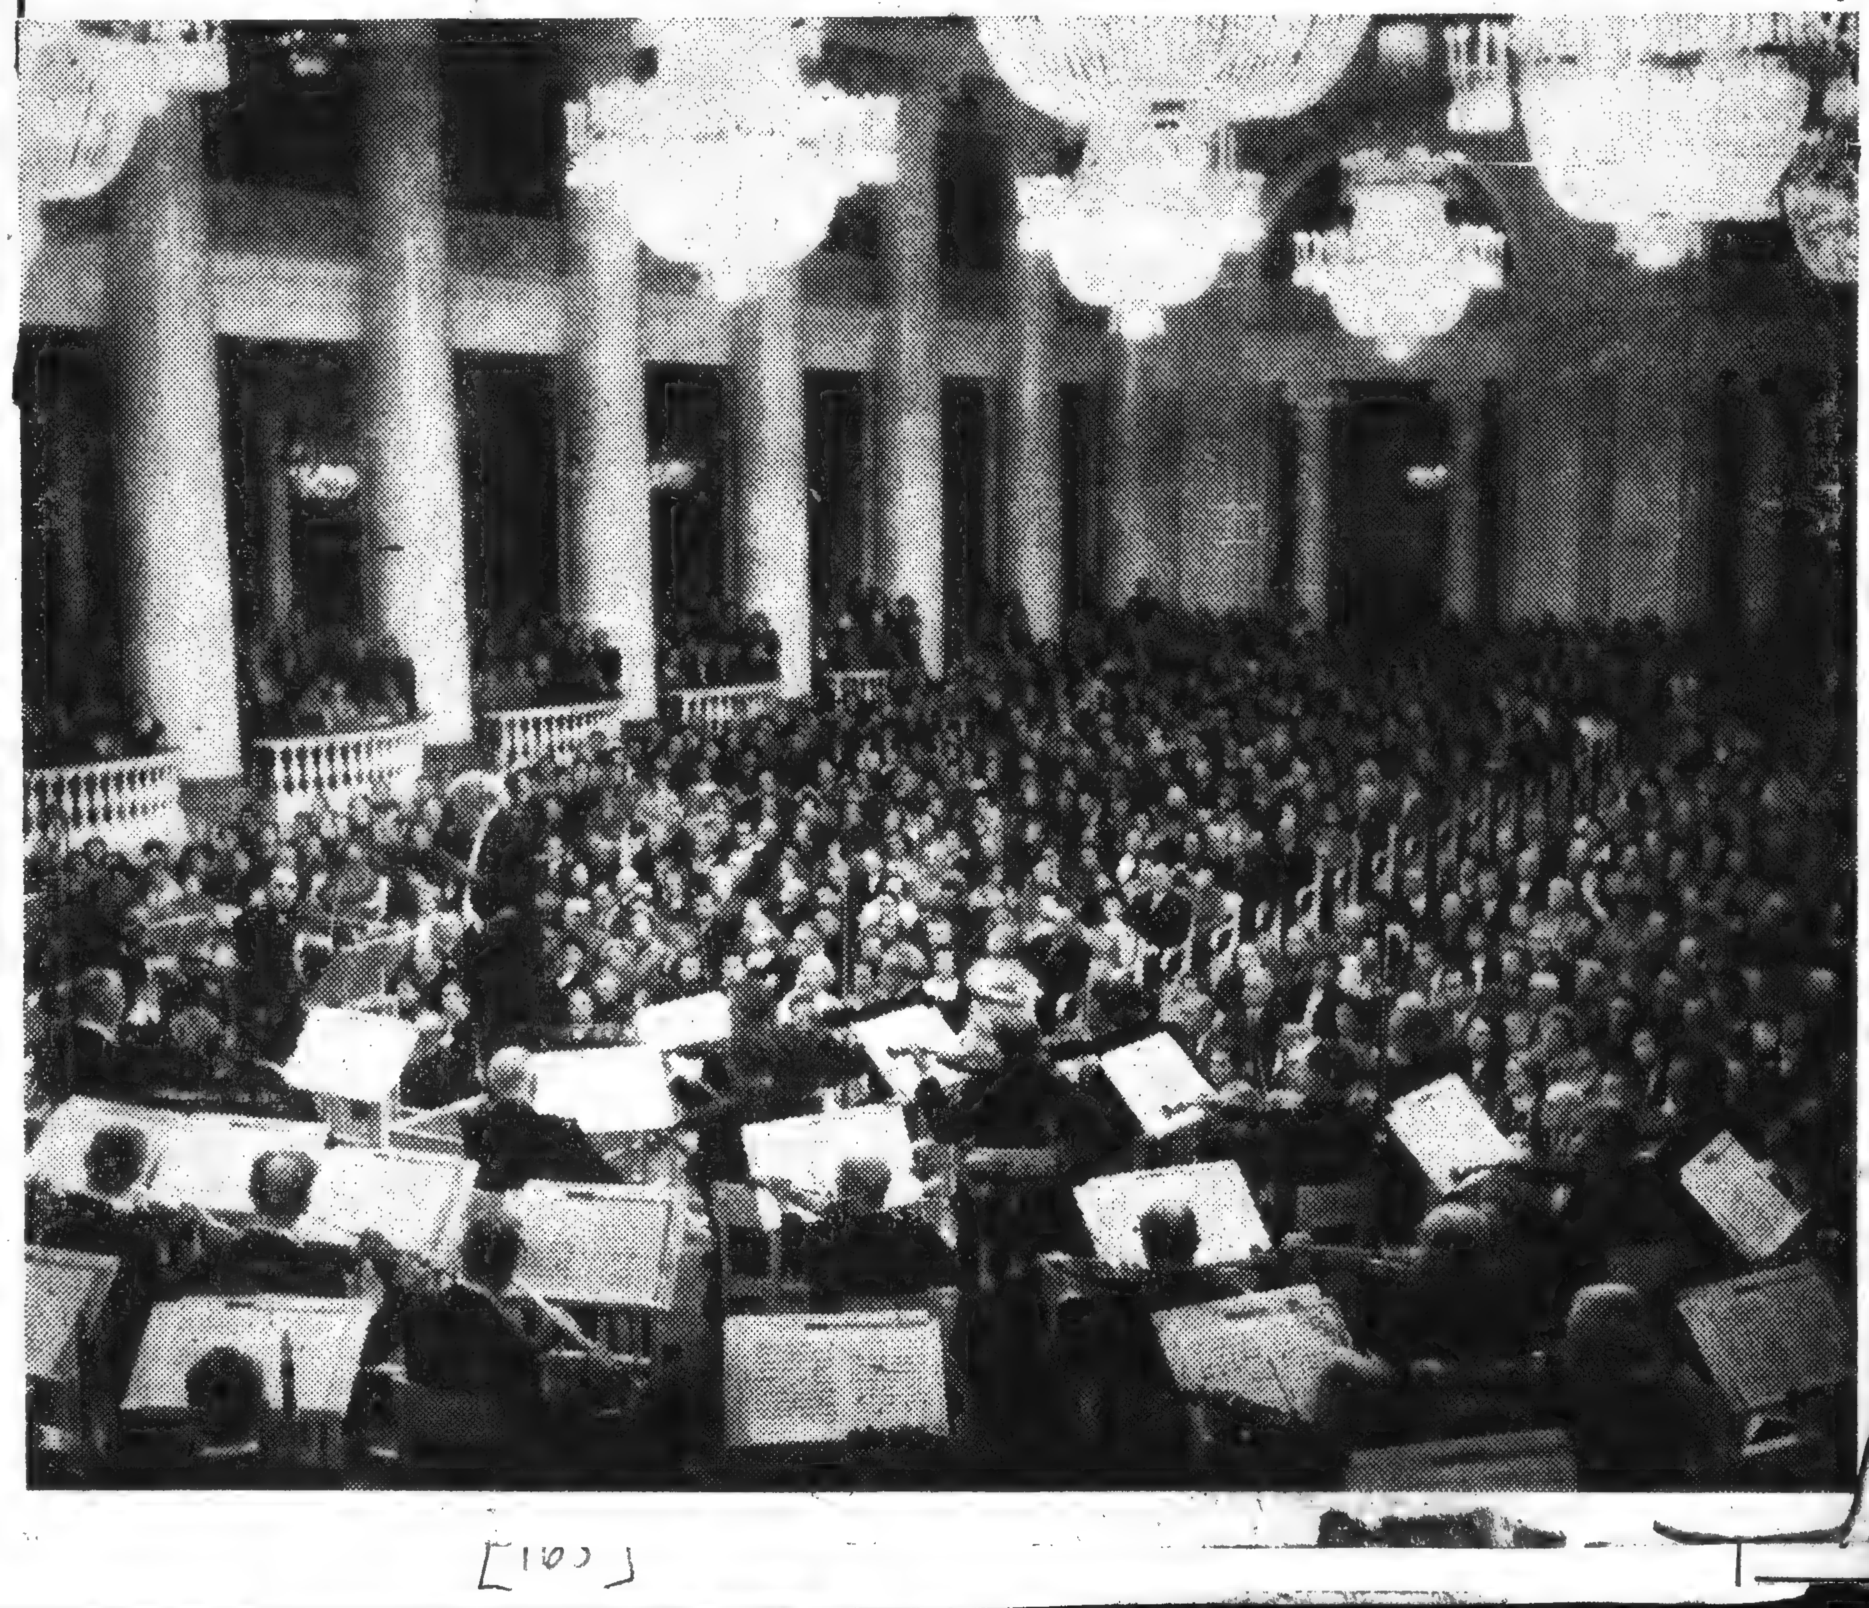
Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 10 1956

(AP Photo)

LISTENING ATTENTIVELY as the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents a concert in Leningrad, Russia, are these Soviet spectators. The 105-piece Boston orchestra is in Europe on tour. This photo was taken in the Leningrad Philharmonica Hall.

Famed Hub Orchestra In Russia



ON TOUR in Russia, the Boston Symphony Orchestra scored a big hit in the Leningrad Philharmonica Hall. Conducting world-famous Hub orchestra is Charles Munch (center). The orchestra played two concerts in Moscow after the Leningrad appearance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,564

SEP 11 1956

(AP Wirephoto)

MUSIC LOVERS THE SAME . . . ALL OVER WORLD

MOSCOW—Russian spectators listen attentively as the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents a concert in the Leningrad Philharmonic Hall. The American orchestra, on a European tour, played in Leningrad last week, then followed with two concerts in Moscow.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

SEP 20 1956

Rhapsodic Reds

The Boston lady who could not see why she should travel since she "was already here" might now conclude that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has put Moscow on the musical map.

The reception given the orchestra, its conductors and players, collectively and individually, led one on-the-spot observer to declare the Iron Curtain had been "smashed wide open." Certainly the adjectives which auditors threw like roses at every performance—"incomparable," "marvelous," "sublime"—seemed more expressive of the "Russian soul" than the "party line." And what the Russian violinist David Oistrakh has been doing for Soviet artistic prestige on the Western side of the Iron Curtain the BSO appears to have done for American prestige east of that now resonant barrier.

Both in Russia and in Europe as a whole this could prove more important politically than many Americans might suppose. It should help to correct one subtle imbalance in American-European relations.

Americans are often unaware that although they are allied militarily to Western Europe, many Europeans regard the United States as outside the European cultural mosaic, as they also regard Russia—that is, as another "frontier" country. And indeed in this context the Soviet Union has an advantage in that it at least shares some of the cultural memories of a "golden age" in Europe which ended with World War I.

When David Oistrakh played Brahms in London and Paris he could evoke a European nostalgia on Moscow's behalf. He was thus a sort of cold war "secret weapon," but is now, of course, an apostle of the "new look." The BSO has shown that America also has its secret weapons for winning friends.

These weapons are sometimes underestimated in a highly technological and businessmen's society. But they are adapted to piercing not only political curtains between two ways of life but cultural curtains that sometimes tend to divide allies.

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 66,426 - S. 70,006

SEP 20 1956

Our Musical Ambassadors

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, one of the world's finest recently completed a tour of Russia to a chorus of Russian cheers. And from such established musical greats as David Oistrakh, the Soviet's premier violinist, from composers Dmitri Shostakovich, Dmitri Kabalevsky and Aram Khachaturian.

The visit was flavored with irony. For 32 years ago the Soviet Union unwillingly contributed to Boston the man who was to lead the orchestra to its present stature. He was Serge Koussevitzky. He had been conductor of the State Orchestra of the Soviet Union and he was a self-exile from Bolshevism.

Yet this 50-year-old European, in his 25 years with the Boston Symphony, was to become a champion of modern American music. "Music," wrote Longfellow (himself a Bostonian), "is the universal language of mankind."

Koussevitzky's career proved it. And now the magnificent orchestra he helped build has added new depth to Longfellow's observation. Just as Oistrakh and the Russian pianist Emil Gilels did last year in their tours of this country. Just as the Symphony of the Air (Toscanini's old NBC Symphony) did in its tour of the Far East a year ago. Just as Louis Armstrong did so recently.

Music can be a powerful force in this nervous world of ours. Yet in March the U.S. State Department abruptly cancelled a planned 1956 tour of India and the Near East by the Symphoney of the Air. In current Mid-East confusion, it would have been nice to have had a reservoir of good-feeling toward American culture.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

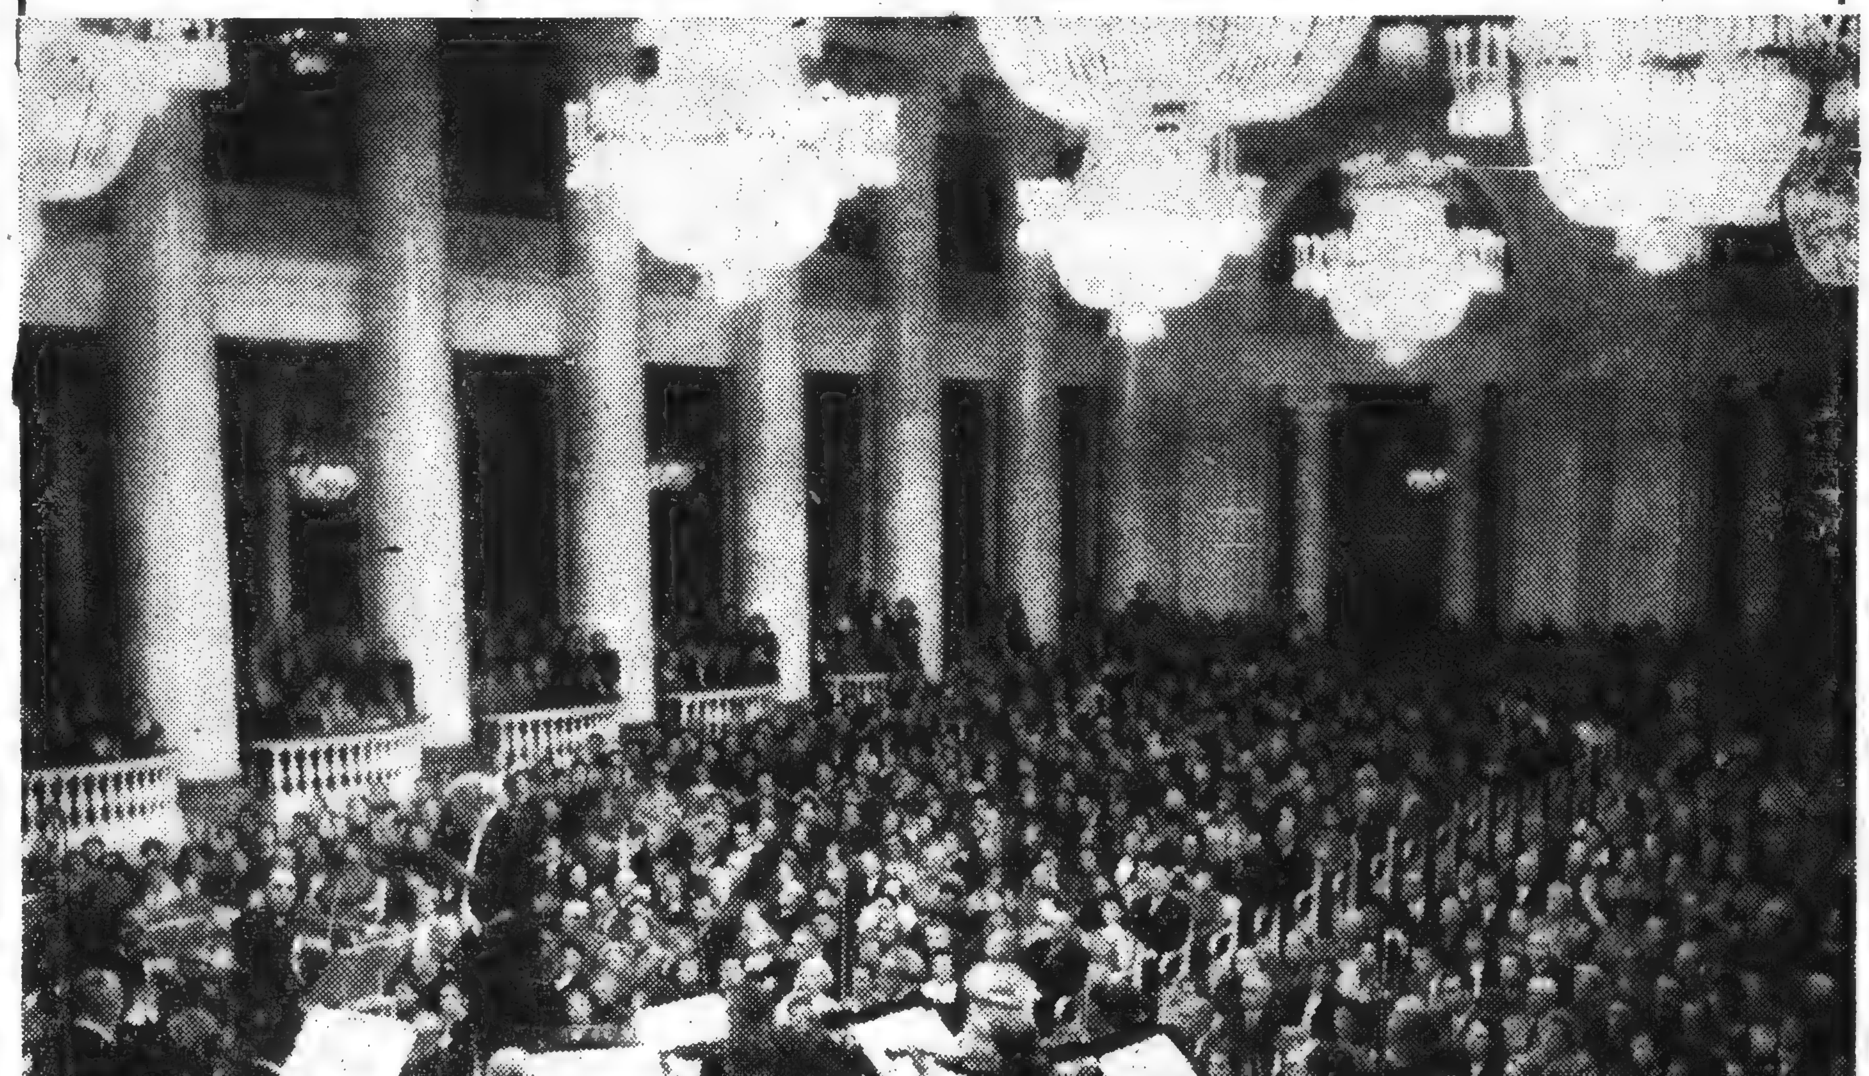
Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

SEP 10 1956

Famed Hub Orchestra In Russia

(AP Photo)

LISTENING ATTENTIVELY as the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents a concert in Leningrad, Russia, are these Soviet spectators. The 105-piece Boston orchestra is in Europe on tour. This photo was taken in the Leningrad Philharmonica Hall.



ON TOUR in Russia, the Boston Symphony Orchestra scored a big hit in the Leningrad Philharmonica Hall. Conducting world-famous Hub orchestra is Charles Munch (center). The orchestra played two concerts in Moscow after the Leningrad appearance.

[166]

VARIETY Sept. 19, 1956

Monteux Reminisces On His Travels; USSR Orch 'Fight Among Themselves'

Edinburgh, Sept. 11.

Festival audiences at concerts in Edinburgh are wonderfully appreciative, according to Pierre Monteux, conductor emeritus of the Boston Symphony orch.

"Generally, the first performance goes a little down, but that is not so here," he said.

He described the acoustics of the Usher Hall, leading concert house at the Festival, as "very beautiful." but difficult for rehearsals.

"It was the same in Boston," he said, "but I had a curtain put across the middle of the hall. Otherwise, the music goes 'wah, wah, wah, wah'."

According to Monteux, in some empty halls the echoes are so bad it is almost impossible to rehearse.

On current Bostonians trek, Monteux conducted in Moscow, which he has not visited since he led the orchestra of the Conservatoire there in 1928.

Of the Moscow orch then, he said: "They were all fighting among themselves, and I had to turn my back and say, 'When you have finished fighting I will go on with the rehearsal.' It was a terribly undisciplined orchestra, but they played very well."

Speaking at a Festival press confab, Mrs. Olga Koussevitsky, widow of Serge Koussevitsky, told how, when her husband was a young man in St. Petersburg, he wrote a piece called "Andante Cantabile" which a publisher accepted. For that composition, which is still played from time to time, neither Koussevitsky nor any of his relatives received one kopek.

That incident, she said, made him want to do something to protect composers. Several years later he made a start by founding a publishing house in Berlin which protected Russian composers not covered by the Berne convention.

Mrs. Koussevitsky stressed here that commissioning new works is not, in itself, a complete service to composers. It is essential also that the works be performed and recorded so they can become known.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

LO

S

Bo
His

LON
What the m romati and b comple
last ni

The tails a in dipl played of talki

They
two lea phony
last nig great o

They cities i Soviet wrot osity, precisio
ty" of t

It was chestra t
Russia, made su
one wor
American cert.

The co
tour at L

...mpletes
...ssion

...ducted by Pierre
...e guest conductor
...nied the orchestra

...f the fanfare was
...he concert played
... in the same hall
...Munch, the orches-
...conductor, on the

... guests of honor
...ger, Miss Helen
...ghter of the late
...nschel, conductor
...ymphony from its
...31 until 1884, and
...ussevitsky, widow
...ge Koussevitsky,
... the orchestra for

MUSIC:

Triumphant

Some Americans believe that "cultural interchange" is an irresistible propaganda force. Others don't. The positive view got some heavy support last week as three major U.S. artistic ensembles left new friends behind them in Russia, Yugoslavia, and Austria:

▶The Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first thoroughly fine Western orchestra to play in the Soviet Union, left Russia after four days of concerts in Moscow and Leningrad. Besides the ecstatic superlatives which they showered on the 105-man symphony and Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, co-conductors for the European tour, Communist music critics made a few specific observations of note. The separation of the brass and percussion sections, unknown in Russia, impressed one writer for "its acoustical properties." Works by the American contemporary composers Aaron Copland, Paul Creston, and Walter Piston were called "good music, by and large . . . testifying to considerable orchestral culture in American composers."

▶The Ballet Theater, which opened a thirteen-day stand in Yugoslavia to enthusiastic houses in Zagreb, went on to a comparable triumph in Belgrade. Audiences in both cities appeared to be stunned that American dancers displayed such technical virtuosity in dancing classics like "Les Sylphides" and the "Black Swan" pas de deux from "Swan Lake."

▶Lauded as "the artistic climax" of the 1956 Salzburg Festival, the New York City Ballet went on to Vienna. The choreography of George Balanchine, its artistic director, was analyzed as a combination of "great Russian tradition, French influence, and the breath of the New World."

Newsweek

Sept 24

Eagle
Pages.

Wi

The Friendly Siege of Moscow

By Margo Miller

This is the 10th in a series of airmailed articles by The Eagle's correspondent with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its current European tour. It is the third letter from Russia.

MOSCOW.

"HE WANTS to see your instrument," said our Russian interpreter to a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conservatory students and members of the Leningrad Philharmonic all flooded backstage at intermission after our first Russian concert in Leningrad.

"This is the first bassoon of the Philharmonic here," explained the interpreter. "He wants to know where you get your reeds." Out came a little silver box with the reeds. The Russian took one, held it up to the light, and then lowering it ran the reed gently across his thumbnail to test its flexibility. "He says," continued the interpreter, "that he has never seen such fine reeds." Another bassoon player, a student, inspected the instrument of Sherman Walt, principal bassoon of the BSO. It was a Heckel like his own but only a year old. The Russian could not believe his eyes. He showed his own bassoon. Broken parts were stuck on with tooth picks, bits of string, and tape. The government owns the instruments which are passed down student-to-student.

"Who had the bassoon before you?" he asked Walt.

"Mr. Heckel." The student sighed.

* * *

IN ANOTHER corner a Leningrad tympanist tested the BSO kettledrums, stroking each top. Someone handed him the sticks. Boom, touch-of-the-hand-to-deaden-the-vibration, boom, boom. He said the largest Leningrad tympani was the size of one of our own medium small drums. The smallest was the size of a dinner plate.

The new fiddle mutes, introduced in the U.S. about a year ago, caused a sensation. When not in use the mutes are pushed down below the bridge of the fiddle. One of our violinists gave his spare mute away. The Russians are still using the old toothed type. They also have no rosin at the conservatory, and strings only of poor quality. One of our men gave away an old stick of rosin that he'd had for years. "I wish now I'd brought ten dollars worth of the stuff to give away. They need it so badly."

Every section of the orchestra had visitors. Not all were from Leningrad. Twenty-five members of the Estonian Symphony drove all day in a bus to hear the BSO. Some of them had come to see Ludwig Juht, double bass, who did not make the Russian section of the tour because of his Estonian connections. When interpreters gave out, the old game of charades carried the conversation. Those who spoke German or Yiddish did as well as those speaking Russian. Whatever the orchestra, whatever the tongue, members of the BSO found that their colleagues were starved for information of the U.S., musical and otherwise. Everyone feels that the Russian orchestras should come to the U.S. on tour. "Let them see how we live, the freedom we have, the facilities for enjoying life."

* * *

BEFORE THE first Leningrad concert Ilya Spielberg, concertmaster of the city's Philharmonic, extended greeting to the BSO: "We have heard very much about your famous orchestra and we are very happy we have been awarded the honor of welcoming you and listening to your performance as the first audience in the Soviet Union. We hope your tour in the Soviet Union will be successful and we are sure it will bring our two countries closer together."

Charles Munch replied: "We all, the musicians, the management, my friend Pierre Monteux, and myself are all so happy and proud to be with you this evening. Thank you for this kind reception, thank you from the depths of our hearts."

There were bouquets all around as the Russians said it with flowers. One went to Richard Burgin, our concertmaster, who as a young man studied violin at the Leningrad Conservatory and was later concertmaster of the Philharmonic here.

The Philharmonic Auditorium where we played is a symphony in marble, gold and red velvet. Every place you look is a crystal chandelier right out of fairyland. And best of all this 120-year-old hall has wonderful acoustics. Munch did the "Eroica," Piston's Symphony No. 6 and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe." What sounds! The audience was on its feet at the end, and for what some call a rather undemonstrative people, they rocked the hall. Munch gave in and did Dukas' "L'Apprenti Sorcier." At the very end he alone remained on stage, having excused the musicians.

RUSSIAN CRITIC, Julian Winekop, found the BSO horns "marvelous," and the strings of a brilliant color. "The impression is very good." He was surprised by the oboes, used as he is here to the German instrument which has a different timbre from the French BSO oboes. Of the Piston symphony he said, "The scherzo is marvelous, something of the young Shostakovitch in it." (The audiences so far have loved this scherzo; they laugh and applaud.) "Adagio has poetry, depth of feeling, a landscape quality." The finale reminded him of a phrase from Huxley's "Point Counter Point": "a complete man is walking through life." Hearing Munch conduct for the first time Winekop found him "the right man for the right place."

Pierre Monteux conducted the second Leningrad concert—Haydn's "Surprise" Symphony, Creston's Symphony No. 2, and the Schubert Symphony No. 7. The encore was a suite from Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier."

I sat next to a Russian officer and his wife. Our conversation had been rather painful since I spoke neither Russian nor German and he very little English and no French. "Encore, 'Der Rosenkavalier' . . . German . . . waltzes," I said. No response. The pair sat through the suite. Not a muscle moved at the rose motif. Then, like a visitation, came the famous waltz, and away went the heads and feet of my Russian neighbors. The woman was beaming at her husband and he was like to conduct the band the way he beat time.

* * *

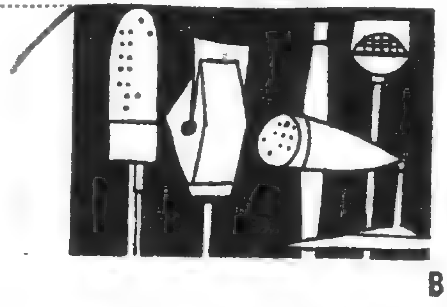
LAST NIGHT'S first Moscow audience brought back fond memories of Scandinavia with their rhythmical applause. Munch encored with the adagio from Schumann's Symphony No. 2. This music did not charm the wild beast who held out with their wild applause until long after Munch adder the finale from Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

There is the story among musicians that Serge Koussevitzky's most fervent wish was to conduct the BSO in the gold and marble Hall of Honor in the Catherine Palace at the Kremlin. This hall would make MGM designers of ballroom scenes green with envy, not to say quaking with frustration that no pictures are allowed of it. Well, palace or no palace, we are holding our own. As a matter of fact, we may have to move Tanglewood here, it's so good.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 63,829

SEP 23 1956



TURNING the DIALS

By FRED H. RUSSELL

One of CBS radio's fine musical programs, "The Symphonette," which the past eight Fall seasons has opened CBS radio's Sunday afternoon series of musical programs, will return to the network for its ninth season next Sunday at its accustomed pre-Philharmonic hour, 2 to 2:30 p.m. As in past seasons, the orchestra will be conducted by Mishel Piastro, who has been music director both for the orchestra's radio series and for its annual Spring and Fall concert tours.

Mr. Piastro calls his organization "the average man's symphony orchestra" and feels that he has hit on a format presenting the great works of music in capsule doses which the average listeners can assimilate and enjoy.

This season "The Symphonette" will continue the musical format which has been so successful, and will begin with the familiar excerpt from Wagner's "Lohengrin," which has been the program's theme for many years.

"The Symphonette" made its debut on CBS radio on Dec. 26, 1948 and except for summer vacations, has been on the network ever since.

Varied Guests

May Bradshaw Hays, on her Monday through Friday WICC program, from 10:45 to 11 a.m. this week has lined-up a fine array of guests to discuss timely subjects, leading off tomorrow with "Children's Programs." Scheduled to appear on that show are Mrs. James Carrano and Mrs. Carl Anderson, who present plays for youngsters during the winter.

On Tuesday, Sheffield Eaton will discuss "New Ideas for Teens." Marilyn Towne, "The Girl with Songs in Her Heart," will be the guest on Wednesday, while the program on Thursday will concern the "United Fund." Friday's program will be titled "The U. S. Navy Band is Coming," with Bill Ratsenberger, one of the sponsors of the band's appearance, as guest.

Beatty Salute

...C News,
...iversary
...of NBC
...orld" on
...iversary
honored
program,
...n Anni-
will con-
...f his 10
...gram.
...eard over

...second will be broadcast from 9:30 to 10 p.m., canceling "Contrasts in Music."

During the first program, which will open with the official welcoming ceremonies at the Moscow Conservatory of Music Concert Hall, the orchestra plays the first, third and fourth movements from Beethoven's "Symphony No. 3," the "Eroica." In the second program the orchestra performs the fourth movement from Walter Piston's "Symphony No. 6," Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe Ballet Suite No. 2," and the final movement of Hayden's "Symphon No. 102." Charles Hunch is the conductor.

Guest Book

Mrs. Thomas McNamara and Mrs. William Barthmaier will be the first guests of Lydia Wells this week when they are heard Monday over her program "Town Topics," discussing the St. James Guild Fair.

The schedule for the remainder of this week on the WNAB 11 to 11:15 a.m. WNAB program will be Tuesday, YWCA Homemakers group; Wednesday, Boris Chaliapin discussing the Kipnis Gallery exhibit in Westport; Thursday, Marilyn Towne (Molly Klaff), singer; Friday, Joseph Ganim of the Lions club commenting on the upcoming appearance here of the U. S. Navy Band.

Music Teachers

The reopening of the nation's schools this Fall has inspired Ruth Steinkraus to present a special "Back to School" theme on her "Music for a Sunday Evening" tonight over WICC radio.

Dividing her show into two segments, Miss Steinkraus will feature in the first half the works of famous music teachers and their pupils, past and present, and on the second half will present an interlude with five renowned pupils.

First to be offered will be a ... Haydn, followed by
...he rare
...anza,"
...y Liszt
...artok's

...feature
...vane,"
...Nadia
...famous

pupils living today and teacher of Aaron Copland. This will be followed by the voice of Roland Hayes, tenor, now in his 70's, the first American Negro to have a singing career. His recordings of French art songs learned with Faure will conclude the program.

Luke's 'Lucky Ten'

The tunes that made the "Lucky Ten" during the past week on Harry Luke's "Swing Angel" show over WNAB are as follows: "I Don't Care If the Sun Don't Shine," Elvis Presley; "I Love Mickey," Theresa Brewer and Mickey Mantle; "Friendly Persuasion," Pat Boone; "Don't Be Cruel," Presley; "Lay Down Your Arms," Chordettes; "Primitive Love," Tom Reeves; "Pom Pom," Irving Fields Trio; "You're In Live," Gogi Grant; "Italian Theme," Joe Reisman and "Cindy Cindy," Vince Martin.

Show to Resume

"Quiz the Dentist," the annual radio series presented as public service in cooperation with the Bridgeport Dental Society, will begin its 10th season over WICC on Saturday, Oct. 6, when it will be heard between 5:30 and 5:45 p.m.

The program is focused on informing youngsters of the need for maintaining good teeth.

Consisting of an informal panel of two or three dentists, with guests appearing from time to time, the members try to answer questions submitted by school children or their parents in a language that can be understood by the youngsters.

Dr. Ernest Wohl, of Bridgeport, is serving as chairman of the program for his sixth year. The announcer will be Frank Delfino and the series will be heard each Saturday until May.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

SEP 13 1956

AMERICAN RACE RIOTS
BOSTON SYMPHONY ON RUSSIAN TOUR
BARNES

"JUST WHEN WE GOT THEM liking GOOD American music. . . !"

---

[166]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,625

SEP 26 1956

Boston Symphony Completes Historic Goodwill Mission

LONDON, Sept. 26 (INS) — What many Europeans regard as the most effective American diplomatic team ever sent to Europe and behind the "Iron Curtain" completed its mission in London last night.

The 107-man mission wore the tails and white ties so familiar in diplomatic circles, but they played beautiful music instead of talking.

They were the members and two leaders of the Boston Symphony orchestra, which ended last night the longest tour in the great orchestra's 75-year history.

They gave 27 concerts in 19 cities in 13 countries, including Soviet Russia, where critics wrote of their "masterly virtuosity," of their "irreproachable precision" and of the "rare beauty" of the orchestra's tone.

It was the first American orchestra to perform in Communist Russia, where the conductors made sure of including at least one work by a contemporary American composer in each concert.

The concluding concert of the tour at London's Royal Festival hall was conducted by Pierre Monteaux, the guest conductor who accompanied the orchestra on its tour.

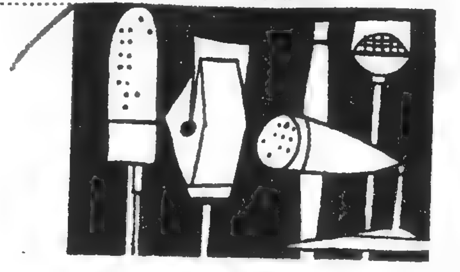
But most of the fanfare was reserved for the concert played Monday night in the same hall with Charles Munch, the orchestra's regular conductor, on the podium.

Among the guests of honor were the singer, Miss Helen Henschel, daughter of the late Sir George Henschel, conductor of the Boston Symphony from its founding in 1881 until 1884, and Mme. Olga Koussevitsky, widow of the late Serge Koussevitsky, who conducted the orchestra for 25 years.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 63,829

SEP 23 1956



TURNING the DIALS

By FRED H. RUSSELL

One of CBS radio's fine musical programs, "The Symphonette, "which the past eight Fall seasons has opened CBS radio's Sunday afternoon series of musical programs, will return to the network for its ninth season next Sunday at its accustomed pre-Philharmonic hour, 2 to 2:30 p.m. As in past seasons, the orchestra will be conducted by Mishel Piastro, who has been music director both for the orchestra's radio series and for its annual Spring and Fall concert tours.

Mr. Piastro calls his organization "the average man's symphony orchestra" and feels that he has hit on a format presenting the great works of music in capsule doses which the average listeners can assimilate and enjoy.

This season "The Symphonette" will continue the musical format which has been so successful, and will begin with the familiar excerpt from Wagner's "Lohengrin," which has been the program's theme for many years.

"The Symphonette" made its debut on CBS radio on Dec. 26, 1948 and except for summer vacations, has been on the network ever since.

Varied Guests

May Bradshaw Hays, on her Monday through Friday WICC program, from 10:45 to 11 a.m. this week has lined-up a fine array of guests to discuss timely subjects, leading off tomorrow with "Children's Programs." Scheduled to appear on that show are Mrs. James Carrano and Mrs. Carl Anderson, who present plays for youngsters during the winter.

On Tuesday, Sheffield Eaton will discuss "New Ideas for Teens." Marilyn Towne, "The Girl with Songs in Her Heart," will be the guest on Wednesday, while the program on Thursday will concern the "United Fund." Friday's program will be titled "The U. S. Navy Band is Coming," with Bill Ratsenberger, one of the sponsors of the band's appearance, as guest.

Beatty Salute

Morgan Beatty, of NBC News, will mark his 10th anniversary as chief commentator of NBC radio's "News of the World" on Wednesday. On his anniversary the newscaster will be honored with a special half-hour program, "Morgan Beatty's Tenth Anniversary Salute," which will consist of the highlights of his 10 years with the news program.

The program will be heard over WRCA at 9:30 p.m.

Plays Twice

Major selections from the Boston Symphony orchestra's recent opening concert in Moscow will be presented by recording in two programs on NBC radio on Monday. The first broadcast will be during the orchestra's regular time period, 8:15 to 9 p.m. The second will be broadcast from 9:30 to 10 p.m., canceling "Contrasts in Music."

During the first program, which will open with the official welcoming ceremonies at the Moscow Conservatory of Music Concert Hall, the orchestra plays the first,third and fourth movements from Beethoven's "Symphony No. 3," the "Eroica." In the second program the orchestra performs the fourth movement from Walter Piston's "Symphony No. 6," Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe Ballet Suite No. 2," and the final movement of Hayden's "Symphon No. 102." Charles Hunch is the conductor.

Guest Book

Mrs. Thomas McNamara and Mrs. William Barthmaier will be the first guests of Lydia Wells this week when they are heard Monday over her program "Town Topics," discussing the St. James Guild Fair.

The schedule for the remainder of this week on the WNAB 11 to 11:15 a.m. WNAB program will be Tuesday, YWCA Homemakers group; Wednesday, Boris Chaliapin discussing the Kipnis Gallery exhibit in Westport; Thursday, Marilyn Towne (Molly Klaff), singer; Friday, Joseph Ganim of the Lions club commenting on the upcoming appearance here of the U. S. Navy Band.

Music Teachers

The reopening of the nation's schools this Fall has inspired Ruth Steinkraus to present a special "Back to School" theme on her "Music for a Sunday Evening" tonight over WICC radio.

Dividing her show into two segments, Miss Steinkraus will feature in the first half the works of famous music teachers and their pupils, past and present, and on the second half will present an interlude with five renowned pupils.

First to be offered will be a symphony by Haydn, followed by a piece by Hummel, and the rare and out-of-print "La Ricordanza," by Czerny. A short work by Liszt will then precede Bartok's "Four Children."

The second half will feature the music of Faure's "Pavane," Ravel, Enesco, Casella and Nadia Boulanger, one of the famous pupils living today and teacher of Aaron Copland. This will be followed by the voice of Roland Hayes, tenor, now in his 70's, the first American Negro to have a singing career. His recordings of French art songs learned with Faure will conclude the program.

Luke's 'Lucky Ten'

The tunes that made the "Lucky Ten" during the past week on Harry Luke's "Swing Angel" show over WNAB are as follows: "I Don't Care If the Sun Don't Shine," Elvis Presley; "I Love Mickey," Theresa Brewer and Mickey Mantle; "Friendly Persuasion," Pat Boone; "Don't Be Cruel," Presley; "Lay Down Your Arms," Chordettes; "Primitive Love," Tom Reeves; "Pom Pom," Irving Fields Trio; "You're In Live," Gogi Grant; "Italian Theme," Joe Reisman and "Cindy Cindy," Vince Martin.

Show to Resume

"Quiz the Dentist," the annual radio series presented as public service in cooperation with the Bridgeport Dental Society, will begin its 10th season over WICC on Saturday, Oct. 6, when it will be heard between 5:30 and 5:45 p.m.

The program is focused on informing youngsters of the need for maintaining good teeth.

Consisting of an informal panel of two or three dentists, with guests appearing from time to time, the members try to answer questions submitted by school children or their parents in a language that can be understood by the youngsters.

Dr. Ernest Wohl, of Bridgeport, is serving as chairman of the program for his sixth year. The announcer will be Frank Delfino and the series will be heard each Saturday until May.

Berkshire Eagle
Pittsfield, Mass.

With the BSO Abroad

The Friendly Siege of Moscow

By Margo Miller

This is the 10th in a series of airmailed articles by The Eagle's correspondent with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its current European tour. It is the third letter from Russia.

MOSCOW.

"HE WANTS to see your instrument," said our Russian interpreter to a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conservatory students and members of the Leningrad Philharmonic all flooded backstage at intermission after our first Russian concert in Leningrad.

"This is the first bassoon of the Philharmonic here," explained the interpreter. "He wants to know where you get your reeds." Out came a little silver box with the reeds. The Russian took one, held it up to the light, and then lowering it ran the reed gently across his thumbnail to test its flexibility. "He says," continued the interpreter, "that he has never seen such fine reeds." Another bassoon player, a student, inspected the instrument of Sherman Walt, principal bassoon of the BSO. It was a Heckel like his own but only a year old. The Russian could not believe his eyes. He showed his own bassoon. Broken parts were stuck on with tooth picks, bits of string, and tape. The government owns the instruments which are passed down student-to-student.

"Who had the bassoon before you?" he asked Walt.

"Mr. Heckel." The student sighed.

* * *

IN ANOTHER corner a Leningrad tympanist tested the BSO kettledrums, stroking each top. Someone handed him the sticks. Boom, touch-of-the-hand-to-deaden-the-vibration, boom, boom. He said the largest Leningrad tympani was the size of one of our own medium small drums. The smallest was the size of a dinner plate.

The new fiddle mutes, introduced in the U.S. about a year ago, caused a sensation. When not in use the mutes are pushed down below the bridge of the fiddle. One of our violinists gave his spare mute away. The Russians are still using the old toothed type. They also have no rosin at the conservatory, and strings only of poor quality. One of our men gave away an old stick of rosin that he'd had for years. "I wish now I'd brought ten dollars worth of the stuff to give away. They need it so badly."

Every section of the orchestra had visitors. Not all were from Leningrad. Twenty-five members of the Estonian Symphony drove all day in a bus to hear the BSO. Some of them had come to see Ludwig Juht, double bass, who did not make the Russian section of the tour because of his Estonian connections. When interpreters gave out, the old game of charades carried the conversation. Those who spoke German or Yiddish did as well as those speaking Russian. Whatever the orchestra, whatever the tongue, members of the BSO found that their colleagues were starved for information of the U.S., musical and otherwise. Everyone feels that the Russian orchestras should come to the U.S. on tour. "Let them see how we live, the freedom we have, the facilities for enjoying life."

* * *

BEFORE THE first Leningrad concert Ilya Spielberg, concertmaster of the city's Philharmonic, extended greeting to the BSO: "We have heard very much about your famous orchestra and we are very happy we have been awarded the honor of welcoming you and listening to your performance as the first audience in the Soviet Union. We hope your tour in the Soviet Union will be successful and we are sure it will bring our two countries closer together."

Charles Munch replied: "We all, the musicians, the management, my friend Pierre Monteux, and myself are all so happy and proud to be with you this evening. Thank you for this kind reception, thank you from the depths of our hearts."

There were bouquets all around as the Russians said it with flowers. One went to Richard Burgin, our concertmaster, who as a young man studied violin at the Leningrad Conservatory and was later concertmaster of the Philharmonic here.

The Philharmonic Auditorium where we played is a symphony in marble, gold and red velvet. Every place you look is a crystal chandelier right out of fairyland. And best of all this 120-year-old hall has wonderful acoustics. Munch did the "Eroica," Piston's Symphony No. 6 and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe." What sounds! The audience was on its feet at the end, and for what some call a rather undemonstrative people, they rocked the hall. Munch gave in and did Dukas' "L'Apprenti Sorcier." At the very end he alone remained on stage, having excused the musicians.

RUSSIAN CRITIC, Julian Winekop, found the BSO horns "marvelous," and the strings of a brilliant color. "The impression is very good." He was surprised by the oboes, used as he is here to the German instrument which has a different timbre from the French BSO oboes. Of the Piston symphony he said, "The scherzo is marvelous, something of the young Shostakovitch in it." (The audiences so far have loved this scherzo; they laugh and applaud.) "Adagio has poetry, depth of feeling, a landscape quality." The finale reminded him of a phrase from Huxley's "Point Counter Point": "a complete man is walking through life." Hearing Munch conduct for the first time Winekop found him "the right man for the right place."

Pierre Monteux conducted the second Leningrad concert—Haydn's "Surprise" Symphony, Creston's Symphony No. 2, and the Schubert Symphony No. 7. The encore was a suite from Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier."

I sat next to a Russian officer and his wife. Our conversation had been rather painful since I spoke neither Russian nor German and he very little English and no French. "Encore, 'Der Rosenkavalier' . . . German . . . waltzes," I said. No response. The pair sat through the suite. Not a muscle moved at the rose motif. Then, like a visitation, came the famous waltz, and away went the heads and feet of my Russian neighbors. The woman was beaming at her husband and he was like to conduct the band the way he beat time.

* * *

LAST NIGHT'S first Moscow audience brought back fond memories of Scandinavia with their rhythmical applause. Munch encored with the adagio from Schumann's Symphony No. 2. This music did not charm the wild beast who held out with their wild applause until long after Munch added the finale from Haydn's Symphony No. 102.

There is the story among musicians that Serge Koussevitzky's most fervent wish was to conduct the BSO in the gold and marble Hall of Honor in the Catherine Palace at the Kremlin. This hall would make MGM designers of ballroom scenes green with envy, not to say quaking with frustration that no pictures are allowed of it. Well, palace or no palace, we are holding our own. As a matter of fact, we may have to move Tanglewood here, it's so good.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1956

Sports

Today's Chuckle

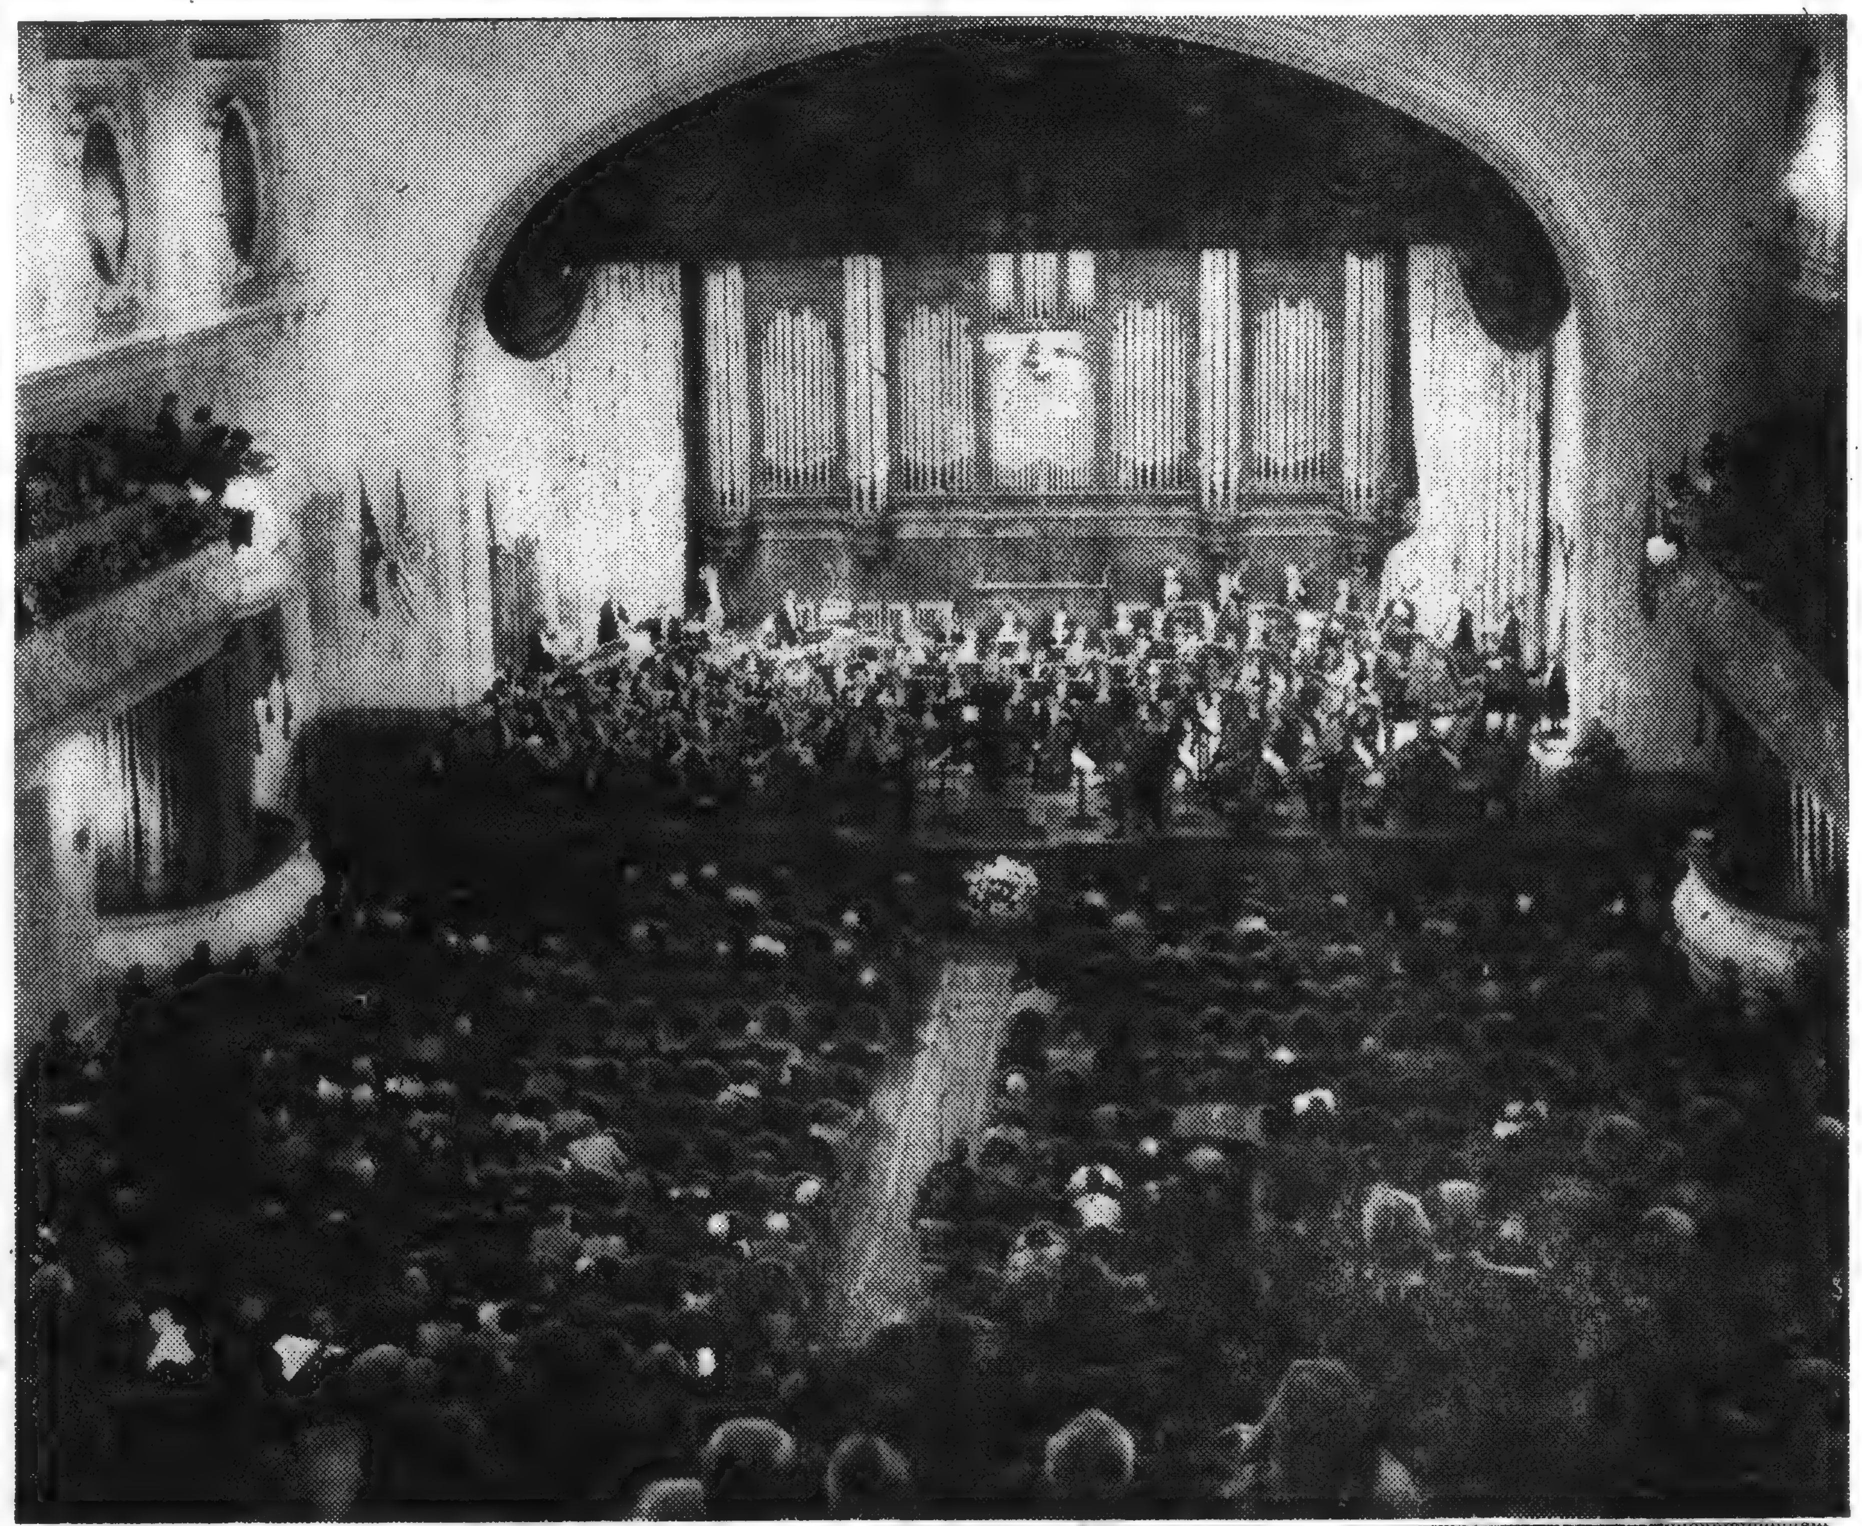
There's always something to be thankful for. If you can't pay your bills, you can be thankful you're not one of your creditors.

Boston Traveler Features
Wednesday, Sept. 26, 1956 C 49

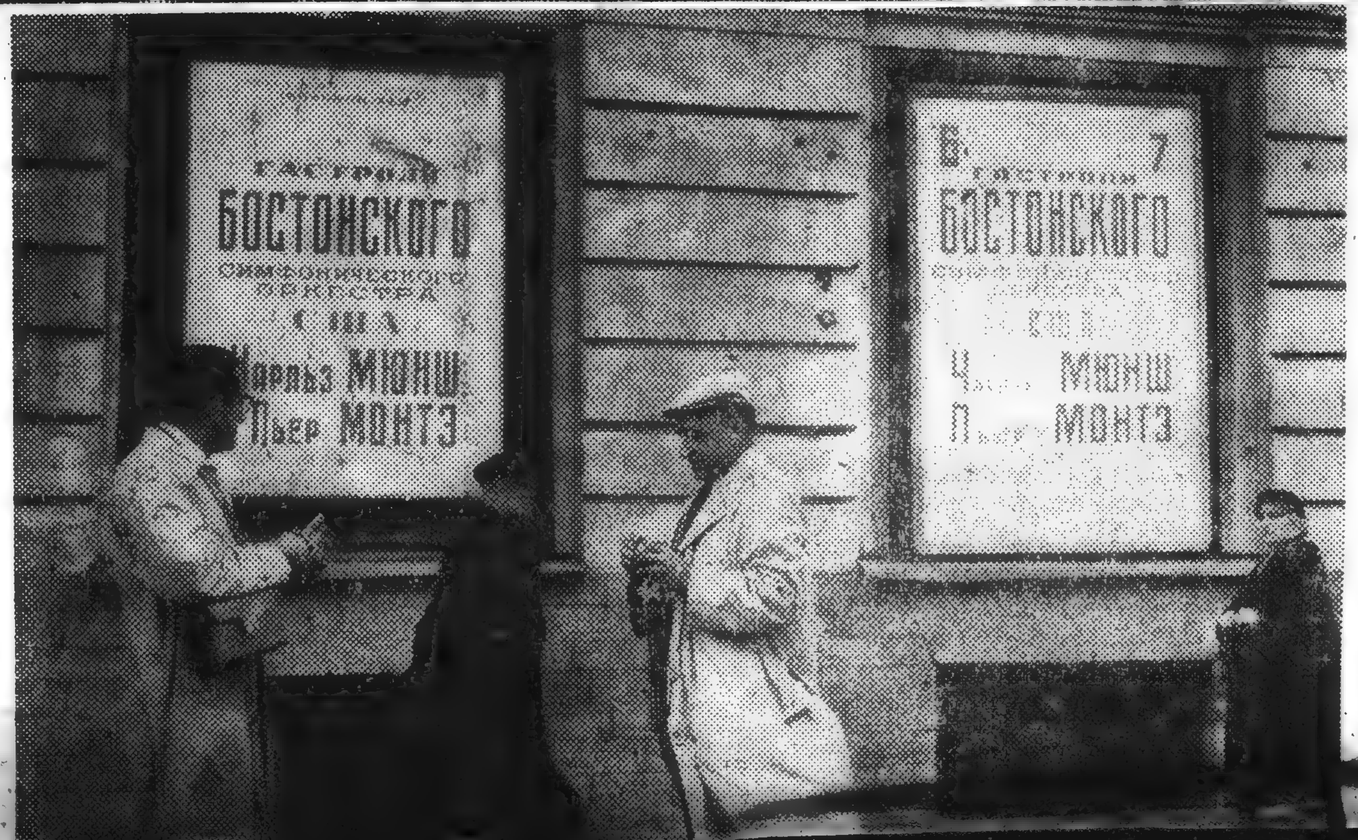
On This Page Tomorrow

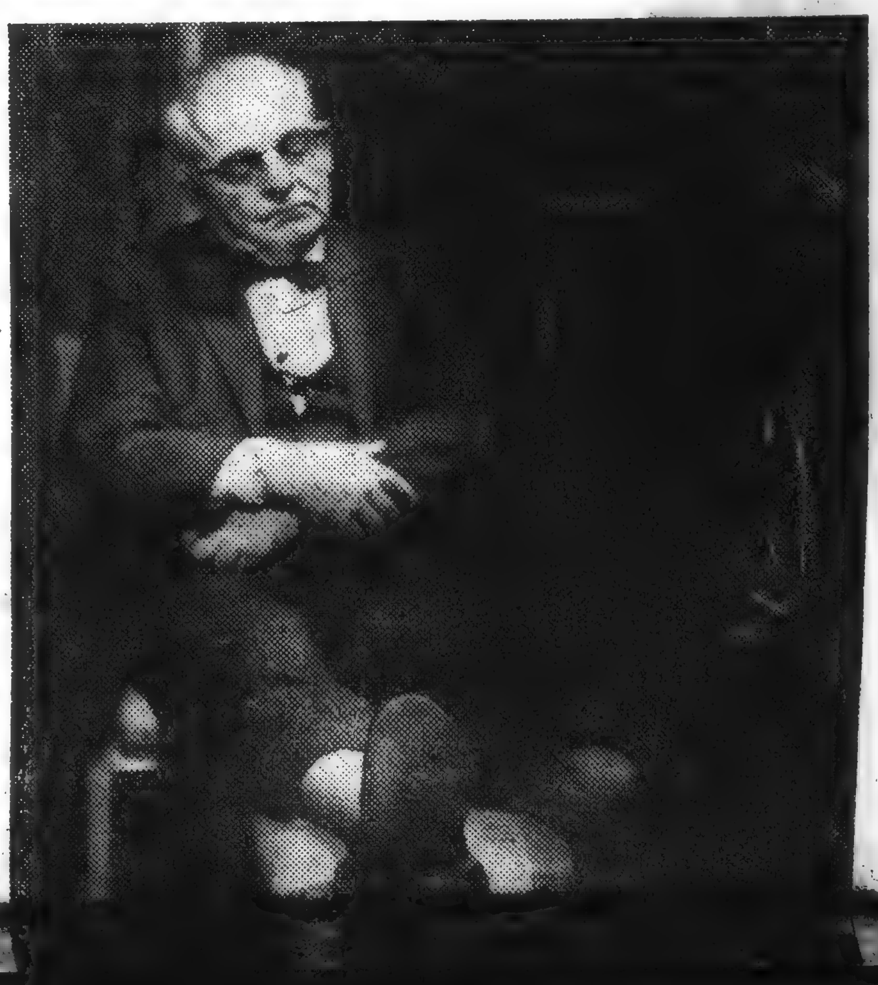
Ancient Art Form Flourishes in Hub

Sidelights Of Symphony's Triumphal Tour

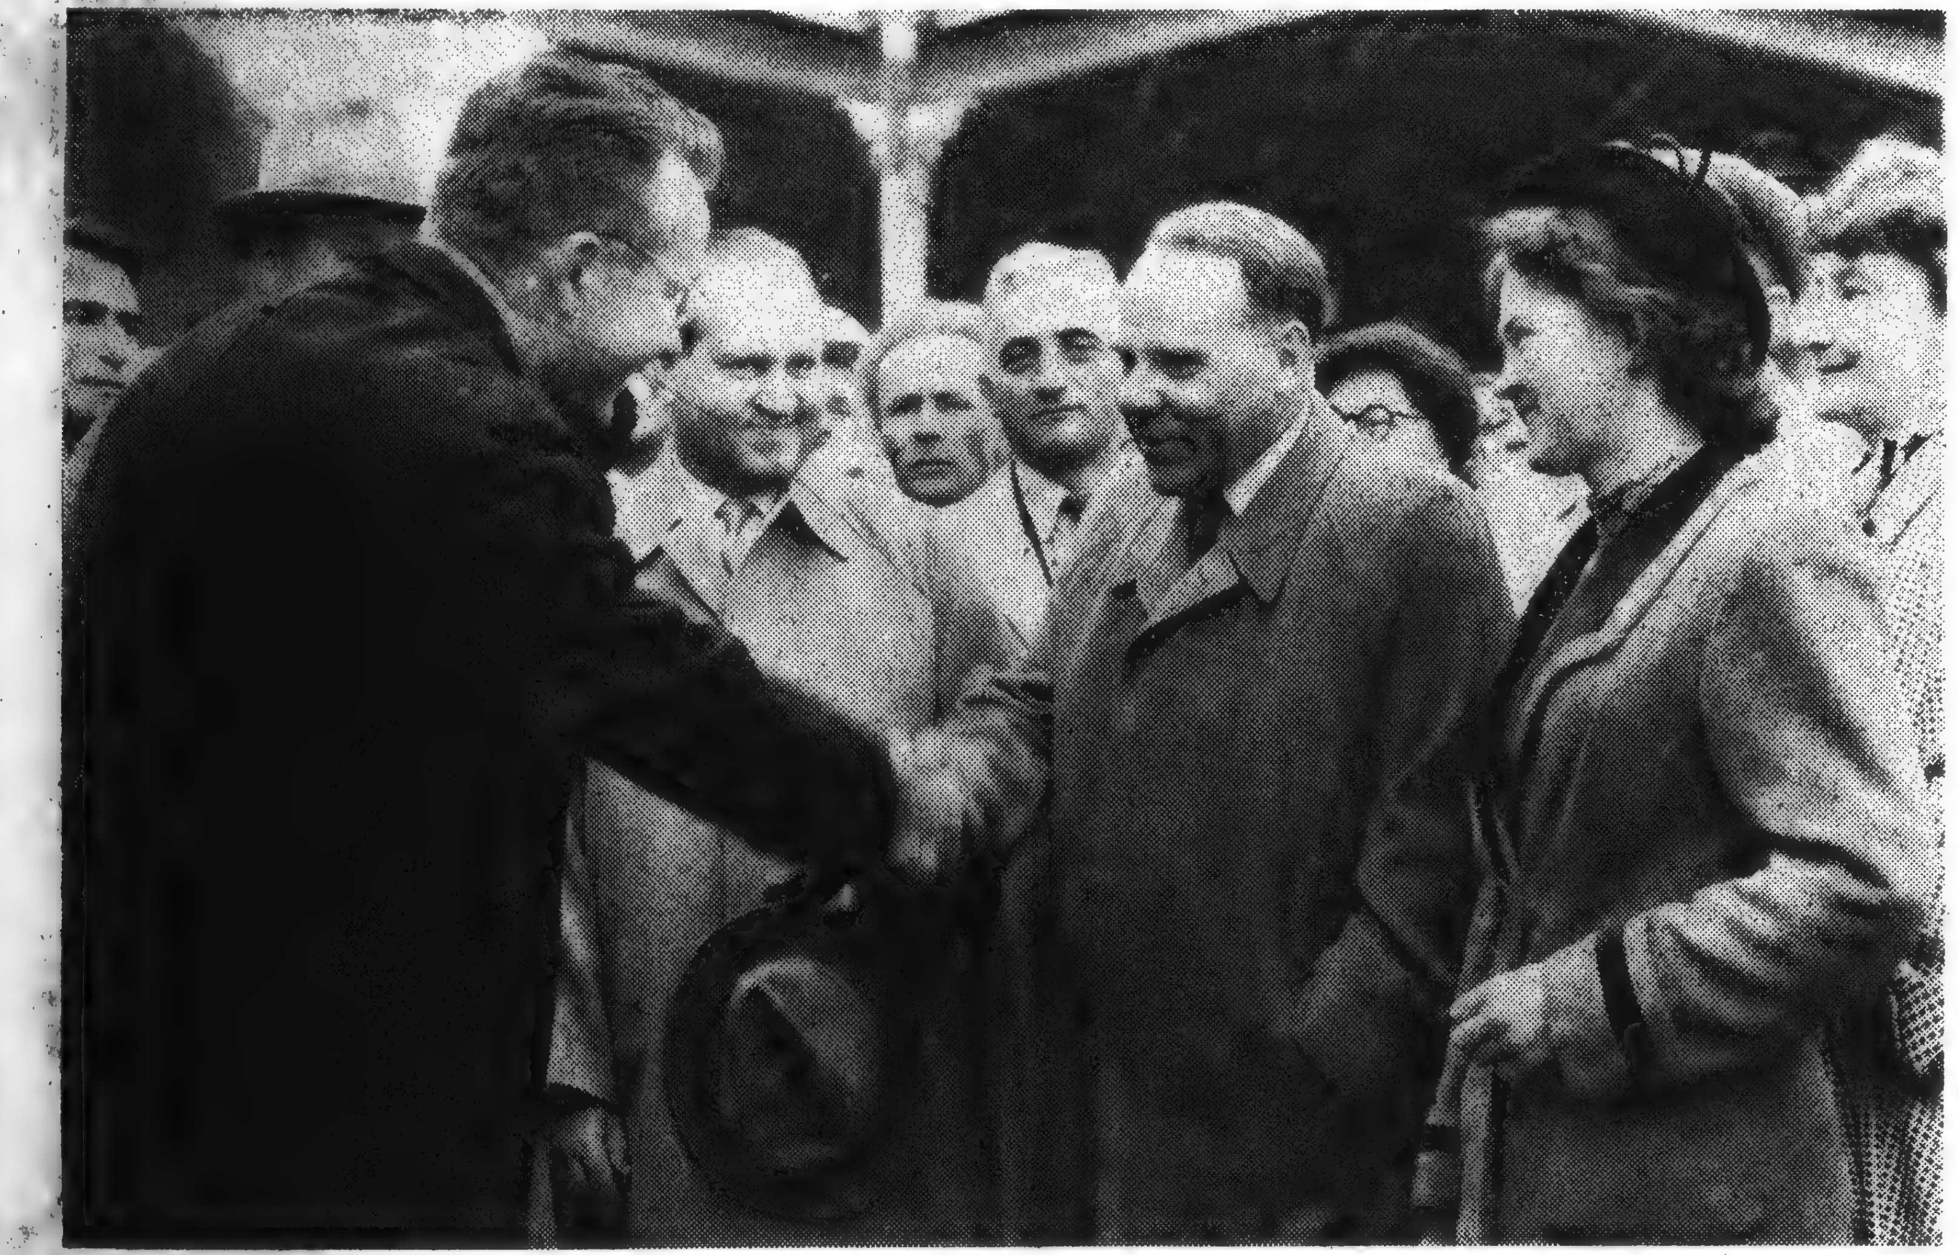


BOSTON SYMPHONY musicians had little time for relaxation on their European tour, but trombonist William Moyer (left in upper left photo) and percussionist Harold Thompson found time for cards. During Moscow concert (upper center) a tribute in roses was paid the orchestra's 75th anniversary. Above, Kilton Vinal Smith warms up his tuba while drummer Harold Farberman unlocks traveling locker, and the physician, Dr. Keran Chobanian, checks kit. Conductor Charles Munch (lower left) acknowledges applause. Cellist Karl Zeise and violist Eugen Lehner also can be seen. Lower center—violinists Harry Ellis Dickson (left) and Victor Manusevitch prepare to photograph poster announcing concert. Below—Harvey Genereux, baggage master, rests for next move.





Orchestra Sounds Diplomatic A



Boston Symphony Is Welcomed to Moscow

Shaking hands are Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager of the orchestra (left), and a Soviet official from the Ministry of Culture. Between them stands the famous Soviet violinist, David Oistrakh. Girl at right is an interpreter.

Boston Symphony

Yankee genius is recognized in Europe—even in the Soviet Union—as brilliantly productive in such things as autos, washing machines, and electric refrigerators.

But how about the cultural field? The answer, with top rating for the United States, has been provided by the tour of the Boston Symphony Orchestra through 19 European cities from the Republic of Ireland and Scotland to the Scandinavian countries, on to the Soviet Union, and back through Czechoslovakia, Austria, West Germany, Switzerland, France, and England.

Wherever it went the orchestra was considered a dazzling example of American achievement in the arts as it was heard in 28 concerts, 18 conducted by Dr. Charles Munch, 10 at intervals by Pierre Monteux. On the creative side, Walter Piston of Massachusetts was given a foremost position among contemporary composers anywhere.

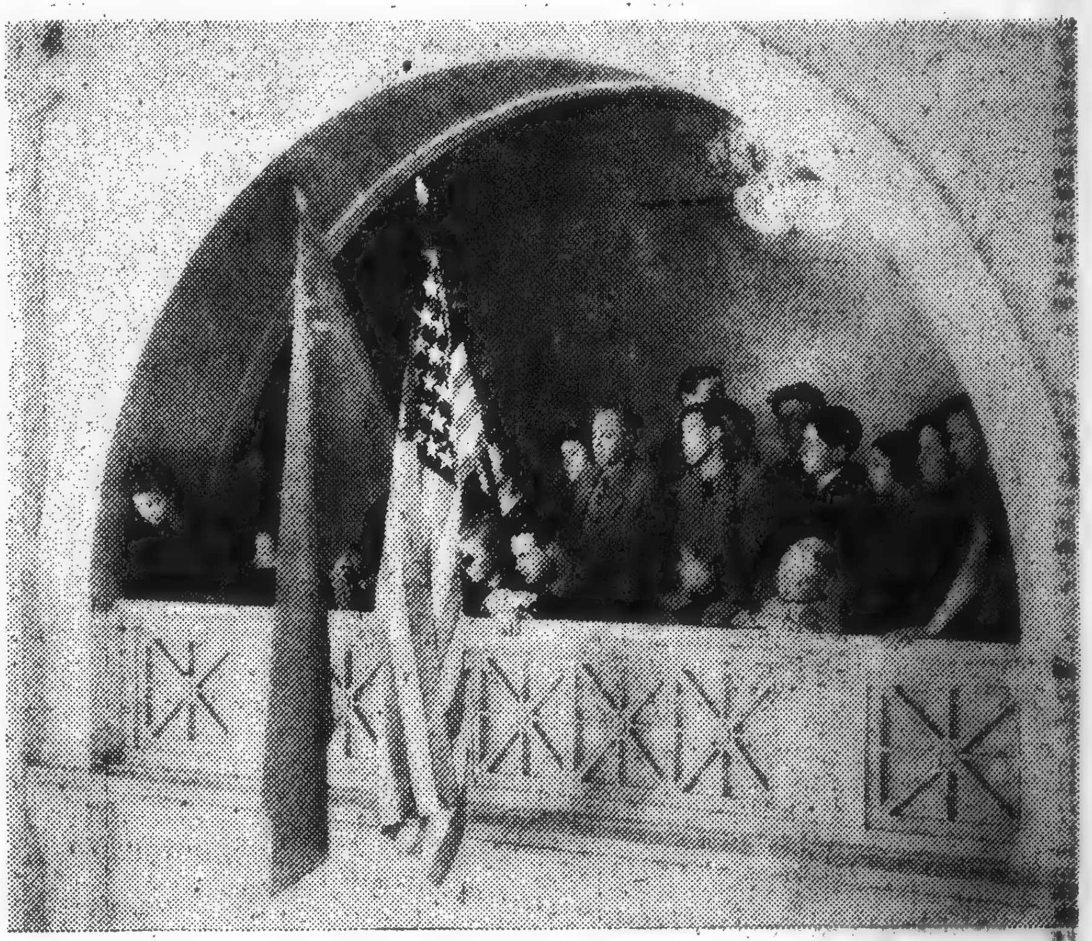
More than a musical event, this tour was a diplomatic mission backed by the United States State Department through the President's Fund for International Affairs under the administration of its officially appointed agency, the American National Theatre and Academy.

Of particular significance was the penetration of the Iron Curtain by the Boston Symphony. It was the first Western symphony orchestra to appear in the Soviet Union. And in two concerts in Leningrad and three in Moscow it well justified its mission.

It was acclaimed by the Soviet public and by music critics.

Beyond the success of the musical reception was that of the contact between the members of the orchestra as American citizens and the people of Leningrad and Moscow.

In these pictures we catch glimpses of the orchestra both as musicians and as American visitors to the Soviet Union.



Soviet and American Flags at Leningrad Concert

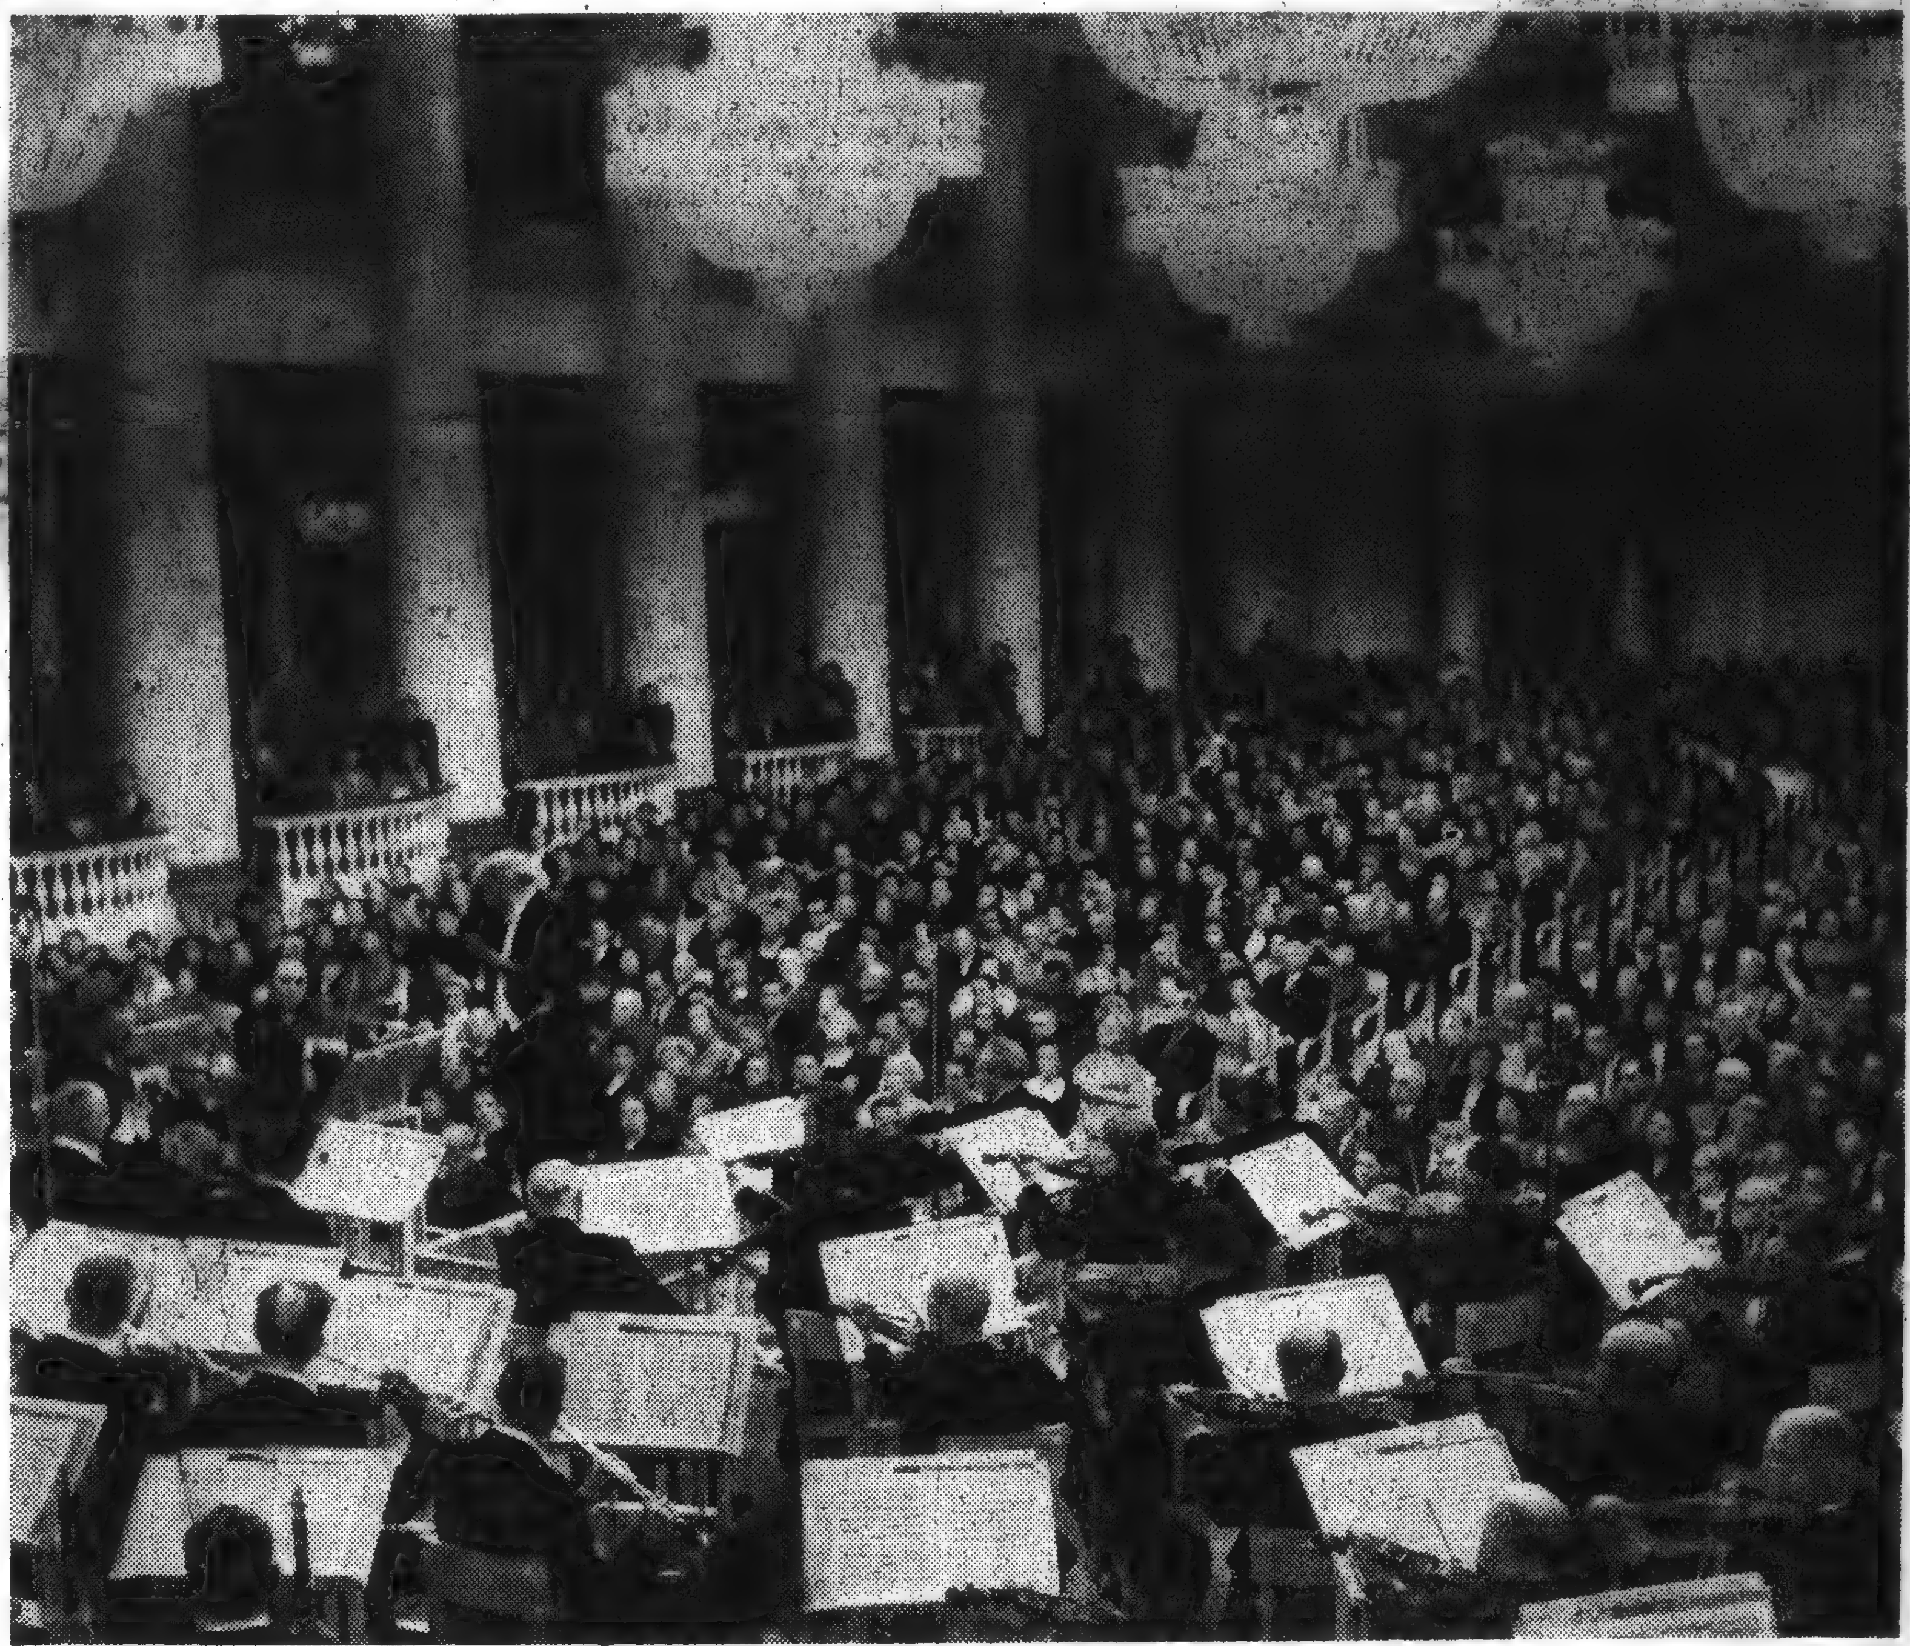
Farewell Party in Moscow

Charles Munch cuts cake at banquet in Moscow's Hotel Metropole

Trains . . . Where Yesterday? Where Tomorrow?

American Tourists Steal Rehearsal Peek

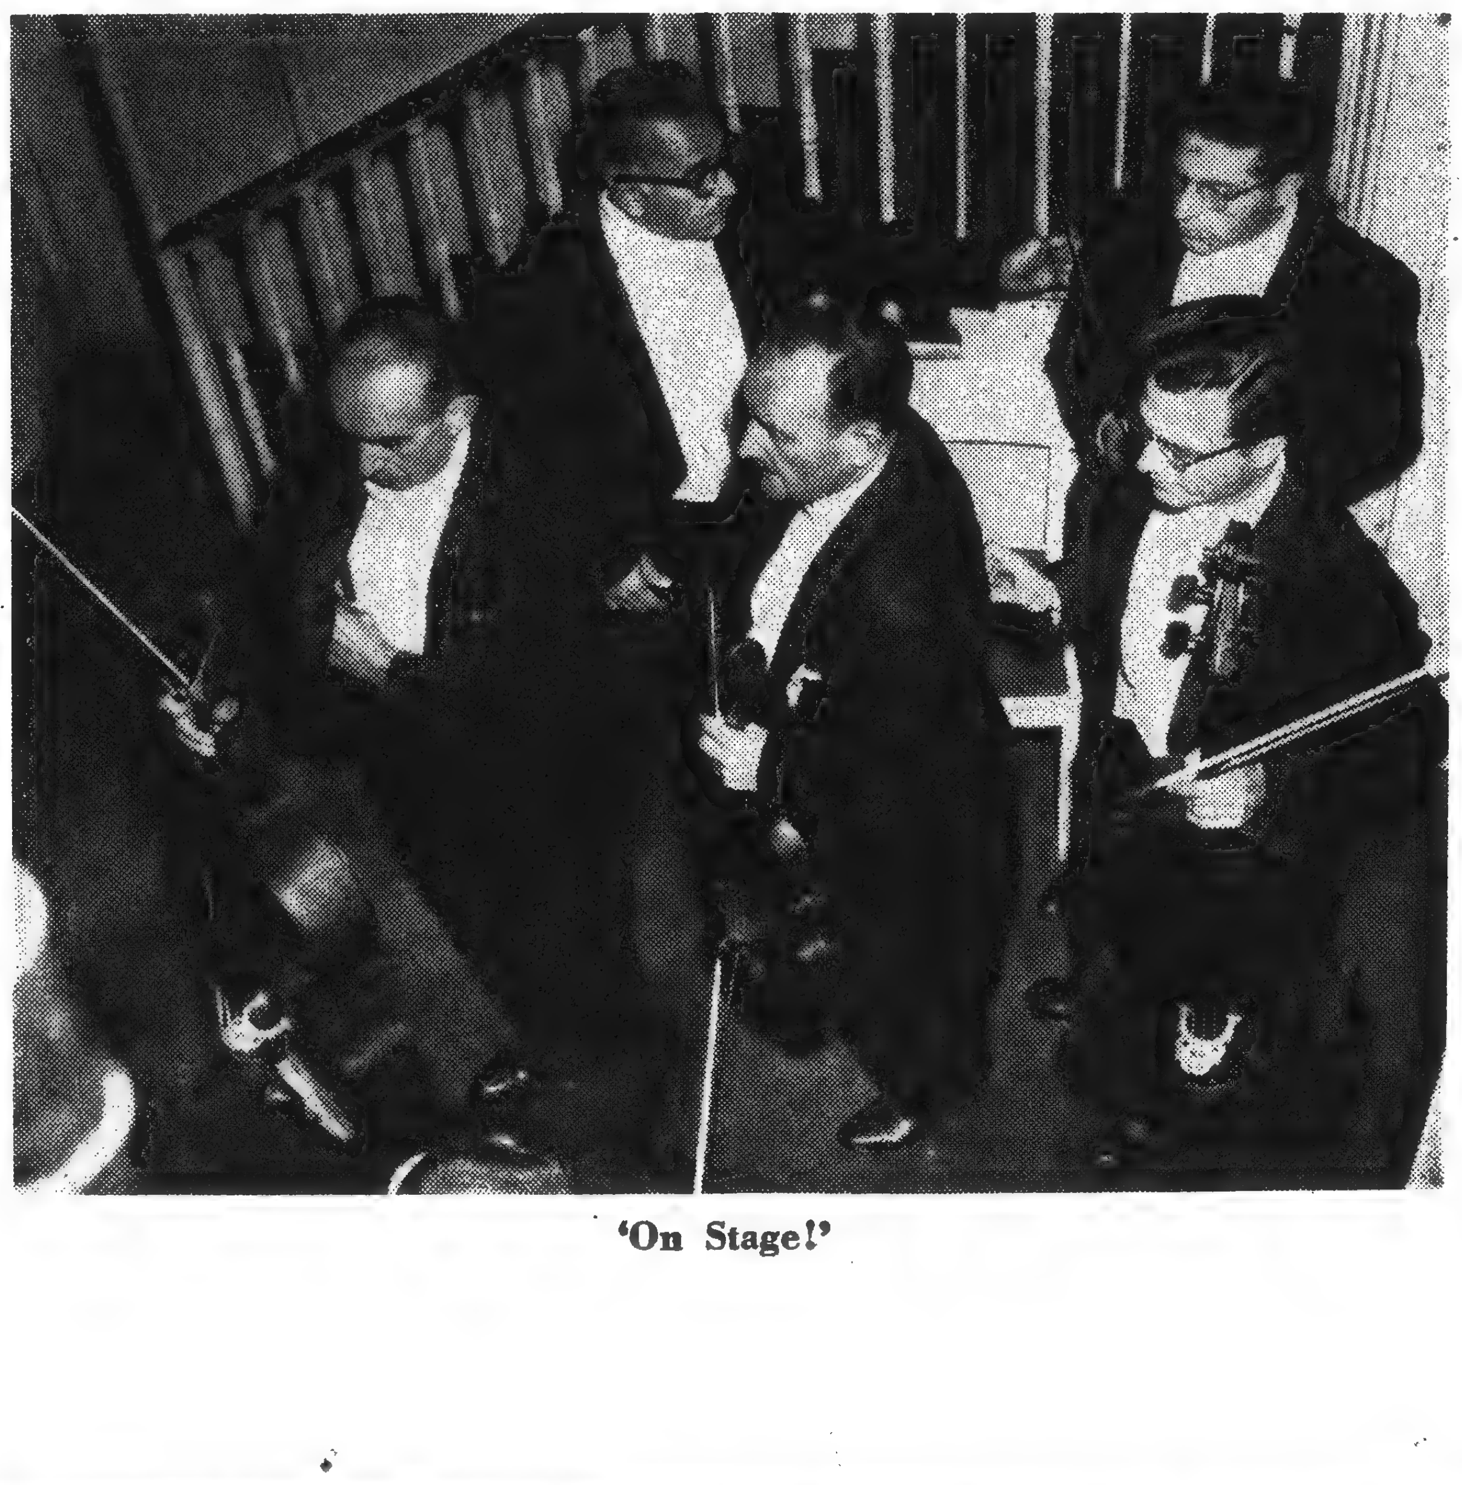
Moscow Audience



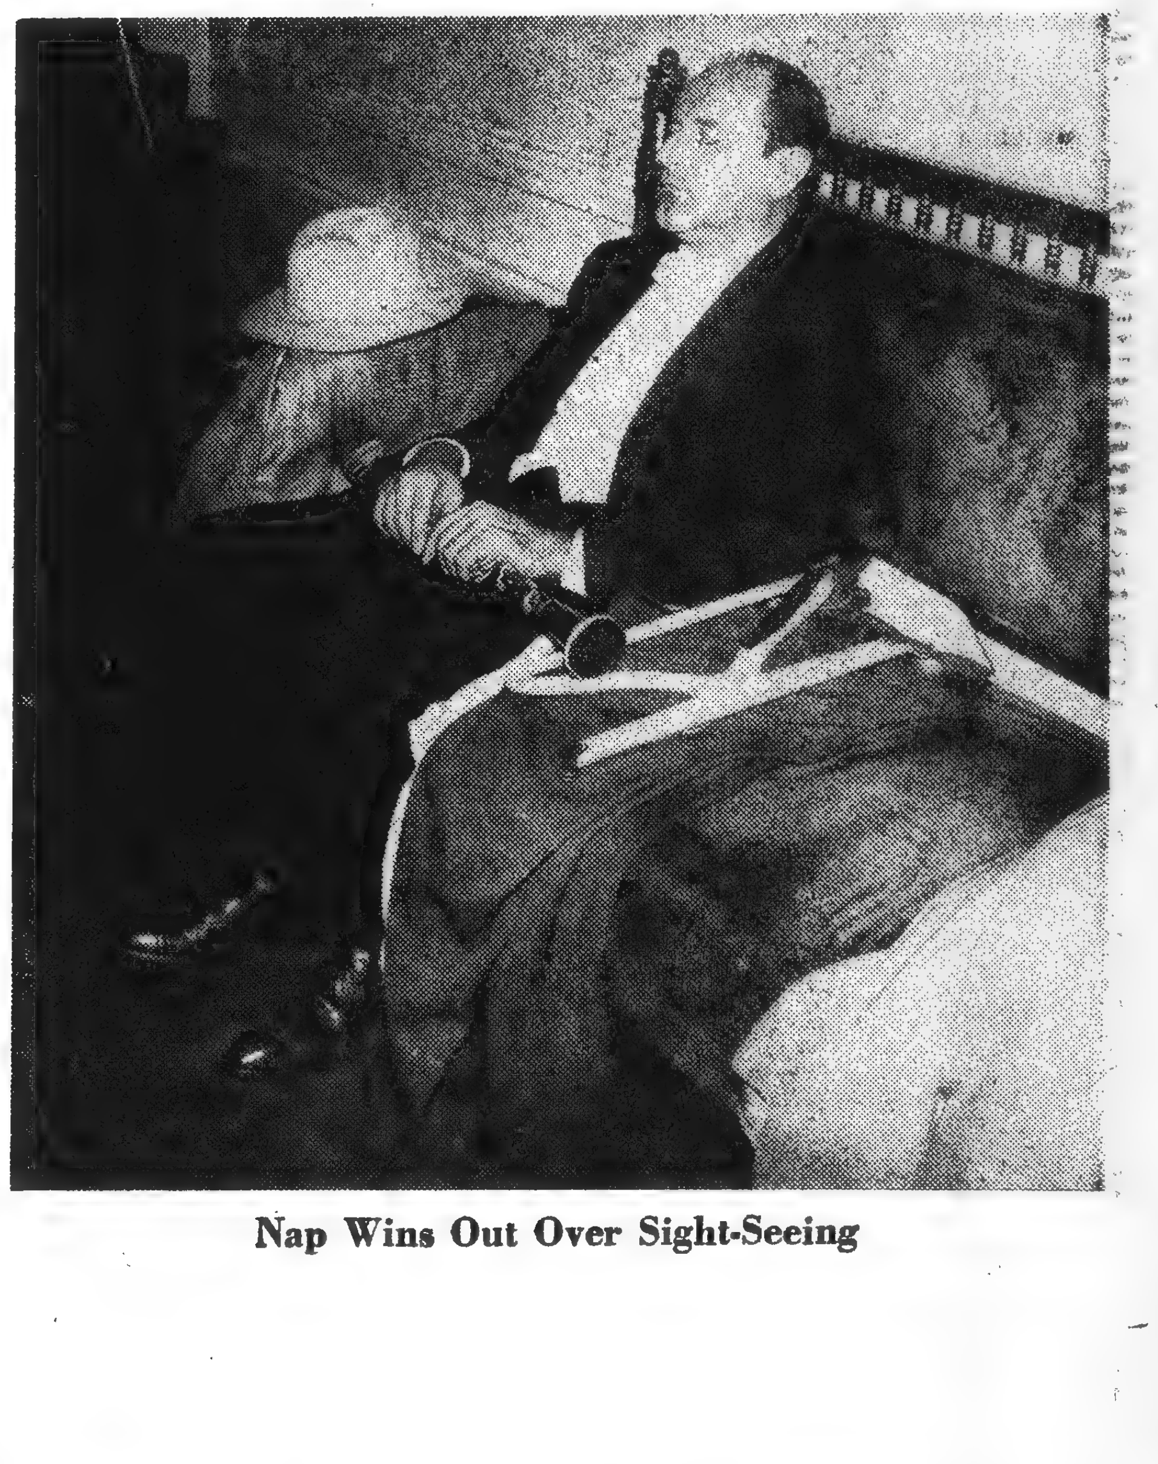
Associated Press

Charles Munch Conducts Boston Symphony in Leningrad's Philharmonic Hall

Musicians Snap Views of Countryside En Route to Leningrad



'On Stage!'



Nap Wins Out Over Sight-Seeing

Boston Herald
Sept 26, 56

BANQUET FOLLOWING FINAL BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERT in Russia was held at the Hotel Metropole in Mocow, with all members of the orchestra attending. Head-table guests included, left to right, Charles Munch, B. S. O. conductor; Soviet composer Dmitri Kabalevsky and, standing, Richard Burgin, Polish-born concertmaster of the orchestra, making a few remarks in Russian.

Musicians Quizzed Eagerly by Soviets

Christian Science Monitor Sept. 29, 1956

By Frederick H. Guidry
Staff Writer of The Christian Science Monitor

Intense curiosity about American life is one of the things Boston Symphony Orchestra members recall most vividly about the Moscow and Leningrad portions of their triumphal European tour.

"They were curious to find out anything they could about America," Everett Firth, tympanist, said as he waited at Logan International Airport for customs officials to check his baggage.

"They wanted to hear about what kind of a car I drove, how much money I made, what my home life was like. One even asked if I was a millionaire," he added.

He was holding a balalaika and mandolin, strange souvenirs for a percussionist. But he added, "With a few lessons I might be able to play them."

Bring Back Rare Finds

Mr. Firth was one of 67 BSO members who arrived yesterday by plane from London following a concert tour that included 28 performances in 19 European cities.

He was not the only one who saw to it that the orchestra came back to America with more instruments than it took abroad.

Noah Bielski, violinist, picked up an African guitar in Paris. Asked if he thought he could play it, Mr. Bielski said, "I think I've got to keep it hanging on the wall."

William Gibson, trombonist, brought back two horns from Czechoslovakia for his two youngsters. He described the instruments as "signal horns like referees in this country use."

Mr. Bielski said orchestra members were free to go where they pleased in the Soviet cities. He brought back two rolls of pictures he took in Moscow, as well as a recollection that Soviet citizens expressed "a general desire for peace, which I hope is sincere."

Hungry for Good Music

Mr. Gibson, sporting a green, yellow, and red cap he picked up in Scotland, said of Soviet audiences and good music, "They're hungry for it. They need it."

He said some Soviet musicians admired the large American trombones. "We are able to put more air through the large bore," he explained, adding that it affected the tone. Trumpeters, too, liked the American instrument as being "more flexible."

Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor, said European audiences "really love music" and "show it more with applause." He added, "You can't expect that here, where people hear you play day in and day out. There we were guests. You have to take that into consideration."

In Leningrad Mr. Burgin met old classmates, and the orchestra generally was swarmed over by Soviet musicians during intermissions and after the performances.

Cultural Interest

"They wanted to know what kinds of music we play, about living conditions, rehearsals, not so much about how much money we make," he reported.

Mrs. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, said Soviet flute players she talked to wanted to know mostly about the American musical world but also about such things as schools.

"I talked for two hours. Anyone from America could stand on a street corner in Moscow and answer questions all day," she said. Mr. Dwyer thought that the fact that questions flowed so freely showed not so much a desire to check up on the accuracy of Soviet Government reports of American life as a yearning for more facts to fill a void.

Picture: Page 2

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

SEP 30 1956

WGBH to Air Moscow Concert

Highlighted by the broadcasting of the Moscow concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Boston's educational, non-profit television and radio stations WGBH and WGBH-TV, last night announced a series of TV and radio "firsts".

Along with Thursday's FM playing of the Russian recording, there will be TV broadcasting of the Boston Symphony, and weekly art telecasts from the galleries of the Museum of Fine Arts—described as the only museum in the world equipped for live TV broadcasts.

The Moscow concert will be made from recordings presented to the Boston Symphony Orchestra by the Soviet Union.

OCT 3 - 1956

The Oracle

The Boston Symphony musicians found the Russian people bursting with questions about life in the U.S.A. "Anyone from America could stand in a street corner in Moscow and answer questions all day," reported Mrs. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the prominent flutist. The general feeling was that the Russians were not checking up against Soviet propaganda but were simply hungry for information about the outside world and particularly the American world. Russian musicians admired the American instruments, wanted to know about the pay and working conditions of the orchestra members, and what kind of music they play.

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,155

OCT 14 1956

A Look At the Arts

By E. J. D.

Boston Symphony Wins New Friends in Russia

The recent successful European tour by the Boston Symphony has warmed the cockles of our heart. We were particularly pleased by the impact made by the Boston Symphony in Russia.

We had the opportunity recently to read, in translation, of course, the reviews written by Moscow and Leningrad critics of the Boston Symphony's programs in those cities. These reviews were ecstatic. The orchestra is called "a magnificent ensemble" that can achieve the "musically impossible." Russians were entranced by the ensemble's "virtuoso qualities."

While these flattering comments are no news to those of us who regard the Boston Symphony as the world's best orchestra, it is refreshing to know that the Russians feel likewise. All of this helps to prove that music is, indeed, the universal language, and that this noblest of the arts can do much to further understanding between nations and to help improve international relations.

Now, for another type of music, we hope that trumpeter Louis Armstrong gets his wish to go to Russia to perform for "them cats" there. Louis is a successful good-will ambassador, too, and while his performances are somewhat different from those of the Boston Symphony, we feel that Louis' jazz also would be welcomed by the subjects of the Kremlin.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 34,148

OCT 24 1956

Russian Food Is Substantial, People Are Cordial, Touring Musician Writes

By ED REILLY
Gazette Staff Writer

Many varied opinions and reports have been given in the last several years on life inside Russia.

Anti-Communists describe it as being miserable for the average man, and the Commuist party members and party liners speak of it in glowing terms of praise.

A report that prboably will carry more weight because it strikes closer to home recently was sent to us by a local man who has just returned from a trip to Russia and the Iron Curtain countries.

His name is Felix Viscuglia, whose parents reside at 2105 Ferry Ave. Mr. Viscuglia plays clarinet with the Boston Symphony Orchestra which returned to this country a few weeks ago after a concert tour which took in 13 European countries and Russia.

When he and his wife visited his parents, and the parents of his wife, the former Mary Malinverni, 1314 Ashland Ave., in September, Mr. Viscuglia promised to send us some of his impressions of life in the U.S.S.R. The text of his letter follows:

"Of course, the highlight of the tour was our Russian visit. The Russians supplied transportation, flying our group from Helsinki Airport in six flights, groups of 20 or so to each plane, (sort of a ferry service) using three two-motored planes . . . very comfortable flight.

"Landed at Leningrad Airport . . . a large group of local dignitaries and musicians to greet us . . . on buses to the Hotel Europa . . . the whole orchestra staying at the same hotel.

"We had guides (from Moscow) assigned to our orchestra. They were practically on 24-hour notice. They made sure every one was just so very cordial and polite to our group.

"We had four meals a day. Our big dinner was at 11 o'clock at night, after the concert. Needless to say, we were constantly full. The food was substantial, and always wtih borsch . . . cabbage soup with sour cream, and also caviar.

"Always had a fish course and meat course and dessert. No water (drinking), had bottled water . . . carbonated . . . lemon, cherry, similar to our bottled beverages.

"Our concerts were huge successes; had standing ovations at each. We in turn played encores (very rare for the Boston Symphony). Musicians from the Estonian State Orchestra and other groups made special trips to see us. I am currently corresponding with one member with whom I became friendly.

"I found people to be sincere and easy to talk to. We were not restricted in any sense . . . had complete freedom of streets and shops. The Soviet government gave us spending money (rubles) for our stay . . . $75 worth.

"Some splurged on authentic fur caps and silver. I bought a balalaika and a mandolin to hang on my mantle, and also a bottle of vodka . . . $6 a bottle there! or 25 rubles. Prices are quite high. The average man on the street has to go some to keep his head above water, though their actual standard of living is quite low.

"Our guide explained frankly that until recently the emphasis has been on heavy industry and the services and essential trades. Public housing and consumer goods have been almost ignored, but now the trend will be for the betterment of the people. Sounds good . . . but they have quite a way to go.

"I do not consider myself an authority on the subject but can give a few 'off the cuff' comments: women and men working together on construction crews doing labor and I noticed quite a bit of new construction. Their present buildings are really old.

"Leningrad in its day must have been a beautiful city . . . large gardens, very wide streets. One can almost visualize how it looked in the days of the czar. Also went to the palace and summer palace of Peter the Great. Quite elaborate! The grounds are well kept, but the interiors are still in the process of being reconstructed.

"On to Moscow by sleeper train. Very comfortable though our dining car would hardly be called one . . . very small and could only get tea (called 'chi') and cakes, or beer (very bitter, not very tasty.) Few of the fellows sat up all night chatting to pass the time.

"We were brought by bus from the railway station (everywhere statues, Lenin, Stalin and others) to the Pekin Hotel, brand new. We were the first occupants. By our standards here in America, the hotel was poorly made. Here again, our guide went on to tell us about the building trades and such poor workmen. My plumbing leaked.

"Also in Moscow, our concerts met with huge success. Russians took films of our concerts and sent them to the United States. We shopped at the Gum department store—Moscow's answer to Macy's. The best feature was a visit to the mausoleum in Red Square where Lenin and Stalin are buried . . . a very sobering experience.

"Down two flights of stairs underground into a vault where the open caskets, glass covered, are on display. Many soldiers on guard duty. We filed past the caskets and up into the open air.

"Never has the sunlight looked and felt so good! Then on a tour inside the Kremlin walls. Strangely enough, cameras were allowed here and we all had a field day snapping pictures.

"Moscow has an excellent subway system. For 20 kopacks, I rode from our hotel to the concert hall . . . had an extremely long and deep escalator downward. One has to see it to believe it—much deeper than the London subway. One could not help but observe that it would make an excellent shelter in case of an air attack.

"After our last concert, we were guests at a dinner. Among the guests were Emil Gilels, pianist; the Oistrakha, father and son, both famous violinists; Dmitri Kabalevsky and Aram Khatchaturian, composers. After many speeches and toasts (of course with the inevitable vodka) we had an excellent dinner.

"Then the Russians flew us out of Moscow in six flights, the first one at 3 o'clock in the morning and one each hour. During our conversations, we still wonder why so early? Who knows?"

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2

Extract from

GLASGOW EVENING TIMES.

16

No "Rock" or Jazz, But Plenty Culture

4767

TOURISTS in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock 'n' roll or hot jazz.

But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramoone as an instrument of culture, d encourages the sale of classical usic by fixing a very low price r records. Thus the visitor can ty a 12in. long-playing record ade by top artists for 10 roubles bout 18s 6d). This, even allow-g for the fact that the Anglooviet exchange differential is ighly unrealistic, is about half the rice a similar record would cost n Britain.

For his 10 roubles the tourist ill get a record carrying two com-lete concertos — perhaps David Distrakh, the top Soviet violinist.

nparable to that of many estern makes, and the records pear to have a reasonably long
e. Russians are keen collectors gramophone records, and stocks discs by leading artists are ickly exhausted.

Musical instruments, because ey are regarded as cultural, tend o to be cheap. Balalaikas are ilable from about 32 roubles—ich would be nearly £3 at the icial rate of exchange, but bably represents something ch more like 15s to a Soviet zen.

Eight-inch TV Screens

adio sets, on the other hand, not cheap. Television, even if thinks of the rouble's value stically, is still expensive, and verage picture screen is tiny—8in. x 6½in.

e quality of the television
e appears reasonably good,
the number of sets in use be small, judging by the inency with which one encounviewing session in any public re is a ready public for all of "live" music, and the concerts in Moscow of the Symphony Orchestra, the American combination of its to visit the Soviet Union, major artistic event. The tra's performances were usly received.

Don't Dance Well

ing Moscow hotels have orchestras, which play and dance music, and on venings the dance floors are
d. But Russians, so long ed the world's greatest ancers, show little of this in the ballroom.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from
Yorkshire Evening News, Leeds

'Canned' classics–but no rock'n roll music

4767

TOURISTS in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock'n roll or hot jazz, says Reuter.

But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records.

The visitor can buy a 12-inch long-playing record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 18s. 6d.). This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

TWO CONCERTOS

For his 10 roubles, the tourist will rying ength also 10-ubles is any Western makes, and rds appear to have a reasonably long life.

Russians are keen collectors of gramophone records and stocks of discs by leading artists are quickly exhausted.

Musical instruments, also because they are regarded as cultural aids tend also to be cheap.

MAJOR EVENT

There is a ready pubic for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.

Leading Moscow hotels have small orchestras, which play popular and dance music, and on some evenings the dance floors are crowded. But Russians, so long acclaimed the world's greatest ballet dancers, show little of this genius in the ballroom.

International Press-cutting Bureau
184 STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

EXTRACT FROM THE

Yorkshire Evening Post

LEEDS

Date 26 OCT 1956

CLASSICAL MUSIC RECORDS CHEAP IN RUSSIA

4767

But don't expect hot jazz or Rock 'n' Roll

MOSCOW.—Tourists in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of Rock 'n' Roll or hot jazz.

But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big collection at a low cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records.

Thus, the visitor can buy a 12-inch slow-playing record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 18s. 6d.).

Allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, this is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

Recording quality

For his ten roubles, the tourist will get a record carrying two complete concertos — for example, David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov concerto on one side, and a 'cello concerto by another artist on the reverse side.

Full-length concertos by Oistrakh, Gilels, the leading Russian pianist, and other artists can also be obtained in double-sided ten-inch records costing seven roubles each.

The quality of the recording is comparable to that of many Western makes, and the records appear to have a reasonably long life.

Russians are keen collectors of gramophone records, and stocks of discs by leading artists are quickly exhausted.

Cheap instruments

Musical instruments, also because they are regarded as cultural side, tend also to be cheap. Balalaikas are available from about 32 roubles—which would be nearly £3 at the official rate of exchange, but probably represents something much more like 15s. to a Soviet citizen.

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the rouble's value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny—often eight inches by 6½.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

Ready public

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.

Russians willingly pay good prices for concert tickets, and at 30 roubles and over, there is always an eager demand for seats at the Bolshoi Theatre for opera or ballet.

Leading Moscow hotels have small orchestras, which play popular and dance music, and on some evenings the dance floors are crowded.

But Russians, so long acclaimed the world's greatest ballet dancers, show little of this genius in the ballroom.—Reuter.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from
Greenock Telegraph

'Canned' Clas Inexpensive

4767

TOURISTS in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of Rock 'n' Roll or hot jazz. But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records. Thus, the visitor can buy a 12-inch slowplaying record made by top artistes for 10 roubles (about 18s 6d). This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

For his ten roubles the tourist will get, for example, a record carrying two complete concertos—for example, David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov concerto on one side, and a 'cello concerto by another artiste on the reverse side.

GOOD QUALITY

Full-length concertos, by Oistrakh, Gilels, the leading Russian pianist and other artistes can also be obtained in double-sided ten-inch records costing seven roubles each.

The quality of the recording is comparable to that of many western makes, and the records appear to have a reasonably long life.

Russians are keen collectors of gramophone records, and stocks of discs by leading artistes are quickly exhausted.

Musical instruments, also because they are regarded as cultural side, tend also to be cheap. Balalaikas are available from about 32 roubles—which would be nearly £3 at the official rate of exchange, but probably represents something much more like 15 shillings to a Soviet citizen.

TV EXPENSIVE

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the roubles value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny—often eight inches by six-and-a-half.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.

POPULAR MUSIC

Russians willingly pay good prices for concert tickets, and at 30 roubles and over, there is always an eager demand for seats at the Bolshoi Theatre for opera or ballet.

Leading Moscow hotels have small orchestras, which play popular and dance music, and on some evenings the dance floors are crowded. But Russians, so long acclaimed the world's greatest ballet dancers, show little of this genius in the ballroom.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2

Extract from

GLASGO. EVENING TIMES.

No "Rock" or Jazz, But Plenty Culture

4767

TOURISTS in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock 'n' roll or hot jazz.

But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records. Thus the visitor can buy a 12in. long-playing record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 18s 6d). This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

For his 10 roubles the tourist will get a record carrying two complete concertos — perhaps David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov Concerto on one side and a 'cello concerto by another artist on the reverse side.

Full-length concertos by Oistrakh or Gilels, the leading Russian pianist, and other artists can also be obtained in double-sided 10in. records costing seven roubles each.

Keen Collectors

The quality of the recordings is comparable to that of many Western makes, and the records appear to have a reasonably long life. Russians are keen collectors of gramophone records, and stocks of discs by leading artists are quickly exhausted.

Musical instruments, because they are regarded as cultural, tend also to be cheap. Balalaikas are available from about 32 roubles—which would be nearly £3 at the official rate of exchange, but probably represents something much more like 15s to a Soviet citizen.

Eight-inch TV Screens

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the rouble's value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny—often 8in. x 6½in.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.

Don't Dance Well

Leading Moscow hotels have small orchestras, which play popular and dance music, and on some evenings the dance floors are crowded. But Russians, so long acclaimed the world's greatest ballet dancers, show little of this genius in the ballroom.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from
Yorkshire Evening News, Leeds

'Canned' classics–but no rock'n roll music

4767

TOURISTS in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock'n roll or hot jazz, says Reuter.

But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records.

The visitor can buy a 12-inch long-playing record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 18s. 6d.). This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

TWO CONCERTOS

For his 10 roubles, the tourist will get, for example, a record carrying two complete concertos. Full-length concertos by leading artists can also be obtained on double-sided 10-inch records costing seven roubles each.

The quality of the recording is comparable to that of many Western makes, and the records appear to have a reasonably long life.

Russians are keen collectors of gramophone records and stocks of discs by leading artists are quickly exhausted.

Musical instruments, also because they are regarded as cultural aids tend also to be cheap.

MAJOR EVENT

There is a ready pubic for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.

Leading Moscow hotels have small orchestras, which play popular and dance music, and on some evenings the dance floors are crowded. But Russians, so long acclaimed the world's greatest ballet dancers, show little of this genius in the ballroom.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from
Greenock Telegraph

'Canned' Clas
Inexpensive

4767

TOURISTS in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of Rock 'n' Roll or hot Jazz. But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records. Thus, the visitor can buy a 12-inch slowplaying record made by top artistes for 10 roubles (about 18s 6d). This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

For his ten roubles the tourist will get, for example, a record carrying two complete concertos—for example, David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov concerto on one side, and a 'cello concerto by another artiste on the reverse side.

GOOD QUALITY

Full-length concertos, by Oistrakh, Gilels, the leading Russian pianist and other artistes can also be obtained in double-sided ten-inch records costing seven roubles each.

The quality of the recording is comparable to that of many western makes, and the records appear to have a reasonably long life.

Russians are keen collectors of gramophone records, and stocks of discs by leading artistes are quickly exhausted.

Musical instruments, also because they are regarded as cultural side, tend also to be cheap. Balalaikas are available from about 32 roubles—which would be nearly £3 at the official rate of exchange, but probably represents something much more like 15 shillings to a Soviet citizen.

TV EXPENSIVE

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the roubles value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny—often eight inches by six-and-a-half.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.

POPULAR MUSIC

Russians willingly pay good prices for concert tickets, and at 30 roubles and over, there is always an eager demand for seats at the Bolshoi Theatre for opera or ballet.

Leading Moscow hotels have small orchestras, which play popular and dance music, and on some evenings the dance floors are crowded. But Russians, so long acclaimed the world's greatest ballet dancers, show little of this genius in the ballroom.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2

Extract from
GLASGOW EVENING TIMES.

No "Rock" or Jazz, But Plenty Culture

4767

TOURISTS in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock 'n' roll or hot jazz.

But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records. Thus the visitor can buy a 12in. long-playing record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 18s 6d). This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

For his 10 roubles the tourist will get a record carrying two complete concertos — perhaps David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov Concerto on one side and a 'cello concerto by another artist on the reverse side.

Full-length concertos by Oistrakh or Gilels, the leading Russian pianist, and other artists can also be obtained in double-sided 10in. records costing seven roubles each.

Keen Collectors

The quality of the recordings is comparable to that of many Western makes, and the records appear to have a reasonably long life. Russians are keen collectors of gramophone records, and stocks of discs by leading artists are quickly exhausted.

Musical instruments, because they are regarded as cultural, tend also to be cheap. Balalaikas are available from about 32 roubles—which would be nearly £3 at the official rate of exchange, but probably represents something much more like 15s to a Soviet citizen.

Eight-inch TV Screens

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the rouble's value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny—often 8in. x 6½in.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.

Don't Dance Well

Leading Moscow hotels have small orchestras, which play popular and dance music, and on some evenings the dance floors are crowded. But Russians, so long acclaimed the world's greatest ballet dancers, show little of this genius in the ballroom.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from
Yorkshire Evening News, Leeds

'Canned' classics—but no rock'n roll music

TOURISTS in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock'n roll or hot jazz, says Reuter.

But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records.

The visitor can buy a 12-inch long-playing record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 18s. 6d.). This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

TWO CONCERTOS

For his 10 roubles, the tourist will get, for example, a record carrying two complete concertos. Full-length

---

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from
Greenock Telegraph

'Canned' Classical Music Inexpensive in Russia

4767

TOURISTS in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of Rock 'n' Roll or hot jazz. But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records. Thus, the visitor can buy a 12-inch slowplaying record made by top artistes for 10 roubles (about 18s 6d). This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

For his ten roubles the tourist will get, for example, a record carrying two complete concertos—for example, David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov concerto on one side, and a 'cello concerto by another artiste on the reverse side.

GOOD QUALITY

Full-length concertos by Oistrakh, Gilels, the leading Russian pianist and other artistes can also be obtained in double-sided ten-inch records costing seven roubles each.

The quality of the recording is comparable to that of many western makes, and the records appear to have a reasonably long life.

Russians are keen collectors of gramophone records, and stocks of discs by leading artistes are quickly exhausted.

Musical instruments, also because they are regarded as cultural side, tend also to be cheap. Balalaikas are available from about 32 roubles—which would be nearly £3 at the official rate of exchange, but probably represents something much more like 15 shillings to a Soviet citizen.

TV EXPENSIVE

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the roubles value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny—often eight inches by six-and-a-half.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.

POPULAR MUSIC

Russians willingly pay good prices for concert tickets, and at 30 roubles and over, there is always an eager demand for seats at the Bolshoi Theatre for opera or ballet.

Leading Moscow hotels have small orchestras, which play popular and dance music, and on some evenings the dance floors are crowded. But Russians, so long acclaimed the world's greatest ballet dancers, show little of this genius in the ballroom.

[redacted]

BOSTON

■ As far as the playing was concerned for this season's opening of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Symphony Hall, Oct. 5 and 6, neither the conductor, Charles Munch, nor his players showed the slightest ill effects of an arduous European tour that took the orchestra through 19 cities in 13 countries for a total of 28 concerts.

With the personnel returning the week of the concert, only one rehearsal was possible. But perhaps this was just as well under the circumstances. Spurred by the conductor's vigorous enthusiasm, the orchestra gave superlative readings of the Weber Overture to Euryanthe and Beethoven's Third Symphony. The last-named was one of the mainstays of the tour.

The concert also served to introduce to American audiences the Viennese violinist Wolfgang Schneiderhan, who has been active on the European scene since his debut in Copenhagen in 1926, and whose marriage to the soprano Irmgard Seefried has far from subordinated his own very considerable talent. Playing the Beethoven Violin Concerto, the soloist showed that he has a big tone, poise, and an effective command of his instrument. His style is characterized by a sober earnestness (which stops short of intensity), logic, and intellect. In appearance, manner, and performance Schneiderhan is the embodiment of serious purpose. He treads the middle way, neither too much nor too little, with a sort of determined wariness. Boston has a particular fondness for this type of musician, and the soloist scored a real audience and critical success in his American debut.

■ The newspapers, radio, and television have, of course, been full of the orchestra's exploits in Europe, with particular interest attached to the Russian part of the tour, where five concerts were given in Moscow and Leningrad. All the players were full of enthusiasm for the reception given the orchestra wherever it played. There were and still are many personal stories of considerable interest. Musicians in Russia were warm and friendly in every way and there was a good deal of fraternizing both at formal receptions and informally through chance and planned meetings.

The celebrated Soviet violinist David Oistrakh was much in evidence. A meeting with Vladimir Resnikoff, Russian-born BSO violinist, resulted

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Item (e)
LYNN, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 21,915

NOV 1 - 1956

Social

U. S. S. R.—A PICTURE REPORT — J. Edward Fitzgerald, who is shown above in Red Square, Moscow, will give an illustrated talk about hi

inside the

PM at Fel-

sorship of

as official

estra dur-

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from EAST AFRICAN STANDARD
NAIROBI

Date

476

SARTORIAL PROGRESS IN RUSSIA

MANY foreign tourists visiting the Soviet Union this year have found that the Russians are gradually becoming fashion-conscious, after many years of apparent indifference to dress standards set by the Western world.

The new process is clearly slow, and is hampered by the limited quantity and poor quality of certain kinds of consumer goods.

But visitors who have returned to the Soviet Union this summer after an absence of, say, two years, have noticed a marked inmprovement in the standard of women's dress.

The change in men's attire is less perceptible, though it is significant that a daily dress show presented by one of Moscow's leading stores includes a show of male attire.

Daily dress show

This one-hour daily dress show is organised on Western lines, with a woman commentator who evidently has price, detail and size of the goods displayed memorised down to the last detail.

Clothes are also once more beginning to have a place in the social scheme of things. Functions at which everyone is in evening dress are rare, but a kind of half-way house has been reached.

During the Boston Symphony Orchestra's recent visit to Moscow, for instance, the enthusiastic Russian audience, which included the cream of the capital's intelligentsia, included many men in dress suits and women in low-cut gowns. (Reuter)

---

14 NOV 1956

476

CLASSIC DISCS ARE CHEAP IN RUSSIA

Tourists in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock 'n' roll or hot jazz.

But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records. Thus, the visitor can buy a 12-inch slow-playing record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 18s. 6d.).

This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

TWO CONCERTOS

For his ten roubles, the tourist will get, for example, a record carrying two complete concertos—for example, David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov Concerto on one side, and a 'cello concerto by another artist on the reverse side.

Full-length concertos by Oistrakh, Gilels, the leading Russian pianist, and other artists can also be obtained on double-sided ten-inch records costing seven roubles each.

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the rouble's value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny—often eight inches by six and a-half.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.—Reuter.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU
184 STRAND LONDON, W.C. 2.

Extract from
THE IRAQ TIMES
BAGHDAD

Date 2 NOV. 1956

476

Recorded music is popular in Russia: cheap "culture"

Moscow, Thursday.

TOURISTS in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock 'n roll or hot jazz. But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records.

Thus, the visitor can buy a 12-inch slowplaying record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 925 fils). This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

For his ten roubles, the tourist will get a record carrying two complete concertos — for example, David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov Concerto on one side, and a 'cello concerto by another artist on the reverse side.

Full-length concertos by Oistrakh, Gilels, the leading Russian pianist and other artists can also be obtained in double-sided ten-inch records costing seven roubles each.

Good quality

The quality of the recording is comparable to that of many Western makes and the records appear to have a reasonably long life. Russians are keen collectors of gramophone records, and the frequently renewed stocks of discs by leading artists are quickly exhausted.

Musical instruments, also because they are regarded as cultural aids, tend also to be cheap in the Soviet Union. Balalaikas are available from about 32 roubles — which would be nearly £3 sterling at the official rate of exchange, but probably represents something much more like 15 shillings to a Soviet citizen.

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the rouble's value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny — often eight inches by six-and-a-half, in comparison with the West's screens of 21 inches and over.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

Ready public

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.—Reuter.

[redacted]

in Oistrakh's purchasing Resnikoff's violin, a fine Guadagnini. When Resnikoff was asked if he had received a good price for his prized possession, he replied that Mr. Oistrakh is a shrewd bargainer. But Vladimir is no babe in the woods either, so perhaps the final price was just about what it ought to have been.

Each of the players received 300 roubles while in Russia, which the men spent with great enthusiasm for balalaikas, enormous Russian fur hats, woodcarvings, and various other sundries. Some seven or eight of the players were able to call their homes by telephone from Leningrad, a devoted manifestation of marital and parental solicitude which took a good third of their Russian pay—but worth every kopeck, they insist.

There is some criticism in the orchestra of the rigorous schedule, which compelled the orchestra to perform almost every day of the tour. Feeling has been expressed that the strain of travel on top of the playing schedule was not calculated to improve either the players' health nor their performances. Several of the men have stated that some of the concerts were given on sheer nerve and little else. Perhaps this aspect may be improved in the future.

JULES WOLFFERS

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from Eastern Evening News, Norwich

14 NOV 1956

CLASSIC DISCS ARE CHEAP IN RUSSIA

476

Tourists in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock 'n' roll or hot jazz.

But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records. Thus, the visitor can buy a 12-inch slow-playing record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 18s. 6d.).

This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

TWO CONCERTOS

For his ten roubles, the tourist will get, for example, a record carrying two complete concertos—for example, David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov Concerto on one side, and a 'cello concerto by another artist on the reverse side.

Full-length concertos by Oistrakh, Gilels, the leading Russian pianist, and other artists can also be obtained on double-sided ten-inch records costing seven roubles each.

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the rouble's value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny—often eight inches by six and a-half.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.—Reuter.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Item (e)
LYNN, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 21,915

NOV 1 - 1956

Social

. Edward Fitz-
e, Moscow, will nces inside the
:15 PM at Fel-
sponsorship of
ld was official Orchestra dur-
e.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from EAST AFRICAN STANDARD
NAIROBI

Date..............................

SARTORIAL PROGRESS IN RUSSIA

476

MANY foreign tourists visiting the Soviet Union this year have found that the Russians are gradually becoming fashion-conscious, after many years of apparent indifference to dress standards set by the Western world.

The new process is clearly slow, and is hampered by the limited quantity and poor quality of certain kinds of consumer goods.

But visitors who have returned to the Soviet Union this summer after an absence of, say, two years, have noticed a marked improvement in the standard of women's dress.

The change in men's attire is less perceptible, though it is significant that a daily dress show presented by one of Moscow's leading stores includes a show of male attire.

Daily dress show

This one-hour daily dress show is organised on Western lines, with a woman commentator who evidently has price, detail and size of the goods displayed memorised down to the last detail.

Clothes are also once more beginning to have a place in the social scheme of things. Functions at which everyone is in evening dress are rare, but a kind of half-way house has been reached.

During the Boston Symphony Orchestra's recent visit to Moscow, for instance, the enthusiastic Russian audience, which included the cream of the capital's intelligentsia, included many men in dress suits and women in low-cut gowns. (Reuter)

INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU
184 STRAND, LONDON, W.C. 2.

Extract from
THE IRAQ TIMES
BAGHDAD

Date 4 NOV 1956

Recorded music is popular in Russia: cheap "culture"

476

Moscow, Thursday.

TOURISTS in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock 'n roll or hot jazz. But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records.

Thus, the visitor can buy a 12-inch slowplaying record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 925 fils). This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

For his ten roubles, the tourist will get a record carrying two complete concertos — for example, David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov Concerto on one side, and a 'cello concerto by another artist on the reverse side.

Full-length concertos by Oistrakh, Gilels, the leading Russian pianist and other artists can also be obtained in double-sided ten-inch records costing seven roubles each.

Good quality

The quality of the recording is comparable to that of many Western makes and the records appear to have a reasonably long life. Russians are keen collectors of gramophone records, and the frequently renewed stocks of discs by leading artists are quickly exhausted.

Musical instruments, also because they are regarded as cultural aids, tend also to be cheap in the Soviet Union. Balalaikas are available from about 32 roubles — which would be nearly £3 sterling at the official rate of exchange, but probably represents something much more like 15 shillings to a Soviet citizen.

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the rouble's value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny — often eight inches by six-and-a-half, in comparison with the West's screens of 21 inches and over.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

Ready public

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.—Reuter.

MUSICAL COURIER
(NEW YORK CITY)
NOV 1956

in Oistrakh's purchasing Resnikoff's violin, a fine Guadagnini. When Resnikoff was asked if he had received a good price for his prized possession, he replied that Mr. Oistrakh is a shrewd bargainer. But Vladimir is no babe in the woods either, so perhaps the final price was just about what it ought to have been.

Each of the players received 300 roubles while in Russia, which the men spent with great enthusiasm for balalaikas, enormous Russian fur hats, woodcarvings, and various other sundries. Some seven or eight of the players were able to call their homes by telephone from Leningrad, a devoted manifestation of marital and parental solicitude which took a good third of their Russian pay—but worth every kopeck, they insist.

There is some criticism in the orchestra of the rigorous schedule, which compelled the orchestra to perform almost every day of the tour. Feeling has been expressed that the strain of travel on top of the playing schedule was not calculated to improve either the players' health nor their performances. Several of the men have stated that some of the concerts were given on sheer nerve and little else. Perhaps this aspect may be improved in the future.

JULES WOLFFERS

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from Eastern Evening News, Norwich

14 NOV 1956

CLASSIC DISCS ARE CHEAP IN RUSSIA

476

Tourists in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock 'n' roll or hot jazz.

But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records. Thus, the visitor can buy a 12-inch slow-playing record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 18s. 6d.).

This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

TWO CONCERTOS

For his ten roubles, the tourist will get, for example, a record carrying two complete concertos—for example, David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov Concerto on one side, and a 'cello concerto by another artist on the reverse side.

Full-length concertos by Oistrakh, Gilels, the leading Russian pianist, and other artists can also be obtained on double-sided ten-inch records costing seven roubles each.

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the rouble's value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny—often eight inches by six and a-half.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.—Reuter.

aged 77

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Item (e)
LYNN, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 21,915

NOV 1 - 1956

Social

. Edward Fitz-
e, Moscow, will
nces inside the
:15 PM at Fel-
sponsorship of
ld was official Orchestra dur-
e.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from
EAST AFRICAN STANDARD
NAIROBI

Date ....

SARTORIAL PROGRESS IN RUSSIA

470

MANY foreign tourists visiting the Soviet Union this year have found that the Russians are gradually becoming fashion-conscious, after many years of apparent indifference to dress standards set by the Western world.

The new process is clearly slow, and is hampered by the limited quantity and poor quality of certain kinds of consumer goods.

But visitors who have returned to the Soviet Union this summer after an absence of, say, two years, have noticed a marked inmprovement in the standard of women's dress.

The change in men's attire is less perceptible, though it is significant that a daily dress show presented by one of Moscow's leading stores includts a show of male attire.

Daily dress show

This one-hour daily dress show is organised on Western lines, with a woman commentator who evidently has price, detail and size of the goods displayed memorised down to the last detail.

Clothes are also once more beginning to have a place in the social scheme of things. Functions at which everyone is in evening dress are rare, but a kind of half-way house has been reached.

During the Boston Symphony Orchestra's recent visit to Moscow, for instance, the enthusiastic Russian audience, which included the cream of the capital's intelligentsia, included many men in dress suits and women in low-cut gowns. (Reuter)

INTERNATIONAL PRESS CUTTING BUREAU
184 STRAND, LONDON, W.C. 2.

Extract from
THE IRAQ TIMES
BAGHDAD

Date ____________

Recorded music is popular in Russia: cheap "culture"

477

Moscow, Thursday.

TOURISTS in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock 'n roll or hot jazz. But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records.

Thus, the visitor can buy a 12-inch slowplaying record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 925 fils). This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

For his ten roubles, the tourist will get a record carrying two complete concertos — for example, David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov Concerto on one side, and a 'cello concerto by another artist on the reverse side.

Full-length concertos by Oistrakh, Gilels, the leading Russian pianist and other artists can also be obtained in double-sided ten-inch records costing seven roubles each.

Good quality

The quality of the recording is comparable to that of many Western makes and the records appear to have a reasonably long life. Russians are keen collectors of gramophone records, and the frequently renewed stocks of discs by leading artists are quickly exhausted.

Musical instruments, also because they are regarded as cultural aids, tend also to be cheap in the Soviet Union. Balalaikas are available from about 32 roubles — which would be nearly £3 sterling at the official rate of exchange, but probably represents something much more like 15 shillings to a Soviet citizen.

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the rouble's value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny — often eight inches by six-and-a-half, in comparison with the West's screens of 21 inches and over.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

Ready public

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.—Reuter.

MUSICAL COURIER
(NEW YORK CITY)
NOV. 1 1956

in Oistrakh's purchasing Resnikoff's violin, a fine Guadagnini. When Resnikoff was asked if he had received a good price for his prized possession, he replied that Mr. Oistrakh is a shrewd bargainer. But Vladimir is no babe in the woods either, so perhaps the final price was just about what it ought to have been.

Each of the players received 300 roubles while in Russia, which the men spent with great enthusiasm for balalaikas, enormous Russian fur hats, woodcarvings, and various other sundries. Some seven or eight of the players were able to call their homes by telephone from Leningrad, a devoted manifestation of marital and parental solicitude which took a good third of their Russian pay—but worth every kopeck, they insist.

There is some criticism in the orchestra of the rigorous schedule, which compelled the orchestra to perform almost every day of the tour. Feeling has been expressed that the strain of travel on top of the playing schedule was not calculated to improve either the players' health nor their performances. Several of the men have stated that some of the concerts were given on sheer nerve and little else. Perhaps this aspect may be improved in the future.

JULES WOLFFERS

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from Eastern Evening News, Norwich

1956

CLASSIC DISCS ARE CHEAP IN RUSSIA

Tourists in Moscow on the look-out for souvenirs will search in vain for such things as gramophone records of rock 'n' roll or hot jazz.

But recorded music is, nevertheless, one of the cheapest things in the Soviet Union, and the tourist who is interested in the classics can bring back a big portfolio at a trifling cost.

Soviet Russia treats the gramophone as an instrument of culture, and encourages the sale of classical music by fixing a very low price for records. Thus, the visitor can buy a 12-inch slow-playing record made by top artists for 10 roubles (about 18s. 6d.).

This, even allowing for the fact that the Anglo-Soviet exchange differential is highly unrealistic, is about half the price a similar record would cost in Britain.

TWO CONCERTOS

For his ten roubles, the tourist will get, for example, a record carrying two complete concertos—for example, David Oistrakh, the top Soviet violinist, in the Glazounov Concerto on one side, and a 'cello concerto by another artist on the reverse side.

Full-length concertos by Oistrakh, Gilels, the leading Russian pianist, and other artists can also be obtained on double-sided ten-inch records costing seven roubles each.

Radio sets, on the other hand, are not cheap. Television, even if one thinks of the rouble's value realistically, is still expensive, and the average picture screen is tiny—often eight inches by six and a-half.

The quality of the television image appears reasonably good, but the number of sets in use must be small, judging by the infrequency with which one encounters a viewing session in any public place.

There is a ready public for all kinds of "live" music, and the recent concerts in Moscow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first American combination of its kind to visit the Soviet Union, were a major artistic event. The orchestra's performances were rapturously received.—Reuter.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Item (e)
LYNN, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 21,915

NOV 1 - 1956

Social

U. S. S. R.—A PICTURE REPORT — J. Edward Fitzgerald, who is shown above in Red Square, Moscow, will give an illustrated talk about his experiences inside the Soviet Union on Thursday, Nov. 15, at 8:15 PM at Fellowship House in Swampscott, under the sponsorship of the Quota Club of Lynn. Mr. Fitzgerald was official photographer for the Boston Symphony Orchestra during their recent 13-country tour of Europe.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS-CUTTING BUREAU
184, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.2.

Extract from
EAST AFRICAN STANDARD
NAIROBI

Date

SARTORIAL PROGRESS IN RUSSIA

MANY foreign tourists visiting the Soviet Union this year have found that the Russians are gradually becoming fashion-conscious, after many years of apparent indifference to dress standards set by the Western world.

The new process is clearly slow, and is hampered by the limited quantity and poor quality of certain kinds of consumer goods.

But visitors who have returned to the Soviet Union this summer after an absence of, say, two years, have noticed a marked inmprovement in the standard of women's dress.

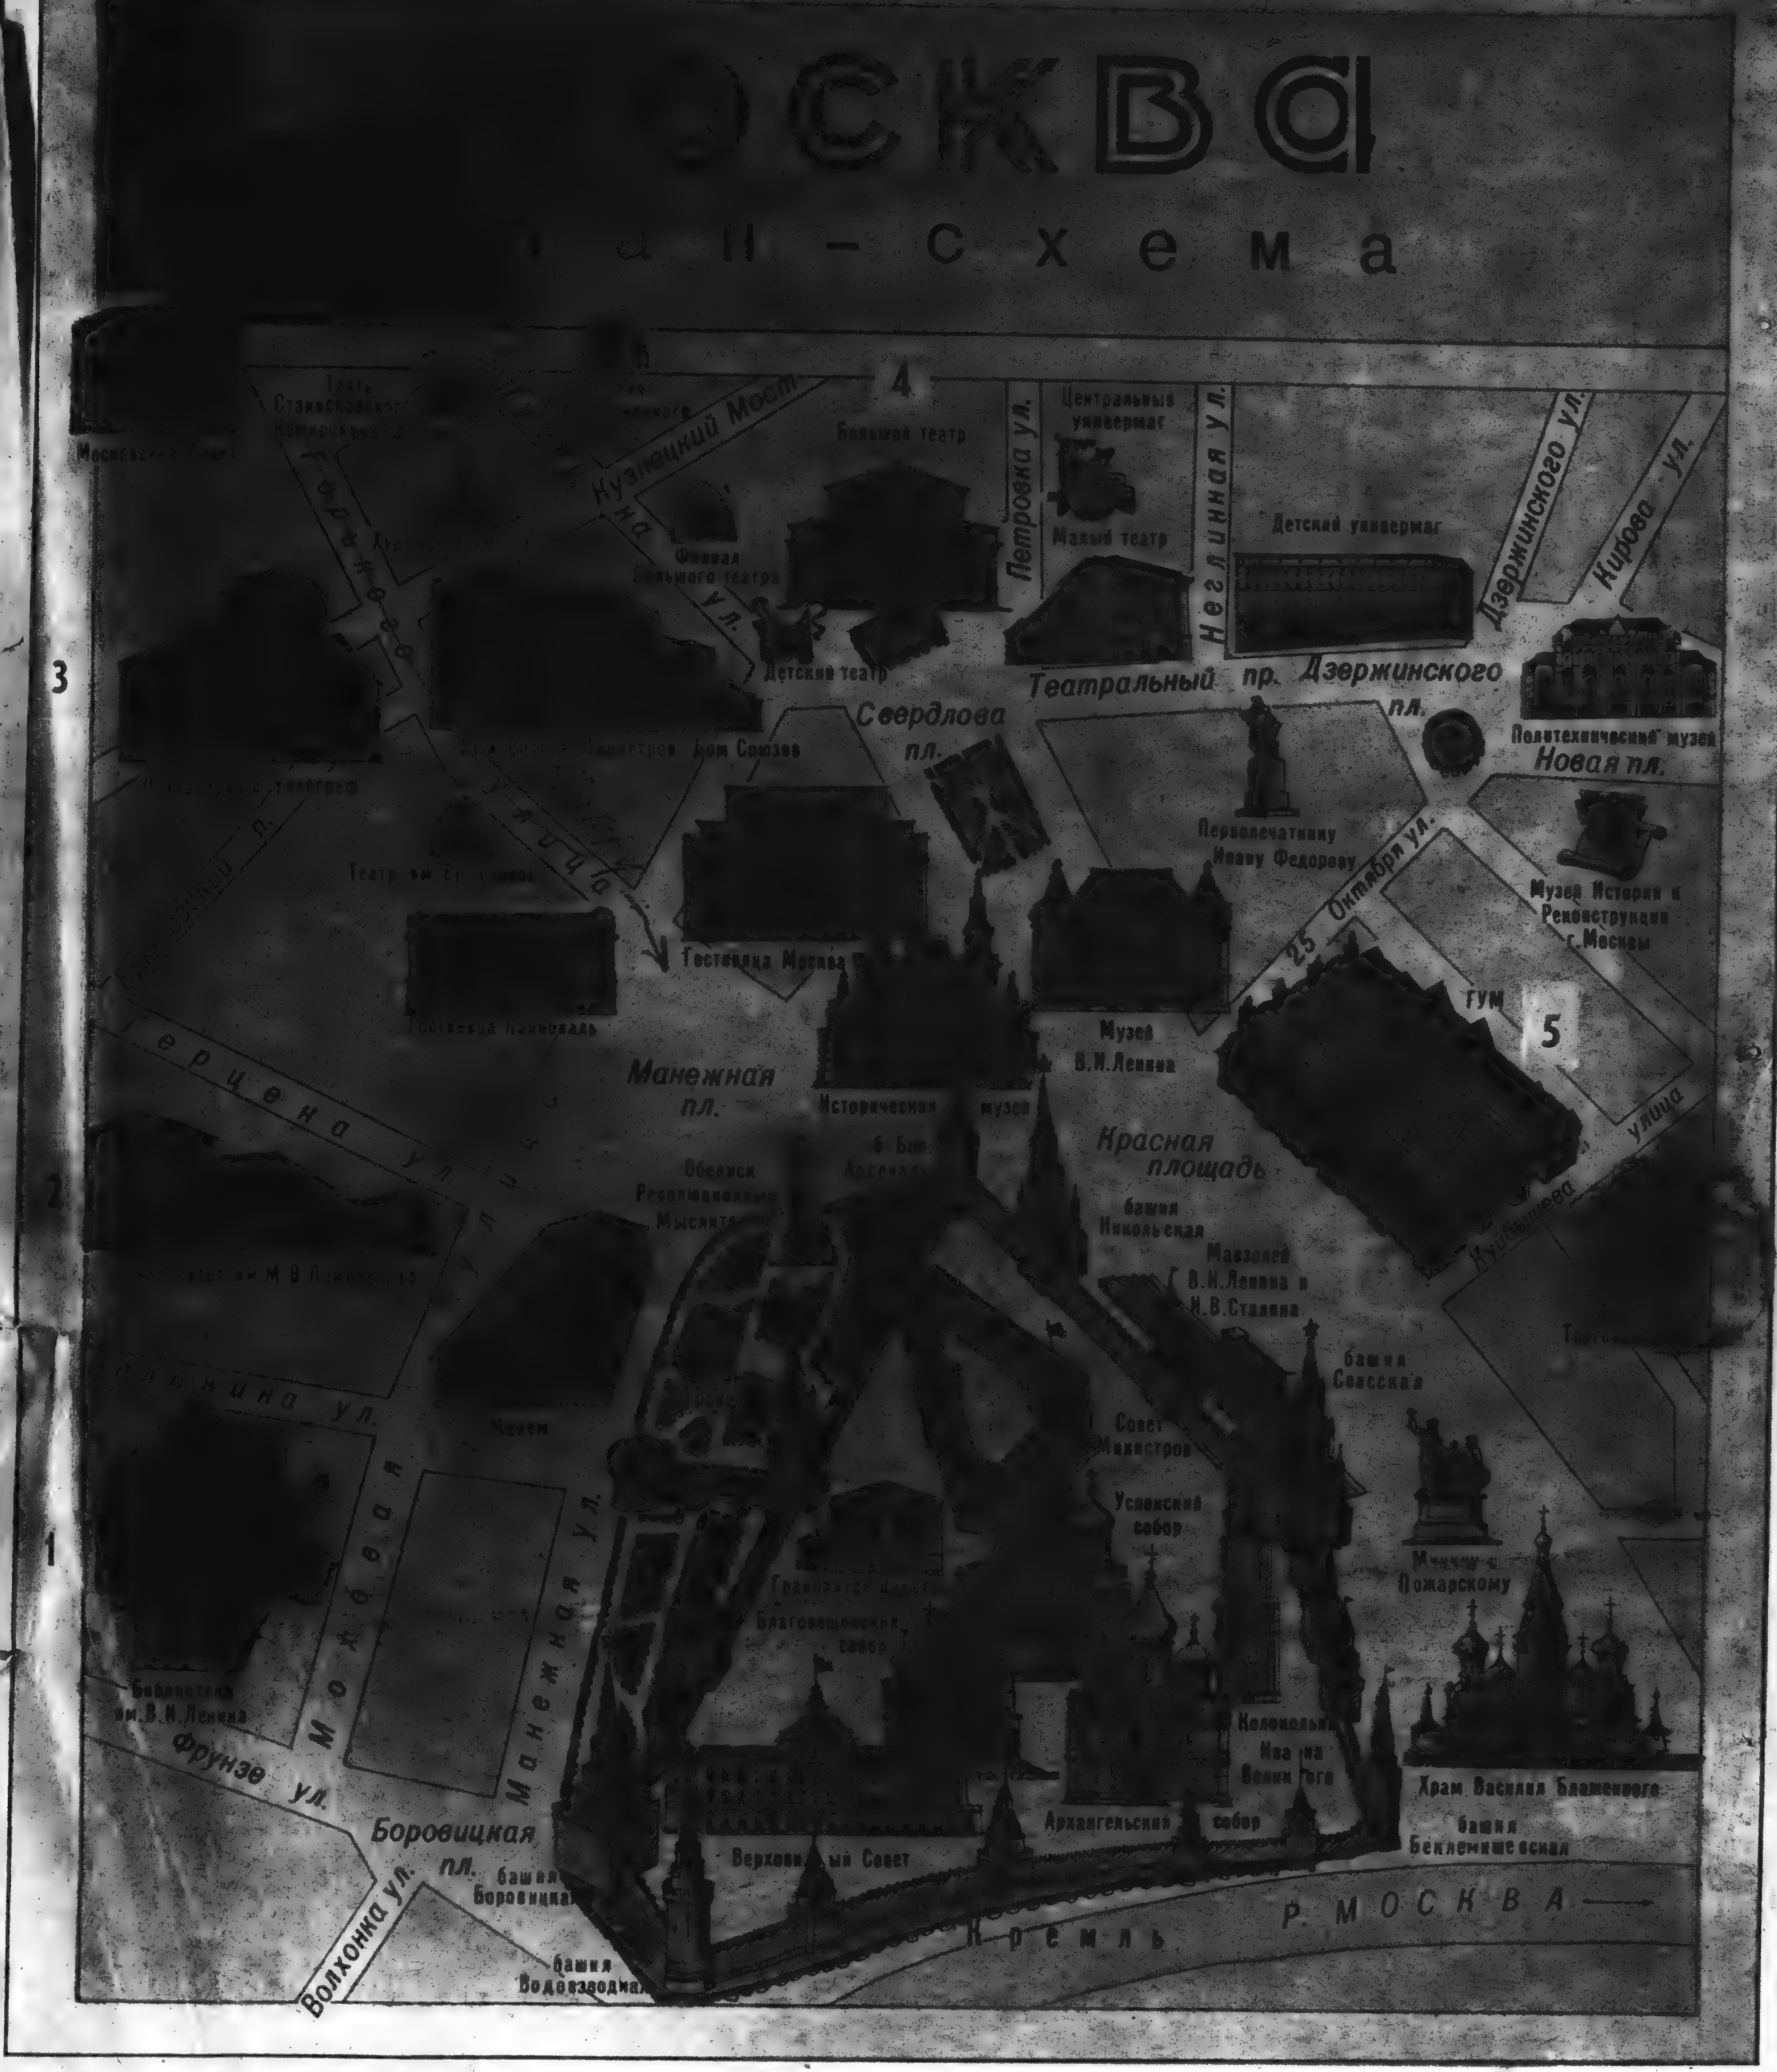
The change in men's attire is less perceptible, though it is significant that a daily dress show presented by one of Moscow's leading stores includts a show of male attire.

Daily dress show

This one-hour daily dress show is organised on Western lines, with a woman commentator who evidently has price, detail and size of the goods displayed memorised down to the last detail.

Clothes are also once more beginning to have a place in the social scheme of things. Functions at which everyone is in evening dress are rare, but a kind of half-way house has been reached.

During the Boston Symphony Orchestra's recent visit to Moscow, for instance, the enthusiastic Russian audience, which included the cream of the capital's intelligentsia, included many men in dress suits and women in low-cut gowns. (Reuter)



ОСКВА
ан-схема
Кузнецкий Мост
Большой театр
Петровка ул.
Центральный универмаг
Малый театр
Неглинная ул.
Детский универмаг
Дзержинского ул.
Кирова ул.
Детский театр
Театральный пр.
Дзержинского пл.
Политехнический музей
Новая пл.
Свердлова пл.
Первопечатнику Ивану Федорову
25 Октября ул.
Музей Истории и Реконструкции г. Москвы
Гостиница Москва
ГУМ
Музей В.И.Ленина
Манежная пл.
Исторический музей
Красная площадь
башня Никольская
Мавзолей В.И.Ленина и И.В.Сталина
Герцена ул.
Куйбышева улица
башня Спасская
Совет Министров
Успенский собор
Минину и Пожарскому
Моховая
Манежная ул.
Библиотека им. В.И.Ленина
Фрунзе ул.
Боровицкая пл.
башня Боровицкая
Колокольня Ивана Великого
Храм Василия Блаженного
Архангельский собор
башня Беклемишевская
Верховный Совет
Р. МОСКВА
Кремль
Волхонка ул.
башня Водовзводная
1
2
3
4
5

THE HEART OF RUSSIA—Rudolph Elie, The Herald's Roving Eye, brought back an unusual map of Moscow from his travels in Russia with the Boston Symphony. Reproduced here, perhaps for the first time in America, is the detail of the Kremlin, the walled citadel on the banks of the Moskva river. Enclosed in this area, which is nearly a mile long, is the Supreme Soviet (lower left), the Cathedral of the Annunciation, the Cathedral of the Assumption and the Archangelsky Cathedral. The tower to the right, whose spire points directly at the tomb of Lenin and Stalin outside the wall in Red Square, is that of Ivan the Great. The triangular building, top center, is the Council of the Ministry. Each tower gate along the crenellated walls has a name, that at the top of the Kremlin walls being known as the Tower of the Arsenal. To its left, outside the walls, is the obelisk in memory of the Revolution. Lower right, dominating vast Red Square, is the Cathedral of Basil the Beatified. As national shrines, the Kremlin and the Lenin Mausoleum are visited daily by tens of thousands of Russians. Other buildings in the detail are 1. Lenin Library, 2. Lomanosov University, 3. Telegraph Office, 4. Bolshoi Theater, and 5. GUM department store. Gorky street, the principal shopping street, begins top left and leads to Red Square from behind the Historical Museum outside the walls above the Arsenal Tower. The whole area shown represents but two squares in the complete map of the city, which contains 144 squares, conveying some idea of the immensity of this city of about nine million people.

BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, NOV. 18, 1956—29

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Pawtuxet Valley
Times (e)
W. WARWICK, R. I.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 7,655

NOV 19 1956

On that occasion the Western | have started."

C. F. Physician Toured With Hub Symphony

Says Average Russian Doesn't Want War

"'We don't want war.'

"Just about anywhere you go in Russia the average man on the street is apt to tell you that," said Dr. Keran Chobanian of Central Falls and Boston.

"But you must realize this is not the position of the government. Russian citizens and government officials are completely distinct types," the youthful Boston cardiologist said as he relaxed at "home."

The doctor calls 368 Central street, Central Falls, his home. That is where his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Van Chobanian, reside.

Dr. Chobanian gathered his impressions of Russia on a recent tour with the Boston Symphony orchestra. The orchestra toured 13 European countries. The doctor made the trip as medical officer.

"The people on the streets of both Leningrad and Moscow"—the orchestra played two concerts in each city—"are warm and friendly. But their standard of living is quite low, their clothes are drab and their faces have a gray, expressionless cast.

✦✦✦

"TO LOOK at the people en masse will show them almost as mechanical beings, as controlled by push-buttons. They seem to be going through the motions of life in mechanical fashion. However, once you get to know them individually you see that they are intelligent and friendly people.

"But government officials are completely different. They are stereotype beings. They are difficult to know as human beings. In fact they are almost a neuter being. However, these government officers were cordial, considerate and civil in manner. But there was always a barrier between you and the man.

"The distinction between the Russian citizen and government official is a vast one. We Americans should realize there is a difference. The Russian people are friendly, regular type folk, but are being forced to live almost mechanical lives.

"The Russian citizen is able to express what he feels he should express rather than what he wants to express. For example when you see Russians standing in line waiting to view the bodies of Lenin and Stalin you feel the Russians are doing this because it is the thing to do and not because they wish to worship at the shrine or to satisfy curiosity."

✦✦✦

TO ILLUSTRATE the warmness and friendliness of the Russian people Dr. Chobanian pointed to his conversation with musical composer Aram Khachaturian. Mr. Khachaturian is probably best known in this country for his "Sabre Dance" composition. The musical selection attained fame several years ago in the popular music field.

"Mr. Khachaturian regrets that he is known best by the 'Sabre Dance' for he feels it is not his best musical composition," Dr. Chobanian said.

The doctor was the only person on the trip who could converse with the composer. Both speak Armenian.

"Khachaturian is a tall, solidly built man with keen eyes. He has a fine sense of humor. His voice is a resonant baritone and he speaks in a pleasant manner. He resembles somewhat in features movie actor Victor Mature," said the doctor.

✦✦✦

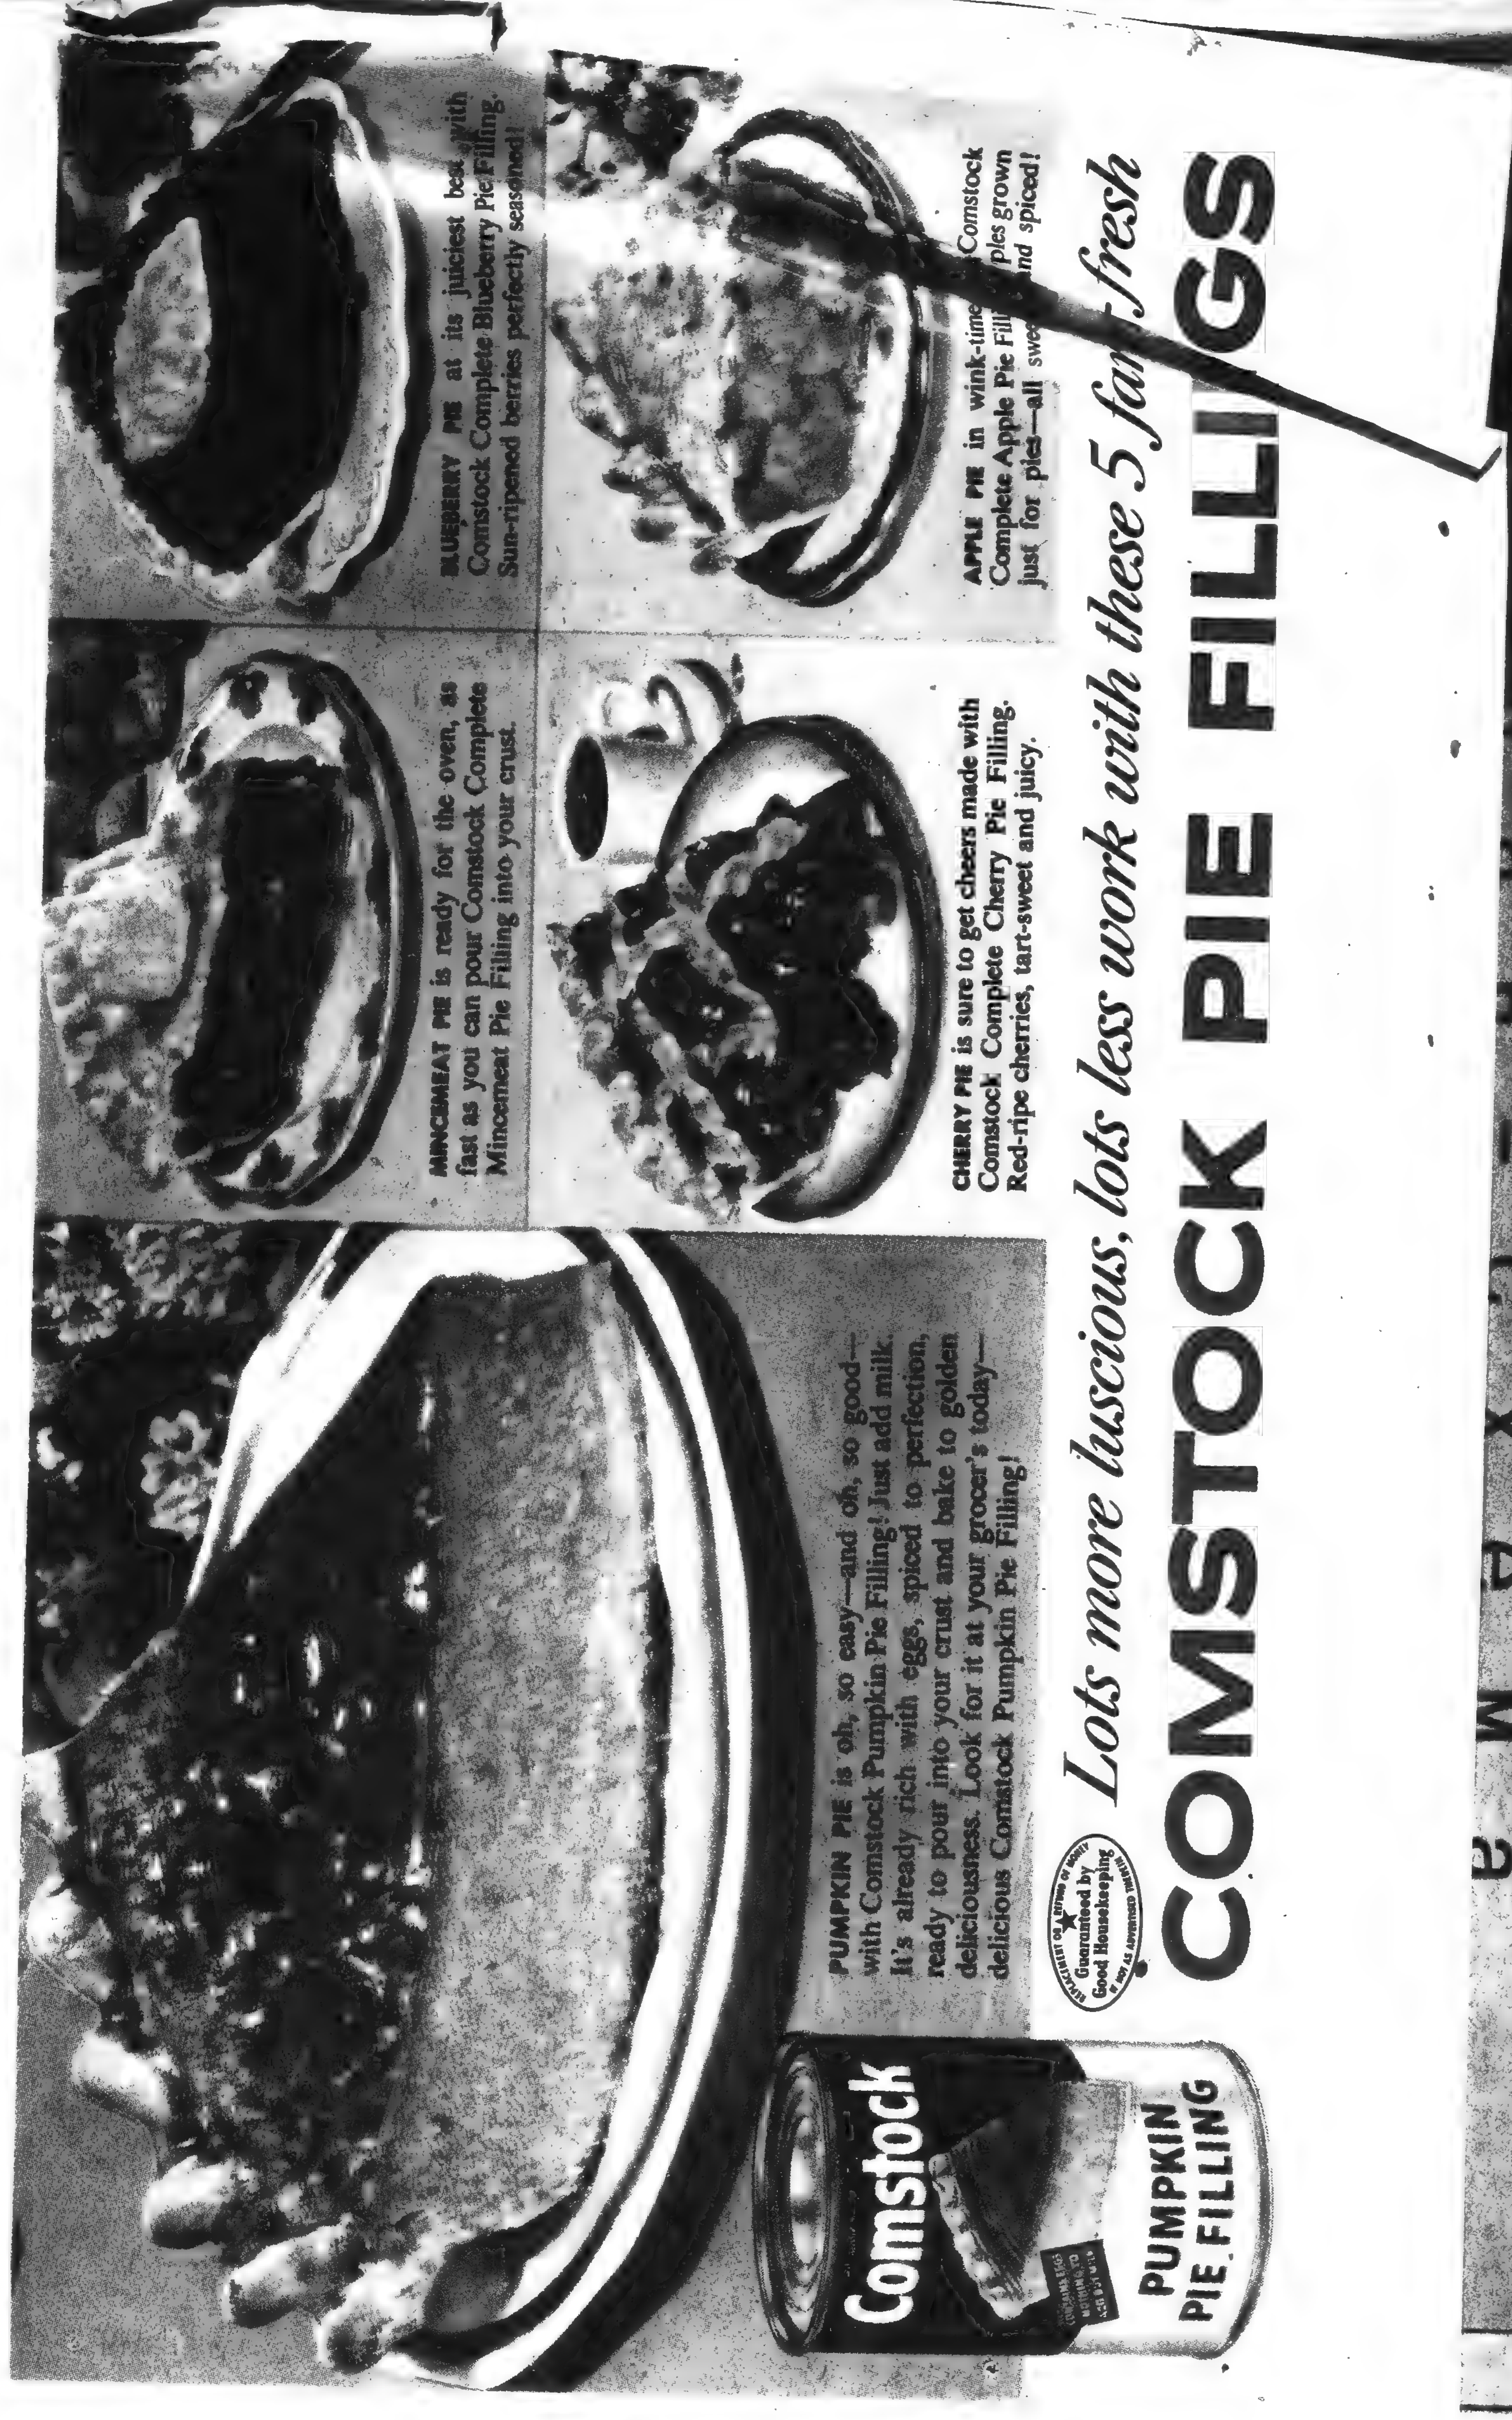
THE COMPOSER attended every concert and "thought the orchestra was the best he had ever heard," the doctor recounted.

"The Russians were anxious to learn about the United States, and music gave a method of communication. When the Russians hear a fine orchestra they reason that people who have such an orchestra must be good," the doctor said.

Doctor Chobanian said that the common cold caused the greatest health problem on the trip. "When you are in such confined quarters one cold spreads like wild fire. Some of the colds developed into pneumonia, but for the most part the group remained in good health."

"Colds were of a particular nuisance to those who played wind instruments. But despite physical ailments the musicians carried on. Members of the orchestra have a fine 'esprit de corps' and seem to give their best at the most crucial time."

SPEAKING OF MUSIC—Dr. Keran Chobanian, left, official physician for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, chats with Mrs. Aram Khachaturian and her husband, famed Russian composer of Armenian descent. Picture was taken in Russia during symphony's recent tour.



Lots more luscious, lots less work with these 5 fa[illegible] fresh

COMSTOCK PIE FILLINGS

PUMPKIN PIE is oh, so easy—and oh, so good—with Comstock Pumpkin Pie Filling! Just add milk. It's already rich with eggs, spiced to perfection, ready to pour into your crust and bake to golden deliciousness. Look for it at your grocer's today—delicious Comstock Pumpkin Pie Filling!

CHERRY PIE is sure to get cheers made with Comstock Complete Cherry Pie Filling. Red-ripe cherries, tart-sweet and juicy.

APPLE PIE in wink-tim[illegible] Comstock Complete Apple Pie Fill[illegible] [illegible]ples grown just for pies—all swe[illegible]nd spiced!

MINCEMEAT PIE is ready for the oven, as fast as you can pour Comstock Complete Mincemeat Pie Filling into your crust.

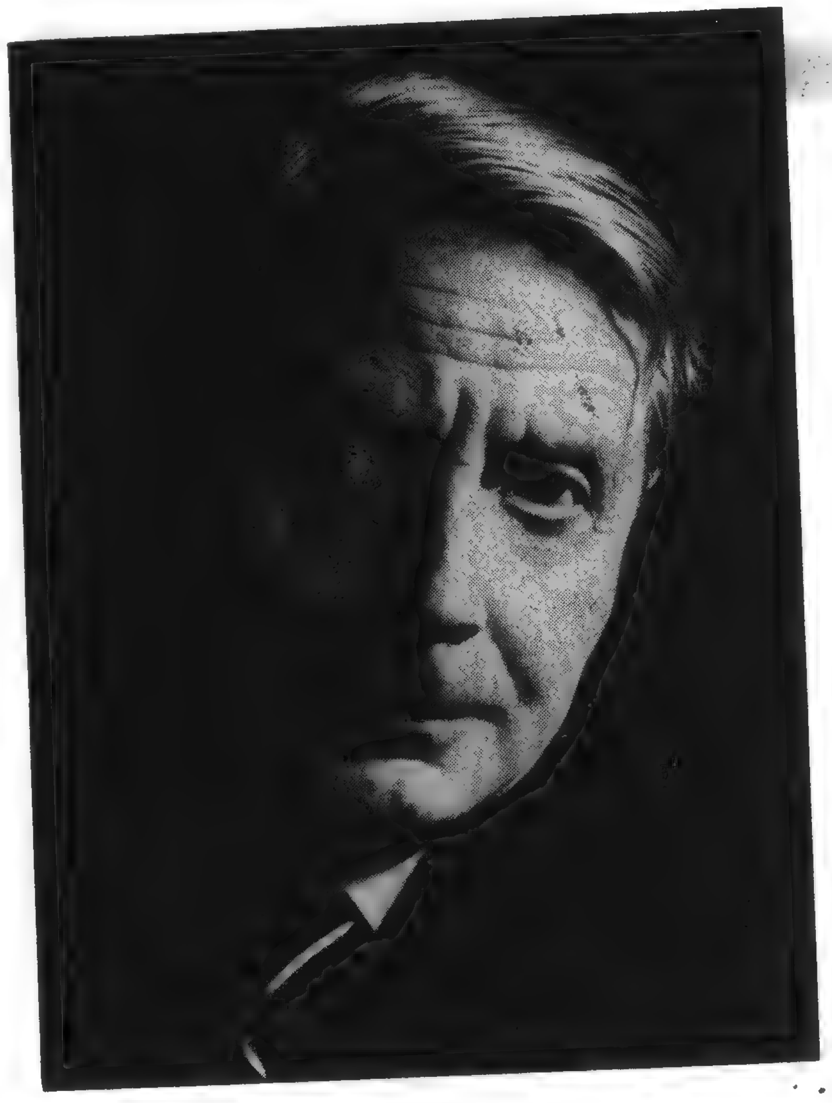
BLUEBERRY PIE at its juiciest best with Comstock Complete Blueberry Pie Filling. Sun-ripened berries perfectly seasoned!

МОСКВА

лан - схема

The Boston Symphony

Nov. 1956



THE PROGRAM WILL BE:

The Paris Symphony in D ....Mozart

Iberia ....Debussy

Symphony No. 6 (Pathetique) ....Tchaikovsky

ON Thursday evening, November 15, The Boston Symphony Orchestra, fresh from its triumphs from the Edinburgh Festival to Leningrad and Moscow, returns in its 24th Forum concert, with its musical director, Charles Munch, conducting.

From all reports the Boston men have been received with tumultuous enthusiasm everywhere in Europe. Of all these concerts probably the most unusual setting, and certainly the most beautiful, was that of the first symphony concert ever permitted in glorious Chartres Cathedral.

Under the headline "Edinburgh Roundup. Rainy Season in Scotland No Obstacle to Boston Symphony's Success," Stephen Williams, reporting to The New York Times on their five concerts at the Festival, wrote "The Boston Symphony has lifted critics and public to a plane of reckless rapture. Never heard anything like it has been a common remark after each concert as we fought for our umbrellas, mackintoshes and overshoes before plunging once more into the blinding rains.

"More than one critic pronounced it to be the finest orchestra in existence, and most agreed that it played better than the New York Philharmonic-Symphony last year. The Manchester Guardian even mentioned some other world-famous orchestras and proceeded to demonstrate how superior the Boston was, and why."

BUT there is no need of telling Forum Members of the Boston Symphony's greatness; they have heard it for themselves.

No other symphony orchestra in the world is quite so busy as this one. The winter season in Symphony Hall, the Orchestra's Boston home, ends in April, and then begins, under Arthur Fiedler, the Pops season of sixty concerts, followed by two weeks of free open-air concerts on the Charles River Esplanade, and the six weeks of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. In 1952 the Orchestra toured Europe, in 1953 went westward as far as San Francisco, this year as far eastward as Moscow, the first American orchestra ever to play in the U.S.S.R.

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, Dec. 16, A—A more difficult test-program could scarcely be devised than the one Munch selected for this concert—Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes," Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," and Beethoven's "Pastoral" Symphony. The complexity and virtuosic demands of the first two works, comprising the first half of the program, were stunningly realized in readings that were not merely brilliant or showy but genuinely exciting. The piquancy and wit of Stravinsky's "Card Game" were carried off with such finesse and miraculous transparency that an afterthought was needed to remind one that the music alone, without the programmatic support of the ballet itself, is overlong and structurally weak. The Barber work is a masterpiece of our time. The overpowering fury of the final pages is merely the culmination of a score that is so successful in giving musical expression to the psychological conflicts of a wronged woman that it is really not necessary at all to consult the program notes. At the conclusion of this tour de force, the audience burst into a storm of applause almost as deafening as the terrifying climax of the work itself. In the "Pastoral" Symphony, which followed the intermission, one might have been prepared for a certain relaxation of effort in keeping with the program of the work. But in this completely opposite mood, a perfect foil, conductor and orchestra were beautifully responsive to the subtleties and graces of a work which, by virtue of these very qualities, often becomes flaccid and tedious. W. C.

[173]

Their Only Joint Recital in America

"The Queen of Song" and "The Greatest Baritone of our Time"

ON Thursday evening, November 1, two of Europe's greatest recital artists, Irmgaard Seefried, leading soprano of the Vienna State Opera, and Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau (pronounced dees-kow), leading baritone of the Berlin State Opera, will make their Philadelphia debut in their only joint recital in America, in Hugo Wolf's Aus dem Italienisches Liederbuch (From the Italian Book of Songs), one of the greatest song cycles in German musical literature. So heavy is Mr. Fischer-Dieskau's European schedule that he consented to only nine appearances in America this season.

Mme. Seefried made her American debut five years ago with the Cincinnati Symphony under the direction of Thor Johnson. Already acclaimed in Europe as a brilliant opera singer, recitalist and soloist with orchestra, she completely captivated her first American audience and was hailed by the press as an exciting discovery. More praise and an ever-increasing enthusiasm followed every appearance she has made in this country.

Irmgaard Seefried was born into a musical family in Bavaria. She made her operatic debut in Aachen and was soon engaged by the Vienna Opera, where she has been for a dozen years. As a recitalist she has developed into one of the world's finest lieder singers.

MR. FISCHER-DIESKAU also made his American debut with the Cincinnati Symphony, in April of a year ago, and of this concert Musical America reported "His voice is remarkably sonorous, his singing masterful in matters of diction, breath control and profundity of interpretation. He is a singer of first magnitude." And the Cincinnati Enquirer said that "he has few rivals in the art of singing among the world's best known male singers." He had been slated to become a conductor when he entered the Berlin Conservatory of Music at the age of sixteen. Since 1947 he has been a distinguished baritone of the Berlin State Opera. Widely known on the Continent as a recitalist, he has achieved international fame through his broadcasts and recordings. He, like Mme. Seefried, has performed in all the major festivals in Europe, including Bayreuth and Edinburgh.

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, Dec. 16, A—A more difficult test-program could scarcely be devised than the one Munch selected for this concert—Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes," Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," and Beethoven's "Pastoral" Symphony. The complexity and virtuosic demands of the first two works, comprising the first half of the program, were stunningly realized in readings that were not merely brilliant or showy but genuinely exciting. The piquancy and wit of Stravinsky's "Card Game" were carried off with such finesse and miraculous transparency that an afterthought was needed to remind one that the music alone, without the programmatic support of the ballet itself, is overlong and structurally weak. The Barber work is a masterpiece of our time. The overpowering fury of the final pages is merely the culmination of a score that is so successful in giving musical expression to the psychological conflicts of a wronged woman that it is really not necessary at all to consult the program notes. At the conclusion of this tour de force, the audience burst into a storm of applause almost as deafening as the terrifying climax of the work itself. In the "Pastoral" Symphony, which followed the intermission, one might have been prepared for a certain relaxation of effort in keeping with the program of the work. But in this completely opposite mood, a perfect foil, conductor and orchestra were beautifully responsive to the subtleties and graces of a work which, by virtue of these very qualities, often becomes flaccid and tedious. W. C.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
65 Church Street - New York

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JAN 1 1957

Boston Symphony Plays Barber Work

Boston Symphony, Charles Munch, conductor. Carnegie Hall, Dec. 15, 2:30:

"Jeu de Cartes" .... Stravinsky
"Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" .... Barber
Symphony No. 6.............. Beethoven

The Boston Symphony was in fine form in this concert. Though the Beethoven and the Stravinsky were elegantly played, it was Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" that provided the most exciting experience. Mr. Munch and the orchestra fully captured the tragic grandeur of this magnificent work, the sound was always opulent, and the climax electrifying.

This writer has always considered Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes" or a "Ballet in Three Deals" a little on the dullish side, but it was given a colorful and lively performance, and the woodwinds provided some fine playing. Beethoven's "Pastoral" fared equally well, except the final movement. Here the atmosphere seemed more hectic than peaceful, and the violins were occasionally strident in sound. But the performance of the other movements was another story, for their melodies flowed naturally.

—F. M., Jr.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JAN 1 1957

Boston Symphon
Impressively Vari

Boston.—An impressively varied list which, in one way or another, could hardly have failed to satisfy everyone, was offered by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony at Symphony Hall on Nov. 30 and Dec. 1. Honegger's Second Symphony, which wears well and becomes more attractive upon every hearing, was solid fare for the modernist segment of the public; the Second Suite from Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane", now become a real Munch war horse, for he conducts it stunningly, was another such.

For those of conservative tastes, Bach's "Wedding Cantata" (really the second of the two he composed), "Weichet nur, betruebte Schatten", was ideal, not least so because soprano Irmgard Seefried was soloist and sang Bach celestially. Mr. Munch used a genuine chamber-sized orchestra for the cantata: eight each of first and second violins; six violas, four cellos and one double bass, plus harpsichord (Daniel Pinkham) for continuo and recitative accompaniment, and solo oboe (the orchestra's excellent Ralph Gomberg.) This was a most chaste and delicate performance.

Four "Marienleben" Songs

Miss Seefried further was heard in three of the four "Marienleben" songs which Hindemith set for orchestra (in revised version) in 1938. They were "The Birth of Mary", "Joseph's Doubt" and "The Birth of Christ". They are impressive, though it still strikes me that the genius of Hindemith is essentially instrumental and not vocal.

The symphony program a week later was a most comfortable one, with much to ease the spirit and nothing to tax the mind. It consisted of Benjamin Britten's Variations on a Theme by Frank Bridge; Ibert's "Escales", and the "Pastoral" Symphony of Beethoven. (One should add that the list was a compromise between original plan and later necessity; Mr. Munch had intended to give the premiere of Sir William Walton's Cello Concerto, but the illness of Gregor Piatigorsky has deferred that event until January.) Apart from a lack of precise balance between sections in the symphony, which added a little surface coarseness to the texture, everything went well, indeed.

Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla", the Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto with Edith Stearns as piano soloist, and Schubert's "Great" C major Symphony made up the program. It was too long and perceptibly fatigued the musicians, who, however, are a good body of players. Miss Stearns played nimbly, but in too ladylike a fashion.

That Leon Fleisher has remarkable capacity for playing Schubert was established last season. When he returned to Jordan Hall on Nov. 25 (Boston University Celebrity Series), he reinforced the impression by his fine, lyrical account of seven Ländler from Op. 171. Beethoven's D major Sonata, Op. 10, No. 3, went pretty well, too, although the Largo e mesto was taken so slow the phrases almost fell apart at the outset. With Debussy's "La Cathédrale Engloutie" and Ravel's "Valses nobles et sentimentales", Mr. Fleisher betrayed his age, for the interpretive cunning demanded by these pieces usually arrives only with middle years. Ravel's "Alborada del gracioso", on the other

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888

Pitts. Press Dec
DEC. 12, 1956

Show Shops

Cultural Exchange Road to Peace?

Maybe, But Couriers Returning From Russia Have Doubts—Other Items

By KASPAR MONAHAN

You've probably read about the "good will" visit to Russia of the "Porgy & Bess" company. Such jaunts, all of us would like to believe, might well be the opening wedge to lasting peace between Soviet Russia and the United States.

On the surface it appears so simple, groups of artists, armed with nothing but their talents, wave the olive branch behind the Iron Curtain. The people of Russia find in art a common bond with these emissaries from America. So, gradually, with an interchange of performing groups, suspicion and fear give way to trust and tolerance.

* * *

So all humanity rejoices as the threat of total war vanishes from the earth.

However, anyone who has read Truman Capote's illuminating two articles recently in the New Yorker, may be excused if he views this dream through foggy bifocals. And if he talks as I did to another man who accompanied another group to Leningrad and Moscow, the "peace-through-interchange-of-culture" movement fades into the mists of wishful thinking.

This latest courier from afar is my old friend Walter Alford, press representative of the Playwrights Company. For a change of pace this year he joined up with Boston Symphony for a foreign tour which included a brief visit to the Soviet Republic—for two concerts in Leningrad and three in Moscow.

* * *

The visitors were treated nicely and the concerts were well received—but by whom? The Russian peasantry, workers, ordinary men and women? Mr. Alvord shook his head. Just government officials and a favored few with the price of a ticket to the concerts.

"On the streets people would avert their heads after looking at us and deducing from our clothing that we were Americans," Walter said. "I noted the women scurrying along in the bitter cold (this was in September) carrying a few withered apples or vegetables. Their faces were unsmiling—always.

* * *

"Most fascinating, though morbid, were the long queues of people stretching as far as from here — your desk — to the Nixon Theater—waiting to look at the bodies of Lenin and Stalin. They'd file silently by, faces expressionless as the guards watched closely. The hands of the two dead leaders were in sight—and dirt still there under their finger nails. Yes—we were all permitted to gape at the grisly sight, too."

* * *

The Russian musicians were most friendly and warm, Walter said. In Leningrad the American musicians were met at the airport by members of the city's symphony orchestra.

In the drive to the hotel, the Russians would point to various spots where they dropped their violins to take up machine guns against the Nazi hordes besieging the city.

"The Russians indicated they'd like to send their artists to the United States," Walter continued. "But they want to send tourists along, too."

"Tourists?" I echoed. "And these tourists would be busy peeking and —"

"Yep," said Walter. "And there's the rub."

Then he switched the subject to "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," next week's show at the Nixon.

* * *

Trixie and Ferris Robins, dance instructors, will present a group of their students in their own productions, "Fantasia of 1956" at the Variety Club's Christmas party next Sunday—1:30 to 5 p. m. — in the Pittsburgh Room of the Penn-Sheraton. Guests will be children from the city's foster homes, as well as nine Hungarian refugees and the children of Club members . . . James Sinott, president of Yellow Cab Co., will provide cabs and drivers for transporting the children and the affair will have Bill Hinds as emcee.

* * *

Unique dinner party tossed by Cinerama staff, celebrating the third birthday of the wonder-medium in our town. The menu at the Oliver Restaurant was made up of exotic dishes from remote places featured in "Seven Wonders of the World" . . . A huge birthday cake remained untouched—so on my suggestion Arthur Manson, publicity director for Cinerama, called Walter Rome, superintendent of Children's Hospital — and Walter said, "Great bring it here, the kids will love it." So an extra treat for the little shut-ins.

Guild Theater will add matinee showings through the holidays, starting on Friday, Dec. 21. On that day the house, taking its cue from the Fulton, will offer a bargain bill, its current feature plus its next picture, "Secrets of the Reef." Latter opens regular run next day.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DETROIT, MICH.
TIMES
Circ. D. 408,705 - S. 521,878

JAN 11 1957

Interlochen Group Polish Trip Seen

Detroit Times Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11—Senator Potter said today the state department was interested in sending the national high school orchestra trained at Interlochen to Poland next September.

Cost of the trip would be shared by the U. S. and Polish governments. Poland has extended an official invitation to the amateur orchestra of 100 boys and girls from all parts of the country..

STARVED FOR NEWS

Stating that this would be the first time such a group had traveled abroad under official auspices, Potter said:

"Young people behind the Iron Curtain are starved for news of the free world. We have no finer ambassadors of good will than intelligent, talented and properly briefed young Americans. This is an assault on the European concept that American youth does nothing but chew gum and ride hot rods."

Cultural exchange arranged by the U. S. Information Service heretofore has been limited to professionals. Last September, the Boston Symphony Orchestra made a successful tour of Russia.

LONG-TIME DREAM

Under the program being studied by the state department, this government would pay transportation for the high school orchestra from Traverse City to Poland and that country would finance costs within its borders.

The proposed trip is a long-time dream of Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, president of the national music camp.

Members of the orchestra will be taught a minimum of 300 words of Polish before embarking, enough to allow them to communicate satisfactorily. They also will receive special briefings in Polish customs and history.

In inviting the group, the Polish government said the tour would contribute to world friendship and the development of better relations with the United States. Polish officials said they hoped it would be followed by a visit of young Polish musicians to the United States.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

MUSICAL COURIER
(NEW YORK CITY)

JAN 1 1957

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dec. 12, E—With Charles Munch conducting, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its second concert of the season with Honegger's Symphony No. 2 for string orchestra. Honegger's style is particularly familiar to Mr. Munch, who was a close friend of the late composer. His interpretation was as much a matter of the heart as it was a display of exquisite musicianship. The rather pessimistic attitude of the work is one of the finest documents of our dark times, and the reflection of an artistic mind to the problems of today. The performance was faultless.

Irmgard Seefried, soloist of the evening sang Bach's "Wedding Cantata." An excellent musician, she mastered all the stylistic requirements of this work to the full. Her fine phrasing was remarkable, her rendition of the melodic line admirable, and her mastery in the coloratura parts equally astonishing. She was justly f[illegible]ed. The same virtues distinguished her interpretation of songs from Hindemith's "Marienleben." Here, Miss Seefried reached the pinnacle of re-creative art in projecting the beautiful Rilke poems with Hindemith's craftsmanlike score, which is also one of his most inspired. Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" Suite, a late-romantic work which exhibited the brilliance of the orchestra with great effectiveness, closed the evening.

H. W. L.

MUSICAL LEADER January 1957

New York

(Continued from page 2)

ness; and the Temple University Chorus. We found the work tremendously vital and impressive. The first half of the program served as appertif: Vivaldi-Molinari's Concerto Grosso in A major — "Echo" — for Two Violins and Strings, and Miss Gueden in beautiful performances of Mozart's "Non temer amato bene" from "Idomeneo" and Zerbinetta's aria from Strauss' "Ariadne auf Naxos." . . . Ernest Ansermet, distinguished Swiss conductor, will be the first of the guest conductors to appear with the Philadelphians during Maestro Ormandy's European jaunt . . . Paul Kletski will make his American debut with the Philadelphia Orchestra Feb. 14, 1958, and will also appear in his New York debut with the same orchestra on Feb. 18 . . . Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra will travel through 20 states to play 39 concerts in 32 American cities after the close of its season in the Academy of Music, Philadelphia . . .

Boston Symphony. At its Dec. 15 concert this season, the Boston Symphony, under Charles Munch, performed a beautifully balanced program. First, there was Stravinsky's ballet music, "Jeu de Cartes" (Card Game), a delightful confection performed with a jocular touch. Then there was Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," a work of sombre power and dark shadings. But it was Beethoven's "Pastoral" Symphony which shone brightest in this trio of performances . . . Richard Burgin will conduct the concerts of the Boston Symphony in Boston for two weeks after Christmas and through the tour of the Orchestra. Mr. Burgin is the concertmaster of the Boston Symphony . . .

Boston Symphony Plays Barber Work

Boston Symphony, Charles Munch, conductor. Carnegie Hall, Dec. 15, 2:30:

"Jeu de Cartes" .... Stravinsky
"Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" .... Barber
Symphony No. 6 .... Beethoven

The Boston Symphony was in fine form in this concert. Though the Beethoven and the Stravinsky were elegantly played, it was Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" that provided the most exciting experience. Mr. Munch and the orchestra fully captured the tragic grandeur of this magnificent work, the sound was always opulent, and the climax electrifying.

This writer has always considered Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes" or a "Ballet in three Deals" a little on the dullish side, but it was given a colorful and lively performance, and the woodwinds provided some fine playing. Beethoven's "Pastoral" fared equally well, except the final movement. Here the atmosphere seemed more hectic than peaceful, and the violins were occasionally strident in sound. But the performance of the other movements was another story, for their melodies flowed naturally.

—F. M., Jr.

Irmgard Seefried, soprano soloist with the Boston Symphony on Dec. 12

Seefried Sings With Boston Symphony

Boston Symphony, Charles Munch, conductor. Irmgard Seefried, soprano. Carnegie Hall, Dec. 12:

Symphony No. 2 for String Orchestra .... Honegger
Cantata, "Weichet nur, betrübte Schatten" .... Bach
Songs from "Das Marienleben" .... Hindemith
"Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2 .... Roussel

When Bach cannot hold his own on a program with three present-day composers, it is a fact, I suppose, worth noting. The little "Wedding" Cantata for soprano and orchestra is not, however, one of the great man's towering efforts. It is a mild, undramatic, rather platitudinous work within a small frame happily relieved in two arias by violin and oboe solos. These were beautifully played by Richard Burgin and Ralph Gomberg, respectively. Another factor in the rather pale effect of the work was the seeming inappropriateness of the music to Miss Seefried's voice. She was singing very high and with much restraint most of the time, and for a singer with a basically operatic technique this is a difficult and usually unrewarding thing to do. The orchestra was properly reduced in numbers and the harpsichord continuo was carefully played by Daniel Pinkham.

Boston Symphony Presents Impressively Varied List

Boston.—An impressively varied list which, in [illegible] way or another, could [illegible] to satisfy everyone, [illegible] by Charles Munch and [illegible] Symphony at Symphony [illegible] on [illegible] 30 and Dec. 1. Hone[illegible] Symphony, which [illegible] becomes more attrac[illegible] every hearing, was solid [illegible] the modern segment of the [illegible] the Second Suite from Rou[illegible] "Bacchus and Ariane", now beco[illegible] Munch warhorse, for he [illegible] stunningly, was another such.

For [illegible] of conservative tastes, Bach's [illegible] Wedding Cantata" (really the se[illegible] of the two he composed), "Weich[illegible] betruebte Schatten", was [illegible] least so because soprano [illegible] Seefried was soloist and sang Bach celestially. Mr. Munch used a genuine chamber-sized orchestra for the cantata: eight each of first and second violins; six violas, four cellos and one double bass, plus harpsichord (Daniel Pinkham) for continuo and recitative accompaniment, and solo oboe (the orchestra's excellent Ralph Gomberg.) This was a most chaste and delicate performance.

Four "Marienleben" Songs

Miss Seefried further was heard in three of [illegible] four "Marienleben" songs which Hindemith set for orchestra (in revised version) in 1938. They were "The Birth of Mary", "Joseph's Doubt" and "The Birth of Christ". They are impressive, though it still strikes me that the genius of Hindemith is essentially instrumental and not vocal.

The symphony program a week later was a most comfortable one, with much to ease the spirit and nothing to tax the mind. It consisted of Benjamin Britten's Variations on a Theme by Frank Bridge; Ibert's "Escales", and the "Pastoral" Symphony of Beethoven. (One should add that the list was a compromise between original plan and later necessity; Mr. Munch had intended to give the premiere of Sir William Walton's Cello Concerto, but the illness of Gregor Piatigorsky has deferred that event until January.) Apart from a lack of precise balance between sections in the symphony, which added a little surface coarseness to the texture, everything went well, indeed.

While Haydn's "The Seven Last Words of Our Savior" is a frequent item, especially at Easter time, its original version for orchestra, is not. A musician high in the councils of the Cambridge Society for Early Music, which performed it at Sanders Theater on Dec. 3, opined this to be the first performance since Haydn's own time. Perhaps so, perhaps not, but in any event a rare hearing of the version. A group of Boston Symphony musicians, plus Erwin Bodky, harpsichord, and Paul Matthen, bass, merit approval for their enterprise. This concert ended the 1956 series of the Society.

Budapest Quartet Program

The Budapest Quartet has been here again, bringing joy to an audience which required numerous chairs to be placed on stage. A Beethoven program, consisting of the D major Quartet, Op. 18, No. 3; the Quartet in E flat, Op. 74, and the A minor Quartet, Op. 132, was played with superlative technique, style and feeling. (Jordan Hall, in the Boston University Celebrity Series, Nov. 28.)

Next night the Civic Symphony, whose conductor is Paul Cherkassky, began its 31st season at Jordan Hall. Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla", the Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto with Edith Stearns as piano soloist, and Schubert's "Great" C major Symphony made up the program. It was too long and perceptibly fatigued the musicians, who, however, are a good body of players. Miss Stearns played nimbly, but in too ladylike a fashion.

That Leon Fleisher has remarkable capacity for playing Schubert was established last season. When he returned to Jordan Hall on Nov. 25 (Boston University Celebrity Series), he reinforced the impression by his fine, lyrical account of seven Ländler from Op. 171. Beethoven's D major Sonata, Op. 10, No. 3, went pretty well, too, although the Largo e mesto was taken so slow the phrases almost fell apart at the outset. With Debussy's "La Cathédrale Engloutie" and Ravel's "Valses nobles et sentimentales", Mr. Fleisher betrayed his age, for the interpretive cunning demanded by these pieces usually arrives only with middle years. Ravel's "Alborada del gracioso", on the other hand, was really quite satisfying.

By this time Boston has tasted the marvelous qualities of the Vienna Philharmonic, which, one of the greatest orchestras of the world, has the discipline and the sensitivity of such organizations as the Berlin Philharmonic and the Amsterdam Concertgebouw orchestras, but also commands greater brilliance than either. Carl Schuricht's conducting was equally enthralling, through Weber's "Euryanthe" Overture and the D major Symphony (K. 181) of Mozart. But Bruckner's Seventh Symphony, in a reading of blaze and splendor, was something of which I had never heard the like before. (Symphony Hall, Dec. 2, in the Boston University Celebrity Series.)

Singher Replaces Simoneau

We were to have heard tenor Leopold Simoneau in his local debut at the second Boston Morning Musicale in aid of the Boston School of Occupational Therapy, in the Hotel Statler ballroom on Dec. 5. But illness supervened, and baritone Martial Singher did us all a good turn by replacing Mr. Simoneau. A several times Morning Musicales favorite, Mr. Singher again distinguished himself as a concert artist of great finesse and intimacy, with old music, an unusually contemplative performance of Boris' "I Have Attained the Greatest Power" from Mussorgsky's opera, and seven of Schumann's "Dichterliebe" songs.

The Handel and Haydn Society's annual performances (two) of "Messiah" again showed that the famed old organization continues at the peak of superiority to which Dr. Thompson Stone brought the chorus several years ago. This year the soloists were Alice Farnsworth Boffetti, a silken-voiced soprano; Harold Haugh, a musical tenor; Elsa Gerling, contralto, and Donald Gramm, to my mind one of the finest and most promising bass-baritone musicians of the time. (Symphony Hall, Dec. 9 and 10.)

The Golden Age Singers, who have been making lots of friends during their current (and first) tour in the United States, showed us their notable prowess in vocal polyphony at Jordan Hall (Boston University Celebrity Series) on Dec. 9. Nothing like this has been heard (on a commercial concert basis, at least) in our town since the English Singers bade us farewell in 1930.

—Cyrus Durgin

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DETROIT, MICH.
TIMES
Circ. D. 408,705 - S. 521,878
JAN 11 1957

Interlochen Group Polish Trip Seen

Detroit Times Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11—Senator Potter said today the state department was interested in sending the national high school orchestra trained at Interlochen to Poland next September.

Cost of the trip would be shared by the U. S. and Polish governments. Poland has extended an official invitation to the amateur orchestra of 100 boys and girls from all parts of the country.

STARVED FOR NEWS

Stating that this would be the first time such a group had traveled abroad under official auspices, Potter said:

"Young people behind the Iron Curtain are starved for news of the free world. We have no finer ambassadors of good will than intelligent, talented and properly briefed young Americans. This is an assault on the European concept that American youth does nothing but chew gum and ride hot rods."

Cultural exchange arranged by the U. S. Information Service heretofore has been limited to professionals. Last September, the Boston Symphony Orchestra made a successful tour of Russia.

LONG-TIME DREAM

Under the program being studied by the state department, this government would pay transportation for the high school orchestra from Traverse City to Poland and that country would finance costs within its borders.

The proposed trip is a long-time dream of Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, president of the national music camp.

Members of the orchestra will be taught a minimum of 300 words of Polish before embarking, enough to allow them to communicate satisfactorily. They also will receive special briefings in Polish customs and history.

In inviting the group, the Polish government said the tour would contribute to world friendship and the development of better relations with the United States. Polish officials said they hoped it would be followed by a visit of young Polish musicians to the United States.

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dec. 12, E—With Charles Munch conducting, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its second concert of the season with Honegger's Symphony No. 2 for string orchestra. Honegger's style is particularly familiar to Mr. Munch, who was a close friend of the late composer. His interpretation was as much a matter of the heart as it was a display of exquisite musicianship. The rather pessimistic attitude of the work is one of the finest documents of our dark times, and the reflection of an artistic mind to the problems of today. The performance was faultless.

Irmgard Seefried, soloist of the evening sang Bach's "Wedding Cantata." An excellent musician, she mastered all the stylistic requirements of this work to the full. Her fine phrasing was remarkable, her rendition of the melodic line admirable, and her mastery in the coloratura parts equally astonishing. She was justly feted. The same virtues distinguished her interpretation of songs from Hindemith's "Marienleben." Here, Miss Seefried reached the pinnacle of re-creative art in projecting the beautiful Rilke poems with Hindemith's craftsmanlike score, which is also one of his most inspired. Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" Suite, a late-romantic work which exhibited the brilliance of the orchestra with great effectiveness, closed the evening.

H. W. L.

MUSICAL LEADER January 1957

New York

(Continued from page 2)

ness; and the Temple University Chorus. We found the work tremendously vital and impressive. The first half of the program served as appertif: Vivaldi-Molinari's Concerto Grosso in A major — "Echo" — for Two Violins and Strings, and Miss Gueden in beautiful performances of Mozart's "Non temer amato bene" from "Idomeneo" and Zerbinetta's aria from Strauss' "Ariadne auf Naxos." . . . Ernest Ansermet, distinguished Swiss conductor, will be the first of the guest conductors to appear with the Philadelphians during Maestro Ormandy's European jaunt . . . Paul Kletski will make his American debut with the Philadelphia Orchestra Feb. 14, 1958, and will also appear in his New York debut with the same orchestra on Feb. 18 . . . Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra will travel through 20 states to play 39 concerts in 32 American cities after the close of its season in the Academy of Music, Philadelphia . . .

Boston Symphony. At its Dec. 15 concert this season, the Boston Symphony, under Charles Munch, performed a beautifully balanced program. First, there was Stravinsky's ballet music, "Jeu de Cartes" (Card Game), a delightful confection performed with a jocular touch. Then there was Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," a work of sombre power and dark shadings. But it was Beethoven's "Pastoral" Symphony which shone brightest in this trio of performances . . . Richard Burgin will conduct the concerts of the Boston Symphony in Boston for two weeks after Christmas and through the tour of the Orchestra. Mr. Burgin is the concertmaster of the Boston Symphony . . .

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
65 Church Street - New York

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JAN 1 195

Boston Symphony Plays Barber Work

Boston Symphony, Charles Munch, conductor. Carnegie Hall, Dec. 15, 2:30:

"Jeu de Cartes" .... Stravinsky
"Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" .... Barber
Symphony No. 6 .... Beethoven

The Boston Symphony was in fine form in this concert. Though the Beethoven and the Stravinsky were elegantly played, it was Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" that provided the most exciting experience. Mr. Munch and the orchestra fully captured the tragic grandeur of this magnificent work, the sound was always opulent, and the climax electrifying.

This writer has always considered Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes" or a "Ballet in Three Deals" a little on the dullish side, but it was given a colorful and lively performance, and the woodwinds provided some fine playing. Beethoven's "Pastoral" fared equally well except the final movement. Here the atmosphere seemed more hectic than peaceful, and the violins were occasionally strident in sound. But the performance of the other movements was another story, for their melodies flowed naturally.

—F. M., Jr.

---

harms to soothe amara de Pamplona

ROM SPAIN
direction of Luis Morondo.
Nap De Klijn, violin;
Mozartpiano.
Octet of mixed voices
Smith-Bayliss presentation.)
MIME CIRCUS
Albeck mers)
G QUARTET
international
ize internati

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Far better from [illegible] were the three songs [illegible] mith's "Das Marienleben", in the revised form with orchestra instead of piano accompaniment. The selections were "The Birth of Mary", "Joseph's Doubt", and "The Birth of Christ", three of the most distinctive songs in the cycle. Here Miss Seefried took advantage of the dramatic and emotional possibilities of the music to give her fine, expressive voice full range, and it swelled forth with ease and with warmth and rich color. Mr. Munch and the orchestra gave her discreet but firm support and proved beyond doubt the ability of the songs to sustain an elaborate orchestral investiture. They sound much better this way.

Honegger's String Symphony, significantly dated "Paris, October, 1941", becomes increasingly more communicative with repeated hearings, and, particularly as played by the Bostonians, seems to speak most articulately of the successive feelings of frustration, despair and hope in the hearts of people in occupied France. It is difficult to pin down and define the individual elements in the work that make it effective (esthetic sleuths may begin, if they wish, with the mysterious marking, "Molto moderato", on the first movement), but the over-all effect is persuasive because the music is pretty well free of the vacant contrivances commonly called upon for "epical" summations of this kind. Mr. Munch gave it fluidity of movement, but not at the expense of form and integration.

—R. E.

Boston Symphony Presents Impressively Varied List

Boston — An impressively varied list which, in one way or another, could hardly have failed to satisfy everyone, was offered by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony at Symphony Hall on [illegible] 30 and Dec. 1. Honegger's Second Symphony, which wears well and becomes more attractive upon every hearing, was solid fare for the modernist segment of the public; the Second Suite from Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane", now become a real Munch war horse, for he conducts it stunningly, was another such.

For those of conservative tastes, Bach's "Wedding Cantata" (really the second of the two he composed), "Weichet nur, betruebte Schatten", was ideal, not least so because soprano Irmgard Seefried was soloist and sang Bach celestially. Mr. Munch used a genuine chamber-sized orchestra for the cantata: eight each of first and second violins; six violas, four cellos and one double bass, plus harpsichord (Daniel Pinkham) for continuo and recitative accompaniment, and solo oboe (the orchestra's excellent Ralph Gomberg.) This was a most chaste and delicate performance.

Four "Marienleben" Songs

Miss Seefried further was heard in three of the four "Marienleben" songs which Hindemith set for orchestra (in revised version) in 1938. They were "The Birth of Mary", "Joseph's Doubt" and "The Birth of Christ". They are impressive, though it still strikes me that the genius of Hindemith is essentially instrumental and not vocal.

The symphony program a week later was a most comfortable one, with much to ease the spirit and nothing to tax the mind. It consisted of Benjamin Britten's Variations on a Theme by Frank Bridge; Ibert's "Escales", and the "Pastoral" Symphony of Beethoven. (One should add that the list was a compromise between original plan and later necessity; Mr. Munch had intended to give the premiere of Sir William Walton's Cello Concerto, but the illness of Gregor Piatigorsky has deferred that event until January.) Apart from a lack of precise balance between sections in the symphony, which added a little surface coarseness to the texture, everything went well, indeed.

While Haydn's "The Seven Last Words of Our Savior" is a frequent item, especially at Easter time, its original version for orchestra, is not. A musician high in the councils of the Cambridge Society for Early Music, which performed it at Sanders Theater on Dec. 3, opined this to be the first performance since Haydn's own time. Perhaps so, perhaps not, but in any event a rare hearing of the version. A group of Boston Symphony musicians, plus Erwin Bodky, harpsichord, and Paul Matthen, bass, merit approval for their enterprise. This concert ended the 1956 series of the Society.

Budapest Quartet Program

The Budapest Quartet has been here again, bringing joy to an audience which required numerous chairs to be placed on stage. A Beethoven program, consisting of the D major Quartet, Op. 18, No. 3; the Quartet in E flat, Op. 74, and the A minor Quartet, Op. 132, was played with superlative technique, style and feeling. (Jordan Hall, in the Boston University Celebrity Series, Nov. 28.)

Next night the Civic Symphony, whose conductor is Paul Cherkassky, began its 31st season at Jordan Hall. Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla", the Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto with Edith Stearns as piano soloist, and Schubert's "Great" C major Symphony made up the program. It was too long and perceptibly fatigued the musicians, who, however, are a good body of players. Miss Stearns played nimbly, but in too ladylike a fashion.

That Leon Fleisher has remarkable capacity for playing Schubert was established last season. When he returned to Jordan Hall on Nov. 25 (Boston University Celebrity Series), he reinforced the impression by his fine, lyrical account of seven Ländler from Op. 171. Beethoven's D major Sonata, Op. 10, No. 3, went pretty well, too, although the Largo e mesto was taken so slow the phrases almost fell apart at the outset. With Debussy's "La Cathédrale Engloutie" and Ravel's "Valses nobles et sentimentales", Mr. Fleisher betrayed his age, for the interpretive cunning demanded by these pieces usually arrives only with middle years. Ravel's "Alborada del gracioso", on the other hand, was really quite satisfying.

By this time Boston has tasted the marvelous qualities of the Vienna Philharmonic, which, one of the greatest orchestras of the world, has the discipline and the sensitivity of such organizations as the Berlin Philharmonic and the Amsterdam Concertgebouw orchestras, but also commands greater brilliance than either. Carl Schuricht's conducting was equally enthralling, through Weber's "Euryanthe" Overture and the D major Symphony (K. 181) of Mozart. But Bruckner's Seventh Symphony, in a reading of blaze and splendor, was something of which I had never heard the like before. (Symphony Hall, Dec. 2, in the Boston University Celebrity Series.)

Singher Replaces Simoneau

We were to have heard tenor Leopold Simoneau in his local debut at the second Boston Morning Musicale in aid of the Boston School of Occupational Therapy, in the Hotel Statler ballroom on Dec. 5. But illness supervened, and baritone Martial Singher did us all a good turn by replacing Mr. Simoneau. A several times Morning Musicales favorite, Mr. Singher again distinguished himself as a concert artist of great finesse and intimacy, with old music, an unusually contemplative performance of Boris' "I Have Attained the Greatest Power" from Mussorgsky's opera, and seven of Schumann's "Dichterliebe" songs.

The Handel and Haydn Society's annual performances (two) of "Messiah" again showed that the famed old organization continues at the peak of superiority to which Dr. Thompson Stone brought the chorus several years ago. This year the soloists were Alice Farnsworth Boffetti, a silken-voiced soprano; Harold Haugh, a musical tenor; Elsa Gerling, contralto, and Donald Gramm, to my mind one of the finest and most promising bass-baritone musicians of the time. (Symphony Hall, Dec. 9 and 10.)

The Golden Age Singers, who have been making lots of friends during their current (and first) tour in the United States, showed us their notable prowess in vocal polyphony at Jordan Hall (Boston University Celebrity Series) on Dec. 9. Nothing like this has been heard (on a commercial concert basis, at least) in our town since the English Singers bade us farewell in 1930.

—Cyrus Durgin

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

DETROIT, MICH.
TIMES
Circ. D. 408,705 - S. 521,878

JAN 11 1957

Interlochen Group Polish Trip Seen

Detroit Times Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11—Senator Potter said today the state department was interested in sending the national high school orchestra trained at Interlochen to Poland next September.

Cost of the trip would be shared by the U. S. and Polish governments. Poland has extended an official invitation to the amateur orchestra of 100 boys and girls from all parts of the country.

STARVED FOR NEWS

Stating that this would be the first time such a group had traveled abroad under official auspices, Potter said:

"Young people behind the Iron Curtain are starved for news of the free world. We have no finer ambassadors of good will than intelligent, talented and properly briefed young Americans. This is an assault on the European concept that American youth does nothing but chew gum and ride hot rods."

Cultural exchange arranged by the U. S. Information Service heretofore has been limited to professionals. Last September, the Boston Symphony Orchestra made a successful tour of Russia.

LONG-TIME DREAM

Under the program being studied by the state department, this government would pay transportation for the high school orchestra from Traverse City to Poland and that country would finance costs within its borders.

The proposed trip is a long-time dream of Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, president of the national music camp.

Members of the orchestra will be taught a minimum of 300 words of Polish before embarking, enough to allow them to communicate satisfactorily. They also will receive special briefings in Polish customs and history.

In inviting the group, the Polish government said the tour would contribute to world friendship and the development of better relations with the United States. Polish officials said they hoped it would be followed by a visit of young Polish musicians to the United States.

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dec. 12, E—With Charles Munch conducting, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its second concert of the season with Honegger's Symphony No. 2 for string orchestra. Honegger's style is particularly familiar to Mr. Munch, who was a close friend of the late composer. His interpretation was as much a matter of the heart as it was a display of exquisite musicianship. The rather pessimistic attitude of the work is one of the finest documents of our dark times, and the reflection of an artistic mind to the problems of today. The performance was faultless.

Irmgard Seefried, soloist of the evening sang Bach's "Wedding Cantata." An excellent musician, she mastered all the stylistic requirements of this work to the full. Her fine phrasing was remarkable, her rendition of the melodic line admirable, and her mastery in the coloratura parts equally astonishing. She was justly feted. The same virtues distinguished her interpretation of songs from Hindemith's "Marienleben." Here, Miss Seefried reached the pinnacle of re-creative art in projecting the beautiful Rilke poems with Hindemith's craftsmanlike score, which is also one of his most inspired. Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" Suite, a late-romantic work which exhibited the brilliance of the orchestra with great effectiveness, closed the evening.

H. W. L.

MUSICAL LEADER January 1957

New York

(Continued from page 2)

ness; and the Temple University Chorus. We found the work tremendously vital and impressive. The first half of the program served as appertif: Vivaldi-Molinari's Concerto Grosso in A major — "Echo" — for Two Violins and Strings, and Miss Gueden in beautiful performances of Mozart's "Non temer amato bene" from "Idomeneo" and Zerbinetta's aria from Strauss' "Ariadne auf Naxos." . . . Ernest Ansermet, distinguished Swiss conductor, will be the first of the guest conductors to appear with the Philadelphians during Maestro Ormandy's European jaunt . . . Paul Kletski will make his American debut with the Philadelphia Orchestra Feb. 14, 1958, and will also appear in his New York debut with the same orchestra on Feb. 18 . . . Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra will travel through 20 states to play 39 concerts in 32 American cities after the close of its season in the Academy of Music, Philadelphia . . .

Boston Symphony. At its Dec. 15 concert this season, the Boston Symphony, under Charles Munch, performed a beautifully balanced program. First, there was Stravinsky's ballet music, "Jeu de Cartes" (Card Game), a delightful confection performed with a jocular touch. Then there was Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," a work of sombre power and dark shadings. But it was Beethoven's "Pastoral" Symphony which shone brightest in this trio of performances . . . Richard Burgin will conduct the concerts of the Boston Symphony in Boston for two weeks after Christmas and through the tour of the Orchestra. Mr. Burgin is the concertmaster of the Boston Symphony . . .

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
THE PROGRESSIVE
MADISON WIS.

JAN 1957

PROGRESSIVE

"YE SHALL KNOW THE TRUTH AND THE TRUTH SHALL MAKE YOU FREE"

Holiday Greetings

TO THE people of Hungary who fought so magnificently for freedom—against the cruel odds of Soviet tanks and tyranny—
Holiday Greetings.

To the people of Poznan, and of the other communities of Poland, who raised the year's first banner for liberty in occupied Eastern Europe—
Holiday Greetings.

To the youth in all the Soviet satellite countries, many of them teenagers, who set the fires and fanned the flames of freedom, thus striking a mortal blow at the Kremlin's hope that this new generation reared exclusively under Communist indoctrination would serve the mother country subserviently—
Holiday Greetings.

To the government and people of impoverished Austria for performing quietly and efficiently their errand of mercy in taking so many Hungarian refugees into their hearts and homes—
Holiday Greetings.

To that small band of reasonable men in Algeria and that smaller company of rational men in France who continue to work, against staggering odds, for a viable settlement of a conflict that could dwarf the explosion in the Middle East—
Holiday Greetings.

To those colonial subjects of Great Britain from Cyprus to Singapore who are searching for the most hopeful road to independence—
Holiday Greetings.

To Dag Hammarskjold, Secretary-General of the United Nations, who has braved the wrath of hot-tempered partisans in the bitter conflicts of recent months as he pursued his ceaseless and selfless quest for the beginnings of peace—
Holiday Greetings.

To the United Nations which has served, however erratically, as the conscience of mankind, and which, in recent months, has carried prodigious burdens on its frail shoulders—
Holiday Greetings.

To President Dwight D. Eisenhower, who faces gargantuan problems as he approaches his second term—
Holiday Greetings.

To Adlai E. Stevenson, who contributed measurably to the raising of campaign standards in the United States and who, despite two defeats at the polls, has added significantly to the nation's political education—
Holiday Greetings.

To Eleanor Roosevelt, who combines grace, tolerance, and militancy in her continuing appeal to reason on the major issues of our time—
Holiday Greetings.

To Chief Justice Earl Warren and the Associate Justices who stood with him in strengthening the United States Supreme Court as the guardian of our liberties, notably in cases during the past year involving the rights of minorities, freedom of conscience, and racial integration—
Holiday Greetings.

To the school administrators, parents, teachers, and school children of Washington, D.C., St. Louis, Missouri, and Louisville, Kentucky, for facing up to and coping with the problems of racial integration in the public schools—
Holiday Greetings.

To Danny Kaye, one of the great entertainers of our age, for giving so unselfishly of his time and talents to bringing a bit of happiness to countless children around the world as he roamed the earth under the auspices of the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund—
Holiday Greetings.

To Benny Goodman, who has proved himself a prince of good-will as well as the king of swing as he travels the world with his orchestra, bringing the peoples of Asia, Africa, Europe, and South America some of the finest of American jazz and the best of American conduct—
Holiday Greetings.

To Isaac Stern, celebrated American violinist, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the cast of Porgy and Bess for expressing forms of American art and culture so superbly to the peoples of the Soviet Union—
Holiday Greetings.

To Herbert Lehman, who is now retiring as United States Senator from New York, for his unparalleled contribution to better government and his long, often lonely struggle for

---

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
Circ. D. 206,408 - S. 279,780
JAN 11 1957

A Hot Tin Roof"
p To Soviets

advanee his ex-Orches-ast fall.
fore the hd when old War the Bosas cone mech-elations een the
S. A. zard a accom-nes but m that remenoncerts
w.

artered nd we ecause ts, no
g and habby.
much at a heered g with nattily o all re as-try of ntrast look-n we ok no elves

t in con-
Bee-
Pisand loe."
eaux rise" Sec-bert

ense-Or-with itics me-new heir ated reet

s of bout

One of the things they noticed above all were American shoes. "Their own were so shabby," Alford said.

The American and Russian national anthems were played in Leningrad, (no doubt the first time for the American) and the U. S. flag flew side by side with the Soviet.

Though Leningrad has a great orchestra, the Russian musicians were extremely curious about the American instruments.

They found it odd that American players owned their instruments and, above all, were impressed by the shiny state of repair the Boston instruments appeared to be in.

* * *

RUSSIAN AUDIENCES have been more or less hermetically sealed from almost all 20th century developments in music. They knew nothing of Bartok, Copland, Hindemith and even the waltzes from "Rosenkavalier" and "Sorcerer's Apprentice" were strange to them. (Strauss was considered a Nazi, in Russia, and most French music was "hopelessly decadent.")

In Moscow they were greeted by David Oistrakh and prominent Soviet officials. Oistrakh was extremely cordial, having played in Boston several times a short while ago.

At the Moscow concerts Shostakovich was one of the listeners. Most of Russia's best known musicians were on hand to greet the Bostonians.

* * *

ON SUNDAY, many of the men in the orchestra went to church—but they had to find their way without official help. Roman Catholic services were found. It was the time of Rosh Hashanah and Jewish musicians found a synagogue where the service was High Orthodox.

On the whole, Alford thought the trip was a remarkable opportunity but in the light of subsequent events in Hungary not much is likely to come of the cultural relations thus established.

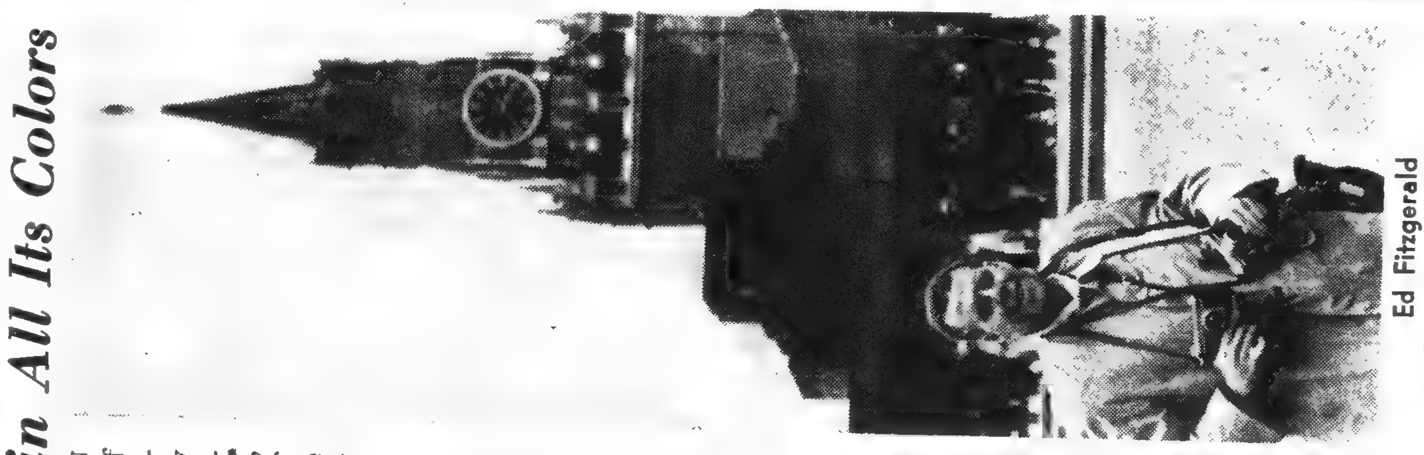
Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
EDITOR & PUBLISHER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JAN 26 1957

Russia Shown in All Its Colors

BOSTON

Ed Fitzgerald, manager of the United Press picture bureau here who recently toured Europe with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, compiled nearly 1,000 color slides and black and white photos during a seven-day visit to Leningrad and Moscow.



Ed Fitzgerald
in Red Square, Moscow.

Despite warnings of camera censorship from travelers who had been to these cities before him, Mr. Fitzgerald experienced full photographic freedom in both Russia and Czechoslovakia.

At the Leningrad airport Ed did some fast checking with officials and found out, with the aid of interpreters dispatched from Moscow, that he could "shoot anything he wanted."

Ed took the Russians at their word. The black and white shots were made as a documentary of the tour.

The color slides are used to illustrate a lecture which Ed calls "U.S.S.R.—A Picture Report."

His basic equipment consisted of two Contax II cameras with the 35mm Biogon wide angle lens, a 50mm Sonnar normal focal length lens and a 135mm Sonnar telephoto.

A pair of Rolleiflex cameras were also brought along. The new high speed color film proved particularly valuable when it came to making interiors showing the Boston Symphony Orchestra inside some of the concert halls in Leningrad and Moscow. Brief time exposures with the Contax mounted on a tripod resulted in excellent color slides.

None of the film was sent back to the U.S. from Russia. Instead, Ed waited until he got to Vienna. A second shipment was made from Stuttgart, Germany. All the films arrived in Boston o. k.

Constant travel from one country to another and lack of storage and baggage facilities calls for the lightest possible equipment, he pointed out. Customs problems throughout Europe were practically non-existent, he said. Longest delays were experienced at Glasgow, Scotland, and at Logan Airport, Boston.

[175]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

THE PROG
MADISO

JAN

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

6 tolerance, freedom of conscience, and equality of opportunity—

Holiday Greetings.

To Charles E. Bohlen, our ambassador to the Soviet Union, who has set a shining example for American diplomats by performing his delicate mission, frequently against heartbreaking odds, with exceptional skill and patience and a genuine determination to know and understand the people and the culture of the country to which he is accredited—
Holiday Greetings.

To the American Friends Service Committee, which continues to do so much so quietly in its overseas relief program, its domestic efforts to improve race relations, its program of peace education, and its readiness to provide a platform for both sides of controversial issues—
Holiday Greetings.

To the Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr., and his Montgomery Improvement Association, for their gallant and successful application of passive resistance to bus segregation in that Alabama city—
Holiday Greetings.

To President Edwin B. Fred and the Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin, for standing firmly against the witch-hunting pressures of the Wisconsin Department of the American Legion—
Holiday Greetings.

To the Fund for the Republic, for its program of initiating and financing a wide variety of projects designed to safeguard and strengthen our liberties and heighten opportunities for racial minorities—
Holiday Greetings.

To the American Civil Liberties Union, and its affiliates throughout the country, for standing guard so vigilantly in defense of the letter and spirit of the Bill of Rights—
Holiday Greetings.

To the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts, for repudiating the censorship pressure of super-patriots in a statement which emphasized that "it is important once and for all to dissipate this nonsense that any single group in our community is the custodian of the patriotism of the rest of us"—
Holiday Greetings.

To the people of Alaska, who ratified, by a margin of better than two to one, a constitution for statehood that included among other guarantees of freedom a provision that "the right of all persons to fair and just treatment in the course of legislative and executive investigations shall not be infringed"—
Holiday Greetings.

To John Orr, Miami lawyer, who stood alone in the Florida legislature to vote against a group of bills designed to circumvent the Supreme Court's desegregation order—
Holiday Greetings.

To the American Association of University Professors, for boldly confronting the issue of discharges by timorous college boards and administrators where teachers have been under fire—
Holiday Greetings.

To Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel of the Archdiocese of New Orleans, and the Roman Catholic Church in general, for their enlightened position on segregation in the South and their pioneering efforts in parochial school integration—
Holiday Greetings.

To Edward P. Morgan of the American Broadcasting Company and Eric Sevareid of the Columbia Broadcasting System, for their consistently high standards in presenting the news and their interpretative commentary—
Holiday Greetings.

To the great majority of the citizens of strife-torn Clinton, Tennessee, for rejecting a racist candidate for mayor and electing, by a four to one margin, the candidate who stood firmly for compliance with the Supreme Court decision on integration of the public schools—
Holiday Greetings.

To New York City's Police Commissioner Stephen P. Kennedy, for his thoughtful statement on the proper function of the police in a democratic society—"to maintain the delicate balance between the liberty of the individual and the demands of society for protection against crime. . . . The policeman must be constantly mindful of the civil rights of all the people"—
Holiday Greetings.

To the members of The Progressive's staff, to those who write for us, to the typesetters, proofreaders, makeup men, engravers, and pressmen who help produce The Progressive, and to the postmen who deliver the magazine to subscribers in all the 48 states and 60 foreign countries.
Holiday Greetings.

To the Members of The Progressive, Inc., the non-profit foundation that publishes the magazine, whose generous contributions in 1956 make continued publication in 1957 possible—
Holiday Greetings.

To all our subscribers around the world—
Holiday Greetings.

And to all men and women everywhere whose deepest longing this Holiday Season is for Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men—
Holiday Greetings.

---

in Roof" oviets

f the things they noove all were American
'Their own were so
Alford said.
American and Russian anthems were played ngrad, (no doubt the ne for the American)
U. S. flag flew side by a the Soviet.
h Leningrad has a great a, the Russian musi-ere extremely curious the American instrufound it odd that Amer-ayers owned their in-its and, above all, were ed by the shiny state of the Boston instruments

d to be in.

★ ★ ★

IAN AUDIENCES have ore or less hermetically from almost all 20th developments in music.
new nothing of Bartok,
l, Hindemith and even ltzes from "Rosenkava-nd "Sorcerer's Apprenvere strange to them.
s was considered a Nazi,
sia, and most French was "hopelessly decaoscow they were greeted id Oistrakh and promi-oviet officials. Oistrakh tremely cordial, having n Boston several times while ago.

the Moscow concerts
akovich was one of the ts. Most of Russia's best musicians were on hand the Bostonians.

★ ★ ★

UNDAY, many of the
the orchestra went to
-but they had to find
ly without official help.
Catholic services were t was the time of Rosh h and Jewish musiund a synagogue where ice was High Orthodox. whole, Alford thought was a remarkable op-but in the light of nt events in Hungary a is likely to come of ural relations thus es-

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JAN 26 1957

Russia Shown in All Its Colors

BOSTON

Ed Fitzgerald, manager of the United Press picture bureau here who recently toured Europe with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, compiled nearly 1,000 color slides and black and white photos during a seven-day visit to Leningrad and Moscow.

Despite warnings of camera censorship from travelers who had been to these cities before him, Mr. Fitzgerald experienced full photographic freedom in both Russia and Czechoslovakia.

At the Leningrad airport Ed did some fast checking with officials and found out, with the aid of interpreters dispatched from Moscow, that he could "shoot anything he wanted."

Ed took the Russians at their word. The black and white shots were made as a documentary of the tour.

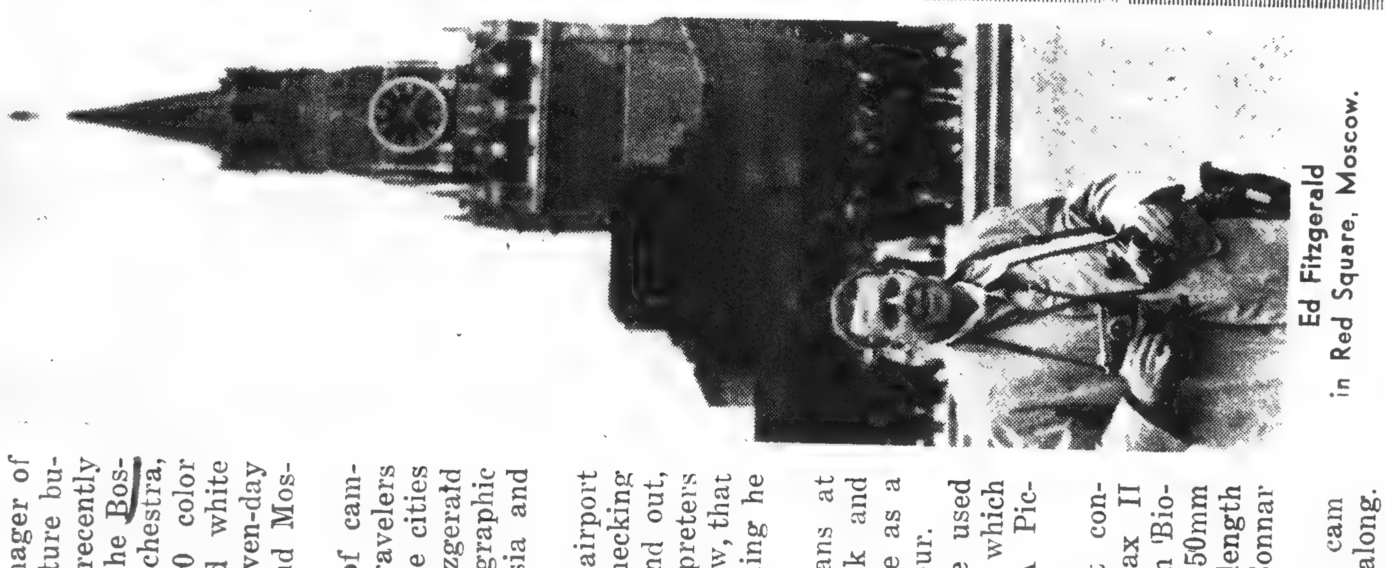
The color slides are used to illustrate a lecture which Ed calls "U.S.S.R.—A Picture Report."

His basic equipment consisted of two Contax II cameras with the 35mm Biogon wide angle lens, a 50mm Sonnar normal focal length lens and a 135mm Sonnar telephoto.

A pair of Rolleiflex cameras were also brought along. The new high speed color film proved particularly valuable when it came to making interiors showing the Boston Symphony Orchestra inside some of the concert halls in Leningrad and Moscow. Brief time exposures with the Contax mounted on a tripod resulted in excellent color slides.

None of the film was sent back to the U.S. from Russia. Instead, Ed waited until he got to Vienna. A second shipment was made from Stuttgart, Germany. All the films arrived in Boston o. k.

Constant travel from one country to another and lack of storage and baggage facilities calls for the lightest possible equipment, he pointed out. Customs problems throughout Europe were practically non-existent, he said. Longest delays were experienced at Glasgow, Scotland, and at Logan Airport, Boston.



Ed Fitzgerald
in Red Square, Moscow.

[175]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

THE PRO[illegible]
MADIS[illegible]

JAN

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
Circ. D. 206,408 - S. 279,780

JAN 11 1957

Promotes "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof" And Boston Ork Trip To Soviets

By Arthur Darack
Enquirer Music Editor

IT IS A far cry from the publicizing of the controversial Tennessee Williams play, "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof," coming to the Shubert Theater February 4, to the promotion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra trip to the Soviet Union, Walter Alford has done both.

Alford, in town in advance of "Cat," told me of his experiences on the Boston Orchestra's historic tour last fall. This was, of course, before the Hungarian Revolution and when it appeared that the Cold War was lessening. In fact, the Boston Orchestra tour was conceived to be one of the mechanisms by which relations might be improved between the U. S. S. R. and the U. S. A.

Alford does not hazard a guess as to what was accomplished along political lines but he thinks it safe to claim that the Bostonians made a tremendous hit during their concerts in Leningrad and Moscow.

★ ★ ★

THE TROUPE chartered planes from Helsinki "and we were a little nervous because there were no seat belts, no caution against smoking and the planes were rather shabby. They took off without much warmup and put down at a rather dizzy descent."

Alford said they were cheered somewhat by their meeting with "half a dozen quite nattily dressed young ladies who all spoke English and who were assigned to us by the Ministry of Culture."

They made quite a contrast with the average "heavy looking, somber Russian women we saw in the streets, who took no interest in adorning themselves and rarely smiled."

★ ★ ★

AT THE first concert in Leningrad, Charles Munch conducted the orchestra in Beethoven's "Eroica," Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's "Daphnis And Chloe." The second night, Monteaux conducted Haydn's "Surprise" Symphony, Paul Creston's Second Symphony and the Schubert Ninth.

The audiences were intensely interested in the Boston Orchestra, presenting them with a prolonged ovation. The critics were enthusiastic but somewhat puzzled by the new American works.

★ ★ ★

ALFORD NOTED that their being in Leningrad created great excitement. The street was always full of knots of people who would gather about the men.

One of the things they noticed above all were American shoes. "Their own were so shabby," Alford said.

The American and Russian national anthems were played in Leningrad, (no doubt the first time for the American) and the U. S. flag flew side by side with the Soviet.

Though Leningrad has a great orchestra, the Russian musicians were extremely curious about the American instruments.

They found it odd that American players owned their instruments and, above all, were impressed by the shiny state of repair the Boston instruments appeared to be in.

★ ★ ★

RUSSIAN AUDIENCES have been more or less hermetically sealed from almost all 20th century developments in music. They knew nothing of Bartok, Copland, Hindemith and even the waltzes from "Rosenkavalier" and "Sorcerer's Apprentice" were strange to them. (Strauss was considered a Nazi, in Russia, and most French music was "hopelessly decadent.")

In Moscow they were greeted by David Oistrakh and prominent Soviet officials. Oistrakh was extremely cordial, having played in Boston several times a short while ago.

At the Moscow concerts Shostakovich was one of the listeners. Most of Russia's best known musicians were on hand to greet the Bostonians.

★ ★ ★

ON SUNDAY, many of the men in the orchestra went to church—but they had to find their way without official help. Roman Catholic services were found. It was the time of Rosh Hashanah and Jewish musicians found a synagogue where the service was High Orthodox.

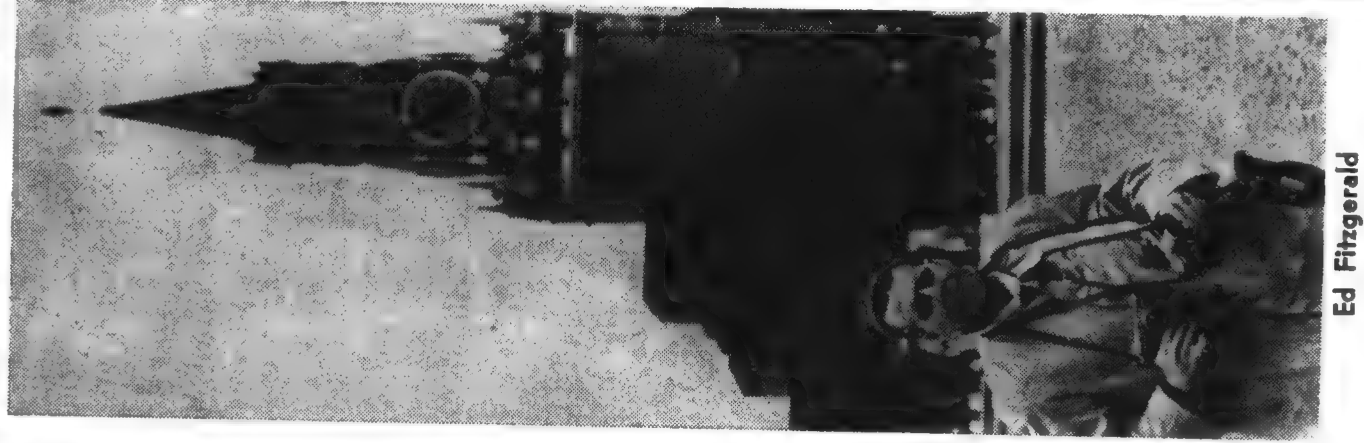
On the whole, Alford thought the trip was a remarkable opportunity but in the light of subsequent events in Hungary not much is likely to come of the cultural relations thus established.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JAN 26 1957

Russia Shown in All Its Colors



Ed Fitzgerald
in Red Square, Moscow.

BOSTON

Ed Fitzgerald, manager of the United Press picture bureau here who recently toured Europe with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, compiled nearly 1,000 color slides and black and white photos during a seven-day visit to Leningrad and Moscow.

Despite warnings of camera censorship from travelers who had been to these cities before him, Mr. Fitzgerald experienced full photographic freedom in both Russia and Czechoslovakia.

At the Leningrad airport Ed did some fast checking with officials and found out, with the aid of interpreters dispatched from Moscow, that he could "shoot anything he wanted."

Ed took the Russians at their word. The black and white shots were made as a documentary of the tour.

The color slides are used to illustrate a lecture which Ed calls "U.S.S.R.—A Picture Report."

His basic equipment consisted of two Contax II cameras with the 35mm Biogon wide angle lens, a 50mm Sonnar normal focal length lens and a 135mm Sonnar telephoto.

A pair of Rolleiflex cameras were also brought along. The new high speed color film proved particularly valuable when it came to making interiors showing the Boston Symphony Orchestra inside some of the concert halls in Leningrad and Moscow. Brief time exposures with the Contax mounted on a tripod resulted in excellent color slides.

None of the film was sent back to the U.S. from Russia. Instead, Ed waited until he got to Vienna. A second shipment was made from Stuttgart, Germany. All the films arrived in Boston o. k.

Constant travel from one country to another and lack of storage and baggage facilities calls for the lightest possible equipment, he pointed out. Customs problems throughout Europe were practically non-existent, he said. Longest delays were experienced at Glasgow, Scotland, and at Logan Airport, Boston.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

THE PROGRESSIVE
MADISON WIS.

JAN 1957

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
Circ. D. 206,408 - S. 279,780

JAN 11 1957

Promotes "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof" And Boston Ork Trip To Soviets

By Arthur Darack
Enquirer Music Editor

IT IS A far cry from the publicizing of the controversial Tennessee Williams play, "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof,," coming to the Shubert Theater February 4, to the promotion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra trip to the Soviet Union. Walter Alford has done both.

Alford, in town in advance of "Cat," told me of his experiences on the Boston Orchestra's historic tour last fall. This was, of course, before the Hungarian Revolution and when it appeared that the Cold War was lessening. In fact, the Boston Orchestra tour was conceived to be one of the mechanisms by which relations might be improved between the U. S. S. R. and the U. S. A.

Alford does not hazard a guess as to what was accomplished along political lines but he thinks it safe to claim that the Bostonians made a tremendous hit during their concerts in Leningrad and Moscow.

★ ★ ★

THE TROUPE chartered planes from Helsinki "and we were a little nervous because there were no seat belts, no caution against smoking and the planes were rather shabby. They took off without much warmup and put down at a rather dizzy descent."

Alford said they were cheered somewhat by their meeting with "half a dozen quite nattily dressed young ladies who all spoke English and who were assigned to us by the Ministry of Culture."

They made quite a contrast with the average "heavy looking, somber Russian women we saw in the streets, who took no interest in adorning themselves and rarely smiled."

★ ★ ★

AT THE first concert in Leningrad, Charles Munch conducted the orchestra in Beethoven's "Eroica," Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Ravel's "Daphnis And Chloe." The second night, Monteaux conducted Haydn's "Surprise" Symphony, Paul Creston's Second Symphony and the Schubert Ninth.

The audiences were intensely interested in the Boston Orchestra, presenting them with a prolonged ovation. The critics were enthusiastic but somewhat puzzled by the new American works.

★ ★ ★

ALFORD NOTED that their being in Leningrad created great excitement. The street was always full of knots of people who would gather about the men.

One of the things they noticed above all were American shoes. "Their own were so shabby," Alford said.

The American and Russian national anthems were played in Leningrad, (no doubt the first time for the American) and the U. S. flag flew side by side with the Soviet.

Though Leningrad has a great orchestra, the Russian musicians were extremely curious about the American instruments.

They found it odd that American players owned their instruments and, above all, were impressed by the shiny state of repair the Boston instruments appeared to be in.

★ ★ ★

RUSSIAN AUDIENCES have been more or less hermetically sealed from almost all 20th century developments in music. They knew nothing of Bartok, Copland, Hindemith and even the waltzes from "Rosenkavalier" and "Sorcerer's Apprentice" were strange to them. (Strauss was considered a Nazi, in Russia, and most French music was "hopelessly decadent.")

In Moscow they were greeted by David Oistrakh and prominent Soviet officials. Oistrakh was extremely cordial, having played in Boston several times a short while ago.

At the Moscow concerts Shostakovich was one of the listeners. Most of Russia's best known musicians were on hand to greet the Bostonians.

★ ★ ★

ON SUNDAY, many of the men in the orchestra went to church—but they had to find their way without official help. Roman Catholic services were found. It was the time of Rosh Hashanah and Jewish musicians found a synagogue where the service was High Orthodox.

On the whole, Alford thought the trip was a remarkable opportunity but in the light of subsequent events in Hungary not much is likely to come of the cultural relations thus established.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JAN 26 1957

Russia Shown in All Its Colors

BOSTON

Ed Fitzgerald, manager of the United Press picture bureau here who recently toured Europe with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, compiled nearly 1,000 color slides and black and white photos during a seven-day visit to Leningrad and Moscow.

Despite warnings of camera censorship from travelers who had been to these cities before him, Mr. Fitzgerald experienced full photographic freedom in both Russia and Czechoslovakia.

At the Leningrad airport Ed did some fast checking with officials and found out, with the aid of interpreters dispatched from Moscow, that he could "shoot anything he wanted."

Ed took the Russians at their word. The black and white shots were made as a documentary of the tour.

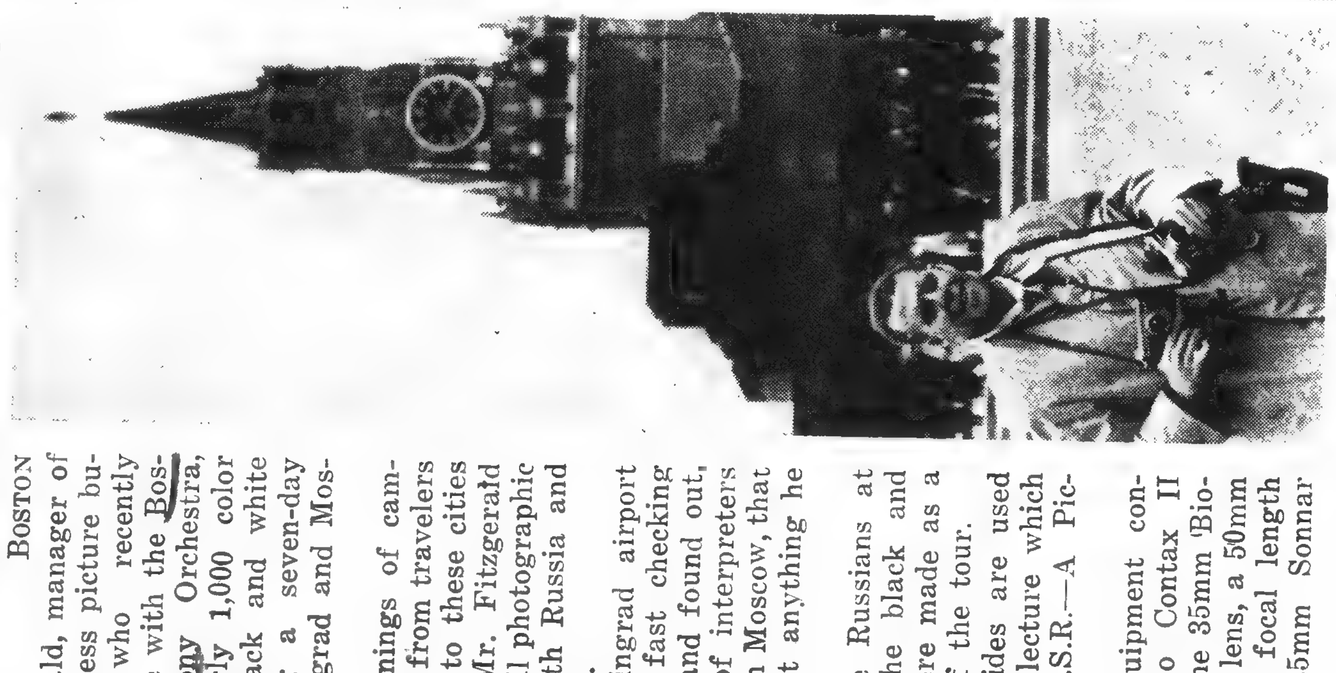
The color slides are used to illustrate a lecture which Ed calls "U.S.S.R.—A Picture Report."

His basic equipment consisted of two Contax II cameras with the 35mm Biogon wide angle lens, a 50mm Sonnar normal focal length lens and a 135mm Sonnar telephoto.

A pair of Rolleiflex cameras were also brought along. The new high speed color film proved particularly valuable when it came to making interiors showing the Boston Symphony Orchestra inside some of the concert halls in Leningrad and Moscow. Brief time exposures with the Contax mounted on a tripod resulted in excellent color slides.

None of the film was sent back to the U.S. from Russia. Instead, Ed waited until he got to Vienna. A second shipment was made from Stuttgart, Germany. All the films arrived in Boston o. k.

Constant travel from one country to another and lack of storage and baggage facilities calls for the lightest possible equipment, he pointed out. Customs problems throughout Europe were practically non-existent, he said. Longest delays were experienced at Glasgow, Scotland, and at Logan Airport, Boston.

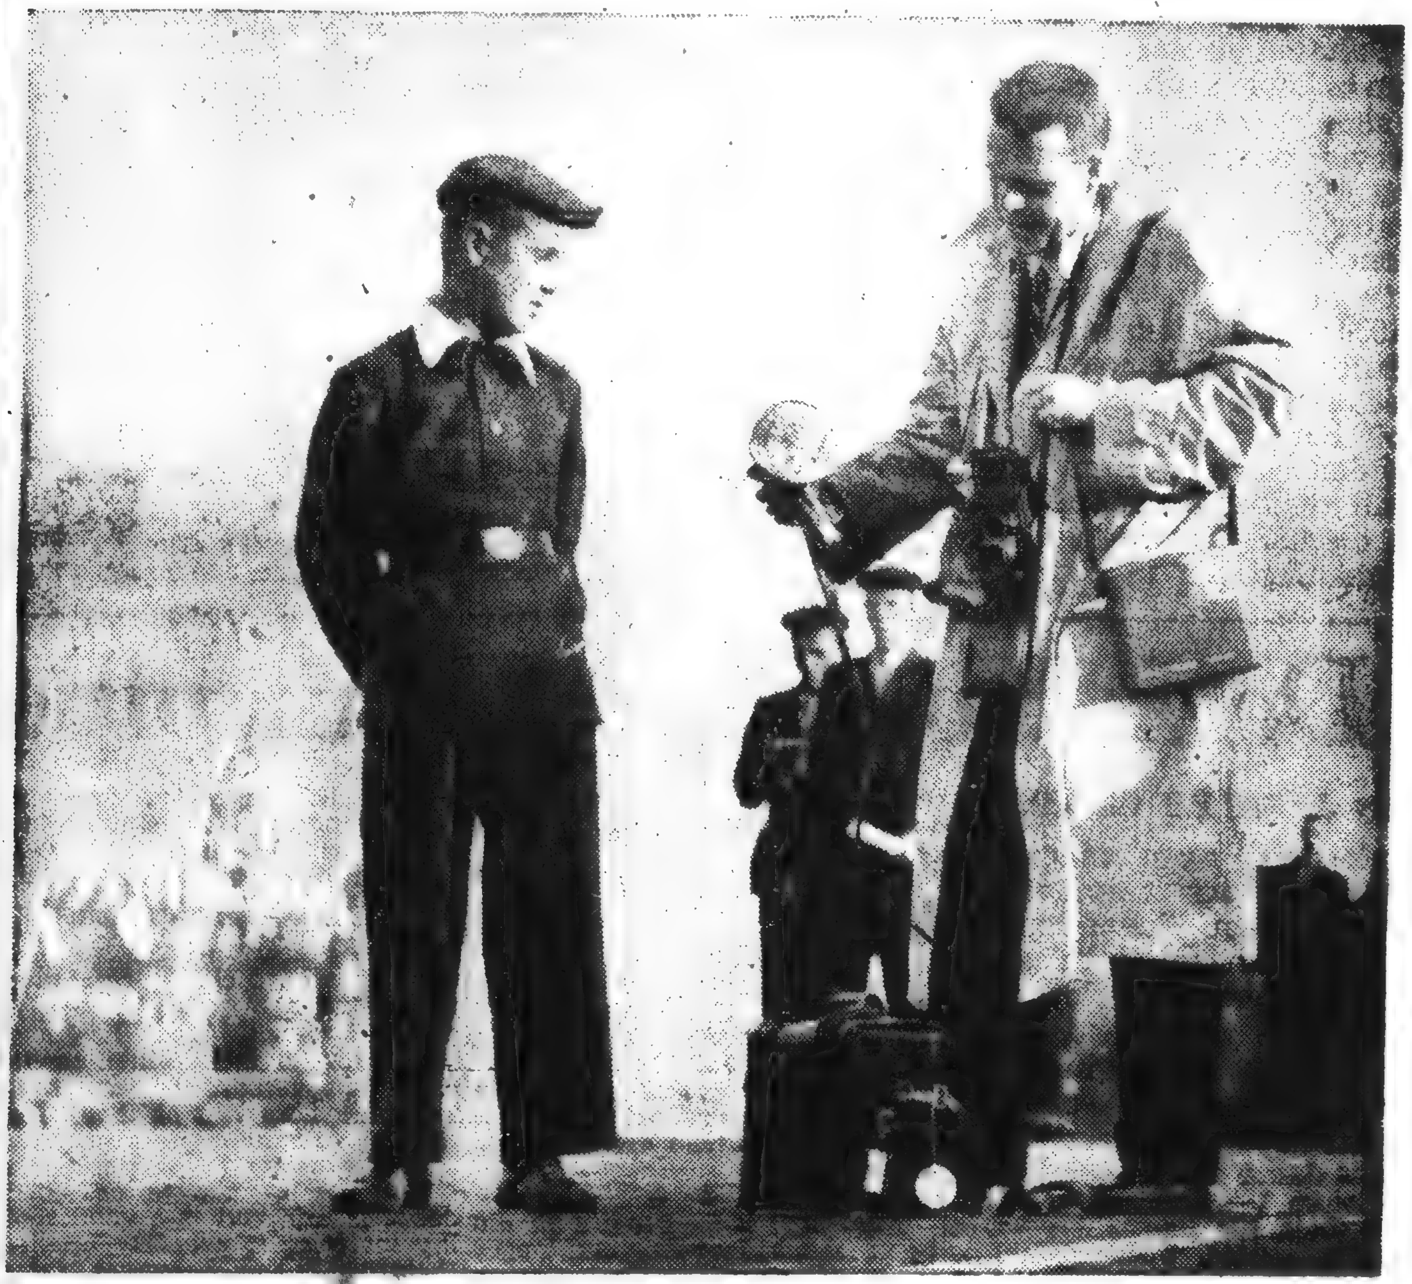


Ed Fitzgerald
in Red Square, Moscow.

Sunday Globe - Jan. 13 '57

The Camera Eye

Boston Photographer Has No Trouble in Russia



BEHIND THE IRON CURTAIN—A Russian youngster (left) gets a first-hand look at an American Strobe-light held by Ed Fitzgerald of Jamaica Plain, United Press photographer. The scene is Red Square, Moscow. Camera is a Rolleiflex. This photo was made with delayed action release on another Rollei which was set on the ground about ten feet away.

By GIL FRIEDBERG
Globe Camera Editor

Ed Fitzgerald, manager of the United Press picture bureau in Boston, recently returned from a six-week tour of Europe with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Included was a seven-day visit to Leningrad and Moscow.

Despite warnings of camera censorship from travelers, who had been to these cities before him, Fitzgerald experienced full photographic freedom in both Russia and Russian controlled Czecho-Slovakia.

★ ★ ★

The packaging of the Russian film was very shoddy indeed and the Soviet photographers showed unrestrained joy as they received their neatly packaged American film.

A Polaroid camera, brought along by one of the members of the orchestra, caused a near riot among the Russians on hand to meet the musicians at the Moscow Railroad station. Despite this, one of the interpreters sidled up to Fitzgerald and quickly informed him that "they had cameras just like that in the Soviet Union."

It may be true that cameras of this type have been built in Russia but evidently no one seemed to know about it, least of all the Russians. Strobe light is also used by Russian photographers, although their equipment is bulky and inefficient looking. Red cameramen constantly marveled at the compact Dormitizer DB-1B which Fitzgerald carried with him. They examined it closely and asked all sorts of questions regarding its efficiency.

Basic equipment used on the tour were two Contax II cameras with the 35mm Biogon wide angle lens, a 50mm Sonnar normal focal length lens and a 135mm Sonnar telephoto for long range pictures. These lenses covered nearly all the photographic problems that were encountered on the trip. A pair of Rolleiflex cameras were also brought along to round out the camera equipment.

The new high speed color film proved particularly valuable to Fitzgerald when it came to making color slides showing the Boston Symphony Orchestra inside some of the fabulous concert halls in Leningrad and Moscow. Brief time exposures with the contax mounted on a tripod resulted in excellent transparencies. The film in this case was for artificial light sources. The halls, in most cases, were brilliantly illuminated, and only natural light was used.

The main worry plaguing Fitzgerald while in Russia was whether or not the Russians might demand that all film be processed before he left the country. However, this threat failed to materialize and he landed in free Austria several days later with the undisturbed cache of exposed black and white and color film stacked in his foot locker.

None of the film was sent back to the United States from Russia. Instead Ed waited until he got to Vienna where most of the Russian and Czecho-Slovakian pictures were shipped. A second shipment of the once-in-a-lifetime photos was made from Stuttgart, Ger., in the event of any slip-up on the first batch. All the films arrived safely in Boston, however.

Later, they were distributed to newspapers and wire services. In many cases, the pictures were handled by picture services in Europe who took the responsibility of getting the pictures to America.

To sum up the trip, Ed found that his selection of the smaller cameras for this trip proved to be a wise choice. Constant travel from one country to another and the lack of storage and baggage facilities calls for the lightest possible equipment. Customs problems throughout Europe were practically non-existent. The longest delays were experienced at Glasgow, Scotland, and at Logan Airport after the trip ended. Officials at these ports double-checked the legitimacy of Fitzgerald's horde of camera equipment. The delays were brief in these two cases when the nature of the photographer's job was fully explained.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Variety
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Weekly Amusements

FEB 13 1957

Ballet Called Home From Singapore

Schnitzer Says Such Tours Can't be Advance-Figured —Boston Symph Manager's Angles

San Francisco, Feb. 12.

San Francisco Ballet's world tour has been abruptly cancelled. Officially given explanation is that the State Dept. could not or would not "find" an additional $60,000 to cover transportation costs. This is the function State assumes, via the American National Theatre & Academy (ANTA) in New York.

Reference to "unanticipated transportation costs between Singapore and Amsterdam" prompted the cabled cancellation of the dancers, 28 in number, who were to continue to India and Iran and thence back to Europe.

Another complication seems to have been a renege by India "sponsors" in the amount of $34,000 which, with the renege of the International Exchange Program of State, brought the curtain down. Some $130,000 had originally been allotted by Washington to take the troupe round the world. Departing San Francisco on Jan. 6 the company has played Tokyo, Formosa, Manila, Hong Kong, Bangkok, Rangoon, Cambodia and now (currently) Singapore where it folds.

Robert Schnitzer, who passed the bad news in his capacity as liaison of ANTA with State was "terribly disappointed and sorry." He commented, "In touring an area as fluid as the Far East, one can never tie these things down in advance." The cancellation of the tour he thought "cannot be called anybody's fault."

Only Good For Big Stuff?

Troy, Feb. 12.

The exchange of symphony orchestras and other artistic groups between the United States and foreign countries is most desirable, but only those at the top level of achievement should be involved. So Thomas Perry, Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, told VARIETY here.

Perry, who accompanied the Boston Symphony on its tour of Europe, Russia and Great Britain last summer, said such trips help to foster better understanding among the peoples of various nations. He emphasized, however, that only "the best and finest" should be exchanged. It will accomplish the greatest amount of good, Perry stated, if the exchange is two-way.

When the political climate is nearer right, Perry thought, visits to this country by one or more outstanding Russian troupes would be beneficial. He pointed to the reception given the Bolshoi Ballet in London, as an example of this.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was greeted in the warmest and friendliest of manner in Russia, Perry reported. He could detect no unfriendly attitude among the audiences before which concerts were given.

Perry praised the support given by the State Dept. to last summer's overseas trip. It absorbed 50% of the expense.

From U.S.S.R MAGAZINE
ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY
No. 4

FIRST CONCERT OF THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA IN THE LARGE HALL OF THE MOSCOW CONSERVATORY

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA plays in MOSCOW

Muscovites have a reputation for being very demanding music audiences, but the recent performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Moscow drew the heartiest applause from even the most critical of the music-lovers who filled the big hall of the Tchaikovsky Conservatory to more than capacity.

A series of three performances were given before gala audiences, with the Soviet music world present in force: the composers Dmitri Shostakovich, Aram Khachaturyan, Dmitri Kabalevsky and Vissarion Shebalin; the pianists Emil Gilels, Svyatoslav Richter and Lev Oborin; the violinist David Oistrakh; the cellists Mstislav Rostropovich and Svyatoslav Knushevitsky.

The orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, presented three exciting musical programs interpreted with all the vigor, freshness and virtuosity for which the Boston Symphony has long been famous.

Munch conducted Richard Strauss' Don Juan, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe and Paul Dukas' The Sorcerer's Apprentice. Monteux conducted Schubert's Symphony in C Major, Haydn's Surprise Symphony, and Beethoven's Third.

New to Moscow audiences were four works by American composers: Creston's Second Symphony, Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, Hanson's Elegy and Aaron Copland's Symphonic-Ode.

Comments from the distinguished audience varied only in the degree of enthusiasm, with the hope, as expressed in the greeting by Tikhon Khrennikov of the Union of Soviet Composers, that this visit of the Boston Symphony to the Soviet Union would be the prelude to many more. ■

◀ SOVIET AUDIENCE APPLAUDS AMERICAN MUSICIANS

Hugo Wolf and His Lieder

By Edwin H. Schloss

Lied is, literally, a German word meaning a song. But Lieder has come to be a generic term for songs in the German vernacular — especially those reflecting the spirit and substance of German folk songs.

Hugo Wolf (1860-1903) was one of the greatest composers of German Lieder, a branch of musical art in which his name ranks with the greatest masters — his predecessors, Franz Schubert and Robert Schumann and his contemporaries Johannes Brahms and Richard Strauss.

Ernest Newman, distinguished dean of British music critics, has aptly appraised Wolf's songs. "It is because I believe Wolf to have said a larger number of beautiful things of a lyrical character and a greater variety of beautiful things than any other composer before or since, that I rank him above all other song writers." The 46 songs in Wolf's Italienisches Liederbuch (Italian Song Book) of which 43 will be sung by Irmgard Seefried and Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau at their joint recital scheduled for Forum members on the evening of November 1, represent Wolf's subtle and exquisite dramatico-lyric art in its fullest flowering. These are settings of verses by a number of relatively obscure or unknown Italian poets, metrically translated into the German by Johann Ludwig Paul Heyse (1830-1914), distinguished dramatist, poet and novelist, a lover of Italy and things Italian, who won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1910.

FRANK WALKER, Wolf's authoritative and perceptive English biographer, has this to say of these touching, amusing vignettes: "Character study plays a large part in the Italian Song-Book, which is full of the liveliest portraiture of the most varied types. Here Wolf allowed himself complete freedom in interpreting this poetic material and produced this most exquisite and original work. There is nothing Italian about these songs; everything has been refined and transfigured in the composer's imagination. He delighted in imitating in his music psychological subtleties that had occurred, certainly, neither to Heyse nor to the anonymous authors of the original Italian poems . . . The musical style is a marvel of simplicity and limpid beauty, purged of all dross like refined gold. The supreme art of the vocal writing is less a matter of 'declamation' as ordinarily understood, than of catching in the rise and fall of the phrases, the very inflections of the speaking voice in the most sensitive readings of the poem imaginable. In Wolf's Italian Songs the Lied attains its consummation."

Among the songs from the Italienisches Liederbuch on the Seefried - Fischer Dieskau program the following are among the most representative:

Nun lass uns Frieden schliessen.
A deeply felt and impassioned appeal to end a lover's quarrel uttered by a young man to his sweetheart.
Auch kleine dinge
A tender confession of how lovers may delight in little things.
Man sagt mir, deine Mutter wollt' es nicht
An appeal from a swain to his sweetheart not to heed her mother's prohibitions.
Und willst du deinen Liebsten sterben sehen
A lover entreats his lass to leave her golden tresses unbound, for she herself is fairer than gold.
Mein Liebster singt
An unhappily lovelorn maiden hears her lover singing in the moonlight while she must hide her tears from her mother.
Ein Ständchen Euch zu bringen
Gaily and tenderly a lover comes to serenade the daughter of the house and assures whoever hears his song that though the day has but twenty-four hours, he misses his beloved for at least twenty-five.
Ich hab' in Penna einen Liebsten wohnen
A young girl sings coquettishly of her lovers in various Italian towns and villages.
Mein Liebster hat zu Tische mich geladen
Somewhat ruefully, the young lady admits that while her lover had invited her to a banquet she could find no house, no hearth and no table.

Hugo Wolf was born in the small town of Windischgraz, Styria, on March 13, 1860. His father Philipp Wolf, a leather manufacturer of German extraction, was an enthusiastic musical amateur who, however, was unwilling to see his son become a professional musician. But Hugo, the second son in a family of eight children, showed a talent that was not to be denied and the boy at an early age received lessons in piano and violin. Due to business reverses caused by a fire that destroyed Philipp Wolf's house and workshop, the family fortunes fell to a low ebb and from that day Hugo Wolf's life was beset by want and hardship. Hugo's academic education was acquired at the Gymnasium at Graz, the Styrian capital. But his ruling interest continued to be music and his scholastic work was classified as "wholly inadequate."

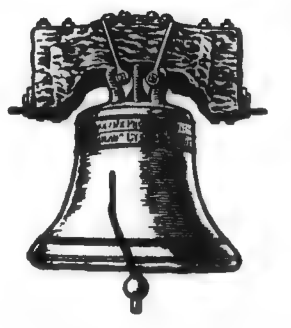
Finally yielding to what he believed to be the inevitable, Hugo's father sent the boy to the Vienna Conservatory in 1875, but unfortunately the young man's scholarship at the Conservatory proved to be not much better than in his previous schools. Once again Hugo showed himself an indifferent student, and after two unfruitful years he was dismissed from the Conservatory. Whereupon young Wolf, whose passion for his chosen art had never abated in spite of his undisciplined lethargy, turned to the study of music by his own method, which involved the most intensive study of text books and musical scores of all kinds. Foreshadowing his later supremacy as a song writer, at this time Wolf immersed himself in the study of poetry, reading omnivorously, especially the poetry of Goethe and the German Romantics. He also studied English and French in order to become familiar with the wealth of lyric poetry in those languages.

In 1875 Wolf met Richard Wagner — an event which had a profound influence on his life. Wagner, in Vienna in connection with productions of his Tannhäuser and Lohengrin, was kind to the eager youngster who sought his approval, and Wolf became one of Wagner's most fanatical and worshipful admirers. The years between 1877 and 1881 which Wolf spent in study were blighted by great poverty. He eked out a miserable living by taking private pupils.

(Continued on page 15, column 1)

Return Trip to Moscow

By John N. Burk



The Boston Symphony Orchestra's tour of Europe, completed on September 25, about a week previous to the opening of its 76th season in Boston on October 5, was its second cultural mission abroad, the first having been made in 1952. Such a journey could not be undertaken often by this orchestra, coming as it must between the close of the Berkshire Festival season at Tanglewood in mid-August and the new season in Boston. Since it exacts from the players a virtually solid year of concerts, frequent pilgrimages of this sort would be a strain upon human stamina. The tour was strenuous, involving performances in 19 cities in 13 countries from Ireland eastward to Russia and back to London. Eleven thousand miles of travel were of necessity made for the most part by air flight. Such a triumphal progress, which indeed it was, means ignoring fatigue, subsisting on glory, on the exhilarating privilege of carrying our music and our standards of performance to parts where they had only been hearsay. The orchestra was received in most cities by musically seasoned and musically devout audiences in a number of splendid and acoustically brilliant auditoriums, such as Usher Hall in Edinburgh, the new Folk Theatre in Copenhagen, the old world chandelier splendors of the great hall of the Conservatoire in Leningrad, the traditional hall of the same name in Moscow, the equally historic Smetana Hall in Prague, the Konzerthaus in Vienna, the six-week old modernistic Leiderhalle in Stuttgart, the Thêatre des Champs Elysées in Paris, and that spacious acoustical marvel — the Royal Festival Hall in London.

The tour was made in cooperation of the international exchange program of the American National Theatre and Academy (ANTA), the professional agency appointed by the United States State Department to assist American artists to perform abroad. The President's Fund established for this purpose was drawn upon.

President Eisenhower addressed to Henry B. Cabot in behalf of the orchestra the following letter on the day of its return:

> Dear Mr. Cabot:
>
> The reports of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during its recent tour of Europe have given me great satisfaction. Whenever outstanding Americans like the men and women of the Boston Symphony display their talents to the people of other countries, the cause of international understanding is advanced.
>
> Since all people want peace, it is necessary for the people of all nations to correspond at all levels and work out methods by which we can gradually learn more of each other. The exchange of artists is one of the most effective methods of strengthening world friendship. Your orchestra has demonstrated this truth.
>
> I should add that it is gratifying to observe that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has developed, in typical American fashion, with the sponsorship and devoted support of private citizens.
>
> Please welcome home your musicians and distinguished conductors, Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, and accept my congratulations on a job well done.
>
> Sincerely,
>
> Dwight D. Eisenhower

THE Boston Symphony's 75th season ended with this tour and Charles Munch took advantage of new works composed by commission for the anniversary year by presenting a new American piece at each concert. The composers were Copland, Piston and Hanson. Pierre Monteux, sharing the concerts as guest conductor, included music by the Americans Paul Creston or Isadore Freed on each of his programs.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra broke new ground by becoming, at the invitation of Moscow's Ministry of Culture, the first orchestra from the western world to perform in the U.S.S.R. Via three chartered Aeroflot Aleutian 21's, in two flights each, the official party of 122 flew from Helsinki to Leningrad, and performed in the beautiful white and red plush auditorium of the Leningrad Philharmonic, where American and Soviet flags hung on each side of the concert stage, and where bouquets of flowers and ecstatic applause greeted the concerts of Dr. Munch and Mr. Monteux, and where for the first time on the tour the orchestra broke its rule of no encores. In Moscow the orchestra personnel was greeted early in the morning on the railway station platform by the noted Soviet violinist David Oistrakh, a Philadelphia Forum soloist last season, who had played a concert for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund in Boston while on his first visit to the United States last winter. The three concerts in Moscow were attended by Shostakovitch, Kabalevsky, Khachaturian, Oistrakh, the pianist Emil Gilels, and other notables of the Soviet musical word.

The journey into Russia was a new and significant act of contact between the peoples at large of two arbitrarily separated worlds. It created a new relationship cemented by the "universal language" which binds all people in a common impulse — the love of music. Although the number who could hear the orchestra in live performance was limited by the capacity of the hall, the concerts were broadcast throughout Russia. The members of the orchestra report that they have never encountered such demonstrations. In the intermission and at the stage door, music lovers crowded about them, sometimes with tears in their eyes, eagerly asking questions about the unknown Western World, its music and its musical ways. In the street a player from Boston would be singled out if he carried such rare luxuries as a wrist watch or a camera and, language barriers permitting, would be questioned by a large and curious group. Professional musicians would examine the instruments of the visiting players, sadly admitting their lack of adequate strings, reeds, or instruments of their own. Since there was no currency vering newspaper supporters began to see the picture in its true colors.

(Continued on page 19, column 1)

The second declaration came from the President's banker brother Arthur. In an obviously inspired moment he had called McCarthy "the most dangerous menace to America." And had added for full measure: "It's too bad we have such a man in public life."

Mr. Merson writes pointedly: "But in almost every instance, behind the scenes there was action or maneuvering which belied the public word."

At the end of July the head of I.I.A. and his consultant bowed out of office and Washington. Behind them was a final enlightened and courageous directive that had something less than the hearty approval of the President and the Secretary of State. Its date, July 8, 1953, two days after Dr. Johnson's letter of resignation, is also noteworthy.

It was neither a decisive victory nor the end of a campaign. The hearings on subversion in the Army began on the same day.

There has been a distinct reaction from the excitement of those hearings. A degree of apathy has followed the repeated warnings of subversion in our midst, a degree of disgust in the revelation that key witnesses of the communist conspiracy were untrustworthy.

But the international picture has not changed. On a dozen fronts abroad and on the home front the peril is greater, more urgent. The cold war continues, and it is folly to believe that the enemy sleeps. National defense remains a job for all, at all hours, without trumpets or headlines.

Return Trip to Moscow

(Continued from page 10)

exchange between East and West each visitor was presented with a handful of roubles as spending money, with the result that the orchestral baggage was weighted down with caviar, vodka and balalaikas. As guests of the Government the orchestra was provided with hotels, four meals a day, conducted tours and transportation throughout. They were carried in and out of Russia by "Aeroflot" planes, from Leningrad to Moscow in a special "Red Arrow" sleeper train. Although they were constantly, almost too constantly, looked out for as guests, many managed to wander into the bystreets or in and out of shops. The result has been an enormous aggregate of photographs.

THROUGHOUT the tour the presence of a monarch or president in the special box was usual. Bouquets were presented on the stage together with speeches. When a concert took place in a capital there was always a reception afterwards at the Embassy.

Perhaps the most impressive setting of all and the most unusual for an orchestra was the magnificent twelfth-century Gothic Cathedral of Chartres, its vast interior especially illuminated for the occasion. A platform had been erected for the occasion. "Outside the great rose window," so wrote Frank Kelley of the New York Herald Tribune, "looking to the west at the end of the nave were floodlights which shed a soft glow into the interior.

"The orchestra itself sat beneath the window in the portico of the church. Floodlights lit up the arches of the clerestory and other floodlights at the east end of the church shone through the stained-glass windows above the altar. Other interior lighting included lights above the confessionals." An audience of 10,000 brought the town a substantial sum for the restoration of the cathedral.

THE Vinoy Park
HOTEL

31 Consecutive Seasons and Still the Finest!

Spend this winter at the Vinoy Park—one of the few hotels in Florida to maintain the connoisseur's standard of fine food and accommodations. Superb climate and the attractions of a lovely resort city. Our own golf, beach club, swimming pool, shuffleboard. Open December 20. For brochure write

STERLING B. BOTTOME
Managing Director

Phila. Office: PE 5-0608

ST. PETERSBURG, FLORIDA

The CLARIDGE
HOTEL

BOARDWALK • ATLANTIC CITY
"The Skyscraper by the Sea"
AUTUMN-GOLDEN SEASON OF GOOD TIMES BY THE SEA!

With superb seashore comfort in your choice of 400 outside rooms with private tub and shower, fresh and sea water. Ocean decks—health baths—superlative cuisine.

Dancing twice daily, with Eddie Buckley and the Guardsmen in the Merrie Mayfair Lounge

GEORGE B. BRUNI
Vice President & General Manager

Telephone
Phila. Office PE 5-6088

10/21/56

Symphony in Russia Made a Great Impression

By RUDOLPH ELIE

It may be emphatically be said that the vitis of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to Leningrad and Mocow was the most significant gesture of friendship between the American people and the Russian people since the American Army and the Russian Army met so cordially in the closing phases of World War II. It may even be said to be more significant, since that meeting involved only the military cordiality of the Russians was quickly smothered in orders from above: the Russian soldiers themselves were eager to be friendly but instantly obeyed the new policy line, as they do all policies directed by their leaders. But for roughly 20,000 Russians in a series of five concerts to come in contact with an orchestra so vastly different in character from their own and, in many ways, so vastly superior, was to provide them with food for thought for many months to come.

The reason for the difference and the superiority is not that the Americans are in any way superior to the Russians as musicians. The Russians are a highly musical people, as the ranks of our musical virtuosos testify, and it may not be said our musicians are higher in attainment. Two facts, however, are clear enough in contrasting a Russian orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The first is that the Russians instrumentalists are severely hampered by generally inferior musical instruments. In the severe shortage of violin makers and repairers, stringed instruments are in poor condition. Strings are in short supply, too, and of most inferior quality; the Russian musicians who were provided with strings by the Boston men (who had taken along many extras for just such a purpose) were astonished by them.

Brass instruments are also inferior, and a good many mutes in use by Western orchestras are simply not known. I was told of plastic clarinets and oboes of poor quality, of slower actions in keys, of mechanisms that didn't work well and so on. In contrast to the instruments of the Boston Symphony, Russian instruments are poor, indeed, and poor instruments limit both the virtuosity of an orchestra and its tonal qualities.

The second fact, which may be viewed as subjective, since it was my own observation and a relatively limited one at that, is that a Russian orchestra does not reflect the immense enthusiasm ours do. A musician is a relatively highly paid man in Russia; jobs are very competitive. But once accepted, a musician has a security unknown elsewhere. This is not to say he cannot be fired for incompetence, but he rarely is.

The consequence, which I observed during a performance of "Pique Dame" at the Bolshoi, is a certain lack-lustre in esprit de corps. The orchestra, and it was a very large one composed of members of the Moscow Orchestra Philharmonic, played well and sounded well, but it was a far cry from the brilliance, the elan, the tonal splendor and, not least, the extraordinary sense of togetherness found in the Boston Symphony.

Response Genuine

I had further opportunity to note the same lackadaisicle atmosphere in Communist Czechoslovakia. In Prague I went to a performance of Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" in the very theater in which his "Don Giovanni" was given its world premiere. It was a gem of a place, and I couldn't have been more awed than to find myself in it. But the performance on the stage was simply too amateur and sloppy to be tolerated by any capitalist director, while that in the pit was merely competent, nothing else. And during the long tacet of the flutes in the third act, the two flutists got up, took snubbed-out cigarette butts from their music stand, put them in their mouths and sauntered out. On one occasion I was afraid the harpischordist was sound asleep, his head on the instrument desk. Such complacence, born no doubt of security, does not make for a glittering performance of music anywhere.

Now it must be clear that the astonishing response of the Russian audiences gave no indication whatever of having been arranged politically. There wasn't the slightest suggestion they were not doing their bit, so to speak. The 10-minute ovation resulting in two encores in Moscow, continued long after the orchestra had left the stage; Mr. Munch re-appeared six times on an empty stage. Perhaps the hardest listener of all was Maya, one of our interpretors, whom we at first called the Iron Maiden in view of her icy composure and unshakeable conviction that Russia was not only the most beautiful place in the world but the best. This point of view, becoming enough in anyone, was diminished by the fact that Maya had never seen another country and not any too much of her own. Yet she attended every concert, as did most of the other interpretors, and her enthusiasm for it was boundless; she murmured "wonderful, wonderful!" endlessly.

Quite aside from the impact of the orchestra as a musical body, which was so great as to be indescribable, there was the personnel itself. No body of men could have behaved better than these genial musicians of the Boston Symphony. There was not, to my knowledge, a single unpleasant incident involving the Americans as Americans with the Russians. On the contrary, the men, whose clothing presented an almost grotesque contrast to the shabby habilments everywhere encountered in Russia, performed countless acts of kindness and friendliness. As a body they were happy of face and alert of bearing and their joking and laughter among themselves was a constant source of amazement to the interpretors, for the Russian laughs very seldom, at least, in public. And during our visit to Russia we encountered a number of other "delegations," all but one from Iron Curtain countries, and their glumness was even more pronounced than that of the Russians.

Thus to have the mere contact of our people with theirs, on a level so friendly, so open, so providing of opportunity to share ideas and ask questions on either side, observed perhaps by some secret eye but never interfered with; to walk about and see and be seen as a member of Western society, confident, cheerful, obviously prosperous and in beaming good health (for the average Russian, though a very healthy looking individual, does not seem to radiate it), was an incomparable gesture of good will. That the tour itself cost the American people the sum of $150,000 from the President's Fund is insignificant; it was clearly the greatest value in international relations the American people ever bought, though it must not be forgotten that the Russians themselves paid the entire cost of the visit to the Soviet. If the Boston Symphony was instrumental in breaking the ground, and if additional American attractions of a cultural nature are invited to follow suit, it could well lead to the first glimmer of light in our relationships.

THE ROVING EYE

By RUDOLPH ELIE

Russia, at Last; The Climax at Hand

LENINGRAD, WITH THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA—The face of Russia appeared below us, a misty green carpet emerging gently from the rippled sea, 8000 feet straight down. It was a flat wilderness of woods and marshes, with neither road nor habitation visible. The plane, a Russian version of the two-engined Convair, hummed on its course for Leningrad while its occupants sat as if numb at the turn of events. Over Russia? It didn't seem possible.

The events of the previous 11 days, during which the Boston Symphony orchestra had given concerts in Cork, Dublin, Edinburgh, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm and Helsinki, had not diminished in anyone's mind the central fact that the Russian days ahead were to be the real climax of the tour. Aside from the individual imaginations all at work simultaneously, each perhaps with its own special image of Russia and the Russian people, there had long been the additional stimulation of endless speculation. One said this, another said that, one thought this, another thought that. None knew anything, save that the Russians were to provide air transportation in six flights from Helsinki and, as well, apparently, to provide hotels, all meals and pin money in rubles.

Elite of Russia

It was left to Isaac Stern, the violin virtuoso recently returned from enormous successes in several Russian cities, to set the final stage. He appeared following a rehearsal in Usher Hall in Edinburgh shortly before we were to embark for Copenhagen, and spoke to the men. He couldn't have been more reassuring. He said that musicians and artists are the elite of Russia; that we would be treated with every courtesy and hospitality.

"They will ask many questions," he said, "what you are paid, do you own a house, have you a car and so on. Answer them as straightforwardly as you can, but don't make a speech. Be yourselves but under no circumstances discuss politics. Keep your private papers on your person at all times and talk quietly. You can walk anywhere you want to and photograph everything."

He talked for perhaps 15 minutes and was peppered with questions for another 15. Could film be bought? (Yes, on Gorki street in Moscow). Were there any good restaurants? (Yes, two or three, but it would cost 10 to 20 dollars or more a person to eat in them). How about souvenirs? (Almost nothing to buy, and what there is, is priced out of the market in the exchange of four rubles to the dollar). How are the Russian planes and pilots? (As good as any anywhere).

So there were the concerts in Copenhagen, in Oslo, in Stockholm and in Helsinki, each in widely contrasted halls, some acoustically fine, others very poor. But the receptions were not contrasted: all had in common an ovationary quality Boston has never heard, let alone imagined. There were the sightseeing trips through the famous places of these beautiful Scandinavian countries, and visits to restaurants and historical sights. There were parties of dinners-out in such places as Stockholm's "Golden Peace," where Bostonians locked arms with Swedes at a long table in a cellar, and bellowed Swedish songs, and receptions in American embassies (consisting mostly of standing around and not meeting anyone). And, of course, the continual searching for bargains and souvenirs and novelties in the shops everywhere. But there was always Russia ahead.

Focus of All Eyes

The sight of the first Russian airplane, as it came in for a landing at Helsinki while the men of the orchestra were standing round in the airport, customs, caught the special focus of all eyes. It landed all right and taxied safely in: It seemed to some a grateful miracle it could do so or, for that matter, could fly at all, for the average American is inclined to view foreign-made planes dubiously . . . and Russian-made planes most dubiously of all. Subsequent events were to adjust this notion, but the first contact was clearly one of great concern.

It was not seven in the morning when those of us on the first of the six flights to Leningrad boarded a bus and cleared for the Helsinki airport. There, on the apron, stood a Russian plane, almost undistinguishable from the Convair save for its markings: the red square of red Russia on the tail, the legend "Aeroflot" on the nose. We passed through the airport without red tape, climbed the platform, and took places in the plane. A Russian steward saw us in, but there was no sign alight on the bulkhead telling us to fasten our seat belts or to cease smoking. However, well trained in these matters, we had done so automatically. Within a minute or two two Russians pilots in blue uniforms came aboard, strode up to the control compartment without a backward glance and closed the door. Almost immediately the engines turned over and the plane moved to the runway.

There it turned abruptly and, without the extended warm-up period and the cheeking of this and that we are accustomed to on the apron, took off in a great burst of power, rose above the Gulf of Finland and headed east. It had now crossed to the Russian mainland beyond and Leningrad was but 45 minutes away. We looked out of the windows, forgetting we had had no breakfast (and would get none until we reached wherever we were going) and stared at the face of Russia below us. Its inscrutability was nearly paralyzing

THE BOSTON HERALD
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1956

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

COLUMBIAN NATURAL CLASP NO. 97N
®
UNITED STATES ENVELOPE COMPANY
10 X 13

put envelope in back of book with translations of Russian reviews

245 SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1956 121

AUX CONCERTS DE L'ORCHESTRE DE BOSTON

"PRAVDA"
14-9-1956

Parmi les événements les plus intéressants de notre vie musicale des dernières années, la place prépondérante revient, sans aucun doute, aux concerts de l'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston. les tournées en Union Sovétique de l'un des meilleurs ensembles symphoniques du monde, ont coincidés avec son 75-me anniversaire. Nombre d'éminents chefs d'orchestre ont travaillé avec cet orchestre, l'enrichissant de leur expérience et de leur maîtrise. Citons parmi eux Arthur Nikish, Karl Muck. Serge Koussevitsky, lequel dirigea cet orchestre pendant 25 ans, Pierre Monteux et enfin son chef actuel, Charles Munch.

L'orchestre de Boston est composé de musiciens de premier ordre-, d'artistes et de virtuoses dans le plein sens du mot. Tous ses groupes- les cordes, les bois, les cuivres, la percussion,- composent un ensemble d'une cohésion rare. La sonorité unifiée de tout l'orchestre est aussi bonne que la sonorité de chaque soliste. C'est un ensemble véritablement artistique, qui est parvenu à ce degré de maîtrise, lorsque les difficultés techniques cessent d'exiter et que toute l'attention se concentre sur la solution de problèmes artistiques; lorsque, dans les épisodes les plus ~~tendres~~ puissants et les plus forts de la musique, la sonorité reste aussi expressive que dans les épisodes les plus tendres, pareille à un murmure à peine perceptible; lorsque les traits et les nuances de l'exécution sont travaillés comme ne le sont généralement que les ensembles de musique de chambre.

Est-t-il nécessaire de parler du rôle énorme qui revient à celui qui dirige l'orchestre, à son chef, pour parvenir à de tels résultats! Charles Munch est un grand artiste et un grand maître, exécutant avec la même perfection les oeuvres des grands maîtres du passé et la musique contemporaine. Si l'on essaye d'analyser la force conquérante de Charles Munch, on voudrait dire en premier lieu que cette force se combine à un souffle puissant qui englobe toute l'oeuvre du premier au dernier son, tous les détails jusqu'aux plus petits. Mais l'art suprême, l'essentiel, sans aucun doute, c'est que Munch est un artiste et un être humain, plein de sentiments profonds et sincères, doté d'un intellect puissant et d'une âme étonnamment jeune.

Nombre d'entre nous se souviennent de Pierre Monteux à l'époque de ses concerts à Moscou, vers le milieu des années 20. L'un des plus grands chefs d'orchestre francais, il a consacré beaucoup d'années à l'orchestre symphonique de Boston et participe constamment maintenant à ses tournées. De même que Charles Munch il allie une compréhension profonde de la musique classique à un vif intérêt pour l'art contemporain.

Au cours des trois concerts donnés à Moscou (le premier et le troisième dirigés par Munch et le deuxième par Monteux). l'orchestre de Boston a interprété un vaste programme varié, comprenant des oeuvres classiques du XIXème siècle et de la musique de notre temps.

Parmi les oeuvres classiques, signalons en premier lieu la 3-ième Symphonie (Héroique) de Beethoven. Cette Symphonie bouleversante par son ampleur, par la puissance de l'élément héroique, connait la destinée de nombreuses oeuvres géniales, qui, en raison d'interprétations trop fréquentes, et, hélas, loin d'être toujours parfaites, commencent littéralement à ternir, à perdre de leur vigeur et de leur fraîcheur. Il faut avoir un don vraiment exceptionnel pour rendre à l'oeuvre sa beauté première et sa force agissante.

Charles Munch y est parvenu pleinement: nous avons entendu un véritable Beethoven, le héraut des grandes ifées humanitaire, le chantre de la beuté et de la liberté, conduisant vers son idéal par la voie ardue, mais lumineuse de la lutte héroique.

AUX CONCERTS DE L'ORCHESTRE DE BOSTON

"PRAVDA"
14-9-1956

Parmi les événements les plus intéressants de notre vie musicale des dernières années, la place prépondérante revient, sans aucun doute, aux concerts de l'Orchestre Symphonique de Boston. les tournées en Union Sovétique de l'un des meilleurs ensembles symphoniques du monde, ont coincidés avec son 75-me anniversaire. Nombre d'éminents chefs d'orchestre ont travaillé avec cet orchestre, l'enrichissant de leur expérience et de leur maîtrise. Citons parmi eux Arthur Nikish, Karl Muck. Serge Koussevitzky, lequel dirigea cet orchestre pendant 25 ans, Pierre Monteux et enfin son chef actuel, Charles Munch.

L'orchestre de Boston est composé de musiciens de premier ordre-, d'artistes et dé virtuoses dans le plein sens du mot. Tous ses groupes-les cordes, les bois, les cuivres, la percussion,- composent un ensemble d'une cohésion rare. La sonorité unifiée de tout l'orchestre est aussi bonne que la sonorité de chaque soliste. C'est un ensemble véritablement artistique, qui est parvenu à ce degré de maîtrise, lorsquè les difficultés techniques cessent d'exiter et que toute l'attention se concentre sur la solution de problèmes artistiques; lorsque, dans les épisodes les plus puissants et les plus forts de la musique, la sonorité reste aussi expressive que dans les épisodes les plus tendres, pareille à un murmure à peine perceptible; lorsque les traits et les nuances de l'exécution sont travaillés comme ne le sont généralement que les ensembles de musique de chambre.

Est-t-il nécessaire de parler du rôle énorme qui revient à celui qui dirige l'orchestre, à son chef, pour parvenir à de tels résultats! Charles Munch est un grand artiste et un grand maître, exécutant avec la même perfection les oeuvres des grands maîtres du passé et la musique contemporaine. Si l'on essaye d'analyser la force conquérante de Charles Munch, on voudrait dire en premier lieu que cette force se combine à un souffle puissant qui englobe toute l'oeuvre du premier au dernier son, tous les détails jusqu'aux plus petits. Mais l'art suprême, l'essentiel, sans aucun doute, c'est que Munch est un artiste et un être humain, plein de sentiments profonds et sincères, doté d'un intellect puissant et d'une âme étonnamment jeune.

Nombre d'entre nous se souviennent de Pierre Monteux à l'époque de ses concerts à Moscou, vers le milieu des années 20. L'un des plus grands chefs d'orchestre francais, il a consacré beaucoup d'années à l'orchestre symphonique de Boston et participe constamment maintenant à ses tournées. De même que Charles Munch il allie une comprehension profonde de la musique classique à un vif intérêt pour l'art contemporain.

Au cours des trois concerts donnés à Moscou (le premier et le troisième dirigés par Munch et le deuxième par Monteux). l'orchestre de Boston a interprété un vaste programme varié, comprenant des oeuvres classiques du XIXème siècle et de la musique de notre temps.

Parmi les oeuvres classiques, signalons en premier lieu la 3-ième Symphonie (Héroique) de Beethoven. Cette Symphonie bouleversante par son ampleur, par la puissance de l'élément héroique, connait la destinée de nombreuses oeuvres géniales, qui, en raison d'interprétations trop fréquentes, et, hélas, loin d'être toujours parfaites, commencent littéralement à ternir, à perdre de leur vigeur et de leur fraîcheur. Il faut avoir un don vraiment exceptionnel pour rendre à l'oeuvre sa beauté première et sa force agissante.

Charles Munch y est parvenu pleinement: nous avons entendu un véritable Beethoven, le héraut des grandes ifées humanitaire, le chantre de la beuté et de la liberté, conduisant vers son idéal par la voie ardue, mais lumineuse de la lutte héroique.

---

put envelope in back of book with translations of Russian reviews

245 SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1956 121

Les deux Symphonies de Haydn, la "Surprise" en sol-majeur (Pierre Monteux), et la Symphonie No 102 en si-bémol-majeur (Charles Munch) furent exécutées avec une recherche extrême, la simplicité, l'optimisme et l'humour populaire assez lourd, propres au compositeur. Monteux dirigea merveilleusement aussi la Septième Symphonie (Grande symphonie en do-majeur) de Schubert.

La musique contemporaine fut représentée pa la Deuxième Suite de Maurice Ravel, extraite du ballet de "Daphnis et Chloé", par le "Don Juan" de Richard Strauss et le poème symphonique de Paul Dukas "L'Apprenti Sorcier". Toutes ces oeuvres furent dirigées par Munch. C8est là que son immense talent put se déployer dans toute son ampleur.

Son interprétation de la Suite de Ravel a admirablement démontré combien superficiels et exclusifs sont les critiques enclin à ne voir en Ravel que le maître inégalé du coloris de l'orchestre, le créateur de sonorités magiques. Or bien entendu, Ravel est grand avant tout par sa force vitale, triomphante, et non pas seulement par la beauté et la richesse de sa forme musicale. Ses meilleures oeuvres, notamment "Daphnis et Chloé", sont comme des rayons de soleil, qui aveuglent et en même temps irradient une énergie vitale. Et c'est présisément cette richesse intérieure, la vitalité de la musique de Ravel que le chef d'orchestre a si prestigieusement révélée. C8est avec une fougue ardente que fut exécuté le "Don Juan" de Strauss, si difficile pour un orchestre, et enfin, tel un brillant feu d'artifice, retentit le poème captivant de Dukas, "L'Apprenti Sorcier". On ne saurait oublier non plus avec quelle virtuosité et quelle fougue l'orchestre exécuta (en bis) sous la direction de Pierre Monteux, un fragment de l'opéra de de Richard Strauss, "Le Chevalier à la Rose".

Il faut parler séparément des oeuvres des compositeurs Américains: la Sixième Symphonie de Walter Piston, "L'Elégie"de H. Hanson, .a Symphonie-Ode de Copland (sous la direction de Munch), et la "Deuxième Symphonie" de Paul Creston (sous la direction de Pierre Monteux).Nos Hôtes de Boston ont bien fait de nous donner autant de musique moderne. Nous devons les en remercier, car nous devons reconnaître que la musique moderne Américaine n'est pas assez bien connue d'un grand nombre de nos auditeurs.

Walter Piston (que nous connaissons grâce à son poème souvent exécuté avec succès "L'extraordinaire flutiste"), a écrit sa Sixième Symphonie, il y a tout juste un an, spécialement pour le 75-me jubilée de l'orchestre de Boston. Cette oeuvre vient confirmer notre idée , que le compositeur est un bon maître d'orchestration,pouvant se servir aisément de la forme symphonique. Si sa musique manque quelque peu d'éclat et de relief mélodique individuel, en revanche elle se développe naturellement et avec conviction, et possède un véritable tempérament et fantaisie artistiques. C'est la deuxième partie de la Symphonie, un Scherzo d'une virtuosité extrême, ainsi que la troisième partie, extrêmement concentrée, atteignant une grande force dramatique, qui nous ont laissé la meilleure impression.

Creston de même que Piston, appartient à ce groupe de compositeurs Américains modernes, ayant en commun leur conception sérieuse de l'art, leur tendance opiniâtre à s'opposer à un modernisme extrêmiste et à développer les traditions vitales de la musique classique. Sa Deuxième Symphonie en deux parties est particulièrement attirante dans sa deuxième partie, remplie de rythmes audacieux et acérés, inspirés apparemment par les particularités de la musique populaire nègre. Dans la conclusion de cette partie, le compositeur a merveilleusement su combiner un canevas âprement rythmé et une mélodie captivante et ample.

"L'Elégie" de Hanson est une oeuvre soncère et poétique, mais dont la la musique manque d'éclat et le style de fermeté. La Symphonie de Copland a produit une impression pénible; c'est une oeuvre artificielle dans laquelle abondent des sonorités exagérément complexes et forcées, des effets orchestraux grossiers et peu naturels, des rythmes convulsifs. Nous connaissons Copland comme un musicien intelligent, instruit et doué, et en écoutant cette oeuvre, nous avons pu, une fois de plus, nous convaincre de l'influence nuisible qu'exerce sur certain compsiteurs la tendance erronée à se diriger à tout prix vers ce qui est nouveau et inusité.

Les trois concerts de l'orchestre de Boston ont connu un extraordinaire succès. Le public, parmi lequel on pouvait voir presque tous nos plus grands musiciens, a exprimé par de tumultueux applaudissements sa reconnaissance sincère aux hôtes, dont l'art lui procura une véritable délectation.

Dm. Kabalevski

SOVIETSKAIA KOULTOURA 11-9-1956

LES CONCERTS DE L'ORCHESTRE DE BOSTON

Les manifestations du célèbre orchestre symphonique de Boston, ont procuré une joie immense aux amateurs de musique. Dirigé pendant 25 ans par le remarquable chef d'orchestr S.A. Koussevitzky, l'orchestre de Boston a assimilé les qualités et les principes artistiques, ainsi que le talent d'interprétation de cet éminent musicien.

J'ai eu la chance, au début de mon activité musicale, de travailler sous la direction de Koussevitzki en qualité d'assitant et je me souviens qu'il réclamait toujours de la mélodie dans l'exécution et disait que "la musique, c'est du chant". C'est précisément cette résonnance mélodieuse, expressive et pleine d'émotion du jeu de l'orchestre de Boston tout entier, et chez chacun des exécutants, qui est insontestablement une de ses grandes qualités.

La seconde qualité de l'orchestre est sa cohésion dans l'exécution et sa manière de jouer. Il est absolument évident que tout orchestre joue avec un soin particulier au cours d'une tournée. Mais les artistes de l'orchestre de Boston jouent avec légerté et aisance, comme si c'était un de leurs concerts ordinaires. Ils peuvent même se permettre certaines rudesses accidentelles, sans gêne aucune, et aussitôt après, dans le morceau suivant, aveugler et étourdir, par leur stupéfiante virtuosité.

La troisième qualit, peut-être la plus importante à notre époque, est l'extrême pureté de l'intonation, autrement dit l'harmonie de l'orchestre.

Bien entendu, toutes ces qualités ont été acquises au cours de longues années. C'est que l'orchestre existe depuis 75 ans. A coup sûr, un rôle énorme dans la formation des remarquables qualités artistiques de l'orchestre appartient à des musiciens de classe internationale, tels que Arthur Nikish, Karl Muck et d'autres, qui l'ont dirigé. Sur le plan professionnels et artistique, le niveau d'exécution des artistes de l'orch. est très élevé. On aimerait parler de tous. du prestigieux premier violon, Richard Burgin, qui dirige le groupe des premiers violons, où tous les artistes semblent égaux par la maîtrise et l'exécution, jusqu'au doigté qui est identique; de L'excellent groupe des second violons, comprenant d'excellents musiciens, jouant la partie réservée aux "seconds" violons (par le son, exécution et la technique ils ne se distinguent en rien des premiers); et enfin du merveilleux groupe des altos, ayant à leur tête Joseph de Pasquale.

On ne saurait passer sous silence le jeu du soliste violoncelliste Sam Maes, le son saillant et suave des contrebasses, la maîtrise prodigieuse de la flutiste Doriot Antony Dwyer, le jeu nuancé des hautbois, des clarinettes, des cors d'harmonie etc....

Un autre factuer encore qui joue un rôle capital dans la pureté et la résonnance de l'orchestre, sont les instruments. Tout le groupe des instruments à cordes des Bostoniens joue sur de merveilleux instruments italiens, parfois uniques. Quand aux instruments à vent et de percussion, ils sont tous de fabrication récente et les meilleurs.

Actuellement, c'est le prestigieux chef d'orchestre, Charles Munch, qui dirige l'orchestre symphonique de Boston. C8est un artiste résolu, fougueux, raffiné, d'une grande culture, connaissant parfaitement les possibilités de son orchestre, sachant captiver à la fois l'orchestre et les auditeurs.. La deuxième Suite de "Daphnis et Chloé" de Maurice Ravel retentit étourdissante et spontanée sous sa direction; l'Adagio de la 2-me Symphonie de Schumann, fut profondément émouvante par sa cantilène continue, pénétrée de romantisme, ainsi que le final éblouissant de la Symphonie de Haydn. "L'Apprenti Sorcier" de Paul dukas, fur exécuté avec unsouffle et une virtuosité extraordinaires. Quel que soit le morceau exécuté par l'orchestre, on sent toujours un contact étroit entre son chef et chacun des exécutants.

Il nous fut également agréable de saluer au pupitre Pierre Monteux, que nous avions entendu encore en 1926 aux concerts de la Philharmonie de Leningrad. Ce musicien est depuis longtemps lié à l'art russe; c'est lui, précisément, qui dirigea les spectacles du Ballet Russe de Diaghilev à Paris.

Les représentations de l'orchestre symphonique de Boston, marquent un événement considérable dans notre vie musicale. Cet orchestre a fait preuve d'une grande culture d'execution, de qualités artistiques élevées.

Les oeuvres de compositeurs Américains inconnus de nous, suscitèrent un très vif intérêt et notamment la Sixième Symphonie de Piston et la Deuxième Symphonie de Creston.Cependant il est dommage que le programme ne comportait aucune oeuvre de la musique classique Russe. Nous savons, notamment, que le répertoire de l'orchestre de Boston comprend des Symphonies de Tchaikovski. Combien il aurait été intéressant d'en entendre une exécutée par un tel orchestre.

Les concerts de l'orchestre symphonique de Boston à Moscou ont une fois de plus convaincu que le language de l'art musical, partant du coeur, est accessible à des millions d'individus et sert de stimulant puissant pour resserer les liens amicaux entre les peuples.

Alexandre Gaouk
Chef-d'orchestre.

LITERATOURNAIA GAZETTA 11-9-1956

L'ORCHESTRE DE BOSTON A MOSCOU

L'estrade de la Grande Salle du Conservatoire de Moscou, est dominée par le chiffre "75-ans", en fleurs d'automne éclatantes. C8est un signe d'acceuil adressé à l'orchestre symphonique de Boston en ces jours de son 75-me jubilée, alors qu'il accomplit une vaste tournée dans les pays d'Europe.

L'orchestre de Boston est numériquement le plus important de tous les groupes musicaux qui ont visité notre pays ces derniers temps; plus de cent musiciens de premier ordre, dirigés par Charles Munch et Pierre Monteux. Chacun d'entre eux est indispensable et irremplaçable dans cet ensemble d'une rare cohésion. Ses qualités précieuses, telles que sa discipline, unie à une grande liberté artistique, sont précédées par le long chemin parcouru par cet ensemble dirigé tour à tour par Artut Nikish et Serge Koussevitzky, Serge Koussevitsky, ce dernier, originaire de Russie, et qui pendant un quart de siècle dirigea cet orchestre, ainsi que par bien d'autres chefs d'orchestre éminents.

Le programme des concerts de l'orchestre de Boston était tout à fait intéressant et varié, bien qu'on pût regretter l'absence totale d'oeuvres musicales Russes ou soviétiques.

Les Moscovites ont pu entendre des Symphonies de Haydn, Beethoven, Schubert, des oeuvres de P. Dukas, Richard Strauss, Ravel, ainsi que des oeuvres peu connues de nous de compositeurs modernes et étrangers.

Le dernier concert des Bostoniens eu lieu le 9 Septembre. Mais on peut voir déjà des affiches annonçant les programmes des concerts de l'orchestre philharmonique de Londres. La saison ne fait que commencer, l'avenir nous réserve d'intéressantes rencontres, de nouvelles impressions marquantes.

SOVIETSKAIA KOULTOURA 13-9-1956

"J'AIMERAIS VENIR PLUS SOUVENT EN RUSSIE"

(Interview par Charles Munch)

" Les mots me manquent pour exprimer notre joie devant le chaleureux acceuil qui nous fut réservé en Union Soviétique. Nos rencontres avec les auditeurs soviétiques, pour lesquels il nous fut très agréable de jouer, nous ont procuré une énorme satisfaction".

C'est par ces mots que commença notre entrevue avec le chef d'orchestre symphonique de Boston, Charles Munch. Cette phrase fut prononcée d'une voix calme et correcte et au début il nous sembla que ce n'était pas autre chose qu'une"amabilité mondaine" dans la bouche d'un homme poli etmbim bien élevé. Mais cette impression se dissipa rapidement. Non, Charles Munch, était effectivement très content de la finesse artistique des mélomanes de Leningrad et de Moscou.. La conversation involontairement revenait sans cesse sur ce thème et chaque fois le chef d'orchestre de Boston affirmait que la tournée en Union Soviétique (l'entrevue se passait dans l'appartement de Munch à l'hôtel Métropole à Moscou, quelques heures avant son départ pour Prague) lui avait laissé le meilleur souvenir.

A notre entrevue participèrent Léonard Burkat, le secrétaire de Munch et le jeune compositeur soviétique André Echpai, On parlait tantôt le Russe tantôt l'anglais, tantôt l'allemand, tantôt le français, cherchant à trouver le terme le plus précis pour rendre telle ou telle pensée.

Nombre de questions artistiques furent abordées au cours de cette conversation amicale. Il s'est agi des thèmes se rattachant à l'évolution de l'art musical dans les deux pays, des causes de la popularité, et dans certains cas de l'impopularité de certaines oeuvres auprès du grand public(à ce propos, répondant à la question quelle était son opinion sur les différentes tendances musicales ultra-modernes à la mode dans certains milieux, Munch répondit brièvement, mais très nettement:"La musique- ce n'est pas du bruit, mais avant tout de la mélodie-"). Cet éminent chef d'orch. nous parle en détail de l'activité des orchestres symphoniques Américains. Ensuite la conversation roula sur les arrangements de Ravel, que Munch connut personnellement et qui, selon lui, aimait beaucoup la musique russe, les oeuvres de Moussorgski, et notamment ses "Tableaux d'une Exposition" ainsi que la symphonie en Si-mineur sur des thèmes russes, oeuvre de Debussy.

La conversation prit un tour extrêmement animé lorsqu'on demanda à Munch ses impressions sur l'oeuvre des compositeurs soviétiques. Il nous di que les oeuvres de Shostakovitch, Prokofieff, Khatchatourian et et Kabalevsky jouissaient d'une popularité particulière auprès des auditeurs américains. Personnellement Munch préfère les oeuvres de Prokofieff. Il est fier d'avoir été le premier à diriger le 2-me Concerto pour violon, de ce remarquable compositeur soviétique. Le répertoire de Munch comporte également les concertos pour piano et violon de Khatchatourian. Parmi les oeuvres de Shostakovitch, l'orchestre de Boston joue le plus souven la 7-me symphonie. Lorsque la conversation passa à la Dixième symphonie de ce compositeur, Munch nous dit que cette oeuvre suscita le plus vif intérêt des mélomanes américains.

"Malheureusement nous n'avons pas été les premiers aux Etats-Unis à exécuter la Dixième symphonie: c'est l'orchestre de la radio de New-York qui nous a battus de vitesse",-ajoute Munch.

Parmi les oeuvres de classiques russes ce sont les compositions de Tchaikovski que l'orchestre de Boston joue le plus souvent. La musique de ce grand compositeur russe retentit souvent dans ses concerts. Il est intéressant de signaler que le dernier enregistrement fait par l'orchestre est également une oeuvre de Tchaikovski, sa fameuse Quatrième Symphonie.

Charles Munch a déjà eu l'occasion de faire connaissance personnellement de certains musiciens soviétiques, Le jeu de David Oistrakh, qu'il a rencontré dans son pays, produisit sur lui une énorme impression (il a beaucoup regretté d'avoir "raté" Emile Guillels lorsque ce dernier était aux Etats-Unis.) Munch considère comme une musicienne remarquable Nelly Shkolnikova, avec laquelle il eut l'occasion, à l'époque, d'exécuter le concerto pour violon et orchestre de Tchaikovsky.

Charles Munch nous a dit que d'une manière générale, dans la mesure où cela lui est possible, il suit avec grande attention et vif intérêt le développement de la vie musicale en U.R.S.S. et qu'il connait assez bien la manière de jouer des grands orchestres symphoniques de notre pays. C'est l'orchestre philharmonique de Leningrad, dirigé par Mravinsky, qu'il préfère. Lorsque nous avons abordé les perspectives de l'expansion ultérieure des relations culturelles entre nos pays, il dit une fois rentré aux Etats-Unis, il déploiera tous ses efforts en vue d'organiser une tournée ~~des orchestres~~ de l'orchestre de Leningrad avec Eugène Mravinski, dans les salles de concerts des Etats-Unis.

A la question de savoir s'il aimerait diriger des orchestres soviétiques, le chef d'orchestre américain répond que si cette possibilité lui était donnée, elle marquerait à coup sûr l'un des plus grands événements de sa vie artistique. Bien d'autres questions furent abordees que nous ne pouvons citer toutes.ici.Il est beaucoup plus important de parler du thème qui domina tout cet entretien: l'élargissement et la consolidations des relations culturelles entre les peuples. Quel que fut le tour pris par notre conversation, ce thème revenait toujours, car cette question agite tous les hommes cultivés dans le monde entier. Charles Munch a invariablement souligné,qu'à son avis, les musiciens de tous les pays, y compris les Américains sont très désireux d'élargir les relations culturelles internationales, et que le mailleur moyen de les resserer,est le respect mutuel.

"Nous devons mieux nous connaître, les uns les autres,-dit le musicien américain.- "J'aimerais venir le plus souvent possible en Russie et j'aimerais que vos remarquables artistes soient nos hôtes fréquents".

"La Paix dans le monde entier- c'est vers quoi nous devons tous tendre, sans relâche."- C'est sur ces paroles que s'acheva l'interview de Charles Munch.

Y.OKOV

INT. POPOV

Concert of the Boston Orchestra

Yesterday in the Great Hall of the Filharmoniya

The first concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (USA), coming for a guest tour of the Soviet Union at the invitation of the Ministry of Culture of the USSR, took place yesterday in the Great Hall of the Filharmoniya.

The stage of the Filharmoniya was decorated with the flags of the USSR and the USA. Representatives of the Leningrad Filharmoniya warmly greeted their artistic brethern and presented bouquets of living flowers to the American musicians.

Before the beginning of the concert, the Boston Orchestra played the State hymns of the Soviet Union and the United States of America.

Responsible officials of the American Embassy in the USSR, coming from Moscow, attended the concert.

- - - - -

The symphony season in the Great Hall of the Filharmoniya opened yesterday with a concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (USA) under the direction of its principal conductor, Charles Munch.

This year Leningraders have appraised at its true worth the mastery of individual representatives of the art of the USA - the outstanding violinist, Isaac Stern and the singer Jan Peerce. Now we have the opportunity to become acquainted with a great organization, the first foreign symphony orchestra to visit the Soviet Union.

The Boston Orchestra is one of the oldest in America. Among the leaders of this orchestra for the three-quarters of a century of its creative activity have been outstanding conductors - among them Arthur Nikisch, Karl Muck, Sergei ~~Kouss~~ Koussevitsky and Pierre Monteux. This year it observes its 75th year, celebrating it with a great jubilee tour of Europe.

The brilliant Third ("Eroica") Symphony of Beethoven, a monumental composition, unusual in its philosophical depth and passion, opened the first concert. It was performed in perfect tempo, nobly and simply. If one still sensed a certain lack of cohesiveness (nesobrannost'), if the coloration of tone was not yet found in new acoustic conditions, beginning with the funeral march, the conductor and orchestra completely mastered the hall. The scherzo and finale were played faultlessly. Charles ~~Mxx~~ Munch very expressively called forth the basic idea of the symphony, subordinating all movements to it, he very skillfully calculated its "emotional accumulation", thanks to which the symphony appeared before the audience wonderously compact in form, standing out in the conciousness like a sculptured monument.

Already after the first part the merits of the orchestra were clearly revealed; an excellent feeling of fhythm, an uncommon evenness of the sounds of all groups and the precise bowing of the string quintette (concertmaster Richard Burgen).

In the second part of the concert, the 6th Symphony of the contemporary American composer, Walter Piston, was performed. It is very difficult to define the merits of this rather complicated music on one hearing, but the middle movements showed themselves to be the most arresting: the second - a masterly, brilliant instrumental (and brilliantly played) scherzo and the third - a dramatic adagio with an expressive cello solo.

The second suite from the Maurice Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe", played in conclusion, turned out to be the real masterpiece of the program, Both the delicate poetical quality of daybreak and the firey rhythms of the dance were transmitted by the conductor with great expressiveness. The piece, exceptionally difficult in its technique, rhythm and texture is performed by the orchestra with enviable improvized lightness, as if one many-imaged musician played it. With bewitching artistry the first flutist of the orchestra, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, performs her great solo. At the insistent request of the audience for and encore, Dukas' fantastic scherzo "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" was played as an encore, which further strengthened the sympathy of Leningraders toward the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its leader - conductor Charles Munch. Prolonged applause rewarded our guests for the esthetic pleasure which they produced and was and expression of friendly feelings toward the American people.

Ed, Grikurov
Honored Art Worker of
the RSFSR.

Vecherñii Leningrad

September 7, 1956

Translated by: Roye L. Lowry
Checked by: William N. Turpin

On the Concerts of the Boston Orchestra

Among the interesting events of our concert life or recent years, an outstanding place undoubtedly belongs to the appearances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The guest appearance in the Soviet Union of one of the best symphony orchestras in the world coincides with the 75th anniversary of its founding. Many outstanding conductors have worked with this orchestra, enriching it with their experience and craftsmanship. Among them should be mentioned Arthur Nikisch, Karl Muck, Sergei Koussevitsky, who headed the orchestra for 25 years, Pierre Monteux and, finally, its present leader, Charles Munch.

The Boston orchestra is composed of first class musicians, artists and virtuosos in the full sense of this word. All of its sections - strings, woodwinds, brass and precussion - make up an ensemlbe of rare evenness. The sonority of the whole orchestra together is just as good as the separate phonations of its soloists. It is a really artistic organization, which has achieved such a level of craftsmanship that technical difficulties of any kind have ceased to exist for it and all attention is switched to the resolution of artistic problems; when in the most powerful episodes of the music the sonority remains just as expressive as in tender episodes verging on a barely audible whisper; when the performance of shading and nuances is as fine as is usually the case only in chamber groups....

One should speak of the great role in the achievements of such results which belongs to the leader of the orchestra, the conductor. Charles Munch is a great artist and craftsman performing perfectly in equal measure either the works of the great masters of the past or the music of his contemporaries. If one tries to define what constitues Charles Munch's conquering strength, one wants first of all to say: this strength consists of the combination of tremendous expression enveloping a work from the first to the last sound with utmost fineness of all, even the smallest of its details. But craftsmanship is craftsmanship and the important thing undoubtedly is that Munch is an artist and a man, full of deep and sincere feelings, possessed of strength of intellect and an astonishingly young spirit.

Many of us still remember Pierre Monteux for his concerts in Moscow in the middle of the twenties. One of the greatest French conductors, he for a number of years devoted himself to work with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and presently is a permanent participant in its guest tours. Just as Charles Munch, he combines the deepest understanding of classical music with a lively interest in comtemporary creativeness.

In the three concerts which took place in Moscow (the first and third conducted by Munch - the second by Monteux), the Boston Symphony Orchestra performed a large and varied program, including classical music of the 19th Century and music of our time.

Of the classical works performed by the orchestra, one must speak, first of all, of the Third ("Eroica") Symphony of Beethoven. This symphony, tremendous in its scope in its strength of heroic tension, has experienced the fate of many works of genius, which from too frequent and alas, by no means always perfect performance, begin as if to lose their luster, to lose their strength and freshness. And one needs a real gift to return to the composition its original beauty and streng h of influence.

~~Charles Munch managed~~ Charles Munch managed to do this in full measure; we heard the real beethoven, the herald of great humanistic ideas, the singer of beauty and freedom, leading to his ideals along the difficult buth shining path of heroic struggle.

Stylishly in the highest degree, the two Haydn symphonies: the "Surprise" Symphony in G Major (Pierre Monteux) and Symphony No. 102 in A-flat major were played with the ingenuousness, optimism and rather heavy national humor characteristic of the composer. Monteux also splendidly conducted the Seventh ("Great" C-major) Symphony of Schubert.

Music of modern times was represented by the Second Suite of Maurice Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe", Richard Strauss' "Apprentice". They played all of these works under the direction of Munch. This is where his great talent is displayed in all its breadth!

By his playing of Ravel, he magnificently shows how one-sided and superficial are those critics who are inclined to see in Ravel only an unsurpassed master of orchestral coloring, a creator of enchanting resonance. Certainly Ravel is great above all for his winning vital strength, and not only for the beauty and richness of his musical form. His better works, among them "Daphnis and Chloe", just like sunlight, blind and at the same time radiate vital energy. And it is just this internal content, the vitality, of Ravel;s music which the conductor exposes magnificently. Strauss' "Don Juan" which is most difficult for an orchestra, was played with fiery temperament and finally, like brilliant fireworks resounded Dukas' fascinating poem "The Sorcere's Apprentice". Nor can one fail to recall how masterly and with what temperament the orchestra, under the direction of Pierre Monteux, played a fragment from Richard Strauss' opera "Der Rosenkavalier" as an encore.

One must speak separately of the works of American composer: of Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, of Howard Hanson's Elegy, of Aaron Copeland's symphonic ode (under the direction of Munch) and of Paul Creston's Second Symphony (under the direction of Monteux). Our Boston guests did well to show us so much of contemporary music. We should thank them for it since it is fitting to admit that modern American music is insufficiently well-known to broad circles of our listeners.

Walter Piston (he is known to us for his repeatedly and successfully performed poem "The Incredible Flutist") wrote the Sixth Symphony only a year ago especially for the 75th concert season of the Boston orchestra. This work reinforces our impression of the composer as a fine master of orchestration who has completely mastered the symphonic form. And if his music is somewhat unsatisfying as to individual and bold melodic vividness, in any case it is developed naturally and convincingly without lack of real artistic temperament and imagination. The second movement of the symphony, a most masterly scherzo and the third movement, which is concentrated and in its developement, reaches great strength of dramatic effect, are the most impressive.

Creston, like Piston, joins that group of contemporary American composers who are united in their serious relations to art and in their persistent efforts to resist the extremes of modernism and to develop the vital traditions of classical music. His Second Symphony in two movements is expecially attractive in its second movement, full of brave and sharp rhythms, drawn, obviously, from the distinctiveness of Negro folk music. In the conclusion of this movement the composer masterfully united the sharp rhythmical fabric with a broad and attractive melody (melodika).

Creston, like Piston, joins that group of contemporary American composers who are united in their serious relations to art and in their persistent efforts to resist the extremes of modernism

Henson's Elegy is a sincere and poetic work, but not very clear in its music and indefinite in style, Copeland's Symphonic Ode, an artistic work, abounding in deliberate, extremely over-complicated sounds, coarse and unnatural orchestral effects and convulsive rhythms, created a painful impression. We know Copeland as an intelligent, cultivated and gifted musician, and, hearing his work, we are again and again convinced of the pernicious effect which the false striving for novelty and the unusualy at whatever cost has on certain composers.

All three concerts of the Boston orchestra went over with great success. The public, among whom could be seen almost every one of our most prominent musicians, expressed by stormy applause its sincere gratitude to our guests who gave it such genuine pleasure by their art.

Dm. Kabalevskii

Pravda, September 14, 1956
Translated by: Roye L. Lowry
Checked by: William N. Turpin

Concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra

The arrival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is a significant event in the musical life of our city. One of the oldest and most popular orchestras in the USA, the Boston orchestra systematically conducts a great musical-propagandistic work. At present it is marking the 75th anniversary of its founding by a European tour.

The Boston orchestra is an orchestra of a magnificent school and glorious traditions. It is enough to mention that its leaders have been the remarkable Hungarian conductor, Arthur Nikisch (1889-1893), the illustrious German director Karl Muck (1906-1908) and 1912-1918), famous for his performance of Wagner, and many other outstanding musicians.

The Boston orchestra has important and many-sided connections with Russian musical culture. For the span of a whole quarter of a century (1924-1949) its artistic director was the gifted Russian conductor, bass player and musical worker, Sergei Koussevitsky, who became President of the musical section of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship and who died in 1951. A.Glazunov and S. Prokof'ev appeared in the role of guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Among the members of the orchestra, several received their musical education in Russia. The first concert of the Boston Symphony in the overflowing Great Hall of the Filharmoniya took place with great success.

The audience greets the appearance of the illustrious orchestra and its present artistic director, the outstanding French conductor, Charles Munch, with friendly applause. Baskets of flowers are presented to the artists. The concertmaster of the first violins of the Leningrad Filharmonia Shpil'berg and Charles Munch exchange mutual greetings. The audience stands when the orchestra plays the national anthems of the USSR and the USA with great animation.

Already in the first number of the program - in the Third ("Eroica") Symphony of Beethoven - the orchestra showed its first-class, precise craftsmanship. The purity of line and intonation, the carefully adjusted balance of orchestral groups, the harmony and restraint of resonance, avoiding all coarseness and clamor, the clarity and the production of rhythms deserves the highest rating. We note, incidentally, that the placing of the orchestra on the stage (with the dispersion of the brass and percussion (sections) not customary with us can hardly fail to attract attention since its acoustic merits are undoubted.

One can argue with Charles Munch's interpretation of this Beethoven symphony. In this interpretation the beauty of particular moments prevails over the dramatic aspiration. We note that a similar interpretation of Beethoven in general is peculiar to French conductors. The heroic-pathetic interpretation of Beethoven's music is closer to us (for example, the performance of his Third Symphony by the German conductor, the late Hermann Abendrot).

But along with this one cannot fail to give credit to the high nobility of emotion, to the plastic (in the spirit of the French classical composer Berlioz) lucidity and sincerity with which Charles Munch reproduces the deathless music of Beethoven.

In the performance of Beethoven's Third Symphony the orchestra made a brilliant display of the verstility and elegance of its musical resources. Certain genre moments of the finale sounded especially good.

Heard with interest in the second part of the concert was the Sixth Symphony (1955) of the to us almost unknown American composer, Walter Piston, who received his musical education in Grance. A whole series of moments in this symphony are not far from being forced and dry, but in Piston's music the manly energy, the healthy sensatiion of life, and now and again wit often attract attention. It is not without reason that the rhythmical and intonationally whimsical scherzo gave rise to applause by the audience.

The second suite from Maurice Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe", played in the conclusion of the program was a genuine festival of art. Here Charles Munch was completely in his element. Ravel's score, sparkling with unusual richness of coloring, was reproduced by the orchestra with great spirit. This pure euphony of Ravel in which form is completely constructed of the confrontation, the blending and the movement of sound colors are inspiredly and freely reproduced.

The audience greeted the poetic picturesqueness of Ravel, Charles Munch and the orchestra with a fervent ovation. They also rejoiced in the delicate craftsmanship of the first flutist of the orchestra, Doriot Dwyer, whom Munch presented to the public.

Yu. Kremlev

Leningradskaya Pravda
September 8, 1956

Translated by: Roye L. Lowry
Checked by: William N. Turpin

ПРОЛЕТАРИИ ВСЕХ СТРАН, СОЕДИНЯЙТЕСЬ! ПРОЛЕТАРІ ВСІХ КРАЇН, ЄДНАЙТЕСЯ! ПРОЛЕТАРЫ УС[illegible]ІН, ЕДНАЙЦЕСЯ! БУТУН ДУНЁ ПРОЛЕТАРЛАРИ, БИРЛАШИНГИЗ!
БАРЛЫК ЕЛДЕРДІН ПРОЛЕТАРЛАРЫ, БІРІГІҢДЕР! [illegible] БУТУН ӨЛКӘЛӘРИН ПРОЛЕТАРЛАРЫ, БИРЛӘШИН! VISŲ ŠALIŲ PROLETARAI, VIENYKITĖS!
ПРОЛЕТАРЬ ДИН TOATE ЦЭРИЛЕ, УНИЦЬ-ВЭ! VISU ZEMJU PROLETARIEŠI, SAVIENOJIETIES! БАРДЫК ӨЛКӨЛӨРДҮН ПРОЛЕТАРЛАРЫ, БИРИККИЛЕ! ПРОЛЕТАРХОИ ХАМАИ МАМЛАКАТХО, ЯК ШАВЕД!
[illegible] ӘХЛИ ЮРТЛАРЫН ПРОЛЕТАРЛАРЫ, БИРЛӘШИҢ! KÕIGI MAADE PROLETAARLASED, ÜHINEGE!

Год издания 40-й

ИЗВЕСТИЯ
СОВЕТОВ
ДЕПУТАТОВ
ТРУДЯЩИХСЯ
СССР

№ 221 (12219)
СУББОТА
15
СЕНТЯБРЯ
1956 г.

Цена 20 коп.

Концерты Бостонского симфонического оркестра

Бостонский симфонический оркестр отмечает в этом году семидесятипятилетие своего существования. Он работал с первоклассными дирижерами — такими, как Артур Никиш, Карл Мук, Пьер Монтэ, Сергей Кусевицкий, Чарльз Мюнш, накопил большой репертуар и выдвинулся в число лучших симфонических оркестров США. Естественно, что его концерты в Москве и Ленинграде вызвали живой отклик нашей общественности.

Два концерта прошли под управлением Чарльза Мюнша — главного дирижера оркестра, музыканта большого дарования и мастерства, уже давно известного у нас по записям и радиоконцертам.

Наиболее капитальным номером программ Чарльза Мюнша явилась Героическая симфония Бетховена, сыгранная с подъемом и верным чувством стиля. Дирижер показал себя вдумчивым исполнителем классической музыки и в си-бемоль мажорной симфонии Гайдна, полной задора, искрометного юмора и прозвучавшей во всей своей прелести.

Столь же убедительно трактует Чарльз Мюнш и произведения композиторов нашего века. Здесь прежде всего надо сказать о сюите из балета «Дафнис и Хлоя» Равеля, замечательной по богатству красок, по ярким ритмическим контрастам. Чувствовалось, что дирижер находится в родной музыкальной стихии и что он достиг полного взаимопонимания с оркестром, также увлеченным этим произведением. Темпераментным было и его исполнение симфонической поэмы «Дон-Жуан» Р. Штрауса и блестящего, остроумного скерцо «Ученик чародея» Дюка, написанного на сюжет известной баллады Гете.

С Бостонским оркестром к нам приехал и дирижер Пьер Монтэ.

В широком, эпическом плане проводит Пьер Монтэ Седьмую симфонию Шуберта, о которой В. Стасов писал, что она «истинно гениальна по вдохновению, по силе, по порыву, по красоте, по выражению «народности» и «народной массы» в первых трех частях». Мы действительно чувствовали в исполнении французского дирижера широту песенного дыхания (особенно в монументальной первой части и во второй, полной мелодического обаяния). Пьер Монтэ исполнил и гайдновскую симфонию «Сюрприз», исполнил законченно, с большим вкусом, изяществом и разнообразием тонких оттенков звучания.

Среди произведений американских композиторов, включенных в программу концертов, хочется выделить две симфонии — Пистона и Крестона.

В первой из этих симфоний явственно выделяется скерцо, блестяще инструментованное, полное неожиданных контрастов звучания. Впечатляет и третья, медленная часть симфонии. Что же касается первой и последней частей, то хотя они и свидетельствуют о технической опытности автора, но в целом представляются нам менее удачными, неровными. Думается, что они не раскрывают полностью возможностей композитора, которого мы знаем и по другим интересным произведениям.

Оригинально задумана симфония Крестона, основанная на сопоставлении двух частей (интродукция и песня — интерлюдия и танец). В этой партитуре ощущаются влияния импрессионизма. Но мелодическое дарование композитора проявилось в лирической первой части, которая написана прочувствованно и составляет контраст с несколько угловатой музыкой второй части, проникнутой современными танцевальными ритмами.

Концерты Бостонского симфонического оркестра имели в Москве и Ленинграде успех. За последний год значительно выросли и окрепли советско-американские музыкальные связи. В нашей стране гастролировали труппа «Эвримен опера», скрипач Исаак Стерн и певец Жан Пирс, продемонстрировавшие достижения исполнительского искусства США. Все они нашли теплый прием. Так же сердечно приветствовались за океаном выступления советских музыкантов Эмиля Гилельса, Давида Ойстраха и Мстислава Ростроповича. Это отрадные факты. Язык музыки не требует перевода; он помогает нам лучше узнать и понять друг друга. Взаимные гастроли советских и американских музыкантов служат делу мира, делу укрепления взаимопонимания между народами.

И. МАРТЫНОВ.

The Concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra

The Boston Symphony Orchestra this year is marking the seventy-fifth anniversary of its founding. It has worked with first-class directors, such as arthur Nikisch, Karl Muck, Pierre Monteux, Sergei Koussevitsky, Charles Munch, it has built up a large, repertoire and it has been notable among the better orchestras of the USA. It is natural that its concerts in Moscow and Leningrad aroused the lively response of our public.

Two concerts were held under the direction of Charles Munch - the orchestra's principal conductor, a musician of talent and craftsmanship, already long well known among us by his recordings and radio concerts.

The most important number of the programs of Charles Munch was Beethoven's Erioca Symphony., played with animation and a true feeling of style. The conductor also showed himself to be a thoughtful performer of classical music in Haydn's B-flat major symphony, full of fervor, sparkling humor and reverberating in all its charm.

Charles Munch just as convincingly interprets the works of composers of our century. Here first of all it is necessary to speak of the Suite from Ravel' ballet "Daphnis and Chloe", remarkable for its wealth of colors, for its striking rhythmical contrasts. One feels that the conductor is in his native musical element and that he achieves complete mutual understanding with the orchestra [which is] also carried away in this rendition. Spirited also were his performances of the symphonic poem "Don Juan" by R. Strauss and the brilliant, witty scherzo "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" of Dukas, written on the theme of Goeth's well-known ballad.

Conductor Pierre Monteux also came to us with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

In a broad , epic plan, Pierre Monteux conducts Shubert's Seventh Symphony, of which V. Stasov has written that it "is truly great in inspiration, in strength, in gusto, inbbeauty, in the expression of "national character" and of the "popular masses" in the first three movements." In the performance of the French conductor we really felt the breadth of song-like espression (especially in the monumental first movement and in the second, full of melodic fascination). Pierre Monteux also conducted the Haydn "Surprise" Symphony, perfectly performed with great taste, elegance and a variety of fine nuances of sound.

Among the works of American composers included in the program of the concerts, I want to single out the two symphonies - Piston's and Creston's.

In the first of these symphonies, clearly notable is the scherzo, brilliantly orchestrated, full of unexpected contrasts of sound. The third, slow movement of the symphony also creates an impression. As far as the first and last movements are concerned, although they testify to the technical proficiency of the composer, on the whole they seem to us less successful, uneven. One thinks that they do not disclose the full possibilities of the composer, whom we know for other interesting works.

The Concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra

The Boston Symphony Orchestra this year is marking the seventy-fifth anniversary of its founding. It has worked with first-class directors, such as arthur Nikisch, Karl Muck, Pierre Monteux, Sergei Koussevitsky, Charles Munch, it has built up a large, repertoire and it has been notable among the better orchestras of the USA. It is natural that its concerts in Moscow and Leningrad aroused the lively response of our public.

Two concerts were held under the direction of Charles Munch - the orchestra's principal conductor, a musician of talent and craftsmanship, already long well known among us by his recordings and radio concerts.

The most important number of the programs of Charles Munch was Beethoven's Erioca Symphony., played with animation and a true feeling of style. The conductor also showed himself to be a thoughtful performer of classical music in Haydn's B-flat major symphony, full of fervor, sparkling humor and reverberating in all its charm.

Charles Munch just as convincingly interprets the works of composers of our century. Here first of all it is necessary to speak of the Suite from Ravel' ballet "Daphnis and Chloe", remarkable for its wealth of colors, for its striking rhythmical contrasts. One feels that the conductor is in his native musical element and that he achieves complete mutual understanding with the orchestra [which is] also carried away in this rendition. Spirited also were his performances of the symphonic poem "Don Juan" by R. Strauss and the brilliant, witty scherzo "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" of Dukas, written on the theme of Goeth's well-known ballad.

Conductor Pierre Monteux also came to us with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

In a broad , epic plan, Pierre Monteux conducts Shubert's Seventh Symphony, of which V. Stasov has written that it "is truly great in inspiration, in strength, in gusto, in beauty, in the expression of "national character" and of the "popular masses" in the first three movements." In the performance of the French conductor we really felt the breadth of song-like espression (especially in the monumental first movement and in the second, full of melodic fascination). Pierre Monteux also conducted the Haydn "Surprise" Symphony, perfectly performed with great taste, elegance and a variety of fine nuances of sound.

Among the works of American composers included in the program of the concerts, I want to single out the two symphonies - Piston's and Creston's.

In the first of these symphonies, clearly notable is the scherzo, brilliantly orchestrated, full of unexpected contrasts of sound. The third, slow movement of the symphony also creates an impression. As far as the first and last movements are concerned, although they testify to the technical proficiency of the composer, on the whole they seem to us less successful, uneven. One thinks that they do not disclose the full possibilities of the composer, whom we know for other interesting works.

Creston's original, well-conceived symphony, is based upon the confrontation of the two movements (introduction and song - interlude and dance). In this score one senses the influence of impressionism. But the melodic talent of the composer becomes apparent in the lyrical first movement, which is written with deep feeling and makes a contrast with the somewhat awkward music of the second movement, imbued with contemporary dance rhythms.

The concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were successful in Moscow and Leningrad. Soviet-American musical connections have grown and strengthened considerably during the past year. The "Everyman Opera" troupe, Isaac Stern, the violinist, and Jan Peerce, the singer, have made guest appearances here, demonstrating the achievements of the art of performance in the USA. All of them found a warm reception. Likewise the appearances of Soviet [illegible] musicians Emil Gillels, David Oistrakh and Mstislav Rostropovich were greeted heartily on the other side of the ocean. These are gratifying facts. The language of music does not require translation; it helps us to know and to understand one another better. The mutual guest tours of Soviet and American musicians serve the cause of peace, the cause of strengthening mutual understanding among peoples.

I. Martynov

Izvestiya, September 15, 1956

Translated by: Roye L. Lowry

Checked by: William N. Turpin

Concerts of the Boston Orchestra

The appearances of the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra gave enormous pleasure to music lovers. Directed, for the course of 25 years by the remarkable conductor, Sergei Aleksandrovich Koussevitsky, the Boston orchestra grasped the qualities and artistic principles, and also the talent of interpretation of that outstanding musician.

At the beginning of work as a conductor, I was lucky enough to work under the leadership of Koussevitsky as his assistant and I recall how he always demanded melody in performance and said, "music is song." Just this emotional, expressive melodious sound in the playing of the Boston orchestra both as a whole and of each of its members individually is indisputably one of its greatest virtues.

A second quality of the orchestra is its playing and manner of making music. It is quite clear that every organization plays especially carefully during a guest performance. But the artists of the Boston orchestra made music easily and without constraint, as though it were their usual concert. They might even permit themselves certain accidental unevennesses, being not at all embarrassed by this and in the very next number dazzle and utterly surprise [the audience] by [their] striking virtuosity.

The third and perhaps the most important quality in our time is the utmost purity of intonation, that is, the harmony of the orchestra.

Of course, all these qualities were acquired over many many years. After all, the organization has existed for 75 years. And undoubtedly musicians of world class such as Arthur Nikisch, Karl Muck and others who have directed this orchestra have played a tremendous role in the formation of the excellent artistic qualities of the orchestra. Professionally and artistically the performing personnel of artists of the orchestra is very high. Here I want to talk about every one, about the excellent concertmaster of the orchestra, Richard Burgin, heading a group of first violinists in which all the artists are as if equal in their mastery and manner of performance even to the same fingering by all the violinists; about the splendid group of second violins into which go excellent musicians, playing the part of the second violins, but not"second" violins (in sound, manner, and technique they are in no wise distinguishable from the first); about the wonderful group of violas evenly balanced in its composition, headed by concertmaster Joseph de Pasquale.

One cannot pass by in silence the playing of the cello soloist, Samuel Mayes, the prominent and mellow phonation of the basses, the splendid craftsmanship of flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the expressiveness of the oboes, clarinets, French horns and so forth.

Yet another factor which has a decisive significance in the question of phonation and purity of harmony are the instruments. The whole string section of the Bostonians plays on splendid, at time unique, Italian instruments. As far as the woodwinds and percussion instruments are concerned, all these are the latest models besides [being] of the best quality.

The excellent conductor, Charles Munch, leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the present time. He is a strong-willed, spirited, graceful artist of great culture, thoroughly knowing the possibilities of the organization, knowing how to enthrall both the orchestra and the audience. Under his direction the Second Suite from M. Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe" resounded spontaneously and stnnningly, the Adagio from Schuman's Second Symphony, with its infinite cantilena and its moving romance and the fireworks-like Finale of Haydn's Symphony were deeply exciting. P. Dukas' "Sorcerer's Apprentice" was played with spirit and virtuosity. And whatever the orchestra played,one always sensed a close contact between conductor and each member of the organization.

It was also pleasant to see on the podium (lit. behind the conductor's stand) and to greet Pierre Monteux whom we heard in 1926 at concerts of the Leningrad Filharmoniya. This musician has been long connected with Russian music: He even conducted performances of the Russian ballet of Dyagilev in Paris.

The guest appearance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is a significant event in our musical life. The organization demonstrated culture in performing and high artistic qualities.

The works of American composers unknown to us, expecially Piston's Sixth Symphony and Creston's Second Symphony were of great interest. Alnog with this it is too bad that there wasn't a single work of Russian classical music. We know in particular that the symphonies of Chaikovsky are in the repertoire of the Boston orchestra. How interesting it would have been to have heard on of them played by such an organization.

The appearances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Moscow again and again convinced [one] that the language of musical art, coming from the heart, is accessible to millions of people and serves as a powerful stimulant to the strengthening of friendly connections between peoples.

Conductor Aleksandr Gauk

Sovetskaya Kul'tura
September11, 1956

Translated by: Roye L. Lowry
Checked by: William N/ Turpin

September 12, 1956

CONCERTS OF THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

(By E. Grosheva)

The State Anthem of the Soviet Union solemnly resounds. It is followed by the USA Anthem. Greetings, flowers, applause. . . .

Thus the Boston Symphony Orchestra which has come to our country on tour for the first time, began its first concert in the Soviet capital.

One of the largest American orchestras, it is marking the seventy-fifty anniversary of its existence this year. In honour of this date the orchestra is making a jubilee tour through Europe. It is composed of excellent musicians; several of them received training in Russian conservatories. One can point for example to the concert master of the first violins, Richard Burgin, well-known also as a conductor who is propagandizing Soviet music in America. At the conductor's stand the Boston Orchestra has seen the best musicians of the world - from Arthur Nikish to Serge Koussevitsky, who led the collective for 25 years.

To this serious school the orchestra owes its masterly virtuosity. The high culture of the ensemble, the irreproachable precision of technique, the smooth order, the strict rhythmic discipline are the necessary basis for every professional collective. The Boston Orchestra possesses all these Qualities. But the charm of its creative aspect is augmented by the rare beauty, the melodious sonority of the entire orchestra and its individual sections: powerful expression distinguishes the cantilena of the string quintette, the execution of the wood-winds captivates with its evenness and purity, the brass strikes one by its soft melodiousness. As a whole this is a single artistic organism, the entire attention of which is directed to the fulfilment of great musical tasks.

The mastery of the talented conductor, Charles Munch, French by origin, who has directed the Boston Orchestra for six years, should be given its due. One cannot agree entirely with the conductor in his interpretation of the Third ("Herioc") Symphony of Beethoven. The acquiline sweep of the first movement of the symphony perhaps requires more passion and force, the brilliant funeral march more unity and stern simplicity. But at the same time one cannot resist a feeling of delight with the wealth of colour and shades which the conductor finds in the Beethoven score. Munch is a true virtuoso; he brilliantly creates great dynamic crescendos which so emphasized the codas of the first movement and the finale of the symphony, polishes the contrasting episodes in a filigree manner, with maximum softness and at the same time with clarity of nuances. The remarkable scherzo of the Third Symphohy was played best of all, literally in one breath.

Charles Munch conducted two concerts with extensive programmes. "Don Juan" by Richard Strauss was played brilliantly; the 102nd Symphony of Haydn, in which the conductor was able to reveal the in eternal kinship with the symphonies of Mozart, resounded with great depth and finish of conception.

But the music of the French masters is the true element of the conductor. It is difficult to convey in words the impression created by the execution of the second suite from Ravel's Ballet "Daphnis and Chloe". This was a sparkling cascade of sounds, permeated with an almost bacchanalian energy of rhythm in the concluding number of the suite ("General Dance"). With the same vivid temperament, irreproachable sense of style, orchestral colour, polishing with care all the details (which programme music so requires), Charles Munch performed the well-known symphonic picture of Paul Dukas "The Sorcerer's Apprentice".

We heard with great satisfaction the London Symphony of Haydn, the "Surprise", in the concert of the venerable conductor Pierre Monteux. It is amazing how the 80 year-old master was able to convey all the charm of the chastity and freshness of the music of the great Austrian composer, which captivates by the clear national character of the images, by delicate, limpid orchestration. One of the most remarkable creations of Schubert - his Symphony in D-Major, was performed by the orchestra under the direction of Pierre Monteux with the same delicacy and noble restraint.

Pierre Monteux is an old friend of Russian music. This friendship dates from 1911 when Pierre Monteux became the principal conductor of the Russian Ballet performances organized in Paris by Dyagilev. The conductor also spread Russian Ballet in America. Pierre Monteux is also well-known to Soviet listeners by his tours in Moscow and Leningrad in the pre-war years. It should be regretted all the more that the Boston Orchestra did not include a single work of Russian classical or Soviet music in its programme.

The Boston collective and its leaders acquainted Moscovites with the symphonic works of modern American composers- Piston, Kreston, Hanson and Copland. For the most part this is music of high quality which attests to the significant orchestral culture of American composers, their sensitivity to the accomplishments of modern symphonic development. The scherzo and adagio from Piston's modern Sixth Symphony, a representative of the older generation of American composer, resounded magnificently. There was much beautiful music in the first movement of Kreston's Second Symphony. A number of colouristic treasures were of interest in Hanson's "Elegy", played with great subtlety by the orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch. The Symphony-Ode of Copland - a work in which, it appeared on first hearing, superficial orchestral effects predominate - was less sarisfying.

Moscow listeners warmly received the talented collective. Contact between the performers and the listeners deepened from concert to concert. High discipline and training enabled the orchestra in the course of 24 hours to appear in three concerts which included the most complicated works of classical and modern music. Moreover, the orchestra and its leaders responded unfailingly to the demands of the public, and played a great deal in addition to the programme. . . . .

In conclusion we should like to subscribe to the wish expressed by composer T. Khrennikov in his greetings to the orchestra, that the first meeting of Soviet listeners with the American orchestra serve as the basis for extensive creative contact and exchange of cultural forces between the Soviet and American peoples.

High Craftsmanship

It is frequently considered that it is in a certain sense easier for a widely-known artist who has already won popularity to appear before an audience since his name alone guarantees him a warm reception from his listeners. I doubt whether that is fair. It seems to me that the matter is just the reverse. A great artist knows perfectly well that the greater his fame as a creator, the more difficult it is to maintain it. Every appearance, every concert, especially if it takes place before a new audience, is transformed into a crucial creative examination. And listeners, especially listeners by profession, in such cases are extremely severe.

These thoughts completely naturally came to mind while awaiting the first concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Leningrad. For all that how does this widely-known organization which has been seen behind the conductor's platform of Arthur Nikisch and Karl Muck, Aleksander Glazunov and Sergei Prokof'ev, Maurice Ravel and Georges Enesco play? What is the artistic character of an orchestra which for a quarter of a century was working under the leadership of Sergei Koussevitsky?

The answer to these questions became clear immediately after the first bars of Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, opening the concert program. Yes, certainly, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is an organization of great culture. And the conductor Charles Munch and the artists of the orchestra for the moment are somewhat restrained. In the accepted talk among musicians "they have not yet warmed up". But already immediately one is carried away by the precision of the bowing of the string section, by the splendidly developed feeling of the ensemble.

Charles Munch, the artistic leader of the Orchestra, who conducted his first concert in the Soviet Union on September 6, is a temperamental artist, in the highest degree endowed with the ability very important to a conductor of carrying along the performers with him by his conceptions.

From movement to movement Beethoven's Third Symphony sounded louder and louder. The celebrated "Funeral March" and especially the very difficult to perform masterly scherzo and finale were played magnificently.

Piston's Sixth Symphony opened the second part of the concert. This symphony is one of the latest works of a representative of the older generation of contemporary American composers. To judge an important, significant symphonic work on the basis of only one hearing is very difficult, as is known. But I do not think it would be a mistake to say right now that Piston's Sixth Symphony is a work on the whole significant and creatively interesting. It is not accidental that, despite established traditions, the hall began to applaud after the second movement of the original, witty, scherzo, which shows a great deal of rhythmatic and coloristic treasures. The third movement of the symphony (adagio sereno) with its dramatic expressiveness and depth of meditation also creates an impression. There is also a great deal of striking music in the first (Fluente espressivo) and fourth (Allegro energico) movements of this work.

The Second Suite from Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe" concluded the first appearance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Clearly French music is particularly close to Charles Munch. Both Ravel's suite and the "Sorcerer's Apprentice" of Dukas, performed in addition to the program on the insistent demand of the audience, were the real culmination of the concert. The conductor and the orchestra were as though amalgamated into a single creative transport. From this performance we experienced deep satisfaction.

In. Popov
Special correspondent of
"soviet Culture"

Liningrad.

Sovetskaya Kul'tura

September 8, 1956

Translated by: Roye L. Lowry
Checked by: William N. Turpin

On the Concerts of the Boston Orchestra

Among the interesting events of our concert life of recent years, an outstanding place undoubtedly belongs to the appearances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The guest appearance in the Soviet Union of one of the best symphony orchestras in the world coincides with the 75th anniversary of its founding. Many outstanding conductors have worked with this orchestra, enriching it with their experience and craftsmanship. Among them should be mentioned Arthur Nikisch, Karl Muck, Sergei Koussevitsky, who headed the orchestra for 25 years, Pierre Monteux and, finally, its present leader, Charles Munch.

The Boston orchestra is composed of first class musicians, artists and virumosos in the full sense of this word. All of its sections - strings, woodwinds, brass and percussion - make up an ensemble of rare evenness. The sonority of the whole orchestra together is just as good as the separate phonations of its soloists. It is a really artistic organization, which has achieved such a level of craftsmanship that technical difficulties of any kind have ceased to exist for it and all attention is switched to rhe resolution of artistic problems; when in the most powerful episodes of the music the sonority remains just as expressive as in tender episodes verging on a barely audible whisper; when the performance of shading and nuances is as fine as is usually the case only in chamber groups....

One should speak of the great role in the achievements of such results which belongs to the leader of the orchestra, the conductor. Charles Munch is a great artist and craftsman performing perfectly in equal measure either the works of the great masters of the past or the music of his contemporaries. If one tries to define what constitutes Charles Munch's conquering strength, one wants first of all to say: this strength [consists] of the combination of tremendous expression enveloping a work from the first to the last sound with utmost fineness of all, even the smallest of its details. But craftsmanship is craftsmanship and the important thing undoubtedly is that Munch is an artist and a man, full of deep and sincere feelings, possessed of strength of intellect and an astonishingly young spirit.

Many of us still remember Pierre Monteux for his concerts in Moscow in the middle of the twenties. One of the greatest French conductors, he for a number of years devoted himself to work with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and presently is a permanent participant in its guest tours. Just as Charles Munch, he combines the deepest understanding of classical music with a lively interest in contemporary creativeness.

On the Concerts of the Boston Orchestra

Among the interesting events of our concert life of recent years, an outstanding place undoubtedly belongs to the appearances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The guest appearance in the Soviet Union of one of the best symphony orchestras in the world coincides with the 75th anniversary of its founding. Many outstanding conductors have worked with this orchestra, enriching it with their experience and craftsmanship. Among them should be mentioned Arthur Nikisch, Karl Musk, Sergei Koussevitsky, who headed the orchestra for 25 years, Pierre Monteux and, finally, its present leader, Charles Munch.

The Boston orchestra is composed of first class musicians, artists and viruosos in the full sense of this word. All of its sections - strings, woodwinds, brass and percussion - make up an ensemble of rare evenness. The sonority of the whole orchestra together is just as good as the separate phonations of its soloists. It is a really artistic organization, which has achieved such a level of craftsmanship that technical difficulties of any kind have ceased to exist for it and all attention is switched to the resolution of artistic problems; when in the most powerful episodes of the music the sonority remains just as expressive as in tender episodes verging on a barely audible whisper; when the performance of shading and nuances is as fine as is usually the case only in chamber groups....

One should speak of the great role in the achievements of such results which belongs to the leader of the orchestra, the conductor. Charles Munch is a great artist and craftsman performing perfectly in equal measure either the works of the great masters of the past or the music of his contemporaries. If one tries to define what constitutes Charles Munch's conquering strength, one wants first of all to say: this strength [consists] of the combination of tremendous expression enveloping a work from the first to the last sound with utmost fineness of all, even the smallest of its details. But craftsmanship is craftsmanship and the important thing undoubtedly is that Munch is an artist and a man, full of deep and sincere feelings, possessed of strength of intellect and an astonishingly young spirit.

Many of us still remember Pierre Monteux for his concerts in Moscow in the middle of the twenties. One of the greatest French conductors, he for a number of years devoted himself to work with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and presently is a permanent participant in its guest tours. Just as Charles Munch, he combines the deepest understanding of classical music with a lively interest in contemporary creativeness.

In the three concerts which took place in Moscow (the first and third conducted by Munch - the second by Monteux), the Boston Symphony Orchestra performed a large and varied program, including classical music of the 19th Century and music of our time.

Of the classical works performed by the orchestra, one must speak, first of all, of the Third ("Eroica") Symphony of Beethoven. This symphony, tremendous in its scope, in its strength of heroic tension, has experienced the fate of many works of genius, which from too frequent and alas, by no means always perfect performance, begin as if to lose their luster, to lose their strength and freshness. And one needs a real gift to return to the composition its original beauty and strength of influence.

Charles Munch managed to do this in full measure; we heard the real Beethoven, the herald of great humanistic ideas, the singer of beauty and freedom, leading to his ideals along the difficult but shining path of heroic struggle.

Stylishly in the highest degree, the two Haydn symphonies: the "Surprise" Symphony in G-major (Pierre Monteux) and Symphony No. 102 in A-flat major were played with the ingenuousness, optimism and rather heavy national humor characteristic of the composer. Monteux also splendidly conducted the Seventh ("Great" C-major) Symphony of Schubert.

Music of modern times was represented by the Second Suite of Maurice Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe," Richard Strauss' "Don Juan" and the symphonic poem by Paul Dukas "The Sorcerer's Apprentice". They played all of these works under the direction of Munch. This is where his great talent is displayed in all [its] breadth!

By his playing of Ravel, he magnificently shows how one-sided and superficial are those critics who are inclined to see in Ravel only an unsurpassed master of orchestral coloring, a creator of enchanting resonance. Certainly Ravel is great above all for his winning vital strength, and not only for the beauty and richness of [his] musical form. His better works, among them "Daphnis and Chloe", just like sunlight, blind and at the same time radiate vital energy. And it is just this internal content, the vitality, of Ravel's music which the conductor exposes magnificently. Strauss' "Don Juan" which is most difficult for an orchestra, was played with fiery temperament and finally, like brilliant fireworks resounded Dukas' fascinating poem "The Sorcerer's Apprentice." Nor can one fail to recall how masterly and with what temperament the orchestra, under the direction of Pierre Monteux, played a fragment from Richard Strauss' opera "Der Rosenkavalier" as an encore.

One must speak separately of the works of American composers: of Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, of Howard Hanson's Elegy, of Aaron Copeland's symphonic ode (under the direction of Munch) and of Paul Creston's Second Symphony (under the direction of Monteux). Our Boston guests did well to show us so much of contemporary music. We should thank them for it since it is fitting to admit that modern American music is insufficiently well-known to broad circles of our listeners.

Walter Piston (he is known to us for his repeatedly and successfully performed poem "The Incredible Flutist") wrote the Sixth Symphony only a year ago especially for the 75th concert season of the Boston orchestra. This work reinforces our impression of the composer as a fine master of orchestration who has completely mastered the symphonic form. And if his music is somewhat unsatisfying as to individual and bold melodic vividness, in any case it is developed naturally and convincingly without lack of real artistic temperament and imagination. The second movement of the symphony, a most masterly scherzo and the third movement, which is concentrated and in its development, reaches great strength of dramatic effect, are the most impressive.

Creston, like Piston, joins that group of contemporary American composers who are united in their serious relations to art and in their persistent efforts to resist the extremes of modernism and to develop the vital traditions of classical music. His Second Symphony in two movements is especially attractive in its second movement, full of brave and sharp rhythms, drawn, obviously, from the distinctiveness of Negro folk music. In the conclusion of this movement the composer masterfully united the sharp rhythmical fabric with a broad and attractive melody (melodika).

Hanson's Elegy is a sincere and poetic work, but not very clear in its music and indefinite in style. Copeland's Symphonic Ode, an artistic work, abounding in deliberate, extremely over-complicated sounds, coarse and unnatural orchestral effects [and] convulsive rhythms, created a painful impression. We know Copeland as an intelligent, cultivated and gifted musician, and, hearing his work, we are again and again convinced of the pernicious effect which the false striving for novelty and the unusual at whatever cost has on certain composers.

All three concerts of the Boston orchestra went over with great success. The public, among whom could be seen almost every one of our most prominent musicians, expressed by stormy applause its sincere gratitude to [our] guests who gave it such genuine pleasure by their art.

Dm. Kabalevskii

Pravda, September 14, 1956
Translated by: Roye L. Lowry
Checked by: William N. Turpin

Пролетарии всех стран, соединяйтесь!

Коммунистическая партия Советского Союза

ПРАВДА

Орган Центрального Комитета
Коммунистической партии Советского Союза

Год издания 45-й
№ 256 (13921)

Пятница, 14 сентября 1956 года

ЦЕНА 30 КОП.

НА КОНЦЕРТАХ БОСТОНСКОГО ОРКЕСТРА

Среди интереснейших явлений нашей концертной жизни последних лет, несомненно, выдающееся место принадлежит выступлениям Бостонского симфонического оркестра. Гастроли в Советском Союзе одного из лучших в мире симфонических коллективов совпали с 75-летием со дня его основания. Многие выдающиеся дирижеры работали с этим оркестром, обогащая его своим опытом и мастерством. Среди них должны быть названы Артур Никиш, Карл Мук, Сергей Кусевицкий, возглавлявший оркестр в течение двадцати пяти лет, Пьер Монтэ и, наконец, нынешний его руководитель — Чарльз Мюнш.

Бостонский оркестр составлен из первоклассных музыкантов — артистов и виртуозов в полном смысле этого слова. Все его группы — смычковая, деревянная, медная и ударная — составляют на редкость ровный ансамбль. Слитная звучность всего оркестра столь же хороша, как и отдельные звучания его солистов. Это настоящий артистический коллектив, достигший той степени мастерства, когда для него перестают существовать какие-либо технические трудности и все внимание переключается на решение художественных задач; когда в самых мощных, сильных эпизодах музыки звучность остается столь же выразительной, как и в эпизодах нежнейших, граничащих с еле слышным шепотом; когда исполнительские штрихи и нюансы отточены так, как это обычно бывает лишь в камерных ансамблях...

Нужно ли говорить о том, какая огромная роль в достижении таких результатов принадлежит руководителю оркестра, его дирижеру! Чарльз Мюнш большой художник и мастер, в равной мере совершенно исполняющий и творения великих мастеров прошлого, и музыку своих современников. Если пытаться определить, в чем состоит покоряющая сила Чарльза Мюнша, то прежде всего хочется сказать так: сила эта в сочетании огромного дыхания, охватывающего все произведение от первого до последнего звука, с предельной отточенностью всех, даже мельчайших его деталей. Но мастерство мастерством, а главное, несомненно, в том, что Мюнш — артист и человек, полный глубоких и искренних чувств, обладающий сильным интеллектом и удивительно молодой душой.

Пьера Монтэ многие из нас помнят еще по его концертам в Москве в середине 20-х годов. Один из крупнейших французских дирижеров, он немало лет отдал работе с Бостонским симфоническим оркестром и сейчас является постоянным участником его гастрольных поездок. Так же как и Чарльз Мюнш, он сочетает в себе глубочайшее понимание классической музыки с живым интересом к современному творчеству.

В трех концертах, проведенных в Москве (первым и третьим дирижировал Мюнш, вторым — Монтэ), Бостонский оркестр исполнил большую и разнообразную программу, включавшую классику XIX века и музыку нашего времени.

Из исполненных оркестром классических произведений в первую очередь следует сказать о Третьей («Героической») симфонии Бетховена. Эта потрясающая по размаху, по силе героического напряжения симфония испытывает на себе судьбу многих гениальных творений, которые от слишком частых и, увы, далеко не всегда совершенных исполнений начинают словно тускнеть, терять свою силу и свежесть. И надо иметь подлинно выдающийся дар, чтобы вернуть сочинению его первозданную красоту и силу воздействия.

Чарльзу Мюншу это удалось в полную меру: мы услышали настоящего Бетховена, глашатая великих гуманистических идей, певца красоты и свободы, ведущего к своим идеалам по нелегкому, но светлому пути героической борьбы.

В высшей степени стильно, с присущим композитору простодушием, оптимизмом и тяжеловатым народным юмором были сыграны две симфонии Гайдна: симфония «Сюрприз», соль-мажор (Пьер Монтэ) и Симфония № 102, си-бемоль мажор (Чарльз Мюнш). Великолепно провел Монтэ и Седьмую («Большую» до-мажорную) симфонию Шуберта.

Музыка нового времени была представлена Второй сюитой Мориса Равеля из балета «Дафнис и Хлоя», «Дон Жуаном» Рихарда Штрауса и симфонической поэмой Поля Дюка «Ученик чародея». Все эти сочинения шли под управлением Мюнша. Вот где во всю ширь развернулся его огромный талант!

Своим исполнением сюиты Равеля он великолепно показал, как однобоки и поверхностны те критики, которые склонны видеть в Равеле лишь непревзойденного мастера оркестрового колорита, создателя волшебных звучаний. Конечно же, Равель велик прежде всего своей покоряющей жизненной силой, а не только красотой и богатством музыкальной формы. Его лучшие творения, в том числе «Дафнис и Хлоя», словно солнечные лучи, ослепляют и одновременно излучают жизненную энергию. И именно внутреннюю содержательность, жизненность музыки Равеля превосходно раскрыл дирижер. С огненным темпераментом был сыгран труднейший для оркестра «Дон Жуан» Штрауса и, наконец, подобно блестящему фейерверку, прозвучала увлекательная поэма Дюка «Ученик чародея». Нельзя не вспомнить и о том, как виртуозно и темпераментно исполнил (на бис) оркестр под управлением Пьера Монтэ фрагмент из оперы Рихарда Штрауса «Кавалер роз».

Отдельно надо сказать о сочинениях американских композиторов: о Шестой симфонии Уолтера Пистона, Элегии Хауарда Хансона, Симфонии-оде Аарона Копленда (под управлением Мюнша) и о Второй симфонии Пауля Крестона (под управлением Монтэ). Бостонские гости сделали хорошо, что показали нам так много современной музыки. Мы должны поблагодарить их за это, так как следует признать, что новая американская музыка недостаточно хорошо известна широким кругам наших слушателей.

Уолтер Пистон (он знаком у нас по неоднократно и с успехом исполнявшейся поэме «Необычайный флейтист») написал Шестую симфонию лишь год назад, специально к 75-му концертному сезону Бостонского оркестра. Это сочинение подтверждает наше представление о композиторе как о хорошем мастере оркестровки, свободно владеющем симфонической формой. И если его музыке несколько не хватает индивидуальной и рельефной мелодической яркости, то, во всяком случае, она развивается естественно и убедительно, не лишена настоящего художественного темперамента и фантазии. Наилучшее впечатление оставили вторая часть симфонии — виртуознейшее скерцо и третья часть — сосредоточенная, доходящая в своем развитии до большой силы драматизма.

Крестон, так же как и Пистон, примыкает к той группе современных американских композиторов, которые едины в своем серьезном отношении к искусству, в своем настойчивом стремлении противостоять крайностям модернизма и развивать жизненные традиции классической музыки. Его двухчастная Вторая симфония особенно привлекательна во второй своей части, полной смелых и острых ритмов, идущих, видимо, от особенностей негритянской народной музыки. В заключение этой части композитор мастерски соединил остро ритмизованную ткань с широкой и увлекательной мелодикой.

Элегия Хансона — сочинение искреннее и поэтичное, но не очень яркое по музыке и неопределенное по стилю. Тяжелое впечатление произвела Симфония-ода Копленда — сочинение искусственное, изобилующее нарочитыми, крайне переусложненными звучаниями, грубыми и неестественными оркестровыми эффектами, судорожными ритмами. Мы знаем Копленда как умного, образованного и одаренного музыканта, и, слушая его сочинение, мы вновь и вновь убеждались в том, какое пагубное влияние на некоторых композиторов оказывает ложное стремление к новизне и необычности во что бы то ни стало.

Все три концерта Бостонского оркестра прошли с выдающимся успехом. Публика, среди которой можно было увидеть едва ли не всех наших крупнейших музыкантов, бурными аплодисментами выражала свою искреннюю благодарность гостям, доставившим ей истинное наслаждение своим искусством.

Дм. КАБАЛЕВСКИЙ.

14 СЕНТЯБРЯ 1956 г., № 258 (13921)

тива ителей

Правды»). На шах-Волынского уголь-ается социалисти-остойную встречу
го Октября. Инивыступил коллеккомбината «Укр-коллектив за годовое задание
За счет дальнейизации труда и

Строители Куйбышевской ГЭС держат серьезный экзамен

В этом году на Волге, в Жигулях, предстоит смонтировать и ввести в строй ряд новых гидроагрегатов мощностью в 105 тысяч киловатт каждый. Воды могучей Волги уже вращают рабочие колеса пяти турбин. [redacted] линии [redacted] Москву [redacted] киловатт-часов электроэнергии.

У строителей и монтажников есть все ность, что привело к снижению темпов и удорожанию строительства, к убыткам. В первой половине 1956 года было недодано 179 тысяч кубометров бетона.

Хозяйственные руководители мало уде- [redacted] тов. [redacted] требовательности [redacted], которые допускают срыв графиков строительно-

---

[redacted]

КОННЫЕ ПРАВА

Опасная игра западной дипломатии

ПАРИЖ, 13 сентября. (Соб. корр. «Правды»). Не прошло и часа после одновременных выступлений в Лондоне и Париже английского и французского премьеров по суэцкому вопросу, как на улицах французской столицы уже продавали вечерние газеты с крикливыми заголовками: «Фаза переговоров закончилась — начинаются действия», «Решено подвергнуть Египет экономической блокаде» («Пари-пресс—Энтрансижан»), «Немедленное применение плана Даллеса» («Франс-суар»). Что же произошло на самом деле?

Поистине французскому читателю трудно что-либо понять. Суэцкая компания национализирована, и ее права перешли к египетскому правительству. Законность национализации была признана самими западными державами. Теперь же объявляется, что три западные державы односторонним решением создают некую «ассоциацию» для контроля над каналом. Такой демонстративный шаг может быть объяснен лишь желанием создать повод для конфликта с Египтом.

Нельзя не отметить также, что прямое участие в этом новом «органе» Соединенных Штатов,— вопреки тому, что они только на днях объявили себя «незаинтересованным посредником»,— многое объясняет в целях этого посредничества.

Все это не оставляет сомнения в том, что западные державы решили попытаться открыто применить в отношении Египта политику «с позиции силы», для чего уже в течение всей недели проводятся усиленные военные мероприятия в районе Средиземноморья.

Во Франции даже далекие от политики люди начинают сознавать, что вокруг суэцкого вопроса на Западе ведутся опасные для интересов мира маневры. Настроения беспокойства наблюдатели отмечают и в кругах правительственной социалистической партии. «Французских социалистов беспокоит то,— пишет корреспондент газеты «Нью-Йорк таймс» в Париже Каллендер,— что социалистическое правительство в их стране заняло по суэцкому вопросу такую непримиримую позицию, в то время как аналогичную политику в Англии проводит консервативное правительство, а английские социалисты (лейбористская партия) выступают с осуждением этой линии».

Некоторые французские реакционные газеты утверждали и утверждают, будто, навязывая любыми средствами «план Даллеса» Египту, Франция ускорит решение «алжирской проблемы». Но как здесь резонно подчеркивают, обострение отношений Франции с арабскими странами может лишь вовлечь ее в новый трагический для нее конфликт, а отнюдь не способствовать мирному решению в Алжире.

Оказались несостоятельными и рассуждения о том, будто бы национализация компании Суэцкого канала нарушает свободу судоходства. Канал функционирует совершенно нормально, и единственной реальной угрозой для его деятельности могут оказаться лишь меры и санкции, которыми стращают Египет западные державы.

Настороженное отношение французской общественности вызвали и утверждения отдельных органов печати, будто военные мероприятия Франции вызваны интересами «защиты французских граждан, находящихся в Египте». Слишком много в истории народов Азии и Африки примеров, когда схожими аргументами прикрывались факты агрессивной колониальной политики некоторых западных держав.

Большое внимание здесь вызывает и деятельность некоторых американских монополистических кругов, которые хотят под флагом «посредничества» захватить в Северной Африке и на Ближнем Востоке позиции своих партнеров, так же как они захватили английские нефтяные позиции в Иране в результате англо-иранского конфликта. Как замечает в передовой статье газета «Энформасьон», Соединенные Штаты, «видимо, заботятся в районе Средиземного моря лишь о том, чтобы содействовать ликвидации здесь французских и английских позиций». Газета французских деловых кругов «Эко» пишет: «Суэцкое дело может быть в настоящее время изображено в виде пирамиды. Основание этой пирамиды — Франция, выше — Англия, на самой вершине — США».

Вашингтонский корреспондент агентства Ассошиэйтед Пресс передает, что в дипломатических кругах США сообщили, что идея создания так называемой «ассоциации пользователей Суэцким каналом» является американской.

Чтобы оценить по достоинству двойную бухгалтерию американской пропаганды, можно привести следующий характерный пример. 11 сентября президент США выступил на пресс-конференции по суэцкому вопросу. Сразу же американский пропагандистский аппарат создал две версии сказанного на этой пресс-конференции: одну — «миролюбивую» для стран Арабского Востока и другую — воинственную для западноевропейских коллег США.

В первой версии, опубликованной, в частности, газетой «Нью-Йорк геральд трибюн», говорится: «Это одно из самых решительных заявлений Эйзенхауэра, имеющее целью показать, что США отмежевываются от воинственных разговоров, ведущихся за границей, и оно является прямым официальным подтверждением того, что, по мнению президента, любое применение силы против Египта было бы агрессией».

Во второй версии, опубликованной французской печатью, указывается (цитирую по газете «Комба».—Г. Р.): «Соединенные Штаты признают, сказал президент, отсутствие у Англии и Франции другого выхода, кроме применения силы, в случае, если мирные средства разрешить кризис будут исчерпаны и Египет в какой-либо форме проявит агрессивность».

Сегодня газета «Юманите» пишет: «Обстановка, созданная в результате шагов, предпринятых английским и французским правительствами, носит серьезный характер. Она требует от всех друзей мира быть бдительными, чтобы преградить дорогу возможной авантюре».

Широкая демократическая общественность страны со все большим вниманием следит за развивающимися событиями и происками агрессивных сил.

Г. РАТИАНИ.

Послание египетского правительства Даллесу

НЬЮ-ЙОРК, 13 сентября. (ТАСС). Корреспондент агентства Ассошиэйтед Пресс сообщает из Вашингтона, что посольство Египта в США опубликовало заявление о том, что по инструкции египетского правительства посол Ахмед Хусейн встретился с государственным секретарем Даллесом и передал ему послание Египта, в котором говорится, что план, который Иден хочет навязать Египту, «является открытой и вопиющей агрессией против египетского суверенитета». Если США желают работать для мирного разрешения вопроса, говорится в послании, то от этого плана следует отказаться.

Concert of the Boston Orchestra

Yesterday in the Great Hall of the Filharmoniya

The first concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (USA), coming for a guest tour of the Soviet Union at the invitation of the Ministry of Culture of the USSR, took place yesterday in the Great Hall of the Filharmoniya.

The stage of the Filharmoniya was decorated with the flags of the USSR and the USA. Representatives of the Leningrad Filharmoniya warmly greeted their artistic brethern and presented bouquets of living flowers to the American musicians.

Before the beginning of the concert, the Boston Orchestra played the State hymns of the Soviet Union and the United States of America.

Responsible officials of the American Embassy in the USSR, coming from Moscow, attended the concert.

- - - - - -

The symphony season in the Great Hall of the Filharmoniya opened yesterday with a concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (USA) under the direction of its principal conductor, Charles Munch.

This year Leningraders have appraised at its true worth the mastery of individual representatives of the art of the USA - the outstanding violinist, Isaac Stern and the singer Jan Peerce. Now we have the opportunity to become acquainted with a great organization, the first foreign symphony orchestra to visit the Soviet Union.

The Boston Orchestra is one of the oldest in America. Among the leaders of this orchestra for the three-quarters of a century of its creative activity have been outstanding conductors - among them Arthur Nikisch, Karl Muck, Sergei Koussevitsky and Pierre Monteux. This year it observes its 75th year, celebrating it with a great jubilee tour of Europe.

The brilliant Third ("Eroica") Symphony of Beethoven, a monumental composition, unusual in its philosophical depth and passion, opened the first concert. It was performed in perfect tempo, nobly and simply. If one still sensed a certain lack of cohesiveness (nesobrannost'), [If] the coloration of tone was not yet found in new acoustic conditions, beginning with the funeral march, the conductor and orchestra completely mastered the hall. The scherzo and finale were played faultlessly. Charles Munch very expressively called forth the basic idea of the symphony, subordinating all movements to it, he very skillfully calculated its "emotional accumulation", thanks to which the symphony appeared before the audience wonderously compact in form, standing out in the consciousness like a sculptured monument.

Already after the first part the merits of the orchestra were clearly revealed; an excellent feeling of rhythm, an uncommon evenness of the sounds of all groups and the precise bowing of the string quintette (concertmaster Richard Burgen).

In the second part of the concert, the 6th Symphony of the contemporary American composer, Walter Piston, was performed. It is very difficult to define the merits of this rather complicated music on one hearing, but the middle movements showed themselves to be the most arresting: the second - a masterly, brilliant instrumental (and brilliantly played) scherzo and the third - a dramatic adagio with an expressive cello solo.

The second suite from the Maurice Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe", played in conclusion, turned out to be the real masterpiece of the program. Both the delicate poetical quality of daybreak and the firey rhythms of the dance were transmitted by the conductor with great expressiveness. The piece, exceptionally difficult in its technique, rhythm and texture is performed by the orchestra with enviable improvised lightness, as if one many-imaged musician played it. With bewitching artistry the first flutist of the orchestra, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, performs her great solo. At the insistent request of the audience for an encore, Dukas' fantastic scherzo "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" was played as an encore, which further strengthened the sympathy of Leningraders toward the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its leader - conductor Charles Munch. Prolonged applause rewarded our guests for the esthetic pleasure which they produced and was an expression of friendly feelings toward the American people.

Ed. Grikurov
Honored Art Worker of
the RSFSR.

Vechernii Leningrad

September 7, 1956

Translated by: Roye L. Lowry
Checked by: William N. Turpin

ПЯТНИЦА
7 СЕНТЯБРЯ
1956 года
№ 210 (3298)

Вечерний Ленинград

Пролетарии всех стран, соединяйтесь!

ГАЗЕТА ЛЕНИНГРАДСКОГО ГОРОДСКОГО КОМИТЕТА КОММУНИСТИЧЕСКОЙ ПАРТИИ СОВЕТСКОГО СОЮЗА
И ЛЕНИНГРАДСКОГО СОВЕТА ДЕПУТАТОВ ТРУДЯЩИХСЯ

Адрес редакции:
Ленинград,
Социалистическая, 14
Цена 20 коп.
11-й год издания

КОНЦЕРТ БОСТОНСКОГО ОРКЕСТРА

ВЧЕРА В БОЛЬШОМ ЗАЛЕ ФИЛАРМОНИИ

Вчера в Большом зале Филармонии состоялся первый концерт Бостонского симфонического оркестра (США), приехавшего по приглашению Министерства культуры СССР на гастроли в Советский Союз.

Эстрада Филармонии была украшена флагами СССР и США. Представители Ленинградской филармонии тепло приветствовали собратьев по искусству и преподнесли американским музыкантам букеты живых цветов.

Перед началом концерта Бостонский оркестр исполнил государственные гимны Советского Союза и Соединенных Штатов Америки.

На концерте присутствовали приехавшие из Москвы ответственные сотрудники американского посольства в СССР.

СИМФОНИЧЕСКИЙ сезон в Большом зале Ленинградской филармонии открылся вчера концертом Бостонского симфонического оркестра (США) под управлением главного дирижера Чарльза Мюнша.

В этом году ленинградцы по достоинству оценили мастерство отдельных представителей искусства США — выдающегося скрипача Исаака Стерна и певца Жана Пирса. Теперь мы имеем возможность познакомиться с большим коллективом, первым из зарубежных симфонических оркестров посетившим Советский Союз.

Бостонский оркестр — один из старейших в Америке. В числе руководителей этого оркестра за три четверти века его творческой деятельности были выдающиеся дирижеры, в том числе Артур Никиш, Карл Мук, Сергей Кусевицкий и Пьер Монтэ. В этом году он отмечает свое 75-летие, ознаменовав его большим юбилейным турне по Европе.

Программу первого концерта открыла гениальная 3-я («героическая») симфония Бетховена — монументальное сочинение, необычайное по своей философской глубине и страстности. Оно было исполнено в отличном темпе, благородно и просто. Если в первой части еще ощущалась некоторая несобранность, еще не была найдена окраска звучания в новых акустических условиях, то, начиная с траурного марша, дирижер и оркестр полностью захватили зал. Скерцо и финал были сыграны безупречно. Чарльз Мюнш очень выразительно выявляет основную идею симфонии, подчиняя ей все части, очень умело рассчитывает «эмоциональное накопление», благодаря чему симфония предстает перед слушателями удивительно компактной по форме, вырисовывается в сознании, как скульптурный монумент.

Уже после первого отделения ясно выявились достоинства оркестра: превосходнейшее чувство ритма, редкостная уравновешенность звучания всех групп и точные штрихи струнного квинтета (концертмейстер Рихард Бургин).

Во втором отделении концерта была исполнена 6-я симфония современного американского композитора Уолтера Пистона. Очень трудно с одного прослушивания определить достоинства довольно сложной музыки, но наиболее привлекательными в ней показались средние части: вторая — виртуозное, блестяще инструментованное (и блестяще сыгранное) скерцо и третья — драматическое адажио с выразительным виолончельным соло.

Подлинным шедевром программы оказалась исполненная в заключение 2-я сюита из балета «Дафнис и Хлоя» Мориса Равеля. И нежная поэтичность утренней зари, и огненные ритмы танца переданы дирижером с большой выразительностью. Исключительно трудная по технике, ритму и фактуре пьеса исполняется оркестром с завидной импровизационной легкостью, словно играет ее один многоликий музыкант. С чарующей артистичностью исполняет свое большое соло первая флейтистка оркестра Дориот Антони Двайер. По настойчивой просьбе слушателей на бис было сыграно фантастическое скерцо Дюка «Ученик чародея», еще больше укрепившее симпатии ленинградцев к коллективу Бостонского симфонического оркестра и его руководителю — дирижеру Чарльзу Мюншу. Долго не смолкавшие аплодисменты вознаградили наших гостей за доставленное ими эстетическое удовольствие и явились выражением дружеских чувств к американскому народу.

Эд. ГРИКУРОВ,
заслуженный деятель искусств РСФСР

◆

На снимке: вчера на концерте Бостонского симфонического оркестра в Большом зале Филармонии; дирижирует Чарльз Мюнш

Фото Г. Чертова

Concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra

The arrival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is a significant event in the musical life of our city. One of the oldest and most popular orchestras in the USA, the Boston orchestra systematically conducts a great musical-propagandistic work. At present it is marking the 75th anniversary of its founding by a European tour.

The Boston orchestra is an orchestra of a magnificent school and glorious traditions. It is enough to mention that its leaders have been the remarkable Hungarian conductor, Arthur Nikisch (1889-1893), the illustrious German director Karl Muck (1906-1908 and 1912-1918), famous for his performance of Wagner, and many other outstanding musicians.

The Boston orchestra has important and many-sided connections with Russian musical culture. For the span of a whole quarter of a century (1924-1949) its artistic director was the gifted Russian conductor, bass player and musical worker, Sergei Koussevitsky, who became President of the musical section of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship and who died in 1951. A Glazunov and S. Prokof'ev appeared in the role of guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Among the members of the orchestra, several received their musical education in Russia. The first concert of the Boston Symphony in the overflowing Great Hall of the Filharmoniya took place with great success.

The audience greets the appearance of the illustrious orchestra and its present artistic director, the outstanding French conductor, Charles Munch, with friendly applause. Baskets of flowers are presented to the artists. The concertmaster of the first violins of the Leningrad Filharmonia Shpil'berg and Charles Munch exchange mutual greetings. The audience stands when the orchestra plays the national anthems of the USSR and the USA with great animation.

Already in the first number of the program - in the Third ("Eroica") Symphony of Beethoven - the orchestra showed its first-class, precise craftsmanship. The purity of line and intonation, the carefully adjusted balance of orchestral groups, the harmony and restraint of resonance, avoiding all coarseness and clamor, the clarity and the production of rhythms deserves the highest rating. We note, incidentally, that the placing of the orchestra on the stage (with the dispersion of the brass and percussion [sections]) not customary with us can hardly fail to attract attention since its acoustic merits are undoubted.

One can argue with Charles Munch's interpretation of this Beethoven symphony. In this interpretation the beauty of particular moments prevails over the dramatic aspiration. We note that a similar interpretation of Beethoven in general is peculiar to French conductors. The heroic-pathetic interpretation of Beethoven's music is closer to us (for example, the performance of his Third Symphony by the German conductor, the late Hermann Abendrot).

But along with this one cannot fail to give credit to the high nobility of emotion, to the plastic (in the spirit of the French classical composer Berlioz) lucidity and sincerity with which Charles Munch reproduces the deathless music of Beethoven.

In the performance of Beethoven's Third Symphony the orchestra made a brilliant display of the versatility and elegance of its musical resources. Certain genre moments of the finale sounded especially good.

Heard with interest in the second part of the concert was the Sixth Symphony (1955) of the to us almost unknown American composer, Walter Piston, who received his musical education in France. A whole series of moments in this symphony are not far from being forced and dry, but in Piston's music the manly energy, the healthy sensation of life, and now and again wit often attract attention. It is not without reason that the rhythmical and intonationally whimsical scherzo gave rise to applause by the audience.

The second suite from Maurice Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe", played in the conclusion of the program was a genuine festival of art. Here Charles Munch was completely in his element. Ravel's score, sparkling with unusual richness of coloring, was reproduced by the orchestra with great spirit. This pure euphony of Ravel in which form is completely constructed of the confrontation, the blending and the movement of sound colors are inspiredly and freely reproduced.

The audience greeted the poetic picturesqueness of Ravel, Charles Munch and the orchestra with a fervent ovation. They also rejoiced in the delicate craftsmanship of the first flutist of the orchestra, Doriot Dwyer, whom Munch presented to the public.

Yu. Kremlev

Leningradskaya Pravda
September 8, 1956

Translated by: Roye L. Lowry
Checked by: William H. Turpin

Пролетарии всех стран, соединяйтесь!

Коммунистическая партия Советского Союза

ЛЕНИНГРАДСКАЯ ПРАВДА

ОРГАН ЛЕНИНГРАДСКОГО ОБЛАСТНОГО И ГОРОДСКОГО КОМИТЕТОВ КОММУНИСТИЧЕСКОЙ ПАРТИИ СОВЕТСКОГО СОЮЗА, ОБЛАСТНОГО И ГОРОДСКОГО СОВЕТОВ ДЕПУТАТОВ ТРУДЯЩИХСЯ

№ 211 (12628)
СУББОТА
8 СЕНТЯБРЯ
1956 года

Год издания 39-й

ЦЕНА 20 КОП.

Концерт Бостонского симфонического оркестра

Приезд Бостонского симфонического оркестра — значительное событие в музыкальной жизни нашего города. Один из старейших и популярнейших оркестров США, Бостонский оркестр систематически ведет в Америке большую музыкально-пропагандистскую работу. Нынче он отмечает 75-летие своего существования гастрольной поездкой по странам Европы.

Бостонский оркестр — оркестр превосходной школы и славных традиций. Достаточно упомянуть, что его руководителями были замечательный венгерский дирижер Артур Никиш (1889—1893), знаменитый немецкий дирижер, прославившийся исполнением Вагнера, Карл Мук (1906—1908 и 1912—1918) и многие другие выдающиеся музыканты.

Серьезны и разносторонни связи Бостонского оркестра с русской музыкальной культурой. На протяжении целой четверти века (1924—1949) его художественным руководителем был даровитый русский дирижер, контрабасист и музыкальный деятель Сергей Кусевицкий, состоявший во время второй мировой войны президентом музыкальной секции Национального совета американо-советской дружбы и умерший в 1951 г. В качестве дирижеров-гастролеров с Бостонским симфоническим оркестром выступали А. Глазунов, С. Прокофьев. Из числа оркестрантов некоторые получили свое музыкальное образование в России.

Первый концерт Бостонского симфонического оркестра в переполненном Большом зале Ленинградской филармонии прошел с большим успехом.

Появление на эстраде прославленного оркестра и его нынешнего художественного руководителя, выдающегося французского дирижера Шарля Мюнша слушатели встречают дружными аплодисментами. Артистам преподносят корзины цветов. Концертмейстер первых скрипок оркестра Ленинградской филармонии Шпильберг и Шарль Мюнш обмениваются взаимными приветствиями. Зал встает, когда оркестр с большим подъемом исполняет государственные гимны СССР и США.

Уже в первом номере программы — в третьей (Героической) симфонии Бетховена — оркестр показал свое первоклассное, точное мастерство. Чистота строя и интонации, выверенное равновесие оркестровых групп, стройность и сдержанность звучности, избегающей всего грубого, кричащего, четкость и чеканность ритмов заслуживают самой высокой оценки. Отметим кстати, что не принятое у нас размещение оркестра на эстраде (с рассредоточением меди и ударных) не может не привлечь внимания, так как звуковые достоинства его несомненны.

С трактовкой данной симфонии Бетховена Шарлем Мюншем можно спорить. В этой трактовке красота отдельных моментов преобладает над драматической устремленностью. Заметим, что подобное толкование Бетховена вообще свойственно ряду французских дирижеров. Нам ближе героико-патетическая трактовка музыки Бетховена (например, исполнение третьей его симфонии покойным немецким дирижером Германом Абендротом).

Но вместе с тем нельзя не отдать должного высокому благородству эмоций, пластической (в духе французского композитора-классика Берлиоза) ясности и сердечности, с которыми Шарль Мюнш передает бессмертную музыку Бетховена.

В исполнении третьей симфонии Бетховена оркестр блеснул гибкостью и изяществом своих музыкальных средств. Особенно хорошо прозвучали некоторые жанровые моменты финала.

Во втором отделении концерта с интересом была прослушана шестая симфония (1955) почти неизвестного у нас американского композитора Уолтера Пистона, получившего музыкальное образование во Франции. Целый ряд моментов этой симфонии не чужд надуманности и суховатости, но в музыке Пистона не раз привлекают мужественная энергия, здоровое ощущение жизни, а порою и остроумие. Недаром ритмически и интонационно причудливое скерцо симфонии вызвало аплодисменты слушателей.

Исполнение в конце программы второй сюиты из балета «Дафнис и Хлоя» Мориса Равеля явилось подлинным праздником искусства. Здесь Шарль Мюнш был совершенно в своей стихии. Сверкающая необыкновенным богатством колорита партитура Равеля была передана оркестром с большим темпераментом. Вдохновенно и свободно передана та чистая звукописность Равеля, в которой форма целиком строится из сопоставлений, слияний и движений звуковых красок.

Слушатели приветствовали поэтическую образность Равеля, Шарля Мюнша и оркестра горячей овацией. Они порадовались и тонкому мастерству первой флейтистки оркестра Дорио Дуайер, которую Мюнш представил публике.

Ю. КРЕМЛЕВ

High Craftsmanship

It is frequently considered that it is in a certain sense easier for a widely-known artist who has already won popularity to appear before an audience since his name alone guarantees him a warm reception from his listeners. I doubt whether that is fair. It seems to me that the matter is just the reverse. A great artist knows perfectly well that the greater his fame as a creator, the more difficult it is to maintain it. Every appearance, every concert, especially if it takes place before a new audience, is transformed into a crucial creative examination. And listeners, especially listeners by profession, in such cases are extremely severe.

These thoughts completely naturally came to mind while awaiting the first concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Leningrad. For all that how does this widely-known organization which has been seen behind the conductor's platform of Arthur Nikisch and Karl Muck, Aleksander Glazunov and Sergei Prokof'ev, Maurice Ravel and Georges Enesco play? What is the artistic character of an orchestra which for a quarter of a century was working under the leadership of Sergei Koussevitsky?

The answer to these questions became clear immediately after the first bars of Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, opening the concert program. Yes, certainly, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is an organization of great culture. And the conductor Charles Munch and the artists of the orchestra for the moment are somewhat restrained. In the accepted talk among musicians "they have not yet warmed up". But already immediately one is carried away by the precision of the bowing of the string section, by the splendidly developed feeling of the ensemble.

Charles Munch, the artistic leader of the Orchestra, who conducted his first concert in the Soviet Union on September 6, is a temperamental artist, in the highest degree endowed with the ability very important to a conductor of carrying along the performers with him by his conceptions.

From movement to movement Beethoven's Third Symphony sounded louder and louder. The celebrated "Funeral March" and especially the very difficult to perform masterly scherzo and finale were played magnificently.

Piston's Sixth Symphony opened the second part of the concert. This symphony is one of the latest works of a representative of the older generation of contemporary American composers. To judge an important, significant symphonic work on the basis of only one hearing is very difficult, as is known. But I do not think it would be a mistake to say right now that Piston's Sixth Symphony is a work on the whole significant and creatively interesting. It is not accidental that, despite established traditions, the hall began to applaud after the second movement of the original, witty, scherzo, which shows a great deal of rhythmic and coloristic treasures. The third movement of the symphony (adagio sereno) with its dramatic expressiveness and depth of meditation also creates an impression. There is also a great deal of striking music in the first (Fluente espressivo) and fourth (Allegro energico) movements of this work.

The Second Suite from Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe" concluded the first appearance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Clearly French music is particularly close to Charles Munch. Both Ravel's suite and the "Sorcerer's Apprentice" of Dukas, performed in addition to the program on the insistent demand of the audience, were the real culmination of the concert. The conductor and the orchestra were as though amalgamated into a single creative transport. From this performance we experienced deep satisfaction.

In. Popov
Special correspondent of
"Soviet Culture"

Leningrad.

Sovetskaya Kul'tura

September 8,1956

Translated by: Roye L. Lowry
Checked by: William N. Turpin

ПРОЛЕТАРИИ ВСЕХ СТРАН, СОЕДИНЯЙТЕСЬ!

СОВЕТСКАЯ КУЛЬТУРА

ОРГАН МИНИСТЕРСТВА КУЛЬТУРЫ СССР

№ 106 ([illegible]) | Суббота, 8 сентября 1956 года | Цена 40 коп.

Высокое мастерство

◆

ПЕРВЫЙ КОНЦЕРТ БОСТОНСКОГО ОРКЕСТРА

◆

Нередко считают, что широко известному, уже завоевавшему популярность артисту выступать перед аудиторией в известном смысле легче, так как уже одно его имя гарантирует ему теплый прием у слушателей. Вряд ли это справедливо. Мне кажется, дело обстоит как раз наоборот. Крупный художник отлично знает, что чем больше его творческая слава, тем труднее ее удержать. Каждое выступление, каждый концерт, особенно если они проходят перед новой аудиторией, превращается в ответственнейший творческий экзамен. И слушатели, в первую очередь слушатели-профессионалы, в таких случаях предельно взыскательны.

Мысли эти вполне естественно приходили в голову во время ожидания первого концерта Бостонского симфонического оркестра в Ленинграде. Как же все-таки играет этот широко известный коллектив, видевший за дирижерским пультом Артура Никиша и Карла Мука, Александра Глазунова и Сергея Прокофьева, Морица Равеля и Жоржа Энеско? Каков художественный облик оркестра, на протяжении четверти века работавшего под руководством Сергея Кусевицкого?

Ответ на эти вопросы стал ясен сразу же после первых тактов «Героической» симфонии Бетховена, открывшей программу концерта. Да, конечно, Бостонский симфонический оркестр — коллектив большой культуры. И дирижер Чарльз Мюнш и артисты оркестра пока несколько скованны. Они, как принято говорить у музыкантов, «еще не разыгрались». Но уже сейчас восхищаешься точностью штриха струнной группы, великолепно развитым чувством ансамбля.

Чарльз Мюнш — художественный руководитель оркестра, дирижировавший 6 сентября его первым концертом в Советском Союзе, — темпераментный художник, в высшей степени одаренный столь важной для дирижера способностью увлечь своим замыслом исполнителей. От части к части Третья симфония Бетховена звучала все ярче и ярче. Знаменитый «Траурный марш» и особенно столь трудные для исполнения виртуозное скерцо и финал были сыграны превосходно.

Второе отделение концерта открылось Шестой симфонией Пистона. Симфония эта — одно из последних сочинений представителя старшего поколения современных американских композиторов. Судить о крупном, значительном симфоническом произведении на основе одного лишь прослушивания, как известно, очень трудно. Но, думается, не будет ошибкой уже сейчас сказать, что Шестая симфония Пистона — произведение в целом значительное и творчески интересное. Не случайно, вопреки установившимся традициям, после второй части оригинального, остроумного скерцо, изобилующего множеством ритмических и колористических находок, зал зааплодировал. Впечатляет своей драматической выразительностью и углубленностью раздумий третья часть симфонии (Adagio sereno). Много талантливой яркой музыки также в первой (Fluente espressivo) и четвертой финальной (Allegro energico) частях этого сочинения.

Заключала программу первого выступления Бостонского симфонического оркестра Вторая сюита из балета «Дафнис и Хлоя» Равеля. Видимо, Чарльзу Мюншу французская музыка особенно близка. И сюита Равеля, и исполненный, сверх программы по настойчивому требованию аудитории «Ученик чародея» Дюка явились подлинной кульминацией концерта. Дирижер и оркестр как бы слились в едином творческом порыве. От этого исполнения мы испытали глубокое удовлетворение.

Ин. ПОПОВ,

спец. корр. «Советской культуры».

ЛЕНИНГРАД.

Concerts of the Boston Orchestra

The appearances of the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra gave enormous pleasure to music lovers. Directed, for the course of 25 years by the remarkable conductor, Sergei Aleksandrovich Koussevitsky, the Boston orchestra grasped the qualities and artistic principles, and also the talent of interpretation of that outstanding musician.

At the beginning of work as a conductor, I was lucky enough to work under the leadership of Koussevitsky as his assistant and I recall how he always demanded melody in performance and said, "Music is song." Just this emotional, expressive melodious sound in the playing of the Boston orchestra both as a whole and of each of its members individually is indisputably one of its greatest virtues.

A second quality of the orchestra is its playing and manner of making music. It is quite clear that every organization plays especially carefully during a guest performance. But the artists of the Boston orchestra made music easily and without constraint, as though it were their usual concert. They might even permit themselves certain accidental unevennesses, being not at all embarrassed by this and in the very next number dazzle and utterly suprise [the audience] by [their] striking virtuosity.

The third and perhaps the most important quality in our time is the utmost purity of intonation, that is, the harmony of the orchestra.

Of course, all these qualities were acquired over many many years. After all, the organization has existed for 75 years. And undoubtedly musicians of world class such as Arthur Nikisch, Karl Muck and others who have directed this orchestra have played a tremendous role in the formation of the excellent artistic qualities of the orchestra. Professionally and artistically the performing personnel of artists of the orchestra is very high. Here I want to talk about every one, about the excellent concertmaster of the orchestra, Richard Burgin, heading a group of first violinists in which all the artists are as if equal in their mastery and manner of performance even to the same fingering by all the violinists; about the splendid group of second violins into which go excellent musicians, playing the part of the second violins, but not "second" violins (in sound, manner and technique they are in no wise distinguishable from the first); about the wonderful group of violas evenly balanced in its composition, headed by concertmaster Joseph de Pasquale.

One cannot pass by in silence the playing of the cello soloist, Samuel Mayes, the prominent and mellow phonation of the basses, the splendid craftsmanship of flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the expressiveness of the oboes, clarinets, French horns and so forth.

Yet another factor which has a decisive significance in the question of phonation and purity of harmony are the instruments. The whole string section of the Bostonians plays on splendid, at times unique, Italian instruments. As far as the woodwinds and percussion instruments are concerned, all these are the latest models besides [being] of the best quality.

The excellent conductor, Charles Munch, leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the present time. He is a strong-willed, spirited, graceful artist of great culture, thoroughly knowing the possibilities of the organization, knowing how to enthrall both the orchestra and the audience. Under his direction the Second Suite from M. Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe" resounded spontaneously and stunningly, the Adagio from Schuman's Second Symphony, with its infinite cantilena and its moving romance and the fireworks-like Finale of Haydn's Symphony were deeply exciting. P. Dukas' "Sorcerer's Apprentice" was played with spirit and virtuosity. And whatever the orchestra played, one always sensed a close contact between conductor and each member of the organization.

It was also pleasant to see on the podium (lit. behind the conductor's stand) and to greet Pierre Monteux whom we heard in 1926 at concerts of the Leningrad Filharmoniya. This musician has been long connected with Russian music: he even conducted performances of the Russian ballet of Dyagilev in Paris.

The guest appearance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is a significant event in our musical life. The organization demonstrated culture in performing and high artistic qualities.

The works of American composers unknown to us, especially Piston's Sixth Symphony and Creston's Second Symphony were of great interest. Along with this it is too bad that there wasn't a single work of Russian classical music. We know in particular that the symphonies of Chaikovsky are in the repertoire of the Boston orchestra. How interesting it would have been to have heard one of them played by such an organization.

The appearances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Moscow again and again convinced [one] that the language of musical art, coming from the heart, is accessible to millions of people and serves as a powerful stimulant to the strengthening of friendly connections between peoples.

Conductor Aleksandr Gauk

Sovetskaya Kul'tura
September 11, 1956

Translated by: Roye L. Lowry
Checked by: William N. Turpin

ПРОЛЕТАРИИ ВСЕХ СТРАН, СОЕДИНЯЙТЕСЬ!

СОВЕТСКАЯ КУЛЬТУРА

ОРГАН МИНИСТЕРСТВА КУЛЬТУРЫ СССР

№ 107 (499) | Вторник, 11 сентября 1956 года | Цена [illegible] коп.

Концерты Бостонского оркестра

Выступления знаменитого Бостонского симфонического оркестра доставили любителям музыки огромную радость. Руководимый в течение 25 лет замечательным дирижером Сергеем Александровичем Кусевицким, Бостонский оркестр воспринял достоинства и художественные принципы, а также талант интерпретатора этого выдающегося музыканта.

Мне посчастливилось в начале моей дирижерской деятельности работать под руководством Кусевицкого в качестве его ассистента, и я вспоминаю, как он всегда требовал напевности в исполнении и говорил, что «музыка — это пение». Именно эмоциональный, выразительный певучий звук в игре Бостонского оркестра в целом и каждого его участника в отдельности является бесспорно одним из его больших достоинств.

Вторым качеством оркестра является его сыгранность и манера музицирования. Совершенно ясно, что каждый коллектив во время гастролей играет особенно тщательно. Но артисты Бостонского оркестра музицируют легко и непринужденно, как будто это их рядовой концерт. Они могут себе позволить даже некоторые случайные шероховатости, нисколько этим не стесняясь, и тут же в следующей пьесе ослепить и ошеломить поразительной виртуозностью.

Третьим и, пожалуй, самым главным в наше время достоинством является предельная чистота интонации, то есть строй оркестра.

Конечно, все эти качества приобретались в течение долгих и долгих лет. Как-никак коллектив существует 75 лет! И несомненно, огромную роль в формировании замечательных художественных качеств оркестра сыграли музыканты мирового класса, такие, как Артур Никиш, Карл Мук и другие, дирижировавшие этим оркестром. Профессионально и художественно исполнительский состав артистов оркестра очень высок. Здесь хочется сказать обо всех и о превосходном концертмейстере оркестра Ричарде Бургине, возглавляющем группу первых скрипок, в которой все артисты как бы равны по своему мастерству и исполнительской манере, вплоть до одинаковой аппликатуры у всех скрипачей; и о великолепной группе вторых скрипок, куда входят отличные музыканты, исполняющию партию вторых скрипок, а не «вторые» скрипки (по звуку, манере и технике они ничем не отличаются от первых); и о чудесной, ровной в своем составе группе альтов во главе с концертмейстером Иосифом де Паскуале.

Нельзя обойти молчанием игру солиста виолончелей Самуила Майса, выпуклое и мягкое звучание контрабасов, великолепное мастерство флейтистки Дориот Антонии Двайер, выразительность гобоев, кларнетов, валторн и так далее.

Еще один фактор, который имеет решающее значение в вопросе звучания и чистоты строя, — это инструментарий. Вся струнная группа бостонцев играет на великолепных, подчас уникальных итальянских инструментах. Что же касается духовых и ударных инструментов, то все это последние модели и притом лучшие по качеству.

Бостонским симфоническим оркестром в настоящее время руководит прекрасный дирижер Чарльз Мюнш. Это волевой, темпераментный, изысканный художник большой культуры, твердо знающий возможности коллектива, умеющий увлечь и оркестр и слушателей. Стихийно и ошеломляюще прозвучала под его управлением Вторая сюита «Дафнис и Хлоя» М. Равеля, глубоко взволновало своей бесконечной кантиленой и проникновенной романтикой Adagio из Второй симфонии Шумана и фейерверочный финал симфонии Гайдна. С огромным подъемом и виртуозностью был исполнен «Ученик чародея» П. Дюка. И что бы ни играл оркестр, всегда ощущаешь тесный контакт между дирижером и каждым участником коллектива.

Приятно было также увидеть за пультом и приветствовать Пьера Монте, которого еще в 1926 году мы слушали на концертах Ленинградской филармонии. Этот музыкант давно связан с русским искусством: ведь именно он дирижировал спектаклями русского балета Дягилева в Париже.

Гастроли Бостонского симфонического оркестра — значительное художественное событие в нашей музыкальной жизни. Коллектив продемонстрировал большую исполнительскую культуру, высокие художественные достоинства.

Большой интерес представляли незнакомые нам произведения американских композиторов и особенно Шестая симфония Пистона и Вторая симфония Крестона. Вместе с тем жаль, что в программе не было ни одного произведения русской классической музыки. Мы знаем, в частности, что в репертуаре Бостонского оркестра есть симфонии Чайковского. Как интересно было бы послушать в исполнении такого коллектива одну из них!

Выступления Бостонского симфонического оркестра в Москве еще и еще раз убедили, что язык музыкального искусства, идущий от сердца, доступен миллионам людей и служит могучим стимулом укрепления дружеских связей между народами.

Дирижер Александр ГАУК.

September 12, 1956

CONCERTS OF BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

(By E. Grosheva)

The State Anthem of the Soviet Union solemnly resounds. It is followed by the USA Anthem. Greetings, flowers, applause....

Thus the Boston Symphony Orchestra which has come to our country on tour for the first time, began its first concert in the Soviet capital.

One of the largest American orchestras, it is marking the seventy-fifty anniversary of its existence this year. In honour of this date the orchestra is making a jubilee tour through Europe. It is composed of excellent musicians; several of them received training in Russian conservatories. One can point for example to the concert master of the first violins, Richard Burgin, well-known also as a conductor who is propagandizing Soviet music in America. At the conductor's stand the Boston Orchestra has seen the best musicians of the world - from Arthur Nikish to Serge Koussevitsky, who led the collective for 25 years.

To this serious school the orchestra owes its masterly virtuosity. The high culture of the ensemble, the irreproachable precision of technique, the smooth order, the strict rhythmic discipline are the necessary basis for every professional collective. The Boston Orchestra possesses all these qualities. But the charm of its creative aspect is augmented by the rare beauty, the melodious sonority of the entire orchestra and its individual sections: powerful expression distinguishes the cantilena of the string quintette, the execution of the wood-winds captivates with its evenness and purity, the brass strikes one by its soft melodiousness. As a whole this is a single artistic organism, the entire attention of which is directed to the fulfilment of great musical tasks.

The mastery of the talented conductor, Charles Munch, French by origin, who has directed the Boston Orchestra for six years, should be given its due. One cannot agree entirely with the conductor in his interpretation of the Third ("Heroic") Symphony of Beethoven. The acquiline sweep of the first movement of the symphony perhaps requires more passion and force, the brilliant funeral march more unity and stern simplicity. But at the same time one cannot resist a feeling of delight with the wealth of colour and shades which the conductor finds in the Beethoven score. Munch is a true virtuoso; he brilliantly creates great dynamic crescendos which so emphasized the codas of the first movement and the finale of the symphony, polishes the contrasting episodes in a filigree manner, with maximum softness and at the same time with clarity of nuances. The remarkable scherzo of the Third Symphony was played best of all, literally in one breath.

Charles Munch conducted two concerts with extensive programmes. "Don Juan" by Richard Strauss was played brilliantly; the 102nd Symphony of Haydn, in which the conductor was able to reveal the internal kinship with the symphonies of Mozart, resounded with great depth and finish of conception.

But the music of the French masters is the true element of the conductor. It is difficult to convey in words the impression created by the execution of the second suite from Ravel's Ballet "Daphnis and Chloe". This was a sparkling cascade of sounds, permeated with an almost bacchanalian energy of rhythm in the concluding number of the suite ("General Dance"). With the same vivid temperament, irreproachable sense of style, orchestral colour, polishing with care all the details (which programme music so requires), Charles Munch performed the well-known symphonic picture of Paul Dukas "The Sorcerer's Apprentice".

We heard with great satisfaction the London Symphony of Haydn, the "Surprise", in the concert of the venerable conductor Pierre Monteux. It is amazing how the 80 year-old master was able to convey all the charm of the chastity and freshness of the music of the great Austrian composer, which captivates by the clear national character of the images, by delicate, limpid orchestration. One of the most remarkable creations of Schubert - his Symphony in D-Major, was performed by the orchestra under the direction of Pierre Monteux with the same delicacy and noble restraint.

Pierre Monteux is an old friend of Russian music. This friendship dates from 1911 when Pierre Monteux became the principal conductor of the Russian Ballet performances organized in Paris by Dyagilev. The conductor also spread Russian Ballet in America. Pierre Monteux is also well-known to Soviet listeners by his tours in Moscow and Leningrad in the pre-war years. It should be regretted all the more that the Boston Orchestra did not include a single work of Russian classical or Soviet music in its programme.

The Boston collective and its leaders acquainted Muscovites with the symphonic works of modern American composers - Piston, Kreston, Hanson and Copland. For the most part this is music of high quality which attests to the significant orchestral culture of American composers, their sensitivity to the accomplishments of modern symphonic development. The scherzo and adagio from Piston's Sixth Symphony, a representative of the older generation of American composers, resounded magnificently. There was much beautiful music in the first movement of Kreston's Second Symphony. A number of colouristic treasures were of interest in Hanson's "Elegy", played with great subtlety by the orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch. The Symphony-Ode of Copland - a work in which, it appeared on first hearing, superficial orchestral effects predominate - was less satisfying.

Moscow listeners warmly received the talented collective. Contact between the performers and the listeners deepened from concert to concert. High discipline and training enabled the orchestra in the course of 24 hours to appear in three concerts which included the most complicated works of classical and modern music. Moreover, the orchestra and its leaders responded unfailingly to the demands of the public, and played a great deal in addition to the programme....

In conclusion we should like to subscribe to the wish expressed by composer T. Khrennikov in his greetings to the orchestra, that the first meeting of Soviet listeners with the American orchestra serve as the basis for extensive creative contact and exchange of cultural forces between the Soviet and American peoples.

ПРОЛЕТАРИИ ВСЕХ СТРАН, СОЕДИНЯЙТЕСЬ!

ВЕЧЕРНЯЯ МОСКВА

10 СЕНТЯБРЯ 1956 г.
ПОНЕДЕЛЬНИК
№ 215 (9963)
ЦЕНА 20 КОП.

Газета Московского городского комитета
Коммунистической партии Советского Союза и Моссовета

Концерты Бостонского оркестра

ТОРЖЕСТВЕННО звучит Государственный гимн Советского Союза. За ним следует Гимн США. Приветствия, цветы, аплодисменты...

Так начал свой первый концерт в советской столице приехавший впервые в нашу страну на гастроли Бостонский симфонический оркестр.

Один из крупнейших американских оркестров отмечает в нынешнем году семидесятипятилетие своего существования. В честь этой даты оркестр совершает юбилейное турне по Европе. В его составе — прекрасные музыканты; некоторые из них получили воспитание в русских консерваториях. Можно назвать, например, концертмейстера первых скрипок Ричарда Бургина, известного и как дирижера, пропагандирующего в Америке советскую музыку. За дирижерским пультом Бостонский оркестр видел лучших музыкантов мира — от Артура Никиша до Сергея Кусевицкого, руководившего коллективом в течение 25 лет.

Этой серьезной школе оркестр обязан своим виртуозным мастерством. Высокая культура ансамбля, безукоризненная точность техники, выровненный строй, строгая дисциплина ритма — необходимая основа каждого профессионального коллектива. Бостонский оркестр обладает всеми этими качествами. Но обаяние его творческого облика дополняет на редкость красивое, напевное звучание всей массы оркестра и его отдельных групп: мощная экспрессия отличает кантилену струнного квинтета, ровностью и чистотой пленяет исполнение деревянных духовых, мягкой певучестью поражает медь. В целом это единый художественный организм, все внимание которого направлено на выполнение больших музыкальных задач.

Надо отдать должное мастерству талантливого дирижера Шарля Мюнша, француза по происхождению, шесть лет назад взявшего на себя руководство Бостонским оркестром. Можно не во всем согласиться с дирижером в трактовке Третьей («Героической») симфонии Бетховена. Орлиный размах первой части симфонии, быть может, требует большей страстности и силы, гениальный траурный марш — большей цельности и суровой простоты. Но в то же время нельзя не поддаться чувству восхищения богатством красок и оттенков, которые находит дирижер в бетховенской партитуре. Мюнш — подлинный виртуоз; он с блеском создает большие динамические нарастания, которые так выделили коды первой части и финала симфонии, филигранно отделывает контрастные эпизоды, с предельной мягкостью и в то же время яркостью нюансов. Лучше всего, буквально на одном дыхании, было сыграно замечательное скерцо Третьей симфонии.

Шарль Мюнш провел два концерта с обширными программами. Блестяще был сыгран «Дон Жуан» Рихарда Штрауса, с большой глубиной и законченностью замысла прозвучала 102-я симфония Гайдна, в которой дирижер сумел раскрыть внутреннее родство с симфониями Моцарта.

Но подлинная стихия дирижера — музыка французских мастеров. Трудно передать словами впечатление, созданное исполнением второй сюиты из балета Равеля «Дафнис и Хлоя». Это был сверкающий каскад звуков, проникнутый почти вакхической энергией ритма в заключительном номере сюиты («Общий танец»). С тем же ярким темпераментом, безупречным чувством стиля, оркестрового колорита, тщательно отделывая все детали (что так требует программная музыка), Шарль Мюнш исполнил известную симфоническую картину Поля Дюка «Ученик чародея».

С большим удовольствием мы услышали лондонскую симфонию Гайдна «Сюрприз» в концерте маститого дирижера Пьера Монтэ. Удивительно, как восьмидесятилетний маэстро сумел передать все обаяние целомудренности и свежести музыки великого австрийского композитора, пленяющей яркой народностью образов, изящной, прозрачной оркестровкой. С таким же изяществом и благородной сдержанностью было исполнено оркестром под управлением Пьера Монтэ одно из замечательнейших созданий Шуберта — его до-мажорная симфония.

Пьер Монтэ — старый друг русской музыки. Эта дружба ведет свою историю с 1911 года, когда Пьер Монтэ стал главным дирижером русских балетных спектаклей, организованных в Париже Дягилевым. Русский балет дирижер пропагандировал и в Америке. Известен советским слушателям Пьер Монтэ и по его гастролям в Москве и Ленинграде в довоенные годы. Тем более надо пожалеть, что Бостонский оркестр не включил в свои программы ни одного произведения русской классической или советской музыки.

Бостонский коллектив и его руководители ознакомили москвичей с симфоническими произведениями современных американских композиторов — Пистона, Крестона, Хансона и Копленда. В большинстве своем это — добротная музыка, свидетельствующая о значительной оркестровой культуре американских авторов, их чуткости к достижениям современного симфонизма. Великолепно прозвучали скерцо и адажио из Шестой симфонии Пистона, представителя старшего поколения американских композиторов. Много красивой музыки в первой части Второй симфонии Крестона. Ряд колористических находок представляет интерес и в «Элегии» Хансона, с большой тонкостью сыгранной оркестром под управлением Шарля Мюнша. Менее удовлетворила симфония-ода Копленда — произведение, в котором, как показалось на первый взгляд, довлеют внешние оркестровые эффекты.

Московские слушатели тепло приняли талантливый коллектив. От концерта к концерту углублялся контакт между исполнителями и слушателями. Высокая дисциплина и тренировка помогли оркестру в течение суток выступить в трех концертах, включающих сложнейшие произведения классической и современной музыки. Более того, оркестр и его руководители безотказно откликались на требования публики и много играли сверх программы. Благодаря этому мы услышали виртуозное исполнение интродукции и вальса из комической оперы Р. Штрауса «Кавалер роз» (дирижер Пьер Монтэ), адажио и скерцо из Второй симфонии Шумана (Шарль Мюнш).

В заключение хотелось бы присоединиться к пожеланию, высказанному композитором Т. Хренниковым в его приветствии к оркестру, — чтобы первая встреча советских слушателей с американским оркестром послужила началом широкого творческого общения и обмена культурными силами советского и американского народов.

Е. Грошева.

НА СНИМКЕ: выступление Бостонского симфонического оркестра под управлением ПЬЕРА МОНТЭ в Большом зале консерватории.

Фото Г. КОРАВЕЛЬНИКОВА.

The Concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra

The Boston Symphony Orchestra this year is marking the seventy-fifth anniversary of its founding. It has worked with first-class directors, such as Arthur Nikisch, Karl Muck, Pierre Monteux, Sergei Koussevitsky, Charles Munch, it has built up a large, repertoire and it has been notable among the better orchestras of the USA. It is natural that its concerts in Moscow and Leningrad aroused the lively response of our public.

Two concerts were held under the direction of Charles Munch - the orchestra's principal conductor, a musician of talent and craftsmanship, already long well known among us by his recordings and radio concerts.

The most important number of the programs of Charles Munch was Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, played with animation and a true feeling of style. The conductor also showed himself to be a thoughtful performer of classical music in Haydn's B-flat major symphony, full of fervor, sparkling humor and reverberating in all its charm.

Charles Munch just as convincingly interprets the works of composers of our century. Here first of all it is necessary to speak of the Suite from Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe," remarkable for its wealth of colors, for its striking rhythmical contrasts. One feels that the conductor is in his native musical element and that he achieves complete mutual understanding with the orchestra [which is] also carried away in this rendition. Spirited also were his performances of the symphonic poem "Don Juan" by R. Strauss and the brilliant, witty scherzo "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" of Dukas, written on the theme of Goethe's well-known ballad.

Conductor Pierre Monteux also came to us with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

In a broad, epic plan, Pierre Monteux conducts Shubert's Seventh Symphony, of which V. Stasov has written that it "is truly great in inspiration, in strength, in gusto, in beauty, in the expression of "national character" and of the "popular masses" in the first three movements." In the performance of the French conductor we really felt the breadth of song-like expression (especially in the monumental first movement and in the second, full of melodic fascination). Pierre Monteux also conducted the Haydn "Surprise" Symphony, perfectly performed with great taste, elegance and a variety of fine nuances of sound.

Among the works of American composers included in the program of the concerts, I want to single out the two symphonies - Piston's and Creston's.

In the first of these symphonies, clearly notable is the scherzo, brilliantly orchestrated, full of unexpected contrasts of sound. The third, slow movement of the symphony also creates an impression. As far as the first and last movements are concerned, although they testify to the technical proficiency of the composer, on the whole they seem to us less successful, uneven. One thinks that they do not disclose the full possibilities of the composer, whom we know for other interesting works.

Creston's original, well-conceived symphony, is based upon the confrontation of the two movements (introduction and song - interlude and dance). In this score one senses the influence of impressionism. But the melodic talent of the composer becomes apparent in the lyrical first movement, which is written with deep feeling and makes a contrast with the somewhat awkward music of the second movement, imbued with contemporary dance rhythms.

The concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were successful in Moscow and Leningrad. Soviet-American musical connections have grown and strengthened considerably during the past year. The "Everyman Opera" troupe, Isaac Stern, the violinist, and Jan Peerce, the singer, have made guest appearances here, demonstrating the achievements of the art of performance in the USA. All of them found a warm reception. Likewise the appearances of Soviet musicians Emil Gilels, David Oistrakh and Mstislav Rostropovich were greeted heartily on the other side of the ocean. These are gratifying facts. The language of music does not require translation; it helps us to know and to understand one another better. The mutual guest tours of Soviet and American musicians serve the cause of peace, the cause of strengthening mutual understanding among peoples.

I. Martynov

Izvestiya, September 15, 1956

Translated by: Roye L. Lowry

Checked by: William N. Turpin

TRANSLAT.IONS - LENINGRAD + MOSCOW

COLUMBIAN NATURAL CLASP NO. 97N
® UNITED STATES ENVELOPE COMPANY
10 X 13

END OF VOLUME

END OF REEL

PLEASE

REWIND